

Rail line through Cass City staying open

Users of Grand Trunk West-ern rail service along its Imlay City to Caseville line received good news last week when the Interstate Commerce Commission denied the railroad's petition to abandon the line.

Although the denial means the railroad will have to maintain its present level of service, Clifford Croft of Croft-Clara Lumber, Inc., one of those who fought to keep the line in operation, said rehabilitation of the line still remains a question mark.

And, he added, if the Grand Trunk keeps losing money on the line, as it claims it is doing now, it could petition again for abandonment.

The denial actually came from ICC Administrative Law

Judge L.W. Walker, who conducted a week-long hearing in Cass City in February on the proposed abandonment.

According to U.S. Rep. Bob Traxler's office, his ruling will stand unless the railroad chooses to file an "exception", that is, an appeal with the ICC, which would then have to rule on it.

Grand Trunk general attorney Charles Hrdlicka said Tuesday that management was still studying Walker's ruling and had not yet decided on whether to file the exception. He expected a decision within about a week.

He acknowledged that the judge's ruling only requires the railroad to maintain the track "as best we can", that Grand Trunk is not obligated to rehabilitate the line so that heavy rail cars can use it.

Of the 66 miles of track from Imlay City to Caseville, and Gagetown, Croft said about 40 miles are "real bad".

Repair of the line will apparently depend on the outcome of a bill introduced in Congress by Rep. Bob Traxler which would provide a subsidy to repair tracks ordered by the ICC to be kept in operation after the railroad petitions for its abandonment.

At present, the line has to be abandoned before it can receive a federal subsidy.

Due to poor track conditions, according to testimony made at the ICC hearing on the proposed abandonment, traffic is limited to 20 miles per hour in most places. In some, trains can go as fast as 30, but in three sections, including the one through Cass City, it can only go 15.

In addition to allowing faster speeds, rehabilitating the tracks would allow the line to provide large unit trains for hauling grain at a lower rate. At present, GTW has to space loaded cars with unloaded ones because of the poor track conditions.

According to Traxler's assistant, Roger Szemraj, the legislation, if approved by Congress, would give Grand Trunk $1 million annually for five years for fixing up the line.

That would come out of a $2 million a year appropriation nationally for five years.

The transportation and commerce subcommittee of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee is expected to hold hearings on Traxler's bill at the end of this month.

Grand Trunk petitioned in October, 1974, to abandon the line, maintaining that it was losing money.

At the hearing, rail officials testified that GTW lost $200,000 in providing service on the line in 1976.

However, a rail transportation consultant testified that the railroad made $38,000 on the line in 1976, not including rehabilitation costs.

In its denial of the abandonment petition, the ICC stated that the GTW was making money and that traffic was increasing; therefore, there was justification in improving the line and keeping it in operation.

The ICC decision was good news for the numerous rail users including grain elevators, lumber yards, manufacturers, and fertilizer and farm implement dealers, that use the Grand Trunk line.

Many of them belonged to an informal organization formed to fight the abandonment.

Croft said the organization spent "a few thousand" dollars in legal fees early in the effort. Individual companies spent additional funds.

Locally, in addition to some local firms that used the line, the Cass City Chamber of Commerce and Cass City Development Corp. were among other donors.

Local users include the Wickes elevator, National Farmers Organization terminal, Croft-Clara Lumber and General Cable Corp.

In addition to the Grand Trunk, the ICC decision was also a blow to the Michigan Thumb Producers Railroad Corp., which had hoped to take over the line.

The Thumb Producers only wanted to provide regular service from Cass City to Caseville with service from Cass City to Imlay City being on an "as needed" basis.

Users generally opposed the Thumb Producers proposal as they thought they could get better service from the Grand Trunk.

Croft said he and most other users have no complaints about the present service they receive.

The Thumb Producers is expected to hear shortly on its proposal to take over other track in the Thumb, the Chessie System trackage from Crosswell to Port Austin and Pigeon.

Another "on paper" railroad, the Tuscola and Saginaw Bay Railway, Inc. is presently negotiating to take over Consolidated Railroad Corp. track between Vassar and Munger, Vassar and Millington, and Vassar and Coling.

Arrested

Mark Emmons, charged with two counts of first degree murder in the Friday slaying of his mother and sister, was arraigned Monday before District Judge Richard F. Kern.

His mother, a widow, Joan Emmons, 52, and sister, Dawn Emmons, were shot in their beds at opposite ends of their home on Ellington Street on the east side of the village.

Caro police said a 12-gauge shotgun was used in the slayings and that both women were shot in the head.

Emmons, 24, was reportedly unemployed and lived with his mother and sister.

At the arraignment, Judge Kern scheduled a preliminary examination July 18 and a pretrial hearing July 22. Leo Maki of Caro was appointed as the defendant's attorney. Emmons is being held without bond in the Tuscola county jail.

Police said the shootings occurred about 7:15 a.m. Friday. They received a call to come to the scene at 7:28.

According to officers, after the shootings, Emmons drove to the home of another sister, Mrs. Raymond Lapp, on Norman Drive, about two miles south of Caro.

Mrs. Lapp called police and then she and her husband drove Emmons to the scene, where he was arrested.

Mrs. Emmons, whose husband, Leo, died in February, was not employed. Dawn Emmons worked at the Walbro Corp. in Cass City.

A grandson of Mrs. Emmons, Jackie Richards, 13, of Caro, was in the house at the time of the shootings after having spent the night there. Police said the youth heard what was going on but was not a witness to the shootings.

Ex-Cass Cityan dies from crash

A former Cass City resident, Jack R. Zellar, 51, of Caro, died Saturday after having been hospitalized since May 21, when he was struck by a car while riding a bicycle.

He died in St. Luke's Hospital in Saginaw.

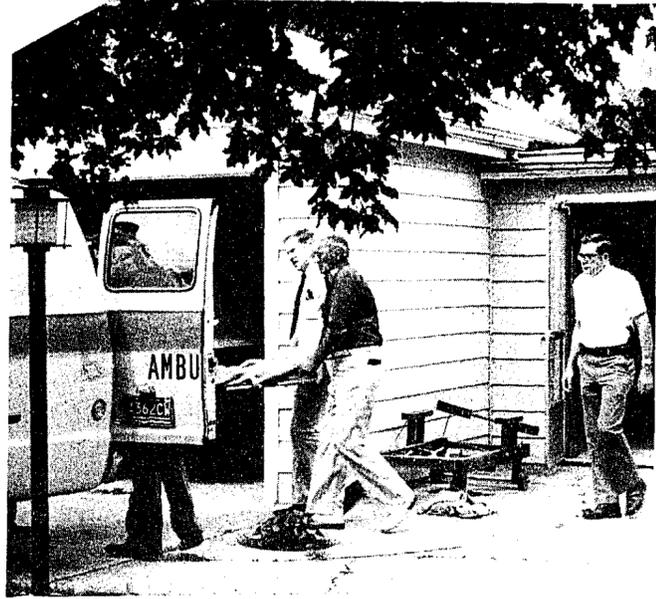

Zellar was riding his bicycle on M-81, two miles east of Caro, in the afternoon, when he was struck by a car driven by Kathy L. Thompson of Hobart Rd., Gagetown. Both were eastbound.

She told investigating deputies at the time that Zellar was near the white line of the road and she was unable to avoid hitting him.

A sheriff's department spokesman said Monday that the results of an autopsy were being awaited before it will be decided whether to reopen the investigation.

No charges were brought against Ms. Thompson at the time of the accident.

Funeral services were performed Tuesday at Collon Funeral Home in Caro, the Rev. Eldred Kelley of Salem United Methodist Church in Cass City officiating. Burial

MURDER SCENE—Ambulance attendants remove the body of one of the victims of last Friday's double murder in Caro. Killed were Mrs. Joan Emmons, 52, and her daughter, Dawn Emmons, 22. Mrs. Emmons' son, Mark Emmons, 24, has been charged in connection with the slayings. [Neitzel Photo]

New Owen-Gage gym may change location

The proposed location for the new gymnasium at Owen-Gage High School may be moved -- from the east end of the building to the west end, next to the present gym.

Meanwhile, groundbreaking ceremonies have been scheduled for Saturday, July 23, at 3 p.m., although construction won't start for some time after that. Following the ceremonies, cookies and coffee will be served in the present gym.

It had been hoped that bids for the demolition of the 1913 portion of the high school and construction of part of the foundation could be opened at Monday night's board meeting.

However, that has been delayed. Supt. Ronald Erickson reported, because the $1.675 million for sale of the district's building bonds has not been received yet from the buyer, Manley, Bennett, McDonald and Co. of New York.

The money should be received within the next two to three weeks, he said.

It is now hoped the bids for the demolition and foundation construction can be opened at the board's Aug. 8 meeting.

The new gymnasium was originally to be constructed on the east side of the building. However, consideration is now being given, he said, to locating it on the other end as a cost-saving measure.

By doing so, the gym could make use of the west wall of the present gym, built in 1938, which is to be converted into a cafeteria. Putting the gym there also would require less revision of the present heating system.

The decision by the architects and construction management firm, he explained, primarily depends on cost estimates for the originally proposed structure with the gym on the east end versus the possible saving by relocating it.

One possible problem with relocating the gym, it was indicated, is that it may require use of some of the Owendale village park property to the west of the school, which reportedly was deeded to the village on the condition that it only be used as a park.

Under the construction management system, bids for the demolition and building of the classroom part of the high school can be taken prior to the decision being made on where to locate the gym.

As for the receipt of the $1.675 million, the board designated the Community Bank of Bad Axe as temporary depository for the funds. Once the money is actually received, the board will take bids from banks in order to obtain the highest possible interest for deposit of the funds.

PHOTOCOPIES

The board revised its fee schedule for furnishing photocopies of district public records.

The previous charge was 50 cents per page or $2 per page if research by the school staff was involved in order to find the requested documents before photocopying them.

What were labeled at the meeting as "dissidents", however, complained to the Huron County Prosecutor that under the new state Freedom of Information Act, the charge was excessive. Photocopies of a monthly financial report, the 1975-76 school audit, records of attorney fees paid by the board since 1974, and lists of unpaid loans are among the documents requested lately.

The prosecutor, Peter Capling, wrote to Erickson in a letter dated July 7, that according to law, "You may charge a fee for providing a copy of a public record, but in general, the fee may be no more than the actual mailing cost and the actual incremental cost of duplicating or publishing, including labor".

Accordingly, the board approved a policy Monday of charging 50 cents per page for copies not needing research, which includes mailing.

Materials that need to be researched will include the labor cost of the lowest paid permanent clerical employee plus the 50 cents per page.

There is no charge for inspecting of school records at the district office, if no photocopying is involved.

ORGANIZATION

At the organizational portion of the board meeting, the present officers were all re-elected: Ronald E. Good, president; Jack Laurie, vice-president; Jack D. Brinkman, treasurer; and Ronald Reinhardt, secretary.

The Farmers & Merchants State Bank, was retained as depository for school funds.

Board meetings will remain on the second Monday of each month, alternating between Owendale and Gagetown.

SALARIES

Board members received their paychecks for 1976-77, totaling $1,550, which they voted to donate to the Band Boosters for the purchase of new band uniforms. Former Band Boosters president Betty Laurie accepted the checks on behalf of the organization.

Last year, all but one board member donated their paychecks to the school library.

All board members receive $200 a year except the treasurer who gets $250, and the secretary, $300.

Parents fight to expand local school band program

A group of parents interested in Cass City's band program appeared at the regular meeting of the Cass City School Board Monday night in another chapter in a continuing attempt to expand the program in Cass City.

It was about a year ago that a similar group crowded the board room with a similar objective.

The aims then and the objections to them remain unchanged.

Supt. Donald Crouse voiced them. He maintains that it is impossible to expand the band program without adding staff. If staff is to be enlarged and expenses increased, he says, the entire program should be reviewed and the additions made where they are most necessary.

Tonight we have a special interest group interested in the band. Certainly there are others that could present an equally impressive plea for added curriculum.

If the board wants to add staff, he said, an assistant principal is a very real need. It has been recommended by the University of Michigan, he added.

Perhaps the wisest course would be to put the various options on a ballot, he said, and see if the taxpayers want to pay for any or all of them.

The presentation for the band boosters was made by Dave Loomis.

Mrs. Lyle Clarke compared the number of students in the senior band (about 100) to the number taking varsity basketball (about 16).

The discussion switched to sports because several of the boosters were equating sports with the band program.

Basketball got into the picture when the hours worked by the coach and the director came into focus. When it was revealed the coach worked free much of the summer the talk switched to the number of students participating.

Crouse then pointed out that all sports are an after school activity and that band is a school-time event comparable to physical education.

Board President Geraldine Prieskorn then said that a curriculum study should be held so that if any way could be found to work a part-time second person into the program it would be done.

Loomis pointed out that several area schools have more than one person working with instrumental music.

Crouse's answer to this is that Cass City operates at about 20 per cent less than surrounding schools. If the taxpayers want to increase the tax bill by 20 per cent there are all sorts of options open.

SCHOOL DIRECTOR

Dr. Edward Scollon, who has been urging added music personnel since he joined the board, also presented a proposal for another added staff member.

He wants to add a community school director. The director would be in charge of all Federal aid programs. He presented a paper that indicated Caro will receive $374,757 in fiscal 1977 from Federal funds.

Many of the programs listed as Federal money sources are already being utilized by the school.

A special meeting will be held July 25 at the school to hear more about Caro's program.

A third program which could cost the taxpayers money is increased pay for school board members.

Presently board members receive $40 per year. According to Crouse, a new law passed in Michigan now allows board members up to $30 per meeting for a maximum of 52 meetings.

If the board should establish guidelines calling for payment of all meetings, including committee meetings, it could cost the district in excess of $10,000, which is about the amount adding a teacher to the staff would cost.

The salary question will be on the agenda at the next regular meeting.

FREE LUNCHES

Federal guidelines for free and reduced price lunches at the school have been received. This year a family of four earning $7,610 yearly can get free lunches. A family of 12 can earn up to $15,590 yearly.

OTHER BUSINESS

The board set the opening of school for Sept. 6. New teachers will be briefed Aug. 31 and all-teacher orientation will be held Sept. 1; from 10-11 a.m. teachers will vote whether or not to authorize area-wide negotiations.

Dean Jardine, a veteran teacher in the system, has resigned. Cindy Jo Woods of Marlette and a graduate of Central Michigan has been hired to teach elementary special education.

The board has been reorganized. President is Geraldine Prieskorn. Other officers are: Dr. Scollon, vice-president; Dr. Paul Lockwood, secretary; and Dean Hoag, treasurer.

"If It Fitz..." Sadness in the beauty

By Jim Fitzgerald

"There is sadness in the beauty," I said to my wife as we left the Detroit Institute of Arts.

"It is also sad when the Tigers lose," she said. That was her sweet way of saying that I have lately been getting too much of my culture at the ball park or jazz joints. She doesn't mind peanuts and beer, but not every night.

"Detroit has much more to offer. For instance, we haven't been to the Art Institute in a long time," she said last week.

So Wednesday morning we went to the art institute. I'd told Bob Rodgers, the institute's director of public relations, that we were coming, so I wasn't surprised to see several people waiting to welcome us at the entrance. They were carrying signs.

"I don't have my glasses on," I told Pat. "what do the signs say, 'Welcome to Famous Columnist'?"

"The signs say that these people are on strike. The museum is closed," she said.

Wednesday was the day more than 8,000 Detroit City employees stopped driving buses, collecting garbage and sweeping museum floors. They all wanted more money, and not one of them was worried about my lack of culture.

Thanks to Rodgers, we got inside anyway. We spent an hour viewing the Daniel Chester French exhibit. He is probably America's most famous beaux arts sculptor. You don't know what that means, dummy? It means his sculptures are massive, even ostentatious, in a style of architecture that prevailed in France in the late 19th Century. Dictionaries are wonderful books.

French did the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, possibly the most famous statue in the United States. He also did the Russell A. Alger Memorial in East Grand Circus Park in downtown Detroit. Today the Lincoln statue still looks great, but the discolored Alger has become a memorial to urban pollution.

The exhibit contains French's sketches and miniature models of the monumental sculptures which he created for public parks and buildings all over the nation. It is a fascinating display, and I recommend you visit it.

I mentioned sadness in the beautiful institute. Some of it was caused by the picket line.

There was a crowd of young children on the front steps, clamoring around the locked doors. They had come to see a puppet show but instead they saw strikers carrying signs. Go home, kids.

Three days of special activities had been scheduled for 10,000 senior citizens, beginning Wednesday. They would have visited the library, Historical Museum and Science Center, as well as the Art Institute.

"It took us six months to plan," Rodgers said.

Then came the strike. Stay home, old folks.

Some of the sadness had nothing to do with the picketing. I eavesdropped when two women brought a complaint to Rodgers. The women are voluntary gallery aides, which means they work for the love of art, not for money, so they weren't on strike.

Their gripes concerned the institute rest rooms, which are filthy, they said. "I am ashamed that our visitors see them," one woman said.

"I have been trying for three years to get a broken toilet seat fixed and it hasn't been done yet," the other woman said.

Rodgers didn't argue with them; he sympathized. Later he conceded to me that maintenance is a throbbing problem at the institute, inside and outside.

"Our grounds are a disgrace," he said while standing near a huge potted plant which was steadily leaking water on the institute's handsome floor.

As always, the institute has the shorts. Not enough money to hire enough help to keep the building as handsome as its contents. They can't even stay open more than five days a week.

When city and state budgets must be cut, it is always the museums and libraries that bleed the most. This is because people who go to museums are patrons, not fans, and there are not nearly enough of them.

If the institute were shut down, the public protest would be heard 10 blocks away. If the Detroit Tigers traded Mark Fidrych, the public uproar would shake downtown Honolulu.

The beauty prevails at the institute, but it is a struggle. And it is the struggle that is sad.

PAULA DECKER

FROM THE Editor's Corner

The kooks got together with the Klan recently and made front pages all over the country.

You must have seen or heard it. The Ku Klux Klan was rallying in Columbus, Ohio. It was protesting the desegregation of schools in Columbus.

The distressing thing about this is not that a bunch of radicals got together and started fighting.

It's that many, many, many citizens of this community and every community in the land are secretly applauding the actions of the Klan and its school stand. And all over America in the urban areas blacks are mentally poking Dale Reusch, the Klan's Imperial Wizard, right along with the Coalition Against the Klan.

Offers of aid for the kook accused of ramming his car into the Klan's speaker's platform are reported to be pouring in from all over the country.

That's sick. That money isn't pouring in because the donors feel that the accused might be innocent. It's coming because the guy was "giving the Klan what it had coming".

I'm certain that to all the persons for whom the Klan is articulating thoughts that they express only in private, I have already been labeled a "nigger lover" and for all the radicals that endorse the Coalition I'm a white bigot.

I'm certain because that's the way it is with these people. There must be a label for everyone. Black is black, white is white...no greys.

Certainly I condemn the principles of the Klan. And only a fool would endorse the riots that periodically plague every large urban area.

I wouldn't walk down the streets of a high crime area alone but that doesn't mean that I feel that because portions of the Detroit ghetto are unsafe, blacks are criminals.

Nothing displays the bigot more than the guy that claims to know a "good" colored person, or a smart Pole or an all-right Wop.

He's telling you, of course, that these guys are the exception. Most of "them" are inferior, he knows, but he's broad-minded enough to accept one after he's proven to be the exception.

He doesn't say it like this but this is what it all adds up to.

It's the fertilizer that

There is concern, says School Board President Ms. Geraldine Prieskorn over the care that will be taken in selecting coaches for girls' sports for next season.

It's the old story of the boys getting "more" than the girls. Supt. Donald Crouse says that care is always taken and will be in the future.

That's the way it should be whether it's sports or English or math.

That won't change the fact that the selection of the boys' major sports coaches will be of greater concern to the community than the selection of the girls' mentor. It will be until girls fill the gym just like the boys do.

Very few care who the cross country or the baseball coaches are except the parents with students participating.

I said that to illustrate it's not a boy or girl issue but one that reflects community interest.

It's as simple as that.

Americans generally have a pretty exalted opinion of themselves. Maybe downright superior. Right now there are 11 young men and women from Belgium visiting for three weeks in Cass City. All can speak English with a varying degree of proficiency.

Next year an equal number of students from Cass City will go to Belgium. The odds are great that none will be able to speak anything other than English.

Think about that.

Get Vic Guernsey to tell you about his "race" with a six-year old in the recent 7-mile marathon at Frankenmuth.

The boy turned out to be a girl and Vic just edged her out at the finish line.

Before you laugh have you tried 7 miles recently?

Guernsey reports that the regular runners in marathons report that the Frankenmuth affair, now in its second year, is one of the best.

Given the promotional genius of the town, that almost goes without saying.

They even get paid for driving tourists around town in a horse and buggy.

Imagine!

Over the years merchants on the south side of Main have always gloated during the summer hot weather because it's cooler there.

Now the north siders can gloat a little, too. Next time you jaunt down the Main stem compare the trees on both sides.

There's no doubt that the trees on the north are growing faster and look better than their south side cousins that were planted at the same time.

Cass River

water quality rated

The Cass River has been rated as having "medium" water quality, according to a study prepared by the East Central Michigan Planning and Development Region.

The limited rating system, developed by the National Sanitation Foundation, is based on nine chemical, physiological, and bacteriological elements.

The sampling does not measure the presence of PBB's, PCB's, radioactivity, phenols, oil and grease, heavy metals and other pollutants.

Of the other rivers in the 14 counties in the East Central region, the Pinconning and Flint were rated as bad and the Black and Saginaw as "bordering close to bad".

The AuSable and Rifle Rivers were rated as good, with all others in the region rated as medium.

The Cass, like several other rivers in the region, is a tributary of the Saginaw River, which along with its tributaries is responsible for the majority of pollution in Saginaw Bay.

In turn, what goes into the bay is of concern because the bay is the largest single source of water for persons living in the 14 counties.

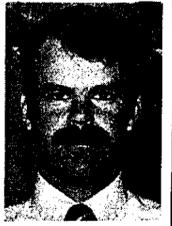

More than 300,000 persons, almost half of the region's population, gets its drinking water from the bay via six water intakes.

The Saginaw River contributes approximately 80 per cent of the phosphorus, 84 per cent of the chloride, 87 per cent of the ammonia, and 65 per cent of the nitrates in the bay.

PEDALING AROUND

Hot times

By Mike Eliasohn

As I sit here in my T-shirt and cutoffs (I only wear a tie up to 5 p.m.), the temperature is somewhere in the 90's and it is an appropriate time to write about saving energy.

Not the kind of energy one saves in hot weather by not doing anything other than lying in a hammock with a glass of lemonade.

What I'm talking about is probably man's oldest form of saving energy. It's called sweating.

How does sweating save energy? It used to be that utility firms generated the most electricity in winter. Since the age of air conditioning began, however, the greatest use of electricity is in summer.

Presumably, it is still okay for farmers, construction workers and athletes to sweat though with air conditioned tractor and combine cabs, maybe farmers aren't supposed to sweat anymore either. But for persons who work indoors, sweating is a no-no.

Of course, if sweating -- or if you prefer, perspiration -- is unavoidable, Madison Avenue will be glad to sell you all kinds of deodorants.

I should point out that in my few weeks here in Cass City, I have noticed some of the old-fashioned remedies such as open windows and fans still seem quite popular.

But in the big city and many places not so big, air conditioning is a "must". I recall reading in a paper a few years ago about a judge in a turn-of-the-century courthouse who was demanding that the county board of commissioners buy air conditioners for the court offices.

It was so hot, the judge proclaimed, that court employees found it impossible to work in such intolerable conditions. I couldn't help but wonder how court workers up to then had managed to survive.

After all, back in the "good old days", people wore a lot more clothing than they do now and a lot of it was wool or other heavy materials. Anybody for a revival of high starched collars for men or heavy floor-length dresses for women? And though I'm not old enough to remember, it seems like nobody wore short-sleeved anything in those days.

Nowadays, though, when the talk is about saving energy, the suggested means are to turn the air conditioner temperature control up a few degrees so that the unit doesn't use as many kilowatts.

Or when buying a new air conditioner, buy one with the highest energy efficiency rating. Why not not buy one at all? (If despite all this, you are going to buy an air conditioner, first, determine the proper capacity for the room to be cooled. Then, to determine the EER, divide the number of BTU's per hour of the unit -- British Thermal Units denote the cooling capacity -- by the wattage. The higher the EER, the less electricity the unit uses.

I even recall a television commercial advertising energy saving tips which included the suggestion to turn off the air conditioner when going on vacation but have a friend turn it on shortly before you return home.

As though returning home at the end of a vacation trip is somehow more enjoyable if you don't have to return to a warm house.

For the curious, I better mention that I do not own an air conditioner or even a fan.

And lastly, I must admit I have an advantage in all this. Due to lack of time or cheapness or probably both, I keep putting off a trip to an allergist.

As a result, my nostrils are at least half plugged up continually for one reason or another. So if all the air conditioners in the world are turned off and everyone starts going around smelling hot and sweaty, I won't smell a thing.

Gagetown gets two policemen

County okays annexation

The Tuscola County Board of Commissioners Tuesday approved the annexation of 40 acres on the north village limits to Cass City.

The property, known as the Hoffman farm, was part of Elkland township, which did not oppose the annexation.

The board also approved 26 new Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) positions, 24 of which had been allocated to the Tuscola County Road Commission until it laid those employees off June 24 for financial reasons. Two of the new positions will be for policemen for Gagetown.

The Cass City village council on May 31 accepted the petition of developer Thomas Herron and Lynn Albee for the annexation of the 40 acres. There are only two houses on the property now, which Herron intends to develop.

The petition was forwarded to the county board, which by approving it Tuesday, makes the annexation official.

The new CETA positions will be from now through September, 1978, with the federal government paying 100 percent of all salaries up to $10,000, plus fringe benefits.

There were 27 requests from various governmental units and agencies, with the only request denied being that for a part-time worker at the Caro Regional Center. In addition to the positions made available by the Road Commission, there were two "left-over" positions with the funds available, for a total of 26.

The two Gagetown police officers will receive $10,000 annually, plus fringe benefits of approximately 30 percent.

On Thursday, July 7, the village council hired Larry Wilding of Port Austin, who was to be the village's only police officer. He is to receive $5.30 per hour for a 30-hour week, which totals $8,268 annually.

Village President William Downing told the Chronicle that the intention of the village council was to have a two-man force, that it hired Wilding not knowing that the two CETA positions would be approved. The council will now have to decide what it should do.

DRAIN COMMISSIONER

The board approved the request of Drain Commissioner Edward Goodchild to transfer $50,000 from the contingency fund into the revolving drain fund.

The 1977 budget for the drain fund was $100,000, but that has already been spent, Goodchild reported, due to the large amount of drain work being done.

Money for the fund is mainly used to pay engineering costs for drain improvements. Once whatever drain work is done, the county gets 25 percent of the cost back from the township involved and 50 percent from benefiting property owners. The county pays the remaining 25 per cent.

SOLID WASTE

Approved by board was a revised county solid waste disposal plan, which must now be approved by the state Resource Recovery Commission.

The original plan, prepared a few years ago, called for a county-owned landfill to serve all of the county's solid waste disposal needs.

The revised plan, prepared by the Thumb District Health Department, essentially calls for that need to be now filled by private waste haulers and licensed landfills.

CRIME LAB

Commissioners approved financial participation in the sheriff's department technical investigation unit for 1978, which involves two detectives and use of a mobile crime lab.

For 1978, the federal government will pay 90 percent of the cost and the state and county, 5 percent each. Tuscola county's share will be about $2,300.

After 1978, the unit will have to be entirely funded by the county.

There is also the possibility, it was recently announced, that federal funds won't be available for the project in 1978. If that happens, Sheriff Hugh Marr told the Chronicle, two deputies may have to be laid off in order to pay the salaries for the detectives.

CIVIL DEFENSE

The board made official the transfer of the position of civil defense director to the sheriff's department, where he will perform some duties for that department in addition to civil defense.

OTHER BUSINESS

Referred to veterans counselor James McCann was a request from a Millington veteran that the county pay $300 for his new false teeth out of its Soldiers and Sailors Relief Fund. The man had already received $200 for his teeth from the Michigan Veterans Trust Fund.

McCann is to establish a policy to deal with such requests. The county fund currently has about $400 in it.

A request from Probate Judge W. Wallace Kent Jr. to buy microfilming equipment for his office was referred to committee for study. It was thought the equipment in the register of deeds office could be used to microfilm the probate court records.

The board approved hiring of an appraiser for the equalization department to replace one who retired last winter.

Gagetown village hires policeman

Larry Wilding of Port Austin has been hired as the new Gagetown police officer.

He replaces Harry King who retired a few months ago.

The new officer, who may move to Gagetown, will be working 30 hours a week. He previously worked for the Huron County Sheriff's Department.

The village council at its meeting Thursday tabled a decision concerning trash pick-up in the village until more trash haulers can be contacted.

The village has talked to two so far, according to Village Clerk Madeline Sontag.

Gagetown has been ordered by the Thumb District Health Department to close its landfill for sanitary reasons.

An extension of the ordered closing date of July 1 has been requested by the village until it hires a trash hauler.

It isn't known yet, Mrs. Sontag said, whether door-to-door pick-up will be continued. The alternative will be for citizens to bring their trash to a large bin, which the contractor can then haul to an approved landfill to be emptied.

The council discussed fixing of some village streets and decided to contact a paving contractor to get a cost estimate.

Approved was the expenditure of $1,400 as the village's half-share for installation of a fence at the village park. Members of the Gagetown Athletic Club will pay the other half.

Permission was granted for the holding of an auction in front of the hardware store to raise funds for the purchase of new uniforms for the Owendale-Gagetown High School band. No date has been set yet for the auction.

Friday last day for beef voting

Cattle owners who have registered to vote in the national Beef Research and Information Referendum have until Friday to do so in person at their Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation office (ASCS).

Mail ballots must be post-marked before midnight Friday and received at the county ASCS office by July 19.

In Tuscola county, 64 cattle owners registered to vote; in Huron, 153, and Sanilac, 87. The ASCS offices for those counties respectively are in Caro, Bad Axe and Sandusky.

In Michigan, a total of 2,821 registered. If a majority of those voting approve the referendum, a research and information program will be established, administered by a board of up to 68 producers appointed by the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture. Each state or geographic area will be represented in proportion to its cattle production.

The beef board will be able to initiate various projects to improve beef production, distribution and marketing, including consumer education, information and research.

During the first three years of operation, the board can collect assessments of up to 3 percent of the value of all cattle sold. After that, the rate can be increased to no more than .5 percent. Producers not wishing to participate can have their assessments refunded.

Pesticide application date past

All persons who apply pesticides for a fee and have not contacted the Michigan Department of Agriculture (MDA) about registration as of July 1 are running risk of a fine.

"This not only pertains to all private businesses but to an individual who applies pesticides for his neighbor on a for-hire basis," says Dr. Robert Ruppel, Michigan State University Extension pesticide coordinator.

Application regulations under the old law were extended until July 1, when a new set of regulations became effective.

"MDA until now has not been strictly enforcing the regulation but they are expected to crack down on violators from now on," Ruppel says.

He advises applicators to telephone the MDA as soon as possible and explain the nature of their business and how they operate in order to obtain proper guidelines. Telephone: (517) 373-1107.

Elkland roads set for rebuild

Two Elkland township roads are scheduled for improvements, following holding of public hearings Thursday, July 7, on the projects by the Tuscola County Road Commission.

Scheduled for improvement are Richie Road between Huron Line Road and Bay City-Forestville Road and Spence Road between Milligan Road and M-81.

The work to be done, according to road commission clerk James Miklovic, will consist of gradings, base work, and drainage, with the aim of cutting down some of the hills over which the roads travel. The roads will remain unpaved.

Bids for each project will be opened by the road commission on July 21.

The road commission will pay $1,888 as its share of the project, out of the $50,000 it allocates each year for township road projects.

The township will pay the rest of the cost, which will be "considerably more" than $1,888, Miklovic said. He declined to give the total estimated cost.

Present at the hearings were Elkland Township Supervisor Jack Gallagher and one Spence Road resident. Only a few questions were asked, Miklovic said.

Coming Auction

Friday, July 22 - Ed and LaDonna Roberts will hold a high grade Holstein dairy auction, located one mile north and three and one-half miles west of Millington or six miles south of Vassar on M-15 to Murphy Lake Rd., then three and one-half miles west to the corner of Balsey and Murphy Lake Rds. Boyd Tait, auctioneer.

Sit in the shade

On a dairy farm, there is always certain work to be done, no matter what the weather is like.

But for Adeline Butler and her husband, Frank, when the work is done and the weather is hot, their favorite way of keeping cool is to sit under their shade trees.

The Butlers live at Rt. 2 Huron Line Road, Cass City. Mr. Butler milks 12 Brown Swiss cows. Along with calves, dry cows, and a few steers, the herd totals about 40 animals.

So when the temperatures are warm, like they were one day last week when it got into the 90's, said Mrs. Butler, "We do what we have to do and then sit in the shade."

They do have some fans in their home, but sitting in the shade, "that's the best".

Sitting-in-the-shade activities include reading and, for Mrs. Butler, sewing.

The couple has six daughters, of whom two still live at home. Mari works for a Caro law firm. Paula is a senior at Cass City High School.

AROUND THE FARM Insulation precautions By Don Kebler

As per this writing the U.S. Congress has not approved any federal income tax changes relative to rebates, credits, etc. for home insulation this year.

Regardless of tax or no-tax incentives, people are insulating their homes for next and future winters' onslaughts.

I want to re-emphasize the hazards of blowing-in fibrous insulation into the walls of already constructed buildings.

The only type of insulation that will not cause this problem is foamed-in polyurethane or styrofoam.

Remember also that moisture collected within the wall stud space will move out through the outside wall siding and blister the paint.

I've had questions regarding the U.S. Farm Labor Contract Registration Act

Income tax audit books are available

Taxpayers who are currently undergoing an audit of their federal tax return and those who wish to be prepared for one will find information on their rights and responsibilities in two free booklets from the Internal Revenue Service.

Publication 556, "Audit of Returns, Appeal Rights, and Claims for Refund" discusses IRS audit procedures and the avenues of appeal open to taxpayers who disagree with an examiner's findings.

Publication 552, "Record-keeping Requirements and a Guide to Tax Publications" is an English-language booklet that explains the requirements and benefits of keeping good records.

Both Publications 556 and 552 may be obtained by calling, writing, or visiting IRS offices.

Vandal escapes police after destroying door

Someone who kicked in the glass front door of Old Wood Drug at Main and Seeger Streets late Sunday night escaped police capture.

Cass City Patrolman Christopher Taylor was patrolling the alley behind the stores on the north side of Main Street when he heard glass breaking.

He ran out to Main, where he saw Cass Theatre owner Dick Hendrick. The officer yelled to Hendrick, asking what had happened, which, according to police reports, apparently scared someone hiding in the phone booth by the General Telephone building.

Hendrick yelled back to the officer what had happened and that the subject had just run from the phone booth.

The person ran east down the alley. Taylor called in Patrolman Matthew Kinsinger but the two officers, in searching the alley and nearby area, were unable to find the subject.

He was described as about 5 feet, 9 inches tall, thin, with medium long dark hair, and wearing faded jeans and either a white or khaki shirt.

The broken window was estimated to be worth $120. Officers said the subject apparently used the heel of his shoe to kick in the glass. The incident took place about 11:30 p.m.

Five Koylton township residents reported to state police in Caro Thursday, July 7, that their mailboxes had been stolen during the previous night.

Some of them reported hearing a loud car about 1 a.m. Thursday but were unable to say whether that had any connection with the stolen mailboxes.

Those reporting their mailboxes stolen were Lynda Staples, Kenneth Jackson, Arthur Wilcox and Delores Fox, all of Clothier Road, and Herb Tait of Brief Road, which intersects with Clothier.

Troopers reported that the thefts were among many reported recently in the township and in the Marlette area in Sanilac county.

Val Gibas reported to Cass City police Thursday, July 7, that her step-brother, Nicholas J. Gibas of Belleville, Mich., had his wallet stolen while he was visiting his parents here, the John Blochers of 6338 W. Main Street, on

Elkland license for junkyard

The Elkland Township Board Monday night approved a one-year renewal of the junkyard license for Interstate Scrap and Auto Parts, Inc., 4100 S. Seeger Street.

The renewal was contingent on the firm fixing and painting the fence along its property and otherwise improving the external appearance.

The annual license fee is $15.

The board discussed the problem of the Deming burial vault on the village cemetery on E. Cass City Road.

According to township Clerk Carolyn Ware, the family has agreed to the reinterment of the seven bodies in the above-ground level to the below-ground level.

That will permit the demolition of the dilapidated above-ground structure, for which the township is soliciting bids. The Deming family will pay the cost of the demolition.

Also needed will be the approval of the district health department.

The board postponed its August meeting to Aug. 15, because Mrs. Ware and her husband, the deputy clerk, will be on vacation during what would otherwise be the regular meeting date on the first Monday of the month.

Many people get off on a detour long before they reach the super highway to happiness.

Letter to the Editor

Protests attitude at board meet

Mr. Editor:
As a recent participant in the federally funded title VI program involving citizen concern in the family and the community, I was encouraged to attend public meetings.

Monday evening I attended my first school board meeting.

Present at that meeting were a small number of citizens who were concerned with the increase in band students and the need for additional assistance in that department.

They were told by the superintendent that they were just a "special interest" group.

The local governmental units are set up in such a manner as to encourage participation by concerned citizens. In fact, these units are required by law to encourage such attendance by publishing times and dates and more recently by the open meetings act of the legislature.

Surely, the attitude displayed does not encourage individuals to express their concern. Each of us do have Couple pleads guilty in welfare case

Bennie Parker Jr., 36, and his wife, Edith, 38, each pleaded guilty Monday before Circuit Judge Norman A. Baguley to a charge of attempted welfare fraud.

The judge accepted the pleas from the Vassar couple and scheduled sentencing for Aug. 22. Personal recognizance bond of $1,000 for each was continued.

The two were charged in connection with the acceptance of $18,302 in Aid to Dependent Children during the period September, 1969 - July, 1975. The charges stated they had failed to report they were receiving worker's compensation and/or Social Security.

In a trial Wednesday and Thursday, July 6-7, before Judge Baguley, a jury found Walter E. Putnam, 44, of Vassar, innocent of the charge of felonious assault. He was charged in connection with an incident July 2, 1976 in Vassar.

our own interest, but the board meetings should be a place to encourage the expression of those interests in order for board members to be well informed as to the desires of those individuals whom they represent.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Jean Clarke

For Cass City trucker Carl Palmateer

Adventure plus loneliness on the road

Carl Palmateer spends most of his time working indoors sitting down. Only he sits down behind a steering wheel inside the cab of a big semi-tractor, hauling chemicals all over the United States and Canada. He has been in every state except Alaska and Hawaii.

"I like to travel and meet different people. It's kind of an adventure," said the former Cass City police chief. He has been driving a truck full-time since 1970. But he also says that truck driving "is a lonely life", that much of it is routine, and that "the food never changes".

A native of Deford, Palmateer, 45, dropped out of high school to take over his parents' farm. He got his high school diploma while serving in the Navy.

Of his four years in the Navy, three were spent with the Shore Patrol; so after his discharge he went to work as a deputy with the Tuscola County Sheriff's Department. He became Cass City police chief in 1959. He resigned in January, 1970, primarily because he could make more money driving a truck.

Driving a truck was a skill he learned on the farm. While police chief, he delivered milk to Detroit for Bliss Milk Hauling on week ends. For the first few years, after leaving police work, he worked for Coastal Tank Lines in Midland hauling chemicals for Dow Chemical.

He then bought his own tractor and began working for Brada-Miller Freight Lines in Saginaw. For about three years, he has been working for Chemical Leaman Tank Lines in Midland.

His International diesel tractor, purchased new in 1975 for $43,000, is the second truck he has owned. He averages 100,000 miles a year, and with 200,000 miles on the odometer, he hopes to double that before trading the truck in on a new model.

Truck driving provides Palmateer with a good living. He made about $40,000 in 1976, after paying his expenses of about $25,000. His fuel bill alone came to $9,704. Most truck drivers can make from $30-40,000 a year, he said.

But to make that kind of money, there are factors involved in addition to knowing how to drive a truck. Palmateer has seniority with Chemical Leaman, so he gets a choice of hauls to make.

What that means is that when choosing, he ideally wants a haul with the most miles, with the greatest chance of bringing a load back and with the chemical that pays the most for hauling. When you own your own truck, your money is in being loaded at all times, he explained.

For instance, on a recent trip to El Paso, Texas, he received $1,254 for hauling the load in his own truck—called the truck check—and $636 as his driver's check, based on mileage. He usually leaves from Detroit or Midland.

Out of that almost $1,900, he must pay all his expenses, including fuel, meals, union dues, truck payments, collision insurance (Chemical Leaman pays liability insurance), and motel bill, if any.

Palmateer only stays in a motel if an overnight stop is involved. When he has only a few hours, he does his sleeping in the sleeper unit attached to the back of his truck cab.

Once he arrives at his end destination, Palmateer calls Chemical Leaman's central dispatch, to see if there is a load to haul back to Michigan. If he does get a load, that will pay his expenses, which means what he got paid for the load going down is gravy.

On the trip to El Paso, for instance, he only had partial luck. He had to drive empty to Chicago, where he picked up a load to take to Oscoda. From there he returned to Cass City. If he does come back empty he still receives a driver's check from Chemical Leaman.

For a trucker to make a decent living, according to Palmateer, he has to do his own maintenance. The Cass City resident does most of his own maintenance, ranging from wash jobs and greasing, done every week end, to installing a clutch and putting on new tires. The latter he did recently, after getting 170,000 miles out of the ones that came on the truck. His 10 new 12-plys cost him $180 each.

All that careful maintenance pays off. He has never had a break-down on the road necessitating a trip to a garage for repairs.

Except when he's doing work on his truck, Palmateer prides himself on his neat, clean appearance, and with a few exceptions, other truckers do too, he claims.

Every trucker "halfway human," he said, takes a shower each day on the road, shaves, and changes his clothes. He himself takes enough clothing along for a complete change every day and coversalls in case he has to do any dirty work.

Palmateer is usually gone from Monday through Friday. According to Interstate Commerce Commission regulations, he can drive no more than 10 hours straight, then he must sleep at least eight hours. In a period of eight days, he can drive no more than 70 hours.

Palmateer does most of his driving at the legal speed limit, 55 miles per hour, a task made easier because Chemical Leaman gives him enough time to reach his destinations at that speed.

In his seven years of full-time driving, Palmateer has never received a ticket or had an accident. In addition to skill and some luck, his safe record is also due to caution. He won't drive when he is sleepy. Palmateer said he has gotten as far as Imlay City on his way home and pulled off the road and gone to sleep for a couple of hours, rather than risk driving, even for a comparatively few miles.

Home is 6292 W. Main St., where he lives with his wife, Joyce, and son, Jim, a fifth grader in school. He has three children by an earlier marriage.

If roads are icy, the trucker will slow down to 35-40 m.p.h., if necessary. There's no relaxing when driving a truck, he stressed, a driver "always has to be on his toes".

A continual worry is that someone will pull out in front of him and he won't be able to stop in time to avoid a collision. He saw that happen recently in Canada, where a trucker hauling steel was unable to avoid hitting a car that had pulled out suddenly from a side road. Three persons were killed. Another accident he witnessed took place about 1 1/2 years ago in the mountains of North Carolina. A boulder fell on the truck in front of him, crushing the cab and killing the driver.

Actually, Palmateer did have one accident. It was when he was working for Coastal Tank Lines. He was stepping out of his truck, let go of the grab bar, stepped on a rock, slipped off, and broke his ankle.

The resulting limp he had for a while, the handlebar mustache he had then, and the fact that he had been a lawman led to his fellow drivers at Coastal nicknam-ing him "Festus" after the character on the Gunsmoke television show. When citizens band radios came along a few years later, Festus became his handle on the airwaves.

Palmateer uses his CB primarily for listening and getting directions. He isn't one for "Ratchet jawing", that is, making general conversation on the CB.

He describes trucking as kind of a lonely job, really, adding that truckers probably like to talk at truck stops because they are lonely. As for the food at truck stops, it's always the same. It's all fried or char broiled. And the meal that used to cost him $1.50, he complains, now costs $3.

HIGH MILEAGE -- Carl Palmateer and his International diesel tractor. Although it only gets six miles to the gallon when hauling a load, the truck should last for 400,000 miles before needing an overhaul (at which point he will sell it).

BEHIND THE WHEEL—When driving, Palmateer has lots of gauges to keep an eye on and a choice of 13 forward speeds. At 55 mph, he is in 11th gear. When hauling a loaded tanker, he is in "command" of 72,000 pounds (tanker and tractor).

Japanese youth to visit

The Daniel Toner family of 4117 Doerr Road will be the host for a month for a youth from Japan. He will be taking part in the Japanese LABO Exchange Foundation-Michigan 4-H teen exchange. The program started in 1974. As part of the exchange, 41 Michigan 4-H'ers will be leaving July 22 for a month-long stay in Japan, with each youth staying with a family in that country. Marsha Wilson of Fairgrove will be representing Tuscola county in the exchange. In turn, 73 Japanese youth will arrive in Michigan July 24 for a month. Three will visit Tuscola county. In addition to the Toner family, the other hosts will be the Ronald Colling family of Millington and the Henry Airgood family of Caro.

Quick work saves area home

Quick work by several persons and the Lamotte township fire department resulted in the saving of a mobile home after a propane gas tank exploded about 7 p.m. Wednesday, July 6.

Owners of the mobile home were Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Johnston of 4363 Deckerville Road, Snover. Mrs. Johnston was home at the time of the explosion.

Her daughter-in-law, Pat Johnston and her son, Richard, were in their nearby mobile home. Pat Johnston said she and her mother-in-law thought the explosion was thunder. However, Richard realized the "boom" wasn't thunder and then saw the flames.

The three used a garden hose and fire extinguisher and had the fire extinguished by the time Lamotte township firemen arrived, who made sure the fire was out.

Three women driving by, whom Pat Johnston didn't know, saw the fire and called the fire department. In the meantime, neighbors pushed the burning propane tank out of the way. The tank had been located on the ground in front of the mobile home.

Damage was confined to the front and part of the kitchen of the mobile home, according to Pat Johnston. The monetary loss and cause of the explosion weren't immediately known, she said.

BARN FIRE
Lightning was blamed as the cause of a fire Monday night, July 4, which destroyed a barn on a vacant farm on M-19, about 6 1/2 miles south of Uby.

Loss was estimated at $4,900, which included the building, 1,500 bales of hay, and a grain drill. Owner of the farm and building is Leo Peters of Uby. Robert Hunt of Uby is working the land.

The fire was extinguished by Bingham township firemen. According to Fire Chief Elmer Brahmmer, the fire was discovered by Gene Blacker of the Uby area. After reporting the barn fire, while on his way home, he then discovered a burning tree, the fire there also the result of lightning.

The burning tree, which firemen also extinguished, was on property owned by Harold Pettinger on Cass City Road about 7 1/2 miles south of Uby.

Road workers pact okayed

The Tuscola County Road Commission and members of its employees union last week both approved a new contract which runs through 1979. The old pact expired Dec. 31, 1976. Signing of the pact will take place possibly Thursday, after the union's executive board double-checks the wording of the document for possible errors. Members of the Tuscola County Road Commission Employees Association, which met Wednesday, July

6, at the Caro Gun Club, approved the document, 31-4. Of the 76 union members, president William Stewart said, only three or four of the 30 laid off June 24, were present. The rest are still working. The union represents the road commission's laborers, equipment operators, and mechanics. The three members of the road commission approved the contract Thursday. The contract, which is not retroactive to when the old one expired, provides, in most job classifications, for a 40 cents per hour across-the-board pay increase this year, 35 cents in 1978, and 40 cents in 1979. The lowest paid employee currently receives $4.87 per hour. The road commission did have two lower paying job classifications, at $4.15 and $4.35 per hour, but everyone in those categories was laid off.

Minor injuries in area mishaps

Joseph Beck, 9, of 1310 E. Caro Rd., Caro, was treated and released at Caro Community Hospital Saturday evening after being struck by a car.

A younger brother, who was not identified in the sheriff's department report, told deputies that his brother dropped some money while crossing E. Caro Rd. (M-81) and he apparently stopped to pick it up when he was hit by the car.

Driver of the car, headed northeast, was Dean G. Robinson, 56, of 3375 W. Dixon Rd., Caro. The accident took place about 2 mile northeast of Romain Road.

Richard G. LeValley, 16, of 7767 Rescue Road, Owendale, was ticketed by Cass City police early Friday on a charge of failure to report an accident.

Police reported he was eastbound on Houghton Street and turning right onto Herron Drive but jumped the curb on the east side of the street, hit a wood fence, and then drove off.

Owner of the fence was Gary Christner of 6886 Herron Drive.

James H. Kilbourn, 22, of Reed Street, Deford, struck and killed a deer at 8:50 p.m. Sunday while southbound on Hurds Corner Road, north of Curry Road.

State police at Caro said the deer ran from the west into the path of his car. Kilbourn was given a permit to keep the animal.

Area dump alternatives under study

Officials in Elmwood township and Gagetown are working on alternatives for trash disposal, to take place of their landfills ordered closed by the Thumb District Health Department for health reasons.

The health department officially ordered them closed by July 1, with the unwritten understanding that establishing a deadline was more a means to get officials involved to start working on an alternative by then.

In addition to those two, five other landfills in northern Tuscola county were ordered closed - in Columbia, Akron, Fairgrove, Gilford and Junata townships.

A similar order went out in April closing seven landfills in the southern part of the county.

Columbia township has already contracted with Cove Sanitation of Bad Axe to take over the trash removal duties there.

The firm will have a large container at the now-closed township landfill on the first and third Saturdays of each month, starting this Saturday, which was the same schedule as before. Residents can bring their trash there and then Cove will empty the container at its own approved landfill.

Depending on the amount of trash to be hauled away, Supervisor John H. DeSimpelare said, the cost to the township could be two to three times the $1,200 to $1,800 it cost per year to operate its own landfill. The firm is charging $2 per cubic yard, based on the size of the container it uses, for each Saturday it is in the township. Seven firms expressed interest in contracting with the township, DeSimpelare said, with Cove's offer being the cheapest.

The set-up being used by Columbia is one alternative being considered by Elmwood township and Gagetown.

Elmwood Clerk Joanne Sattelberg said another alternative is for the township to contract with a sanitation firm to pick up trash at each person's home.

Letters were written to various sanitation firms asking if they would be interested in contracting with the township. After all the answers are received, probably by this week, she said, the township board will hold a special meeting.

A third alternative it will consider, which has already been approved by the Cass City Village Council, is to pay the village $3.75 per year for each township resident for the right to use the village's approved landfill.

Novesta, Ellington, and Elkland townships currently have that arrangement with Cass City. It allows their residents to either bring trash directly to the landfill or pay a private firm to do so.

Circus returns to Cass City

Making an annual appearance in Cass City under the auspices of the Cass City Rotary Club will be the 1977 edition of Voorheis Bros. circus.

The big top will be erected on Main Street across from Auten Motor Sales Saturday, July 16.

Now in its sixth year in the Midwest, the show has prospered by catering to small towns in a limited area.

One of the shows that has been with the circus for years is the Marcellis slack wire and juggling act where the wire walker rides a unicycle on the wire and later holds his wife on his shoulder while both pass hoops between them.

Otherwise, Colonel Bill Voorheis' circus is new each season. Besides the Marcellis act, there are a sword balancing act on a swinging ladder and several animal acts.

Tickets are available at the door or from any Cass City Rotarian.

There will be two shows Saturday, at 2 and 7 p.m.

Six new jobs created for DNR

Although approximately 3,000 jobs will be created statewide in a youth employ-

Wheat acres can still be reported

In a last-minute change from the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS), farmers wanting to qualify for 1978 wheat and feed grain programs can wait until after harvesting their wheat and barley to report their acreages of those crops.

However, evidence of the wheat or barley stubble must remain until after reporting. Until the change, the acreages had to be reported before the start of harvesting. Spot checks will be made of some acreages to determine accuracy.

The owner, operator or other representative must be able to identify their fields on an aerial photograph.

Barring a change, the reporting deadline for corn acreage remains Aug. 15.

ment program recently created by the legislature, it appears only six of them will be in Tuscola county.

The program is for youth ages 15-21 to work on conservation projects on public lands. The jobs will be for 10 weeks.

The legislature appropriated $5 million for the program, of which $1.86 million is to be spent by the State Department of Natural Resources.

In Tuscola County, the DNR office south of Caro is being allocated six positions. The jobs will include game area habitat improvement, erecting signs, painting, and maintaining the dikes at Fish Point.

Five of the six will receive $2.57 per hour for a 40-hour week. The sixth person hired, who can be older than 21, will serve as supervisor and receive $4.70 per hour. Those hired will have to be able to get to the Caro DNR office on their own each day.

As of earlier this week, the Caro office had not yet received the job application blanks but was taking the name, address, and phone number of those who call, to be contacted later when the application blanks are received. The phone number there is 673-3434.

Area game manager Larry Smith said that as of Monday, at least 70 phone calls had already been received.

The majority of money appropriated by the legislature was allocated to local governmental units and park authorities where the unemployment rate was more than 6 percent.

Although Cass City was eligible, village Superintendent Lou LaPonsie said no positions were requested, primarily due to tight restrictions on the types of work the youths would be allowed to do.

Sanilac gets grant to study sheriff dept.

Sanilac county has received $18,810 in state and federal funds for a management study of its sheriff's department.

The money will be used to conduct an overall evaluation of the department's operation. Among its problems, according to the grant contract, are increasing demand for services and a 30 per cent increase in department expenditures during the past two years.

Radio communication with St. Clair county, ambulance dispatching, lack of funds to hire additional personnel, mandates for personnel compensation and training, and jail regulations are other problems.

The federal and state grants were released through the Michigan Office of Criminal Justice Programs.

Signing of the contract and official receipt of the grant took place Tuesday in the East Central Michigan Planning and Development Region office in Essexville.

Auxiliary installs officers

Fifteen members attended the July meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary Monday evening. Highlight of the meeting was installation of officers for the coming year. Mrs. Rosella Cherry, a past Unit president, installed the officers, assisted by Mrs. Verna McConnell and Mrs. Anna McComb.

Following the installation ceremony, Mrs. Cherry gave a 30-year history of the Auxiliary, which organized in March of 1947.

Installed as president for the coming year was Mrs. Reva M. Little, who was the Auxiliary's first president. Organized with 16 charter members, four still hold membership, Mrs. Little, Mrs. Evelyn MacKay, Mrs. Cora Wilson and Mrs. Rachel Wright.

Fourteen women have served as presidents, some for several terms. Three past presidents, Frances Tyo, Violet Kelley and Goldie Tyo, are deceased. Two of the past Unit presidents went on to serve in the seventh district, Mrs. Little and Mrs. Eugene Keller. Door prize for the evening went to Marge Schwartz and potluck lunch was served.

Disease fund drive leaders named

The Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, Greater Michigan Chapter, has announced the names of local leaders for its 1977 Breath of Life campaign.

Leaders include Jackie Peets, Snover, and Margaret Rickwall of the Jaycee Auxiliary in Caro.

Cystic Fibrosis, the most serious of child lung diseases, is an inherited condition affecting the lungs and digestive system of its victims.

While both parents must be carriers of the recessive CF gene, there are more than 400,000 carriers in Michigan alone.

Although incurable, Cystic Fibrosis can be treated. Fifteen years ago, according to the foundation, most children with the disease didn't reach school age. Due to advances in treatment, however, more than half live past age 18 and some live into their 20's and 30's.

September has been designated as Cystic Fibrosis Month by the National Health Council.

Hawks cop tourney

Prospects bright for Hawk cagers

For the second time in three years the Cass City High School basketball team won its own summer tournament.

The Hawks defeated a strong field of 8 teams in games played Friday and Saturday and served notice that they will be the team to beat when the regular season rolls around next winter.

To take home the medals, Cass City won over St. Charles, Brighton and Shelby.

The Shelby game was an overtime affair that saw the Hawks rally in the last quarter to tie and then win in overtime, 78-74.

Winning was very satisfying for the team but more important to Coach Ron Nurnberger is the opportunity the summer program gives him to look over candidates for the team.

Accordingly a bright spot for the coach and the team was the play of John Tuckey. The lanky forward played three strong games and hopes are high that he may be finally realizing the potential that his 6 feet, 3 inches and athletic ability give him.

Another asset revealed in the tourney is a strong bench. There promises to be experience at all positions this year when the starters need relief.

The scores of the tourney where each team plays three games were:

Seek homes for foreign visitors

Youth for Understanding, the international student exchange program based in Ann Arbor, is seeking homes for students who will arrive from 23 different countries in August and 10 Latin American countries in January.

Those arriving in August will stay for the school year; those in January, for six months.

Host families provide room and board with the students expected to provide their own spending money and clothes.

DAMPER

It is so much better to have resolved and lost than to let bad habits grow and multiply.
