Traditional voting patterns remain as Sparling, Traxler win in primary

Tuscola County's traditional Republican sympathies showed little signs of change in Tuesday's special Congressional primary as they selected James M. Sparling Jr., former administrative aide to ex-Congressman James Harvey, as their candidate.

Sparling, acknowledged to have the inside track, bested three other challengers for the nod in what was described as "light" voting in which less than 20 per cent of the county's eligible voters trudged to the polls.

With all Tuscola County precincts counted at 10:30 p.m. Tuesday, unofficial results showed Sparling taking 1,722 votes. His nearest challenger, State Senator Robert Richardson, polled 337 votes, followed by 153 for State Workmen's Compensation Appeal Board head Michael Gillman and 45 for Otis Nelson, a late-comer into the race. Sparling smashed his opposition throughout the county, losing only two precincts, Fremont Township's first and Gilford Township.

In those two races, Richardson polled a combined total of 93 votes against Sparling's 17.

This was atypical, however, compared to the rest of the county.

In Elkland Township, Sparling polled 176 votes against a combined total of 25 for the three other Republicans in the race. Similarly in Novesta Township, Sparling polled 27 votes against eight for the three challengers.

DEMOCRATIC VOTE

On the Democratic side, State Representative J. Robert Traxler handily disposed of two opponents for that party's nomination. Traxler polled 899 Tuscola county votes, just over half the number given to Sparling.

Generally, Sparling outdistanced Traxler 2-1 in most precincts with the exceptions of Indianfields precinct three, where the Republican ran only four votes ahead of Traxler, 82-78, Kingston precinct one, where Sparling led 27-22, and Vassar Township where Traxler trailed Sparling 38-32.

In Vassar City precinct one, the two top vote getters tied at 22 each and in Kingston precinct two, Traxler bested Sparling by two votes, 28-26.

In winning the Democratic nod, Traxler defeated Robert Davis and John Grillo, both of Bay City.

A total of 3,353 persons cast ballots in Tuesday's polling out of a total eligible voter population of 22,275, based on voting in November of 1972.

At that time, 84 per cent of those eligible cast ballots, sending James Harvey back to Congress by nearly a 2-1 margin.

In that same election, President Richard Nixon swept the county by a 64 per cent margin over Democrat George McGovern.

When Traxler and Sparling square off in the run-off election scheduled for April 16, Democrats in the county will be looking for a better showing. Some observers, analyzing Tuesday's vote, believe a large number of Democrats crossed over and voted for Sparling, setting him up as Traxler's opponent.

Traxler entered the race as an easy favorite. Traxler has indicated he would most like to run against Sparling in the run-off, citing his connections with the administration. Sparling served for 10 weeks as an administration legislative aide last summer.

Judging from the totals, Watergate does not seem to have had an appreciable effect on voter turnout in the county, as Republicans out-pollied Democrats by about two-to-one.

DISTRICT VOTE

District-wide, Traxler polled 20,870 votes against 3,993 for his Democratic challengers. Sparling totaled 15,609 votes against 9,052 for his three opponents.

In Huron County, the story was pretty much the same. Unofficial results show Traxler with 1,147 votes, with Davis 175 and Grillo 70.

Sparling won the county's Republican vote 1,929 to Gillman's 668 and Richardson's 263.

In Bay County, unofficial results showed Gillman with 2,611 votes, besting winner Sparling who polled 2,490 votes, followed by Richardson's 1,226.

Traxler polled 10,546 votes in Bay County, traditionally a Democratic stronghold.

In Saginaw County, where most observers felt Richardson would make his strongest showing, Sparling outdistanced the state senator 6,966 to 3,581. Gillman polled 4,190.

Traxler received 6,708 votes, compared to Davis with 2,485 and Grillo with 1,196, in unofficial results.

In Sanilac County, Sparling polled 1,597 votes against a combined total of 455 for his Republican rivals. Democrat Traxler polled 534 votes against a combined total of 201 for his opponents.

In Lapeer County, Traxler polled 941 votes against 216 for his opponents, while Sparling took 446 votes against 427 for his Republican rivals.

In five townships of Arenac county, Traxler polled 78 votes against Sparling's 59.

Most observers see an interesting race developing in the four weeks before the general election. Traxler is expected to press hard on Watergate and Sparling's role as a Nixon aide last summer.

The last time the Democrats won the seat was in a special election in 1931 when Michael J. Hart, a bean dealer, upset Republicans. No Democrat has held the seat since those Depression days.

Deford woman injured Saturday

A Deford woman remains in fair condition in Hills and Dales General Hospital following a one-car mishap Saturday on Deckerville Road at the intersection of Englehart Road.

Maureen Jean Frederick, 36, of 1495 N. Kingston Rd., was seriously injured after the car she was driving east on Deckerville Road went out of control on slick pavement and slid 120 feet before going into the ditch.

The vehicle then slid on its side another 60 feet before hitting a cross ditch and flipping back on its wheels. The car then traveled another 45 feet before finally coming to rest in the ditch on the opposite side of the road.

The accident took place at 1:15 p.m.

Two Cass Cityans vie for million dollar prize

Spencers wait and hope

By Jim Ketchum

The idea of becoming a millionaire hasn't phased Jack Spencer of 4405 Woodland St. too much. As far as Mrs. Spencer is concerned, while she would like to become one, there are times when even the possibility gets nerve-racking.

"Sometimes that phone never stops ringing," she said as she sat beside her husband, whose Michigan Lottery ticket may bring him one million dollars—$50,000 a year for 20 years.

Spencer bought the ticket at Fort's store not long ago, one of the usual three or four he buys at a time. He's been playing the lottery since it began in November of 1972 and, in that time he has won four $25 prizes, while investing a total of $140.

"So far, they've been into me for $40," he laughed, leaning back on the brilliant pattern couch in the neat living room. "I've kept all my tickets I've ever bought—mostly as souvenirs."

Saturday, March 9, will always be a memorable day for Spencer. That's the day he learned that he, along with 119 other people in the state, could become a millionaire. The notice came in the mail.

"When I saw it, I couldn't believe it," he recalled. "I called the store to check to see if 815 was really the elimination number. Sure enough, it was. Also I wanted to be sure it was the right elimination drawing. I still can't believe it."

Spencer, who has lived in Cass City all his life, works as an operating engineer in

EDITOR'S NOTE - While it is unusual to have one person from any given area eligible for the million dollar Michigan lottery drawing, it is even more unusual to have two in the same drawing. Here is the story of how two Cass Cityans reacted to their chances.

construction in Bay City. One of the first things he plans to do if he goes all the way is to quit that job.

"If I kept on working, I'd just be paying it all out in taxes," Spencer observed. "No, I'd quit and just live off it. I don't plan to invest in anything—just live."

The 53-year-old Spencer said he is still a little numb about it all and at times it seems like such an impossibility that he doesn't even think about it.

"Even if I won, I understand that after taxes, I'd have about $32,000 a year and, by the time you take care of living expenses, that would leave about $10,000 or $15,000 to play with," he said. "And that's what I intend to do-play with it."

"I wouldn't want to make more with it."

Spencer has allowed himself to think about what else he might do with the grand prize if he should win, although he keeps trying to downplay the possibility, perhaps to keep his hopes from getting too high.

The big day is March 26, and the Spencers are doing their best to remain calm until the big moment approaches.

What are his plans? A trip to Colorado for one thing.

"I just love it out there," he said. He has a son living in Colorado whom he'd like to see again. He has called all four of his five children who are married and living away from home.

He also called his mother, Mrs. Anna McComb, who lives in Florida.

"I was really on cloud nine when I found this out," he beamed. "Now everyone who sees me says, you'll get the big one, Jack. Don't worry."

Spencer said he has also found out he has lots more friends now that he is potentially rich. This, however, doesn't seem to bother him.

He said he has never been superstitious, but does think he's led a rather lucky life.

"You have to have a little luck to raise five kids and be out of debt at this point in life," he said. "I've played a little cards in my life and I don't think they owe me anything. So you might say I've been lucky."

Spencer keeps reminding everyone, including himself, that it's only a possibility—that 119 other people have as much chance at the big prize as he does. But he agrees that it's more of a chance than practically anybody else in Cass City.

Spencer is guaranteed at least $1,000 for his trouble when he drives to Wyandotte for the elimination drawing Tuesday. And, he is prepared for this eventuality, too.

"If I get the thousand," he said, "most of it will go into repairs on the house."

If he does win, chances are good that the house will go on the market, in favor of a small farm, one dream Spencer

Although she's starting to calm down a little, just the thought of being at the threshold of winning a million dollars gets Mrs. F.T. Siradakis excited.

Mrs. Siradakis, the former Beverly Harbec of rural Cass City, still has a difficult time realizing that she has one chance in 120 of walking away with the grand prize in Michigan's lottery. The big day in her life is March 26 in Wyandotte and everything she says and does these days revolves around the upcoming event.

Mrs. Siradakis, who resides with her husband, a truck salesman, in Bay City, excitedly explained how fate has brought her to this point in life during a visit to her parents' farm on Gilbert Road Saturday.

"It was the craziest thing," she said, smiling broadly and brushing her long, blonde hair from her face. "I don't normally buy lottery tickets because I've never won anything. Oh, I may have bought 15 or so since the thing started, but I never won anything with them."

The 26-year-old Mrs. Siradakis, who works at city hall in Bay City, explained she bought the ticket at a grocery store check-out lane.

"The total came up $11.11, and the clerk told me that it was a lucky number—a full house," she recalled. "She told me I should buy a lottery ticket. Well, I'm not superstitious or anything, but I thought why not. So I bought one."

As it turned out, that one ticket proved to be a $25 winner. Then came the day about three weeks later when even bigger news came.

Her number—815—which she received on the check stub, placed her in contention for the grand prize. That's when the excitement really opened up.

"I called my husband and asked him to check out the number to be sure it was right," she remembered. "I told him don't tell me it's 815. He checked and told me it was. All I said was My God!"

She became so excited at one point that she called her doctor, asking for something to calm her down. She was told not to worry—that this was a common reaction and that it would eventually wear off.

Since that time, she said, her chances of winning seem to be the only topic of discussion at work. Co-workers call her such names as "monies," "millions" and "moneybags."

"I remember the first night after we found out, we couldn't eat a thing, so we drank a little wine to celebrate," she said.

The excitement has also filtered to the Harbec home. Mrs. Harbec bought a ticket Saturday and, in the excitement of hearing about her daughter's possible fortune, absent-mindedly put the cellophane tape in the refrigerator.

What will Mrs. Siradakis do if her luck holds out and she wins in Wyandotte? "I'll probably scream for my husband," she laughed. "I don't know. It's hard to say."

As far as plans for the money, one dream which might be fulfilled is a farm where she and her husband could raise horses.

"We both love the outdoors and animals," she said. "We were raised in the country and always wanted to go back."

Another dream is a trip to her husband's native Greece. One thing each might not do would be quit their jobs.

"I'd like to maintain as much of our normal life style as possible," she said. "I enjoy working very much and I would hate to give up the things I enjoy doing now because of the money."

She said, however, that she isn't really counting on the big prize. With 119 others in the running, she said she would be happy with the minimum $1,000 prize.

"Whatever we win, we want to use it wisely," she commented. "If we get enough, we'd like to pay off our house or maybe invest in something. What I'd really like to do is repay my family for all they've done for me in my life. That means a lot."

What's been her husband's reaction to all this?

"I'm just happy for her," he said. "It'll be exciting just to be down there and to be a part of it."

guess this is what happened. I just can't understand it."

From this standpoint, she views the money as a mixed blessing. Sacrificing her way of life isn't in the cards for her.

"We've been married three years and it's still like I'm on my honeymoon," she observed. "I wouldn't want the money to change it in any way at all."

Whether she wins big or small Tuesday in Wyandotte, Beverly Siradakis considers herself a lucky person.

"I've got a wonderful husband, who I consider a prize any day, and a great family,"

Rabbit tracks

By John Haire

(And anyone else he can get to help)

Just how good is this year's Cass City basketball team? Depends on whom you ask.

Most of the recent "oldtimers" figure that the team isn't all that good, not up to the standards of the fine teams of past years.

It's one man's opinion that this year's team is better than the others.

Previous teams were better in relation to the teams they played at the time. More dominant.

But basketball today is better, much better than it was 20 years ago. The kids are bigger, faster and more skilled today than they were then.

Obviously it's a case that can never be proved. Fred Leeson was probably right when he observed that it's impossible to compare the two eras.

Still, it's fun to try.

Okay, Jim Jezewski, we'll explain it again. When you need the police, call the police, not the fire department. Jezewski, Elkland's assistant fire chief, says that at 2:30 a.m. Thursday firemen were awakened when someone called to report a breaking and entering. Two hours earlier a false alarm was turned in.

Recall if you will that firemen work as volunteers and get virtually nothing for providing protection to everyone. A little thoughtfulness will go a long ways here.

Funny about this gas shortage business. You hear about it, but it never really comes. At Myrtle Beach, South Carolina, the gas situation is about the same as it is here, I discovered during a long week-end visit. Not normal, but not difficult either.

Now persons returning from Florida vacations tell me the same story.

Which prompts the same reaction as always. Is it all a big rip off to raise the price of gas?

Really, it takes only a second to dial seven digits on the phone rather than six. I know it, you know it, too.

Why is it then that I get a perverse pleasure out of dialing the prefix 22 instead of the normal 872 when I want a local number?

I've thought about this frequently and the best reason I can think of is that it's to lash out at the big, impersonal phone company that does everything by the numbers.

A last hurrah for the days when "central" was queen and the phone was more than just another way of communication between persons.

Circulation hits all-time high at library

The annual meeting of the Rawson Memorial Library Board was held Wednesday, March 6. Librarian Barbara Hutchinson reported circulation was at an all time high last year with 29,501 books and magazines circulated and 198 new patrons filling out registration cards.

Twelve hundred books were added to the collection last year. Forty-nine volumes were purchased with memorial money and the purchase of 211 youth and children's books was made possible by an $800 grant from the Community Chest. Included in the total are 400 books that were given to the library.

The library is currently receiving 41 magazines and three newspapers. About 180 records are available for circulation.

A gift of $1,000 given by Walbro Corporation last year has been earmarked for the purchase of books to build up the research collection of the library this year.

A number of new books on philosophy, psychology and sociology have been added recently. A few of the titles are "The Story of Philosophy," "Transcendental Meditation," "Death as a Fact of Life," "Wednesday's Children; a Study of Child Neglect and Abuse," "The B.S. Factor; the Theory and Technique of Faking it in America," "Voodoo, Devils, and the New Invisible World," "Capital Punishment," "Suicide," and "The Energy Crisis."

New novels are "The Snare of the Hunter" by Helen MacInnes, "Jaws" by Peter Benchley, "Burr" by Gore Vidal, "The Goss Women" by R. V. Cassill, "Elizabeth and Catherine" by Robert Coughlan, and "Dummy" by Ernest Tidyman.

Also new are "The Official Bottle Price List" by Ralph Kovel, "Fondue and Table Top Cookery," and "The Complete Book of Mexican Cooking." "The Wisdom of Ethel Percy Andrus" was given to the library by the American Association of Retired Persons instead of the Association of Retired Teachers as was formerly reported.

"If It Fitz . . ."

We the (white) people

BY JIM FITZGERALD

Valentine's Day is for love, right? But get a load of Betty Turner. She bought 34 valentines and she's mad because there were black faces on 4 of them.

She may choke to death on a watermelon seed.

She wrote a letter to the Oxford newspaper. "I purchased 2 boxes of valentines from the dime store in town," she said. "When I got them home I saw that they were integrated. . . . They were mislabeled. The boxes should have indicated mixed cards. I don't believe in integration and I don't want my kids to mix races. . . . I would advise all mothers to take their cards back to the store so that the manufacturer and the stores will be aware of the fact we the people will not stand for this type of thing."

Yeah.

I like that phrase "we the people." That used to be the name of a radio show starring Gabriel Heatter (hello there, oldtimers). He began each show saying "There's good news tonight. . . ." That was when I was a little kid and a big dummy. I thought most news really was good. I didn't know membership in "we the people" was restricted to snotty whites whose idea of brotherhood was laughing at "Amos and Andy" and buying Pepsodent toothpaste.

I didn't wise up until I was drafted to fight for democracy in a segregated army. It was in Kentucky that I saw my first "white only" drinking fountain. I thought it was some sort of vanilla water and I asked if they had a strawberry fountain. From then on, the most memorable part of my military training was learning that "niggers" were an inferior animal good for nothing more than driving trucks and sweeping floors.

Of course, that was 30 years ago and things are much better today. Sure they are. The law took down the "white only" signs and George Wallace stopped blocking the school door.

Some wild-eyed liberal has even integrated valentines, for lord's sake! You want your little girl to get a valentine with a picture of Little Black Sambo playing cupid? She starts reading that stuff and she'll have a half-half baby before she's 15 years old.

My first inclination is to laugh at someone like Mrs. Turner. She can't be for real, can she? But the same week I read about a Sterling Heights developer named Joe Trever. He wants to build a shopping plaza but his property is zoned residential. So he erected a big sign saying the zoning better be changed or he'll build a biracial village. "Listen, they're going to have niggers in here if I can't get my plaza," Trever shouted at a reporter.

The reporter interviewed several Sterling Heights residents and got some more loving comments. Such as: "We sure don't want blacks in here. The people moved out here on purpose to get away from them." Even the mayor, in his best plantation-owner manner, said "We certainly don't want Sterling Heights to become another Detroit."

There are a lot of Mrs. Turners. You can remove "white only" signs from walls but you can't yank them out of closed minds. So I can't laugh.

The pontificators keep saying our children are the hope of the future. But what chance do the kids have when their mothers use Valentine's Day to teach them idiotic bigotry (excuse the redundancy)?

Onward and upward? Phooey.

FROM THE Editor's Corner

Porno signs have moved from the bathroom to the street.

I just know that when the first one arrives in the Thumb it will be hailed as a natural adjunct to the streaker craze that grips the country.

It will be by those who regard streaking as not one more way for the teen set to jolt the establishment but as a symptom of moral decay.

From what I read, about half of us regard streaking this way and the other half subscribe to the view that I hold: streaking is an attention device, not a moral issue.

There's a superficial resemblance between the new badges I saw last week while plane hopping to South Carolina and streaking, but it ends there for me.

You can laugh a little at the streakers but the obscene signs are . . . well, dirty signs.

One uses a well known four letter sex word and says, "— you. He's asking for it and no doubt he'll get it, too. Good. Meanwhile, he parades the badge for all to see. (I couldn't help but wonder if the airline people were afraid to kick him off or challenge his right to wear it.)

The second I spotted takes a phrase kicked around for years in men's locker rooms into the public view. I can't repeat it, but it's the most explicit phrase you can imagine concerning sex and a woman's anatomy.

I'm embarrassed for everyone in view by these signs and the poor taste it takes to wear them.

Still, they don't bother me as much as those that ask irrelevant questions as irrefutable truths. An oldtimer is "if you're so smart why aren't you rich?" As if being smart and being rich were synonymous. You don't hear this one much anymore because a good many Americans don't give a damn about being rich and most everybody realizes that brains have little relationship with making money.

I read one on the back of a car that probably drew as many agreeing nods of the head as the brains-money one did when it first appeared. This one reads: "If you hate cops the next time you need help, call a hippie."

Signs like this really turn me off. Right away it's assuming that Americans must hate cops if they like hippies. If you nodded when you read it, your prejudice is showing.

You can like and respect policemen and not like a policeman. You can like a hippie and not subscribe to the hippie cult.

We'd be in much better shape if all the radicals wearing "It's America . . . love it or leave it," would substitute one reading "It's America . . . let's help make it better."

A sign like that I can understand.

Spencers wait for big day

cer has.

"I think I'd like a little land someplace in this area where I could raise some animals," he said. "I love animals—always have. It would give me a place to fool around with them and just enjoy life."

He said he probably wouldn't move away. "This is home and I just couldn't make the break from here," he said.

He doubts he'd do much traveling, other than to Colorado. He also says he thinks he can withstand the temptation instant wealth brings for becoming greedy.

What does Mrs. Spencer think of all this. Frankly, it's getting on her nerves, she said.

"Sometimes I get a little disgusted with it all," she observed. "What with the phone ringing so much and all. But I do hope he wins. It would be nice."

For now, it's a matter of counting down the days until the big moment. The Spencers are scheduled to check in at 4:10 p.m., and then will move to a briefing room.

Shortly before 6:00 p.m., Spencer, his wife, and the 119 other contestants will be led to the main drawing room, where lady luck will take over for keeps.

Spencer can win no less than $1,000. Other prizes range from $5,000, through $100,000 and $500,000. Each winner will be presented with an initial check at the drawing.

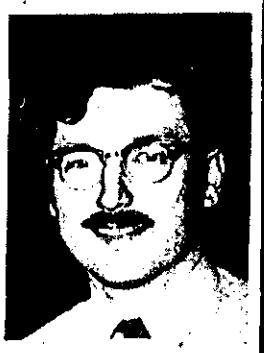

Those with subsequent checks will receive them once a year on the anniversary of the drawing.

As far as Jack Spencer is concerned, he'd like to receive 19 more of those checks in the mail to match the one he hopes to receive next Tuesday --$50,000.

KETCHUM'S KNAPSACK

I'm a train

By Jim Ketchum

There is a new popular song that carries the refrain "I'm a train, I'm a train, I'm a choo-choo train... come and see me before I'm gone forever."

From recent developments, it looks as if there may be a heck of a lot more truth than poetry in that little ditty. All the major rail lines in the country are beating a path to Congress, desperately trying to unload less-than-profitable trackage on a wholesale basis.

One railroad in Michigan wants to take 37 per cent of its mileage out of service, leaving those communities affected high and dry for economical transportation. This mad dash to unload property and to give the rights-of-way, depots, grade crossings and the like back to the Indians (who I doubt very much would take them) looks strangely like a neat way for a few companies and executives to make a killing and get away with the cookies before mother public can catch them in the act.

During the 1932 presidential campaign, Herbert Hoover charged that, if Franklin D. Roosevelt were elected, "grass would grow in the streets of America."

Well, FDR made it and grass didn't sprout in the thoroughfares. Unfortunately, amidst the administration of Richard Nixon, grass may end up growing in great, green waves in the railroad rights-of-way, depot yards and roundhouses in many parts of the nation.

I'll be sad for me to see them go. I have never ridden on a train and I guess I never will. That possibility gets more and more remote every day.

The closest I ever came to a passenger train was the old Grand Trunk depot in downtown Lansing, just off Washington Avenue. Although it wasn't that many years ago, it saddens me to think that probably never again will trains use that magnificent old building.

It was the day before Thanksgiving, I think. I was a naive college sophomore with more idealism and romanticism than brains going for me and I had become acquainted with a certain person of the opposite sex that year.

Our relationship had grown and she asked me to take her to the train station so she could go home for the holiday.

Anyhow, the old train station added what I thought at the time was a terribly romantic element for us. It was a cold, gray day with a wind that whipped through the yard, chilling us to the bone.

I don't know why it is, but train yards are always colder than anywhere else when a stiff wind is blowing.

I remember escorting her to the steps where the porter took her hand and showed her to a seat. I stood in the wind, watching all this, thinking how much like Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn we were. As the train started up, I gallantly ran beside the moving car, waving to her, my hair flapping in the breeze.

It went terrifically until I slipped and fell on the cinders, giving myself a nasty gash on the arm. But it was a gallant gash.

The next year, again not unlike Tracy and Hepburn, we parted at the same train station, our relationship dead as those rail lines up for scrapping.

With the demise of the railroads, how could anyone be that gallant at an airport. Could Spencer Tracy race beside a 747-jet, waving goodbye to Katharine Hepburn?

Not unless he wanted to get blasted with exhaust or end up being arrested as a hijacker.

No, the good old days are gone, derailed as those lines up for abandonment.

I'm a train, I'm a train, I'm a choo-choo train... come and see me before I'm gone forever.

Police probe Erla break-in Cass City Police investigated a breaking and entering at Erla's Food Center Sunday after back windows in the building were discovered broken that night.

According to police reports, entry was gained by breaking two west windows at the rear of the store. The culprits then reached inside and unlocked the windows, gaining entrance.

Once inside, the culprits went through filing cabinets and then tried to enter the main part of the store, setting off the burglar alarm. Police theorized the intruders left by the rear windows.

No pry marks were found on anything inside and nothing was found taken.

Police believe the culprits were in the building while it was being searched by authorities, since employees found several lights turned off when they arrived for work Monday morning.

No suspects have been apprehended.

Thieves' broke into the George Hawley residence at 4665 Seeley Rd., Gagetown, Monday and stole a set of Michigan license plates and a car battery.

Tuscola County Sheriff's deputies reported that Hawley had been at his father's home that morning when he heard a dog barking at his home. After some 15 minutes, he became suspicious and returned to his house to discover the break-in.

Entrance was gained by prying a lock and hasp on the front door. No other items were reportedly missing. The theft was reported around noon.

Tuscola County Sheriff's deputies continue to investigate the apparent starvation deaths of several horses on a farm located at the intersection of Tomlinson and Jacob Roads in Ellington township.

Sheriff's Deputy Sgt. Larry Walker discovered a total of seven dead animals in the barn and in a wooded area south of the buildings.

Three horses, still living, were found in the barn, although they appeared very thin, according to Walker.

One of the animals was found in the barn under loose hay. Walker said tractor tracks led into a wooded area 300 feet south of the barn.

No charges have been filed in the case, reported Friday.

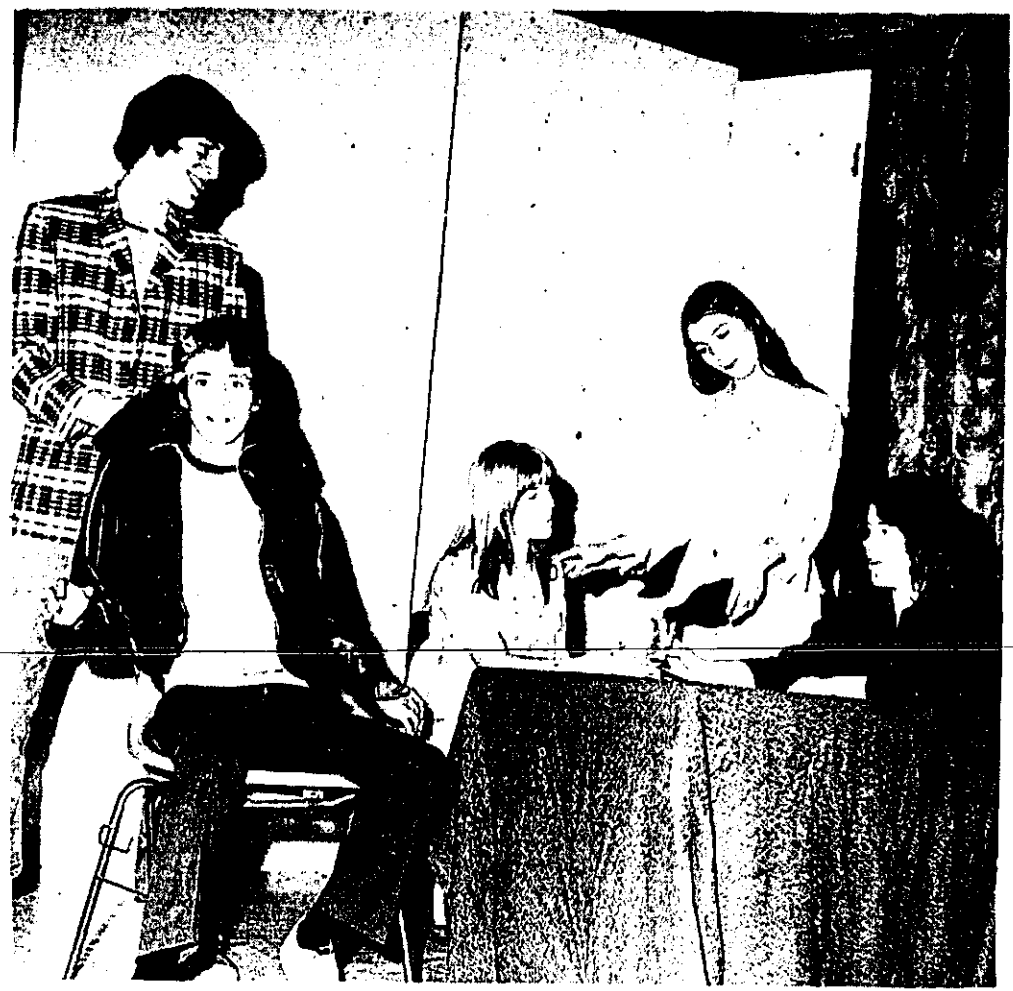

Caro Drive-in to re-open for season

The Caro Drive-In Theatre re-opens Friday, Mar. 22, when it will be beginning its 24th season.

According to Rick Ashmun, manager, all of the top hits will be carded during the summer. Big hits coming include, "The Sting," "Serpico," "Blazing Saddles" and "Lucky Luciano".

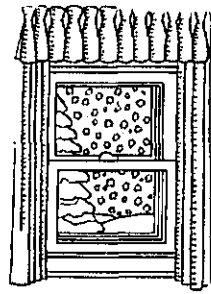

The re-opening program will feature two color shows, "Summertime Killer" and "C.C. and Company". As always, children are admitted free when with parents in cars.

More than 2,400 research projects are underway at Michigan State University.

REHEARSALS CONTINUE FOR the Cass City High School production of "Arsenic and Old Lace", scheduled for March 29-30 at 8:00 p.m. at the high school. Shown going over a scene here are (from the left) Bruce Tuckey, Tom Nicol, Donna Francis, Kelly Gee and Cara Prieskorn.

Storm windows and doors conserve natural gas

LOSS OF HEAT THROUGH WINDOWS AND DOORS CAN BE A MAJOR FACTOR IN HIGHER CONSUMPTION OF NATURAL GAS AND RELATED COSTS OF HEATING A HOME OR BUILDING. HERE ARE A FEW SUGGESTIONS THAT WILL HELP CORRECT THE PROBLEM:

- CAULK ANY CRACKS AROUND WINDOWS AND DOORS.
- CHECK ALL SILLS FOR POSSIBLE AIR LEAKS UNDER THEM AND/OR INSTALL WEATHER STRIPPING.
- PULL DOWN THE WINDOW SHADES . . . CLOSE BLINDS AND DRAPERIES AT NIGHT.
- INSTALL STORM WINDOWS AND DOORS OR COVER WITH CLEAR PLASTIC.
- KEEP ALL DOORS AND WINDOWS CLOSED WHEN NOT IN USE . . . SAY "GOOD-BYE" TO GUESTS BEFORE YOU OPEN THE DOOR.
- MAKE SURE YOUR THERMOSTATS ARE LOCATED AWAY FROM WINDOW AND DOOR AREAS.

THESE SUGGESTIONS WILL HELP CONSERVE NATURAL GAS AND MONEY, TOO.

Tailor grass and broadleaf control to your needs with a labeled Lasso tank mix.

Lasso plus atrazine tank mix, applied preemergence, controls annual grasses and other weeds before they come up. Including giant, yellow and green foxtail, fall panicum, pigweed, common ragweed, lambsquarters and many more. It even reduces competition from buttonweed.

And you minimize carryover possibilities. Because Lasso-by itself... leaves no carryover, and you use less atrazine in the tank mix.

Lasso plus Bladex* tank mix leaves no carryover to limit your rotation options. It controls fall panicum, giant and many other foxtails, smartweed, pigweed, common ragweed, lambsquarters and other grasses plus broadleaves. It also reduces competition from buttonweed and other hard-to-control weeds.

Land planning, English style

There are 57 million Englishmen crowded on an island roughly the size of Virginia. They still manage to raise approximately one-half of their food supply.

These two facts dramatize the motivation behind British efficiency in planning, land use and development. In plain fact, the British are not necessarily smarter than we are: it's just that their problems have become crises sooner than ours. Americans still have an opportunity to correct faults of the past and, perhaps, learn something from the English.

How the British do it: English planning differs from American planning on the following points:

1. The development rights to property are not owned by the individual property owner, but belong to the public at large.
2. Every square inch of England is required to be under a plan that is developed after citizen participation and in practice allows very few deviations from the official map that is published for every county in England.

3. The national government (in the United States, read state government) is the final decision maker on all planning matters.

4. The courts are not involved in the planning process in Britain. The only appeal to courts is on questions of procedure, public hearings and similar matters, not on the substance of the planning decisions.

5. Property taxes in England are really a variant of income taxes in that the value of land is calculated as capitalized rental value less maintenance. If the property is vacant, it is not taxed.

6. All local planning is completely under the control of locally elected county officials.

7. No land is taxed in Britain. This enables farmers to continue farming in areas where economics would make it prohibitive in the United States.

8. Public participation in the planning process is mandatory and in England they are well developed along a path which we know in the United States now as participatory democracy.

9. The English have a positive passion for preserving small family-size farms (sixty acres to 150 acres). The fact that 57 million Englishmen live on a piece of land equivalent to the State of Virginia, and are still able to raise half of their food, is a tribute to the success of the program.

The United States has begun to develop in the British tradition in the planning area. I am of the strong opinion that - like it or not - we have to move further in the direction of our British cousins.

AROUND THE FARM

Poultry producers

meet at MSU

By Don Keblor

Finalizing their winter program, Tuscola and Huron county Poultry Producers traveled to Michigan State University March 7.

During their visit, they visited the Veterinary Clinic, Diagnostic Laboratories and the Poultry Research Station.

Following a fine evening dinner at the University Club, Dr. Gordon Guyer, Extension Director, welcomed the producers, and staff members explained their research responsibilities. Representative Loren Armbruster and Senator Alvin DeGrow spoke.

Among the many programs included in the Poultry Department's research responsibilities is the development of new strains of mink and the study of game birds. For example, a major breakthrough in a system of breeding and raising large numbers of pheasants is now economically feasible.

Cooperating with the Department of Natural Resources, it is now possible to produce sufficient pheasants to allow a year around hunting season on these birds. Both sexes will be legal game.

While I am on the subject, a great number of requests have come in regarding the raising and care of the home poultry flock. These are requests for flocks of under 100 birds. Some of the requests are for laying hens, some for utility hens for both laying and meat and some for meat only.

The requisite for housing and managing small poultry flocks such as these brought into vogue resource information virtually abandoned twenty years ago. Much of the information is out of print. However, I guess we were lucky because among our poultry files was much good, usable material printed just for this need and published over twenty years ago.

Last fall I wrote about a field of wheat that was planted after beans. The field was fertilized, disced and the wheat broadcast. I mentioned the wheat growing over the old bean rows was much thicker and more vigorous than that growing between the rows. The other day I learned the opposite to be the case. What really happened was the loose soil from the filled up bean rows filled in the depressional areas between the rows making a finer seed bed.

I'm anticipating a large attendance at the Lawn, Trees and Shrubbery seminars at the Cass City High School.

Easy lawn care topics, which were to have been presented March 21 have been cancelled due to Cass City High School's quarter-final basketball game. The care of trees and shrubs will be discussed March 28. Everyone interested in these topics can attend these free evening sessions from 7:30 to 9:30 and hear Michigan State University Specialists present their topics.

The postponed seminar is rescheduled for April 11 at 7:30 p.m.

Also, don't forget the evening Home Vegetable Garden program scheduled for April 4, at Caro High School. Here again, all vegetable garden enthusiasts can attend this free program from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Democrats busy planning run for governorship

With the election yet months in the future, Democrats vying for their party's nomination for governor are already hard at work.

Former State Sen. Sander Levin of the Detroit area recently disclosed his income tax returns from 1964—the year he first entered state politics—through 1972. He also listed his net worth as of the end of last year at $95,000.

Levin, who lost a close race to Gov. William Milliken in 1970, said that his visits around the state in the past few months have shown a real lack of trust in public officials. "The people want reform," Levin says, "and it must begin with politicians themselves."

State Rep. Bobby Crim of Davison, who announced he will not be a contender in the Democratic tangle, is still introducing legislation bound to be popular with the electorate. Crim just couldn't raise funds needed to conduct a campaign.

One of his proposals attempts to control unfair, unethical and deceptive business practices and unfair forms of competition in business. The House passed the bill—which Crim calls "landmark consumer protection legislation." It now faces an uncertain future in the Senate.

Crim also is sponsoring a bill to create a state mobile home commission, to establish and enforce a mobile home code.

That code would cover such areas as the design, manufacture and warranty of mobile homes and accessories; and the licensing and regulation of mobile home retail dealers and installers and repairmen.

Gov. Milliken, an announced candidate for re-election, seems to be gaining points with some of the voters in Michigan. So say the results of a recent poll-sponsored by the Republicans.

The private poll, taken from mid-November to early December of last year, shows that 73 per cent of those interviewed approved of the way Milliken is running state government.

The results show a 9 per cent increase in the approval rating over a May poll.

The GOP poll involved some 800 personal interviews: 51 per cent registered voters outstate and 49 per cent Detroit-area voters.

One particularly interesting finding of the poll, it's reported, is that 89 per cent of those interviewed said Watergate would NOT affect their vote.

MORE ABOUT SCHOOLS

If you're going to change the laws about public employees, don't just change them for teachers, says Barry Brown, the chairman of the Michigan Department of Labor.

Brown's comment came in reaction to several proposals now before the Legislature, aimed at exempting teachers from no-strike provisions of current public employee statutes.

Instead of exempting teachers from certain sections of the law, Brown suggests increasing the powers and effectiveness of both the state fact-finders and the state mediators.

It's important that the public be allowed to play "a dominant role" in bringing the parties to a successful conclusion of their bargaining, he declares. That could be accomplished, he says, by having the fact-finder gather pertinent information from the parties in a teacher dispute and present it to the public "in a prompt and objective fashion." Then, the Labor Director figures, "the school district's citizens ought to be able to help the school board resist unreasonable demands and help the school teacher achieve reasonable requests."

ABOUT MAIDEN NAMES

The protest from some women about not being able to use their maiden and married names on drivers' licenses has resulted in a survey conducted by the office of Secretary of State Richard Austin.

His department has sent some 5,000 questionnaires to a random sample of Michigan's women drivers, asking if they would change their names on their licenses if possible.

Results of the survey aren't expected to be known for some weeks.

Michigan State University offers 165 diverse undergraduate programs of study.

BETTER HEALTH

Tips on visiting a mental patient

BY DR. WALTER C. ALVAREZ and DR. WILLIAM J. WELCH

Recently I read an excellent autobiography, "Journey Out of Nowhere," (Word Books, Waco, Texas, 76703), by Nancy Smith. At the age of 32, this able and public-spirited woman suddenly went into a severe and crippling depression that sent her temporarily to a mental hospital. At the time she was happily married, the mother of four fine children, and very active in church and community organizations — a "pillar of the community," and at first glance, the most unlikely sort of person to explode suddenly into a screaming psychosis.

In her book she relates her life in the mental hospital and the hard struggle to get well and rejoin her family and again take a place in her community. She has succeeded very well, and her book will be of interest to anyone who has a loved one with mental problems.

I was particularly interested in a number of good suggestions Mrs. Smith made to people who visit a friend or loved one in a mental hospital. Her suggestions come from her own experience and from the complaints of other mental patients as they talked with her after visiting hours.

For example, Mrs. Smith says that the visitor must remember that he is well and the patient is sick; he should remain calm and soft-spoken, even if the patient is illogical or argumentative. It is a good idea to let the patient decide if he wants to discuss his illness, and if so, the visitor should neither take sides with him against his family or doctor, disagree with his statements, or give him advice this doctor can do that.

The best thing to do is to allow him to state his feelings as you listen attentively, and then tactfully lead him into a calmer topic of conversation. Do not dismiss him with the casual remark, "I understand," or become angry or overly-sympathetic with him, because this will only cause him to become more emotional.

Some people are not sure what to talk about with a mentally upset person. It is best to ask only questions that can be answered by fact — questions like "What did you eat for lunch?" or "Do you watch television?" Avoid questions that require an opinion.

After you have asked a question, sit quietly as you wait for the patient's answer. It may take him a while to formulate his answer, because his thinking and ability to express himself have been slowed down. Sometimes it is so difficult to get his thoughts together that he just gives up trying to answer. If after a reasonable length of time he has not answered, then simply go on to another subject.

Try to stay calm, relaxed, and unhurried during the visit. Sometimes a visitor betrays his anxiety and nervousness by moving his hands around a lot, and this can upset a patient.

The visitor should expect and be prepared for outbursts of emotion. The patient may suddenly burst into tears or anger, perhaps in response to a word, a gesture, or simply his own thoughts. He may become abusive or make accusations. If this happens, Mrs. Smith says that the visitor must try not to become unduly upset himself, or blame himself and try to apologize, and he should not try to find out what is wrong. The patient may not know himself, and continued questioning will only add to his frustration.

The visitor should forget accusations made by the patient; he won't remember them when he is well. Also, there is no sense trying to defend yourself against the accusations, because they are coming from a sick and illogical mind.

Visits should be short and pleasant, and the person should leave before the patient becomes tired. Visiting is better done alone. When several people go, they tend to talk among themselves, leaving the patient out of things. Often he becomes confused because he cannot keep up with the rapid change of topics, and as his confusion increases, the sounds of voices will tend to become louder inside his head, and he will withdraw into himself.

Do not promise to visit him again unless you mean it; he will count on it and then feel greatly disappointed if you don't come.

Another good idea is to take a small gift along — a flower in a bud vase, a small piece of jewelry or some cookies — which will remind the patient later of the visit.

If you visit frequently, point out specific signs of improvement and speak of them — for example, "I'm glad to see you are reading again." As you see him taking more interest in the world around him, and after obtaining his doctor's permission, ask him if he would like to go for a drive or see a movie. But if he says no, accept his decision. He knows better than you do the limits of his ability to cope with the outside world.

Finally, says Mrs. Smith, when the patient gets out of the hospital, welcome him back as if he were a person recovering from an operation, and then treat him normally. Make an effort to believe that his emotional scars are healing.

Mrs. Smith concludes, "The best and healthiest attitude to adopt when mental illness strikes someone you love is: Be yourself. Be concerned. But be there."

Don't blame school for student failure

March 18, 1974

Letter to the Editor:

After last week's Chronicle account of Evergreen Elementary reported at the school board meeting something should and will be started concerning our school.

To clarify first the comparison of Deford and Evergreen, Deford has 166 students, K-5, one teacher aide, a morning secretary and a lunch room duty aide. Evergreen has 172 students, (difference of 6 from Deford) K-6, one teacher aide who also serves as lunch room duty aide and secretarial work if she has time. Our principal does teach only morning kindergarten but has an afternoon reading class and gives testing and tutoring in the afternoon to students. We have had occasion to be at our school quite often lately and we know what a very busy person she is.

It's not fair to blame a school entirely for a student's failure. Most teachers are interested in our student's attainments, if the parent will work with the teacher in finding out the difficulty then follow through perhaps with special testing and evaluations solutions can and will be found. To state education at any school is inferior is a serious accusation very hard to substantiate. To say a teacher is not productive would mean everyone in the classroom would be failures, this is not true of the classroom indicated at Evergreen. There are students who have progressed very well in this same room.

Perhaps, Jane Anderson, an elementary teacher from a Detroit suburb, sums up a teachers feeling, "children are not computers that we can feed information into. They are warm, lively, complex, small human beings who are not just students, but individuals."

Calls board story unfair

March 15, 1974

Dear Mr. Haire:

I feel the comment that you printed regarding our art teacher was unfair to a person who was not present at the board meeting or able to defend herself regarding her program. How does Mr. Otis Dorland know that the art program doesn't amount to anything at Evergreen? Has he ever seen her lesson plans or observed her teaching? Has he ever seen the boys and girls enjoyment as they work on their art work? No, he hasn't.

I know positively the pupils at Evergreen are having the same art experiences as the boys and girls in our building. I have seen her lesson plans and observed her teaching. I know they are worthwhile art experiences for the ages she is teaching.

The teachers in our building are very satisfied with the art program and feel this teacher is doing a fine job. Mr. Dorland has no right to publicly pass judgement on her program without any facts to back up his judgement.

I want the people of this community to know that we at the Campbell School are very sorry that our art teacher has had to endure this embarrassment.

I would further like to suggest to the parents of this community, that if you have a complaint against a teacher, a reading or math program, or any other aspect of our school program that first you bring the problem to the teacher and building principal. We will do all we can to find the facts and to resolve the problem. If it cannot be resolved, then it would be proper to take the problem to the superintendent. If once again it can not be solved, then it would and should go to the school board. If this procedure is followed, I'm sure that other embarrassing incidents can be avoided.

Sincerely yours,
Mrs. J. Froeburger

Teachers defend art program

March 15, 1974

Dear Mr. Haire:

We as Campbell Elementary teachers find it hard to stand quietly by as one of our finest teachers is ridiculed to such a degree as by Mr. Otis Dorland.

Our new art program has been a real asset to our curriculum this year and we feel all the credit should go to Mrs. Eisinger for her excellent teaching. Our children look forward each week to the forty minutes they spend with her. She is very well prepared and includes all facets of art in her program. She is able to instill a much greater appreciation of art in our students, much more than a general classroom teacher could ever do.

We agree the basic subjects in education are very important, but let's not limit the broadening of our students education by one person's opinion. We challenge Mr. Dorland to sit in on an art lesson and judge for himself on the quality of education Mrs. Eisinger is giving her students and see if he doesn't agree.

Yours truly,

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Chronicle points out for readers' benefit that it appeared that Mr. Dorland was attacking the program rather than the teacher when he made his remarks at the meeting Monday, March 11.

No one swarmed into board meeting

March 19, 1974

Dear Mr. Editor:

We would like to comment on the phrase you made in last week's paper that parents from Evergreen "swarmed" into the last school board meeting.

There was exactly four of us there besides Mrs. Smith, the principal of Evergreen school. We don't recall the word "swarmed" being used when a few parents were pushing for an art teacher. And by the way, a move was made that very night to hire an art teacher.

We would like to correct the impression you gave in your write-up that we feel our teachers are inadequate. We feel that the teachers are short handed and are not able to spend as much time with students who need extra help. We feel that reading and arithmetic are far more im-

Tell it as it is, Mr. Haire

March 17, 1974

Mr. Haire:

I want your readers to know you did not print the truth about my purpose for being at the board meeting.

I heard no claim made that children at Evergreen were getting inferior education. True, some were having reading problems, it seems. I know nothing about what's going on at Evergreen, we have no children there.

But I trust Mrs. Smith to be the same dedicated, hard working teacher that she was when our children were there. You owe all of us that tried to voice our feelings about a few things, and Mrs. Smith, front page and head line apologies. Tell it as it is.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Mary Frederick

Parent happy with Evergreen education

March 18, 1974

To the Editor

Cass City Chronicle
6552 Main Street
Cass City, Michigan 48726

Dear Mr. Editor:

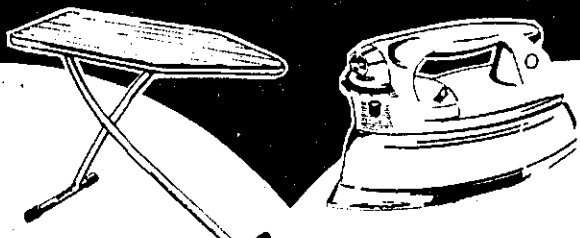

In answer to your article of March 14, 1974, "Evergreen residents seek teaching structure changes", let it be known that this Evergreen resident is well satisfied with the quality of her son's education, as well as his teacher's ability and dedication. When a child wants to go to school on the weekends, something right is obviously being done in his classroom.

As for Mrs. Smith's teaching half days, let's not leave the public with the impression that she has the afternoons free to use as she pleases. She uses this time to assist students who are having problems, to relieve other teachers of part of their workloads, to meet with parents who wish to confer with her, and I'm sure, for many other tasks of which I am unaware. Must we fill her entire day with teaching responsibilities so that she has no time left for her administrative responsibilities? I don't believe that would be in the best interests of the children of the community. If Mrs. Smith says she needs another teacher, I say give her one!

Injury accidents down from 1973

While the number of injury accidents in Tuscola county continued to run behind last year's pace, total accidents exceeded the number for the first two months of 1973 by 31.

According to a report issued last week by Sheriff Hugh Marr, 28 injury accidents were recorded in the first two months of 1974, compared with 47 at this time in 1973.

However, total accidents stand at 126 for the same time period, up 31 from 1973.

Damage accidents accounted for much of the total, with 95 reported for the period. One fatal accident has been recorded so far in 1974, matching last year's total at this time. Two persons died in that accident, exceeding by one the number for the period last year.

A total of 36 persons have been injured in traffic mishaps so far this year, Marr reported, down 30 from the same period last year. Total number of cars involved in accidents stands at 171, down 28 from last year.

In February, Elkland township recorded 40 complaints to the sheriff's department, exceeded by Indianfields with 103, Vassar township with 62, and Millington with 49.

Marr's department recorded a total of 960 calls in February, down from 1,053 in January.

Patrol units traveled 30,243 miles and used 2,781.5 gallons of gasoline in February, down slightly from January.

Marr reported that the county jail received 69 prisoners last month and released 65.

Among other administrative activities in February, Marr attended a meeting of Gagetown Village Council to discuss hiring an officer to patrol the village. A final decision is still pending.

4-H Leadermete success at MSU

"Follow the 4-H Road" was the theme of the 18th annual state 4-H Leadermete conference held at Michigan State University March 9-10, that attracted more than 350 Michigan 4-H volunteer leaders.

One of the highlights of the 4-H year, Leadermete recognizes outstanding county volunteer leaders and provides opportunities for idea exchanges and inspirational training. Those attending were selected by their counties.

Welcoming the 4-H leaders to MSU, Dr. Clifton R. Wharton, MSU president, commended the 4-H program for its work with youth.

Discussion groups on the future of 4-H, campus tours, an idea fair, special interest workshops, banquets, visits with foreign students and presentation of awards to veteran volunteer leaders and support groups were among the conference's activities.

Guest speakers included Dr. Hope Daugherty, United States Department of Agriculture program leader; Dr. Gordon Guyer, director of the MSU Cooperative Extension Service; and Dr. Lawrence Boger, dean of the MSU College of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

TUSCOLA COUNTY 4-H leaders who recently attended the State 4-H Leadermete at Michigan State University are (from the left): Mr. and Mrs. James Hergenreder, Caro; Bonnie White, Mayville; Helda Dale, Marlette, and Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Perry of Cass City.

Cass City band receives II rating

Cass City High School's Concert Band received a Division II rating at the District Band and Orchestra Festival in Carrollton Saturday.

The award entitles each participating student to a red medal for his performance. According to Band Director George Bushong, the band performed well despite its usual bad luck with weather and a 6:00 a.m. departure following the Cass City win against USA in tournament action Friday night.

"Then, to add to the complexity of the situation, USA's band played just before Cass City," Bushong commented.

Red Hawks roar into quarterfinals with 67-53 win over USA in Grand Blanc

Cass City roared into the quarterfinals of the Michigan High School Class C tournament Friday on the heels of a 67-53 decision over Unionville-Sebewaing at Grand Blanc and if you don't have a ticket for Thursday's big game, forget it. The quarter final shoot-out is scheduled at Frankenmuth and the gym there holds 2,500 fans and it's entirely possible that either Cass City or the Hawks' opponents, Bay City All Saints, could bring enough fans to fill the gym by themselves. It was the first time since 1944 that Cass City made it through the regionals, and that team kept on going to the State finals before bowing to Lansing St. Mary's.

Thirty years is a long time to wait and Hawks fans are making the most of it. They crowded into the Grand Blanc gym Friday to root their team to victory and they did.

While local fans were joyous with the victory, artistically the game left much to be desired.

The truth is that both teams were plagued with tournament jitters and it was a sloppy regional final basketball game.

USA used a pressing defense much of the night and it caused numerous turnovers.

Usually reliable Jerry Toner tossed the ball away many times as he had an off night.

Despite the poor ball handling, Cass City stayed even with USA during the entire first half.

While Cass City couldn't handle the ball, USA couldn't shoot. The Patriots hit a miserable 31 per cent for the night and missed 21 straight shots in the second period.

At the end of the first period, the score was tied 14-14. Cass City built a 22-14 margin early in the second quarter as USA went through its cold spell, but the Huron county five righted themselves and charged back into contention by moving up to tie the score, 24-24 at the intermission.

Immediately after the intermission things looked dark for Hawk supporters as the Patriots continued the charge started in the final three minutes of the first half and moved in front by scoring six straight points before Cass City found the range again.

Coach Fred Huriburt's charges finally forged into a lead, 38-26, that they never lost with a little over two minutes left in the third period.

Cass City quickly added to the advantage throughout the period as Toner hit from outside and Nick Gibas found the range on the inside. At the three-quarter mark, the Hawks were in front, 46-38.

But USA was far from finished. Paced by Mark Gainforth and David Bitzer, USA chipped away at the lead until the margin was just 54-51 with a minute and a half left to play.

But Cass City controlled the ball for good shots in the last moments and with Gibas hitting on easy shots and the team converting foul shots committed by desperate USA, the margin zoomed to the final 67-53.

A bright spot for Hawk fans was the play of Gibas. The jumping jack center hasn't played up to the class he exhibited at the end of last year until Friday, when he played like everyone who saw him last year knows he can.

Against USA he scored 20 points, 16 in the last half, and hauled down 21 of Cass City's 52 rebounds.

Dennis Duncel was a tower of strength for USA as he scored 20 points and gathered in 10 rebounds. Gainforth scored 15 and was credited with 13 rebounds.

BAY CITY ALL SAINTS

All Saints, led by All-stater Mark Talaga, and a supporting cast of tall, talented players has been number one in "C" ratings all year.

Cass City will be decided underdogs to the Saints who are 24-1 for the season. But then the Hawks were also underdogs to Michigan Lutheran Seminary and Harbor Beach and no more than an even choice against USA.

Local fans are scrounging for every available ticket to see if the team can do it again.

DAVE HILLAKER has come on strong throughout the tournament. Here he battles with Mark Gainforth in a scoring play.

Hartel loop all-star choice

Scott Hartel of Cass City, the Thumb B. Conference scoring leader, was one of six players named to the 1973-74 all-conference basketball team.

Mark DeNooyelles of Caro was a repeater from last season and led the balloting by the coaches.

Nick Gibas of Cass City was named to the second team. Jerry Toner and Dave Hillaker received honorable mention.

Laming teens show love, courage in making new life without parents

By Jim Ketchum

"We could have stayed with other people in the family, I guess. But we decided we wanted to stay at home."

Eva Laming, 15, sophomore at Cass City High School, summed up the feelings of herself and her two brothers who are now living by themselves in their large farmhouse on Holbrook Road in Greenleaf township.

Eva and her two brothers, Dale and Louis, both seniors at Cass City, were forced into setting up housekeeping following the death of their mother, Mrs. Lavara Laming, Nov. 10.

Their father, Max, was killed in an auto accident in 1962.

Eva explained the situation calmly and directly after she arrived home from school one gray afternoon recently.

"The farm belonged to my grandmother and has been in the family over 40 years," she said, after taking off her coat, removing her steel-rimmed glasses and placing them on the television set in the living room.

"We just decided that it was home and we wanted to keep it," she said. "We've lived here all our lives and we just thought that we shouldn't leave."

So far, Eva and her brothers, 19 and 17, have succeeded in setting up housekeeping. They maintain themselves on a $312 per month Social Security payment, due them because they are still in school and without either parent.

Eva, who arrived home before her brothers, who were still at track practice, detailed the story of how their lives had reached this stage after seating herself at the counter dividing the large kitchen from the living room.

"After my father died, my mother was here with us," she said. "Then she got sick last summer and in August we found out she had cancer. We kind of took over running the house, so it wasn't something completely new to us afterward."

After Mrs. Laming's death, the three got together with an aunt and discussed what they should do. Through her urging, coupled with their own desire, they decided to stay at home.

A fourth brother, Walter, 14, an eighth-grader, lives with an aunt. He will probably return home in the spring, Eva said.

Eva said the three of them get along well under the circumstances of fending for themselves at an early age.

"We all do what has to be done around here," she said. "No one has one specific job. We all help."

Eva knew how to cook before her mother's death, but she said she has found out that the more dishes she can prepare, the better.

"I've made homemade bread three times," she smiled. "Once it was good and twice it wasn't."

DAILY ROUTINE

The daily routine of the Laming children varies little from any other household of high school students. Louis usually wakes up first and gets his brother and sister up, generally around 7:00 a.m.

Following breakfast, they head for school in Dale's blue Chevelle, stopping to pick up Walter along the way.

When her brothers have track practice, Eva gets a ride as far as an aunt's home and walks the remainder of the way, nearly a mile, home. She arrives around 4:30 p.m. Her brothers get home around 6:00 p.m. to have supper shortly afterward.

"Tonight we'll probably have leftover spaghetti," Eva said.

Saturdays are generally reserved for housework, which includes catching up on the laundry. Grocery shopping is generally done by an aunt, working from Eva's prepared list.

The aunt also handles their money, seeing to it that they get only what they need in cash for incidentals.

So far, the young household has not yet had to face any major crises other than a bout with frozen waterpipes which Dale thawed with a small gas torch.

Eva said they have adjusted reasonably well to living alone, although she said she gets a little frightened once in a while when she is alone in the big house.

She does not yet drive, but plans to take driver's training this summer. When she has her license, this will add a third person in contention for the family car.

"Sometimes we have a little problem when Dale wants to go one place and Lou wants to go someplace else," she said. "But nothing really serious."

The children do not have a telephone.

"We had one, but we didn't use it very much," Eva said. "When we got bills, we kept getting billed for numbers we never called. Finally my aunt decided we should have the phone taken out."

Another aunt from Hazel Park will soon be moving into a house trailer parked near the house, giving the Lamings close access to a telephone. Neighbors across the road also let them use a telephone.

"Our neighbors check in on us from time to time," she said. "They're good about that."

Through it all comes the recurring idea of keeping this family as a unit. All three reject being scattered among relatives and perhaps being deprived of contact for long periods of time.

Because of this, life has retained much of the trappings it held before Mrs. Laming died. Her children still visit two married brothers and a sister who live in Decker and near Pontiac.

Friends still come over and visits are exchanged, though not on the same scale as before. Time must be set aside for the responsibilities of being independent.

"I think we had to grow up faster than most of our friends," she observed. "We knew this was coming and kind of prepared for it. It isn't bad, though."

Eva said in her spare time she likes to sew and cook. Her brothers' interests center in sports at school.

She said both will probably get jobs after graduation in June and continue to live at home for the immediate future. Plans for college have had to be shelved, at least temporarily.

With Dale and Louis working, the economics of housekeeping will be somewhat eased. So will renting out most of the 75 acres now owned jointly by the Lamings.

Eva, at 15, is still undecided about her future. She said she will just see what happens before making any definite plans. Right now, completing high school is top priority.

Making their own decisions isn't always easy, but the Lamings have quick counsel available from their large family. She said her biggest adjustment, after deciding to go it alone, was realizing that her mother would not be living there anymore.

But, so far, that decision seems to be working well.

"My aunt said that this is what my mother would have wanted us to do," Eva said, "to keep the land and to stay on here."

And that's precisely what the Lamings plan to do.

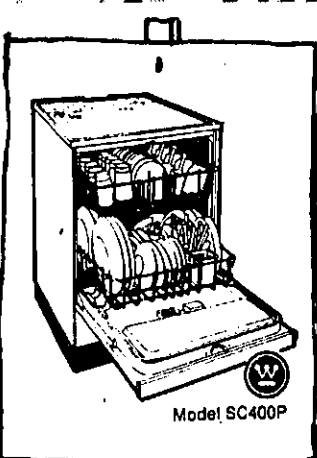

EVA LAMING, flanked by her two brothers, Louis (left) and Dale, discuss the merits of a cassette tape player following supper and dishes. the Lamings are continuing to live as a family, following the death of their mother last November. Their father died in 1962.

Escape?

He's escaped the fate of an egg—but what has the chick got to look forward to? The technology that incubated him in twenty-one days now carries him relentlessly toward the roaster.

We, too, often seem trapped on a similar conveyor belt, caught in a cadence which carries us step by step through life. The care-free days of childhood swiftly wane once schooling begins. Then come jobs, marriage, family, a home.

The list—and the responsibilities of mature life—seems endless. No wonder we long to escape—to "get away from it all."

Yet such daydreams little help us to cope with life today. God's love and wisdom give us the guidance and solace we need. His Church—the church down the street—stands ready to meet our needs.

Mrs. Valeck and her late husband, Paul Valeck Sr., were former residents of the rural Gagetown area until 1946 when they moved to Saginaw. She is survived by four sons, two daughters, a number of grandchildren and several great-grandchildren.

Former area resident dies

Mrs. Eva E. Freeman, 69, of Skidway Lake and a former area resident, died Saturday, March 9, at Tolfree Memorial Hospital, West Branch.

She was born in Tuscola County Oct. 18, 1904, and moved to Skidway Lake in 1957.

She is survived by her husband Alfred, two sons, Gilbert of Deford and Donald of Alger; two daughters, Mrs. John (Trellis) Brock of Clifford and Mrs. James (Jacklene) Dibble of Mayville; 21 grandchildren, and one great-grandchild.

Funeral services were held Monday, March 11, at Forshoe Chapel, Prescott. Burial was in East Dayton Cemetery.

Lions auxiliary

hears Kroswek

Frank Kroswek, Tuscola County Civil Defense Coordinator, spoke at the Lions Auxiliary monthly dinner meeting held Monday, March 11, at Veronica's Restaurant.

His subject was tornadoes and precautions which should be taken to avoid injury. He stressed taking tornado watches seriously and urged persons to take precautions immediately in the event of a warning bulletin. He said many lives are lost due to unconcern at this point. He said children should be taken to the corridors in schools, never to a gymnasium. All windows should be closed on the south side and opened on the northwest side.

Some 600 tornadoes strike throughout the United States each year, Kroswek said. They usually have wind velocities of 40 miles per hour.

In the business meeting, a nominating committee was appointed for the officers for the new year.

The club donated $200 to the leader dog fund in Rochester and sent $50 to Welcome House in Grand Rapids.

The next meeting will be held April 8.

Your neighbor says

I'd buy a big car

We hear a lot about gas mileage these days and whether or not a small car is the answer to tight gasoline supplies.

Howard Moore of Maharg Road, believes that, if he were to buy a new car today, he'd still buy a full-size model.

"I'd still buy a big car because of the riding comfort and safety," Moore says. "If you work at it, the big cars can get just about as good gas mileage as the smaller ones."

Moore also prefers the full-size car for added protection in the event of an accident.

"You've got more metal in the roof, for instance, in case of a rollover," he says.

Moore believes the rush toward small, economy cars, is part of a promotion by the oil companies who, he says, seem to be trying to drive the price of the precious fuel up. Moore is a lifelong resident of the Cass City area and lives on a farm near Gagetown.

4-H ACTIVITIES

4-H loans available

By Bernard Jardot

If one of your 4-H'ers is adept at reupholstering or refinishing furniture he may be eligible for a Farmers Home Administration Youth Project Loan. Repair shops, woodworking shops, livestock production operations, vegetable gardens, produce marketing programs, lawn and yard care development projects, all fall within the program's scope. A roadside stand may be considered, too, as might a mobile machinery repair van.

Loans, which were set up to provide young people with a chance to learn first-hand about farming opportunities in business enterprise, are open only to individuals, not to organizations. To qualify, a youth project must be part of an organized and supervised program of work, and must be planned to produce sufficient income to repay the loan. It also must give a young person practical business experience.

To get a loan to buy animals, a youngster must prove that he has facilities to care for them, including available land. Loan repayments schedules will be worked out with the county FHA supervisors. For more information contact your county Farmers Home Administration office listed under U.S. Government in telephone directory.

Coho barley

makes gains

Coho barley is gaining much attention among barley producers throughout Tuscola county. An excellent pricing program has been arranged through Rickel's in Detroit to buy Coho in the fall at 50 cents per bushel above the Minnesota market.

Coho seed is available at three locations in the Thumb: Harold Hickey - Fairgrove - Phone 693-6167, Don Keinath - Caro - Phone 673-4211 and Paul Leipprandt - Pigeon - Phone 453-3864.

There is 4,650 bushels available, or enough to plant 3,100 acres. If you have any questions in regard to growing Coho, get in touch with the Tuscola County Extension Office in Caro.

Sgt. Bilicki

re-enlists with weather wing

U.S. Air Force Sgt. Edward Bilicki, Wilmet, re-enlisted recently with the Sixth Weather Wing stationed at Cape Canaveral, Fla.

He was one of three members of the unit to re-enlist at the same time. It is considered unusual to have three members of a specialized unit to sign on for another tour of duty at the same time.

Sgt. Bilicki is married to the former Rainell Chisholm of Cass City.
