Thieves hit Cass City Gun Club, take 18 guns

Thieves broke into the Cass City Gun Club sometime between Thursday afternoon and Friday afternoon and stole money, food and 18 guns valued at $1,125.00.

The club, located on Englehardt Road a quarter mile north of Severance Road, was found burglarized by a cleaning woman who discovered the theft.

Tuscola county Sheriff's deputies who investigated the break-in said the subjects opened a screen door on the southeast corner of the building and pushed out a small piece of plastic covering a small window. They then reached in and unlocked the door.

No pry marks were found. The screen door was not locked.

After entering the building, according to deputies, the thieves pried a lock from a refrigerator and took two small jars containing $20 in change and bills.

From there, the culprits pried a door on a vault and entered a room containing the guns. They removed five M-1 rifles, eight .22 caliber rifles and five .22 caliber single shot bolt action rifles plus ammunition. The culprits then opened a freezer and removed 15 pounds of sausage, five pounds of bacon and 14 chickens before fleeing.

Officers found no fingerprints at the scene and could locate no visible tire marks except for a portion of road where it was suspected the thieves made a power turn before leaving the scene.

No suspects have been apprehended and the investigation continues.

GASOLINE STOLEN

Cass City police reported a theft of gasoline Friday.

Friday, 22 gallons of gasoline were stolen from a truck parked in front of L&S Standard on Main Street. According to Floyd Luetke, owner of the station and the truck, his son had filled the truck the afternoon before and parked it in front of the station.

When he returned to use the truck the following day, a special tank holding the fuel was empty.

Police have no suspects in the theft.

Saturday, police reported thieves broke into the pump house at a fuel bulk station on Pine Street owned by Ed Bergman. Officers said the culprits pried the door to the pump house open with a wrecking bar which was found at the scene.

Bergman reported to officers that nothing had been disturbed inside the building.

The incident occurred sometime between 7:30 and 8:45 p.m. No suspects were apprehended.

SHOOTING INCIDENT

Tuscola deputies were called to a field in rural Kingston early Saturday morning after receiving a report of gun fire in the area.

They traced the disturbance to a camp where eight youths were staying. An inspection of the tent they were using revealed eight long guns and one handgun. A check on the weapons revealed nothing out of order.

Officers advised the youths to do no further shooting. The incident occurred on Collins. Concluded on page 16.

Council votes to implement state highway plan for village traffic flow

The Cass City Village Council voted Tuesday night to begin implementation of a major street signing and parking system based on recommendations submitted by a traffic engineer from the State Highway Department.

The resolution, as passed by council, states that a letter of intent will be sent to the department, notifying them that institution of the program will begin, subject to certain modifications that may come about through negotiation with the state.

The reason for the program stems from a request made by council last year to make Hill Street a major rather than a local street. The difference in designation amounts to approximately $3,500 per mile in state aid for maintaining a street as opposed to about $700 per mile in aid for maintenance of a local street.

At that time, the request was tabled by the state, pending a complete survey of the village by highway engineers. That survey was completed recently and noted several changes the department would like to see the village make before approving the change in designation on Hill.

Among the changes recommended by Don McCarty, assistant district traffic engineer for the Saginaw district, were the following:

On Rose Street, removal of the 15 mph sign was recommended. This is illegal, according to McCarty. On such a street, 25 mph is minimum. Council discussed removing speed limit signs altogether on Rose and replace them with diamond-shaped warning signs.

Another change on Rose involved the removal of the stop sign on the north side of the street going west.

Trustee William Bliss took issue with this recommendation, saying the sign served an important purpose, similar to the sign at Church and Oak Streets. Village President Lambert Althaver said this point was probably negotiable and would be dealt with further.

A suggestion for fencing to be placed along Rose to divide it from the secondary school parking lot was also made at the meeting with no policy established regarding it.

On Leach Street, the highway department recommends changing yield signs to stop signs at the intersection of Leach and Church. Council raised no objections to this suggestion. It was also suggested by Althaver that one block of Sherman Street north of Main and one block of Oak north of Main be made major streets and have these come to a full stop at Church.

On Maple Street, McCarty's report recommends the placement of stop signs on Maple at the intersection of Church Street. It was mentioned that normally, such signs are in place, but were removed due to new road construction.

On Ale Street, the report recommends changing yield signs to stop signs at the intersection of Ale and Church. No objections were raised on this point.

GARFIELD STREET

Garfield Street proved most nettlesome. The department's report recommends essentially four changes in traffic patterns here.

One change would remove the yield signs on Garfield and place stop signs on West Street at that intersection. Currently, traffic on Garfield must yield to West Street traffic. This point is apparently non-negotiable, according to Althaver.

The current pattern was established before West was paved and at the time of the change, it was determined that the intersection would be re-examined when the work was completed.

Althaver said he would go along with the change if West were made a major street.

Another recommendation advises removal of the yield sign and placing a stop sign at Garfield and Oak. The yield sign was originally placed to slow traffic. Recent studies show this does not really slow traffic—it actually increases speeds.

Another recommendation calls for the removal of the stop sign from Garfield and placing a stop sign on Maple at Garfield at that intersection.

A fourth would place railroad advance warning signs, 36 inches in diameter from 250 to 350 feet in advance of the railroad crossing.

Trustee Dr. D. E. Rawson suggested that an answer to the Garfield traffic flow might be a stop light at the intersection of Garfield and South Seeger Street. He said this was the only way to interrupt the flow of traffic.

Police Chief Gene Wilson said a light might be well thought of at the intersection. He suggested that, as an alternative to a light, right and left turn only lanes could be established.

Other suggestions on the department's list include no parking within 30 feet of a crosswalk and removal of the first parking stall on all streets with angle parking. Exceptions to this would be removing the first two stalls on West Street in the vicinity of the Ford garage.

Rawson said this list was not necessarily an ultimatum from the state but it would be wise to approve the recommendations.

"If we don't, they can bring this skeleton out of the closet in the future and dangle it in front of us," he said. "It is usually best to keep these things straight as we go along."

Althaver added that while the department does not really say that the village must go along with the standards, chances of having Hill Street reclassified are nil.

Trustee James Ware suggested that the village comply with the standards and evaluate traffic flow afterward, with an eye toward possibly installing a light at Garfield and Seeger.

Althaver additionally suggested that signs also be placed at the intersections of Third and West and Houghton and West, probably in the form of yield signs on Houghton and Third.

Wilson also suggested the corner of Pine and Woodland be considered for possible signing due to a fence which blocks vision at that corner.

Council approved the resolution of intent unanimously, with trustees Gary Jones and Nat Tuttle absent.

Althaver emphasized that compliance with these recommendations does not mean that Hill Street will automatically be reclassified a major street. All it means is that the request will be re-examined sometime in the future.

Council approves SDM license for Guinther

Cass City Village Council Tuesday night approved a resolution raising no objections to the issuance of an SDM license to Charles and Linda Guinther which would allow them to sell beer and wine at the Quaker Dairy Store at 6614 E. Main St.

Council approved the motion after hearing comments from Police Chief Gene Wilson regarding the problems of enforcement if such a license were to be granted to Guinther.

Wilson said the store fits all state requirements for SDM holders. All eating and soda bar facilities have been removed and an adult is on duty in the store at all times.

Wilson said it would be the only beer and wine establishment in the east end of town and said he has had no enforcement problems with other SDM merchants in the village. Any problems tend to come from bars, he added.

Trustee Dr. D. E. Rawson had requested Wilson's comments before taking up the resolution.

Trustee James Ware asked what effect the pool tables would have in the establishment. These are in a separate room in the store and state regulations do not prohibit such a place.

Trustee William Bliss moved that the resolution finding no fault with the application be made. Council passed the resolution on a three-to-one vote, with Ware casting the lone dissenting vote. He did not elaborate on his reasons for the no vote.

SEVENTH STREETERS SPEAK

A group of residents living on Seventh Street came before council to request that something be done about the dust conditions prevalent on the unpaved street, especially during summer months.

The group asked council if something could be done, either by paving the street or brining it more regularly.

Village President Lambert Althaver told the group that seal-coat would probably be the best the village could do and this could not be done before spring. He told them cost for seal-coating Seventh Street would be about $1,100, and would not act as a final solution to the problem.

He explained that the village is in a budget squeeze currently and could not act on the request before spring of 1974.

Wayne Parker, 6445 Seventh, told council traffic has increased markedly since the opening of Klein's Fertilizer plant at the end of the street. He said most of the increase comes in heavy trucks and wondered if seal-coat would hold up under the stress.

Althaver agreed that seal-coat would not be a final solution but said it would help, depending on the base of the street.

The street lies divided, in essence, with the north half in the village and the south half outside the corporate limits. The village does realize full state aid revenue from the street and has been maintaining it as a matter of course over the years.

Althaver told the group council would investigate the problem and responsibilities of the village before determining what action to take. Cost of such work would also have to be

OTHER BUSINESS

In other business, Dr. Rawson informed council that cost updates on the pool have not as yet been completed by the architects. Also, no action has been taken regarding procurement bids for water and sewer into the Orr east park addition.

He recommended action to get both projects moving as soon as possible.

Council also approved a resolution transferring 1,320 feet of N. Seeger Street from the county to the village. This essentially completes the annexation of properties along that part of the street initiated last spring.

Trustee Ware will look into the possibility of procuring a vacant lot at the corner of West and Pine Streets as a possible site for removal of a house owned by Keith Pobanz so that the lot on which the house now sits may be paved for additional downtown parking.

Trustee Richard Hampshire also announced that construction should begin soon on the traffic light at the corner of Rose and Seeger. He also said a letter has been sent to the school board advising them that the village's request for flashing yellow signals at the intersection of Ale and Main has been turned down by the state.

Council also noted that General Telephone has donated $25 for maintenance of the Cultural Center.

Althaver also announced that tax collections to date total $117,000 or about 96 per cent of total outstanding village taxes.

Evans' open house to feature works of welder-artist

By Jim Ketchum

Most aspiring artists dream of having their works exhibited in such prestigious locations as the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York or some similar institution, hoping to make a significant contribution in the field of painting.

Scott Schafer's exposition will be just a little different. His works will be on display Saturday at Evans Products Co., Gagetown, because they are part of Evans Products.

Schafer's creations, executed on presses, hammer mills, cutters and welding machines instead of canvas, will go on display from 10:00 to 4:00 p.m., open to the public. Scenes ranging from the commonplace in life to the wildly abstract decorate most of the machines in the factory's press room.

According to United Steel Workers Local 6388 President Gary May, the idea has aided employees in a new sense of pride in where they work and in what they do.

"It was done primarily to cut down on monotony and to make the press room a better, more interesting place to work," May explained. "We've had real good cooperation from the company on this and real good reaction from the employees as well."

The idea began when Carl Van Diver of Evans management staff read an article in a trade publication describing it. It grew from the planning stages rapidly after Schafer agreed to do the work. Fred Sullivan, also of Evans' management, bought the budding artist six different colors of paint and let him go.

The result of Schafer's efforts can be seen on nearly every machine in the building. The artist's talents as displayed on the equipment seem to have no limitations.

On a giant metal cutter, a scene depicts a mountain lake with an airplane flying low overhead. An automobile travels a winding road in the same scene.

Other presses tower over workers bearing abstract creations of portraits or psychedelic designs. One machine featuring a multi-sided, turning drum features the legend of Superman in pictures, along with a portrait of his friend, Batman and the Batmobile.

The Bay Port native worked an equivalent of about a month and a half on the creations, which were not done in one continuous operation. Painting could only be done when each machine was either not in use or down for repairs. Company officials say it cost the firm no extra work time on Schafer's part to create the multi-colored spectrum of design.

Total costs for paint and brushes totaled just slightly over $100.

The artistic creations are done with the style and finesse of an accomplished master, even though Schafer has had no formal artistic training other than high school art courses. His natural talent and wide-ranging imagination take over from there.

Schafer has worked at Evans the past year and hopes eventually to go on to art school.

Some other interesting side effects have come about as the result of the young artist's work. "There's more of an incentive to be careful in the pressroom," May said. "They tend to take better care of the area and there seems to be a better attitude all around. It's even helped make a better working relationship between the union and management."

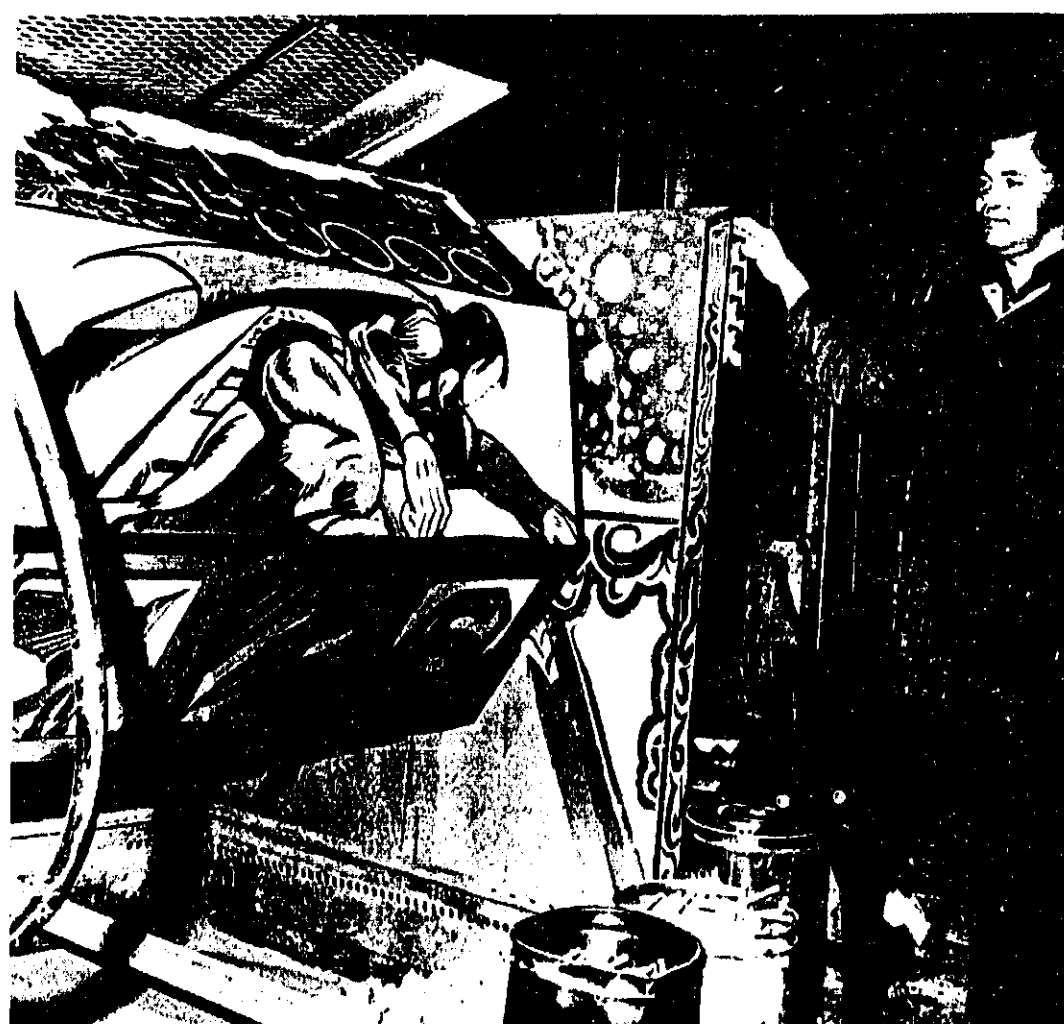

May added that the firm has been willing to go out of its way to do things for employees. For example, a new lunch room, brightly lighted and featuring picnic-type benches, vending machines, a pay telephone and modern decor, was recently constructed.

This, along with the art work, has created a new surge of good feeling between employees and management.

"If It Fitz . . ."A target for anger

BY JIM FITZGERALD

Let's see. I think Le Thai Khuong has got to be it for today. He sounds like the kind of a jerk who would sell tickets to a massacre.

Some days it's not easy being an angry young man. For 1 thing, there's my age. For another thing, there's the matter of priorities. What should I be angry about today? How angry?

I want my wrath to be worthy of its target, but I must beware of over-mad. I don't want to waste any giant snarls and sarcasms on tiny villains, and then come up empty, practically sweet, when suddenly faced with a reborn Adolph Hitler.

There is a limit to how much anger 1 man can spew in 1 day. And, once his mad is gone, he is liable to start smiling and smelling the flowers again.

Fortunately, I was not grinning into a petunia when I read about Le Thai Khuong. Up until then, it had been a mild sort of a day and my anger had been used sparingly on such semi-disastrous things as the stupidity of the British people for providing free feed for Princess Anne and her horses. There was plenty of really nasty mad left for Khuong.

Le Thai Khuong is chief of tourism for South Vietnam. He is promoting his nation as a resort area and envisions the day when tourists will bring in an annual income of $100 million. He is advertising his country with posters featuring a sexy Vietnamese girl under the sign: VIETNAM YOU HEARD ABOUT IT; NOW SEE IT

How about that? C'mon over and see where all your bombs dropped. See the rubble and shell holes where the peasants died. Watch the orphans scrounge in the garbage cans. Stand on the spot where the boy next door was killed.

I know a young man who certainly has the time to respond to the siren call for the Vietnam tourist bureau. Except it is difficult for him to travel. He can't walk. He can't talk, either, and he can't see very well. He can't feed himself. As a tourist, he'd be a real drag. But he's already been to Vietnam anyway. That's how he got that way.

Ah, yes. We've all heard about Vietnam. It received free advertising on all the front pages - and obituary pages. Now some huckster named Khuong wants to make a buck out of that bloody notoriety. So I say I am angry with him.

But the tourists throng to Pearl Harbor and other Pacific bloodmarks. They have picnics on Civil War battlefields, in the shade of the monuments, and they stroll along the shores of Normandy, eagerly eying the debris of D-Day.

If some guy were selling tickets to a massacre, he'd probably fill every seat and jam the aisles. It is a sick world wherein there is glory in people killing each other proving who is king of the mountain.

My most terrible anger should be aimed at you and me.

SIMPLE ARITHMETIC

In trying to balance the books of life a man merely subtracts what he owes from what he owes.

Steve Bergman on mend after near-fatal crash

July 31, 1973, will always stand out as an important day in the life of Steve Bergman, 11, of 6371 Fourth St. That's the day he nearly died after being struck by a car while riding his bicycle across West Street in the service alley.

"He's very lucky to be alive," is how his mother, Mrs. Richard Bergman, sums it up. She remains thankful to the doctors, the hospital and the volunteers who helped save her son's life.

Steve does not remember the accident itself which almost snuffed out his young life that afternoon. But his mother will never forget it.

"It had been raining all that day, which I believe contributed to it," Mrs. Bergman said last week, as she and Steve continued the long process of recovery. The youngster sustained a fractured skull in the accident which occurred around 4:00 p.m.

"He was over at his friend's house across the street," she continued, "and they decided to go downtown to get his mother a loaf of bread because she was due home in about 10 minutes. So they jumped on their bikes and took off."

The boys rode down West Street and went up on the sidewalk which took them to the alley. It was at that point that Steve turned quickly and rode out into the street.

At that moment, he was struck by a car driven by Shirley Beddow, 37, of Deford. She was fully exonerated in the accident and later contacted Steve's parents, asking to see him.

Mrs. Bergman explained that a relative who lives close to the accident scene called the house, telling her that her son had just been struck by a car.

"I got real shook up," she said, "and told my husband to go down and see what had happened. He did and called back and told me I'd better meet them at the hospital."

From there the long road of recovery began. Rushed to Hills and Dales General Hospital, he spent the next four weeks in almost total immobility. Mrs. Bergman explained that the first week was the worst.

"He was admitted Tuesday around four o'clock," she said. "He seemed to be doing OK Wednesday and Thursday they told us he was still OK and that he could start having visitors."

Then trouble began. She noticed his left eye appeared swollen late Thursday afternoon and asked the nurse attending Steve about it. She left the room and called two other doctors who came and examined the boy.

They determined that blood from the fracture had drained down into his eyelid, causing it to swell.

"I was really worried when I heard that," Mrs. Bergman said.

After consultation, the doctors determined that the boy's head should be immobilized, so sandbags were placed on either side of his head, preventing movement.

"Of course those first few days he didn't care about moving it at all," she said. "But after that, it was a job keeping him quiet."

Mrs. Bergman explained that she spent every night with her son during this difficult period, trying to make sure he did not move his head. He remained immobile three weeks before finally being allowed to sit up for ten minutes at a time twice a day.

His fourth and last week in the hospital finally brought those visitors promised around the fourth day.

The hairline fracture left Steve with one side-effect. He still has double vision which he is told, should eventually clear up by itself if all goes well. He is scheduled to be examined by another physician shortly to determine if this will actually happen.

Now that he is home, Steve must still lead a restricted life. He cannot go outdoors and cannot exert himself to any great extent. Daytime activities involve assembling model cars, playing with his dog, Cricket, and doing some school work which has been sent home.

His mother has assembled a day bed in the living room which the youth must spend a good deal of time using.

"Above all," she added, "I want to make sure he does not bump his head in any way at all."

What Steve misses most is being able to romp outside and play football with classmates. This year, he must be only a spectator.

Mrs. Bergman said she holds no bitterness about the accident and cannot blame the driver for the mishap.

"It was wet, the road was slick and Steve should not have darted out in the road like that," she said. "It was just a number of things that contributed to it. I'm just thankful he came out of it alive."

Mrs. Bergman stressed repeatedly the need for young bicycle riders like her son to take care when they travel in the streets.

"Steve still wants a bike," she said, "but if he gets one, it's going to have one of those flags on it and big reflectors. I want it to be as safe as it can."

She said the area near the alley on West is especially dangerous and she has had near-collisions with children on bicycles herself in the past. She said she always travels cautiously in the area and at times, has had to stop to let traffic pass.

"But I don't know what anyone could do about it," she added. "Other than eliminate the alley, what can you do? You really can't do that, either."

Steve's friends stop by and play games such as monopoly with him or help him assemble model cars. But it isn't a good substitute for playing football or riding bikes.

Hopefully, in a few weeks Steve's vision will clear and he can resume a few of the activities any 11-year-old boy loves. For now, at least, he is lucky, as his mother said, to be alive.

STEVE BERGMAN, 11, plays with the family dog while recovering from a skull fracture sustained when he was struck by a car while riding his bicycle July 31. Steve spent four weeks in Hills and Dales General Hospital and cannot yet return to school.

FROM THE Editor's Corner

Hey, Ms., I'll bet you thought that Billie Jean was the big winner in that tennis match Thursday.

You're wrong, wrong, wrong. Billie Jean was a winner. Bobby was a winner in defeat. But the big winner was Jerry Perenchio. That's right, Jerry Perenchio.

He may not even own a tennis racket. He doesn't need one. He's got a little racket all his own.

It's called Promotion with a capital P. Perenchio is the guy that handled the details that turned an ordinary tennis match into the battle of the sexes. He's the man that speaks the language of the networks... speaking of a three-quarter of a million dollar fee... like it was nothing at all.

All you have to do, Perenchio says, is set these fees without gulping when you do it.

Perenchio should know. Before Billie-Bobby he arranged the Ali-Frazier fight.

You've got to call Perenchio a champion in his own right. The Bobbys, Billies, Alis come and go, but his penchant for promotion will probably always be with him.

It's a victory for male chauvinism.

A woman could do it, you say? I doubt it. There's plenty of prejudice against women in business. Ms., you are right about that.

I can't prove it, but I'm convinced that the guy who supports the liberation in his private life, isn't that broad minded if he's in a decision making role in industry.

That's because he knows that a certain percentage of persons just don't want to take orders from a gal.

Notice, I didn't say men. That's because in many cases women resent women bosses more than they do men. That's unfortunate. Women work harder than men. Women are more thorough than men. More dedicated.

Sure, Bobby exaggerates when he says that the women's place is in the bedroom and the kitchen in that order.

Today's modern gal's place is no longer exclusively in the home.

But I submit that it's still a long, long ways from the board room.

And if that's male chauvinism make the most of it.

The Rev. Melvin Vender reports that comments about the visit of Blacks to Cass City invoked memories.

It was a couple of years before you came here, he says. That makes it about 23 years ago. We wanted to entertain a racial mixed group at the (Presbyterian) Church. We took them to both restaurants in town and they refused to serve them.

They did until a group of our young people said that if the visitors weren't served they wouldn't be ever served again either. One owner quizzed the customers and agreed only after finding out that they didn't care.

Things haven't really changed all that much, have they?

When you get down to it the biggest compliment a reader can pay a writer is to say they are missed when they are gone. That's why Mrs. Gladys Little should feel good when she reads here that Clare Root penned a note with a subscription renewal telling how he missed her writing of the Deford news.

Personally, I'm afraid to miss a single issue with my stuff. I'm not about to give anyone a chance of saying that they never missed it when it was gone.

I played 18 holes of golf last Thursday. Five of us: Dr. Ed Fritz, Gary Cummings, Bill Kritzman, Ken Eisinger, myself and Lou Bishop.

So what's the big deal? Well, we walked all the way. You wouldn't know it by looking but Bishop is 73 years old and I swear he was fresher than any of us after the match.

The Chronicle, and other Thumb newspapers, are feeling the paper shortage pinch these days. The paper has been requested to aim for a 10 per cent cut back in paper used to conserve supplies. That's 10 per cent less than was used last year.

Increases in circulation and in the average number of pages in each issue makes the situation more critical here. It could be, I'm informed, that a rigid quota system is in the offing if the situation gets worse.

I missed the boat Saturday. I took a picture of B. A. "Curly" Calka as he left on his 10-mile jaunt for Big Brothers.

I failed to snap a shot of him returning. I saw him, too. That big smile and bigger cigar he puffed as he rolled (waddled?) into town could have been a classic.

Truthfully, he looked a lot fresher than I expected him to look. If that hike went 10 miles, then Curly figures to be a 20-mile hiker without any trouble at all.

How much money could he raise for that?

Area swine producers will be able to see any one or all of four swine production facilities Thursday, Oct. 4.

Not only will the facilities be explained, but the management of the systems and swine management will be discussed. Dr. Ed Miller, MSU Extension Swine Specialist, and Lee Warchelsky, Tri-county Livestock Agent, will present the program information.

Here is the day's tour program for all interested persons to attend.

10 a.m. - Little Brothers, located two miles south and 2 1/2 miles west of Cass City on Kelly Road. With their new finishing house, ear and high moisture corn storage, the Littles can farrow to finish 1200 cross bred market hogs annually.

11 a.m. - Smith Farms, located three miles south and 6 1/2 miles east of Unionville on Dickerson Road. This entirely new total farrow to finish operation is in its third year of operation. They can finish 1200 market hogs per year in the cross breeding program. High moisture corn is their principal source of feed.

12 Noon to 1:30 - Lunch on your own.

1:30 p.m. - Glen Maust, six miles NE of Sebawa on M-25, one mile east on Geiger Road and 1/4 mile north on Bayport Road. This minimum facility markets 1000 fat hogs annually in its cross breeding farrow to finish program. The feeding program consists of home stored ear corn as the principal feed.

2:30 p.m. - George Swartzendruber, located one-fourth mile south and three-fourth mile west of Glen Maust. This operation features farrow to finish 1000 cross bred market hogs and a few breeding animals annually. Swartzendruber's major feeding program is centered around his steel bin stored dry shelled corn.

We are expecting some vocational agricultural students to be visiting some of the stops.

Neglected child a fact of Cass City life

By Jim Ketchum

A Cass City child awakens to another day of seeming hopelessness. He opens his eyes in a house laden with dirt, sees the tattered clothing he must wear and climbs out of a bed unchanged for months.

Worse yet, he faces another day lacking the basic necessities of life—good food, warm clothing and, equally important, love.

He is one of some 21 renorred cases of child neglect in the Cass City area. He has become one of a total of 85 such cases on file with the Caro office of the Michigan Department of Social Services.

That's how many cases 1972 brought to the department and administrators for the department predict that number will be equalled again in 1973.

The neglected child has no voice. His life is often more wretched and helpless than the abused child, who at least has statutes to protect him, limited though they may be. The neglected child has no legal protection until someone starts caring.

Jim Turner, a Cass Cityan, services supervisor for the department, explained recently that child neglect is probably one of the most difficult areas in which his department must work because it gets involved in the private lives of persons and, moreover, with how they raise their children.

Turner offered a profile of the neglectful parent who, too often, turns into the child abuser.

According to Turner, the neglectful or abusive parent maintains a low level of self-respect. More often, it is not the single parent who abuses a child, according to studies of past cases. Both parents are usually at odds with each other and carry unusually high expectations for their children.

"Basically, they won't let their kids be kids," Turner said.

Often, the abusive parent will single out one child in a group and mistreat or ignore him. This may be due to the fact that the child was unwanted or possesses a physical or emotional handicap with which the parents cannot cope.

Occasionally, alcohol is in-involved, but is not always a major contributor to the problems of abuse and neglect.

Too often, a child abuser was an abused child, Turner said, and usually, an abused child will become an abusive parent. It becomes a never-ending cycle.

Recently, probate courts have been criticized for not removing children who are victims of abuse and neglect from their homes. It is charged that such lack of action on the part of these courts and social service agencies only sets the stage for more abuse of the child.

Turner disputed this claim, saying that more harm can result if the child is removed.

"A recent Canadian research study found that the child suffers more psychological harm if he is taken from the home," Turner said. "The researchers found that conditions have a better chance of improving if the family group can be maintained and allowed to function on its own."

ABUSE

While no actual cases of physical abuse were documented in Cass City last year and none so far in 1973, three were reported to the department in Tuscola county in 1972, with as many documented to date this year.

This compares with 896 reports of actual or suspected child abuse in Wayne county, two in Huron and two in Sanilac county.

Turner emphasized that child-neglecting parents too often turn into child abusers. That is what frightens him about 21 cases of child neglect in Cass City.

"We have three reported cases of abuse and a number of neglect reports," he said, "but we don't know how many more are going unreported. You really can't measure how parents are treating their kids. Neglect and abuse occur at all economic levels and in every social and ethnic group you can name."

Two protective services case-workers for the department assist Turner in the battle to help the mistreated child. John Hagstrom and Gary Stauffer, both of Caro, have had experience in the field and understand the complexities of their jobs. Each spends half his work time on child abuse cases.

Hagstrom has worked three years in Tuscola county and holds a B.S. degree from Wisconsin State University. Stauffer has worked with the department a year and a half and holds a B.S. degree from Central Michigan University.

HOSTILITY

Both Hagstrom and Stauffer agree that hostility toward what they are doing comes not only from parents involved in child abuse and neglect cases, but also from county citizens as a whole. They agree that the basically conservative nature of the area works against mounting an all-out campaign in other areas of social work besides child abuse.

Hagstrom recalled that in his three years, he has been threatened, assaulted, attacked by dogs and looked down the barrel of a gun. This has happened, he says, about half a dozen times in his three years with the department in Tuscola county.

"A threat to me is a part of life in this job," Hagstrom says. "I'm used to not being welcomed at the door."

Hagstrom maintains that keeping the child in the home and reforming the home atmosphere is of major importance, and tends to agree that taking the child out of the home only creates more problems.

"Most outsiders are vindictive toward child abusers," he said. "If you take a child out of the home and word gets around a small town like Cass City, the family might as well leave. They're marked for life."

He said this vindictiveness is part of the current move toward tightening up procedures that would remove a child who is being abused from the home.

CHILD ABUSE STATUTES

While Michigan has a child abuse law, as written in 1948 and amended, the neglected child has no real legal status. There is no law against sending a child to school in dirty, torn clothing or against not feeding him properly or making sure he does not live in filth.

When dealing in neglect cases, Hagstrom and Stauffer find their roles must be more of advisors and educators rather than threats from the state toward parents who believe they have the right to raise their children any way they please.

Legally, they are right. It tends, according to the department, to become a moral question.

"Who is to say that a child has to be raised in a perfectly clean home without a speck of dirt on the floor," Stauffer said. "We find often that we tend to judge the way others raise their children by our own yardstick. Often it isn't the case. Sometimes we find children thrive in a dirty house. So when we deal with neglect cases, we have to be especially careful."

PROCEDURES

Normally when the department receives a report of a neglect or abuse case, an investigation begins within 24 hours. Neglect cases are more limited in investigation than abuse.

Either Stauffer or Hagstrom make the initial contact with the family involved, usually dropping in unannounced. From this visit, they determine if any other agencies should be brought into the picture.

Initially, a six-month program is outlined in which the department works with the family to solve the neglect or abuse problem without resorting to the courts necessarily. If probate court is involved, it is used "therapeutically" to drive home the point that the agency means business.

Sometimes, change for the better does occur. Too many times, parents "play the game," according to Hagstrom, for six months and then resume their old ways afterward.

If a child is taken from a home, the goal of the department is to work for his return. About 15-25 per cent of all children placed in foster homes never go back home. The agency works for a goal of 75-85 per cent return.

MEASURE OF SUCCESS

Turner and his staff agree there is no way to adequately judge, especially in monetary terms, just how successful their work in the field of child abuse is. It costs the department about $12,000 a year in salaries to investigate child abuse and neglect cases, along with about $1,500 per child per year for those children placed in foster homes.

Turner said there are two ways to evaluate the effectiveness of the department's work. "If the number of reported cases goes up, it might mean we're making progress on a public relations level," he explained. "It might also mean that there is still too much public disinterest in abused children. We really don't know yet."

He urged anyone knowing of a case of child abuse or child neglect to contact either the department during office hours (8:00 a.m.-5:00 p.m.) or after hours, contact the police or sheriff's office. All complainants may remain anonymous.

Turner also urged persons with such information to call him if they wish at his home, at 872-2474 or to contact either Hagstrom (673-6781) or Stauffer (673-4541).

Once contacted, the neglected child at least has a chance. Without it, he doesn't even have that.

Arraign Cass Cityan on 1969 charge

A Cass City man was arraigned in Tuscola County Circuit Court on a parole violation and bench warrant issued in 1969.

Randall Lee Aleksink was arraigned before Judge Norman Baguley Monday.

Aleksink was originally convicted of the March 23, 1969 breaking and entering of the Cass City Gun Club. He was sentenced to probation and failed to report for the next four years until he was recently apprehended.

Sentencing was set for Oct. 22, after he entered a plea of guilty to the charge of failing to report to his probation officer.

Two other arraignments and two sentences were also handed down Monday.

Clifford Bentley, Clio, was arraigned on a charge of breaking and entering. He stood mute and a plea of innocent was entered in his behalf. Pre-trial motions will be heard Oct. 22, with pre-trial examination the same day. Bond was set at $500.

He is charged with the breaking and entering of a home in Arbela township in May of 1972.

Lawrence Kenny, Millington, was arraigned on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon without a license. He stood mute and a plea of innocent was entered in his behalf. Pre-trial examination was set for Oct. 22. Bond was set at $500.

Specifically, he is charged with carrying a .32 calibre pistol on his person without proper licenses or permits. The incident occurred Aug. 18.

KETCHUM'S KNAPSACK

Here's to Phase 4

By Jim Ketchum

From the party that brought you the Great Depression now comes Phase Four—President Nixon's answer to all our economic woes. It's supposed to accomplish what Phases One, Two and Three failed to accomplish—bring us peace, bread, high wages, curb inflation and generally bring utopia to the masses by way of San Clemente and Key Biscayne.

I don't pretend to be an expert in economics. My checkbook all too readily testifies to my inability with numbers. The only reason I ever passed my economics class in college was because the rest of the class happened to be about as dumb as I was and the instructor graded on a curve.

Also, the instructor was a fat, jolly soul who seemed to sense the panic in my eyes each time I took my place in his classroom or turned in an assignment.

Anyway, back to economics. Although my knowledge of this never-never land is spotty at best, it does seem rather strange that today we have more money than ever before buying less than ever before. We have shortages of seemingly everything but money.

In the 1930's, the only shortage the nation had was in green stuff. We had more of everything than anyone knew what to do with. The only problem was that no one had any money to buy it.

Farmers were dumping milk in the roads and ditches. Hogs were being slaughtered faster than you could say Farmer Peet and crops rotted in full fields.

We very nearly didn't survive the experience. But there were no shortages, save one—funds.

Through it all, President Roosevelt and Will Rogers, two of the greatest humorists this nation has ever produced, kept telling us to keep cool heads while we tried a number of economic experiments to rid ourselves of the malady.

We'd been told not to rock the boat for years. These fellows told us to go ahead and sink it if we wanted to—it would be better to try something than to do nothing.

So, because of it or in spite of it, we did survive.

Today, once more, we have an administration which chooses not to rock the boat. A ripple or two for public relations is nice, but mostly don't rock the boat.

The first four phases of this economic disaster called Nixonomics has succeeded in drying up supplies of nearly everything we used to take for granted, even in the Depression.

This is progress? This is utopia? This is hell. Things might have been darker 40 years ago, but somehow, we didn't seem to mind as much because there was someone in leadership in which some confidence could be placed.

But now who? How can you have confidence in a leader when you aren't sure whether or not your living room is bugged or if you're on an Enemy's list? No one in leadership positions is pulling in the same direction.

Within the administration itself, advisors are at odds. A few more cotton pickin' statements similar to those last week will complete the job of making the administration a totally paralyzed laughing stock of the nation.

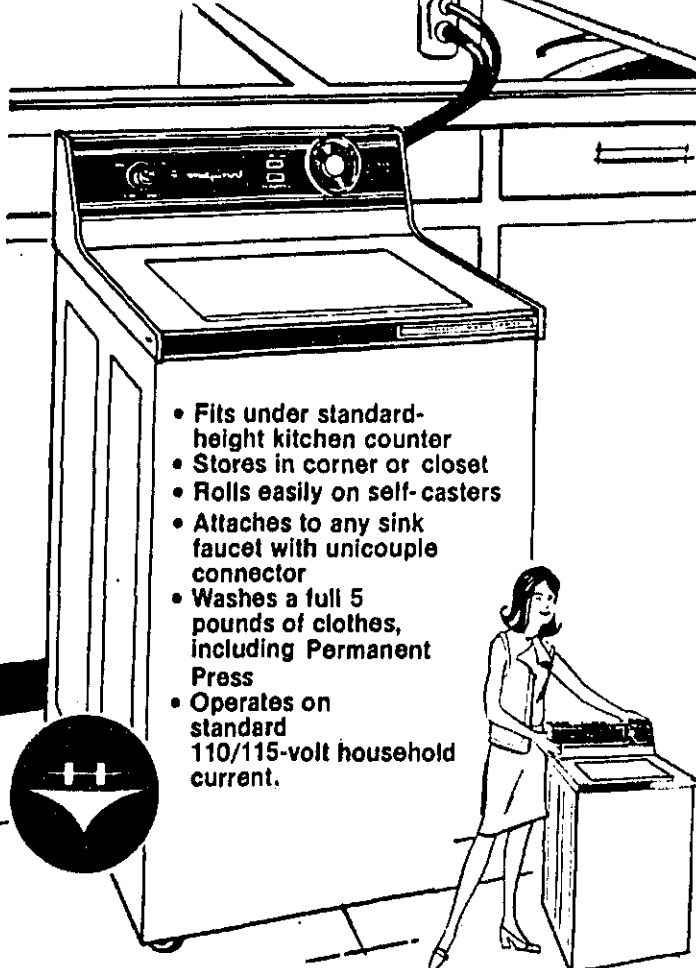

So we gird ourselves for Phase Four and enter a winter facing shortages of gasoline, fuel oil, newsprint, wheat, toilets and a host of other commodities seen last during World War II.

Here's hoping we survive. Till we arrive At Phase Five.

Lutheran women to hold meet

The Oct. 1 meeting of Good Shepherd Lutheran women will be the annual fall auction. In the Sept. 10 meeting of the group, Mrs. Shirley Buschlen of Cass City became a member. Visitors also included Mrs. Esther Payne, Mrs. Herman Umpfenbach and Mrs. Eugene Hofstedt. The father-son banquet will be held this fall. Mrs. Eleanor Miller and Mrs. Elaine Martin were co-hostesses at the dessert following the business meet.

Building with power

Technology is abroad in the land. Everywhere big yellow and green machines pound and churn the earth. Highways unroll, apartment complexes rise and amusement parks expand. Our children watch. They know power when they see it!

Some of our children, though, don't know about another power for building. They have not been taught to see it. It is the power of God and it also shakes and moves us. It is necessary for all men—a gigantic source of energy and strength.

Take your children to church on Sunday. They will be tomorrow's builders.

BETTER HEALTH

The tragedy of child abuse

BY DR. WALTER C. ALVAREZ and DR. WILLIAM J. WELCH

I just read a fascinating and very alarming book by Peter and Judith DeCourcy entitled "A Silent Tragedy, Child Abuse in the Community" (Alfred Publishing Co., Inc., 75 Channel Drive, Port Washington, N. Y. 10050). Peter is a clinical psychologist who for five years has worked with child abuse cases, talking with social workers, judges, policemen, parents, and the children. Judith has a masters degree in social work. Their book contains the details of a dozen cases in which one or more children in a family were badly beaten, sexually abused, badly cared for, horribly neglected, psychologically damaged or even killed by a parent or step-parent.

What is shocking is that in every case, after the instance of child abuse had come to the attention of the police and the juvenile authorities, at the court hearing, the child was returned by the judge to the home where he was almost certain to receive more abuse. Often there were several abused children in the family with scars of repeated injuries which had never been reported.

The events which the DeCourcys describe did not occur in impoverished ghetto homes; they occurred in two middle-class communities — one an affluent suburb of a large city, and the other a prosperous medium-sized city. The families described often lived in fine, large homes and were respected members of the community. Almost all of the parents or step-parents had at least 10 years of education, and several had completed college. They were white, and were Christians who attended church fairly regularly.

Their communities had better-than-average schools with strong PTAs and women's groups designed to help disadvantaged children. Yet within these families, shocking, terrible abuses of children were committed, and very little was done to protect the children from further danger.

For example, Martha, a young woman who was married to a successful businessman and had a lovely home and many friends, became obsessed with feelings of hatred for her 6-year-old daughter. Martha tried to talk about these feelings to her family doctor, who gave her a tranquilizer and tried to reassure her; but the hatred became so overwhelming that she feared she would harm the child, so she went to a psychiatrist. There she confessed that she had to drop out of college to get married because she had become pregnant, and now she felt trapped and blamed the child for her troubles.

Unfortunately, talking with the psychiatrist did not make her feel any less angry, and one day she lost her temper and beat the child so savagely that the doctor who saw the badly injured child reported the incident to the juvenile authorities. Although, Martha freely confessed to beating the child and told a social worker that she felt she could not be trusted to control her rage, in court she and her husband both denied any cruelty.

The psychiatrist testified that he considered Martha's tendency to violence a threat to the child's safety, but the judge discounted this report and returned the little girl to Martha and her husband, saying that he felt that "head shrinkers" fill people's heads with "all sorts of strange things, weird fears and ideas."

Soon Martha lost her temper again, and struck the child so hard with a heavy frying pan that she caused the child to have permanent brain damage; this time the judge warned Martha to "refrain from using physical punishment" on her child. With the brain damage, the child became difficult to control, restless, overly active, and frequently wet the bed, and Martha found the situation so intolerable that she tried unsuccessfully to commit suicide. At yet another hearing, the judge again returned the child to her parents, and as the DeCourcys say, there would almost certainly be more cruel punishment and injury to the child.

As the authors say, our inadequate child abuse laws now protect the parent, but give no rights or protection to the abused child.

One problem is that often juvenile court judges are not properly trained in psychology or sociology, and sometimes do not even have law degrees. In some states, the doctor who reports suspected child abuse can be sued for libel by the parents. The cases are heard without a jury, and decided by the judge alone. The child has no one to speak in his behalf, because he is "represented" by his parents' attorney.

Judges often discount psychiatrists' reports because they simply don't trust "head shrinkers," or because the psychiatric jargon is difficult to understand. Parents "sentenced" to consult a psychiatrist are not likely to benefit from therapy they do not desire or feel they need. Generally, abusive parents quickly return to their old ways.

The DeCourcys hope that people will no longer tolerate the inadequate child abuse laws, and will take action to protect abused children. Some people are trying to do something: there is a Parents Anonymous organization made up of abusive parents who try to help each other find ways to keep from harming their children.

In Santa Barbara an organization called CALM (Child Abuse Listening Mediation) was founded in 1970 by a registered nurse who will talk on the telephone to people who are afraid they will harm their children or who know of child abuse in their families or neighborhoods. Other such services are being established in other states.

At the end of the book is a list of organizations concerned with the problems of child abuse. One national organization is the American Humane Association, P.O. Box 1266, Denver, Colo. 80201.

4-H ACTIVITIES 4-H snowmobiles ready for winter

By Bernard Jardot

Coming off a rather disappointing year, snowmobilers may well be saying, "wait until next season." But young people, 4-H Snowmobile Club members in Tuscola county, won't be waiting until the first snow fall to get their snowmobiling programs underway.

These young people will be working on their new 4-H snowmobile safety program to get their machines and minds into a safe position. This program includes a new 32-page snowmobiling work-study manual developed for 4-H clubs by the Cooperative Extension Service, Ski Doo, and the Canadian Council on 4-H clubs.

This publication takes the young person through logical learn-by-doing exercises from getting to know the snowmobile to off-season storage. And in between, 4-H members learn about the snowmobile power system, how it works, how to maintain it, troubleshooting, riding, safety and appropriate clothing. The manual also suggests numerous fun activities and provides a code of ethics for the operator to learn and observe. The youth must belong to a 4-H Snowmobile Club to get these manuals.

Parents interested in having their young people certified in Michigan to operate a snowmobile off their property or to cross a road should contact a 4-H club offering 4-H snowmobile safety. These 4-H club leaders must be certified by State Department of Natural Resources.

Information on how to participate in the 4-H snowmobile program can be obtained by contacting the county 4-H office, Civil Defense Center, Caro.

Down Memory Lane

FROM THE FILES OF THE CHRONICLE

FIVE YEARS AGO

After 42 years of service in the community, the directors of Cass City Hospital, Inc., voted Tuesday night, Sept. 17, to discontinue operation.

A financial bombshell tossed in the laps of the village council Tuesday night wrecked plans for development of Cass City's park complex. Village Engineer William Schram revealed that the proposed construction of two Little League diamonds in the newly acquired land immediately adjacent to the old park site would cost some $15,000 to build.

Trustees approved an expenditure of $1,400 for hardtop cap on Kennebec Drive Tuesday night. Cost will amount to $9.60 per ton.

Two persons injured in an explosion that rocked southwest Cass City Jan. 14, 1964, filed damage cases against Southwestern Michigan Gas Co. Tuesday in Tuscola County Circuit Court.

TEN YEARS AGO

The problem of parking on Main Street that has brought sharp disagreement between the Cass City Village Council and Main Street merchants in past years is again plaguing the council. The problem involves the switch from angle to parallel parking.

The Village Council authorized a "golf ball" type water tower as part of its new water works program, paying some $3,300 more for the unit than one of a similar capacity with four legs would cost.

The board of directors of the Elkland-Novesta Townships Community Chest fired the opening salvo in their campaign to raise funds, Saturday in a meeting at the municipal building.

Grant Roy lost all four fingers of his right hand in an accident at Bassett Manufacturing Co. Dr. H. T. Donahue, who treated the victim, said that a press cut all four fingers below the knuckles and forced the amputation of the fingers at the knuckles.

The village is on the verge of buying a new grader to replace the 1937 model that has served the community for the last five years.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

The Cass City Red Hawks, playing their first game of the season were tied 6-6 by a surprising Marlette eleven.

Raymond Thompson, Grant township farmer, was killed Saturday about 8 p.m., when he fell from a haymow in his barn.

The purchase of a new pulpit, lectern, altar table and pulpit chairs, the installation of a Hammond electric organ and other improvements are being made in the sanctuary of the Methodist church.

Hazel Peckinpugh Dunlop, well-known lecturer and authority on gardens and flower arrangements, will address the Gagetown Woman's Study Club Monday.

THIRTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Cass City's tax load, based on the Michigan per capita load of $115.05, is $145,078.85, according to a survey made by the National Consumers' Tax Commission.

Four and one-half miles of Cass City's sewage system mains and lateral lines have been dug and cork laid by PWA labor and there remain about two and three quarter miles yet to be constructed. When completed, all businesses and residences with the exception of about ten in outlying districts are within immediate reach of the system.

Cass City's football season started out Friday with the locals taking a 7-0 decision from Pigeon.

Sunday duck hunting was banned in Huron and Sanilac counties this week. In Tuscola county, only a land owner will be permitted to hunt on Sunday.

Detroit Edison Co. has presented Cass City High School with two electric stoves for the home economics department.

AGENT'S CORNER

Breakfast eases 'slump'

Allene Mills - Extension Agent

If the "10 o'clock hungries" slow you down, it might be you're not eating enough breakfast.

A good sign of the mid-morning slump is the feeling that you'll fade away before lunch time.

Studies show that if you skip breakfast or don't eat enough, your performance at work will slow down.

In fact, this could be the reason why some people say they're "afternoon people" and morning gets them down.

When children don't eat breakfast, they tend to get restless and droopy in school and their attention span is shortened.

Teachers can pick out the children who have had an adequate breakfast, simply by observing their behavior.

To give more children the advantages of a good breakfast, many schools have started a school breakfast program in addition to the school lunch program.

Here are a few suggestions on how to beat the mid-morning hungries and avoid foods that add only calories to your diet. Instead of grabbing a sweet roll or doughnut during your coffee break, take a piece of fruit to work and substitute milk for coffee. This increases the nutritional quality of your breakfast considerably.

If you eat breakfast and still get the 10 o'clock hungries, try splitting your breakfast, eating half at home and the other half at work. But be careful the half at work doesn't consist of high-calorie low nutritional foods, such as soft drinks, sweet rolls, candy or potato chips.

For weight watchers, a fringe benefit of eating a good breakfast may be reduced food intake at lunch. A salad might do when once you ate breakfast.

Give breakfast a try, you'll feel better and work better and probably look better, too.

Uncle Tim From Tyre Says:

Dear Mister Editor:

Pa allus said that two lawyers could make a good living in a town where one would starve to death. All a feller has to do to come around to thinking that a heap of our confusion is caused by lawyers is to get called to jury duty. Three fourths of our congressmen and state legislators are lawyers, so they git to make the laws and then interpret em, and that leaves the average citizen scratching his head on both counts.

I was reading recent where a jury in Boston heard lawyers for both sides argue a case for four hours. After mulling over what they was told for six hours, the jury sent out to ask the judge who the defendant was in the case. I onet heard a feller say that law is the oldest profession, cause it says in the Bible that "in the beginning there was chaos."

Actual, Mister Editor, I reckon it's another case of the chicken or the egg. Folks git themselves into some strange fixes, and they depend on the lawyers to get em out. Fer instant, I saw by the papers where this movie actress couldn't git a divorce cause she couldn't prove she was married, and the same week a woman was suing a actor fer alimony, but she never was married to him. In most states it's agin the law for a feller to feed his own sloop to his own hogs, and I read where the Massachusetts Barber Licensing Board says it's $100 fine or 90 days in jail fer a feller to cut his own youngun's hair in his own home.

This matter come up at the country store Saturday night, and the fellers was general agreed that they ain't no way we can live these days without running afoul of rules we don't understand. Zeke Grubb said if a feller stayed in bed all day they probable would come out with a tax on all sleep over six hours a night.

Practical speaking, Mister Editor, lawyers is like they say about wimmen, we can't live with em and we can't live without em. Fer instant, I'd like to see a law that says all eating places has got to furnish a good supply of wood toothpicks, and I'd have to find me a real sharp lawyer to git the idee going. Another law I'd favor is one agin all neckties, or at least a amendment that would allow a feller to wear two ties in the winter and not have to wear one in hot weather.

Clem Webster come down strong on my side on both counts. And a law that Clem would add to the list is one that would make barbershops stock a few up to date magazines. He said he was waiting for a trim the other day and read this piece where drycleaners say 55 per cent of necktie stains is caused by gravy. Clem said they ain't that many folks that can afford cuff meat to make that much gravy these days.

Personal, Mister Editor, the only time I wear a necktie is to church, and I can't ever figger if it's cutting off my wind or the preacher is hitting to close fer comfort.

Yours truly,
Uncle Tim

WHAT'S THAT OLD man doing walking with all those kids? Making money for Big Brothers, Inc., that's what. The old man is B. A. "Curly" Calka and his sponsors helped swell the money raised total from the Cass City walk to about $400, Dave Parsch, director, says. Parsch says the total is one of the best raised in the entire county, but that the complete total will not be known until next week.

Gagetown farm draws sharp contrasts for Mexico City native

It's a long way from Mexico City to a farm two miles south and west of Gagetown, both in miles and in customs. For Luz Maria Vales, International Fellowship student, life has suddenly changed its style, from a fast-paced, upper-middle class existence to the world of the farm. And she loves it.

Luz is enrolled as a senior at Owendale-Gagetown High School and will remain in the United States for a total of 10 months. She is staying with the Richard Ziehm family, 6221 Green Rd., Gagetown, having arrived Sept. 1.

Luz comes from the heart of Mexico City. Her father is a doctor of medicine specializing in rehabilitation of the handicapped and her mother holds a teaching degree. She has two brothers and a sister.

One brother is also spending a year in the United States with a family in Oregon.

"My parents wanted us to be close together when we came," Luz smiles, "and you see what happens."

Luz explained that she wanted to come to the United States to learn English, to broaden her horizons and to take a first-hand look at the nation known as either the "Colossus of the North" or "Father United States" in some circles in Mexico.

Mrs. Ziehm explained that the family has been working on a list of attractions in Michigan for Luz to see during her stay. Among them are the Mackinac Bridge, the State Capitol in Lansing, Northern Michigan University and some general touring.

She also hopes to be able to go on the senior trip with the rest of her high school classmates. Luz is working with the rest of her fellow seniors to earn merit points which will entitle her to go. For example, she went to her first high school football game but did not really see it because she was working selling hot dogs and refreshments.

"I just hope I gave everyone the right change," she laughed. Luz has adjusted well to the cultural shock of leaving a large metropolitan area for the life of an American farm. She enjoys the country and marvels at much that area farmers take for granted.

"I saw a calf born here," she excitedly explained. "I never saw anything like it before. I have also gone on hayrides and have been to dances."

Luz discovered that life begins on a farm early in the morning—much earlier than the normal 7:00 a.m. time her day usually begins. She has fit in well to life at the farm, according to Mrs. Ziehm.

Luz said she is not certain of her plans after returning home, but she would like to spend some time in Europe. She enjoys travel and wants to see as much of the world as she can.

American food has agreed well with her, also. Mrs. Ziehm said Luz likes to cook and is anxious to learn new ways of preparing dishes. She especially likes spaghetti and hamburger—spiced with liberal doses of hot chili peppers.

"She puts them on anything she can," Mrs. Ziehm said.

Most of her days are filled with school for the time being, but as her proficiency with the language increases, her friendships continue to broaden. She is impressed with the number of persons who want to get to know her. This tends to fit in with the image of America she brought with her.

"I found Americans are not as cold as some persons in Mexico said they would be," she said. "They are much better than I imagined."

Luz said the United States still holds much popularity with many citizens of Mexico. Young people who have been here, she said, believe that anything coming from the United States is wonderful.

Others, some of whom hold power in the Mexican government, want to steer a more independent course for that nation. Luz said these persons feel that "Father United States" has told that nation what to do long enough.

Luz added that most Mexican citizens prefer to remain neutral in political matters and are looking for friendship with the U.S.

Knowledge of the two nations has been exchanged at a rapid-fire rate in the Ziehm home. Eldest daughter Sandy has studied Spanish for two years and is helping Luz with her English. Luz is aiding Sandy to improve her Spanish skills.

Through this exchange, new friendships grow and understanding takes another small positive step in a world torn by misunderstanding and hatred.

EXCHANGE STUDENT Luz Maria Vales brushes up on her English with the aid of Sandy Ziehm, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ziehm, Gagetown. Sandy, in turn, goes over a Spanish lesson with Luz's help.

Michigan Mirror

Milliken attempting to shake state bureaucrats to life

A basic political truism repeated time after time in the last few years is that people in general have grown distrustful of government in general.

The most visible elements of government are the elected office holders, who must go to the people to get their job in the first place and then return every so often to ask for another term in the job.

But government isn't just elected politicians.

In Michigan, for example, state government is more than 50,000 full-time employees of the state who work in various departments drawing up and administering all the state programs. One who has a problem in state government almost always ends up talking to a state employee who was never elected to his job.

run; and much of the credit or blame which government receives really belongs to these people.

Michigan has thousands of state employees who are dedicated to doing a good job for the public. But it also has some who have become less than model employees. These are the people who often give government a bad name because they aren't patient enough with a citizen who doesn't understand, or because they don't know the answer to a problem, or because they just don't care.

Gov. William G. Milliken is trying to make restoration of confidence in government one of his priority items and has been since he became governor. His latest step in this field is an attempt to shake the lethargic sections of the bureaucracy back to life.

Catalyst for the governor's drive is the unlikely question of whether to allow the hunting of antlerless female deer in the upper peninsula.

Most residents of the U.P. vehemently oppose the hunting of does. It's an emotional issue with them, not just a minor matter which can go either way and not bother them.

In July, the Natural Resources Commission, acting in accordance with recommendations from the Department of Natural Resources staff, approved an antlerless deer season with a quota of 3,350 in the eastern upper peninsula for this fall.

The season was approved because it is felt there is not an adequate food supply in the U.P. for this winter to handle the size of herd which would result from a complete ban on hunting does. A shortage of food would lead to widespread starvation of deer.

Residents of the U.P. don't buy that. They don't believe the DNR figures which say it's beneficial to hunt does. They think things would be a lot better without any hunting of them.

And in late July, just before the Legislature recessed, U.P. lawmakers rushed through both houses and to the governor a bill to overrule the commission and forbid antlerless deer hunting in the U.P.

Milliken vetoed the bill because he believes DNR officials know what they are doing.

But he didn't stop there. He decided to use the DNR as the first part of a program to make the bureaucracy more responsive to the public. He also believes the greatest governmental program in the world isn't much good if the public won't buy it. DNR's problem, he indicated, is that it hasn't tried hard enough to sell its program to U.P. residents.

The governor called DNR Director A. Gene Gazlay in for a meeting and a few days later Gazlay announced a 15-point program to improve his department's relations with the public.

"We are not talking about a slick hard sell public relations program," Milliken said. "We're talking about a program under which the state will emphasize the importance of explaining -- rather than imposing -- policies that are implemented only after citizen views have been solicited and thoroughly considered."

That is the nub of the problem. When a person works in a state agency and has the power to enforce laws or policies, it sometimes can be easy to forget that he is really employed by the people he is regulating.

What Milliken is trying to emphasize for the bureaucrats who need it is that they work FOR the people. And it's always a good idea to try to get along with the people you work for.

Navy bean prices are higher than they have been in recent years, but I am sure many farmers do not feel it is a bonanza. Cost of production has reached record highs, and yields were also the lowest in 20 years. For the man paying the bills, current prices seem barely adequate. For that part of the crop still in storage, he is looking for a continued strong market and needs it. The purpose of this article is to provide the grower with market information that will help him achieve his goal.

Any market flooded with a commodity will be depressed. Typically during the harvest period, more commodity flows to the market than can be used and the price goes down. However, when producers hold back from the market a commodity, the seasonal fluctuations are reduced. The goal is to keep the market supplied so that sales are not missed, but not to over-supply it so that prices will be depressed. It should be remembered that the average market price can be depressed just as easily by undersupplying the market and selling too many beans late in the year, as over supplying the market at harvest. If grower sales through the year match use, he will receive near the average price for his crop.

Quint Ostrander, District Extension Marketing Agent, has analyzed the market's utilization of Michigan's navy bean crop over several years. He found very little difference in the percent utilization of the total crop in each month from year to year. From September to November, 27 per cent of the crop is utilized, while 26 per cent December to February, 28 per cent March to May, and 19 per cent is utilized in the June to August period. His recommendation is for growers to plan their marketing so that from 20 to 30 per cent of their crop is sold in each quarter of the marketing year. This procedure will give the grower near the average price for his crop.

If you have adequate storage on your farm, you can store the crop at home. But you are also assuming the risk of any storage loss. This risk is shifted to the elevator if you choose to store at one of the local elevators. Besides, you likely will be able to borrow needed capital on the warehouse re-

Bond issue set

Voters in the Owendale-Gagetown School District will decide Dec. 3 on whether or not to approve a $2,660,000 bond issue for school construction and improvement.

The date was set by the Owen-Gage Board of Education

Pays fine

Monday night. The proposed work will include the construction of a new junior-senior high school building. Also planned are renovations and improvements in the school district's existing elementary buildings.

Melvin Thompson, 19, Gagetown, pleaded guilty to reckless driving when he appeared Thursday in Huron County District Court before Judge John T. Schubel in Bad Axe. Thompson paid fines and costs of $75.

Bean situation for farmers mixed

Several growers have asked how long the strong price will last. No one can answer that question. The Southern Hemisphere crop is just going in. It was very poor last year, and helped push up prices in Michigan. It will likely effect Michigan prices again this year.

Right now many buyers are not making purchases ahead in hopes the crop in the Southern Hemisphere will be very good. What the effect will be is an unanswerable question. Estimates of the total dry bean production in the United States are down 10 per cent from last year.

The major reduction came in the Michigan crop. Carryover of old crop bean seems to be lower than normal. There is no reason to expect a reduction in domestic demand, but export demand is very strong. Also, the Canadian crop is down about 17 per cent from last year.

At this time the domestic supply of dry beans of all classes is adequate to meet demand, but the world supply is tight. World demand for high protein foods is growing rapidly. Since nearly 20 per cent of the Michigan crop is exported, the world market will be the dominate factor in our market.

Lions Sightmobile due next week

Are you sure about your eyes? Or your child's? The first step to checking your vision health can be made when the Lion's Club-sponsored Sightmobile visits Cass City and Gagetown next week.

The project, sponsored by Lions District 11-D, begins Tuesday, Oct. 2, in Gagetown from 7-9 p.m.

Wednesday through Saturday, the Sightmobile will be in Cass City and will operate on the following schedule.

Wednesday - 2-5 p.m.
Thursday - 2-3:30 p.m.
Friday - 6-9 p.m.
Saturday - 10 a.m.-5:30 p.m.
George Eastman, sightmobile

chairman for the district which includes Tuscola county, says the sightmobile for this district is a two-year dream turned to reality thanks to the interest and assistance of the clubs in the district, individual Lion members and even non-Lions who recognize the need of this sight conservation and community service project.

Eastman was appointed chairman of the sightmobile program two years ago.

He said that, in some cases, severe sight problems or blindness can be prevented by simply knowing that a problem exists. Considering that many persons have sight problems and are not aware of them, the Lions hope community residents, especially students and senior citizens, will take time to have their eyes screened. Past experience in other areas has indicated that as many as 40 per cent of those taking the screening will fail it.

No professional advice will be given by Sightmobile personnel, but the persons having the screening will be given a copy of the results and in some cases, financial help may be given to those unable to secure professional aid. Those not passing the screening are urged to make an appointment with an eye doctor for a complete eye examination.

Eye screening is not equivalent to an eye examination by an eye doctor, Eastman added. "The screening simply tells a person whether he should go on to have an eye examination by a local eye doctor," he said. "We can't say if there is anything medically wrong with the eye; simply that the individual has not passed his screening." Local chairman for the Sightmobile is Dr. William Selby. Co-chairman is Tom Jackson.

Driver unhurt as car crashes into post office

Property damage was extensive when a car owned by Ms. Melissa Knowlton, 7185 Reed Rd., crashed into the front of the post office and broke one of the plate glass windows in the front of the building.

Ms. Knowlton told Cass City Police she had parked the car in front of the building and left the engine running while she went into the post office. While she was inside, her daughter moved the gearshift into the drive position, sending the vehicle into the building.

No one was injured in the mishap. Ms. Knowlton was ticketed for leaving a motor vehicle unattended with the engine running. The accident occurred at 2:45 p.m. Friday.

MAN HOSPITALIZED

Charles Oran Hughes, 6619 Houghton St., was hospitalized Sunday after the car he was driving went out of control and overturned on Little Road near Keilitz Road.

Tuscola County Sheriff's Deputies said Hughes was traveling east on Little Road and saw two deer in the road directly in front of his car. He apparently hit the brakes and they locked, sending the car off the edge of the road.

The vehicle then overturned. Hughes was taken to Hills and Dales General Hospital where he was treated. He was released Tuesday.

UBLY MAN INJURED

Richard Lee Hutson, 18, Uby, suffered minor injuries Sunday when the car he was driving on Kinde Road, a mile and a quarter east of Caseville, missed a curve and rolled over in a ditch at the south side of the road.

Hutson deputies said Hutson was thrown from the vehicle. He was treated for cuts and bruises at Scheurer Hospital, Pigeon, where he was taken after the accident.

Hutson told officers he was traveling too fast to make the curve. The accident occurred around 10 p.m.

OTHER ACCIDENTS

A Cass City man escaped injury Sunday when the car he was driving struck a trailer partially parked on Kelly Road near the intersection of Knoblet Road.

Don Erla, 4705 Segger, told Tuscola deputies he was headed east on Kelly Road when the accident occurred. According to officers, the trailer was parked partially on the road and did not have reflectors or any other kind of illumination.

Erla was unable to see the trailer and struck it in the right rear corner. The trailer was owned by Johnson Plumbing of Cass City.

Erla was not ticketed in the accident which occurred at 12:30 a.m.

A Kingston woman escaped serious injury Monday evening when another vehicle pulled out from a driveway into the path of her car.

Beverly Cribbley, 110 Arden Park Dr., told officers she was southbound on Hurds Corner Road near Harmon Lake Road when a pickup pulled from a driveway into her path, forcing her to skid onto a lawn on the west side of the road.

The pickup was driven by Scott Wright of Caro. No tickets were issued and no injuries were reported in the accident which occurred around 7:25 p.m.

Board approves new patrol cars

The Tuscola County Board of Commissioners voted Tuesday to authorize Sheriff Hugh Marr to purchase three new patrol cars, replacing three which now show upwards of 60,000 miles.

The board approved the request after Marr explained that, if left in service through the end of the year, the vehicles would show close to 100,000 miles.

The old vehicles will become part of the county car pool, once the new patrol cars are in service.

Marr also requested that the new patrol cars come equipped with air conditioning. He explained that, while initial purchase costs will be higher, resale value will also be increased.

The board will ask bids from local dealers for purchase of the three new vehicles.

The commissioners also voted to spend $150 to panel Sheriff Marr's office. It was pointed out that in the winter, the office is cold and it was felt paneling would act as insulation to stop the penetration of cold air.

The board also approved a resolution to act in cooperation with Bay county in a flood control and shoreline erosion study currently being conducted. Commissioner Maynard McConkey explained that this will not cost Tuscola county any additional funds, but merely states that the county will cooperate in completion of the study.

He said this will include the Quanicasee area, hard hit by flooding last spring.

The commissioners also approved a resolution directing the Register of Deeds office to hire another office worker to begin work microfilming documents in that office.

Committee action will begin soon on a request by Dog Warden Mike Franko that an additional man and another vehicle be added to his department.

Cass City Police Chief Gene Wilson said Tuesday he has received several complaints in recent days concerning cars parked on Main Street between the hours of 2:00 a.m. and 5:00 a.m. from local merchants.

In one case, he said, when a merchant opened for business one morning, three cars were parked in front of the establishment.

Wilson said he wanted to remind motorists that parking on Main Street between these hours is a violation. The ordinance will have to be enforced if cooperation from drivers is not forthcoming, he added.

Wilson said parking is available during those hours on side streets or in parking lots.

It's now or never as Hawks prep for showdown with Caro Friday

Cass City's last chance to remain a contender in the Thumb B Conference. Cass City's last chance to turn around a dismal football season. Cass City's last chance to show that it was mistakes and breaks that spelled defeat in the first two games.

OPEN HOUSE

headquarters in Portland, Ore., is enthusiastically studying the innovation at the Gagetown facility. This may start a new trend in the industry.

Also, union representatives have viewed the plant and are also avidly interested in seeing something similar in other plants across the nation.

The open house is a way of not only showing these unique artistic creations, according to May, but to allow the employees to bring their families to the plant to see where they work and to make them feel more a part of the community.

The Evans plant in Gagetown, one of five in the state, has been producing equipment containers for the automotive industry for some 15 years.

"We're proud of this plant and proud of the difference in it," May said. "This is a first and we want to share it with the community."

He added that the open house is designed to bring about a greater awareness of what Evans Products is and what it does as a part of the community.

That is what is at stake Friday night when the Hawks clash with the Caro Tigers in their first road game of the year.

The Tigers will reign as heavy favorites to add to the Hawks' two-game losing streak. The Tigers are undefeated in two games and have yet to yield a touchdown in regulation time although Essexville Garber scored against them in overtime.

When that record is compared against Cass City's it's easy to see why Caro is the favorite.

Cass City lost its second straight game before the home fans Friday, 21-7. Like in the opener, the Hawks dominated the opening play and then faded when it counted.

"Mistakes, mistakes, mistakes," moaned Coach Roland Pakonen. "Let me have three plays back and we could be fighting Caro for the League lead this Friday instead of fighting to stay alive in the conference race."

The three plays the coach referred to were a pair of fumbles and an offside on a booming Scott Hartel punt.

The three plays were too much to overcome. Perhaps the most devastating was the first fumble.

The Hawks had sustained a march down the field and moved for a first down on about the two-yard line. A smash into the line carried to about the six-inch line and on the next play Ed Stoutenburg fumbled and the Lakers recovered.

That ended that drive, but undaunted, Cass City came back in the second period with another march and this one didn't fail. Dan Mellendorf slashed over from the one-yard line and Hartel kicked the point to put the Hawks in the lead, 7-0. That's the way the score stayed until the final two minutes of the first half. Then a pair of passes put the Lakers on the scoreboard.

The pass that hurt was a 40-yard heave from Doug Neurath to Jim Barbret. Barbret slipped behind the Hawk secondary in the left flat, took the pass in stride and waltzed untouched into paydirt.

A moment later the same combo clicked on the conversion and the Lakers were in front at intermission, 8-7.

The next play that Pakonen would have liked to replay came in the third period. Mellendorf fumbled deep in his own territory. The Lakers recovered and drove for the marker. Mike LePage went the last four to score. The point try failed.

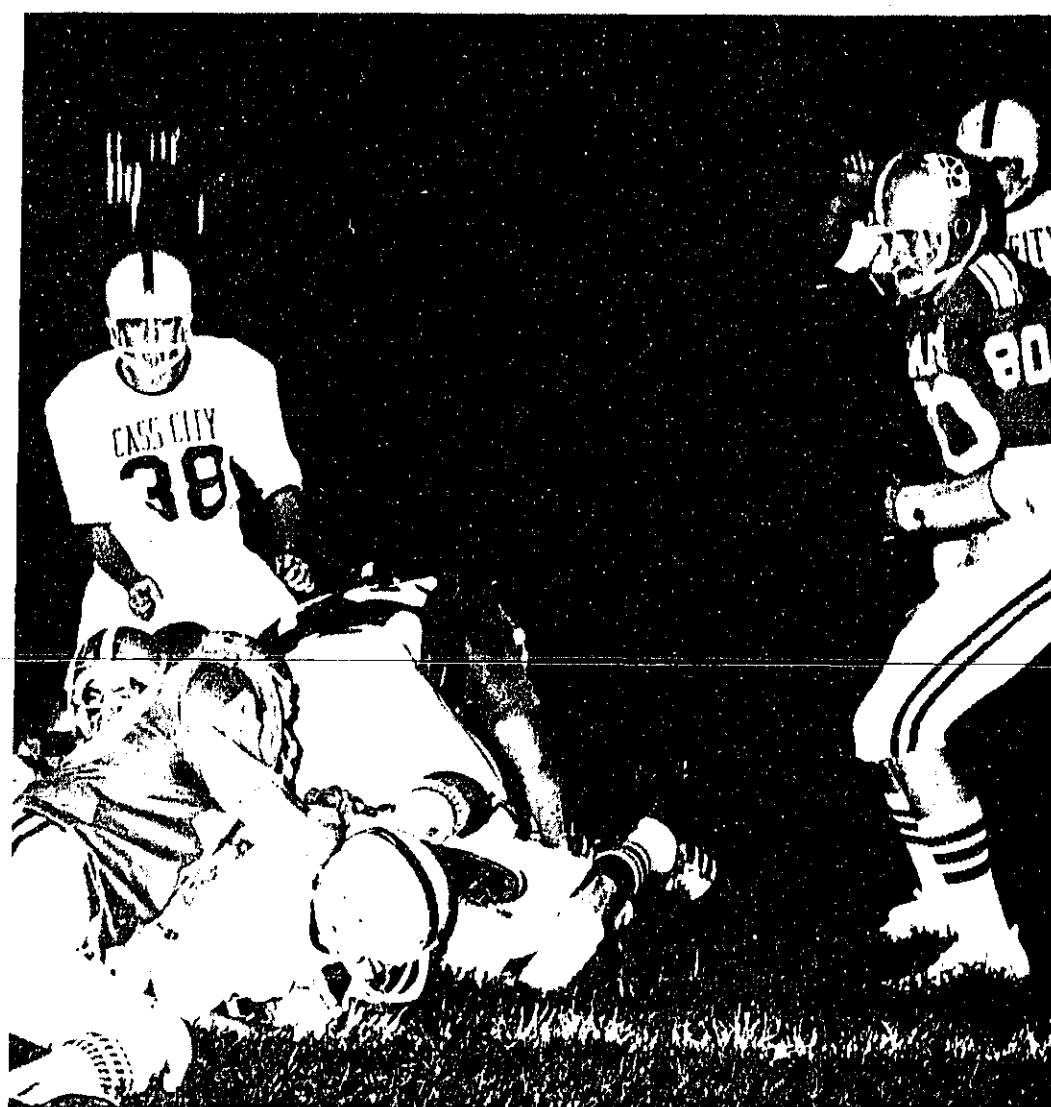

The third play was an offside penalty after Hartel boomed a punt out of bounds on the Laker five. On the second try the ball was centered over his head and the Lakers took over in excellent field position. When they rammed down the field for the third touchdown it was all over but the shouting.

Dave Fritz received credit for the six points as he capped the drive with a one yard plunge. The kick for point by Fritz was good.

Chester Sieradzki returned to all-state form as he led the defense with 12 solo tackles and seven assists.

The statistics:

First downs	10	13
Passes complete	4/8	4/11
Yards passing	69	37
Passes intercepted by	1	1
Rushing plays	44	33
Yards rushing	165	141
Total offense	234	178
Fumbles lost	1	4

THE HAWKS were knocking on the goal line on this play but on the next snap a fumble ruined the scoring opportunity and turned the game around as the Lakers won, 21-7.

PROPERTY DAMAGE was estimated at $50,000 in a Friday night fire that gutted the brick home and adjoining garage of Marvin Winter, located on M-53 just north of Bay City-Forestville Road. Exact cause of the blaze was not determined. No one was injured.

Two area fires cause $65,000 in damages

Two homes were destroyed in the Cass City area last week resulting in property damage totaling over $65,000.

Wednesday, a fire of undetermined origin destroyed a house and contents belonging to Norman Hurd, 5578 Shabbona Rd., Delord, at about 6:00 p.m. According to Elkland Township Fire Chief Dick Root, the house was totally destroyed. Root estimated loss at around $15,000.

No one was injured in the blaze and its cause was not determined.

Friday night, a fire reported at 9:50 p.m., destroyed the home of Marvin Winter, located on M-53, seven and one-half miles northeast of Cass City in Greenleaf township.

State Police officers from the Bad Axe Post who investigated said the home had been completed about a year ago and estimated the value at about $50,000. Winter later said the home was insured for $35,000.

Cause of the fire was not determined, but was believed to have started in an air conditioning unit while the family was away for the evening.

Elkland firefighters had contained the blaze to the garage area when they ran out of water and the fire began again. A new pickup truck in the garage was also destroyed.

No one was injured in the blaze.
