Wixoms find love through Chronicle ad

MR. AND MRS. GLEN WIXOM pose in their new home last week. They met after he placed a liner ad in the Cass City Chronicle, advertising for a wife.

By Jim Ketchum

An ad placed in the Chronicle usually gets results, whether it involves buying, selling, trading or communicating any kind of message. The Chronicle brings many persons together, but probably no two are more happy this week than Glen Wixom and his new wife, the former Mary Fehrenbach.

They met, fell in love and were married, thanks to a liner placed in the Chronicle June 28. And while we can't really call ourselves matchmakers, we take special pride in having helped the couple find each other.

The liner, published three weeks, read: Would like to hear from elderly lady that is born-again Christian who desires marriage. Please write to Glen Wixom.

Wixom, 76, said he received six responses to the ad and checked into three of them before he came to Ms. Fehrenbach's, one of the last ones. Once he'd seen her, he added, his search was over.

"You might call it love at first sight," he said.

Wixom said he had been toying with the idea of placing an ad for a wife for about six months before finally doing so, early in the summer. The first Mrs. Wixom died about a year ago.

"I felt placing the ad just might be the thing to do," he said. "I got six replies. There's no secret about that," he added as his new bride, sitting next to him on the couch, glanced his way.

"Now the truth's going to come out," she laughed.

Wixom said he met the new Mrs. Wixom about six weeks ago and knew right away that she was the one.

Mrs. Wixom, 61, recalled how events went on her end of the match.

"I saw the ad in the paper the day it came out," she remembered. "I looked at it and thought about it. A friend of mine told me I should answer him. Well, I decided to sleep on it and I wrote to him the next day."

Since neither had a telephone, communications proved somewhat of a problem. Wixom arranged to meet her, but something went wrong and they missed each other. So they tried again and finally met at her house the second time, less than two months ago.

The wedding was held Saturday at 11:00 a.m. at St. Pancratius Catholic Church with Rev. Fr. Leo Gengler officiating. It was kept small and on the quiet side, as they planned.

Mrs. Wixom lived alone in Cass City for three years prior to meeting her new husband. Her first husband died in 1968 after 14 years of marriage. They had no children.

The couple, both retired, will reside in Cass City. Both stress strongly that their relationship was inspired by God.

"God is the one who picks our mates out," Wixom said softly and pensively. "We have to be willing. He directs all."

Though the time has been short, both are satisfied that the move is right.

"I fell for her more than I did for my first wife," Wixom said. "I just naturally knew she was the one."

Wixom said a physical examination performed not long ago puts him in excellent health. His doctor told him he has the health of a man ten years his junior. Health, he maintains, is largely attitude.

"I think you're just as old as you feel," he added.

The new couple had not planned a trip specifically after the wedding ceremony, but they indicated that some plans were still being considered.

"First of all we have to get the important part out of the way," he laughed.

The new couple will live in Mrs. Wixom's house, a small, neatly-kept home on the south side of Cass City. No mementos of their former mates are readily apparent, except for a picture taken at Mrs. Wixom's first wedding, which is tucked away in the bedroom.

Most pictures in the home involve religious themes, a demonstration of the couple's faith. This faith, thanks to a little help from the Cass City Chronicle, has brought them together, they say.

"I'm very thankful for the chance to put the ad in the paper," Wixom said. "And I'm very satisfied with the results. More satisfied than with any other ad I've ever put in the paper."

Fuel costs for schools to jump 33-50 per cent

The nation-wide fuel shortage will be reflected in sharply increased costs for heating of school buildings in the Cass City district, it was revealed Monday night in the regular meeting of the board at the high school.

There will probably be enough fuel to heat the buildings and run the buses but costs will spiral a third to over 50 per cent over last year.

That will mean an estimated $9,000 more than was spent last year. Fuel oil for Evergreen and Deford schools went up more than 50 per cent to 19.5 per gallon, just under what the average home owner pays.

Gas prices for the buses jumped a third and will cost 21.4 per gallon. A similar increase is probably in store for the fuel for Campbell school, but the actual price has not been received.

Fuel this year is allotted on quota basis. Firms that supplied the school last year are doing so again this year, but not at competitive bid prices.

The cost of fuel was one of two hot topics of the night. The second was girls' sports.

Ms. Brenda Murphy and 11 of her students attended the meeting to press for both track and gymnastics. Their cause was pushed by trustee Mrs. Geraldine Prieskorn who said that girls' sports have always lagged behind boys' athletics.

Athletic Director Robert Stickle presented the school recommendation. He advised that track be delayed for a week and that gymnastics be offered on an intramural basis.

His theory was that there were no schools closer than 40 miles that offer this sport now, making interscholastic gymnastic competition inadvisable.

Ms. Prieskorn put a motion on the floor for a girls' track team and it was seconded by Dr. Edward Scollon. Several trustees, including Robert Hirn, had questions about the total cost of the new program and the ultimate direction of the entire athletic program.

His view was echoed by Dean Hoag. When the measure came to a vote it was defeated 4-3 with President Arthur Severance joining Scollon and Prieskorn in favor. Elwyn Helwig, Lynn Albee, Hirn and Hoag voted against starting the program.

While girls' track is down, it is far from out. One trustee said off the record that he will probably vote for it at the next meeting when it is due to be brought up again.

His objection was the pressure group that attended the meeting. We have to stop this type of action, he feels, and run the school in a business-like manner.

It's only good business, he added, to know all the details and the costs of the program and we should have them at the next meeting.

Ms. Prieskorn said that the board was being picayunish about the cost of girls' sports. We just voted $2,000 for a well for the practice fields and the cost of girls' sports is much less than this, she said.

It was the view of other members that athletic costs were a continuing expense as compared to the well which is a one time investment.

The well referred to by Ms. Prieskorn is one authorized to furnish water for the practice football and baseball fields. It is estimated to cost $2,000 and was quickly okayed by trustees Monday.

Other than this it was a routine session. The pay for substitute teachers was upped $3.00 per day. That brings the total to $28 daily for the first 10 days in the same assignment and $33 a day after the 10 days. Regular teachers average about $50 per day.

Up to six students may attend cosmetology school in Caro at a cost to the school of $150 each. Transportation costs would be added to this.

Vocational students were authorized reimbursement of 2 cents per mile per student to a maximum of 10 cents a mile. Membership in the MASB was authorized for $735.

50 PER CENT INCREASE

After discussion in a session closed to the taxpayers and the press, the board voted to raise Tom Woody's salary from $500 to $750 for his work as manager of the school's brochure sent free to selected homes in the district.

Set Walk-A-Thon for September 22

Cass City will be one of eight locations set for this year's Big Brother's of Tuscola County Walk-A-Thon, scheduled for Saturday, Sept. 22. Walkers will meet at the municipal park for registration between 8 a.m. and 9 a.m., with the actual walk beginning shortly after 9:00 a.m.

Some 50 walkers are expected to turn out for the event, designed to raise $10,000 county-wide for the Big Brothers organization. No minimum amount is required to sponsor a walker, but the organization is hoping for at least 25 cents per mile per walker.

A route of 10 miles has been mapped out, beginning at the park. Walkers will proceed down Main to Seeger, then south on Seeger to River Road. The walkers will then head east on River Road to Crawford Road, then north to M-81.

After heading west on M-81, the walkers will then turn north on Schwegler Road for two miles to Reed Road. They will then proceed to Cemetery Road, then south to the junior high school and back to the park.

Funds raised by the walk will go toward operating capital for the organization.

STUDENTS AT ADAMS SCHOOL near Verona still use desks used by their parents and grandparents. Teacher Mrs. Marilyn Schneider instructs a group of students at the front of the class.

Country schools live on in Huron County

By Jim Ketchum

She's teacher, principal, physical education instructor, nurse and building superintendent all rolled into one. If she can't make it to the one-room Adams School located just northeast of Verona, school doesn't meet.

Marilyn Schneider of Ubly enjoys her roll as teacher of one of the few remaining country schools in the state. She sees this slower, more personalized style of education as still functional in a society that has all but abandoned the country school to the archives of history.

Mrs. Schneider teaches a class of 26, ranging from kindergarten through sixth grade in a room containing a mixture of present and past. Mixed in with more modern desks are those containing ink wells constructed with wrought-iron legs, ideal for dunking the pigtails of the girl who sat in the next seat.

These days, the wells are usually filled with wads of discarded paper or pencils.

Old blackboards, some cracked, adorn the front of the room, along with Mrs. Schneider's desk. A telephone that occasionally startles everyone in class when it rings is tucked away in a corner of the room.

At the rear of the room, the school bell rope hangs down through the ceiling, ready to call students from the approximate one-mile radius to class.

Students at the Adams School sit attentively and, aside from the rustling of paper at the end of the day, class remains quiet and responsive to Mrs. Schneider when she drills them on daily lessons.

A relic of the past? A dinosaur of education? Not according to Mrs. Schneider. She explained that Adams is one of 12 country schools still operated by the Huron Intermediate Board of Education in Huron county. Although enrollment is down this year in most of the one-room schools, she believes they still serve a useful purpose.

"The rapport here with students is terrific," Mrs. Schneider explained. "I know everyone here and all the kids know each other. The older ones help the younger ones.

"I have no discipline problems with my students," she continued. "If a question of discipline came up, I'm sure I'd have 100 per cent backing from the parents."

School begins for these predominantly farm youngsters at 9 a.m. and runs until 3:30 p.m. with the exception of the kindergarteners, who go home at noon. Mrs. Schneider feels a close personal relationship with each student, since each grade has no more than five persons in it.

Mrs. Schneider enjoys the personal freedom of the country school atmosphere.

"I don't like the kind of competition you find in a large school where you feel you must compete for best bulletin board or something like that," she explained. "Here, I work with the students and am in charge of every phase of the operation. I like that very much."

Mrs. Schneider drives 15 miles each way to school from Ubly, and has done so for the last three winters. Previously, she taught at another country school a few miles from Adams and substituted in Ubly before receiving her bachelor's degree from Central Michigan University this year.

She said she plans to stay in the country school environment as long as possible. Mrs. Schneider admits that some problems peculiar to the one-room school do exist.

"I don't have the time I'd like to give to each student," she said. "I can tell if the students are getting their material, but I really can't work as much as I would like with slower students."

Another problem she said faced her as a teacher is a lack of what she described as "busy materials" for students not being worked with at a given time. Occasionally, Mrs. Schneider will dismiss some students not involved with an immediate lesson. But lack of seat work remains a problem.

Another problem is a lack of music and art study. She organizes the students into some group singing, but without musical instruments or teaching aids, there is not much she can do with it.

The district, she added, is cooperative when it comes to films. She has a projector and screen and makes use of these visual aids. One film in particular that the school uses is an expose on drugs, produced by the Fraternal Order of Police.

Director 'satisfied'

Call drunk driver crackdown success

Tuscola county's traffic fatality record has dropped from a year ago and is down over the four-year average, according to the coordinator of the Michigan State Police Selective Enforcement Program.

State Police Lt. Zane Grey told the Chronicle this week that since the program went into effect May 25, 11 persons have been killed on county roads, compared with a four-year average of 16 for the same period, or a 31 per cent reduction. Grey said he is satisfied that selective enforcement has been largely responsible for this drop.

He said since this year's program began, 1,839 arrests have been made by the selective enforcement unit in the county through Aug. 30. Most of these, he added, were speeding violations.

Grey said 32 arrests for driving under the influence of liquor were made, while 72 other patrol arrests were carried out. These involved violations concerning open containers of intoxicants in vehicles or violations of the controlled substance law. Additionally, 324 liquor inspections have been made in county drinking establishments.

Grey indicated that the 32 DUIL arrests are below expected levels, due in part, he said, to extra enforcement and coverage by local media of the program.

Last year, under Selective Enforcement, 66 DUIL arrests were made in the county in a program lasting only from August through November. The lowering of this number had been a prime goal of the special police unit.

On the fatality side, Tuscola county now finds itself at 20, three below the four-year average. Before the program began in May, 10 persons had died on county highways, or two ahead of the same four-year average.

Grey said he is satisfied with the kind of cooperation the program has received from the Tuscola County Sheriff's department, the prosecutor's office and the courts. He indicated an anticipated avalanche of DUIL arrests has failed to materialize.

"I am satisfied at the way the law enforcement agencies and the courts have been handling these arrests," he said.

Grey indicated that the establishment of the new Tuscola County State Police Post will act as an additional tool in the battle to lower the county's high death rate on its highways. The post will be in operation by Nov. 1 and provide a 17-man police force to aid in work now being done by Selective Enforcement.

He added that a continued check of traffic records is being made in the five counties currently participating in Selective Enforcement. They are Cass, Hillsdale, Lenawee and Monroe, as well as Tuscola.

"It may well be that by next year, we may not need Selective Enforcement in Tuscola County," Grey said. "Although the four-year average will still be high, we will have to evaluate the statistics on the basis of latest year reports as well as overall averages."

Grey added that both Huron and Sanilac counties have experienced a greater number of fatalities so far this year than has Tuscola, giving rise to the possibility that these areas may be in line for special attention from the state police next year.

He added that, if such an action is taken, the Tuscola Post will figure largely in police planning.

Grey said liquor inspections have met with cooperation from tavern owners in the county, who, he said, believe the presence of officers in the establishments at various hours of the day and night act as a deterrent to the drinking driver.

Coverage by county newspapers and radio stations has aided in the success of the program, Grey continued, by making the drinking driver aware that more enforcement is available.

"I am well pleased with the results of the program in Tuscola county," Grey said.

He said the major reason for high traffic fatality statistics in the county over the years involved a lack of enforcement. Roads, he said, do not seem to enter into the problem, for most are straight and well marked, better marked, in fact than in most counties in the state.

Adair orally, Tuscola county experiences a lower traffic volume than most counties.

This year's selective enforcement program is being financed by the Department of Transportation at a cost of $401,000. Most of this money goes toward salaries of officers involved in the program.

Officers from the state police are used exclusively for Selective Enforcement and will continue through the end of October.

"All the State Police do basically is arrest people and bring them in," Marr said. "We have to process them, place them in cells and provide them food and clothing. If we have to do all this, it'll take more manpower off the roads and put it in headquarters to help with administrative problems."

Marr said planning for next year's budget is already under way and increases are expected. He said another turnkey will have to be hired, along with another deputy. He stated that the department currently stands one man short.

Marr also stated that inflation currently stands as a major problem for the department and will be responsible for most cost increases.

Marr added that he looks forward to a good working relationship with the state Police in the Caro Post.

Former Cass Cityan killed in auto crash near Vassar

Tuscola county's traffic death rate rose to 20 early Friday morning when a car driven by Charles Gage, 30, St. Helen, went out of control, crashed into a tree and burst into flames.

Gage, a former resident of Cass City, died when the car he was driving ran off South Vassar Road at Waterman Road at a high rate of speed and failed to make a curve. The auto crashed into a large tree and burst into flames.

Gage's body was thrown from the wreckage. Tuscola County Sheriff's deputies said visible skid marks made by Gage's auto measured 150 feet.

The Vassar fire department was summoned to extinguish the blaze. The mishap occurred at 1:00 a.m.

Gage was taken to Caro Community Hospital where he died shortly after the accident.

He was born in Cass City April 20, 1943, son of Charles Gage and the late Nancy Morris Gage. He had lived in St. Helen the past ten years.

Gage is survived by one daughter, his father, Charles of Genoa City, Wis., his maternal grandmother, Mrs. Harriet Morris of Dearborn, and a number of aunts and uncles.

Funeral services were held Monday from Little's Funeral Home with Rev. Sherman Beird of Saginaw officiating.

By John Haire

(And anyone else he can get to help)

From this pulpit.

In a month or two the Chronicle will move part of its operation upstairs, occupying three rooms of what was once a mammoth apartment.

Growing pains. Inflation pains, too. That entire upstairs apartment rented for $125, heat furnished. With the costs of today, it's easy to see that this rental wasn't a way to get rich quick. . . .or get rich slowly either.

Nine years ago the $80 a month we received came in handy. Handy? We were darn glad to get it. It was worth more than the $125 a month we were receiving at the end.

In a capsule what happened at the Chronicle is reflected in every business. Cost increase and business looks for volume. Merchants need more stock, manufacturers need more equipment, farmers need more land.

More ways of doing more business to hold unit costs down low enough for survival.

End of sermon.

There's going to be a Big Brothers Walk-Athon in Cass City soon. It's a 10-mile hike around the perimeter of the village.

Early this week, B. A. "Curly" Calka was talking when he should have been listening. Anyway Curly said that for 5 bucks a mile he could do it.

By noon the next day the Curly WILL WALK fund had swelled to $80 and was growing.

Any way you look at it a certain winner will be the Big Brothers. The bet is that if B. A. doesn't make the walk he'll match whatever is raised, says Larry Shagena.

Don't be deceived because Curly is a little on the pudgy side. Insiders say that he has the will and the power to make it all the way.

++++++++

I looked and looked after the last issue hit the streets to find schedule B in the paper. That's the list that shows what teachers make for work outside the classroom. It's a long list but it somehow slipped away.

But we've caught up with it this week and it's printed somewhere in this issue.

Honest.

++++++++

A couple of business changes are in the wind this week. Cass City Vending has a new owner and a tire company will be opening shortly in the former warehouse of Bauer Candy Co.

Al Ricker, Cass City's premier lake fisherman, says now is the time to dust off that salmon rod and head for Oscoda.

This week end and the following one should be the peak of the season, he confides. The fish are in close near the mouth of the Au Sable River. All the fish are the coveted Chinook (King) salmon.

While the next two weeks may be the peak, last week end wasn't all that bad for Ricker. He caught three Kings, 18, 16 and 13 pounds each.

Salem women hold meetings

The September meetings of the two groups of United Methodist women of Salem church were held recently. The Dorcas group met at the church Sept. 5, with 25 present for the noon luncheon which preceded the program. Fifteen attended the business meeting and program and heard Miss Iva Mae Hildinger tell of her work in the hospital at Espanola, N.M.

Miss Lydia Weihing presented the lesson for the month on "Liberation, as seen through the Bible".

Monday evening 27 attended the evening group meeting at the home of Mrs. Harvey Walter. Miss Weihing conducted devotions and Miss Hildinger spoke. Election of officers will take place in the October meeting. Mrs. Robert Tuckey presided over the Monday evening meeting.

Police arrest local man on arson charge

James Gray, Cass City, was arrested Tuesday afternoon and arraigned on a felony warrant charging him with arson in a July 26 fire that destroyed his home and contents at the corner of Pine and West Streets.

Gray appeared before Magistrate John Bowles and entered no plea. He was released on personal recognizance. He was scheduled for arraignment in Tuscola County District Court Sept. 17.

The fire has been under investigation since local fire officials failed to determine the exact cause of the blaze that destroyed the two-story wood-frame home. Fire inspectors from the Michigan State Police and Cass City Police Chief Gene Wilson conducted an extensive search through the ruins immediately after the fire and were unable to determine an exact cause.

Gray has a wife and seven children.

SUSPECT APPREHENDED

Tuscola County Deputies Monday assisted Michigan State Police from the Sandusky post in apprehending a suspect wanted on charges of armed robbery in the Detroit area.

Deputy Leonard Huff and Detective Ronald Phillips aided State Police in capturing Hugh Patrick Hackett in a house located at the corner of Kelly and Lamton Roads.

Police surrounded the house and forced Hackett and two other companions from the house.

A subsequent search of the house turned up two hypodermic needles and a quantity of pills. These were confiscated as evidence and the trio was taken to the Sanilac county jail by State Police.

MARIJUANA CHARGE

A 25-year-old Cass City man has been bound over to Sanilac County Circuit Court on a charge of growing marijuana.

Donald Walker was arrested by State Police from the Bad Axe Post for allegedly growing the weed behind the home he was renting on Bay City-Forestville Road, about seven miles east of Gagetown.

Officers said the plants, only two of which were ready for harvest, were being grown in three rows ranging in length from 10 to 60 feet and averaging between two and a half to three feet high. The harvested marijuana would have brought an estimated $1,600 at current street prices, officers said.

A trial date has not been set for Walker, who was released on $1,000 personal recognizance bond.

SQUASH STOLEN

Police report two instances of squash being stolen from area gardens. Friday, Frank Ertman, 5627 Cemetery Rd., reported to Tuscola deputies that seven squash and two watermelons were stolen from his garden sometime during the preceding night.

He told officers he had seen a quantity of smashed vegetables in the road while driving home, but did not think to check his own garden until the next morning. He placed his loss at $20.

Sunday, John Groverstein, 4877 Shabbona Rd., told deputies someone entered his garden during the night and took six squash which he valued at $10.

Police have no leads as to the identity of the suspects.

Board votes on revenue sharing

The Tuscola County Board of Commissioners voted Tuesday to designate its entire share of federal revenue sharing funds for capital expenditures. The amount, $325,617, was designated for the purpose following discussion to determine greatest need.

A pressing problem facing the commissioners involves the court house. The heating system, installed over 40 years ago, is in need of repair. An architect has been retained by the board to run a preliminary study of the system. This study should be available in about a month.

Early estimates place cost of renovating the system and installing air conditioning in the neighborhood of $150,000.

In addition, office space is currently at a premium in the building. Discussion also focused on the possibility of constructing another office complex on land already owned by the county, either adjacent to the jail or near the extended care facility.

Nothing was formalized on this latter proposal. It was referred to committee for further study.

In other action, the board also received a report from the office of Dog Warden on a survey conducted in Elkland, Juniata and part of Fairgrove township concerning dog licensing. In Elkland township, it was discovered that, of 119 homes contacted, 71 had dogs. Of that 71, 56 had failed to license their animals.

Commissioner Maynard McConkey had requested the survey. Cass City was not included in the canvass.

McConkey said this pointed up the need for additional manpower in the dog warden's office to police licensing. He added that, if all dogs had been licensed, there would be no need to raise fees next year.

Fees will go up an average of 80-100 per cent in 1974.

McConkey said he did not know how many more persons should be hired to police dog licensing practices.

FROM THE Editor's Corner

Ten years ago if you wanted to be sure of getting a job all that you needed was a teaching certificate.

If the body was warm school administrators gobbled them up. . .and sometimes there was doubt whether or not the teacher was really alive at all after a few weeks on the job.

That's all changed now of course. To snag a job as a teacher you've got to be lucky and good. There are so many teachers for so few jobs.

Replacing the need for teachers these days is the need for office people. If you want to be sure of instant success be a secretary or a bookkeeper. Executives aren't that hard to find. . .but secretaries? They are rare jewels to be coddled and protected. Figuratively speaking, I mean.

There's a world-wide shortage of persons with these talents. A news bit out of London the other day said that secretaries can pick and choose their job. One executive reported that he advertised for a secretary offering a liberal salary, four weeks' vacation and a 6½-hour work day and got just two responses.

Now secretarial work is primarily women's work. Inevitably the demand will force up salaries. An office clerk in the near future could be the plumber, electrician or carpenter of today.

Already they are showing signs of the prima donna just like the elite of the building trades.

The electrician does electrical work, the plumber plumbs. That's all. Now the gals have been objecting to bringing coffee or ordering flowers for the boss.

They were hired as secretaries and by gum that's what they will do. That's all they will do.

No housewife's work wanted if you want to keep the new breed secretary pounding your typewriter.

When I think about it. That's not all bad. Maybe I should run an ad.

Here at the Chronicle we don't expect secretaries to bring coffee to the boss or anyone else. I could advertise and guarantee that any bright young secretary would not tarnish her image by doing chores that she left behind when she became a career woman.

You can believe that this is bowing to the demands of women's lib if you want.

But the truth is that everyone around this joint is so busy that they scarcely have time to pour their own coffee, never mind about anyone else.

There is one more trivial reason why a secretary wouldn't have to be demeaned by hauling coffee to the boss around here.

The greatest thing about coffee is an excuse to sneak off and goof off for a few moments every day.

No way will I give that up.

"If It Fitz . . ." He forgot to wet his whistle

BY JIM FITZGERALD

And then I wrote. . . .

For me, life began at the age of 5 as I was walking home from Jefferson School with some other kid's galosh on one foot.

That is my earliest memory. All which occurred before that day is a blank. And there are countless gaps in the years since then — I can't remember what happened last Saturday night — but I've never forgotten the reckless abandon with which I got mud on that strange galosh. I hopped through every puddle.

This memory was revived last week by a sad picture in the Port Huron Times Herald. It portrayed the dying gasp of Jefferson School. They have torn it down. Zounds. I must quit reading that paper before I run out of nostalgia. That town, as I remember it, is crumbling in the face of dratted progress.

Gone is the marvelous pavilion in Pine Grove Park where a kid could find a zillion hiding places. . . .and prance grandly while the Kiwanis band played Sousa spine-tinglers.

I delivered mail in Port Huron and, so help me, they have leveled my entire route. The same fate flattened most of my newspaper route. Urban Renewal, that gigantic bruiser of boyhood memories, has replaced dozens of worn but warm homes with a few cold office buildings. I wonder where all the people went, and if they are getting their mail and papers all right.

Now they've done away with Jefferson, my first school, and I will soon run out of places to drive by and point at and bore my kids talking about.

I attended Jefferson for only 1 year, kindergarten. 2 things, besides the wrong galosh, I remember most. One is what I had to wear. Short pants and long, lumpy stockings held up by a garter belt. Remember? I can close my eyes and see again my long underwear bulking out between the tops of my stockings and the bottom of my pants.

The other thing I can remember most is our kindergarten band. I played the water whistle in it. Is there such a thing as a water whistle today? I don't think so. My whistle was shaped like a bird and you filled it with water and then blew through the tail and a shrill, gurgly noise came out the beak. I have always thought that Lawrence Welk must have played a water whistle in school.

Our band had a recital for parents, of course. My dad attended and complained for years after. He swore that I blew and blew but no noise came out. He was right. I was nervous that day and I forgot to put water in the whistle. When you are 5 years old, this is a terrible thing. But it makes a lovely memory.

When you write a column like this you can write about yesterday, today or tomorrow. When I write about today I am usually angry about something. For tomorrow I am hopeful, but leery.

Yesterdays are the best. The memories make me smile, and sometimes hoot, and sometimes my eyes get damp. And almost always I go back to that first day, hopping through the puddles, and I wish I could remember if that other kid ever got his galosh back.

Uncle Tim From Tyre Says:

Dear Mister Editor:

Folks in this country has the idee that if a swaller of mineral oil is good fer what ails em, a quart would be wonderful. The fellers come to this finding Saturday night at the country store after discussing some of our cures that are worst than some of our diseases.

Bug Hookum had saw by the papers where the federal Guvernment has spent $175 million telling us about drugs since 1969, and now a Guvernment-backed study at the University of California says drug education programs is doing more to permote use of illegal drugs han to pervent it. Bug said when it comes to solving our problems we get fanatic, and he said a fanatic is a feller that oses sight of his goal and redoubles his effort.

Fer onct, Mister Editor, the fellers was full agreed that Bug was on the right track. Clem Webster said that in jest about everthing we do, from fighting poverty to putting football games on the television, we git so carried away doing it we forgit to quit. And nowhere do we do more damage than when we start passing laws fer the general good. We got so excited about thawing the cold war with Russia we sold em so much grain we're going to run short of flour after we've run out of feed fer our livestock that we're selling to Japan so they won't be mad at us fer asking em to cut back on importing textiles that is hurting our industry and is made of cotton we sold em below cost to keep the support price up fer our farmers that now is having to pay $10 a bushel for seed soybeans cause we shipped em all to West Germany.

Clem run out of breath with that, and Zeke Grubb got the floor to allow as how the all-volunteer Army was another case of throwing the baby out with the bath water. Zeke had saw this report where recruiters in the Army was doing everthing to fill their quotas of volunteers, including filling out false test forms and physical exam papers for em. What happens, Zeke went on, is that it's costing the Army $80 million to git them out that had no business in.

General speaking, said Zeke, the more laws you got the more problem you got gitting the salve to the sore. Fer instant, he had saw Congress has amended a law to where the Guvernment can't charge fer using a national park campsite that don't have plumbing, and found out later the change will bankrup the Park Service cause almost none of their places qualify fer fees.

The way things is running, Zeke went on, in another 10 year there won't be such a thing as take home pay, it'll all be took out in benefits. If Social Security is good, Workmen's Compensation, hospital and life insurance and profit sharing is wonderful, was Zeke's words.

Practical speaking, Mister Editor, after all the benefits and income taxes come out, a feller probably would be better off taking a extra week of vacation without pay instead of a raise.

Yours truly,
Uncle Tim

County soil survey update begins

The Tuscola County Board of Commissioners has voted to participate in updating the Tuscola County Soil Survey. The last soil survey was made in 1926 and new information is needed to work with land use planning, equalization, potential housing development, agriculture demands, conservation practices and many other associated needs in the county.

The Board has signed an agreement with Michigan State University and their Crop and Soils Agronomy Department and work was started last week. A soil scientist will be visiting every section in Tuscola county with soil borings. The car will be marked with a Michigan State University sticker.

Data from the survey is hopefully to be made available by the fall of 1974. A committee from the Cooperative Extension Service, Soil Conservation District, County Board of Commissioners and interested farmers will be formed to work with the soil survey report, Bill Bortel, County Extension Director, said.

The meeting will be held at the Vern Kretzchmer home on Berne Road one mile north of Pigeon.

Officers will be nominated at this meeting, the first of the year. The event is in conjunction with the National Democratic Telethon scheduled to be televised Sept. 15.

Rural community classes set for Sept. 18-20

Dr. Manfred Thullen, Resource Development Specialist from Michigan State University, will teach classes in Huron, Sanilac and Tuscola counties on "Rural Community, 1985". The basis for the sessions will be Research Report 193 which outlines the trends existing today. These trends, unless changed, will bring some predictable results in our rural communities by 1985 or later.

If you are interested in the future of rural areas, attend the sessions from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 18, in the Meeting Room of the County Building, Bad Axe; Wednesday, Sept. 19, at the Production Credit Association Building in Sandusky; or Thursday, Sept. 20, in the Civil Defense Center in Caro.

These meetings are free and are open to all people. They are part of the class offerings by the Cooperative Extension Service.

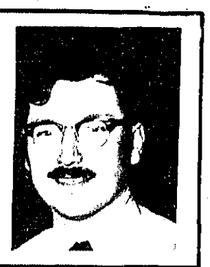
"Either we shape the future - however rough-hewn - or the future will chisel us into fragments," Ann Ross, Thumb Extension Home Economist, says. Dr. Thullen's information will help you understand today's trends and influence the future."

People never seem to learn money won't buy everything.

To make ends meet today people have to learn to do more--more doing without.

KETCHUM'S KNAPSACK

DNR does it again



By Jim Ketchum

The venerable Department of Natural Resources has once more come out on the minus side protecting wildlife, especially those endangered species any thinking person would attempt to save. They have seemingly ignored logic in favor of expediency and I'm afraid all of us are the losers.

In the Wednesday, Sept. 5 issue of the Huron Daily Tribune, page one featured a large photograph of a huge owl which had been captured on a farm near Bad Axe. The accompanying story explained that the bird had been caught in the act of killing a duck, part of a domesticated flock.

It seems that the nocturnal prowler had visited the flock on numerous occasions and had feasted on a number of birds before he was finally snared. So the crafty thief had been nabbed. Enter the DNR.

A DNR officer from Caro was called in to determine just what should be done with the owl, which is an endangered bird and is protected by state law. The DNR man immediately sized up the situation and determined the appropriate step to take was to destroy the owl.

The owl? That's right. Destroy the owl.

Why? Well, reasoned the DNR man, if the bird were turned loose somewhere else, he would resume his poultry-thieving ways, taking more fowl and costing some farmer more money.

So, in the name of economic and moral expediency, the owl was put to death. Three cheers for the DNR.

But wait, you ask, isn't the owl protected by state law? He sure is, except (and this is a big except) when he destroys domesticated poultry or other farm stock. Then it automatically becomes open season on owls.

This could open the floodgates for anyone who decides he'd like the remains of an owl to grace his mantle or to go with the rest of his fantastic trophies gathering dust in the basement or attic.

My beef over this latest faux pas by the DNR is pretty simple. It seemed more than abundantly clear that the solution in this case would have been to transport the owl into one of the many state forest areas which the venerable DNR takes so much pride in protecting.

Why not? The bird could have been taken 50 or 100 or 200 miles away and turned loose in the midst of a forest area, free to take up his calling of keeping the population of rodents in check and picking off the sick, old or injured animals of other species.

That's why he was put here in the first place. Why not allow him to do his job?

The solution the DNR found does not make any sense at all. There aren't enough owls to go around now--why take another one away when it isn't necessary?

One of the reasons probably put forth by the DNR folk is that such a transportation service costs too much. And you have to agree. It takes a lot less gasoline, less depreciation on vehicles, fewer man hours and less effort to take the owl out back and pump a few slugs into him than it would to set him free in a new environment where he could continue to function.

This was the same kind of psychology in use just before the passenger pigeon was shot out of the skies for the last time. Only a few years before his demise, this species of pigeon darkened the skies and made target fodder for young men and boys who wanted to test their aim.

Similar situations can be cited for dozens of other kinds of birds, animals and, yes, even fish. I can remember when I was a boy, I walked down to a neighboring barn near our farm and saw an owl that had been killed when one of the farmhands picked up a pitch fork and threw it at the defenseless bird.

It made me a little bit sick to see it.

This kind of kill-it-when-it's-in-the-way mentality is the prime reason why wildlife is in such sad shape today. In spite of the great push on the publicity front in defense of wildlife, I'm afraid respect for preserving what we have has not measurably increased.

It discourages me even more when an agency of the state of Michigan, which is supported by our tax dollars, fails to face the realities of today and act responsibly.

I do not want to get into a protracted discussion concerning the DNR's position on antlerless deer hunting because I'm not a hunter. I couldn't kill a deer of either sex. I always said I'd take up hunting as soon as they issued guns to the deer, bear, moose and whatever else it is that men get such a kick out of slaughtering every autumn.

I'd enjoy it if the odds were just a little more even than they are now.

I'd much rather hunt with my trusty Argus 35-millimeter camera. That way, I can shoot the same animal or bird as many times as I like and so can anybody else lucky enough to spot it.

Too bad the DNR doesn't see it that way.

Help Line sets area activities

Help Line Week as proclaimed by Cass City Village President Lambert Althaver and Gagetown Village President James England winds up with Help Line Day, Saturday, Sept. 15, spotlighting these two towns.

Because there are no Help Line volunteers in these areas, The Cass City Citizens for Improved Education have offered their help. They will be working with Cass City area chairman, Ilene Satchell, 673-6329 by answering questions on Help Line in downtown Cass City from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 15.

Cass City residents have made use of the Help Line service by placing 66 calls at a cost of $20.55. However, Cass City clubs have covered this cost many times over with contributions from the Elkland Community Chest, Lions Club, Rotary Club, and Citizens for Improved Education.

Gagetown cost Help Line the least amount of money and used the service least, only 15 calls were placed at a cost of $4.83. In addition, Help Line pays the $3.00 monthly charge to keep the Enterprise service open to this area. The Sacred Heart Women's Council has donated to Help Line.

Volunteers will be in the Gagetown area Saturday, Sept. 15, to pass out Help Line information to residents. Citizens for Improved Education Secretary, Joyce Lane, will be in charge.

For more information on Help Line Day projects or to join Help Line, call one of the numbers listed above. Contributions may be sent to Help Line, c/o Edythe Lado, 2769 Higgins Road, Vassar, Mich.

Your neighbor says

I enjoy life

For some of us, life is merely something you do while you're waiting to die. For others, life holds something new and interesting every day, and does not end with retirement from a job.

For William Profit, 6679 Houghton, life has been extremely enjoyable. At 76, he says he's glad he's still around and, if given the chance, he'd live it over again.

"The pleasant things have far offset the unpleasant ones," Profit says. "I enjoyed farming when I was younger and I enjoyed my 22 years in the Register of Deeds office. And I'm enjoying my retirement."

Profit served as Register of Deeds and now spends his winters in Bradenton, Fla. He and his wife do plan to spend Christmas in Cass City with family.

Red Cross sets blood drive

The American Red Cross, in cooperation with the Hills and Dales Hospital Auxiliary, will hold a blood drive Monday, Sept. 24, at St. Pancratius Parish Hall from 2 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Volunteers from the auxiliary and from Cass City High School will operate the drive. According to Mrs. E. C. Fritz, chairperson for the drive, students wishing to assist should contact Wayne Dillon, guidance counselor at the high school.

Equipment and personnel for the mobile blood unit will be provided by the Flint Regional Blood Center of the Red Cross.

A similar drive held in the spring resulted in 138 persons donating blood-38 over the goal. A total of 140 hours of labor went into the successful completion of the drive.

Anyone donating blood in the drive is assured that he will not have to pay for any blood he might need in the future. The only fee collected goes to the hospital for processing and technical services involved in giving blood.

Anyone in good health between the ages of 18 and 65 is eligible to donate. After the age of 66, a person may donate with the written permission of their personal physician.

Normally the procedure lasts about 45 minutes, with less than seven minutes for the actual donation. Donations may be made every eight weeks, but not more than five times a year.

A person who has had hepatitis will not be allowed to give blood. Blood will not be taken during a pregnancy and not until six months after the baby is born. A waiting period of up to six months after surgery, depending upon the type of surgery is also required. No blood may be donated within 72 hours of a tooth extraction.

A person who has suffered from malaria is permanently deferred. If he had taken antimalarial drugs, he is deferred for three years from the time of the last medication.

Anyone living outside the U.S. in a malarial area should be deferred for six months after his return.

Donors who have suffered from mononucleosis will be allowed to give blood six months after their recovery, if the illness was not complicated by jaundice.

Owen-Gagers in Cass City face tuition charge

Fifty-six students from the Owen-Gage School District are now enrolled in Cass City Schools in all grades. For the parents of these students in the 7th through 12th grades, tuition payment of $55 will have to be paid.

Supt. Don Crouse informed the board that the tuition must be levied and collected to make these pupils eligible for State aid.

In prior years tuition was set but never collected. It was a stratagem used to be eligible for State grants without charging the family tuition.

Now if it's not collected, no funds will be paid by the State.

Presently, the students are transported to where the buses run for the district and are picked up. The extra students required an extra bus run for the district. Crouse acknowledged.

The bus run is reimbursed by the State on the same basis as other buses. The travel allotment does not cover the expenses.

ACCIDENTS

[illegible] struck another vehicle at the intersection of M-25 and Sheridan Road.

Timothy Good, 7926 Bach Rd., driver of one of the autos, told Tuscola deputies he was eastbound on M-25 at Sheridan Road when a car pulled in front of him. He said he could not avoid a collision.

The driver of the other car, Chester Hall, Clio, told officers he did not see the Good auto approaching and entered M-25 from Sheridan Road. Officers noted 12 feet of skid marks from Good's car before the point of impact.

Good's car stopped 110 feet from the point of impact, while the Hall auto stopped 120 feet from the crash scene. Hall was ticketed for failure to yield the right of way.

Good and his two companions, Dale Karr of Huron Line Road, Gagetown, and Janice Voelker of Pigeon, were taken to Scheurer Hospital, Pigeon, where they were treated for their injuries.

Hall was not injured in the mishap which occurred at 1:00 a.m.

CASS CITY ACCIDENTS

Two accidents, both on Thursday, were reported in Cass City.

At 1:05 a.m., a car driven by Joseph Lockhart of East Sanilac Road, Kingston, ran past the end of Garfield Street at Doerr Road, struck a utility pole and proceeded 500 feet before coming to a stop.

Lockhart told Tuscola deputies he did not know what happened and that he must have fallen asleep at the wheel.

No ticket was issued.

At 8:00 a.m., a car driven by Jeanne Bernice Donner of Spring Lake struck a sign and two posts as she traveled east on Rose Street near the intersection of Oak Street.

Cass City Police said Ms. Donner apparently became blinded by the sun and crept over too far in the right lane.

She was not ticketed and not injured in the mishap.

MRS. HAROLD POLEGA, 6480 Bay City-Forestville Rd., poses with an owl killed by her husband Monday morning that had been feasting on poultry being kept by Polega. The marauding bird had killed 20 pheasants and six ducks being kept in a pen near the barn. Polega received a permit from the Michigan State Police in Bad Axe to destroy the bird, which is otherwise protected by state law. Mrs. Polega explained that her husband set a trap for the bird Sunday night and found him captured the next morning. This owl's wing span measured 56 inches.

General Telephone begins work

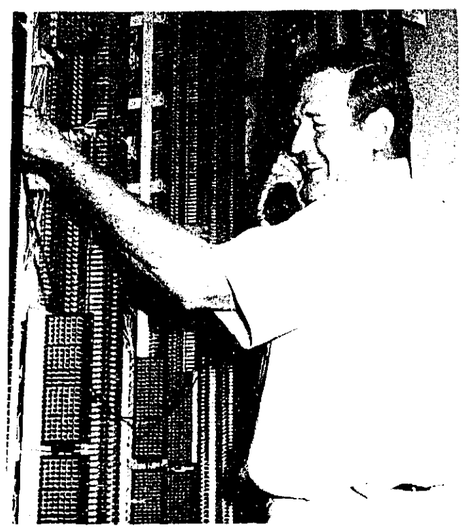
General Telephone Company announced today that the final stage of its rural upgrading program is now under way in the Kingston exchange according to J. E. Courtney, Customer Service Manager for the company.

The $77,000 program consists of placing approximately 25 miles of buried telephone cable. This cable addition will make possible the reduction of all rural lines in the Kingston exchange to no more than four parties per rural line.

Burying cable helps protect it from damage by wind, rain, lightning, and other service interruptions, damage common to exposed cable. In addition, it helps preserve the natural beauty of the environment.

The project will be completed in December of this year.

This addition is part of General Telephone's continued service improvement program to insure the best possible service to our customers in the Kingston exchange, Courtney said.



HARLAN DICKINSON, local testman for General Telephone Co., reviews necessary changes for upcoming service improvements for the Kingston exchange, which include reduction of rural lines to no more than four parties per line.

Growing Deford church sets building dedication

A new $150,000 church building to house the growing congregation of the Deford Community Church will be dedicated in week-end ceremonies, the Rev. Dale Sherry, pastor, announced this week.

The sparkling new building is being completed less than two short years after the new denomination was formed.

Rev. Sherry said that when the church started there were 65 persons attending the first Sunday. Now average attendance is about 200 persons and the congregation has some 175 members.

While the new building is estimated to be worth $150,000 by insurance adjustors, it cost the congregation much less than this.

That's because members did much of the work. The building has been under construction for months and services have been held there for some time. . .as the construction work continued.

Finishing touches were still being added this week to prepare for the dedication services this week end. Complete program details are available in this issue.

In addition to building the new church, the congregation has also erected a new parsonage on the 10-acre site purchased on Kingston Road in Deford.

Honor Katherine Miller

Katherine Elizabeth Miller, a senior at Cass City High School, will be featured in the Seventh Annual Edition of "Who's Who Among American High School Students, 1972-73," the largest student award publication in the nation.

Katherine is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Miller of Cass City. She is active in sports, politics, FHA and the French Club, and has also received a State of Michigan and Walbro Corp. scholarship.

In addition to having her biography published in the book, she will also compete for one of ten $1,000 scholarship awards funded by the publishers and will be invited to participate in the firm's annual "Survey of High Achievers" later in the academic year.

Katherine plans to attend Michigan State University in East Lansing after graduation.

Sentence Caro man to prison Monday

A Caro man was sentenced Monday to Jackson Prison for two and a half to four years after being found guilty of larceny from a Caro restaurant.

David Robinson was sentenced by Tuscola County Circuit Court Judge Norman Baguley with a recommendation that he receive intensive psychiatric counseling and vocational training during his term.

Robinson was found guilty of stealing a quantity of hot dogs from the Rainbow Restaurant June 18.

Two arraignments were also heard Monday. James Bearinger, Caro, was arraigned on a charge of breaking and entering at a warehouse with intent to commit larceny. He entered a plea of guilty which was not accepted by the court.

Judge Baguley did not accept the plea on grounds that, while evidence of a breaking and entering had been shown, no intent to commit larceny had been proven. No trial date was set in the case.

Lester McCoy, Vassar, was arraigned on a charge of assaulting an officer of the Tuscola County Sheriff's Department. He entered a plea of guilty which was accepted by the court. Sentencing in the case was set for Sept. 24.

McCoy had been charged with the June 30 assault, in Caro, of Deputy Thomas Kern. A charge of assaulting an officer of the Caro police department was dismissed.

Judge Baguley ordered a pre-sentence investigation in the case and continued bail. .

In a jury trial held Friday, Sept. 7, Ambrose Thorp, Saginaw, was found not guilty of charges of breaking and entering Palmer's Drug Store in Caro last Oct. 24. He had also been charged with intent to commit larceny.

The jury returned the verdict in the second day of the trial.

EXTENSION AGENT

When you look at your cash register slip at the grocery store, ask yourself, "How much of this is really spent for basic food?" If you are like the average supermarket shopper, you'll find that 28 per cent of your money is spent for things that aren't food. Cosmetics, records, cigarettes, clothing, magazines, and a host of other items make the food bill seem higher than it really is.

Most Americans now buy large amounts of "built-in maid service" with the remaining 72 per cent of the food dollar. Prepared foods are convenient and have most of the kitchen work already done. This saves work at home but it does cost money. The cost of this built-in service actually has gone up more than the cost of the ingredients in prepared, convenience foods.

A turkey dinner ready to go into the oven costs about 57 cents at the supermarket. The USDA estimates that a serving of the same dinner prepared at home would cost 34 cents. Housewives are willing to pay about 50 per cent extra for the convenience.

We have a wonderful selection of foods in our supermarkets. Most carry from 6,000 to 10,000 items all beautifully displayed and packaged to attract the shopper. It is estimated that 70 per cent of all sales rung up at the supermarket are products that didn't exist 10 years ago. Developing new products, freezing, packaging and marketing through today's attractive supermarkets all cost money -- and that's one of the major reasons that grocery bills are higher than they used to be.

BETTER HEALTH

Sexy movies not really harmful

BY DR. WALTER C. ALVAREZ and DR. WILLIAM J. WELCH

Of late, with all the excitement about whether or not very sexy movies and pictures do harm, I have thought of what the great English expert on sex, Dr. Havelock Ellis, once said: "If mankind wanted to encourage sexual immorality, it could have devised nothing better calculated to that end than to have insisted upon the universal adoption of clothing." I have never seen any evidence that nude pictures ever caused anyone to behave in ways that he was not already inclined to do.

Oftentimes I think that a lot of excitement over a so-called pornographic movie only serves to make it more important than it really is. Also, I have lived long enough to see many changes in what people consider "shocking" and "indecent."

I was amused to read a while ago that back in 1931, Harry Reichenbach wrote a book called PHANTOM FAME, in which he tells how he was in need of money while working in an art store, and he got the idea that if he could only get a picture condemned violently by Anthony Comstock, the then head of the Anti-Vice Society, and called the "Archangel of Virtue," he could sell millions of copies. The idea came to him when he saw the picture later known as "September Morn," a lithograph of a lovely, scantily clad young woman at the seashore. At the time, nobody would buy the picture even at ten cents a copy.

And so Mr. Richenbach kept complaining to Comstock about this obscene picture and how it should not be sold. It took quite a bit of effort to get Comstock interested, but finally Richenbach put the picture in a store window and took Comstock there, where he had already paid the group of youngsters fifty cents apiece to act as if they were tremendously stimulated by the picture. Reichenbach says, "Comstock swallowed the scene and almost choked. 'Remove that picture,' he fumed, and when the shopkeeper refused, the Anti-Vice Society appealed to the Courts."

This brought the picture into the newspapers and into fame. Overnight the lithograph that had been rejected as a Brewers' calendar picture became a vital national issue. Songs were written about it, actors wisecracked at it, reformers denounced it and 7,000,000 men and women bought copies of it at a dollar a piece. They framed it and hung it in the halls of their homes. As Mr. Reichenbach said, "There was no more immorality or suggestiveness in that picture than there was in my sister's photograph as a baby in the family album."

Similar experiences with other pictures, and also books and movies, have been recorded. Many a sexy book never would have been read if the author or the publisher of it had not managed to get himself arrested by a Comstock-type of person or group.

Very interesting in this connection is the report I read several times recently that when in Denmark the laws against pornography were taken off the books, the pornography business soon began to slow down.

A NEW DEVICE FOR HEALTH CRISIS

I read that the National Identification Co., Inc., in Denver, Colorado, has now introduced a new instrument called the Emergency Medical Instructor, or EMI, which can be a tremendous help to anyone with a disease that causes him to faint or lose consciousness so that he is unable to ask for important medical assistance. The device is a palm-sized little case, worn on his or her person by a patient.

If the person falls unconscious onto the ground or the floor, in exactly twenty seconds a previously prepared message on audio tape will automatically be broadcast from the EMI unit. The message is loud and tells clearly what is necessary to know in order to help the unconscious patient; it calls for assistance, and then gives information about whom to notify, exactly what to do and what not to do for the patient. The message continues for two minutes and is repeated continuously until the little unit is turned off.

The EMI unit costs $145.00, and can be of tremendous value to people who suffer from epilepsy, diabetes, heart disease, hemophilia, and blood clotting disorders, respiratory problems and asthma attacks; in each of these cases, the person may require immediate first aid attention, and knowing what to do can mean the difference between life and death to the patient. I have known of cases in which a diabetic in an insulin reaction or a diabetic coma has been mistaken for a drunk and has been arrested and jailed when he desperately needed medical attention.

The EMI device sounds like a very good idea. Anyone wanting more information about the device can write to the Medical Electronics Division, National Identification Co., 3955 Oneida St., Denver, Colorado 80207.

Some dizziness and fainting can be symptoms of mild epilepsy. For more information, get your copy of "Head Noises and Dizziness" by sending 25 cents and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dr. Walter C. Alvarez, Box 957, Dept. CCC, Des Moines, Iowa 50304.

Legion Auxiliary sends gifts to VA hospital

Seventeen were present Monday evening when the American Legion Auxiliary met at the Cultural Center.

Mrs. Ann Klinkman presided over the business meeting in which membership chairman, Mrs. Elgene Keller, reported 22 paid memberships. Plans were announced for a white elephant sale to be held in connection with the October meeting. The unit will forward 13 gifts to the Battle Creek VA hospital for the annual Christmas gift shop program, which is conducted each year in each VA hospital.

Cards were signed to be sent to three hospitalized members, Mrs. Elizabeth Gruber, Mrs. Mae Wise and Mrs. Ruth Hartwick.

Games were played following the business meeting. The door prize for the evening went to Mrs. Frankie Anker.

Dessert refreshments were served by the hostess committee members.

Pre-School to hold orientation

The Cass City Pre-School Nursery will hold three orientation sessions at the Presbyterian Church where mothers will observe typical nursery school procedure and discuss operating details with the teachers. Mothers of four-year-old children will attend one session Sept. 13: 9-11 a.m. for the morning class and 7:30-9 p.m.for the afternoon class. Sept. 14, 9-11 a.m. will be the orientation period for mothers of three-year-old students.

The new teacher for the three-year-old group will be Mrs. David Stafford, who attended the University of Michigan as a music major, and Wayne State University as a nursery education major. She was employed as a director of Parkside Day Care Center in Detroit for a year and a half. She and her husband have two children.

Mrs. Robert Walpole, returning for her second year, will be teaching the four-year-old classes. She received a BA degree in Education and taught for four years in an elementary school in Atlanta, Ga., as well as doing substitute teaching in the Cass City school system. She and her husband have two children.

There is a vacancy in the three-year-old class and one in the four-year-old afternoon group. For further information contact the membership chairman, Mrs. Harold Izard.

Flights from reality cause many to make crash-landings.

A little caution on that holiday trip may save a life — and it could be your own.

Rotary exchange student

Toshi Arai represents modern, growing Japan

Toshi Yuki Arai, 16, Rotary International's newest foreign exchange student in Cass City, symbolizes the new Japan. He brings with him a less-idealistic view of the United States--a maturing attitude of a nation now on an equal footing with the nation which defeated it in war a quarter century ago.

Toshi, who is staying at the Tom Proctor residence, 4794 N. Seeger, is enrolled at Cass City High School. This is his first trip abroad and he has been in Cass City three weeks.

This year of schooling will amount to only about half a year of credit in his native school, located about 40 minutes outside Tokyo. But he has found American education much to his liking.

"At home, I attend an all-boys school," Toshi said. "It seems strange to have all these girls around. They impress me very much. I like the idea of having co-education."

TOSHI YUKI ARAI, Rotary's foreign exchange student at Cass City High School, poses with a camera he brought with him from his native Japan. Toshi will stay for a year in Cass City with the Tom Proctor family.

In Japan, education takes somewhat longer to complete. Schooling begins at ages 4-5 in a private kindergarten, followed by elementary school at ages 6-7, which lasts six years.

Then comes three years in a junior high level and three more in a senior high bracket before graduation. Toshi explained that a large number of high schoolers go on to college.

The majority of public schools in Japan are not co-ed and are run on a much formal basis, according to Toshi. Free exchange between instructor and student does not take place, as a rule.

Toshi explained that, after he completes his year at Cass City High School, he will still have one and a half years of schooling remaining at home, since much of his credit work is not transferable.

"I feel strange about beginning school in September," Toshi, who speaks better English than many Americans, commented. "Back home, we begin in April and run until March, when we have a one-month vacation. Also, we attend classes six days a week.

"It's nice to be able to enjoy the week ends; real fine."

Toshi said he is pleased with American ways of education, even though they are more relaxed. He likes the give and take of the classroom and admires the friendliness of the teachers.

He is required to take American history and American government courses while he attends school here, but may take any other courses he likes. He has elected to take woodworking, art and music courses as electives, and enjoys all these.

Toshi has studied English for five years, with one year of special preparation before his trip. He said he found it difficult at first because emphasis in his language study had been on grammar and the written word, without working on speaking English to any great extent. He continues to work to improve his vocabulary.

American life brings much that is similar for the young Japanese student, along with the new and strange. His favorite television show is the "Partridge Family". He also likes to watch "Sesame Street" because it helps him with the language and provides practice.

Many other American television shows are broadcast in Japan. "The only difference is now I hear them in English," he added.

Toshi sees his homeland as on an equal footing with the United States in the world, in light of its remarkable comeback from near-total destruction at the end of the Second World War. The country now has a strong economy, challenging the American dollar for supremacy on the monetary markets of the world.

Living standards are as high in Japan as in any industrialized nation. With this industrialization come the by-products of it--pollution and a deterioration of the environment.

This upsets Toshi greatly and he said he wants to work to solve the problem. He looks toward a law career on a private level, rather than as a corporation lawyer.

"It is very sad to see what pollution is doing to Japan," he said pensively, "and I'm glad to see it has not come here."

Toshi also takes pride in the culture of Japan, and does not want to see it lost in any way.

Toshi likes people and the friendliness he said he finds in Cass City.

"I would like to get acquainted with as many people as I can while I'm here and I want to learn as much as possible about the American culture and way of life," he said.

Part of his study of the American way of life comes through newspapers he reads. He said he was impressed at the outset by the fact that newspapers in the United States are so thick.

"In Japan, our newspapers are about eight pages long," he explained. Here on Sunday, I could not believe that all that thick newspaper was for just one day. I thought it was some mistake."

Toshi is interested in sports and likes to take pictures in his spare time.

He will stay with the Proctors until next July 20, when he returns home, where his father works as a mechanical engineer in Tokyo. Chances are, he will have much to tell when he gets home.

The Traveling Salesman

WHO CANNOT SEW

Sunday morning in Buffalo—and a button falls off my last clean shirt: "Sorry, sir, valet service does not answer!"

Little girls can sew on buttons. Tailors can sew on buttons. My tough old sergeant could sew on buttons. But not me! I never got around to it.

I'm going to church anyway. Long time ago I realized that it may take a bit of effort, and some determination, and quite a lot of experience to become a regular church-goer. But life is full of real crises that demand faith and courage and a Source of guidance. There isn't much comfort in discovering that others can overcome such crises—while you never got around to it.

So any Sunday, in Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse or Troy . . . you'll be seeing me in church. (I'm the stocky fellow, with the red hair—and the button missing from his shirt!)

Letter to the Editor

Volunteers needed

September 10, 1973

Letter to the Editor
Cass City Chronicle
Cass City, Mich. 48726

This 73-74 school year the Citizens for Improved Education hopes to make available to all our school principals who would extend an invitation, those names of parents and other interested citizens that would be willing to donate an hour or two a week or less of their time to assist with essential services that might benefit our school system.

We feel volunteers can serve as a bridge between the community and the school, a two-way street that enables the school to become more responsive to the child, and the community more supportive of the school.

A volunteer in education is a ~~concerned and dedicated person~~ who works regularly in schools or other educational settings to support the efforts of professional personnel. Volunteers may be male or female; young, middle-aged or senior citizens; single or married; actively employed, retired or on welfare.

Duties include:

1. Relieve teachers of non-professional chores.

2. Provide individual attention and assistance that the classroom teacher is not able to supply to children who are not performing well in a group situation.

3. Tap the human resources of the community for the enrichment of the school program.

4. Develop greater citizen understanding of the problems facing the schools, and involve them in the total effort to improve public education.

A volunteer always works under the direction and supervision of a teacher or other member of the school staff. A volunteer is never considered a substitute for a member of the school staff. A volunteer is never expected to perform professional services. The teacher is always responsible for content and techniques.

Mrs. David (Thresa) Burnette will serve as the program co-ordinator. She has had favorable response in contacting those who would be interested in sharing a little of their time.

September 17, Monday evening, 7:30 p.m. at the High School Cafetorium we will present a film entitled, "The Art of Human Giving". It portrays the operation of a school volunteer program and we feel fortunate in acquiring this film from the Des Moines Community College.

Our goal is greater citizen understanding of our school system and what better way could this be achieved than to involve ourselves.

Higher winter wheat acreages

By William Bortel

Everything points to a larger acreage of winter wheat being planted in Tuscola county this fall. For the first time in several years, there is virtually no planting restriction by the U. S. Government. Supplies of soft white and soft red winter wheats are relatively small for export and carryover needs, and current prices are good.

Regardless of the situation -- and with planting time not far away -- Tuscola county wheat producers are urged to use those production practices which will give them the highest yields and quality and the highest return per acre of wheat planted.

Wheat should not be planted directly after wheat or after another fall-seeded small grain crop. "Take-all" and other root rot diseases have reduced yields materially whenever a crop sequence of wheat after wheat is followed. Hessian fly damage is also more severe in this case.

Planting wheat to well-drained fields will help to reduce winter killing. Plant soon after the "fly-free date" of September 15, however, wait until the "fly-free date" even if the variety has resistance to the Hessian fly. Excessively late planting may mean that the wheat plants do not have a chance to become well established before cold weather.

Planting early may allow the plants to make excessive growth, which is sometimes a detriment.

Prepare a good, weed-free seedbed and fertilize according to a soil test as first choice. If a soil test is not available, apply 350 pounds per acre of 6-24-12 or similar fertilizer on clay, silt loam and loam soils. On sandy loam and loamy sand soils, apply 250 pounds per acre of 6-24-24 or similar fertilizer. These amounts may be applied in the drill at planting. The sandy soils may need extra fertilizer and this should be applied broadcast prior to planting.

In many cases, supplemental nitrogen should be applied to the wheat in the spring, depending on the previous cropping and management practices for the field. If the field was not in a legume the previous year or manure was not applied, the usual rate of commercial nitrogen application would be 40 to 60 pounds of actual nitrogen in the spring before May 1.

Wheat following beans may be a problem if Treflan was used on the beans. If a farmer used a pint of Treflan per acre or more, it would be much safer to plow the field prior to planting wheat since we have had a dry year.

Use high quality seed. Certified seed is preferred because of its high standards for varietal purity, germination, and comparative freedom from weed seeds and other crop seeds.

Treat wheat seed for seedling diseases and bunt before planting. Maneb is suggested for seedling diseases and HCB (Hexachlorobenzene) for the bunt.

With high quality seed, the suggested seeding rate is 6 to 7 pecks per acre.

MRS. MARILYN SCHNEIDER, Ubly, rings the traditional school bell, calling pupils to class at the one-room Adams School near Verona. This is Mrs. Schneider's fourth year teaching at a rural school.

Country school

the problems of the modern world," she said. "We don't shrink away from subjects such as drugs or racial problems.

Mrs. Schneider explained that most of the families in the area are of a conservative tradition and, while they usually approve of what is taught at the country school, occasionally there are disagreements.

"For example, when we introduced modern math here, some of the parents balked at it," Mrs. Schneider explained. "But finally we decided to teach some modern math along with the more traditional forms."

These families support the school in more ways than just through taxes. Mrs. Schneider recalled the other day that the pump at the school gave out, so she summoned a nearby farmer to come down and look at the balky piece of machinery. He soon had things working again.

Practically everything at school depends on Mrs. Schneider's ability to get there. "When I'm not here, school stays closed," she explained. "But I usually make up any missed days at the end of the year."

Enrollment at Adams school has gone down over the years, partly due to families sending children to larger schools, but mostly because families are no longer as large as they once were. At one time, the school supported two teachers.

State rules and regulations also make times harder for country schools to survive. For example, remedial teachers are a requirement for schools covering the range of grades at Adams. While diagnosticians do travel among the schools, remedial instruction is hard to accomplish.

"But I really feel that our students here are not deprived," Mrs. Schneider said. "They do very well. In fact, we've had several on the honor roll at high school. So scholastically, they can compete with any other student."

Mrs. Schneider attended a country school before completing high school at Cass City. She comes by her love for education in the country naturally. Her mother, Mrs. Arlington Gray, retired last spring after 25 years in the Cass City system. Prior to that, she taught in country schools in the Shabbona area.

How long can country education continue? That's hard to say, but Mrs. Schneider wouldn't mind if it went on forever.

TRAFFIC CAMPAIGN

[redacted]

Tuscola County Sheriff Hugh Marr said he is satisfied with the way Selective Enforcement has gone in the county this year, but added that the months of less daylight are yet to come. These, he said, have proven to be the problem months in terms of fatalities.

He added that, in spite of the special units, the number of accidents in the county has gone up over last year's total. Figures through Sept. 10, last year, show 544 accidents compared with 600 accidents for the same period in 1973.

Marr also raised the possibility that Selective Enforcement may have to continue next spring and summer, due to a manpower shortage. He explained that when the Caro State Police Post is opened, the workload on the sheriff's office will increase.

Michigan Mirror

Statistics show taxpayer revolt may be dwindling

A continuing major story in Michigan and around the nation in recent years has been the "taxpayers revolt".

Most visible manifestation of this revolt has come in school millage elections, with voters repeatedly saying they are tired of paying the property tax level they are being asked to pay. School administrators and school boards have had to go back two and three times to the electorate just to raise the barest amount of money needed to keep school doors open.

Some tabulations put together by the State Department of Public Instruction indicated the revolt may be dwindling.

During the last school year in the state, voters approved four out of every five millage proposals put before them. This is the highest percentage since the board began keeping tabs on the elections six years ago.

++++++

Voters said yes in 405 of 516 millage elections last school year.

This isn't to say voters went running happily to the school board with a blank check and said "spend." They weren't very enthusiastic about approving new bonding proposals for building, turning down two out of every three proposed. This is about the same percentage as in the previous four years.

What the change in millage approvals may mean is that voters, seeing at least a little property tax relief down the road, decided they could afford to pay one more year out of their pockets for operating costs at the proposed rate.

Two steps on the road to property tax relief were made by Gov. William G. Milliken and the legislature this year.

The first came when the Legislature bought Milliken's $380 million tax cut package. That program included substantial property tax credits for the elderly and low income persons -- those hardest hit by soaring property taxes.

It allows people whose property tax takes a large chunk of their income to receive as much as $500 back from the state.

The second came with passage of the school aid bill by the Legislature in July. This coming school year, for the first time, school districts will be guaranteed $38 per pupil per mill levied up to 22 mills, no matter what the local tax base.

++++++

This major step toward equal school financing means the taxpayer will know his millage of taxation provides just as much education as anyone else's across the state.

It will be increased next year under the plan to $39 per pupil up to 25 mills raised locally and the following year every mill, no matter how much a district levies, will have a state guaranteed yield in dollars.

In other words, the state will help those who help themselves. People generally are willing to pull their share as long as they know others are pulling theirs. These new developments help insure everyone pulls equally. Thus assured, voters would appear to be more receptive to voting higher taxes for themselves.

++++++

GAMBLING STOPPED

Legalized gambling has probably gone about as far as it can go in Michigan, at least as long as William G. Milliken is governor.

The governor drew the line earlier this summer when he vetoed a bill which would have allowed games of chance at the state fair and to allow only bingo year around on the fairgrounds.

"No games of chance," he said, "and bingo only during fair week. That's as far as I'll go." And that I oppose wholesale extension of gambling in Michigan, he said. "The bill that I vetoed would have permitted an unacceptable extension of gambling."

That means dreams of some lawmakers like off track betting or casino gambling for Michigan won't come in the immediate future.

Milliken stopped off in Nevada earlier this year where he saw legalized gambling first hand. He didn't like what he saw and his previous feelings against gambling were reinforced.

So at this point, and for the next few years, Michiganders who want to wager their money legally will have to be satisfied with bingo, the state lottery or the track.

Green USA—Cass City squads clash in grid opener

The Cass City Red Hawks will lift the curtain on the 1973 grid season Friday when the Patriots of Unionville-Sebewaing come to town to test the defending Thumb B Conference titlists at Cass City Recreational Park.

The Hawks will be favored over the USA gridders on the basis of last year's record and the improvement shown in the final pre-season tune-up held Friday against Mayville and North Branch.

"We're becoming a team," Coach Roland Pakonen said this week following the Friday night effort. "Our defense and offense looked good," he added.

Pakonen tempered his elation with a word of caution when he said that while he is pleased with the improvement of the club this year, there is still a lot to be done and not much time left to do it in.

Actually, Friday night's opener will be a battle of two comparatively green squads. The Hawks are looking at seven new men on the offense and defense.

The Patriots are also without a lot of game experience. But Pakonen is not selling them short. Forget that we won last year 24-0, he said.

We're not the same team and neither is USA. The visitors will bank heavily on a talented group up from last year's undefeated Junior Varsity.

They will be fast and heavy. Neal Roller and Dave Neu are a pair of good halfbacks, according to the scouting reports. The line is anchored by a pair of plus 200-pounders that should be tough to move. Bob Niedrick weighs in at 225 and Dave Beatenhead tips the scales at 215.

The Hawks will go into the opener in good physical condition. Don Karr was the only player to suffer an injury in pre-season workouts. He broke his arm and is lost for the season.

Several positions have been up for grabs and the final scrimmage has resulted in some last minute switches in the starting line-up Friday.

Barring injury, Pakonen reports that on offense he will go with Kevin Coryell and Scott Hartel at ends. Capt. Chester Sieradzki and Dave Brooks are fixtures at tackle. Steve Izydorek and Dale Laming will man the guards and Charles Tuckey is at center.

In the backfield Mike Frederick is at quarter. The halfbacks will be Dan Mellendorf and Ed Stoutenburg. Wayne Brooks, a sophomore, has fought his way into the starting line-up.

Besides these boys, Scott Guinther, who can play either halfback or fullback, is sure to see plenty of action. Another Hawk slated for duty is Greg Decker.

On defense Hartel will be a two-way man at end. The other end will be manned by Gary Eisinger. Charles Tuckey will be at the other guard. Paul Becker is the middle guard. Linebackers are Coryell, Sieradzki and Mellendorf.

Laming moves into the backfield from the line on defense and will be flanked by Stoutenburg and Jerry Toner.

Eight of the 13 players slated for heavy duty on offense are letterwinners, but just four were starters. On defense the turnover is greater. Five players won letters and four were starters in 1972.

As it does most years, Cass City will live or die on quickness and desire. There are a couple of 200-pounders on the team but the squad is thick in players in the 155 to 160-pound class.

However, the Friday scrimmage showed that the Hawks have players who can throw and catch the ball. Frederick and Jerry Toner, his back-up man, both threw often and well against North Branch and Mayville.

But the green Hawks are yet to play a game that counts. . . the coaches, the fans and the league will know more about the 1973 edition of the Cass City Red Hawks sometime Friday night.

Judging by the pre-season it is likely that they will be pleased with what they learn.

The schedule:

Sept. 14 USA, home
21 Lakers, home
28 Caro, away

Oct. 5 Bad Axe, home
12 Frankenmuth, home
19 Sandusky, away
26 Marlette, home

Nov. 2 Vassar, away

A GOOD DEFENSE is a major factor in a championship team and the Cass City Red Hawks' chances of retaining a title may depend on how well this defensive unit performs.

Front row, from left: Scott Hartel, Charles Tuckey, Paul Becker, Dave Brooks and Gary Eisinger.

Hole-in-one pays off for local golfer

If you are going to make a hole-in-one the best time to do it is when it means something.

Using this yardstick, Gordon Okerstrom, Cass City, couldn't have picked a better time to ace the short par three number five hole at Rolling Hills Golf Course.

Okerstrom waited for the play-offs of the Cass City Golf League last week for his once in a lifetime shot and when the tournament ended he had defeated Dick Wallace by (you guessed it) one stroke.

In the handicap league, Okerstrom had a net of 67 with an actual round of 85 while Wallace netted 68 on an actual score of 78.

For his victory, the champ received a sparkling new golf bag and a pewter cup symbolic of the title.

In addition, it's the league custom for each of the 68 players to pay a dollar each for the feat.

Okerstrom's shot hit short of the green rolled on and across the green to the cup stuck near the back and gently rolled in.

Okerstrom was the flight four winner. Other flight champs in the tourney were Joe High, flight three, and Clark Erla, flight two.

The bag will be presented at the league open Sunday at Scenic Country Club, Pigeon.

Plane conks out; Tuckey lands safely in farm field

Charles Tuckey, 17, 4681 Schwegler Rd., escaped injury late Saturday afternoon when he was forced to make an emergency landing in a stubble field after the engine on his Piper Cub airplane quit three miles southeast of Port Austin.

Huron County Sheriff Deputies said Tuckey landed the plane on the John Baranski farm. Tuckey was unhurt and the aircraft was not damaged in the landing which took place around 6:30 p.m.

According to his mother, Mrs. Charles Tuckey, her son had rented the plane at Bad Axe as part of his instruction in flying and was to fly solo to Port Austin and back. He had flown solo three hours prior to the flight.

No one else was in the plane at the time of the incident.

He had been in the air approximately 20 minutes when the engine conked out.

An aircraft mechanic from Bad Axe went to the scene to repair the plane so it could be flown or otherwise transported out of the field.
