Unless you've got lots of insurance or unless you're extremely wealthy, don't plan on getting sick. You can't afford it.

The cost of just one item, hospital room rates, continues spiraling out of sight, with little hope of an early slowdown. In less than two years, most Thumb area hospitals report increases of about $15 per day in room charges, or about 21 per cent over mid-1975 rates.

Compared with 1970 rates, most room charges have at least doubled.

Hills and Dales General Hospital is just one facility where the continued dollar squeeze is evident.

A private room at the hospital currently goes for $85 per day, with semi-private rooms priced at $80 per day and a ward bed at $75 per day.

Less than two years ago, the private room cost $5 less than a ward bed does today. The semi-private room was $16 per day cheaper while a ward was $15 cheaper per day in 1975. Just seven years ago, rates at Hills and Dales were a bargain by today's standards. In 1970, a private room cost $38 per day, while a semiprivate room was $32 and a ward bed was just $28 per day.

The situation is no better at other area hospitals. A Chronicle survey of five other hospitals serving the Thumb area show the following rates :

HURON MEMORIAL ating? That's a complex question with lots of answers, according to Bruce Krider, ad-1975 1977 ministrator at Hills and private room-day $65 $85 Dales Krider sees three areas for continued rising room rates-inflation, accounting for 52 per cent of the increase, new technology which contributes another 38 per cent to the spiral, and population growth, which Krider sees as adding another 10 per cent. Demand for hospital services is still high, he says, in spite of a push toward outpatient care.

$92 $84 "Everybody is pretty much covered by insurance these BAY MEDICAL CENTER days and demand is great." Krider says. "Insurance com-1975 1977 panies have fostered the noprivate room-day $79 $119 tion of complete coverage in the past, whereas now they're semi-private-day $72 $115 $112 pushing outpatient care.

"Things aren't going to straighten out until we begin thinking in terms of preventative medicine," he said. Krider likes the idea of health maintenance organizations. Under such a plan, a subscriber pays into the program just as he does with conventional insurance.

"Then it becomes the responsibility of the HMO to keep you well," Krider says. "Under the present system, there's no incentive to keep you well. We will continue to be saddled with these increased costs until things change.

He says flatly a national health insurance scheme as proposed by the Carter administration will only add to the health care cost spiral since it will add another layer of bureaucracy financed by the taxpavers.

"I don't see it working," he said. "It won't stop the advance of technology and the higher costs that go with it. Please turn to page 5

Commissioners move on solid waste disposal plan

The Tuscola County Board of Commissioners agreed Tuesday to meet with supervisors of five southern townships to set up a solid waste disposal plan.

The board agreed to the meeting following a report by Ed Kimbrue of the Thumb District Health Department on four proposals from solid waste disposal firms.

Other areas of the county have more access to licensed landfills, including the Cass Kimbrue detailed proposals put forth by City Disposal of Saginaw, Richfield Disposal of Genesee county, Oliver Disposal of Arbela township and Mid-Thumb Disposal of Sandusky.

Board Chairman Maynard McConkey said no one company should be jammed down the throats of the townships, since they are the ones who must make the agreements for solid waste removal.

"It was just a cracker," Nagy said afterward. "It happened once before and that time, a drink of water washed it out. But it didn't work this time."

Collon reportedly used a version of the "Heimlich maneuver" in which a person is grabbed from behind and the rescuer's fist and hand are jerked together at the diaphragm, forcing the lodged food particle out.

In other business, Thumb Area Consortium Director Frank Lenard appeared before the board to discuss the latest CETA Title VI program and the possibility of setting up a non-profit corporaton to administer it.

The corporation would take the place of other outside agencies which currently handle CETA funds and theoretically would save some administration costs.

No decision was made. The board okayed the hiring of an administrative assistant at the Thumb District Health Department using Title VI funds. Chairman McConkey admitted about the only type of person who could qualify would be someone directly from school in order

Charles Crandell, 24, of 6526 Pine St., Cass City, will face examination in Tuscola County District Court March 21 following his arrest Saturday on charges of marijuana possession.

Crandell was released from the Tuscola County Jail after posting a $200 bond Sunday. He was arrested by State Police from the Bay City post at the west edge of Cass City Saturday after an officer saw a beer can roll from the pickup truck in which he was riding. According to the police report, officers found open beer in the vehicle along with a plastic bag filled with marijuana in Crandell's jack-

"He makes me sick." That's what a father told me about his teenage son. He'd just learned of his son's plans for traveling from Michigan to California and back. The kid was plotting a marvelous rip-off of the Greyhound Bus Co.

"That kid will be the death of me yet," the father grumbled.

According to a couple of psychologists, the father could be right. His son probably does make him sick. And the kid might even kill his dad - he could stress him to death.

psychologists are The Thomas Holmes and Richard Rahe of the University of Washington. Their research showed that patients got colds and nasal infections after experiencing "psychologically charged events" - such as a visit from their motherin law.

"So many patients mentioned mothers-in-law so often that we came to consider them a common cause of disease in the U.S.," said Holmes and Rahe.

On the flip side, my wife has no problems with my mother. In fact, whenever my wife and I have a slight disagreement, my mother forsakes her flesh and blood to cheer for the opposition. "Hit him

in 1976

Fire loss was down in the Cass City area in 1976 from the previous year by about 3½ per cent from 1975, according to figures released this week by the Elkland Township Fire Department. Fire Chief Jim Jezewski reported total 1976 dollar loss at $314,355, compared with $325,700 in 1975.

A breakdown shows structure loss last year totaled $215,820, with another $98,535 in contents reported destroyed.

By comparison the department reported $208,510 in maids. structure loss during 1975, with another $117,190 lost in contents.

The department recorded one fire-related fatality when Wesley Allen Clyne of Deford died when his mobile home was destroyed by fire last July.

Jezewski said his department responded to 75 alarms, including assists to other departments in 1976, requiring 1,812 man hours. This compares with 69 runs in 1975 and 1,832 man hours.

Jezewski also reported on recent election of officers for the 1977-78 year. Besides Jezewski's re-election as chief, other officers include assistant chief, Jack Hartwick; captain, Jerome Root Jr.; lieutenant, William Bliss; secretary, Dave McNaughton, and treasurer, Dick Root.

Before I met her, a library was just a building filled with books nobody read unless they had to write a report about something. You went to the library when you had an assignment or when it rained and you couldn't do anything constructive.

Libraries, my prejudices said, were inhabited by grayhaired old maids whose only enjoyment in life was saying "shhhh". They wore their hair in buns and peered at you through wire-rim bifocals when you had to find something.

Librarians carried their lunches in brown paper bags and never ate anything more exciting than a peanut butter sandwich, a banana and a glass of milk. Which might explain why they were all old

Anyhow, my understanding of what makes a library tick was, at best, peripheral. After all, how much education do you need to stack books on a

Plenty, it seems.

In fact, I discovered, you can even get a masters degree in something called library science. When the love of my life first told me that's what she had, I couldn't believe it.

When she told me she was a librarian, I immediately started hunting for gray hair, wire-rim glasses and a peanut butter sandwich. I found none.

Since when did they start letting attractive young girls work as librarians, I wondered

But all this is really beside the point. After we married, I took her away from her stacks of books and all the paraphernalia that goes with them.

She traded her Dewey Decimal System for a house, a baby and diapers. Ain't husbands wonderful?

Occasionally, she manages to find her way back to the local library. Most of what she brings home goes over big with our two-year-old daughter. After she finishes the books, I read them. Which might explain where some of my column ideas emerge,

Even though she knows as much about a library as anybody, there's one thing she hasn't mastered. She can't return a book on time. It's keeping me broke just paying library fines. I figure in the past year, I've coughed up enough in pennies to build a new wing on the library building and stock it with a complete set of Tolstoy's works.

Why, I've asked, can't these blamed books go back on time? Oh, don't worry, she says, patting my sweaty brow. It's just a few cents. I know it. But it's the principle. With all that education, all that marvelous training and the hours upon hours of study it took to figure out just what the devil the Dewey Decimal System is, you'd think our borrowed books could find their way back to the library on time. You'd think so. But you'd be wrong. Maybe it's like sneaking a smoke behind the barn. Maybe all librarians secretly long to keep a book out beyond its due date. Maybe that's how they get their kicks. I wonder.

Report progress in TIEA talks

Contract issues in talks between the Tuscola Intermediate Education Association (TIEA) and the Tuscola Intermediate School District were narrowed considerably last week, according to TIEA President Phil Kocher. "We had a long session with a state mediator present and cleared up a number of non-economic proposals of the Board of Education by either agreeing on the issue or having it withdrawn," Kocher said.

"While we are cheered by the progress that was made. the board made no concessions to the TIEA in exchange for the issues we agreed to, and all of the major issues are still unresolved," Kocher said. "Still on the table are salary for the 1976-77 school year, insurance benefits, layoff and recall, sick leave time and unpaid educational leave for year round teachers, school closing on snow days, management rights, union security, and non-discriminatory use of sick leave."

The 65 members represented by the TIEA have been working since Sept. 1 without a contract. They are being paid on the 1975-76 salary schedule and have not received their annual seniority raises.

Bargaining has been underway since June and several sessions have been held in the presence of a State Mediator. In an effort to move talks along the TIEA filed a petition for Fact Finding with the State Department of Labor

The final score was 72-66 as and committed a costly turn-Port Austin defeated Owen-Gage in Class D Friday night at Bad Axe but the game was closer than that.

It was one of those games that had the fans from both schools on the edges of their seats for the entire 32 minutes of frantic action.

The Bulldogs never led after the first period and never were more than five points behind until the last seconds of the game when the Pirates pulled to their final margin.

The game figured to be a battle between the North Central D League's best scorers and that's what it proved to be.

Jamie Oswald, number one, played an outstanding game from his post position and he Darren McDonald came off the bench for the Bulldogs and did a fine defensive job on Oswald, who prior to his entry into the game seemed to be scoring almost at will. Port Austin now will play in Stacked against this duo was Owen-Gage's Roger Ziehm.

Ziehm almost single-handedly kept the Bulldogs in the game. After a slow first quarter start he provided the majority of the Owen-Gage offense. Most of his points came on short poppers from 10 feet out at the right of the foul circle.

Mark McDonald picked up some important rebounds and buckets from the baseline in the first quarter as Owen-Gage went in front 17-12 and it looked like an upset was in the making.

The Pirates started hitting Oswald in the post position and the husky Oswald showed why he was the league's leading scorer.

When he got the ball he simply turned, faced the basket and shot over the defenders.

He personally accounted for the points that enabled Port Austin to forge into the front with 4:48 left in the first half, 20-19.

Bruess started aiding Oswald and the baskets started dropping at a furious pace as both clubs found the range.

The Bulldogs could have folded under the assault, but they didn't.

Each time that the Pirates would streak ahead, Owen-Gage came charging back. Just before the half, Ziehm whipped in two key buckets to keep his team in contention at the half, 37-32.

Owen-Gage never went ahead in the second half, but kept fighting back to the final whistle. The Bulldogs pulled to within a point, 57-56, with 4:29 left in the game. Two clutch free throws by Breuss gave the North Central champs a little breathing room.

The score stayed that way until there was 1:51 left in the game. The Pirates were in front 65-60. Ziehm did what he had been doing all night. He pulled Coach Phil Gray's charges from the brink of sure defeat to a chance to win it all. He scored two quick baskets and the score was 65-64 with less than a minute left.

County fights frost

Snow isn't the only culprit the Tuscola County Road Commission is battling on county highways this winter. There's an unseen enemy waiting which could turn the county's paved roads into something resembling a battle zone.

The enemy is five to six feet of frost which has already started heaving some paved road surfaces and could literally explode if too much warm weather comes too quickly, according to Robert Wellington, road commission engineer. "If the frost comes out gradually, I don't think things will be too bad," Wellington said this week. "If it comes out fast, it could be a mess." He says this is the most frost he's seen in the ground during his 14 years with the commission. A quick thaw could put a crimp in the road commission's already tight budget, Wellington says.

This year, those normal repair bills could soar. It all depends on the weather, he says.

"We've tried to keep up a good resurfacing program," he said. "I think because we have, we'll probably be in better shape than if we hadn't."

He said most state highways in the county are concrete base and should hold up fairly well under the heaving frost. It's the county roads, which are mostly asphalt, that could suffer the most damage from frost.

Expansion joints in many county roads have already begun heaving under the pressure of frost, he said. If the weather cooperates, many of these are expected to settle back in the spring, he said.

It's still too early to determine how much damage could result from the frost, Wellington said. "All we can do is keep our fingers crossed," he said.

Glory for all in upset of mighty USA

You could point to almost any Hawk player on the floor Saturday night and say that without his contribution no way would the hustlin' Hawks have upset undefeated USA in the finals of the district tournament. And you would be right.

Because that's just what it took for Cass City to upend the tall and talented undefeated champions from the Big Thumb League, 60-62. Few expected Cass City to win the game although most local partisans were predicting a good game.

With the savage rebounding of the Red, White and Blue not even the most optimistic of Hawk followers would have believed that the Hawks could hang on for a win while Paul Battel was forced to the bench with fouls for the better part of a quarter and a half.

But even without Battel the battle was won. Give credit to Rick Richards and Chuck Hendrick for helping keep the Patriots from running away and hiding when Cass Citv's games, Cass City fell behind early. It was big Paul Treiber who placed Cass City in an early hole Saturday. He hit 15-foot jump shots and dumped in 11 of his team's first 13 points. With 4:39 left in the quarter the Hawks trailed 12-5.

That's when Mike Richards entered the game and that's when the game turned around. He immediately scored. Hartel followed with a short pop from just to the left of the foul circle. Bret Bitzer gunned one in from outside and Mike Richards followed by stealing a rebound and sticking it home for two more.

With less than a minute remaining in the first period Haire gunned home his first bucket on a jumper to close the gap to two points. Paul Stecker and Treiber countered with a pair of buckets and the Patriots were in front 20-15 when the first period ended In the second period Haire came to life, aided by Mike Richards. He poured in five buckets for 10 points while Richards counted four free throws and two baskets.

Meanwhile the Hawk defense stopped the USA attack cold and when the two teams walked off the floor at intermission, Cass City was ahead, 35-30, and everyone knew that

Laker lead to win

Host Cass City High School played two games in the second round of district play Thursday night before a comfortably filled gym.

The first game lasted the first 5:03 of the first quarter* and the second the remaining 26:57 left in the game.

In the "first" game the underdog Lakers came out shooting like gangbusters to forge into a huge 20-3 lead over the Red Hawks. In the "second" game, Cass City came charging back to register the tournament victory, 76-59

The Lakers hit everything they tossed at the basket in the opening minutes while Cass City was standing around on defense and doing nothing on offense. Doug Wissner tossed in eight of his 15 points for the night in the drive that had Cass City fans thinking about getting out the baseball gloves and track shoes.

But the Hawks were far from through. Jeff Hartel slipped into the line-up showing no ill effects from the foot injury that had sidelined him in the previous game.

Cass City went into a one, three, one zone with a half court press that completely turned the game around. It was the first time this season that the Hawks used a zone for any appreciable length of time.

The defense, together with some fine rebounding by Paul Battel, Rick Richards and Chuck Hendrick, started to eat up the big early margin built by the green and white. Battel scored two quick buckets before the quarter ended and his teammates added two more and by the end of the first quarter the margin was down to nine points, 20-11.

The Hawks continued to roll in the second quarter behind Battel and Haire. The big center took feeds in the deep post and scored on short jumpers and rebounds. Haire scored on drives and short pops from the side.

Battel picked up 12 points in the period to end the first half with 17 points. Haire picked up 10 of his 13 points in the second period and that was all for the Lakers. At the half, the

Cass City's left-handers fight right-handed world

By Jim Ketchum

Did you ever stop to think that it's a right-handed world?

you're If left-handed, you've probably thought about it more than once. Maybe you've even muttered under your breath about it.

Everything from scissors to school desks to rifles are designed with right-handers in mind. Southpaws, a decided minority, have been forced either to adapt or go marching to the beat of a different drummer who probably is left-handed.

These days, schools generally don't try to force lefthanded students to switch to the right side. That wasn't always the case.

"When I was in parochial school, they made me write right-handed," southpaw Mrs. Jackie Davis of 6644 Pine St., says. "But I do everything else left-handed " Among the household tasks she attacks from the left side is ironing. She places the wide end of the ironing board to her left and runs the iron with her

ran into a few problems with a right-handed society is Police Chief Gene Wilson. "One of the big things I noticed when I was in the Army was that the rifles were designed for right-handers,' Wilson recalled. "I always shot with my left hand and when I went to rack it, I'd have to reach over the rifle.' Wilson says a teacher sometime in the second or third grade tried to convert him to writing with his right

Grand Trunk eyes profit

Grand Trunk Western Railroad posted a $1.7 million net loss for 1976, after revenues of $152.6 million and expenses of $154.3 million. But, the year was a significant one in the company's financial comeback since 1970. Losses have dropped 95 per cent during the past six recovery years so that Grand Trunk expects a profit in 1977. It would be the railroad's first profit since 1955.

"Internal reorganization of the company in 1971," said Paul E. Tatro, vice-president of finance, "set the stage for our battle toward profitability. Since then we have steadily improved our financial position while improving the railroad and the service to customers."

Tatro emphasized that the past six annual loss reductions were achieved without sacrificing capital improvements, and without deferring track and equipment maintenance.

"During this difficult period." he asserted, "Grand Trunk invested $71.4 million for capital improvements and equipment acquisitions. At the same time, our maintenance expenditures for track and equipment totaled $182.8 million.'

record $152.6 million operating revenue increased $32.5 million above 1975 revenue. The increase reflects improved business in the automotive industry, higher freight rates, and traffic growth developed from the due in large part to higher labor and supply costs, and to the 17 per cent increase in freight traffic. Fuel costs alone were nearly two million dollars more than the previous year. Labor costs increased 1712 per cent. Grand Trunk employees received $94.9 million in wages, salaries, and benefits, or 62 per cent of the total 1976 operating revenue.

Doherty says the Interstate Commission Commerce should rule Grand Trunk be required to own and provide service without compensation or subsidy.

At the meeting, it's expected presidents and representatives of large corporations and other interests directly affected by rail shipping will be there to offer advice to the advisory commission.

The meeting could result in a number of alternative recommendations. One is that MTPR will receive basically what it wants-control of the lines in question.

Another is that it could recommend Grand Trunk be given its subsidy if it is allowed to abandon the Imlay City-Caseville line.

A third is that some abandonment procedure could be used with both Grand Trunk and the C&O line from Bad Axe to Saginaw, which MTPR also seeks to include in its plans

According to MTPR President William Jansen, he has entered into negotiations for the C&O line from Bad Axe to Saginaw in the event the C&O ever wants to abandon ## seeks to work magic for God

Illusionist Darlene Morell

Darlene Morell doesn't look much like a sorcerer. Or even a sorcerer's apprentice. But watch out. She might pull a rabbit out of a hat or a paper chain out of her mouth when you're not looking. Beneath the black silk hat and magic wand, you'll really find a down-to-earth 17-yearold Kingston High School senior, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harley Morell of Rossman Rd., Kingston.

Actually, her career as a magician got its start at last month's Campus Life Sweetheart Pageant held at Vassar High School. Miss Morell was one of five contestants vying for the crown eventually won by Karmen Kreh of Caro. Each participant was required to put together a talent Owen-Gage presentation and since most of the contestants would probably sing or perform on a musical instrument, Miss Morell was looking for something different. "I've always been fascinated by it," she said several weeks after the excitement over the pageant had died away.

"I have two cousins who are magicians and my Campus Life director, Terry Holly, is also into magic."

She said after watching a magician's performance on television, she mentioned it to Holly who suggested she put an act together. He provided the props and the information. Putting it together was Miss Morell's job. "I wanted to use magic as part of my testimony to show how easily you could be tricked," she said. "It just seemed to fit in so naturally.' She eventually worked up a half-dozen illusions for her part of the program. Luckily, everything went off the way it was planned. It didn't always happen that way in practice. In one trick, she pulled a dove from a container. During practice, she dropped the entire trick once. Sometimes, the dove would fly away and start trying to climb the walls.

"The toughest trick I did was when I took a cane and changed it into two scarfs," she said.

Another act included making a pitcher of milk disappear and pulling several feet of paper chain from inside her mouth.

Like all good magicians, Miss Morell won't say how she does her tricks, other than to say they are just that --tricks.

Even though Miss Morell didn't win at the pageant, it wasn't long before she knew her act was a success.

"Several people started calling to ask if I'd perform at their churches," she said. "We were flabbergasted that they would ask."

In fact, she says she's not quite ready to go "on the road" with her act. She wants time to perfect more routines before going into it heavily. Miss Morell stresses she hasn't taken up magic because she enjoys trying to conjure evil spirits or believes in the occult. It's just the opposite.

"I want to use magic to help show how evil can trick us and how God can help us straighten out our lives," she said.

She says she is considering a career as a counselor for Campus Life and possibly making her magic act part of how she reaches other young persons

"I'd like to use the tricks to relate to the kids what I'm trying to get across," she says. "I think it's a way of getting someone's attention and keeping it."

Her own conversion to Christianity came last year. She says she realized there was more to life than one party after another and always ''having a good time.'' She became involved in Campus Life and is active in her local chapter. Now she wants to spread the message. -With-the-help-of-her-illusions, she'd like to try.

Gagetown hashes budget

Gagetown Village Council met Thursday night to study budget requests for the coming fiscal year. No final figures were determined. A public hearing on the budget will be held March 24 at the village hall, according to Clerk Mrs. Elery Sontag. Within seven days following the meeting, the budget must be adopted, followed by publication. Council also discussed the

2 alarms

There was lots of noise but little action during two runs made by Elkland Township Firemen Thursday and Friday last week.

A faulty smokestack leading from a woodburning stove filled the Gordon Peters home at the corner of Woodland and Houghton Streets with smoke Thursday afternoon.

Firemen said the smokestack came away from the stove, located in the basement, filling the entire house with smoke. No damage was reported. The department responded to the alarm around 2:30 p.m.

Firemen were summoned Friday afternoon shortly before 3:00 p.m. after Mrs. Dave McNaughton of North Seeger Street discovered her house filled with smoke.

A check revealed a damper on the fireplace had inadvertently been left closed after a fire had been lit. No damage was reported.

Firemen responded at 2:45 p.m.

CASS CITY CHRONICLE-THURSDAY, MARCH 10, 1977

CASS CITY, MICHIGAN

AL SEELEY and his love for horses are inseparable. Just as strong is his love for kids, which is the main reason he's stayed on as adult leader of the Jr. Wranglers 4-H Club for nearly two decades. Some of the current club members are the children of persons who were club members when Seeley's tenure first began.

Love for kids, horses keeps Al Seeley happy

Each year sometime in April, Al Seeley gears himself up for another season of teaching youngsters the fundamentals of riding and caring for horses. He's been doing it for nearly two decades and at 51, has no plans to give it up. Seeley and the Jr. Wranglers 4-H Club of Cass City go back a long way. For the past 18 years, he's been showing students from eight to 18 what horsemanship is all about. And it's been a labor of love. "They're great to work with," Seeley will tell you, flashing a wide grin and a sparkle in his eye. "They're a part of me.'

place because they didn't have the organization," he said. "When the word got out that we had a little club started here, the kids started coming.

He said in the club's first organized year, membership jumped from 11 to 37, as youngsters from Owendale, Gagetown, Ubly and Sandusky enrolled. From there it kept on growing. "One year I had 59 kids in the club," he said. Normally, membership runs somewhere between 40 and 50. As older members graduate, he says, there are always eight-year-olds waiting to take their places. Over the past 18 years, Seeley estimates he's had contact with over 800 youngs-
