Band uniforms get school board nod

When the Cass City High School Band takes the field this fall they will be decked out in spanking new uniforms if quoted delivery dates prove accurate.

The final hurdle in the campaign spearheaded by the Band Boosters was overcome when the Cass City School Board voted $12,000 for new uniforms at its regular meeting Monday evening.

That's about half of the cost of $24,539.20 that the uniforms will cost. The other half was raised by the Band Boosters.

For the money the band gets a complete marching uniform with a matching concert coat. The old uniforms have lasted some 13 years and Director George Bushong feels that the new uniforms will last at least that long. Perhaps longer, he explained, because the marching uniforms will only be worn in the fall. Indoors the concert coat will replace the marching coat. Spokesman for the low bidder says that the uniforms will be delivered by Sept. 17.

While the board spent $12,000 on the uniforms it has $5,036,00 left from the playground project north of the elementary school.

The money was held back from the Jack Anglin Company until the earth moving and seeding was completed. The seeding was not up to contract specifications and the company forfeited the money on the condition that the school finishes the work. The board agreed.

NEW COACH

The board okayed several staff changes. A request for an assistant girls' track coach was approved.

A leave of absence for Marilyn Mastie for pregnancy in the fall was approved and a request by Brenda Breidinger for a leave to continue professional education was denied.

The board has followed a rigid policy of not allowing leaves for education.

Finally, Grace Quick's resignation at the end of the cost the district $300 to $500 school year was accepted.

SUMMER BAND Director Bushong also agreed to conduct a summer band program after the school board agreed to fund part of the cost.

The school will pay $2.50 per hour and students will pay $1 per half hour of instruction with a minimum of two students in each session. The total program is expected to plus $140 for special music that will become part of the music library.

New texts were authorized for the high school and intermediate school. Texts in literature, civics, English, business, history, Frence, short hand, trigonometry and geometry will replace older worn editions in the high school at an estimated cost of $8,000. For the intermediate school, new science texts in the 7th and 8th grades will cost some $3,500.

TUITION STUDENTS

A recent ruling by the State Board of Education could affect Cass City's non-tuition students who have not attended Cass City for the last two years. Details of the ruling are explained in the Owen-Gage school story.

More important for students from the Owen-Gage district attending Cass City is the fact that Owen-Gage will not receive any state-aid money and students attending here will consequently not generate any state-aid for the

It is sure, Supt. Donald Crouse believes, that the Cass City board will have to establish tuition for these students to reflect the costs of education. In the past, non-tuition students had paid nominal or no tuition charges.

OTHER BUSINESS

In other business, the board adopted an open meeting policy to conform with new state law. The new campaign finance act was explained and a committee appointed to open boiler insurance bids.

Tuition ruling seen as boost to Owen-Gage

The pipeline of students from the Owen-Gage School District to neighboring districts may have been shut off under guidelines of Section III of the State School Code, it was learned at Monday night's Owen-Gage school board meeting at Owendale. Supt. Ronald Erickson said Section III guidelines approved by the State Board of Education last week mandate students go to school in the district in which they live.

"Beginning in the 1977-78 school year, a district shall not enroll a tuition pupil who resides in another district which is not legally liable to pay the pupil's tuition," the code reads.

There are three exceptions, Erickson said. Tuition pupils

Karr slates resignation

Elkland Township Supervisor Edwin Karr is expected to step down from his post within the next month, following his appointment Tuesday as an appraiser by the Tuscola County Board of Commissioners.

Karr will work in the county Equalization Department. He said Tuesday he's resigning because to stay on would be a conflict of interest. He said his resignation will be turned in sometime before the next township board meeting slated for June 13.

They can also attend outside their home district if the local school board or intermediate district board approves in writing. If both boards turn down the request, an appeal can be made to the state board of education.

Erickson said under the guidelines, students seeking to enroll outside Owen-Gage must submit a written reguest by June 1, with the board rendering a decision within 20 days.

Erickson said about 35 Owen-Gage students who transferred to other districts last year will be forced to return under the guidelines unless they are amended before the start of the next school year.

The rules will make it more difficult for new tuition students since local board or intermediate district approval is needed.

Under the guidelines, tuition students coming from Owen-Gage to Cass City will be charged tuition at whatever rate the Cass City School Board eventually sets, since it is the parents who are paying.

If Owen-Gage were to pay, then the Cass City district would have to charge the full per capita cost for their education, Erickson said. Since Owen-Gage is no longer a state aid membership district, Cass City schools cannot collect state aid on the Owen-Gage students, Erickson said.

Whether or not the guidelines will be amended before the start of the coming school year is still in doubt, the superintendent said. But for the time being, Owen-Gage will operate under them, he

Bill could bail out Cass City rail line

A bill introduced last week in the U.S. House of Representatives by Eighth District Congressman J. Bob Traxler (D-Bay City) could keep Grand Trunk Western trains rolling into Cass City whether or not the Interstate Commerce Commission approves GTW's request to abandon the

The proposal would allow Grand Trunk to receive a subsidy if it could prove its Imlay City-Caseville line is losing money and if shippers could prove the line is vital to the area's economy.

According to Roger Szemraj, an assistant to Traxler, the bill would be less costly than the current federal subsidy program because it would concentrate on a select group of lines.

"The basic philosophy of the bill is simple," Szemraj said. "If the government orders a line to operate, it should pay the subsidy

According to testimony taken at the ICC abandonment hearing in Cass City last winter, Grand Trunk officials said they would be interested in continuing operation of the 66-mile line if subsidies were Under current law, a line can receive a subsidy only if it receives permission to abandon from the ICC. Szemraj said it doesn't make sense to provide subsidy money for lines judged not important enough to maintain while denying money to lines ordered to operate. Just how much the bill will cost isn't known, he said, partly because of incomplete ICC data on just how many lines across the country are in the same position as Grand

"The program is much less costly than the existing subsidy program because it involves fewer lines and has only two basic qualifications," he said. "Is the line losing money and is there proof that the public needs

Szemraj said he looks for passage of the bill in this session of Congress, but declined to speculate how long it will take to work its way through various House and Senate committees.

Meanwhile, no decision has been reached by ICC Administrative Law Judge Joseph F. Walker, who presided at the Cass City hearings in February. Since the hearing, both sides have filed more briefs in

"It's an encouraging sign that the judge hasn't ruled yet," Szemraj said. "It's an indication that he's not rushing to any quick decisions and that he's reading over the testimony carefully.

Walker has until June 4 to reach a decision in the case. His preliminary ruling will then go before the full ICC which must decide whether or not to accept it. The decision could be appealed in the courts. Grand Trunk originally filed its abandonment request in October, 1974, stating the line was losing money. GTW President John H. Burdakin testified at the hearing that the entire company has lost money since 1955 and that it was unknown exactly how long the Imlay City-Caseville line had been operating with > red ink, Burdakin also cited deteriorated track and the expense involved in rebuilding the line as another reason for abandonment. 🔻

Local shippers countered that without the line, they would be forced to close their doors because operating costs would be prohibitive. Still another part of the picture is Michigan Thumb Producers railroad which has expressed interest in acquiring Grand Trunk trackage from Cass City to Caseville as part of its system. To date, Grand Trunk officials have not said they are interested in selling if they can obtain an operating subsidy.

The country boy went to the city (Detroit) Sunday evening to see "Vanities" and got ripped off again. Not at the Fisher Theatre, but at a restaurant across the hall.

We stopped for dinner. The food that was offered was good. But it was fairly expensive and can you believe that you couldn't get a cup of coffee with the meal?

The excuse was that it was Sunday if you can believe that. Incidentally, if you happen to be in town and have the time, the show is worth seeing. I wouldn't say it's worth making a special trip for though.

I don't like to boast but I told you so. Remember in this trivia when the warm weather hit two weeks ago and the air conditioning was on, I said we'd pay for it later? Well, this is being written on Monday and I rest my case.

Under Michigan's new campaign finance act every candidate for June's school board election must form a candidate committee and appoint a treasurer. If they spend a dime promoting their candidacy they must open a bank account.

In Cass City the candidate's committee will be one person (the candidate) and guess who the treasurer will be? That's a lot of foolishness, of course, for politicians in Cass City but makes sense for State and National candidates. Since the law can't distinguish between the big and the small,

If it helps curb expenses in the big time it will be worth it.

Life's little pleasures department. Traveling on Main Street as a train is crossing. Should I beat it down to Garfield or wait on Main? That is the question. The decision: try Garfield. Drive around the train and return to Main and find that the traffic is still waiting. Isn't that resultant little tingle of satisfaction silly?

Never trust your memory. I couldn't recall any strike in the last 25 years except at Nestles and one six years ago at Walbro. Lambert Althaver, executive vice-president, says that nine years ago there was a four-week strike at his plant. That's in addition to the one I remembered (7 weeks) six years ago. I'll never forget them, said Althaver with a sigh.

In addition, Jackie Davis, whose husband works at Cable, says there was a strike at that plant, too. She couldn't remember how long it lasted.

The first column I wrote about my mother was 26 years ago, when she was the same age I am today. As I recall, it was a protest column against pickles.

That year, Mother's Day fell on the last day of National Pickle Week. To me, as a loving son, it seemed unfair that mothers got only one day while pickles got seven. Name me one pickle who ever hugged a little boy and kissed him where it hurt.

I often bore my three children with stories about how my mother raised her five children. One story they never believe, no matter how many times I tell it.

They won't believe their grandmother was a midnight chopper. But she was. It was Terrible Jean, my big sister, who got chopped.

Terrible Jean really was big in those days. I've written before about how she used to beat me up for lunch every day, and I'd rather not go into it again. Just thinking about it raises welts on my forehead, which is where she kneed me if I was standing up straight.

But Terrible Jean's childhood size is important to this story about Mother the Midnight Chopper. Today it is fashionable for a girl to be tall. They can earn $500 an hour being clothes hangers for Harper's Bazaar. But this was not the case in the 1930s.

During the Depression, a tall girl was mourned because it was figured she'd never find a tall boy. She'd never get married and her parents would have to feed her for-

Mother decided she had to stop Terrible Jean from growing. People usually grow at night, while sleeping. So Mother would get up several times every night and go into Terrible Jean's bedroom and give her karate chops behind the knees.

"Curl up," Mother would hiss, "Bend your knees or you'll never get married." Chop, chop.

When Terrible Jean got up in the morning, she was already sitting down for breakfast. We just had to slip should be reported that Mother's treatment didn't work. Terrible Jean grew up to be a high-rise, but it wasn't fatal. She found a man even taller They were married in an oldfashioned church with a steeple.)

A few months ago, I took Mother out to dinner and then dared to invite her onto the dance floor. Dancing with Mother is always a traumatic experience for me. I am a lousy dancer. She is good and, what's worse, for 40 years she was married to a Fred

Instead, she was probably "You can't dance like your thinking of her five children father," Mother always sings, much," I said. Which may read like a strange conversation for a 50-year-old son to be having with his 76-year-old mother. I don't know. But I do know that sometimes the wisecracks don't come, and the mush must be excused, if not understood.

It was a warm, spontaneous moment there on the dance floor, and I won't forget it.

I celebrated by going into a backward dip, for Lord's sake, and Mother was too shocked to follow. She stum-

"How are the kids?" I asked.

Happy Mother's Day, Mother. You have always been more than a pickle to Chronicle GET RESULTS Early on the morning of market, how do you know Dec. 31, Elkland township what type to buy? firemen were called to extinguish what turned out to be a minor fire in a mobile home south of Cass City.

What distinguished it from any other run was the battery-powered smoke detector which sounded at the first sign of smoke, awoke the residents and gave them time to call for help.

Fire Chief Jim Jezewski credited the alarm with preventing more damage to the mobile home and possibly saving a life.

Jezewski strongly backs installation of smoke detectors in every house. "They're an awfully cheap life insurance policy," he says.

But with more brands of smoke detectors entering the

A recent survey by Consumer's Union showed two basic types-ionization and photoelectric detectors.

Ionization detectors tend to respond quickly to flaming fires that produce little or no visible smoke, Consumer's Union says. They use a battery which must be replaced about once a year

Their one drawback is that they're relatively insensitive to smoke from a smoldering fire, CU says.

necessarily better than the other--it depends on what you want. With either model, there are some routine checks which must be made. Consumer's Union advises a weekly check of batteryoperated smoke 'detectors. Most operate on a nine-volt electrical system which uses alkaline batteries.

Detectors using house current should be checked following a thunderstorm to make sure they still work. When the power goes out, a small pilot light on the device will go out, signaling the detector is no longer operable.

Nearly all models carry a test button which can be pushed to sound the alarm. Consumer's Union suggests any smoke detector be tested Some detectors sound their first alarm in short beeps or "hiccups", then as the smoke intensifies, the tone becomes steady. The independent testing agency says it prefers detectors that give off a steady blast from the begin-

WHERE TO INSTALL?

Now that you've bought a smoke detector, where's the best place to install it?

That depends on the layout of your house. But no matter what type of house you have, Consumer's Union says there definitely are places not to install a smoke detector.

They suggest you keep your detector out of the kitchen. rooms with fireplaces, the furnace room or garage. A smoke detector isn't smart enough to distinguish between a flaming hamburger and a flaming house. A balky fireplace can trigger a detector as well as back draft from a furnace or exhaust fumes from a garage.

Still, if you do install a smoke detector and something other than a real fire sets it off, the testing organ-- ization says it's better to have a false alarm than no alarm

The best method, Consumer's Union suggests, is to install two smoke detectors-one of each type. These, they say, combine the advantages of both while minimizing the drawbacks.

They suggest you install a battery-operated detector on the ceiling of a corridor near bedroom doors while wallmounting a photoelectric AC operated detector in the living room no closer than six inches or farther than 12 inches from the ceiling and away from a corner.

Gagetown hires park caretaker

Gagetown Village Council hired a park caretaker, okayed lighting charges for the village park and opened bids for the annual audit during their regular meeting Thursday night.

Council voted to hire Elery Sontag, former village president, as caretaker of the park. Sontag began his new position Monday on a part-time basis.

Trustees also decided to raise the cost of using lights at the park from $5 to $7 per night. The increase was based on recommendations from Detroit Edison Company.

Donna Salcido, a local restaurant owner, was given permission to operate a concession stand at the park. She will be charged a $2 fee for each day she uses the stand.

In other business, council awarded work on the annual village audit to Karl Leppien, a Pigeon CPA firm, at a base cost of $1,797 or not to exceed $1,997.50. The firm presently does village book work on a monthly basis.

Council voted to install new catch basins on Gage Street and at the end of Cleaver Street near South Street. Installation of several new fire hydrants was also discussed. ·Trustees approved purchase of two loads of dirt to be Lawmakers have objected to the primaries, held in 1972 and 1976 in recent times, for a variety of political reasons in addition to the cost. But it's the cost - nearly $2.4 million in 1976 - that most opponents have pointed to.

It's not certain if the presidential primary actually will be repealed. Any bill to do so would need the signature of Gov. William Milliken, who's remained quiet on the question so far. It was with Milliken's push that the primary was resumed in Michigan in 1972 after a long absence.

Some lawmakers, like Rep. Perry Bullard, D-Ann Arbor, say they'll try to win approval for legislation that would give the state a presidential primary, but on the same day as the state primary to save

> MILLIKEN TO PICK PRISON SITES

Gov. William Milliken was to select sites for new state prison facilities Wednesday, April 27, confronted with the spectre of both a burgeoning inmate population and local opposition to nearby prisons.

Michigan prisons now house 13,000 inmates, nearly 2,000 more than the system was built to hold. Another 1,000 prisoners probably will be put behind bars by the end of the year.

So Milliken aides were thinking about more than one site to expand the system's capacity. These were the four sites given the heaviest con-

Kincheloe Air Force Base at Sault Ste. Marie, which could hold 400 inmates and restore some jobs to the severely depressed Upper Peninsula area. There's been little public opposition, but inmates' families would likelv have to travel long distances to visit them.

St. Augustine Seminary in Allegan county would provide 400 beds, but thousands of area residents have written to Milliken to protest the idea. The former Wayne County Child Development Center near Plymouth also could hold 400 prisoners. Local residents in Plymouth and Northville are upset, however, because the area already has prisons and mental hospitals. The J.L. Hudson Co. wareuates of 1973 and 1977;

Recently we received a "care" package in the mail from home. Among the other goodies in it was a Cass City Chronicle, and as I was reading over it, I was startled to see two of my classmates, Jeanne Alexander and Barb Auten, from the class of '73. As I looked closer, I saw that they were graduating this year from Alma University. In the same week I received a letter from another friend, Roxy Somerville, and she had enclosed a picture of herself in her nurses' cap. She is an R.N. now! It doesn't seem possible that it's been four years since my graduation from CCHS. Where does the time go?! Four years ago I was preparing to travel on an Evangelistic Team with Teen Missions, Inc. It would take me from coast to coast in the U.S., to more places than I had ever seen in my life living in the town of Cass City. At that time I had my future all planned — beginning with my summer of travel and then my attendance at Delta College in a two-year medical assistant program. Then I would get a job and settle down in or near Cass City. Though I had been a Christian

If someone would've told me on graduation day that I would be doing those things, I would've stared in disbelief. But here I am in 1977, wondering what I'd be doing now if I had continued to go my own way, and thanking Him that I didn't. I could have missed the blessings of the past three years of a great marriage and serving on the staff of Teen In four years I have traveled in the U.S., Canada,

Deputy files suit

Tuscola County Sheriff's deputy William A. Moore has filed a $10,000 auto negligence suit against a Caro area man in connection with a Jan. 24, 1976, accident.

Moore was injured when a car driven by Lawrence Allen Loomis struck his parked patrol car on M-46, eight miles southwest of Caro. Moore was investigating another traffic accident when the mishap took place.

Moore charges Loomis did not have his car under control and failed to heed flashing warning lights at the scene. As a result, the officer claims he was knocked unconscious and suffered spinal injuries. contusions and partial loss of

USA continues domination of Gavel Invitational

Bill Heffelfinger of Vassar broke a meet and track record in the pole vault in the 19th running of the Gavel Invitational Saturday with a vault of 13',41/2".

Heffelfinger broke his own track record set five days earlier and erased the meet mark of 13'2" set by Good of Montrose in 1968.

Heffelfinger had the best individual performance but perennially powerful USA won the meet with 49 points.

Chesaning was the Class B winner with 41 points and Owen-Gage won Class D honors with 6 points.

There were 17 teams entered in the competition. They finished in the following order: USA, 49; Chesaning, 41; Flint Beecher, 30; North Branch, 29; Montrose, 26; Millington, 24; Lakers, 20; Vassar, 17; Frankenmuth, 16; Cass City, 11; Yale, 10; Capac, 7; Owen-Gage, 6; Imlay City, 41/2; Caseville, 4; Caro, 3½, and Memphis, 0.

Cass City's points were won in the pole vault where Steve Ballard took third and Clarke Haire, fourth, and in the high jump where Haire was third. Others were Paul Battel, fifth in shot put, and Rick Hollis, fourth in discus.

Two marks were set in new events for the Gavel meet this year. The first was in the discus, where Fred Diehl posted a mark of 132',9", and in the 330-yard low hurdles where Craig Roman of Beecher was clocked at 41.1. The complete results:

Expect 400 at Special Olympics

Around 400 participants are expected next Friday when track and field events at the annual Special Olympics get under way at 9:30 a.m. at Stamates Field in Caro.

Special education students from Tuscola, Huron and Sanilac counties will participate in the meet. Winners will go on to the state Special Olympics slated June 2-5 at Mt. Pleasant.

Last week, the Special Olympics bowling tournament was held at Charmont Lanes in Cass City. Over 240 bowlers participated from the three counties.

This is the seventh year for the games, according to Ren Cramer, tri-county coordinator for the Special Olympics. An added part of this year's program included winter games held in late February at Shanty Creek. Cramer said 20 students from the tricounty area won 35 medals at the games, the first winter events held in Michigan.
