

"If It Fitz . . ." There's no business like . . .

BY JIM FITZGERALD

What impressed me most about the President's TV show on releasing the tape transcripts was his packaging. He showed a lot of class and show business savvy. But I can't help worrying about his encore.

Nixon was sore about being forced to make a "major unprecedented exception to the principle of confidentiality of the presidency." It's not easy for a President to reveal publicly that "expletives" written on the Oval Office wall don't look much better than dirty words above the urinal.

Under the embarrassing circumstances, Nixon could have been excused if he'd dumped the transcripts into Pat's old hatboxes, tied them with clothesline, and tied the neighbor's kid to deliver them to the judiciary committee in a wheelbarrow.

But not our leader. He had those (expletive here) transcripts bound in leather with the covers suitably embossed in gold, describing the contents and giving date, destination and return address. Which, by the way, explains the President's delay in responding to the subpoena. In most print shops, a job like that takes 2 months.

Then came Nixon's classiest move. He piled the transcripts next to his microphone when he went on TV in the latest episode in the continuing series "The Waltons Wouldn't Wallow in Watergate."

The program was brilliantly choreographed. Every few minutes the camera would switch from Nixon's face to the pile of transcripts. This provided viewers with physical evidence of how many millions of confidential words they can read if they subscribe to the New York Times and have the summer off.

And let's just see that (adjective deleted) Rich Little and David Frye impersonate a pile of books.

All in all, it was a brilliant show. But can Nixon top it in the next episode? As Milton Berle could attest, the public is fickle and a performer is only as good as his last show.

A lot of (unintelligible) Congressmen are still not satisfied. They want tapes, not transcripts. And they are interested in more than Watergate. They keep asking about the milk deal, the Ellsberg breakin, and a lot of (adjective deleted) nonsense like that.

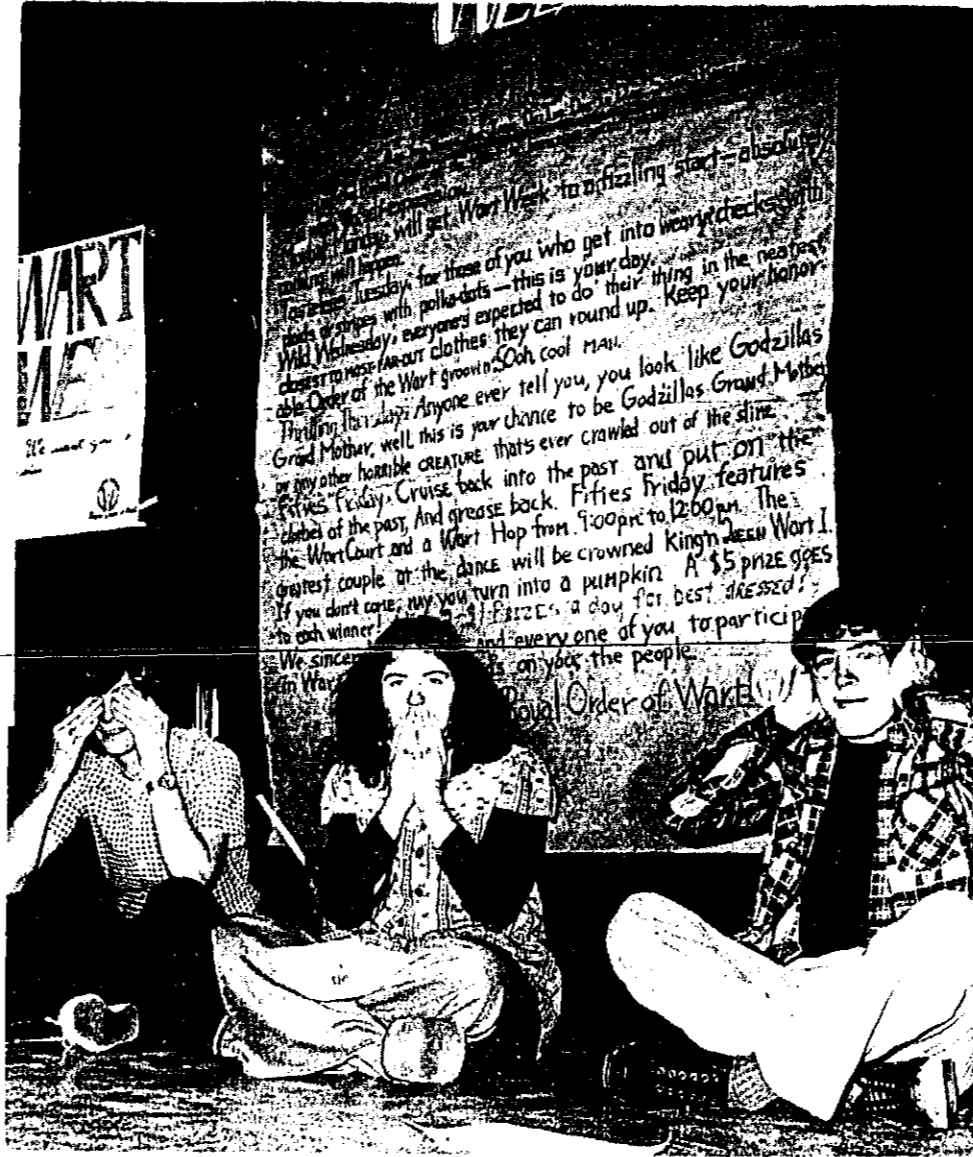

It is likely the President will be forced to allow further breaches in the confidentiality of the presidency. But the American public may not accept a rerun of the old transcripts-on-the-desk routine. They'll want something fresh. And that's the problem Nixon will have to solve if he wants to maintain his TV ratings.

Maybe a soliloquy by banker Bebe Rebozo explaining why he didn't deposit Howard Hughes' $100,000 and earn 7 and 1/2 per cent interest? That would be more educational than a pile of books.

There could be a Washington Squares game, with Ron Ziegler in every square, explaining the milk deal is inoperative because the president of the dairy co-op forgot to leave 1/2 pint of whipping cream and a quart of chocolate.

Tricia and Julie could imitate the Double Mint twins, dancing a soft shoe while Dad explains the purpose of breaking into the office of Ellsberg's psychiatrist was to get material for a guest spot on the Bob Newhart Show.

Or something like that. The important thing is that the (expletive) camera point somewhere else once in awhile, thus giving the star a chance to wipe the sweat off his upper lip.

SEEING, SPEAKING and hearing no evil during Wart Week at Cass City High School are, from the left, Greg Hampshire, Cara Prieskorn and Kurt Wagner. Among the events scheduled for the week are the crowning of king and queen Wart and a Wart Hop Friday night.

Wart Week a winner with high school students

Just in case you think those Cass City High School students look a little freakier than usual, don't worry. There's a reason. It's Wart Week.

Wart Week? That's right. Wart Week-proclaimed by something called the Honorary Order of the Wart and sponsored by Student Council.

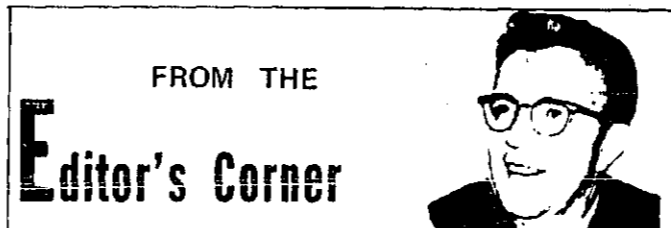

According to Cara Prieskorn, who took time out from assisting her fellow warts hang a poster proclaiming the day, the idea got started after less-than-expected success with something called Twirp Week.

Capping the week will be a Wart Court assembly, where a King and Queen Wart will be chosen, followed by a Wart Hop, scheduled for 9:00 p.m.-midnight Friday.

Organizers also talked teachers into holding mini-classes dealing primarily with hobbies and other means of self-expression.

Last week, handbills in anticipation of Wart Week went as fast as members of the Wart Order could pass them out, according to Greg Hampshire, a fellow Wart of Cara's.

There was also no truth to the rumor that if a student touched one of the Warts, he got loads.

It's no secret that there has been trouble at Hills and Dales General Hospital.

And it's more than financial, although it may be that much of the hassle stems from the red ink that has been flowing up on the hill.

It's affected the staff and, more importantly, the patients. Reports keep trickling back to me about the quality of the service. Stories saying that patients have been going for days without a change of linen.

This is denied by hospital personnel and stories do get s-t-r-e-t-c-h-e-d in the telling.

The hospital is a non-profit corporation run by a board of directors who serve without pay. The board is elected by shareholders. Shareholders are primarily persons who donated to the facility to get it built.

It's non-profit now all right and liable to remain so until someone is hired to take over and manage the place.

How many million dollar businesses do you know that are run by a part-time employee who lives 15 miles away and is in effect moonlighting from his regular job? That's the situation at Hills and Dales today.

This is not a knock on Robert Korte. It's just that running Hills and Dales is more than a part-time job.

Keeping things tidy is almost instinctive with Mary Berry, who cleans at the Chronicle. My desk must be a constant irritant. Last week I talked about the clutter on my desk and Mary read about it. My, she said, I'm glad I didn't do to that desk what it needed while I cleaned. I'd have forgiven her because Mary is a rare one in her job. She's good. I'd be happy if I did my job as well as she does hers.

Live Rock is coming to Tuscola county. A 24-hour party, the sign says, at Meadowbrook Trout Ranch, this week end. Since the poster's dominant theme is a bottle of booze, it's safe to assume that when the sign says party, it means party. Since reading about Goose Lake I've often wondered what a party like this is like these days. Saturday perhaps I'll know.

Rep. Loren Armbruster (Rep., Caro) reports while many members of the house were off on a Caribbean cruise, those who stayed home made waves. In the two sessions, without junketeers, 10 bills passed and 14 went to a third reading. In the two-session after they returned, four bills passed and five went to a third reading.

Spring sports have always been near impossible to sell to fans and probably always will. Uncertain weather, cancelled games, hard to follow action and contests during adult working hours keep the people away. Because few watch, the pressure is lessened on the athletes, which isn't all bad. A big plus for the spring program is that probably more kids get to participate than in football and basketball combined.

Once in a lifetime. Sign at the Boron stations last week: Closed until the price comes down. When I read that I figured to myself that perhaps Carl Parcell would never open again. Who would believe that prices would go down these days? But they did and the pumps are again unlocked.

Honest, this isn't a paid column for Boron. But the station does sponsor Jerry Langmaid, our local cartoonist, and it's one man's opinion that this week's effort is a rib tickler. To be truthful his early offerings didn't do much for me. But everyone around here who's seen his latest has come up with that involuntary chuckle that speaks louder than the most effusive praise.

Candidates file for school board

Three candidates will vie for one Cass City Board of Education seat in the annual election June 10, while in the Owendale-Gagetown District, four candidates will compete for two board positions.

In Cass City incumbent Elwyn Helwig will face challenges from J.D. Tuckey and Dave Loomis. Both Reinhardt and Brinkman are opposed to splitting the district and plan to use this in their campaigns.

MEET BILL AMUNDSON . . .

He's a professional truck driver's professional. And he's serving as Michigan's Driver of the Year for 1974. Secretary of State Richard Austin presented him with that honor in February. Bill has spent the last 34 years driving all kinds of trucks, mostly in city traffic, covering over 1 1/2 million miles . . . all without an accident.

We wanted you to meet Bill, especially during National Transportation Week, because without him, and the millions of other truck drivers, Michigan would not have the benefit of competing in the market places of the world.

17 at Legion Auxiliary meet

Seventeen, including one guest, attended the monthly meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary Monday evening.

During the business meeting, with Mrs. Ann Klinkman presiding, Mrs. Edward Schwartz was appointed parade chairman for participation in the Memorial Day parade Monday, May 27.

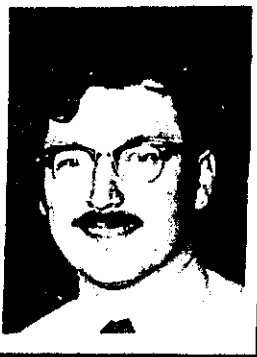

The president appointed Mrs. Vern McConnell, Mrs. William Anker and Mrs. Glenn McClorey to the nominating committee. Election of officers will be held at the June meeting.

At the end of the business meeting, Mrs. William Anker read a Mother's Day poem after which a memorial service was presented in memory of two deceased members, Mrs. Ruth Stapleton and Mrs. Elizabeth Gruber.

KETCHUM'S KNAPSACK

Anonymous speakers

By Jim Ketchum

When I retire to my palm-secluded cottage somewhere in central Florida in about 40 years or so, I'd like, among other things, to finally discover where public speakers originate.

This is fast becoming a popular retirement activity, next to shuffleboard, spraying dandelions and ruminating on the mess the next generation faces as it tries to unravel today's mistakes as well as its own.

Most speakers at dinners, retirements, commencement and supermarket openings, always carry about them a certain aura of mystery. More times than not, the speaker is someone nobody ever heard of prior to the big night and, chances are, unless he seeks high office, murders his wife or leaps over 17 burning cars on a motorcycle, nobody will ever hear of him again.

Anonymous speakers work this to their advantage, or at least they should. With no one knowing them from a hole in the ground, they are free to say practically anything they want.

They can advocate impeachment of the President, free love or Women's Lib without much danger of ever being reprimanded for it. Since many of these speakers are retired anyway, this removes the inhibition of losing their jobs over an off-the-cuff remark.

Those more noted speakers run into trouble at this point. Recently Walter Cronkite spoke to a gathering in Texas and, following his prepared remarks, someone asked him if he planned to interview President Nixon in San Clemente after he leaves the White House.

"Did you say San Clemente or San Quentin?" Cronkite queried.

A moment after saying it, he apologized and said later he could have bitten his tongue off for saying it.

Walter, his tongue still intact, need not have worried had he been Joe Schickelgruber of Upper Okefenokee, Georgia, former test pilot for the Ne'er Do Well airplane corporation.

For old Joe, everyone would have had a good chuckle and forgotten the whole thing.

That's why the more anonymous the speaker, the better the talk. He won't give a tinker's damn what he says. And, if you get real lucky, you'll get one with a sense of humor who can tell a good story during his talk and a better one after the proper ladies and gentlemen leave the room.

Anonymous speakers are not continually followed about by hordes of newspaper reporters, getting in the way of a spectator's camera for that once-in-a-lifetime shot. The anonymous speaker knows that the only one taking his picture will be either his wife or a blackmailer.

Another point—the anonymous speaker comes cheap. Think of how many Harvey Nobodys you could get for the price of a Spiro T. Agnew or an Elliot Richardson or a Ralph Nader.

Besides, if old Harv spills his rubber chicken and green peas down the front of his rented tuxedo, it can be more easily ignored than if Gerald Ford does it. No one will be popping off flashbulbs, adding to the embarrassment of the moment.

And, while the anonymous speaker may not get rich making the rounds of engagements, at least it keeps him off the streets or away from the shuffleboard courts late at night where he might try something way beyond his years.

Who cares if nobody listens to the anonymous speaker? It beats watching Gerald Ford scrape chicken and peas off his tux.

Excuse me, I have to go practice my speech.

3 present area case for keeping railroad service

Three area representatives testified Monday in Saginaw opposing the proposed abandonment of the rail line which serves Cass City.

Village President Lambert Althaver, accompanied by Chamber of Commerce President Jim Courtney and Elkland Township Supervisor Edwin Karr, testified before an Interstate Commerce Commission hearing which took testimony regarding the plan.

This was the second in a series of hearings to gather response to the Department of Transportation's proposed plan to abandon some 37 per cent of existing trackage in the state, much of it in the Thumb area.

Althaver told the group abandonment of the Grand Trunk Western line serving Cass City, Gagetown, Oxendale, Deford, Wilnot and Kingston would have an extreme adverse effect on the economy of the trade area.

He said agriculture, manufacturing and construction would all suffer if the line were abandoned.

He said abandoning the line would seriously hinder General Cable Corp., largest employer in the community, in efforts to stay competitive.

Althaver explained the company uses rail line to bring in plastic resins from Texas.

Abandoning the line might force Cable to eventually close down its Cass City operations, Althaver testified.

He said existing truck lines are not sufficient or economical enough to make up for a loss in rail service.

Agriculture would suffer, Althaver said, because equipment and fertilizers could not be shipped out as readily.

Much material which goes into business and residential construction comes to Cass City by rail, Althaver said.

Abandonment would skyrocket costs and depress the market, he said.

Karr gave the group an overall picture of the township and what would happen if the rail line were abandoned.

"We have young people staying in our community instead of leaving," Karr said.

"We have industry and agriculture growing here and it's insanity to even consider abandoning our rail service."

Karr called the railroad "our cheapest link with the outside world" and said the area needs all the rail service it can get.

"I understand this study they made regarding the railroads was done in a short period of time," Karr said.

"They could have saved themselves a lot of unnecessary work if they'd studied it further."

Karr said he was optimistic regarding keeping the rail line open and added the Thumb area was heavily represented at the hearing.

He testified that demand exists and the area needs more and better rail service, not less.

Courtney provided the hearing with statistics on what rail abandonment would mean. He testified that it would have cost Michigan Bean 40 per cent more to ship and use motor transportation instead of rail service.

Other businesses, he said, would have also experienced rises in transportation costs ranging from 40 to 45 per cent.

He testified that in the case of some farm implements, rail service is the only means available for transportation. Courtney testified that Cass City alone draws about 14,000 persons into its downtown shipping area from all three counties. A depressed economy in all three counties would seriously hurt Cass City, he said.

Courtney cited already high unemployment figures in the three county area and said a loss of rail service would create a domino effect which would idle even more workers.

He said an increase in rail cars available for shipping would increase profits for the railroad.

Lutherans to dedicate church

The new Good Shepherd Lutheran Church, located on M-25 at Crescent Beach Road, three miles southwest of Caseville, will be dedicated Sunday, May 19, with worship planned for 10:30 a.m., 3 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. At the morning dedication service, the Rev. Paul Heinicke, executive secretary of missions for the Michigan District of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, will be the speaker. In the afternoon, the Rev. Richard Scheel, District president, will be the preacher.

The church, built in modern style of redwood and brick, is located on the site of a once-famous dance hall, Drury Lane. It was designed to seat 275, and includes two offices and kitchen, which can be converted into Sunday School rooms. Curtains recessed in the wall can be rolled out to divide the sanctuary into three rooms.

Value of the church and property is $134,000, but donated labor and contributions have cut the debt to $94,000.

Your neighbor says I've got a heroine

Whatever happened to heroes? Well, some of us still have heroes or heroines, depending on your point of view.

Diana Walsh, 17, of rural Ubyly, has a heroine. It's Billy Jean King.

"I admire Billy Jean because she's a good tennis player and she's a Women's Libber," Ms. Walsh says. "I like her style and admire her a lot."

Admittedly, Ms. King wasn't always her heroine. She assumed that spot following her now-famous match with world-renowned male chauvinist pig Bobby Riggs.

Before that, her hero was Detroit Tiger All-Star Al Kaline.

Ms. Walsh is a senior at Ubyly High School and has lived with her parents, Mr.

and Mrs. Walter Joseph Walsh, on a farm near Ubyly all her life. She has enrolled in Northern Michigan University and will study general education.

IT ENDURES!

Man can build skyscrapers and miles of highways—even go to the moon. But he can't create a tree.

A tree withstands the summer heat and the cold of winter. How many windstorms have buffeted it? How many times has it lost its leaves in autumn, only to be reborn the following spring?

A tree like this has much in common with the Church. It too has endured countless storms and has stood the test of time. And like a giant tree, the roots of the Church go deep. Stability—you can depend on it.

Fete Women at Salem Church

About 65 mothers and daughters attended a Mother-Daughter tea Friday evening in Salem UM church.

Members of the committee on arrangements were Mrs. Laurence Bartle, Mrs. Harvey-Walter, Mrs. Richard Gaffney and Mrs. Robert Tuckey.

A short program was presented in the church auditorium starting at seven o'clock after which the group moved to the social rooms for refreshments.

For the program, a tribute was made by Mrs. Ronald Geiger to the daughters and by her daughter, Mrs. Shari Schott, to the mothers. There were poems by Mrs. John Zinnecker, Christine Tuckey and JulAnn Auten. Vocal music included a song by Kay Loomis and a trio by Mrs. Charles Tuckey and her daughters, Lori and Cindy.

Mrs. Gaffney presented numerous awards: to Mrs. James McMahon, the eldest mother present; to Krista Iseler, the youngest daughter; to Mrs. Geiger, the youngest grandmother; to Shari Schott, the youngest married daughter and for coming from the greatest distance; to Mrs. Dale Iseler and Mrs. Gerald Auten for having the most daughters present; to Mrs. Roy Tuckey, the youngest mother present, and to Mrs. Luke Tuckey for having the most granddaughters in attendance.

For many people, a good-sized car is not just a luxury, it's a necessity.

Now that you have to slow down, you don't have to move down.

Now that the limit's down to 55 mph, slower speeds mean better gas economy. And that's good news if you need the roominess of a full-size car like Chrysler. It means you don't have to move down to a smaller car to get better gas economy. And you don't give up the good things you buy a Chrysler for: comfort and roominess, the quality and security of a great road car.

Mini-gardens fun, educational

A favorite science project in elementary schools is growing bean seeds indoors. But a mini-garden of vegetables can be fun -- and edible -- for all ages.

The container for your mini-garden can be almost anything -- a plastic or clay pot, a wire basket, a wooden box. Fill it with a mixture containing equal parts of soil, peat and perlite or sand. You'll also need a sunny spot -- a windowsill, a balcony or even a doorstep. And you'll need to be on hand to do some watering.

High quality seed is especially essential for container gardens, so avoid using those leftover from last year.

If you're wondering what kind of vegetable seed to plant -- that will pretty much depend on the size of your container. Chives do well in a six-inch pot. But if you have something larger -- say, ten inches in diameter -- try miniature tomatoes. Or if you prefer garden radishes or onions -- go ahead and plant them.

A miniature vegetable garden won't take much time or effort. But it can be rewarding for all ages to watch plants grow under your very eyes. Best of all -- you'll get to eat the results of your work as you discover a new appreciation for the farmer who grows our nation's food supply!

BENT AND BROKE

With food prices what they are today, keeping the figure round keeps most of us flat.

Now that over 300 eye surgeons since 1967 have used an ultra-sound probe to emulsify and suck out 7,000 cataracts, using a tiny incision at the edge of the iris, formerly skeptical members of the American Academy of Ophthalmology now acknowledge the procedure as acceptable, and the Social Security Administration has decided that Medicare may cover its cost.

A cataract, as you know, is what we call the opacities that develop in the normally transparent lens behind the pupil of the eye, through which light must pass to reach the retina at the back of the inside of the eyeball.

The surgical removal of cataracts is an ancient procedure, practiced, we are told, in antiquity, particularly in Persia. The modern surgical removal of the lens that is clouded by cataract formation is performed at least 400,000 times each year in the United States alone.

This involves dividing the iris, the colored muscular ring around the pupil that identifies the eye as blue, green, brown or hazel, and then removing the lens from its skin-like capsule. After the obstruction is removed, the eye is sewn together again.

Until recently, it was considered important for most patients to lie still with their head immobilized for up to 10 days after surgery to avoid complications.

The introduction of the ultra-sound technique by Dr. Charles D. Kelman of New York was based on the fact that ultrasonic vibrations at the rate of 40,000 times per minute cause solids to impinge on to behave like a liquid. Thus the solid mass of the lens is converted into a liquid-like consistency, and is sucked out through the hollow tip of the vibrating instrument.

The back half of the skinlike capsule covering the lens is left in place, carefully swept clean of fragments, the iris is split and the tiny incision is closed. Often patients are sent home the day of surgery to full activity.

Ultrasonic surgery is not magic. It has complications and difficulties just as the standard operation has, but evidence seems to be developing that in many cases the incidence of complications in skilled hands is materially reduced.

Whether it will supersede the older techniques will require more experience and more study to determine. For one thing, the ultra-sound machine necessary for this technique costs $25,000 (down from $40,000 several years ago) and the operator must be specially trained in its use, and in the technique of the operation itself.

But this is true in any surgery of the eye, and a recent study in New York

AROUND THE FARM Bean growers face decision By William Bortel

Tuscola county bean growers will have to make a decision this year - treat your bean seed with a combination insecticide - fungicide - bactericide or inoculate your bean seed. You will not be able to do both since the streptomycin from the treatment will kill the inoculant and your inoculant money will be completely wasted.

We believe it is much more important to treat bean seed than trying the inoculant. Tests conducted at Michigan State University have demonstrated no yield advantage for inoculated over non-inoculated seed.

However, we believe it's a good practice to treat all bean seed with a combination insecticide-fungicide-bactericide treatment. The bactericide is one of the more important aspects of treatment as the streptomycin is recommended to control bacterial blight organisms on the surface of the bean seed.

Bacterial blight in beans was a major contributing factor in low bean yields just three years ago. A blight test was started and a majority of bean seed samples sent in for testing carried the bacterial blight organism on the surface of the seed. Since then, Streptomycin has been used with the seed treatment as a protectant from blight on the surface of the seed. We believe this should be continued as a protection against an outbreak of bacterial blight.

Many growers will not have treated seed this year since we have produced beans the last two years with minimal damage from bacterial blight. However, the blight organism is still around.

Bean growers with untreated seed may wish to try the new three-in-one planter box treatment which contains Streptomycin, Diazinon and Captan and should be available on the market about May 15. This looks like the practice we will be using in the future.

Why hold Owen-Gage annexation vote?

(EDITOR'S NOTE:) This is the first of a series of articles by the Owendale-Gagetown Board of Education detailing the upcoming vote to annex the district to Elkton-Pigeon-Bay Port June 10. Any comments on these articles should be directed to Glenn Sanford, Superintendent, Owen-Gage Schools.)

Probably even before the merging of the Gagetown and Owendale School district to form the Owendale - Gagetown Area School District, there have been property owners that would have preferred to be associated with neighboring schools. Upon merging, a considerable amount of property to the south east of the district did transfer to the Cass City school district. This loss of property and students no doubt provide question as to the feasibility of building a new secondary school at that time.

After sixteen years of existence, there are still unsolved building and program needs in the Owendale - Gagetown Area School District. Attempts to transfer property to other school districts, to merge with the Unionville schools, to merge with the Unionville-Sebewaing area schools, and most recently, to build a secondary school have proven to be unsuccessful. Still there are considerable numbers of property owners seeking to have their property transferred to neighboring districts. There are parents that have stood by their convictions and are tuitioning their children to other school districts. Increased operational costs necessitating increases in operational millages, including that to be voted upon at the annual election in the event annexation is not approved give rise to questions of continuing as we are. Defeat of a major building program and increases in building construction cause one to wonder about the advisability of a sufficient new school construction.

All these questions or problems have led the board of education to present the electorate with a proposal that would allow property owners to become aligned with somewhat larger school districts where operational costs would be considerably less in 2 of the 3 neighboring districts than can be expected in Owen-Gage. Efficiency of numbers to provide a lower per pupil building expense when, and if the need arises as well as efficiency of numbers in curricular program potential enabling students to have more and varied courses available to them in neighboring districts was a contributing factor leading to the board's decision to place the issue before you, the electorate. The fact that two large areas of the district apparently were not entirely happy with the educational or financial possibilities of the district and petitioned to be allowed to transfer to other district also was a factor in the board's decision to ask the entire district to have a voice on the issue.

If annexation to the Elkton-Pigeon-Bay Port Schools meet with district approval, those property owners that are in Tuscola county would have their property transferred to the Cass City School district. Other property owners wishing to transfer to

	Currently in effect	Voted on June 10	Probable Debt	Total
Owen-Gage	17.2	6.2	2	26
Cass City	20	1.1	1.1	21.1
USA	25	2	2	27
Lakers	15.5	5	1.8	22.3

Residents of Owen-Gage will be obligated to pay the debt of the elementary buildings in Owendale and Gagetown until all these bonds are retired. As a part of another district, residents will not be obligated for debts of that district as they exist today. As a part of another district any property within the district at the time of sale of bonds is naturally obligated to pay for that debt.

Program potential for secondary students, no listing of comparison in the offerings by school district is shown here. It is assumed that whether people feel that it is important or not, most will agree that there is a greater opportunity for a more varied program available to children in the school districts that surround Owen-Gage. Whether an individual will take advantage of those courses that are not available to him at Owen-Gage that would be available in one of the surrounding districts is entirely an individual decision based on interest, ability and background of the student, wishes of the parent, and expectations for the future. Electors will have to weigh those factors before they decide which way to vote. Those factors are building costs, curricular potential and cost and emotional impact upon individuals within the communities.

Commissioners hear tax mapping plan detailed

The Tuscola County Board of Commissioners will consider purchasing a detailed tax mapping program for the county which could cost as much as $160,000, following their regularly scheduled meeting Tuesday in Caro.

A representative of Gem Surveys, Inc., proposed the system which would identify every parcel of taxable land in the county and would insure greater accuracy in setting valuations.

According to Commissioner Maynard McConkey, price range for the mapping varies from $120,000 to $160,000. He said such a system would be a first step toward greater accuracy in setting tax rates.

The proposal was referred to the equalization and finance committees for study. It is estimated that there are some 23,000 parcels of taxable land in the county, McConkey said. Such a system would identify each parcel by a coded number as well as by description.

In other business, the board approved installation of a WATS telephone line for the Sheriff's department. This system will allow the department to call any number in the 517 area code for a flat-rate charge of $35 per month.

Presently, Cass City has one police line and one fire line to the Sheriff's office in Caro. The new system would work similarly from Caro to Cass City.

Commissioners also approved a new labor contract for district court employees. Raises of seven and one-half per cent were granted to the three employees, effective immediately.

The board approved the concept of appointing one commissioner from Tuscola, Huron, Sanilac and Lapeer counties to serve as the advisory board to the Human Development Commission which would act as coordinating agency for substance abuse.

The plan must receive approval from the three other counties involved in the program.

Teen drinking drives up traffic accidents, report says

When Michigan first talked about lowering its legal drinking age from 21 to 18, some lawmakers opposed the move because they said it could lead to more traffic accidents involving young people.

A new research report from the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety appears to bear out those fears.

The report says that state laws allowing drinking at age 18 represent "a social policy that carries a price in increased fatal motor vehicle collisions."

Researchers compared fatal crash involvement of drivers under 21 in Michigan, Ontario and Wisconsin (new 18-year majority states) with those of Indiana, Illinois and Minnesota (age 21 states).

They estimated that for each 100,000 of their numbers in the population, 15-20 year olds were involved in 2.6 to 3.3 more fatal crashes in the first year after the legal drinking age was lowered than would have been expected from prior experience.

And, they say, "approximately 19" young people between 15 and 20 were involved in fatal crashes in Michigan the year after the legal drinking age was lowered -- 19 who "would not have been involved had the law not changed."

ABOUT DOCTORS

Only one Michigan county lacks a resident physician. So reports the Michigan Health Council, headquartered in East Lansing.

In a statistical breakdown issued in connection with a recent "rural health conference," the council says Michigan now has 10,767 licensed M.D.'s—a gain of 1,378 during the past year.

"The increase is due in part, the council says, to an attorney general's ruling that foreign-born doctors can be fully licensed to practice in the state and do not have to practice with a temporary license while awaiting their citizenship."

The county without a resident doctor is Keweenaw, population 2,264. But, the council says, most of the county residents live in a township bordering Houghton county, where there are 24 medical doctors.

Seven other Michigan counties have more than 2,000 people for each physician, the council reports, but the state ratio is one medical doctor for each 684 residents.

In addition, the council reports there are 2,203 D.O.'s in Michigan; 49,367 registered nurses, one for every 180 residents; and 4,646 dentists, one for each 1,910 persons.

MADEN NAME MONEY

The next move in the Mary Smith Jones-or-Mary Jane Jones controversy is up to the Michigan Legislature.

If lawmakers come up with the $80,000 needed to allow maiden names as middle names on Michigan drivers' licenses, Secretary of State Richard Austin says his department will go along with the policy switch.

But the "if" seems to be a big one.

"As we run out of money, my only concern is whether it should be considered a priority when we have so many other issues necessary to survival," says one member of the House Appropriations Committee.

The flap over maiden names began in earnest late last year. A group called the Committee to Encourage Richard H. Austin to Give Women Their Maiden Names for the Holidays (CERHA for short) began sending Christmas cards to the Secretary of State.

They asked Austin to rescind the policy prohibiting maiden names as middle names on licenses. Austin responded with a survey of 10 women drivers.

"A mail survey of 5,000 women drivers brought 2,600 responses, indicating a high level of concern about their available options," Austin reports. "These results, as well as the steady stream of communications from married women asking they be permitted to use their maiden name as their middle name, have led us to request additional funds for changes in our driver license files."

Austin's people figure about 130,000 women per year over a three-year period would actually ask for name changes as they renewed their licenses. Analysts say it would cost about 60 cents per name, or some $80,000 a year to make the necessary changes for the name switch.

Set State Police post dedication

State Police Director Col. John R. Plants will be joined by state, county, city and departmental officials in a formal dedication of the newly established post at Caro at 1 p.m. Friday, May 24.

Invited to attend are Senator Alvin J. DeGrow (R-Pigeon) and State Representative Loren S. Armbruster (R-Caro).

Dedicatory remarks will be made by Colonel Plants and state officials. The program will include a ribbon-cutting ceremony.

Caro is one of the nine posts which comprise the third State Police district. Commander of the district is Capt. John K. Cosgrove Jr., Bay City. Lt. Ward F. Johnson is commander of the 15-man Caro post.

Lt. Johnson and his officers began operations in February at the one-story post located at 120 Millwood, handled by the State Police.

Through April, 93 persons were injured and 338 cars were involved. This compares with 113 persons injured and 398 cars involved for the same period last year.

In April, Elkland township had the third-highest number of complaints handled by the sheriff's department in the county. Indianfields township led the way with 152 complaints, followed by Vassar township's 85 and Elkland's 81.

During April, Sheriff Marr attended a meeting of the Human Development Commission at the Tuscola County Intermediate School. Deputy David Bezenah attended Marine Safety School at Bellaire April 23-25.

Patrol units traveled 33,598 miles and used 2,732 gallons of gasoline.

Local girl wins 3 of 5 events for handicapped

A track meet for the handicapped children attending Darby School was held Thursday and a Cass City girl, Lois Hazelton, won three of the five events.

Lois took home ribbons in the 100-yard dash, 50-yard dash and the long jump while qualifying for the upcoming State meet for the handicapped May 23-25.

Another Cass City area resident, Paul Mejaski, is an alternate for the State competition.

Other students from the area in the meet were Chris Glaspie, Jeannie Rutkowski, Donna Mathewson, Ricky Gobler and Kay Jones.

Lois is the foster child of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond J. Garety.

Retirement fete scheduled

Books a part of living for Mrs. Kirn

By Jim Ketchum

While Cass City may not be as exciting as living as the wife of a missionary in China in the turbulent 1920's, it's been fun and chances are Mrs. Esther Kirn will probably miss it.

Mrs. Kirn, who has worked with Rawson Memorial Library since 1967 in cataloging and suggesting ways to expand, closes her career with the library Sunday with an open house, sponsored by friends.

"It'll be interesting to see if anybody shows up," she laughed this week as she continued the monumental job of sorting through a hostful of memories in preparation for an auction sale Saturday.

"The hardest thing to give up will be my books," she said, scanning the living room at a few of the books remaining that once comprised a personal library of well over 1,000 volumes, collected by her and her late husband, Rev. Stanley Kirn Sr.

"I would sooner part with anything else," she explained, settling into a comfortable chair. "I have three children and the best ones will go to them. The rest will be sold."

The former high school librarian, who handled that task from 1947-50, will move to a United Methodist retirement home near Chelsea.

She'll be able to take a few of her beloved books with her, but not nearly enough.

Mrs. Kirn, who holds a masters in library science, did the initial cataloging work on the high school library and then, years later, took on the public library.

"There were only three of us who knew how to catalog," she explained. "Lucy Auten, the intermediate librarian and I. So I was elected to do it."

She recalled that before the library moved into its present location, only one small section of non-fiction existed. She has watched it grow since then and is pleased to see it expanding today.

Mrs. Kirn observed that reading tastes have changed over the years she has been a librarian. Today's nostalgia binge has created a demand for books that have been out of print for years.

"I learned recently that Durant's 'Story of Philosophy' is back in print and doing very well," she said. "There is also a demand for refashioning books, and a demand for economics and business books as well."

She commented with a smile that young people today think earlier generations had no problems years ago. That, she stated emphatically, just wasn't so.

"Those Depression years—I don't even want to think about those years," she said. "It was horrible. My husband was a minister and when times were hard, we knew it right away. I remember recently telling a group of young people from the high school who came to interview me that I went three years without a new dress during the depression. They couldn't believe it."

She recalled that they lived on the edge of Detroit and had the advantage of being able to plant a garden to help the food budget.

Today's scandals seem worse today because of the media's greater influence, she said.

Girls' regional slated in Cass City Friday

The State Regional C-D girls' track meet will be held Friday at Cass City Recreational Park.

Thirteen schools will send girls to the competition which starts at 4 p.m. with the preliminary heats and the field events and will be concluded with the finals starting at 7 p.m.

Among the schools competing will be Cass City, Owen-Gage, USA and Uby.

Sign-up time

Les Severance reminds managers of teams in the Cass City Church League that sign-up time for this year's competition will be at 8 p.m. Friday at Cass City Missionary Church on Koepfgen Road.

Stewardship Week set

Soil Stewardship Week, a nationwide observance placing emphasis on man's obligation as stewards of the soil, will be observed May 19-26, according to Donald Loomis, Tuscola Soil Conservation District Director.

"A Different Place" is the theme of this year's observance.

To mark the week, the Tuscola district has distributed over 7,000 bulletin inserts to 43 churches in the county. Many churches plan special observances to mark the week.

ADMIRING A piece of ancient Chinese pottery is Mrs. Esther Kirn. Mrs. Kirn will be feted with an open house at the library Sunday afternoon in honor of her retirement.

Commissioners again protest doe hunting

The Tuscola County Board of Commissioners fired another volley last week in its running battle with the Department of Natural Resources by urging the DNR to call a one-year moratorium on all antlerless deer hunting in the county.

In a letter sent to A. Gene Gazlay, DNR Director, Seventh District Commissioner Kenneth Kennedy, speaking for the board, requested the moratorium extend to Lapeer as well as Tuscola county.

In the letter, Kennedy said authorized resistance of both county boards coupled with continued antlerless hunting each year, has resulted in closing of large areas of private land to public hunting.

This, Kennedy charged, has forced "an intolerable number of hunters... to concentrate in State Game areas."

"This situation is deplorable. It not only invites a high hunting accident rate, but endangers the lives of people residing close to the perimeter of hunting concentrations," Kennedy said.

Kennedy said the board believes moratorium is needed to provide time for re-evaluation of the situation.

"The Board believes that chances are good for many private land owners permitting a 'bucks only' season in 1974 and that they may even go along with a limited antlerless deer harvest in the future, if and when they are properly informed that it is a necessary ingredient for herd management and a useful consumption of a natural resource."

The letter was scheduled to be read into the record of a public meeting held Tuesday night in Lansing on 1974 deer hunting in Michigan.

County commissioners have fought antlerless deer hunting in Tuscola county for years. Last summer, they went on record opposing doe hunting in the county.

RETIREMENT

Mrs. Kirn said her initial plans call for her to just rest for awhile.

"I've never been bored in my life and I think I'd like to see what it's like just once," she laughed.

She said she will probably become involved in something once she settles into her new home. She also plans a little travel to see some of her family.

When she moves, among her prized books, she will take a souvenir of her years in China, a piece of brass pottery believed to be between 400 and 500 years old.

The problem, however is finding a place to put everything in her new, small apartment. But odds are good that, with her love for books, her small library will start growing again soon.
