

Probe radios at hospital

Officials at Hills and Dales General Hospital are looking into the purchase of a radio communications system which could put doctors, police and fire agencies in immediate contact with the facility.

According to Randy D. Howard, hospital administrator, the system will be required by all hospitals by 1976. He indicated the system would also be tied in with the county civil defense network.

Howard estimated cost for the system at anywhere from $7,500 to $9,000.

Under an existing federal grant program, the hospital would have to pay only half this amount. Details on exact cost and funding are yet to be worked out, but, Howard said, the hospital must act before Jan. 1, or lose its grant.

"We have a definite need for such a system here," Howard said. "Right now, for instance, if we have to get in touch with Dr. Zuzga, we have to wait for him to drive clear to Sebewaing, then turn around and drive back. With this system, we could have instant contact."

He indicated doctors would carry pagers with them that would tell them to contact the hospital. While plans are still indefinite, Howard said doctors may be asked to purchase their own units while hospital employees such as X-ray technicians and lab personnel would have theirs furnished.

The system would use the state police as a primary contact, the administrator said.

Since Hills and Dales is a regional hospital, he added, the facility should be equipped with such a unit. He said Saginaw General has had some experience with such a system and it appears to be working well.

The unit would probably be a mobile one, Howard said. If repairs were needed, another could be brought in to handle calls until the hospital's unit was operational.

Financing the unit appears to be the major stumbling block. One solution would be for the Thumb District Health Department to purchase the unit, selling it to Hills and Dales on a payment schedule.

All this is still highly tentative, Howard emphasized. Details must be ironed out and approval given by the hospital board, he said.

Pair injured in M-46, M-53 crash Sunday

Two drivers narrowly escaped serious injury late Sunday when their vehicles collided at the intersection of M-46 and M-53 in Sanilac county, five miles east of Kingston.

State Police from the Sandusky Post reported a car driven by Joanne Bracken, 28, of Whittemore, collided with a semi driven by Ronald Pringle, 26, of Deford.

Police said the Bracken auto was headed west on M-46 and failed to stop at the M-53 intersection, striking the southbound truck. Both drivers were taken to McKenzie Hospital in Sandusky where they were treated and released.

Ms. Bracken's two children, Brett, 3, and Kimberly, 5, passengers in the auto, were not injured.

Police said if the Bracken auto had entered the intersection five seconds sooner, the accident might have been much worse. Less than two weeks ago, two Massachusetts women were killed in a collision at the same intersection when their car ran a stop sign at the intersection.

Ms. Bracken was ticketed for disregarding a stop sign. Two other minor accidents were reported. Wednesday, Sept. 25, a car driven by Roy Morton Corlis, 50, of 2615 S. Kingston Rd., Kingston, struck and killed a deer while traveling west on Deckerville Road near Plain Road in Ellington township.

State Police from the Caro post reported the deer crossed from the north side of the road into the path of the auto. Corlis was not injured. The accident took place at 9:40 p.m.

In another car-deer accident, Larry Allen Samuelson, 37, of E. Dutcher Rd., Cass City, struck and killed a deer while traveling east on Akron Road, just east of Remington Road, Monday.

Tuscola County Sheriff's deputies said the driver was not injured. The mishap took place at 8:40 a.m.

Alex J. Kovach, 21, of Owendale, sustained facial cuts Saturday morning when the car he was driving went out of control and landed in a ditch on Canboro Road two miles northwest of Owendale.

Huron County Sheriff's deputies who investigated said Kovach was headed east on Canboro Road around 2:20 a.m. when he fell asleep at the wheel. They indicated he woke up and attempted to regain control of the car, but failed and landed in a ditch on the north side of the road.

He was treated and released from Scheurer Hospital, Pigeon.

Also Saturday, a car driven by Gary L. Wichert, 27, of 4216 Maple St., struck and killed a deer on M-25 near the M-142 intersection, two miles south of Bay Port.

Sheriff's deputies said Wichert reported he saw the deer to his left, hit the brakes and attempted to miss the animal, but failed. The mishap occurred at 9:30 p.m. Wichert was uninjured.

Next move uncertain

Evergreen board stalls recreational development

The Evergreen Township Zoning Board of Appeals said no to developer Peter Murray Saturday night.

The board turned down Murray's request for a special approval permit to construct an ambitious recreational development on 120 acres of land located at the intersection of Deckerville and Leslie Roads.

The 3-0 vote came as no surprise to the 40 township residents who attended the meeting. Most expressed fears about what the development might do to the area. Those who again quizzed the developer stated their opposition to the move.

Prior to the board's action, Murray again stated his case for the development. He said noise restrictions and rates for local memberships had not been resolved.

Murray told his audience 120 acres was enough land for the park, according to preliminary plans.

Most residents at the meeting disagreed. Their major concern centered on the proposed 500 modern sites and how many persons this would bring into the park.

The developer estimated an average 20 per cent occupancy rate at any given time. "I don't plan to build a skyscraper out there," Murray said. "Yes, I appreciate the beauty of my land. That's the attraction out there."

Residents also questioned Murray again on fencing the park, snowmobiling on the frozen Cass River, memberships, security and sewage disposal. He revealed he had not had percolation tests run on the land prior to submitting the project to the township board.

Residents again expressed fears of being over-run by people at the site.

"We live here all the time," Clerk Otis Dorland told Murray. "If there's going to be a people problem at the site all the time, we don't want it." Murray responded by saying he could cancel leases to any member who violated restrictions.

Most residents remained unconvinced that the plan would work. Many said the site was too small, saying that 500-1,000 acres would be needed.

Murray emphasized the restrictions on members during the meeting and again told residents promotion would be handled by word of mouth. He assured residents full-time management, including a security force, would enforce the rules.

Had the plan been approved, Murray said, he planned 30 by 70-foot lots for each trailer at the site. Trailers would have been governed through township ordinances.

Murray's answers failed to change the minds of residents at the meeting or of board of appeals' members, Richard Mika, Dean Smith or Ted Morgan. Each cast a thumbs-down vote.

Township officials speculated whether subsequent action might take place. Murray refused to answer Chronicle questions following the meeting regarding his next move.

When asked if he plans an appeal, the developer said, "I'll see you when it happens." Officials speculated Murray might attempt a suit in Sanilac County Circuit Court against the township zoning ordinance. At press time, no such suit had been filed.

While no dollar figures are available, it is known Murray has had preliminary engineering work completed on the plan and reportedly had the land surveyed recently. Evergreen Township Supervisor Laurence Hyatt agreed the next move is up to Murray.

Owen-Gage enrollment down, belt tightening set

Declining enrollment has dealt the Owendale-Gagetown School district another blow, this time to the tune of $20,000.

Figures released this week show that the school district will receive just over $550,000 in combined local revenue and state aid, compared with $570,000 a year ago.

Supt. Glenn Sanford, commenting on the statistics, said official enrollment, taken last Friday, shows 588 students attending school in the district, compared to 626 last year and 686 during the 1972-73 school year.

Combined local revenue and state aid payments equal $336 per student, with $652.58 coming from local revenue and $283 from state aid.

This figures out to $39 per child in state aid per mill levied. Sanford said the district will receive $383,714 in local tax revenue and $106,654 from the state.

The figures make an already-tight financial situation even tighter, the superintendent said.

"I had been planning for 600 kids," Sanford said. "This means we'll have to dip a little deeper into our equity fund."

He said presently the district has $31,000 in that fund, accumulated over the past four years. He estimated this year's dip into that fund could be as much as $14,600.

"With no major catastrophes, we should get through the year all right," he said. He said any repairs that may be needed on the 1913 High School building will have to come out of the general fund. Still, the district should finish the year without going into the red, he said.

The system has lost 98 students in the past two years, with about 60 of those transfers to Cass City, the superintendent estimated. He said those 98 students represented about $95,000 in lost revenue to the district.

On probation? You'll get to know Gerald Polk

By Jim Ketchum

You've been convicted of a crime in Circuit Court. When you're sentenced, you could go to jail. Or, if you're lucky, you'll get probation.

If you do, and if your case is handled in Tuscola county, you'll get to know Gerald Polk well. Polk is adult probation officer in the county and handles both probationers and parolees.

The Cass City area native calls his role "a jack of all trades" because he wears both the hat of the probation officer and the hat of parole officer.

"Basically I'm a supervisor," Polk explained last week as he leaned back in his chair at his courthouse office. He had just finished a phone conversation concerning a client.

"This is a highly satisfying position," he said. "I get to deal with people in all walks of life. Each situation is unique and must be handled uniquely."

Polk described his role as that of a monitor rather than strictly a counselor, although counseling is a part of the job. That job goes far beyond keeping tabs on convicted and sentenced persons, however.

It begins shortly after a person is convicted of a felony or high misdemeanor. Always a Circuit Court judge will ask Polk to prepare a pre-sentence investigation. This amounts to a complete biography of the defendant.

"We look at the client's past criminal history," Polk said. "We look at his version of the offense, along with the court version. We conduct an objective recounting of his life as seen through his eyes, along with verifications."

The end product amounts to a typewritten report five to 12 pages long with a cover letter evaluating the client as Polk sees him. In it, he can recommend either prison or probation. Generally, the judge follows these recommendations in sentencing, although he is not bound to do so.

Polk frankly admits this places him in an influential and often touchy position. "It can be ego-shattering sometimes, too, because a judge can look at the evaluation and do whatever he pleases regarding sentencing."

Polk, who lives in Cass City with his wife and two children, does not consider himself a judge. Rather, he calls himself an evaluator.

Probation itself involves four basic restrictions, he explained. A probationer must not violate any laws, must not leave Michigan without written permission, must report at least monthly to his probation officer, and must pay fines and costs, along with restitution.

Any additional terms may be imposed, generally with the idea that they will help make the client a better citizen, Polk said.

CASE LOAD

Polk said in August, he dealt with 45 probation cases and 13 parolees. These include clients out of the county which, for various reasons, he supervises.

His monitoring activities also included home calls until budgetary cutbacks forced a curtailment. Polk said this tends to hamstring this function.

Polk said one of his job's challenges is to try to orient clients not to become repeat offenders. Yet to do this, he must maintain a low profile.

"Too often, these guys will do as they darn well please anyhow," Polk said.

He said he does not try to act as a substitute father to his clients, but will take time to talk with them if he can. The whole key to getting back on the road to a productive life is self-determination, Polk said.

As a monitor, Polk tries not to become overly involved in the family life of his probationers. Sometimes it happens anyway.

"I remember one kid in particular," he said. "I tried to work with him more than any other and he still fell flat. Now he's in prison."

BLIGHTED FOR LIFE

Too often, a one-time offender finds himself without a job and a future because of a law violation. This angers the generally easy-going probation officer.

"Someone that's made one mistake is just as blighted as a three or four-time loser," he said. "Sometime it's impossible for these guys to find a job because an employer asks you have a criminal record? That's like asking him what color he is. It's discrimination."

Still, Polk tries to encourage parolees and probationers to register for work and keep looking for a job. Someone who tries and fails impresses him more than someone who stays in bed until noon and won't help himself.

Polk also becomes concerned with publicity surrounding court cases. Seeing his offenses in black newspaper type often has an adverse psychological effect on a client and breeds fear and distrust, Polk said.

In spite of the obstacles, Polk firmly believes probation works.

"There isn't an institution in the state of Michigan big enough to hold all the people there are on probation today," Polk said. "Probation is a privilege. It's an attempt to help a client prove to himself that he is worth something and can be a productive part of society."

He stated it costs $5,000 to house one person for a two-year term, when on probation, a client can be earning something and not be a drain on society.

"Probation makes sense," he said. "It is flexible because I have to apply my judgement to each case on its merits alone. I'm the man who will bring violation proceedings and I have to base my findings on his conduct."

Probation has changed in the nearly five years since Polk, who is employed by the State Department of Corrections, became adult probation officer in Tuscola county. Supervision has changed from a close involvement with the client to the monitor role.

Pre-sentence investigations are now available to defendants before they are presented in court.

Polk said his number of cases has dropped in the last five years, primarily because District Court has taken over DWI and other alcohol-related offenses with its own probation officer and because marijuana arrests are down.

He foresees, however, another upswing in probation cases. Most clients Polk supervises have been convicted on varying degrees of larceny, such as from a building, from a car, or joy riding.

Many of these are reduced from breaking and entering charges, which carry a more severe penalty.

Polk holds a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Michigan and is a Naval Reserve officer. He worked in child welfare for the Department of Social Services before becoming a probation officer. He feels this gave him valuable background for dealing with people and their problems.

"I really like the work. It's a challenge," he said.

GERALD POLK, Tuscola County Adult Probation Officer, answers a client's question over the telephone in the middle of a busy day. Polk has served as probation officer the last five years.

"If It Fitz . . ."

It's for my own good

BY JIM FITZGERALD

As a United States citizen, I can't understand why I don't feel better.

What I mean is, public-spirited officials are continually doing things for the good of the country. I am a part of the country, truly an average citizen (1.5 TV's, 1.2 cars and 2.5 children). I should feel fine. So how come I break out in a nervous sweat every time Eric Seavard clenches his teeth?

Spiro Agnew was innocent and he could have proved it. He only admitted he was a crook to spare me the humiliation of watching my Vice President explain the virtues of graft to a dumb jury. Richard Nixon didn't have to resign. In a Senate trial, he could have proven himself innocent of an impeachable offense. But he quit the highest position in the land simply so I could have a full-time President to keep an eye on the Middle East for me. He wanted to spare me the uncertainties of being led by a President who was continually summoned from summit conferences to answer burglary charges.

Gerald Ford didn't have to pardon Richard Nixon. He knew the liberals would crucify him. But Ford did it anyway, simply so I could put Watergate behind me and devote all my time to worrying about inflation. Also, he wanted to spare me the terrible trauma of possibly seeing a former President go to the pokey.

It was a good thing I had these fine men looking out for my welfare.

Fool that I was, I didn't think it would bother me to see Agnew on trial. Fact is, I was anxious to hear him explain those envelopes full of cash that people kept handing him. And I was curious to see if all nattering nabobs would be automatically excused from his jury.

Likewise, I wasn't worried about being bombed by Cambodia while President Nixon was tied up in court. I figured General Haig could handle things and, if he needed help, he could call on his brother. I was silly enough to think this country might experience a spiritual uplift under the influence of Haig & Haig. (Forgive me, but this has been a tough year.)

I was even dumber about the pardon. I didn't want Watergate behind me, any more than I wanted Dan Rather out of the White House. The 6 o'clock news is dull without Ron Ziegler explaining to Rather that Nixon couldn't have "lied" to the American people on April 21, 1973, because all of 1973 has been declared inoperative. (Except for Christmas and the day Julie was hired by the Saturday Evening Post.)

Even worse, I must admit I wasn't terribly concerned about the possibility of an ex-President going to jail if he were found guilty of a felony. Nixon always said the guilty should be punished, didn't he? They'd lock up your Uncle Jake, wouldn't they? And besides, it would have been interesting to see if the warden could fit Nixon's throne through the cell door.

But I was wrong. I didn't know what was good for me — and the entire country. Agnew, Nixon and Ford did. In my own best interests, despite my ignorance, they generously spared me all those traumatic experiences. They took the divisiveness out of my future. Now I can move forward and concern myself with more important problems. For instance, how long has it been since you asked yourself whatever happened to Eddie Fisher? Think about it.

I should be grateful. I should feel good. But I feel lousy.

I guess I'm just an ingrate. The trouble is, I keep thinking of your Uncle Jake.

Advance tickets are available from all township firemen and can be purchased at Coachlight Pharmacy; Old Wood Drug; Caro Pharmacy; Caro; McKenzie's Store, Elkton; Laursen's Pharmacy, Pigeon; Hanson's Health & Party Store, Ubly; and Higby's Pharmacy, Bad Axe.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald L. Hendrick

Sheila Ann Smithers became the bride of Ronald Lee Hendrick Saturday, Aug. 3, at Sacred Heart Catholic Church, Bad Axe. Rev. Fr. Raymond Oswald performed the 3:30 p.m., double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Smithers of Ubly. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hendrick of Cass City.

The bride wore a long A-line gown of white chiffon with lace covering the top and lace inserts in the long sleeves. A lace bonnet held a full-length lace-edged veil.

The bride carried a traditional cascade of white roses, stephanotis, baby's breath with strands of English ivy and white streamers.

Maid of honor was Judy Smithers, sister of the bride, of Ubly. Bridesmaids included Patty Oseoski of Ubly, friend of the bride, Debbie Loomis, cousin of the groom, and Susan Hendrick, sister of the groom, both of Cass City, and Barb Smithers of Ubly, sister of the bride.

All bridesmaids were attired in identical gowns of flowered chiffon with blue underlinings, styled with halter backs, Empire waists and waistlength jackets. Light blue nylon picture hats with matching blue bows were worn by the bridesmaids.

They carried umbrella-shaped baskets with blue and white carnations, baby's breath, English ivy and accented with blue streamers.

Best man was Dick Bassett of Cass City, friend of the groom. Groomsmen included Randy Smithers, brother of the bride, of Ubly; Scott Hendrick, brother of the groom, and Rick Hendrick, cousin of the groom, both of Cass City, and Wayne Colney, cousin of the bride, of Ubly.

The groomsmen were attired in light blue tuxedo jackets and black trousers. Ring bearer was Jeff Smithers, brother of the bride.

The church was decorated with bouquets of blue and white carnations and candles at the altar.

Becky Loomis, cousin of the groom, served as organist. Pat Particka of Ubly was soloist.

The bride and groom were escorted to the altar by their parents.

A wedding supper was held following the ceremony for 350 guests at the Ubly Fox Hunter's Club. Dancing followed and a buffet lunch was served later in the evening.

The bride's mother chose a floor-length blue chiffon gown. The groom's mother chose a full-length blue polyester gown. Both mothers wore a corsage of red roses.

The bridegroom is a student in Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Rabbit tracks

By John Haire

(And anyone else he can get to help)

It just doesn't happen in high school football. A field goal. Never mind that Jan Grenholm comes from Sweden and is a soccer player. Kicking a football under pressure is different. That's what I told Dave Lovejoy before the kick. After the kick, Lovejoy just smiled slyly and tucked my $1 securely away.

No, I don't figure I'm unlucky. . . not like Dorothy Phillips does. Her son, fans know, is a vital cog in the Hawks' grid machine and naturally she wants a winner as much as anyone.

But everytime she sees the game, Cass City loses. She told me before the game that she was going to stay home and see what happens against the Lakers.

What happened was that Cass City won. Regardless, I told her she should still go this Friday. . . providing she brings a rabbit's foot and a four-leaf clover and doesn't walk under any ladders.

Arlan Hartwick, a main stem businessman for decades, now retired can testify that there are still fish in the Au Sable River near Mio.

He and his wife were fishing the river last week when the Department of Natural Resources were there to take a fish count.

They do it by stopping the flow of water at the dam and shocking the fish.

Arlan watched the process from start to finish and said there was a surprising number of good sized fish taken in the census.

Harry Little, Bill Wallace and assorted other sidewalk engineers keep asking me how Main Street sidewalks will drain when they are lower than the curb.

I asked Editor Jim Ketchum about this (anything to keep from doing the work myself) and he had the answer.

The answer is that it's an optical illusion. According to Jim, Village Supt. Lou LaPonsie and Village President Lambert Althaver measured with a string and say that the walks will drain and we can all be assured that the Michigan State Highway Department knows what it is doing.

Walbro next year will be 25 years old, over 20 of these years have been in Cass City. Executive vice-president Lambert Althaver reviewed the early years of the company for Rotarians Tuesday starting when the company hired 10 men here.

Now over 500 are employed in the various communities where the company has plants and recently Walbro turned out its one millionth chain saw carburetor.

Fire destroys mobile home

Fire destroyed a 12 by 60-foot mobile home owned by Morley Reynolds on Hutchinson Road, nine miles southwest of Gagetown, Wednesday night, Sept. 25, around 7:40 p.m.

Gagetown firemen, assisted by Elkland township firemen, responded to the alarm. The fire was reportedly burning out of control by the time firemen arrived.

Total loss was set at $8,000. Fire officials said they were uncertain how the blaze started, but suspect it may have originated in the kitchen with cooking grease left on an electric stove.

The family was not in the trailer at the time of the fire.

WHERE EVERYTHING YOU

I'm in a writing slump. . . My topics recently have been blah! My smiles boring, trite. My word pictures a muddy grey at best and an out-of-focus blur at worst.

Everything produced seems to me to come out like it was produced by a high school student writing an essay that he hopes will please the teacher.

What's the reason? Primarily, I suspect (and hope) that it's just one of those periods that happens. . . happens to me, happens to you, happens to all of us.

It's when that favorite recipe suddenly produces a cake that's soggy when it usually turns out as light as thistledown. It's when the businessman stocks up on toys for Christmas and everyone buys games. It's when the farmer plants beans, and corn turns out to be the money crop.

Be honest. You've had those days, those periods. Sure you have.

Really, things do run in cycles. Everything. Take the simple matter of going out for morning coffee at the businessmen's round table.

Most days there are a dozen or more there at one time and standard practice is to play a numbers game until someone is stuck for all the coffees.

By the law of chance it's likely that about every dozen times you play the game you wind up buying the coffee. But no way does it happen like that.

It's common to find one person paying for coffee three times in one week and sometimes three times in a row.

It's common, too, for one of the players to go six months, a year, even, and never buy a coffee.

But veterans of the game have learned. . . don't brag about it. Just when you feel that coffee will be always free the law of chance makes up for your good luck and presto! You're not ahead any more.

I tell myself that's what has happened in the column writing business. Things will get better by and by, I say. Better and easier to write. And it will, too. It will if I can find the will and the way to keep plugging along doing the best I can. Just the way most of us do as we trudge along at our jobs.

That's the catch. Doing the best I can. Way down deep I wonder if perhaps some of this stuff comes out pallid and uninteresting because I no longer have the drive to shake the doldrums and present something better.

It's easy to slide along in mediocrity or worse. Pound out 350 words or so and call it a day. It's hard to say to yourself, no, this won't do. It has to be better.

To realize that good writing is as much perspiration as inspiration.

Like most things. The answers are really pretty simple. Work harder, sweat more.

Maybe I'll start next week. Maybe.

KETCHUM'S KNAPSACK

Where were you in '62?

By Jim Ketchum

Either I'm getting old quickly or the nostalgia binge has gotten entirely out of hand.

First it was the Roaring '20's everybody wanted to recapture, followed in fads by the 1930's and '40's. That was fine. It was far enough back that I couldn't remember. In fact, I had just nicely pruned past being a twinkle in my father's eye when the 1940's slipped out into oblivion.

Now, it seems, the faddists have advanced one full decade and are pressing hard into the next one. The 1950's are the big rage now. Why? I don't know.

This isn't to say the '50's were a total loss. I remember some nice things that happened back then. The 1956 Chevrolet, GM's greatest car, came out. So did American Motors' greatest car, the 1955 Nash Ambassador.

So did Howdy Doody, Red Skelton and Al Kaline.

But, gee whiz, was it all that great a decade? I doubt it.

It seemed that we were living on the edge of World War III, economic depression and the emergence of the tail fin throughout those 10 years. Boys wore those greasy, duck-tail haircuts that made them look like extras in the gang-fight scenes from West Side Story.

Watching Edd "Kookie" Byrnes park that "Thunderbird" every week on "77 Sunset Strip" made a lot of people wonder if he'd park it, steal it or just smash into a wall.

The moviemakers like to cash in on the assumption that back then, nobody knew anything about sex until a few months after the honeymoon, and only then from the kindly old family doctor who never got married anyway.

They like to show that those young folks really did mess around in the back seat of Dad's DeSoto at Lover's Leap.

So what? The fact that we're overpopulated now testifies to that.

The James Dean cult seems to draw new life in all this. Actually I'll bet fewer people knew who James Dean was than know who invented the funky chicken.

Among other things, the 1950's gave us Nikita Khrushchev, Fidel Castro and Joe McCarthy, along with continuing performances by Richard Nixon, Frank Costello and Charles E. Wilson, who said "What's good for General Motors is good for the country."

As if all this weren't bad enough, now some idiot is trying to make us believe that the 1960's was that golden age of wonderful things, too. One movie uses the tag line "Where were you in '62?"

I remember and I'd just as soon forget. Most of the time I was playing the born loser in my phys. ed. classes. Teams would fight over who'd get stuck with me.

When we played softball, one of my team mates would always tell me to run on the third strike, never assuming that I might make contact with the ball.

I didn't very often. When I finally passed that hurdle, I burned my gym shorts and sweat socks, shedding no tears.

If you overlook that, along with three assassinations, the Vietnam War, race riots and Richard Nixon, it probably wasn't too bad a decade. The only thing is, once you overlook all this stuff, you've only got about 20 minutes left that were any good.

Let's hear it for the 1970's.

CIE sets sights on greater school involvement

Expanding its volunteer program and follow-up work on its survey are just two of the projects on the docket for the Citizens for Improved Education during the 1974-75 school year.

Officers of CIE met Monday night to plan activities for the coming year and reviewed accomplishments since the organization began working in Cass City elementary schools two years ago.

President Janet Harrison reflected on the early days of CIE.

"At first, I think the schools felt threatened by us," she recalled. "And I think a lot of parents were hoping we would be a complaint group. But actually, we've found a lot of cooperation from both sides."

That cooperation has led to the installation of a traffic light at the Intermediate School and Walk-Wait signs, both strongly advocated by CIE.

The group also conducted open "Meet the Candidates" rallies, designed to give the community a chance to quiz hopefuls for school board posts.

The CIE also instituted a telephone canvass to remind and encourage voter participation in school elections. Updated registered voter lists were compiled by school secretaries and principals to use in the canvass.

Probably the greatest success of CIE has been in its volunteer program in the elementary schools. Mrs. Harrison said the group hopes to expand to at least 15 volunteer teacher assistants at Campbell elementary this year, along with increases at Deford.

"This year, we'd like to involve senior citizens," Vice-president Ellen Toner said. "We think there is a vast amount of experience and knowledge that could be put to good use in something like this."

She said the CIE plans to attend local meetings of senior citizens to explore setting up a program.

The volunteer program provides assistance for teachers in such areas as reading, math and spelling. So far, the reaction has been highly favorable, Mrs. Harrison said.

"The kids especially look forward to seeing a volunteer come," she said. "Of course we think this is great."

LABEL COLLECTION

Last year's soup label collection program will get under way again this year, starting Oct. 14. Last year, label collection and redemption provided Campbell with a record player, ear phones and a listening station. Deford and Evergreen Schools received record players and a headset also went to Deford Elementary.

Other money-raising projects for the elementary schools have included a book fair and learning festival and sale of school sweatshirts. From the book fair, Campbell received $87, with $35 going to Deford, Evergreen and the Intermediate school.

Sweatshirt sales brought Campbell $97.00, Deford $50.00, Evergreen $42.00, the Intermediate school $92.50 and the high school $8.50.

CIE has achieved most of its success at the Elementary level, Mrs. Harrison said, because the group can do more at these schools. As students get older, there are more things for them to do, she said.

She added, however, that the group is trying to work at all educational levels in the Cass City system. Probably the group's most significant contribution at the high school has been a drug survey which attempted to evaluate the drug problem in the school.

This year's plans include follow-up work on this survey, along with follow-up on another survey dealing with special education. The group plans a panel discussion later in the year.

"Special education is very misunderstood," Mrs. Harrison said. "We think this aspect is very important." CIE also plans to continue efforts to improve safety for children walking to and from school. The group still wants crossing guards placed on Main Streets at strategic points.

WHY INVOLVED?

Why have CIE members chosen this route to become involved in school affairs?

"I have three kids in school and I believe education is such an important part of their life," Mrs. Harrison said. "It should be as important a part of my life, too. I think it's the responsibility of parents to know what's going on with their child's education."

Mrs. Toner agreed. "I don't think school and home should be completely segregated," she said. "I think the two should be a part of each other. The more adults we have as volunteers in the school, the less the kids will resent adults later on."

Pat Childs, steering committee chairman, agreed. "When I was in school, if you saw an adult other than a teacher in the hall, you thought, what's he done now?"

Presently, the group has nine active members with more inactive members. Mrs. Harrison said inactive members are those who can't make it for regular meetings but who help out on special projects.

"We've never forced membership," Mrs. Harrison said. "We realize everybody can't be involved in everything."

The group meets the third Monday of each month at 7:30 p.m. at the high school cafeteria.

Officers include president, Janet Harrison; vice-president, Ellen Toner; secretary, Joyce Lane; treasurer, Beverly Langenburg, and project director, Thresa Burnette.

CITIZENS FOR IMPROVED EDUCATION began laying the groundwork for its 1974-75 program Monday night. Shown planning activities are (from the left) Beverly Langenburg, treasurer; Ellen Toner, vice-president; Janet Harrison, president; Pat Childs, steering committee, and Joyce Lane, secretary. Not present was project director Thresa Burnette.

Kingston man sought

A warrant has been issued for a Kingston man, charging him with marijuana possession following a routine traffic check by Cass City Police Sunday.

Police declined to release any names until an arrest and arraignment are made.

The incident occurred following a routine traffic stop by officer Robert Smith. Smith reported he discovered two marijuana cigarettes in the vehicle he stopped on Seeger Street because it had a noisy muffler.

An arrest is expected soon, according to Chief Gene Wilson.

Police investigated two reports of vandalism last week. Vandalism broke three windows at Cass City High School Friday night. Police said rain which washed away tire tracks left them without suspects.

Total damage was placed around $60.

Vandals used squash, eggs and green tomatoes to break the windows.

Police also reported seven windows were broken over the week end at Walbro Corp. Plant 3. They said the windows, located along the north side of the building, were broken with stones.

No damage figure was available and police have no suspects.

AROUND THE FARM

Dairy notes

By William Bortel

Silo problem: Dairymen who own silos bought from Michigan Silo Company may have a problem. There is evidence that some of the silos are contaminated with polychlorinated biphenyl (PCB) from a material used to seal the joint mortar inside the silo during construction. The material containing PCB has been used extensively for recasting silo interiors since 1948.

One Michigan dairy farmer in mid-August had been excluded from the market because of PCB residue, and milk from two other producers showed traces of the substance. The PCB residue is unrelated to the PBB contamination. If you have any questions in regard to silos bought from this company, get in touch with the Tuscola County Extension Office or the Michigan Department of Agriculture in Lansing.

Feeding Colostrum: Research has proven feeding colostrum to the new-born calf is the most important management practice in raising calves. It is extremely important to see that the new-born calf has Colostrum within one to three hours after birth. The best practice is to milk the fresh cow and feed the calf the colostrum by bottle within the first three hours.

The calf nursing on the cow is a good practice but not the best since the calf normally fails to suck for a few hours. Therefore dairymen feeding the colostrum to the calf by bottle feeding is extremely important to get the new born calf started with anti-body process against scours and other diseases.

Tuscola county dairymen have experienced a high mortality of calves during the first three to six weeks following birth. These heifer calves are the herd replacements and a dairyman should try every management technique possible to put these heifers back into the herd.

Garage sale— sure, profitable cure for a cluttered attic

By Jim Ketchum

The quickest remedy for an overcrowded attic, a bulging basement or a groaning garage in Cass City is the garage sale.

In recent years, more people are looking twice at those treasures of life. Rather than donate to charity, they've resorted to the garage sale.

On any given week end, it's a sure bet that at least one home-made "garage sale" sign, drawn on poster board and displayed from a stick, will catch your eye on a drive through town.

In last week's Chronicle alone, four sales were advertised. And a quick check showed most were doing a thriving business, thanks to beautiful weather and the itch to find a bargain.

"It's really lots of fun," Mrs. Hazel Seeley of 4344 Oak St., said Friday. "You get to meet a lot of people as well as cleaning out the attic and the basement. There's a fellowship about it that's nice."

She said Friday afternoon the sale, in which 11 families took part, had taken in about $200, with still another day and evening to go. She estimated 175 customers had stopped by in the day and a half the sale had been in progress.

"We've sold things you'd never think would go," Mrs. Seeley said. "Whatnots seem to attract a lot of customers. It's strange, though, how things will sell."

Some of Mrs. Seeley's bargains included a working radio for $2, a mixer for $2, curtains for 50 cents and flower pots for a dime each. "Those flower pots really went in a hurry," she said.

She said adult clothing did not sell well, probably due to changing styles. Shoes moved slowly also, Mrs. Seeley said, but she had sold some.

"I sold a roaster for $20 and bought a scrubber for $20, so I was really pleased," she said. Another participant in the sale, Mrs. Carol Ehrlich, said she was surprised at how fast things sold.

"We've sold so much we've gone back to get more," Mrs. Ehrlich said. "But it's really a lot of fun."

Another successful garage salesperson is Mrs. Paul Craig of 4811 N. Seeger St. She's held one a year the past eight years and every one has been highly successful. This year's was no exception.

She said Friday that in two days, she'd taken in about $300.

"I started when we lived in Caro," Mrs. Craig, a retired school teacher, recalled. "We held it in a breezeway and I really didn't expect much to come of it. It was a fantastic success. The next year we held it in the basement and did well again."

Since she's lived in Cass City, Mrs. Craig's golden touch has continued. She estimated about 100 customers had stopped to inspect and buy items.

"You get to meet so many people," she said. Most of her customers tend to be from the Cass City area, although some come from as far as Fairgrove.

She agreed that nicknacks tended to sell well, along with books and children's clothing. Adult clothing, however, is another story.

"It's really too bad because there's a lot there that is good and not worn badly," Mrs. Craig commented.

Most of her items ranged in price from a dime up. One item carried a $10 price tag, but this was unusual, she said.

Mrs. Craig said the important thing about a garage sale is that everything have some sort of price, even if it's only a dime.

"People are proud," she said. "They don't want to be given something but they'll take it if they can pay a little something. It just thrills me to see people find what they really need."

She recalled an instance at an earlier sale when a financially-strapped mother bought 20 pairs of rubber pants for her baby for a nickel apiece.

"She couldn't afford to buy them new and we'd have just thrown them out anyhow," Mrs. Craig said. "It's things like that that make you feel good."

Mrs. Craig's assortment of items included muskrat traps that sold for a dollar each. New, they would cost at least $4 each.

Antique dealers regularly ply the garage sale route. One such dealer stopped at Mrs. Craig's sale during the Chronicle's visit. He said items not really antique but considered collectables can bring high prices, such as old banks, souvenir playing cards or eyeglasses.

Mrs. Craig said garage sales can be profitable, but they're also a lot of work.

"After you spend a day sorting and marking all this stuff, you're really all in," she commented. "But your experience tells you what's reasonable and what isn't. You soon learn how to set your prices."

Mrs. Konrad Konwalski, who also had a sale last week, said she found dishes, pictures and nicknacks sold the best. Again, clothing just didn't move.

"I used to donate to rummage sales," Mrs. Konwalski said. "But they just didn't make too much money on it."

And you hate to throw all this stuff away when somebody may be able to use it. So we thought we'd try a garage sale."

She said Thursday and Friday she made about $85, adding that business had been a little slower than she expected. Mrs. Konwalski said she was disappointed that few customers seemed interested in good used clothing.

"Here's a bedspread," she said, picking a brown, patterned design from a box. "It's completely good and I've only got a $2 price on it. No one wants it. They seem to want the nicknacks instead."

Mrs. Konwalski remained philosophical, however. "It's a nice day to be outside, so it isn't a total loss."

Name five students to Who's Who

More Cass City High School seniors have been named to Who's Who Among American High School Students, 1973-74.

Nancy Koepfgen, daughter of Mrs. Donald Koepfgen and the late Mr. Koepfgen, of 5206 Koepfgen Rd., is one of several seniors recently selected.

She is active in girls sports, the Senior Trip Club, Student Council, Ski Club, 4-H, and the Girl's Varsity Club.

She has received varsity letters in girl's basketball, volleyball and softball, and is a member of the National Honor Society.

She plans to attend Michigan State University following graduation.

Another selection is Jill Field, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Field, of 7729 Deckerville Rd., Deford.

Miss Field is a member of the Cass City High School marching band and is chairman of the senior trip committee of the Senior Trip Club. She has worked in the guidance office at the high school the past three years.

In addition, she won a varsity letter in volleyball and softball. She plans to attend Moti Community College in Flint.

Dorothy Schwartz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Schwartz, 4234 S. Seeger, was also named.

Dorothy Schwartz

She is active in the Spanish Club, Drama Club, Senior Trip Club and the American Legion Auxiliary. She is a member of the National Honor Society and has done volunteer work.

Janet Auvil is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Ray Auvil of 4665 Pringle Rd., Snover.

She is active in Student Council, the Senior Trip Club, Spanish Club, Pep Club, the National Honor Society and 4-H.

She has also served as office secretary two years.

She plans to enter Michigan State University following graduation.

Randy Hoffman

Randy Hoffman is a 1974 graduate of Cass City High School, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arlington Hoffman of Cass City.

He was active in band, the junior National Honor Society and received an honorary award from the State Board of Education for achievement.

He plans to attend Delta College and then transfer to Ann Arbor to complete a course in respiratory therapy.

Owen-Gage students named to Merit award

One senior and a former student at Owendale-Gage-town High School have been named Merit Program Commended students by the National Merit Scholarship Program.

They are Larry R. Cooley, a senior, and Daniel K. Wissner, a former Owen-Gage student.

The students are among 38,000 commended students named on the basis of their performance on 1973 examinations. As commended students, they fall just below 15,000 semifinalists who will continue in Merit Scholarship competition, according to James Barr, Owen-Gage High School principal.

THAT LARGE vegetable Mrs. Linda Voss of Grawford Road is holding in her right hand isn't a squash. It's a gourd. She is shown comparing it to an average-size specimen in her left hand. Mrs. Voss explained the super-gourd grew from seeds she discarded in the trash barrel. It weighs 4½ pounds, is 12 inches long and 17½ inches in circumference. She said she isn't sure just what to do with it.

REGULAR MEETING OF CASS CITY VILLAGE COUNCIL

Spice up hand-me-downs

Remember individuality when giving children hand-me-down clothing. Change the garment and make them special for each child.

Add a monogram or embroider the child's name on the garment. A favorite trim—such as rickrack, braid, or lace can make a blouse look unique.

Make a jumper out of a dress by scooping out the sleeves and neckline.

Zigzag or fancy stitching adds color and design to a plain outfit. Ever thought of adding a pocket to an unusual place (a sleeve, hip area, etc.)?

How about removing or adding a collar to a dress? After lengthening a skirt, cover the old hemline with a pretty trim.

Decorative patches or appliques can change the mood of worn-out jeans. Buy the patches or make your own by cutting out flowers, toys, etc.

Use your imagination and make hand-me-downs look new.

The regular meeting of the Cass City Village Council was held on September 24, 1974, at the Municipal Building. All Trustees were present.

The minutes of the regular August meeting were read and approved.

Jim Courtney, Chamber of Commerce President, was present to ask Council if the Village would take over the responsibility of purchasing Christmas decorations for the downtown business district. President Althaver told Mr. Courtney that the 1974 budget could not handle additional expense this year, but that it would be considered for the 1975 budget year.

Dick Erla was present to request a change in zoning of the property located west of Nestles Street between Church and Main Streets from Light Industrial to General Business for the purpose of a drive-in restaurant. The request will be referred to the Planning Commission and Council will await their recommendation.

A petition requesting speed limit signs, yield right of way signs and increased police patrol on West Church Street signed by residents in the area was presented to the Council by Carlton Teller. President informed Mr. Teller that police patrol would be increased and that the Superintendent would check into putting up some speed limit signs.

A motion was made by Trustee Jones and supported by Trustee Tuttle that the collection of taxes be extended to October 21, 1974. Motion carried.

A motion was made by Trustee Lawson and supported by Trustee Bliss that the bills as examined be approved for payment. Motion carried.

All Council members expressed their appreciation to all members of the Village employee group for their additional efforts in accomplishing many projects during the past several months. Approval of the new office facility was also voiced by all Councilmen.

A motion was made by Trustee Tuttle and supported by Trustee Bliss that Ordinance No. 82 regulating peddlers, solicitors and canvassers in the Village of Cass City be adopted. Motion carried.

There being no further business a motion was made by Trustee Hampshire and supported by Trustee Bliss that the meeting be adjourned. Motion carried.

Jar, lid shortage casts crunch on Cass City canners

If you've thought about trying your hand at canning, you've already discovered yet another shortage. This time it's canning jars, lids and rings.

Rising food prices, coupled with better than average yields from Cass City area gardens, has put the squeeze on canning supplies which were already low.

Local stores which normally sell jars and lids report supplies exhausted. Most say they could easily sell carloads of the scarce jars and lids with no trouble.

The move toward more home canning can be traced first to increased costs in stores, according to Aliene Mills, Tuscola County Cooperative Extension Agent. However, she does not blame higher prices on food costs alone.

"Food itself hasn't gone up that much, but packaging has," Ms. Mills said. "Tin cans especially are becoming more expensive. I saw a posted statement at a store in Millington saying metal that goes into making lids and canning rings is already pre-rated to other things."

Ms. Mills said another reason for the canning supply shortage is increased demand. More successful gardens were planted in Tuscola county this summer than in other parts of the state, causing a run on the precious jars and lids.

"More people who had home gardens wanted to do something more with what they had than give it away or let it spoil," Ms. Mills said.

"In the past, they might have given it to the neighbors," Ms. Mills said another reason for the canning supply demand is an underlying worry that grocers might not be able to keep shelves stocked in winter months. She tended to discount this possibility, however.

"Another reason, I think, is the great amount of self-satisfaction many homemakers get out of canning," Ms. Mills said. "They know that there are no unknown additives in their processed food. And, with fruit, they can control the amount of sugar they use as well."

She said her office contacts regarding canning information have tripled this year, not only from persons who never canned, but also from veteran canners who wanted to bring their methods up to date.

"We've also had a large number of men requesting canning information," she said. "It's becoming more of a family activity."

Ms. Mills said you really can save money by home canning, provided you have the equipment. She said her own canning efforts saved about 10 per cent, compared to store prices.

"But I had to buy the vegetables and fruit myself," she explained. "Anyone with a garden can definitely save more."

She emphasized that a person starting out buying all supplies such as jars, lids, pressure canner, and water bath should realize it will take several seasons of canning to make the effort pay.

"And above all, we highly recommend canners follow recommended procedures," she said. "This means the water bath method for fruits and tomatoes and a pressure canner for low-acid foods. We also highly recommend blanching."

She said she does not foresee a slackening of demand supplies. She predicted strong demand during the winter and early spring, in preparation for 1975.

of jars disappeared within one hour after they went on display.

Prices range about 39 cents for a dozen lids and $2.49 for a case of 12 quart jars.

One official at Erla's, who declined to be quoted directly, said demand for canning supplies is up 25 per cent over last year. She said the store receives about 30 calls a day asking if jars and lids are in stock.

She explained the store receives a shipment once a week regularly. Salesmen are trying to supply the store with more.

"We'll take whatever we can get," she said. "This year, with the gardens doing just super-duper, it's really created a run on canning supplies."

Gladys Albee of Albee Hardware said the store's supply of canning jars and lids went last spring.

"This was the first year we sold them and they went in a big hurry," she said. "We'll do our best to get more next year, but we can't get any more now."

She said the store receives calls regularly asking about jars and lids.

"I just think more people have been putting in more gardens," Mrs. Albee said. "I think you'll see it go right on."

Harry Lenda of the IGA Foodliner said canning supplies are practically non-existent. His store hasn't received a shipment of canning jars in three months and has received just a few lids in the past three weeks.

"Those few lids we got were gone in a couple of hours," he said. "Like today for instance, I got in one case of lids and rings. I've had to limit it to one dozen per customer."

"They tell us part of the shortage of lids is due to a shortage of tin plate and the lacquer they use to coat them with," Lenda said. "Of course this is a petroleum base."

"What happened was everybody put in a garden this year and then they got caught without any canning supplies," Lenda said. "I got three cases of jars in. Well, how long are three cases going to last? They just keep telling us to reorder. What else can we do?"

SOLD OUT

Locally, canning jars, rings and lids are going like proverbial hot cakes. Erla's reported last week that 10 cases of lids and caps and 30 cases

Stop... and look

A child is born with imagination, with the ability to see the magic of the world around him. Yet so much creativity—so much "seeing"—is often lost as we grow older and the complexities of life sweep over us.

When a child confronts nature, he isn't in a hurry. He takes time to study each blade of grass, to appreciate the colors of a butterfly, to marvel at a flower or the soft fur of a kitten.

We shouldn't lose this sensibility as we grow up. God created the world, but man has often abused it. So stop—once in awhile—and look, feel and listen. This is communion, restoration... like the spirit you find in church.

BETTER HEALTH

Dissolving gallstones

BY DR. WALTER C. ALVAREZ and DR. WILLIAM J. WELCH

"Isn't there some way to dissolve these things?" That is the question almost every sufferer with gallstone colic asks when he learns that in order to get well he has to go under the knife.

Finding a way to dissolve gallstones rather than having to remove surgically the gall bladder that contains them has been the aim of medical investigators for almost as many years as the disease has been recognized. But only recently has that aim seemed near to accomplishment. And this is so, even though many of the fundamental questions about how and why gallstones form are yet to be answered.

One type of gallstone, made up principally of crystallized cholesterol, and such stones comprise 80 to 90 per cent of the stones that afflict humans, have been successfully dissolved.

This was achieved quite unexpectedly in the course of studying the relationship of the several elements that make up the bile. Apparently, a disturbed ratio of bile acids and certain fat-like substances determines whether or not cholesterol crystals will precipitate out of solution and form stones in the gall bladder.

It may be that this disturbed ratio is caused by an hereditary lack of a regulating factor in those who are such stone-formers. The possibility of an "inborn error" in those who make stones is suggested by the fact that Indians of the Southwest United States have a very high incidence of gallstones, particularly the women.

Or it could be just another one of those poorly understood differences between men and women, because the latter in general have more gallstones than men. Then, too, inflammation in the gall bladder may be the culprit, upsetting the ratio in the bile that bathes the inflamed wall of the gall bladder.

And while we are going over the possibilities, it has recently been reported that a diet high in so-called polyunsaturated fats, taken to lower cholesterol levels in the blood, may be associated with an increased incidence of gallstones.

We do not really know which, if any, of these factors are the critical ones, but it occurred to those interested that feeding certain bile acids might influence the ratio favorably. It not only influenced the ratio but, in some instances, cholesterol stones both reduced in size and actually dissolved.

And so we are faced with one of those familiar paradoxes of medicine: we have an apparently effective treatment but we do not know what makes it work.

The ever-present problem in any new treatment of toxic side effects that may turn up has yet to be thoroughly investigated. And the search will go on for related compounds that can influence the ratio.

We are not ready yet to dismiss the gall-bladder surgeons by any means, but we are clearly on the brink of a new medical treatment for millions of people with cholesterol gallstones, who may never have to go under the knife.

Your neighbor says

Rocky's not too rich

Nelson Rockefeller is one of the richest men in the world. Since his nomination as Vice-President, his wealth has been held up to close scrutiny by Congressional investigators.

Blake Sackett of 4572 Hill St. doesn't really believe Rockefeller's wealth should get in the way of doing his job as Vice-President.

"He's got more money than he'll ever need," Sackett said, adding that the former New York Governor shouldn't be tempted to get rich through politics.

"He's as good as any of them," Sackett said. "I think he's had a good record as governor, but I don't think I'd vote for him. I really can't say why."

He said he thinks the majority of congressmen are in favor of Rockefeller and expects to see him appointed. Sackett and his wife retired to Cass City two years ago after living in the Detroit area since 1918.

"I just wish I'd come here 10 years ago," he added. "It's a real nice town."

Kitchen tips

A decorative and practical plus for any kitchen is a washable wall covering, especially those made of vinyl. If your wall covering is not washable it is possible to treat it with a washable finish before putting it up.

To conserve energy and avoid heat waste, use pots and pans having essentially the same diameter as the surface unit or burner. The flame on gas burners should not extend beyond the utensil edges.

Cut down on after-meal cleanup by keeping your kitchen clean as you work. Keep paper towels and damp sponges handy for wiping up soil and spills.

Many electric and gas utilities offer free kitchen-planning help.

$1,200 raised in Walk-A-Thon

Big Brothers-Big Sisters of Tuscola county is $1,200 richer this week, thanks to pledges from Saturday's Walk-A-Thon held at Cass City.

According to Jim Turner of the Department of Social Services, who acted as coordinator for the Cass City effort, a total of 38 walkers trudged the 10-mile course, including eight of 13 band members who turned out.

Band members included Dave Langmaid, Dave Kenward, Joel Palmateer, Kathy Kirn, Ken Kerbyson, Lori Arroyo, Susan Bond, Elaine Stoutenburg, Jesse Groth, Al Pratt, Dave Bartnik, Vicki Vandiver and Terry Hoag.

The walkers left the park shortly after 9 a.m. Darryl Hoag, 10, was the earliest walker to return, checking in at 11:45 a.m.

Refreshments were provided by Sommers and Sutters' Bakeries, The Church of God and St. Pancratius Ladies Altar Society, Turner said.

Owen-Gage enrollment down

Some observers see this as a clear signal that a tax increase will probably face Owen-Gage voters at the annual election next June.

Sanford also hinted that a special millage request may have to be made to handle repairs to the football field lighting system which was shut down last week.

He said an inspection team was scheduled to look over the lights the first part of this week and determine what needs to be done. He said Consumers Power Co. disconnected power to the lights after it was determined the system was unsafe.

Sanford said the system reportedly contains numerous shorts. He added no more night football games are planned at the field this year.

He estimated costs of renovating the lights and making repairs in the high school building could reach upwards of $60,000.

The extent and cost of renovation work in the high school is still unknown. Preliminary reports are to be ready by the next school board meeting Oct. 14. Early indications point toward renovations in the electrical and air handling system and the addition of fire escapes.

Enrollment figures show Cass City and Uby School Districts made slight gains in student population for the 1974-75 school year, while Owen-Gage and Kingston showed decreases.

Supt. Donald Crouse said the official September fourth Friday count, which determines state aid, showed 2,150 students enrolled at Cass City, compared with 2,122 last year.

While no figures on state aid are yet available, Crouse explained the district would be working with a guaranteed aid figure totaling $39 per mill per child, compared with $38 last year.

Official enrollment figures at Uby show 1,434 students, a gain of one student over last year.

Supt. Douglas Brownrigg said he had estimated a student population closer to 1,460. He said kindergarten enrollment is down from 110 last year to 91 this year, but added that increases in other grades offset this drop.

State aid figures from Uby were not available at press time.

Kingston's student population for 1974-75 stands at 892, down from 899 last year.

Again, total revenue figures were not available from Kingston at press time.

The Owen-Gage School District showed the sharpest drop in the area, from 626 last year to 588 this year.

Supt. Donald Crouse said the official September fourth Friday count, which determines state aid, showed 2,150 students enrolled at Cass City, compared with 2,122 last year.

While no figures on state aid are yet available, Crouse explained the district would be working with a guaranteed aid figure totaling $39 per mill per child, compared with $38 last year.

Official enrollment figures at Uby show 1,434 students, a gain of one student over last year.

Supt. Douglas Brownrigg said he had estimated a student population closer to 1,460. He said kindergarten enrollment is down from 110 last year to 91 this year, but added that increases in other grades offset this drop.

State aid figures from Uby were not available at press time.

Kingston's student population for 1974-75 stands at 892, down from 899 last year.

Again, total revenue figures were not available from Kingston at press time.

The Owen-Gage School District showed the sharpest drop in the area, from 626 last year to 588 this year.

Enrollment figures show Cass City and Uby School Districts made slight gains in student population for the 1974-75 school year, while Owen-Gage and Kingston showed decreases.

It's Caro Friday for Home-coming

Who said Hawks can't pass? Cass City 10, Lakers 0

The early season book on Quarterback Tom Smentek was that he couldn't pass. But after last Friday's victory over the Lakers, 10-0, scouts for the Caro Tigers can throw that book away.

For when the Tigers come to Cass City this week to help the Hawks celebrate their home-coming they won't be able to discount Cass City's passing attack.

For it was the aerial game that accounted for the Hawks first and only touchdown in two Thumb B Conference tilts this season.

It came in dramatic fashion and with picture book precision.

Cass City was running out of downs and time in the second quarter and both teams were deadlocked in a scoreless, head knocking defensive duel. It was fourth down with long yardage when Smentek faded back and hit Ed Stoutenburg on the left sidelines.

Stoutenburg had slipped behind the halfbacks and the pass hit him in full stride. Behind good blocking he raced without being touched into the end zone in a play that covered 35 yards. When Stoutenburg danced into pay dirt the score board clock showed just 55 seconds left in the first half.

Jan Grenholm, Cass City's foreign exchange student with the educated toe, calmly booted the extra point and the Hawks were ahead at the half, 7-0.

The Hawks staged a sustained drive midway into the final quarter moving with precision down the field to inside the five where Grenholm again was summoned. He hit the field goal attempt with a kick that covered about 20 yards and iced the contest for Cass City.

Coach Roland Pakonen said that he felt a big play in the game came in the first quarter when the Lakers had moved deep into Hawk territory and fumbled.

For a while it looked as if Cass City's mistakes would prove costly. The Hawks had apparently stopped a Laker drive at about midfield and forced a punt.

However, Cass City was detected roughing the kicker and the Lakers had new life. A moment later a 15-yard penalty moved the green and white deep into Hawk territory and the Lakers pounded out yardage until the critical fumble halted the march. Pakonen hailed the defense for a fine job against the Lakers.

Leading the team in tackles again was Guy Howard. He was credited with 12 solos and two assists. Mark Phillips was also in on many of the plays... he made 11 tackles and assisted on four others.

Besides playing a fine offensive game, Stoutenburg made nine tackles and intercepted two passes.

Don't look for any startling changes when Caro visits Friday. It is likely that Cass City will stick to its current line-up with Russ Schweikart staying at fullback. The husky former lineman blasted for 20 yards in eight attempts and helped with vital blocking chores.

Dual 'Red Hawk' award winners

KIM COPELAND

ED STOUTENBURG

Two Seniors at Cass City High School have been selected to receive the "Red Hawk" of the week award following outstanding games against the Lakers, Coach Roland Pakonen said this week.

Cited for his work on defense was Kim Copeland, defensive end. Copeland, whose program weight is 175 pounds, has been a sound player all year, Pakonen said.

He isn't on top of the heap statistically, the coach said, because other teams have been running away from him.

We are going to have to figure a way to shift our defenses so he can get in on the action, Pakonen explained. All year his position has been solid, solid, and his six tackles don't tell the story of his value to the team.

Stoutenburg is a two-way man for Cass City. On offense last week he caught the pass that netted the only touchdown of the game. In addition he rushed for 31 yards in nine carries.

Stoutenburg doesn't do too badly on defense either. He intercepted two passes and made nine solo tackles.

ED STOUTENBURG raced down the sidelines after catching a pass from Tom Smentek for the only touchdown of the game. Number 82 is Rick Tuckey and number 45 is Ken Lowe for Cass City.

Pick your own—popular pastime in Michigan's orchard country

Plucking a bushel of crisp red apples from heavily-laden trees can be a fun, inexpensive—even money-saving—way to spend a Sunday afternoon.

The pick-your-own pastime that's collected more and more fans in recent years appears headed for even greater popularity this season—especially if the Department of Agriculture and Michigan Tourist Council have anything to say about it. They've put together a booklet called "Country Carousels" that lists seven "tours" of Michigan as well as countless places that offer folks a chance to collect their own apples and other fruits.

Classified ads in local newspapers also tell you where to pick.

What's so great about picking your own?

It's fun, that's what. At some orchards, you'll be strapped into a "lug," the canvas shoulder bag you pick into, then empty into a bushel basket. At others, there's a chance to ride out into the orchard on a wooden rig pulled by a tractor.

There's also the price. Figure four apples to a pound, selling for 29 cents a pound. If you get 124 apples a bushel—Michigan State University's Cooperative Extension Service says there are 125-150 in a bushel—for $4.75 (the going price at one Lansing area orchard), that's quite a savings. Those 124 apples could cost well over $7 on a per pound basis.

First in the nation in production of Spys, Jonathans and Wealthies. That's Michigan, according to the Agriculture Department's booklet about Michigan Food Facts, 1974.

The booklet says the state ranks fourth in total apple production, and also stands near the top in apple processing.

Michigan's 1973 apple crop of 440 million pounds was valued at nearly $38 million.

SAVE THOSE FEATHERS

Believe it or not, hunters, there's a market of sorts for the bills and feathers of your legally-taken game birds.

A Missoula, Montana woman wants them donated for use in North American Indian religious ceremonies. So reports the Department of Natural Resources.

The appeal for bills and feathers comes through the DNR from Ms. Sapphire Concern of Missoula.

"She will see to it that game bird feathers and bills sent to her by sportsmen are distributed to spiritual leaders of tribes in North America on an 'as-needed basis,'" the department says.

Along with the appeal comes the explanation that, while feathers and bird bills are commonly used in North American Indian religious ceremonies, "they are reportedly in short supply among these tribes because it is illegal to buy or sell such items from many non-game bird species in the U.S."

If you want to help, send feathers and bills of harvested game birds to Ms.

Concern at 821 Hazel, Missoula, Mt. 59801

BANNING BUTTS

No smoking in the board room will be the policy henceforth for the Michigan State Board of Education.

A recently adopted Board resolution notes reports of the hazards of smoking and problems of those allergic to smoke.

The resolution stops short of actually prohibiting smoking during official Board meetings. But it says the Board will "encourage individuals to refrain from smoking" during Board sessions.

It's also suggested that smoking breaks be granted for those who can't make it through a meeting without lighting up.

CAR CHECK COMING?

Michigan maintains more than 3,000 vehicles in its state motor pool. How are they used?

That's what a state representative wants to know. Republican Warren O'Brien of Warren is seeking establishment of a special House committee to investigate use of the state-owned vehicles.

"Based on the complaints I have received and my personal observations, I feel that the abuse of state-owned vehicles is a major problem," O'Brien says, adding that such abuse "costs the taxpayers of this state several thousands of dollars each year."

O'Brien says complaints involve such things as use of state-owned cars for doing the family grocery shopping.

In addition, he says that he's seen state-owned cars traveling faster than the posted 55 mile-per-hour speed maximum on Michigan highways.

CASS CITY VILLAGE COUNCIL

Cass City High School's Girl's basketball team took a 39-26 decision from Lakers at Cass City Wednesday, Sept. 25.

Lisa Zimba and Elaine Stoutenburg paced the girls with 10 points each. Marcey Miller and Cathy Kerbyson each added eight points in the winning effort.

Coach Kally Maharg said the girls won through the fast break and playing a 1-3-1 defense.

For Lakers, Terry Ellenbaum scored seven points. Cass City controlled the game most of the way, outscoring Lakers in the first three quarters.

The girls also took a 36-0 triumph over Kingston in a scrimmage the previous evening at Kingston.

The Cass City Girl's basketball team took a 43-39 win Tuesday night against Frankenmuth in a game played at Frankenmuth.

Elaine Stoutenburg scored 14 points with Lisa Zimba adding 12 more. Coach Kally Maharg praised the two sophomore girls for their shooting.

She said the fast break, which the team has worked to perfection in two previous outings, did not work as well against Frankenmuth. Cass City led 28-18 at the half, but lost ground in the third and fourth quarters.

The team pushed its record to 3-0 for the season overall. The JV squad also won, taking a 29-24 win from the Frankenmuth JV's. Patti Goslin topped Cass City scoring with nine points.

The team takes on Caro at Caro next Tuesday.
