

MRS. GEORGIA MacFARLANE, Fairgrove, poses with her new son, Wade Robert, the first baby born in Cass City in 1974. The lad came into the world at Hills and Dales General Hospital at 9:46 a.m. Jan. 3, weighing seven pounds, four ounces. Dr. Yongkyun Kim delivered the baby. The proud new parents will be receiving a host of gifts from Cass City merchants.

Area schools adapt to daylight savings time

It seemed like the middle of the night Monday morning in Cass City as students trudged to school and workers warily made their way to their places of employment in total darkness, imposed by nationwide daylight savings time (DST).

Traffic lights, not yet changed to the new schedule, blinked their yellow and red warnings at the morning's heavy traffic. School buses transported students in total darkness while snow clouds obscured any hope of daylight until past 8:30 a.m.

And, while no one seems to like the idea, Michigan, and the rest of the nation, is stuck with DST until at least October of 1975. All but two Tuscola county school districts will go along with the time change this year but are not committing themselves for next year. Akron-Fairgrove and Unionville-Sebewaing Districts decided not to go along with the change and are starting school later.

Cass City schools will not change their schedules this year, according to Supt. Donald Crouse. Crouse said one of the reasons involves the cooperative programs with other school districts in the county. Going along with the change means avoiding mass confusion in class scheduling for co-op sessions, he said. "It's a bad situation no matter which way you go," Crouse said Monday morning after the first round of pre-dawn bus runs had been completed.

"By staying on daylight time, we bring kids to school in the dark. By staying on standard time, we create confusion in the district that's worse than switching."

Crouse said Monday morning he had received only one telephone call from a parent regarding the time switch.

Crouse added another reason for switching is that most Sanilac county schools are also going on DST.

He said surveys conducted by some districts indicated parents actually favored going on fast time.

"Actually, we were hoping for a stay from the governor's office regarding whether or not to stay with daylight time for the 1974-75 school year."

OWEN-GAGE SITUATION

The situation is different in the Owendale-Gagetown school district. Earlier, all but one school in the Huron Intermediate District, Harbor Beach, indicated they would stay on standard time.

Owen-Gage classes now begin at 9:30 a.m. and dismiss at 3:20 p.m.

The Huron County School Superintendents Association indicated the changes in class hours will be effective only as long as necessary.

Owen-Gage Superintendent Glenn Sanford said Monday the new schedule will be in effect until the middle of February when a switch back to the old starting times will be made. Sanford said the decision to switch eases the possibility of problems involved in transporting students to school before dawn.

"I'm not interested in picking up kids in the dark," Sanford said.

He indicated that a switch to later hours next year may have to be instituted as early as Dec. 1.

Sanford said no unusual problems arose Monday morning regarding the switch.

Individual school districts were given the right to make adjustments in schedules last month by the State Board of Education. The board decided against a proposal to establish a statewide policy regarding DST and school districts.

Commissioners ponder proposed $8,500 building, parking study

In its first working session of the new year, the Tuscola County Board of Commissioners took under consideration the possibility of commissioning a complete study of county office and parking needs for the next 20 years which would cost $8,500.

The board heard from William A. Brehm Jr. of Planning Consultant Services, Inc., a Lansing-based planning firm, who outlined what such a study would cover and how long it would take to complete.

Brehm told the commissioners his firm could produce a complete analysis and evaluation of the county's office and parking needs for a 20 year period in increments of five years in six months. The firm would provide 50 copies of the study to the county for the fee. Brehm has served as planning director of Meridian Charter township near Lansing and is presently a trustee of the township.

Commissioner J. Benson Colton asked Brehm if a six-month deadline could be met. He cited the need for some statement from the board regarding parking because the village of Caro is considering expanding its own parking facilities.

Colton said the village and the commission should know exactly what the other plans to do.

Board Chairman Shuford Kirk asked Brehm if the study would include a re-design and survey of the present court house.

Brehm said it would but would not provide architectural design drawings. It would, he said, talk in terms of the number of square feet needed for each department and suggest whether or not some departments should be relocated either elsewhere in the building or in another building.

Colton asked Brehm if the study would also consider available utilities. He made specific reference to some problems with a lack of municipal water or sewer lines on some county property to be studied, and referred to water problems at the Tuscola County Medical Care Facility as an example.

Brehm said this would come under the study as well.

Brehm and his fellow consultants have toured Caro and all county properties involved in the study.

The board did not commit itself to commissioning the study Tuesday, but said it would discuss the matter further and would get in touch with Brehm and his firm soon.

Ralph Hartman, Caro village engineer, told the board a six month time period would be acceptable to the village and that nothing could be done any sooner than that. He said the village wants to work with the board, specifically on the parking question.

OTHER BUSINESS

In other business, the board learned it will be reimbursed some $199.25 by the State Department of Natural Resources for the Sheriff's snowmobile safety program. This represents a 75 per cent repayment of total costs for the program.

Commissioners also nominated Shirley Wilsie to replace Mrs. Elizabeth Gerzemkowski as a village representative on the East Central Michigan Planning and Development Region Commission.

Commissioners will study a proposal to reimburse Huron county some $200 for attorney fees during litigation last year to prevent the Army Corps of Engineers from instituting a plan to dump wastewater from metropolitan areas on Thumb land.

Total fees amount to $600. Commissioner Kenneth Kennedy balked at the move, saying Huron county seemingly always wanted Tuscola to reimburse it without doing the same in return. He cited examples involving the county with the Thumb Board of Health.

"It's a one-way street with them," Kennedy said.

The board will study the plan and act upon it later.

Chairman Kirk said among the matters to be dealt with at the board's week-long session are fixing wages for county employees and elected officials and deciding what to do regarding a heating and air conditioning system for the courthouse.

Kirk was re-elected chairman of the board. All committee assignments remain the same as during the 1973 session.

Clinic drive nears state-imposed financial milestone of $80,000

Cass City's drive for a completed four-doctor clinic should shift into high gear this week if the corporation is able to reach a state-imposed milestone regarding the amount of money the clinic corporation must have in hand.

According to Fred Auten, one of the five directors of the Hills and Dales Medical Center Inc., the corporation should have $84,100 in its possession by Thursday if all pledges made to the corporation are kept.

Auten explained once this figure is attained, then it can begin spending money toward completion of the four-doctor facility located on Hill Street across from Hills and Dales General Hospital. The overall goal is $150,000.

The Jan. 10 deadline is an extension granted the corporation by the state. It is hoped another extension will not be needed. According to Auten, indications are that $33,200 in outstanding pledges will be redeemed by that date.

Presently, the corporation has $50,900 in cash. State law requires that the corporation have at least $80,000 in hand before it can begin spending.

Construction has progressed since summer largely on the strength of a $35,000 personal note taken out by the five corporation members to pay expenses. When the corporation's funds are freed, the note will be repaid. Auten emphasized, however, that the five will be responsible for paying the interest on the loan.

In addition, corporation members invested $30,000 at the outset of the drive to get the project going.

A balance of some $40,000 will still have to be raised to insure completion of the building.

Auten said response in the community has been good to the drive. A major problem faced by the corporation is the fact that only the five may solicit funds, under state law.

"Originally, we thought we'd have 45 persons soliciting for us," he explained. "Then the state told us only the corporation members could do it. And about the only time we have to make contacts is evenings.

"We've talked to every club in town and this has opened some doors for us. We've also made some contacts in Gagetown and in the rural areas, too."

He added that most of the soliciting emphasis has been placed in areas where large single contributions might come. One contributor purchased $6,000 worth of stock. Auten said.

Stock is sold at $100 per share. To date, two officers in the building are nearly complete, Auten said. The corporation has concentrated on finishing half the interior to allow any new physicians coming to Cass City to have ready quarters.

Auten added the entire clinic should be completed by the beginning of the summer, if not sooner.

Doctors will use the clinic rent-free for one year, Auten explained. After that, they may either rent or, preferably, option to buy the structure.

Based on the experience of other communities, doctors occupying such a facility find it more financially desirable to buy it. This would then make funds available to either pay off the stockholders and dissolve the corporation or to keep the funds and start another clinic.

He said land is still available between the new clinic and the Selby clinic for another such facility.

The need for more doctors at the hospital was accentuated over the Christmas holiday period when only 15 patients were hospitalized. The facility can handle 62 patients at capacity.

Auten emphasized the need for doctors and for expanded use of hospital facilities. X-rays, for instance, will be handled with hospital equipment rather than providing such equipment in the clinic itself.

In the short run, Auten said, the corporation could borrow the $40,000, but it would prefer to raise the money itself through stock sale which would cost less in the long run. No deadline has been placed on raising the remainder of the money.

"This clinic is going to be valuable to the community in two ways," Auten said. "It will provide a place for doctors which we need and it will also help keep the hospital going."

Other members of the clinic corporation include B.A. Calka, Geraldine Prieskorn, Tom Practor and Mike Weaver.

Anyone wishing to purchase stock in the corporation may contact any one of these persons.

CASS CITY'S NEW four-doctor clinic moves steadily toward completion. The corporation financing the venture hopes to begin spending accumulated funds soon.

LaPeers' snowmobile classes continue despite fuel crunch

DEBRA BROWN, 12, prepares for a lesson in snowmobiling from instructor Lynwood LaPeer. The course lasts five weeks and covers every aspect of snowmobiling.

By Jim Ketchum

The Lynwood LaPeers of East Elmwood Road love snowmobiling. To them, it's more than something to do on a winter's week end or evening.

"It gets into your blood," Mrs. LaPeer will tell you. "I really can't explain it."

So much is it in their blood that for the third consecutive year, they are offering, free of charge, snowmobile instruction courses to youngsters 12-14 years old. The course, given through the auspices of the state Department of Natural Resources, details snowmobile operation and laws as well as teaching students first aid and rudimentary mechanics of their machines.

This year, enrollment has been down slightly. Mrs. LaPeer says the reason lies partly in the fact that a large number of older students, 69, took the course last year. Yet the spectre of the fuel shortage hangs over the sport both she and her husband have grown to love.

The LaPeers began three years ago teaching students proper snowmobile operation through the 4-H of Tuscola county. At that time, 4-H furnished the materials and acted as a middle-man between the LaPeers and the state.

After the students completed the course, the LaPeers would turn in test results to 4-H who then passed them on to the DNR which issued the registrations and sent them back through the same channel.

Last year, 4-H participation was reduced in the instructional program and this year, the LaPeers work directly with the DNR.

A 4-H affiliation is still retained this year, however.

"They (the DNR) send us all the materials and we issue the registrations ourselves," she explained.

How did the LaPeers become qualified by the state to teach such a course?

"Beats me," Mrs. LaPeer said. "I guess it came about just because we were asked to do it three years ago through the 4-H. Now each year we receive the material and when the snow flies, the phone starts ringing and we decide to do it again."

The LaPeers are among 3,400 snowmobile instructors in Michigan who work directly with the DNR. They teach students too young to drive an automobile primarily. Anyone under the age of 16 must have completed such a course and received a registration before being allowed to operate a machine along roads or on state land.

The course the LaPeers teach involves five lessons of two hours each and is held Saturday afternoons at their home. Students are issued a manual on snowmobile safety and a copy of state and village laws regarding snowmobile operation.

Each student is quizzed on these laws and must pass this test before he is allowed to take his performance test on his own machine.

OPERATION

One aspect of the course LaPeer strongly stresses is the actual operation of the sled. As a part of the course, he purposely tinkers with a machine so it will not run and then makes his students find the problem and fix it.

"This part of the course is a little difficult for the girls, we find," Mrs. LaPeer said. "Unless they get some training at home prior to the course, they have a hard time with it."

Another part of the course teaches the youngsters the proper mixtures of oil and gasoline for the two-cycle engines which power the sleds.

Another aspect stressed by the LaPeers is proper clothing.

"Just any kind of warm clothing won't do," Mrs. LaPeer said. "The kids must wear snowmobile suits, boots, mittens and helmets. I remember once we brought one of the kids in who hadn't worn any boots to class. We had to warm him up pretty thoroughly before we found a pair of my daughter's boots that fit him so that he could finish the run."

The LaPeers also stress not riding alone. A minor accident could become serious if it happens in the woods miles from a house and having a partner along can mean the difference in just how serious an injury may be.

Indoors, the LaPeers hold the classes around the table in their sunlit dining room. They believe this leisurely atmosphere makes learning easier.

First aid is taught in the course and students are versed on how to deal with fractures, bleeding, frostbite and burns. A copy of their first-aid manual must be carried in their machines at all times.

The course is given twice each winter, once before Christmas and once after. Students signed for instruction in the second course Saturday. The LaPeers do not charge, because they simply can't see doing it.

"The DNR supplies us with everything we need," she said. "All we invest is our time. So I just can't see charging for it. We do it because we love snowmobiling. We had two sons who had to have this same kind of training and we feel we're doing something worthwhile."

CLASS SIZE

In the 1972-73 season, the LaPeers trained a total of 69 students in snowmobiling. In the first course this winter, about 40 were trained. She said she expects the numbers to be somewhat lower than last year because of the large number trained a year ago.

The course is no cinch. If a student does not make it, he will be failed and told to return later. Two students once failed the course.

ENERGY CRUNCH

Mrs. LaPeer agrees that if strict rationing is imposed on gasoline purchases, snowmobiling will be hurt by it. But, she added, if any extra gasoline is available, the snowmobiles will run.

"They're a hard form of

Rabbit tracks

By John Haire

(And anyone else he can get to help)

The Farm Bureau annually runs an essay contest for eighth graders called "America and Me". It's on again now.

It's open to all students in the eighth grade including Cass City but this isn't why I'm talking about it here.

I want to tell you about a list of some of the best thoughts from the kids the company has compiled in a pamphlet. Some are astonishingly good. Good for anyone, but almost unbelievable for the level of competition.

I wish I had written this. Listen: "There are endless numbers of unemployed people. For what reasons I know not, and being only an eighth grader, I have yet to learn."

"Prices go up and people need money, and somewhere between wages and prices the line gets thin. If it breaks there may be an economic breakdown in the U.S. and probably the world."

"I have a freedom here I don't quite fully understand because I don't know any other way of living."

"I guess my biggest problem is judging a person by his color, religion or anything else that I could judge him by if I didn't like him."

That's a fair sample of some beautiful writing in the pamphlet's 20 pages.

Arleon Retherford brought in a copy of "The Housekeeper" dated Dec. 1967. I enjoyed the ads. One advertised a rubber complexion bulb for removing wrinkles, pimples, blackheads and other blemishes. "A single application brings remarkable results," says the copy.

Before you laugh consider the beauty aids on the market today and reflect that according to one report most of the lotions for a sweeter smelling you have been found virtually useless. You might call them a 1974 complexion pump.

It's a refreshing chuckle when you read the sign in front of a service station, in Caro. With arrows pointing towards the pumps it says, tongue-in-cheek, "Customer shortage."

I wonder how long the owner will be able to leave it up.

Gavelites tell me that family ticket sales for the Voorheis Bros. circus are brisk. That's because, says Ron Geiger, it's a big savings at $3.00 over the individual admission price at the gate. The Gavel Club isn't predicting a full house, but don't be surprised if that gym is full, say members who have been hawking tickets far and wide.

The show is slated Tuesday, Jan. 15, at 6 p.m. and again at 9 p.m.

I saw Kohoutek's comet Saturday night. . . unless I was being kidded.

It looked like just another star to me. I understand it was a fizzle for the experts, too.

I wonder if they expected a rocket-like burst of light streaking across the sky, like I did?

Landfill receives temporary license

Cass City's sanitary landfill has received temporary licensing from the state Department of Natural Resources which runs through Aug. 31, Supt. Lou LaPonsie announced Tuesday.

LaPonsie said the license covers the five acres now in use. Licensing on the remainder of the site is contingent on soil borings made in recent weeks which have also been sent in to the DNR. It is hoped the entire facility can be licensed before the late-summer deadline of the temporary permit.

The action comes after a meeting between village and township officials and DNR representatives in December at which time new regulations were set forth by the state. At that time, local officials expressed the desire to retain the landfill as long as economically feasible.

A SCARF SHORTAGE, TOO? Not really. It's just a convenient way for Pam LaPeer (left) and Chris Van Vliet to keep their faces warm on a frigid morning in Cass City.

LaPeers continue snowmobiling classes

recreation to just stop," she said. "When it gets into your blood, you'll go whether it's cold or not."

She looks on snowmobiling in much the same way as camping, fishing or bowling, for example.

"If they ban snowmobiling, they ought to ban bowling and racing," she said. "There is a lot of money made in sports like this and the economic effect of stopping them would be great."

She added she isn't sure if there is a real energy crisis or not but is sure that if gas is available, snowmobiles will run.

One thing a 10-gallon limitation per week would do is effectively keep LaPeer from his job. He works as a finish carpenter in Detroit and uses 10 gallons of gasoline each day.

For the moment, at least, the snowmobile instruction classes will continue. And the LaPeers' love for the sport will remain unabated.

"I feel like I'm contributing something to those kids," LaPeer said.

FROM THE
Editor's Corner

Perhaps you saw the television newscast the other night featuring the plight of middle class families sending a child to college.

The story told how the family with income of $10,000 or slightly more was having a hard time. No government assistance. No scholarships. No government guaranteed loan.

It's enough to blur your eyes. If the child goes to school, sobbed one parent, it could eat up our savings.

We just don't have any way to send our daughter and still maintain a standard of living, says another.

The newscaster then explained how subsidy programs were designed for the low income family students and how they could go to school easily with government help.

That's all true, too. I won't say that it's unfair.

It's not unfair because without aid there is very little chance the poor can go to college.

Notice, I didn't say no chance at all. I know a doctor who attended Michigan State and later U of M who earned every cent of his education. No state help. No family aid.

Admittedly that's doing it the hard way and with financial obstacles like this in the path many, many talented kids would drop by the wayside.

That's why you have to say that financial aid for poor families is a program well worth continuing.

It would be nice if the middle class could qualify. But someone has to pay the bills.

Okay, it's hard. Hard to cut into a budget that already is bursting at the seams.

That's what all of this has been leading to. The philosophy behind it all. Implied in the complaints aired over the tube is the thought that a college education should be available without pain, without strain if it's wanted.

And that's a big switch from yesterday when it was expected that sending Johnnie off to college would be a time of financial strain, financial sacrifice.

One that in some families at least was so routine as not to require thought.

You did what had to be done and that was that. The ones you felt sorry for were the families that just couldn't send the kids to college.

Those were the hardship cases. Those are the cases where the government steps in today.

Sure, the aid plan is far from perfect.

But it does put college within reach of just about every student that wants to go.

That's equal opportunity. No where does it say it has to be easy.

"If It Fitz . . ."

A black year for whites

BY JIM FITZGERALD

For my anonymous friend, 1973 was black because Agnew isn't.

Geez, none of the Watergate burglars or White House plumbers are Negroes, either. A few of the Hunkies, the guys who got their jimmies scratched, are Cubans, and that helps a little. But Haldeman, Ehrlichman, Mitchell, Dean, Krogh, Colson . . . all those household words are white, as in White House. It's enough to make a man lose faith in complexion power.

This racial problem came to my attention in the latest in a series of unsigned letters from a reader who has dedicated himself to counting crimes committed by blacks. For years he has been sending me clippings of news articles which identify thieves, rapists, welfare cheats and jaywalkers as Negroes. The appropriate words are always circled and in the margin my nameless correspondent types such pithy remarks as: "Nixon wasn't looking when Sammy Davis Jr. kissed him."

This latest letter was delivered the day before Christmas, 1973. Peace on Earth. But one of the clippings, describing a riot by black sailors, was dated Nov. 4, 1972. And it suddenly struck me what a lousy year 1973 was for my anonymous reader. To make up a decent package of hate, he had to include 13-month-old news.

The trouble in 1973 was white guys such as Agnew. He monopolized the crime news. It wasn't as though he simply robbed a bank and shot 1 teller and 52 innocent people waiting in line. A caper like that would have netted Spiro some ink back in the comic section, thus leaving the front page open for real crime news, such as the ghetto grocer who allowed a black man to buy a 6-pack of beer with food stamps.

To begin with, Agnew was charged with committing a white-collar crime. This is automatically the type of sensational news that Walter Cronkite wants to be first with, even if he has to wade through Walter Muhl. It is not common for white-collar crooks to be arrested, especially if they are politicians. Usually they are simply transferred to another executive position and given a pay raise so they won't have to steal so much anymore.

Then Agnew got on TV and swore he was innocent and would never resign as vice-president. A few days later he pleaded guilty in Latin and resigned in disgrace. Then he got more free TV time to explain he didn't really steal anything and besides, he needed the money, everyone else does it, and the new Watergate morality is unfair to people with no morals.

And that wasn't the end of it. Agnew was not jailed. Instead, as a worse punishment, he was forced to publicly beg his fellow lawyers for the right to continue practicing law. The lawyers are still thinking about it and Agnew must continue to live with the fear his credentials may not be up to par. The Watergate investigation revealed the American Bar Association may have all the crooked members it needs right now.

Finally, months after he quit working for us, it is revealed taxpayers are still paying thousands of dollars a day to support Agnew in the manner to which bribes made him accustomed.

Is it any wonder that an ordinary black mugger couldn't get his name in the paper in 1973?

If things don't improve for him this year, my anonymous friend will have to send me tattered clippings reporting crimes committed by run-away slaves.

KETCHUM'S KNAPSACK

Florida

By Jim Ketchum

O.K., I might as well get it out of my system once and for all. I took a trip to Florida and loved every minute of it and can't help boring my friends to tears recounting every episode of the week.

I guess I just enjoy making people jealous. Taking a trip to the land of the swaying palm and the bikini-clad miss used to be a much larger status symbol than it is today, apparently. But it's still fun to think that we went when the rest of the world remained in the frozen north-land, plowing through drifts and slogging through slush.

You can always get two reactions from anyone when you tell them about your trip to Florida. They either put you down and scoff at the idea or they eagerly interrupt by recounting their last six trips to the sunshine state.

The put-down artists, it seems, either went to Florida once during a hurricane or got stopped by a traffic cop and have since found it impossible to forgive the state and its people for their bad time.

I recall one of these fellows in particular whose chief complaint was the humidity. Why, he wouldn't go back to that steam bath again if his life depended on it, he told me. Seems that he made eight or nine trips to the sunny South before coming to that conclusion, however.

I'll also bet that the first time his checkbook will allow it, he'll be hoisting himself aboard a southbound jet without a moment's thought to Michigan.

Another put-down artist's trick is to praise snow, especially at Christmas time. Don't you miss snow for the holidays?, they ask. How can you get into the spirit of the season without the white stuff?

Very easily, thank you. On Christmas Day, I spent most of the afternoon on a swing inside a screened porch, reading a book and snoozing from time to time. Then I went for a swim—something only a polar bear could do back here in the frozen wasteland.

We had a delicious dinner following the opening of presents and in the evening we played cards with all the windows in the house open. Try that on December 25 back here, folks.

Admittedly, it is not the same type of holiday spirit that we have in Michigan. But it makes you feel just as benevolent toward your fellow man. Maybe it's a little more conducive toward benevolence because you're not engaged in the newest energy crisis sport of seeing just how low you can set the thermostat before turning blue.

I'll take blue skies, warm sunshine and orange trees heavily-laden with the sweetest fruit in the world any day over icy winds or cold rains or three feet of snow.

It is possible, I find, to have a meaningful, Christian Christmas without icicles and long underwear for props. Preachers preach just as good a sermon in warm churches as in cold ones. And live orange trees decorate as well as dead evergreens.

Another of the put-down artist's complaints involves the heat. Too hot for me, they will say.

Yet these are the same persons who will go home and turn their thermostats up to 80, the energy crisis notwithstanding.

Florida homes, offices and public buildings have air conditioning. So do their cars. And, if you're not near the ocean or Gulf of Mexico, most cities provide municipal swimming pools.

Maybe these put-downers just don't want to part with those few extra pounds that make heat uncomfortable.

Then there's the guy who won't let you finish the first sentence about where you got off the plane before he butts in with every detail of his trip and how he saw everything there was to see in three days.

This type of person is really insufferable. I mean I would never take up valuable space in my column to tell you that we went to Daytona Beach and drove some 10 miles down the coast or that we went to a place called Homosassa Springs to take in an open-air zoo.

Nor would I take up space telling you about eating fresh oranges and tangerines right from the tree or about the great swimming we had or anything else for that matter.

No, I'll just sit back and let you tell me about your trip. It was fun, wasn't it?

Veteran Science Quiz team stays cool in TV competition

Cass City's local television personalities, the Science Quiz team, go on the air Sunday for a second match after trouncing Bay City-St. James 170-70 the week before.

Air time is 9:30 a.m. for televising the program taped nearly a month ago, and all indications point to an exciting match against Midland-Jefferson.

Most of the team members are seasoned veterans of the television wars, with all of the ninth grade members marking their third year in competition, except one.

By now, most have a pretty fair idea of what to expect, from the friendly hello of a cameraman who recognizes returning team members to questions involving atomic science, the environment, chemistry and biology, to name a few.

The team is coached by Ms. Julie Kile who says her job during the taping sessions involves drilling her charges and "getting upset when they blow a question on something I've taught them."

The team is broken into an "A" squad and "B" squad, each with four regular and two alternate members. Among this group, the guy with the most answers to the most questions is without a doubt, Carl Palmtree.

Carl is a ninth grader and a three-year veteran of Science Quiz programs. Ms. Kile says if Carl ever had to miss a session, the rest of the team would be hard-pressed to take up the slack.

Carl's specialty is potpourri and he seemingly pulls answers out of the air at the last split-second. He serves as captain of the B team.

But Carl doesn't do it all alone. Tom Brinkman, a team captain and a ninth grader, approaches the whole experience from the cool vantage point of a three-year veteran.

Another regular in her first season on the team is Cindy Rosenberger, a seventh-grader. She said she was a little nervous before the first match, but after that, nothing but cool.

Another first-year member is ninth-grader Ann Whittaker. She comments that it's weird to see yourself on a monitor.

"I can raise my hand and see myself do it on the screen at the same time," she said.

Other team members include seventh-graders Tim Spry and Laurie Ware, eighth-graders Mark Stahlbaum, Dave Kitchen, Peter Kessler, Jesse Groth and Janice Wentworth and ninth-grader Cathy Hobart.

All panel members are selected on the basis of test results given to students interested in appearing on Science Quiz. Seventh through ninth graders

Dr. Lee to begin Cass City practice soon

If all goes well, Dr. J.Y. Lee will begin his medical practice in Cass City in the near future. According to Tom Proctor, president of the Hills and Dales Medical Center, Inc., Dr. Lee was scheduled to meet with state health department officials in Lansing Friday to complete his licensing procedure in Michigan.

constructed clinic near the hospital. Dr. Lee will practice internal medicine.

Proctor also said Dr. Lawrence Krain still remains indefinite on whether or not he will relocate his practice in Cass City.

Dr. Krain currently resides in Temple City, Calif.

BETTER HEALTH

Arthritis — A common disease

BY DR. WALTER C. ALVAREZ and DR. WILLIAM J. WELCH

One of the most common diseases is arthritis. The word arthritis comes from the Greek "arthros," meaning joint, and "itis" meaning inflammation. We know that it has brought discomfort to people for many centuries, because the skeletons of mummies from ancient Egypt have the typical bone changes that come with some forms of arthritis.

The most painful and deforming type of the disease is rheumatoid arthritis, which can attack joints all over the body. Many doctors believe that it is due to the fact that a bit of tissue, like the thumb joint or the knee joint, becomes somehow offensive to the rest of the body, and the body attacks the small area, much as if it were a germ or a virus. This is called an auto-immune disease, and it is one of several such diseases. Rheumatoid arthritis is three times more common in women than in men, and it usually begins when a person is between 20 and 35 years of age, although it can begin much earlier.

It may begin with weakness, fever, loss of appetite, and loss of weight. It frequently attacks the joints of the hands, and may deform them. One or more joints may become inflamed and swollen. As one would expect, the disease often brings with it mental depression, along with the pain and loss of ability to work.

The attacks tend to come and go for no apparent reason, but the treatment can lessen the pain and increase motion in the joint. Sometimes the pain subsides by itself, but it commonly returns. It is this coming and going that enables quacks to get rich selling their supposed remedies; if the patient, after he has taken some "cure" that a quack has sold him, has a remission, the medicine is likely to get the credit. What the person doesn't realize is that he could have had the same result without the medicine.

Today, cortisone and cortisone-like drugs can bring relief from an acute spell, but they should be taken carefully, and the person should not take these powerful drugs over a long period of time, as they can have some unpleasant side-effects. Many people with rheumatoid arthritis are said to have a lifelong problem.

I remember a woman who, after a several-month long attack of rheumatoid arthritis, recovered much as if she had gotten over the measles. The arthritis had "burned out," as we say. The pain and inflammation subsided, but her hands were left badly deformed. I then got a fine orthopedic surgeon to repair her joints so that she could move her fingers more easily and work again. This type of surgery is often being done today — but what is unusual about the case I mentioned is that the orthopedist repaired my patient's joints way back in 1912!

The type of arthritis that often comes to older persons is called osteo-arthritis. It generally begins in middle age, usually in a hip, knee, shoulder, or the back. The patient may notice the trouble first after an injury to a joint. What happens is that after perhaps 60 years of hard service, the ends of the bones get worn down, and the smooth lining membrane and the cartilage pads become worn away.

Unfortunately, when osteoporosis comes, it stays, and movement for the person becomes painful and limited. Today, an orthopedic surgeon will put in a new hip joint made of a plastic or some metal, and this can help. I give my patients pain-relievers such as Percodan, and these can help much.

There is another, milder form of joint trouble called fibrositis, which fortunately does not deform joints, but which can bother a person sometimes from his childhood to his old age. I have had it all my life, and so far, none of my joints has become deformed. I can get some distress in my shoulder or in my back, and then I can get a twinge of pain when I get up from a chair or put my coat on.

Sometimes I have to take an aspirin or two to get relief, but I remember what my old friend Dr. Philip Hench used to say — that the person who has guts enough to keep moving his sore joints may get better, while the one who nurses the joint and does not use it much has trouble.

Types and treatment of arthritis are given in detail in the booklet, "Arthritis and Rheumatism." For your copy, send 25 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Walter C. Alvarez, Box 957, Dept. CCC, Des Moines, Iowa 50304.

Mrs. McComb hosts Baptist ladies' group

Ten women attended the monthly meeting of the Baptist Missionary Society Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Fay McComb.

Devotions were conducted by Mrs. Richard Shaw and prayer time for missionaries was in charge of Mrs. Stanley McArthur.

Mrs. Rosella Kretschmer presided over the business meeting when members voted to purchase a tea service for the church. The group also decided to designate a special project for each month at which time contributions will be made for needed articles for missionaries.

Mrs. Lloyd Streeter reviewed briefly "Daktar", written by a Rev. Olsen, a medical missionary to Bangladesh.

Mrs. Shaw and the hostess served refreshments.

Your neighbor says Little hopes for a better 1974

Most of us would agree that 1973 was not a vintage year. Energy shortages, Watergate and rising prices all contributed to making it a year to forget.

Mrs. John Zmierski of Greenland Road doesn't look for any startling changes for the better in 1974, either.

"1974 probably won't be much better," she lamented. "What with prices going up, things don't look better from that standpoint."

She said from a personal standpoint, the new year probably won't be a lot better either. She cited the larger bites coming out of the family paycheck for the necessities of life as her reason.

As far as the energy crisis goes, Mrs. Zmierski said we shouldn't worry about the situation. Just take it one day at a time, she said. Mrs. Zmierski is the mother of three. Her husband is employed at Cole Carbide

4-H ACTIVITIES

Express talents in 4-H projects

By Bernard Jardot

Thumb counties receive DNR funds

Tuscola county will receive a little over $750 from the State Department of Natural Resources as its 1973 payment in lieu of taxes on its state forest lands, and other conservation holdings.

The county is scheduled to receive $767.77 as its share of some $1,749,928.78 paid by the state to 81 of Michigan's 83 counties.

The latest tax-like grants are up about $1,049,000 from a year ago as a result of recent legislation which raised the basic payment rate by 30 cents per acre and extended those allocations to cover certain state park lands that were formerly exempt.

Under Act 151, Public Acts of 1973, all of the latest payments in lieu of taxes were made at the new rate of 50 cents per acre. They were paid directly to the county treasurers, who will pass the funds onto their school districts and townships.

Sanilac county will receive $1,109.80 for its state conservation lands and Huron county will receive $950.42.

Each subdivision of local government will end up with its share of tax-like revenues on the basis of appropriate state acreage located within its boundaries. Counties will collect 30 per cent, townships will receive 30 per cent and school districts will get 40 per cent.

Beginning Dec. 1, 1975, these payments will increase eight cents per acre over the next four years under another provision of the new law.

Within the next few weeks, the DNR will supplement these tax payments by funding counties with nearly $2.5 million, covering state conservation lands throughout Michigan which were purchased after 1933.

Such subsequent payments will be scaled to prevailing local millage rates.

Pinney Bank donates $1,000 to library

The Pinney State Bank has donated $1,000 to Rawson Memorial Library, it was announced last week.

The donation was revealed by Librarian Mrs. Barbara Hutchinson.

Mrs. Hutchinson also announced that the library will be open Saturday mornings from 9-11:00 a.m. These expanded hours are designed to aid rural patrons and take effect immediately.

NEWS FROM District Court

Being an individual and using your own resources for creativity, self expression and "doing your own thing" to express that individuality defines part of the emphasis in the Personal Appearance 4-H Project.

Today, the program in 4-H Personal Appearance means much more than just constructing a garment to wear. It involves experiences concerning aspects to consider when purchasing and maintaining ready-to-wear garments as well as the home-sewn ones. Emphasis is placed on the basic elements and principles of design as related to personal appearance and the responsibilities of the consumer in the purchase and use of clothing. Also, the member can better understand himself and others through experiences gained in the 4-H Personal Appearance project.

The member can express their creative talents via the 4-H Personal Appearance project in accordance to his or her interest, abilities, skills, and values. Both boys and girls are involved in the personal appearance project.

Any youth interested in joining a 4-H club should contact a local club or contact the County 4-H Office, Civil Defense Center, Caro. Also, adults who would like to volunteer as project leaders are urged to contact the County 4-H Office.

Farmers push for advance warning on 1974 fuel supply

Michigan farmers want fair warning about what their fuel expectations will be for next year's harvest.

That's one of the major items included in a report to Gov. Milliken from a special task force on the future of agriculture. The report, filed this month by the task force, says that "it is apparent that measures will be taken on a national scale to meet the growing fuel shortage."

The task force urges Milliken to "encourage a careful long-range estimation of the amount of fuel which will be required to meet the nation's food requirements during the coming years."

If at all possible, the task force says, "farmers must be advised several months in advance what the fuel availability will be during growing and harvest seasons. The agricultural community must be able to plan production levels and purchase equipment, seed, fertilizer, fuel, etc. in advance of use. Informed planning and purchase capacities are critical to all types of farming."

Incorrect or inadequate information "will cause inadvertent and unintentional mismanagement, financial hardship and can endanger the population's food supply," the report says.

The task force also recommends increased resources for research in the conversion of animal waste to fuel, and that fertilizer priorities be studied and established and allotments be set immediately to allow the farmer time to plan.

A STEADYING INFLUENCE?

Could be the new Senate Democratic floor leader, Jerome Hart of Saginaw, will prove a steadying influence on his colleagues, who represent a wide, wide range of viewpoints and pet projects.

Hart, whose bachelor status was proclaimed for some time by a blue plastic "bachelor button" flower in his lapel, will take over the floor leader position this month as the Legislature reconvenes after the holiday recess. He was elected by the Senate Democrats to succeed Sen. Coleman Young, who is leaving his post to take on the mayor's job in Detroit.

A mild-mannered, nine-year veteran of the Senate, Hart

Snover couple set Pizza House opening

Edward and Janice Herron of rural Snover are the owners of a new restaurant, Beagio's Pizza House, slated to open Tuesday on East Main Street in Cass City.

The restaurant will be open every day and will be managed by Ms. Venedta Monte.

The Herrons are no strangers to the business. They started and later sold a pizza house in Sandusky and now operate a similar unit in Marlette.

In addition the family has a large farm operation. The Herrons own 200 acres in Sanilac county and work an additional 200 acres.

The couple has two children, Billy, 12, and Juanna, 9. Both are students at Marlette.

seldom succumbs to the rhetoric of floor debate. He's been described by one colleague as a "pretty savvy fellow (who) doesn't make anybody mad."

SIX YEARS-OR FOUR MORE

How about establishing a one-term presidency limited to six years--with a vote of confidence taken after three years?

That's one of the possibilities being considered by the U.S. Senate Select Committee on Presidential Campaign Activities. The committee, which met recently in California with constitutional scholars and former presidential aides, cited several possible government reforms. And a chief consultant to the committee, Arthur Miller, professor law at the National Law Center, says they will be reviewed and may be embodied in the committee report to Congress next year.

Other ideas put forth were: choosing a vice-president independently from the top executive office; and enabling a "recall" of a president who has lost public confidence.

Still others may sound familiar to Michigan folks who have been following Gov. Milliken's own proposals for election and campaign finance reform.

They include: mandating shorter campaigns; requiring full disclosure of political contributions and expenditures; and seeking free media time for all political broadcasts.

HELP FOR YOUNGSTERS

Michigan may have found a new tool for locating absent parents who are to help support dependent children.

The tool, a bill signed into law recently by Gov. Milliken, would require that birth certificates provide space for social security numbers of the child's mother and father.

The Departments of Public Health and Social Services seem optimistic about the long-range effects of the legislation.

MORE ABOUT FUEL

If you're planning to carry extra gasoline in your car during week ends or whenever, heed these words from the director of the Michigan State Police, Col. John R. Plants.

He says containers must be of metal, painted bright red and lettered "gasoline." A limit of six gallons may be carried in a passenger car, says Plants, who also is State Fire Marshal. If possible, he suggests, avoid carrying gas in the trunk of the car, however, because escaping vapors can easily ignite.

Albert McConnell services held

January 7

Funeral services for Albert McConnell, 87, a resident of Deford for 22 years, were held Jan. 7, at 1 p.m. at Little's Funeral Home, Rev. Dale Sherry of the Deford Community Church, officiated and burial was in Novesta cemetery.

Mr. McConnell died Jan. 5 at the Tuscola County Medical Care Facility where he had been a patient five years.

He was born Feb. 3, 1886 and came to Deford in 1946 from Kalamazoo. He never married and there are no survivors.

Senior citizen group grows in county

Participants in an extension lesson on Aging discovered there is a growing number of senior citizens in Tuscola county. Tuscola has about 9 per cent of its population in the over 65 age group.

Mrs. Ruth Tennant, of the Golden Card Club, discussed their school-sponsored club's weekly activities.

Mrs. George Roch of the American Association of Retired Persons club of Cass City, told of their club's organization. It is the only AARP chapter in the Upper Thumb area and meets monthly.

A documentary filmstrip showed both positive and negative aspects of growing older.

A positive attitude and creative and appropriate programming were deemed necessary to meet needs of older persons in the area, according to Extension Home Economist, Ann Ross.

Women's Council holds meet

The St. Paneratus Women's Council met Monday night, Jan. 7, at the church social hall.

Fr. Leo Gengler spoke to the group about the Lenten Education series that will rotate every other Sunday between three parish groups, Caro, Cass City-Gagetown and Vassar-Millington.

The group decided to purchase cookbooks and place mats as a fund raising project. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

Rotary seeks wider student program

By Jim Ketchum

The Rotary Student Exchange program in Cass City enters its third year and, according to Rotarian J. E. Courtney, of General Telephone, while it has been successful, not enough area residents know enough about it.

Courtney is presently working to generate community-wide interest in the program which brings high school students from all over the world to live and study in Cass City. Additionally, it sends local high school students into any number of varied nations, cultures and traditions.

"We feel it's such a good program that we're interested in promoting it more throughout the community," Courtney said this week. "I feel it's a very valuable program both ways—not only with the students who come here but by exposing our students to other countries as well."

Courtney said one of the problems faced in promoting student exchanges is that many persons think foreign students may stay only with Rotarian families. This, he emphasized, is not true.

"We want the community to understand that anyone is eligible to have a foreign student live with them," he said. "It is definitely not something limited to Rotarians."

Courtney said the club wants to shed the notion of exclusiveness. Even though the club does sponsor the program, anyone is welcome to contact Rotary for information, he added.

This misunderstanding, Courtney said, has probably led to the less-than-overwhelming support for the program this year. Presently, a Brazilian student is scheduled to come to Cass City for a year.

She has a home for the first and last four months of her stay in the village, but no place to stay for the second part of her year. This situation prompted Courtney and other Rotarians to try to engender support among the community at large.

Foreign students who come to the village stay for a year at three different homes. During each stay, Courtney explained, they become a part of the family, not a guest.

"If the lawn needs raking and the whole family is working on it, then the student is expected to chip in and help, too," he said. "This is how the student comes to learn about American life first-hand."

MECHANICS OF EXCHANGE

Courtney said the exchange process is a two-way street.

"We can accept any number of students without sending any away," he said. "But if we want to send any, then we must accept students in return. This all works on a one-to-one basis—for each student we accept, we can send one in return."

Each exchange is sponsored by one club and the student stays within the community during his year. This, Courtney said, does not exclude a family living out of town, for example.

He explained the cost of having a foreign student is nothing above what it would cost to feed and board another person in the home. Rotary furnishes the student with $20 per month in spending money.

The student must furnish his own airline fare to and from his host city and must provide his own clothing.

"Some of our club members are on their second and third student in Cass City," Courtney said.

He said while it is preferable that the student stay with families with high school students, this is not a requirement. Several area Rotarians without high schoolers have hosted exchange students as a part of the program.

COMMUNITY INVOLVEMENT

Another reason Courtney wants to get the entire community involved in the program is to broaden the perspective of the student and area residents as well.

"If a person doesn't think he can have a student live in for one reason or another, then he could invite the student over for dinner or an evening," Courtney said. "This gives the student a better look at the community and the community a better look at him."

He said the program is also not limited to students of Rotarian parents. Many students from non-Rotarian families have participated in the program over the years, he added.

"We're working to overcome this image of exclusiveness," Courtney said.

Courtney said Cass City offers a good opportunity for a foreign student because it is small enough for the student to handle.

exchange student in their home as either a responsibility or an opportunity.

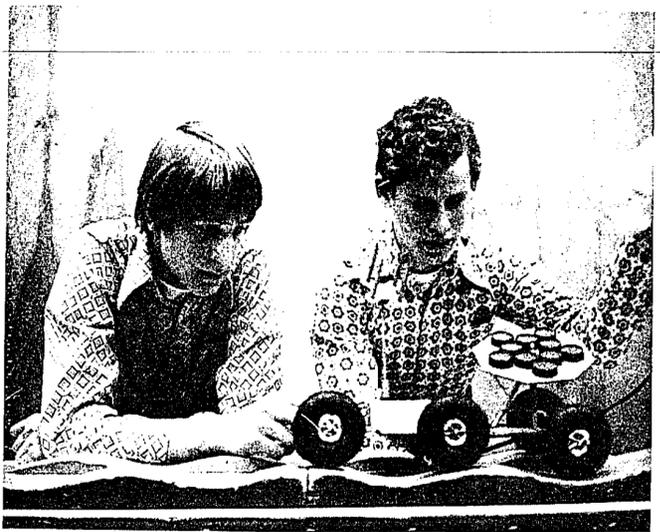

Similarly, he said, a Cass City student traveling to another country under the program will learn more than he or she would during a week or a month's trip.

"To me, that's the exciting part about it," he said.

"Anyone interested in hosting a foreign student should get in touch with me, either at work or at home," Courtney said.

RESPONSIBILITY OR OPPORTUNITY

Courtney said a person can look upon having a foreign Science rules today's world. Powerful nations harness technology to probe space and to create awesome weaponry which staggers the imagination.

In this age of missiles and megatons, we, more than ever, need Faith—to ward off thoughts of doom, to give us perspective, to reassure us that our lives can be full and complete even under the shadow of technology.

Faith, above all, means trust, a precious commodity in these uncertain times. And Emerson assures us that: "All I have seen teaches me to trust the Creator for all I have not seen."

We are investing millions to give you your dime's worth.

Talk is not cheap. Not to us at least. So that you can talk to anyone you want, whenever you want, we have to have enough operators, switchboards, lines, cables, poles, repairmen and other people and things to be ready to serve you every day of every year. Around the clock.

We won't bore you with all the figures on how much it costs to run a business this way because that's not the important point to you. What is important is that your phone is always available whenever you want it. Or need it. And we intend to spend whatever it takes to keep giving you your dime's worth.

Services held Monday for Maggie Loomis

Mrs. Maggie Rose Loomis, 90, died at Hills and Dales General Hospital Friday, Jan. 4, where she had been a patient three weeks. She had been in ill health the past two months.

Mrs. Loomis was born in Canada June 3, 1883, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Allen Collison.

She married Benjamin W. Loomis in Cass City April 5, 1900. Following their marriage, they lived in the Gagetown area.

Mr. Loomis died in 1935. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Ila Walker of Cass City and Mrs. Harry (Beatrice) Mousseau of Kinde; two sisters, Mrs. Martha Lyman of Sterling, N.Y., and Mrs. Ada Klump of Harbor Beach; 12 grandchildren; 26 great-grandchildren and five great-great-grandchildren.

One son, two brothers and two sisters preceded her in death.

Funeral services were conducted from Little's Funeral Home Monday, Jan. 7, with Rev. Kermit Phillips, pastor of the Cass City Church of the Nazarene, officiating.

Interment was in Elkland cemetery.

Tight gasoline supplies not worrying U.P. park owner Carl German—yet

The gasoline shortage isn't worrying Carl German, 2667 Warner Rd., Deford, too much yet. And, as long as rationing is not imposed, he thinks his business will get by without much trouble.

German and his wife own a share in a lakeshore park and campground two miles west of St. Ignace on Lake Michigan. They, along with other family members, operate the facility situated along 450 feet of lake frontage which provides campsites for tents as well as for the most sophisticated mobile and motor homes.

The Germans open the park May 1 and the facility closes down around Oct. 15. They look toward their fourth summer at the park hopefully, saying that business will probably slow down somewhat but not seriously as long as drivers can buy an unlimited amount of fuel.

The Germans talked about the situation as they sat in their warm living room where a roaring fire blazed in the fireplace they use to help heat their remodeled farmhouse located about four miles south of Cass City.

"It's too early right now to tell just how things will go," German said as he stirred the embers in the fireplace. "By Easter we usually have a pretty good idea of how things will go. We have a certain number of people who will reserve a lot a year ahead of time, for instance."

TRAVEL-RELATED BUSINESS

German readily admits the success of the park depends on customers who travel a long distance. Many use the park as a jumping-off point from which they visit attractions within a 50-mile radius.

"We get a lot of people driving over from Wisconsin," Mrs. German said. "Actually, Wisconsin is closer to the park than Detroit is. We also get a lot of Canadians who visit us. They prefer a private park like ours rather than a state park."

Last summer, a group of motorcyclists from New York stayed at the park and toured the surrounding area for a week.

Without a ready supply of gasoline, German said, business could suffer.

"I'm hoping there will be more gasoline by spring," he said. It seems like there would be because less oil will have to be made into fuel oil by then. And there's only just so much fuel oil these companies can store. I'm looking for an increase by spring."

German also looks for a substantial price increase as well.

"When gasoline hits 60 cents a gallon, then there will be lots of it for sale," he said.

German said these substantial price increases may hurt, but may also be a blessing in disguise.

"With less gasoline available, our customers will probably be staying longer, making the trip count," he said. Mrs. German agreed, saying expensive gas will add to the attractiveness of the park as a headquartering spot for attractions such as Mackinac Island, Tahquamenon Falls, Sault Ste. Marie and Drummond Island.

IF RATIONING COMES?

If rationing is imposed, German said with a sigh, "then we'll open up and hope for the best."

If gasoline is rationed, much of their clientele would be limited to retired persons who could save up gasoline allotments to make the trip. The average worker, Mrs. German said, couldn't do it.

"You never realized that oil had such a hold on the public until now," German added. "A lot of us couldn't get along without it."

German works in Marlette and drives to and from work each day. He said he has talked with several fuel dealers who tell him gasoline is available—though expensive—and they don't see strict rationing on the horizon.

"I don't really know whether or not to believe that there actually is an energy crisis or not," German said. "I still think the higher the price goes, the more gas there will be to buy."

Deputies probe Gagetown theft

Tuscola county sheriff's deputies investigated the theft of a diamond ring valued at $250 from a Gagetown residence Sunday.

The theft occurred at the home of David Abbe, 4809 South St. Abbe told investigating officers he and his wife left their residence at 6:30 p.m. and returned around 10:00 p.m. to discover the ring missing. It had been kept in a jewelry box in the bedroom.

Three juveniles were questioned regarding the theft. Their names were being withheld because of their juvenile status.

The case remains open pending further investigation.

KINGSTON BREAK-IN

State Police from the Sandusky post are continuing to investigate a breaking and entering of a Union 76 gas station in Kingston that occurred late Saturday night and which netted thieves $200 in cash.

Police said Tuesday two suspects were being questioned in connection with the theft, but no arrests have yet been made.

According to police, entry was gained by breaking a window on the north side of the building. The culprit then broke open a cash register and stole the money.

Short circuit blamed for car fire Wednesday

Fire did an estimated $200 damage to an auto belonging to John Hanson of Huntsville Trailer Court Wednesday night.

According to Elkland township fire officials, the blaze broke out when a trouble light on the car short-circuited, igniting wiring under the hood. Hanson reportedly told firemen he had been having trouble with the light for some time prior to the fire.

No one was injured in the blaze. The fire broke out around 1 p.m.

Hawks top Marlette, Vassar to even Thumb B loop record

Cass City's third game in a row against the Thumb B Conference second division teams is slated Friday when the Bad Axe Hatchets are carded at the high school gym.

The Hatchets are expected to fall before the Hawk attack in much the same way that Vassar did Tuesday night when Cass City flew over the Vulcans, 71-57.

After Friday's fracas, Cass City meets Sandusky for the second time and then faces potent Harbor Beach Tuesday at home.

The results of these two games should determine if the Hawks will be a genuine tourney threat in March.

For the first four minutes of the game Tuesday against Vassar, it looked as if neither team was going to miss.

The Vulcans made six of their first seven shots from the field and Cass City converted five of seven as Vassar took the lead, 12-10, in a torrid pace that everyone knew couldn't last.

It didn't. After the initial splurge both teams started to hit a more realistic total and Cass City's board strength and superior firepower started telling.

By the end of the first quarter it was 22-16.

With about five minutes left in the period the Hawks had pushed the margin to 34-18 and Coach Fred Hurlburt had his bench in for the rest of the second quarter. Vassar closed the gap and the score at the intermission was 38-26.

Although the Hawks were never seriously threatened after the initial period, the Vulcans refused to roll over and play dead and with plenty of hustle kept the score close most of the final two quarters.

So close that Hurlburt was unable to play his bench again until the final 59 seconds of the game.

At the three-quarter mark the score was 54-40 and the Vulcans once moved to within 10 points before Cass City pulled away again.

It was a game in which neither team was able to put it all together. There were mistakes galore on both sides.

As usual Cass City exhibited a balanced scoring attack. Dave Hillaker led with 18. Scott Hartel netted 17 while Nick Gibas and Jerry Toner were both in double figures with 13 and 12 points respectively.

There was no Junior Varsity game as Vassar has cancelled all but varsity basketball because of budget problems.

The usual preliminary game was replaced by a gymnastic exhibition.

MARLETTE GAME

It was the first game after the holidays and artistically it left much to be desired.

But it was a victory for the Cass City Red Hawks over the Marlette Red Raiders last Friday. The score was 70-37.

Cass City was playing with just an eight-man team as two members of the squad, Dave Eberline and Craig Helwig, were ill at home.

The Hawks moved into an early lead and there never was much doubt of the final outcome. The Red Raiders lacked the board strength and the talent to seriously challenge Cass City for the victory.

The winners played well in spurts in the first period and as a result forged in front 15-6 after the first 8 minutes.

The second quarter didn't look much like typical Thumb B Conference basketball. Turnovers were numerous, shooting erratic and ball handling sloppy.

Neither team scored much as Marlette posted a one-point advantage with 11 points to 10 for Cass City.

After the intermission, the Hawks settled down and started to play more like the squad it was expected to be this year.

With sharper passing, aggressive rebounding and better shooting the Hawks settled the issue. At the end of the period the team had burned the nets for 27 points while Marlette was scoring 10.

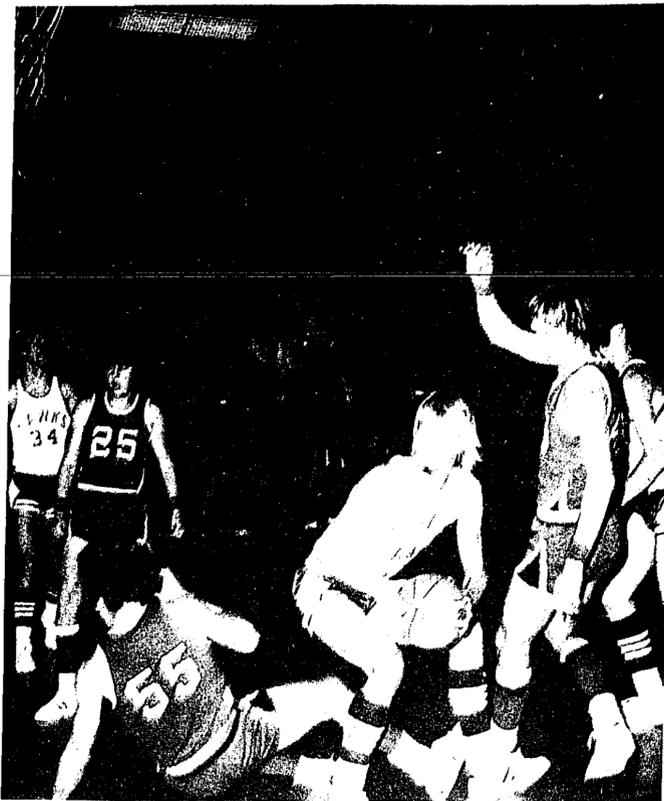

Everybody played in the last quarter as Cass City posted an 18-10 margin to keep the Raiders winless this season.

The scoring for Cass City was well divided with seven of the eight players dressed scoring.

Cass City hit 27 of 65 shots from the field for 42 per cent while Marlette converted 17 of 49 for 35 per cent. The figures from the foul line were: Marlette, 3 of 7 for 43 per cent, and Cass City, 16 of 22 for 73 per cent.

Nick Gibas scored 17 points and hauled down 12 rebounds to show the way. Scott Hartel scored 16 and Jerry Toner was also in double figures with 14. Others scoring were: Dave Hillaker, 9; Chuck Bliss, 9; Ken Lowe, 3; and Brad Goslin, 2.

Marlette scoring was divided among nine players, Four Raiders scored six, tops for the team.

NICK GIBAS was in heavy traffic after he snagged this rebound against Marlette. He scored a moment later on a short jumper.

JUNIOR VARSITY

The Hawk Junior Varsity bounced back into the victory column with a 59-38 decision over the Marlette JV's.

Funds from the drive go toward community services and civic projects in Elkland and Novesta townships.
