Rezoning Sewage plant cost now over $5 million

The price tag for the expansion and improvement of the Cass City Wastewater Treatment Plant is now past the $5 million mark, the village council was told Tuesday evening.

Based on recent bidding for similar projects elsewhere, engineer James Hubbell reported, the construction cost estimate is now $4.5 million. Add an additional 15 percent for engineering, inspection, contingencies and other miscellaneous expenditures, and the total comes to $5.2 million.

Of that, Cass Cityans will have to pay 20 percent. The federal government, which along with the state is mandating the improvements, will pay 75 percent and the state, five percent.

How village residents will pay the 20 percent share is a decision the council will soon have to make.

The engineering firm of Hubbell, Roth and Clark of Bloomfield Hills has now completed what are known as the Step II plans, which are the blueprints needed for actual construction.

Step I was the preparation of a feasibility plan to determine what was needed. Preparation of the Step I and II plans cost a total of about $200,000, of which the village had to pay 20 percent.

The next step is for the engineering firm to prepare the documentation needed to apply for the Step III funds -- the 80 percent of the money for the building of the project.

The application should be in the hands of the state Department of Natural Resources in a couple of weeks and Hubbell anticipated six weeks after that, it will be known if the village will get the money. He was optimistic that it will.

In response to a question from Councilman Nat Tuttle, he responded, "There's plenty of money available." He pointed out that Cass City is 29th on a priority list of about 200 Michigan communities waiting to receive federal sewage treatment funds.

Even if the construction bids are over the estimate, the village will still get 80 percent, he further explained.

That leaves the village's share to pay for and as discussed Tuesday, there are two approaches it can take, both involving the selling of bonds.

Ruled out was the selling of revenue bonds, which could be done without approval by voters, because it would require setting of sewage treatment rates too high. Revenue bonds must be paid off out of revenues earned from the project.

The other alternative is general obligation bonds, which would require levying of a special millage to pay for them.

"Our thinking is always that we would go to the people (for approval)," village President Lambert Althaver said.

However, Hubbell pointed out, under present law if the people turned down such a millage proposal and the Michigan Water Resources Commission still felt the sewage treatment plant improvements were needed, it could order the bonds be sold and the project done without a public vote.

Should the tax limitation or tax reduction proposal on the ballot this November be approved, he wasn't sure what would happen if the people rejected the millage, since the proposals would bar tax increases without a public vote. "If the people turn it down and despite a court order," he commented, "we can say we tried."

Whatever the final action the council takes, the next step will be to hire bonding attorneys to prepare for the sale of bonds to finance the village's 20 percent share.

Althaver and village superintendent Lou LaPonsie will meet with the Detroit law firm of Miller, Canfield, Paddock and Stone, bonding specialists, prior to the Aug. 29 meeting. Representatives of the firm might make a presentation at that meeting.

Among the many questions that will have to be answered will be how many years the village can take to pay off the bonds. Twenty-five to 30 years has been suggested.

The proposed project will utilize some parts of the present sewage treatment plant, but will add a third or tertiary stage of treatment and expand capacity.

The present plant can handle a peak capacity of 1.1 million gallons of effluent per day; the new one, 2.5 million gallons.

The present secondary treatment can remove about 80 percent of the impurities in the effluent before dumping what's left into the Cass River. With the tertiary stage added, efficiency will be 95-98 percent, according to treatment plant Superintendent Nelson Willy.

If all goes well, Hubbell said, construction could start in seven months but he thought more likely, it will take nine months to a year.

REZONING

Although several persons showed up for the hearing on the proposed rezoning of two parcels owned by Tom Herron -- they left as soon as it was over -- no one spoke except Herron, who answered a question from the council.

As originally recommended by the village Planning Commission, the council approved the rezoning of a parcel across from Hospital Drive from special purpose to residential. A parcel north of Provincial House, plus part of an additional one, where Herron plans to construct an apartment building, was rezoned from special purpose to multiple dwelling.

OTHER BUSINESS

The finance committee was given authority to obtain further bids for liability insurance for all council members and other elected village officials, plus the village superintendent, and then award a contract for the insurance. One bid has been obtained so far. Being sought is $100,000 protection per official, with $1,000 deductible, in case they are sued in connection with their public duties.

It was reported that blacktopping of streets should begin next week.

Of the property taxes levied, 57.8 percent have been collected so far, versus 66 percent at this time a year ago.

Average attendance at the village swimming pool has been about 180 per day

Sheriff drains overtime budget

With the year not even seven months old, the sheriff's department has already exhausted its overtime budget of $25,000, the Tuscola County Board of Commissioners was told Tuesday.

Undersheriff Bruce Tail presented a request for an additional $18,000. It was pointed out that the entire sheriff's budget is not exhausted, just the amount allocated to pay overtime. The matter was referred to the board's finance committee.

Board Chairman Maynard McConkey was authorized to sign a contract with the U.S. Soil Conservation Service to conduct a soil survey in the county once the contract is received stating the county's financial obligation.

The county will be obligated for $9,218 a year for five years, minus the contributions from townships. Twenty townships have so far agreed to contribute $250 each per year, for a total of $5,000, leaving the county with an obligation of $4,218.

The board approved the request of Sally Atchinson, director of the Human Development Commission, for her agency to apply for two federal grants. One is for a foster grandparent program, $117,000, and the other for a program to help individuals remain self-sufficient, $100,000.

Circuit Judge Norman A. Baguley reminded the board of the need for an additional courtroom to accommodate the third circuit judge to be added to the Tuscola-Lapeer county circuit as of Jan. 1.

Ben Collon, chairman of the building and grounds committee, has been assigned to check into the possibility of hiring a firm to study the county's space needs, such as for circuit court and the extension service.

Pilot walks away after plane slams into house

Roy McNeil thought the pilot was dead for sure. But when he walked around the wreckage of the house, there he was, throwing his helmet on the ground.

I asked him if he was all right," McNeil recalled. "He said he thought so." McNeil and his grandson, Roy McNeil, 8, were sitting at a picnic table at 5:45 p.m. Tuesday evening, watching Bob Walthers dust a corn field behind the home of Roy's son, Richard McNeil.

The McNeil home is on Hoppe Road, east of Dodge Road in Elkland township. The plane was making a low pass, Roy McNeil said, when the engine died. It came down on the opposite (west) side of the house from where his grandson was sitting, and slammed against the house.

McNeil went to check on the pilot, not expecting to find him alive, and Larry ran to his father, who was working in his shop, east of the house. No one was in the house when the plane hit.

The impact started a small fire, which Richard McNeil put out with a fire extinguisher. As gasoline still leaked, the plane was then pulled away from the house.

McNeil quoted Walthers as saying he had shut off the aileron mechanism when the engine died.

The pilot was bathed in chemicals as the plane was being moved when it slammed into the house. He first tried to get out of the house, but he was unable to do so.

Walthers and three brothers, who own about 2,000 acres of land in the Clio and Cass areas. The field he was dusting when the accident occurred is rented from Alvin Ortner. To the casual observer, the house received only slight damage. However, Richard McNeil said, the house was shifted slightly on the foundation and the chimney badly cracked.

As of Monday, he didn't know yet whether the house was repairable or would have to be rebuilt. The Walthers have offered to pay for the damages, he said. In the meantime, the home can be lived in.

McNeil and his wife, Sue, who was in Pigeon at the time of the crash, have one other child besides Larry, Tammy, 6. Roy McNeil lives on Houghton Street in Cass City.

Sheriff's deputies conducted the original investigation. Federal Aviation Administration representatives were at the scene Saturday.

Dedication held for petroglyphs shelter

After maybe a thousand years of exposure to the elements, the petroglyphs of Sanilac county are now protected.

Dedication of the new shelter over the unique Indian carvings, paid for with $37,600 in state funds, took place Saturday afternoon.

What is now known as the Sanilac Historic State Park is located on the west side of Germania Road, a half-mile south of Bay City-Forestville Road.

Construction of the wood, eight-sided open air shelter began last September after more than three decades of efforts to preserve the carvings, the only known ones in Michigan and one of the few such examples of the Indian art east of the Mississippi River.

Andrew Bierlein Sr. of the Michigan Department of Natural Resources Parks Division, one of the dedication speakers, said letters in the DNR's file concerning their preservation date back to 1944.

Master of ceremonies at the dedication, which attracted about 80 persons, was District Judge Ira W. Butterfield of Bay City, one of those involved in the long-time effort to save the carvings.

The first speaker was Dr. John R. Halsey, Michigan Department of State archaeologist, who explained the more than 100 individual carvings in the soft sandstone rock "don't tell a story as far as we can tell."

Some of the carvings, such as the one known as "the bowman," were apparently done by prehistoric hunters in order to favorably affect the outcome of their hunting. Other carvings appear to be personal or religious in nature.

They may be as "new" as 300 years old or as old as 1,100 years. They were discovered in the late 1800s after the great forest fires of that period burned away the soil and humus covering them.

Since then, erosion, trampling of thousands of feet, and vandalism in removing some of the carvings or adding new ones has seriously deteriorated the condition of the carvings.

Others speaking at the dedication were Lawrence G. Dorothy, president of the Michigan Archaeological Society; Robert M. Rasmussen, DNR Region III director; Dr. Martha M. Bigelow, director of the Michigan History Division, Michigan Department of State, and Oliver Raymond, president of the Sanilac County Historical Society.

Political figures who spoke were State Sen. Alvin DeGrow, Pigeon; State Rep. Quincy Hoffman, Appleton; and Joseph O'Conner of Minden City, chairman of the Sanilac County Board of Commissioners.

It was the Michigan Archaeological Society, with foundation grants and private donations, which purchased the 240 acres containing the petroglyph site, in 1965 and 1967. It donated the land to the state in 1970.

One of the delays since then in building the shelter was a jurisdictional squabble between the DNR and the Department of State over which agency has responsibility over managing historical parks. The DNR won.

Roy Elie, manager of the DNR's Port Crescent State Park, will also be in charge of the petroglyphs park.

The state funds covered building of the protective shelter, a chain link fence surrounding it, and a gravelled parking area along Germania Road. A footpath leads to the petroglyphs site. Hillyer Construction Co. of Birmingham was the contractor on the project.

"If It Fitz..." Missing the garbage man

By Jim Fitzgerald

The wife doesn't miss missing the garbage man. After 22 years of mortgaged ownership, the wife and the husband have sold their home in a small town to the people next door. It is suspected that the purchase as part of a neighborhood improvement project with everyone in the block sharing the cost, the theory being that if a neighbor won't stop rowing his dirty socks out his bedroom window, buy his house and appoint a welcoming committee to serve refreshments to the men in the moving van.

Anyway, the wife and the husband are now full-time apartment dwellers in the big city where the garbage man is ever present, anonymous but omniscient, hidden in a little room just a few steps down the hall. He can't be missed, which is marvelous.

When she was a home owner, nothing bothered the wife more than missing the garbage man. To understand this phenomenon, you must understand how it was with the wife and her garbage.

In the first place, it's not really garbage as the husband was brought up to understand the term. His mother's garbage was always coffee grounds and bread crusts (that's why he doesn't have curly hair) and potato peels and other assorted gloop and glop.

His mother would put this old-fashioned garbage in one of those big pans with holes in the bottom — a drainer, it was called. His job was to move that pan of garbage from the sink to the garbage pail outside so swiftly there wasn't time for gloop to ooze through the holes.

He never really made it, but he always ran in a crouch, so that his knees were under the pan and the gloop dripped on his pants instead of on his mother's floor. He preferred scraping his pants once a week to washing her floor every night.

His wife's garbage is different from his mother's. The wife has a disposal in her sink to eat gloop and glop. Only cans and bottles and boxes go into the garbage can. At their former home, the garbage man came twice a week, and the wife always worried about missing him.

The problem was that she wanted her garbage put into the garbage pail in the backyard one minute before the garbage man arrived. She would station a child at the front window to yell when the garbage truck came around the corner. She would then instruct the husband to get eight bags of garbage into the garbage pail quickly, before it was too late.

"He's coming, he's coming..." You are probably wondering why the wife insisted on suspense with her garbage. This makes you eligible to join the club of which the husband has been president for 22 years. (The only other member is the garbage man, who joined on the day he asked the husband how come it was always either feast or famine at his house. If the pail wasn't overflowing, it was empty.)

The bags of garbage were hidden in kitchen cupboards and closets. They were not in the garbage pail, waiting for the garbage man, because the wife thought it was sloppy to have garbage in garbage cans. The neighbors might have seen the garbage, or their pets might have chewed on it, or the Queen of England might have stopped by to use the garbage pail to wash her crown in.

If the husband didn't get the garbage into the pail in time for the garbage man to remove it, the garbage had to be stored in the kitchen for two or three extra days. If this happened twice in a row, the wife ran out of hiding places and there were so many garbage bags stacked in the kitchen, you could only chew on one side of your mouth at a time.

This clutter often created confusion. One day the husband brought home a fresh bag of groceries and accidentally put it down next to a garbage bag. That night they had a fried corn flakes box for dinner.

So the wife is pleased now to be living in an apartment building where she can dump her garbage the minute it becomes garbage. She never misses missing the garbage man. She just throws the garbage into the huge garbage closet down the hall and slams the door. The neighbors never know where it came from.

The husband is also delighted by the new garbage set-up. Another reason he likes living in a high rise is that by the time his dirty socks hit the ground, the neighbors don't know where they came from, either.

Rev. Vernon P. Lockard

New Novesta pastor tells plans for church growth

Officially, his title is Rev. Vernon P. Lockard, but he prefers even his parishioners to call him Vern.

The new minister at the Novesta Church of Christ gave his first regular sermon there July 16. He gave the guest sermon there May 21, after which he was offered the pastorate.

The native of Aurora, Ill. (near Chicago) comes to the church south of Cass City after seven years at the Spencer Church of Christ near Kalkaska.

The minister, 32, attended Great Lakes Bible College in Lansing for two years, but, "I was anxious to get out and preach."

He was offered the position at Spencer, preached there on week ends and attended Great Lakes during the week.

After completing his third year in college, he dropped out in order to devote more time to the church and to build up its membership. When he started, it had 50 members. When he left, it had twice that.

He finally returned for his senior year, driving to Lansing two days a week, and obtained his bachelor's degree in religious education in 1975. He was ordained as a minister two years before that.

Before deciding to become a minister, Lockard worked three and a half years as a draftsman for Caterpillar Tractor in Aurora.

He and his wife Bev have three children, Carol, 11, David, 10, and Sandra, 6.

Mrs. Lockard, who plays piano and gives lessons, prepared some Easter music programs while at Spencer. In her husband's new church, she plans to start a choir this fall.

Lockard replaces Rev. Harold Prong.

The new minister describes his church as "evangelical" and he and his congregation aim to increase membership.

Planned within the new year or two is the building of a new church with seating capacity for 300, about twice that of the present building. It will adjoin the educational building, which is behind the parsonage, across the road from the present church, built in 1903.

In Spencer, Lockard was also active outside the church. He started the Kalkaska Christian Church League for softball and basketball. "We never finished first," he laughed in recalling his own church's efforts. In the first year of competition, a year ago, it finished second in softball out of four teams and fourth in basketball out of five teams.

He has already made his debut here on the Novesta church's softball team.

Also at Spencer, he coached a little league team, started a Cub Scout pack, and helped organize the Wilderness Christian Assembly, a summer church camp for children in grades 4-12. An elder of his church donated the land for the camp.

Spencer, 10 miles from Kalkaska, was once a thriving lumbering community, but is now somewhat of a ghost town.

"It's just been a fine, friendly community," Lockard said of his impression so far of the Cass City area. "My wife and I have really taken a liking to it. The people have been really friendly and helpful."

(And anyone else he can get to help)

It just wasn't our week end, but we had a marvelous time anyway.

The plan was to drive to Tobermory, take the M.S. Chi-Cheemaun ferry across Georgian Bay to South Baymouth, drive to Sault Ste. Marie and then home.

The trouble was that there was no room on the ferry. It makes four trips daily. At 11 and 3:30 no reservation accepted. We arrived at 10 and found cars waiting for both trips. The 8 p.m. trip accepts reservations and was sold out. So we decided to try Stratford... for a play, suspecting that tickets might be scarce. They weren't scarce, they were unavailable.

It wasn't a lost trip. Besides getting our first look we also spent a pleasant couple of hours viewing the large art display that was spread across one of the spacious lawns.

Sometimes the women's rights movement is evident in the most unlikely place.

Like on a farm approaching Goderich in Canada. On the barn in big, bold letters for all to see, "Jim and Evelyn Bradley and girls."

Prices in Canada were comparable to those in Cass City. At McDonald's a double cheese was 95 cents (less about 10 percent you gain in currency exchange).

Like resorts anywhere, you can get clipped. A silver dollar-sized hamburger cost a buck and if you were willing to pay $1.39 you could buy a pint of not-so-good raspberries

One other note about the Bruce Peninsula. It is big, big bean country. We saw acres after acres of beans. From the road I couldn't tell if they were navy beans or colored beans, but I suspect there were both.

The work goes on. Monday morning a different airplane was seen dusting the potato crop owned by Leonard Walther & Sons, Inc. Friday as Bob Walther was crop dusting he cracked up his plane into the corner of a house. (Story in this issue).

Will the real Brian McMahan please stand up? In an ad for McMahan Auto Parts last week, gremlins sneaked into the composing room and the wrong picture appeared.

We've corrected it this week and the face you see is the one you'll see when you visit the store.

Jim Schwanitz, manager at B & W Auto Sales, lives in Pigeon. He's grinning all over this week. The work of months has been successful. Schwanitz' beard won a prize at the Pigeon Silver Anniversary celebration. His beard, which sported at least three colors, was judged most colorful. What's more his wife also won a prize. The Haire Net

A young person starting out today interested in making money might do better by quitting formal education after high school graduation.

That's if the interest is in making money, period. There's little advantage to a college education if you take a job on the line at General Motors.

And if you cruise up and down Main Street, you'll be surprised at some of the more successful owners who forgot about college. Today the prospects are more bleak for the college degree holder than ever before.

The papers are full of stories these days about the trouble graduates are having finding jobs in their fields. The stories warn against going to college for the sake of something to do.

Granted all of this, I'm happy that the kids in my family opted for college. Measured in dollars returned for dollars spent it hasn't been that great a bonanza.

It's the contention here, there's an advantage to college that you can't put a dollar sign on. It opens new vistas if not new job opportunities.

What it does is hard to put a finger on. Part of it certainly is finding out about the world. As the old story goes: The boy went to college appalled at how little the old man knew and came back four years later amazed at how much dad had learned.

That leveling is part, but only a part. It's an appreciation, an awareness that permeates like rain water soaking in the earth. Not visible but, oh, so needed.

Maybe, above all, learning to learn. About art. About lifestyles. About nationalities. Learning that just because it's different from the way it is in the comfortable Thumb doesn't make it wrong. Or right, either, for that matter.

I'll be the first to agree that all of this and 30 cents will buy you a cup of coffee. As I said, measured that way it probably doesn't make sense for the vast majority to go to college.

But we're on the verge of the 32-hour work week. That leaves an awful lot of time away from the job.

And if you're asking, is that all there is? any college will show you that it isn't.

Sure, all of us know persons without college experience that have it all... and others with degrees that will never have it.

But the average guy needs all the exposure he can get. Simply, it makes for a better life.

Like the ad says, you only go around once, and that's what makes college worth what it costs.

Even if you end up on the line at General Motors.

Area CETA programs in good shape

With three-fourths of the fiscal year finished, Comprehensive Employment and Training Act programs in Tuscola, Huron and Sanilac counties are in good shape, the Thumb Area Consortium administrative board was told last Thursday.

The latest quarterly reports were presented by the consortium Executive Director Frank Lenard.

The CETA Title I program consists of classroom training, on-the-job, and work experience programs. As of June 30, enrollments totaled 686, 114 percent of the goal, with new enrollments during the nine months of the fiscal year totaling 357 persons, the rest being carryovers from the previous fiscal year.

Of the total, 145 left the program for jobs, 87 left for other positive reasons, such as continuing schooling, and 89 left for "non-positive" reasons, such as quitting or being dismissed.

Program expenses totaled $901,654 during the nine months, $86,654 more than was allocated for the period; however, a contingency of $97,983 will more than make up the difference. Administrative expenses were 7.1 percent of the total.

The reason for the over-expenditure, Lenard explained, was the increase during the period in the minimum wage paid to program participants. The minimum is now $2.65 per hour.

In the Title II employment program, there have been 53 new enrollments and 88 carried over from the previous year. Twenty-eight have left, 12 because they found other jobs and 16 for "non-positive" reasons.

Expenditures have totaled $710,113—99.9 percent of the goal—of which 2.2 percent went for administration, the rest for wages and fringe benefits.

The Title III Youth Employment Training Program was new this fiscal year, with 214 youth being enrolled. As of June 30, 26 had left, 10 for other jobs, one for "other positive" reasons and 15 for "non-positive" reasons.

One of the goals of the program, which provides work experience for high school students from low-income families, for which they are paid, was to entice dropouts to return to school. The goal had been to enroll 100 dropouts, "but as you can see," Lenard told the board, "we didn't do too well." Only three dropouts have returned to school and entered the program.

Expenditures have totaled $2,654 so far, 82.1 percent the amount authorized, of which 23.1 percent has gone to administration. Much of it reflects start-up costs, explained, and by the end of the fiscal year, Sept. 30, the figure will have to be within the allowable 15 percent.

The Youth Employment

Training Program is being run by the Human Development Commission in Caro under contract with the consortium.

Another Title III program, started in June, is a work experience program. There have been 161 enrollments, as opposed to a goal of 110, and 20 have left the program, of which 17 quit or were dismissed.

This program, which puts youth to work on temporary projects, doesn't require dropouts to return to school. The goal was to enroll 15 dropouts, but so far, 51 have been accepted.

Expenses so far have been $38,001 of the $90,000 authorized for the first month, with 13.2 percent spent for administration.

The Title VI emergency employment program has given jobs to 882 persons since last Oct. 1, of which 382 were new enrollments and 480 persons continued their jobs from the previous fiscal year.

A total of 109 have left during the period because of other jobs, 13 left for other positive reasons and 179 left for "non-positive" reasons, a figure which Lenard said was "not good." The projection had been only 120 would leave for non-positive reasons.

A total of $3.23 million has been spent so far, 98 percent of the amount allocated for the nine months. Administrative expenses totaled 5.4 percent.

In other action, the consortium board authorized application to the state for $450,000 in federal Youth Community Conservation and Improvement Projects funds for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1. If the grant is approved, that will be enough to provide jobs for 70 youths during the year, of which it is expected 20 will quit.

The consortium applied for a similar grant last October for the present fiscal year but its application was rejected.

Contracts for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1 were approved with the Human Development Commission to run the Title I work experience program and the Title III Youth Employment Training Program, called locally the Career Employment Experience Program.

Cost of the Title I program will be $350,000, enough to enroll 246 persons for the maximum allowed period of six months.

CEEP will cost $266,000 and provide jobs for 224 high school youth.

Among Title VI work sites projects approved were six maintenance works for the Kingston schools, to work through August, and two persons to do assessment work in Elmwood township.

The latter project, to last five or six months, will consist of making property descriptions, including measuring buildings and acreages, and entering the information on tax cards.

Lots of fun and games during sidewalk sales days

HOLD ON -- That's what Rick Pobanz, 13, was trying to do with his water filled balloon which partner Fred Zawilinski had thrown to him. They took second place in their age division.

LEAVING THE HOLE -- The object was to eat the donut, but leave the ring. The winner was the one with the thinnest ring, which in his age group was Tom Lefler, 12 (with glasses).

DUNKING -- Bobbing for apples definitely requires participants to sink their teeth into their subject. Jeff Klebba, 12, retrieved this apple in 2.3 seconds.

'EDALING AROUND

Looking good

By Mike Eliasohn

Women, have no fear. I don't look at your hands, even though my apartment does need a good cleaning. Before you start calling a male chauvinist pig, let me point out the inspiration all this comes from. Jackie McWhirter, women's column in the Detroit Free Press. She was commenting recently on a 10-year study by Nancy Hirschberg, a University of Chicago psychology professor, relating women's personalities to the parts of female anatomy they admire most.

For instance, a man who likes to look at shapely female legs tends to be socially active, cheerful, and considerate and helpful to others.

He is probably also frustrated. Ever since shorts have gone out of style in favor of slacks and longer dresses, there hasn't been much to look at.

I always wanted a girlfriend who admires bosoms, according to the professor, outgoing and independent, but also tends to be w-off who are selfish and unwilling to be helpful. Those who like to look at female posteriors are orderly, but are also socially inept, guilt-ridden, and -abasing.

Prof. Hirschberg suggests that women who possess the tired body parts tend to be the same personality characteristics as the men who admire them.

Apparently the professor didn't study men who study women. Personally, I wouldn't be much for a woman who looks like Vincent Price, no matter how great her legs are.

McWhirter also feels Prof. Hirschberg didn't try all the possibilities, she and her colleagues came up with some findings in their own. Here's where the apartment comes in.

Among their findings was "men who initially admire a woman's chipped nail polish, signails and scuffed heels tend to be bachelors living in squalor who are looking for someone to clean their floors and bathtubs. They are slobs. I admit I'm somewhat of a slob and that my apartment is, well, let's say, messy, but when I see a woman worth looking at, I don't look at her hands first.

Not that I would mind finding a woman who wouldn't mind scrubbing my floors and bathroom but I doubt such women exist anymore.

The last woman I knew like that was the girlfriend of a college roommate I had in 1965 whom I couldn't stand (the roommate, that is).

She did his laundry and ironed his shirts and maybe even sewed on his buttons.

She was a very nice person and I hope she had the common sense not to marry him. If she did march down the aisle with him, by now she must either be divorced or a battered wife. (Remember, at that time, I had lived with the guy and she hadn't, so I knew his bad habits).

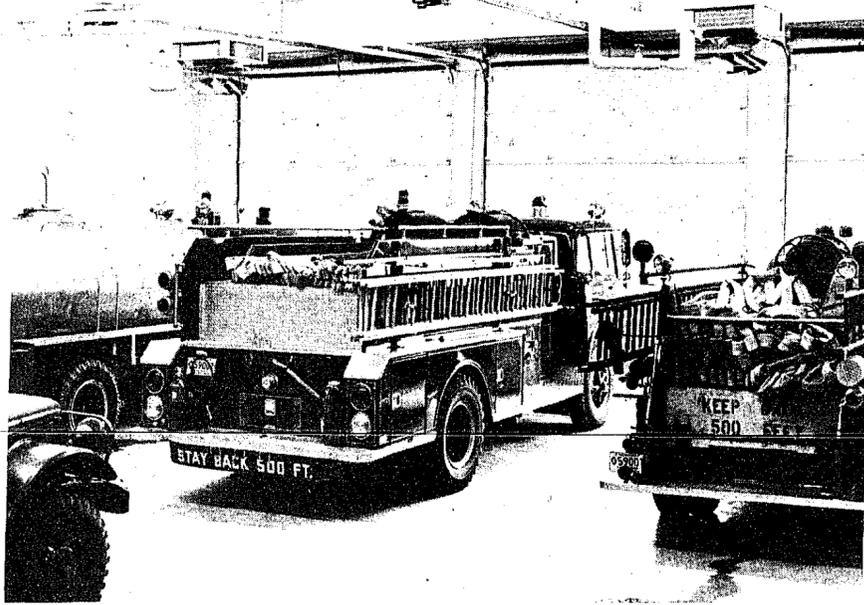

I always wanted a girlfriend like that in college but I could never find one. She didn't even have to go out with me, just do my laundry and iron my shirts.

Fair seeks motorcycle riders

The Sanilac County 4-H Fair is seeking riders to compete in the International Motorcycle Rodeo Wednesday, Aug. 9, at 8:00 p.m. Cash, prizes and trophies will be awarded to the winners in each scheduled event.

Local and area riders are invited to submit entries at all area cycle shops. All events to be run off are open to both men and girls. New events this year are a slalom race set up in front of the grandstand, a broad jumping contest, a slow race, and the ultimate skill contest - "Wheelies" - with some riders able to even negotiate the banked speedway turns.

Trick and fancy exhibition riding by the "Spirit of '76" professional team plus exhibition two-wheel driving as far as possible in a new automobile are slated.

LOTS OF ROOM -- As visitors to the dedication and open house Sunday could see, the garage area has plenty of room for all the trucks of the Gagetown Fire Department. (Dave Burrows photos)

Municipal building in Gagetown dedicated

The Elmwood-Gagetown municipal building and fire hall was dedicated Sunday afternoon.

County Commissioner Maynard McConkey cut the ribbon officially opening the building.

Township Supervisor Roy Messer gave the background leading to construction of the building and introduced the members of the township board.

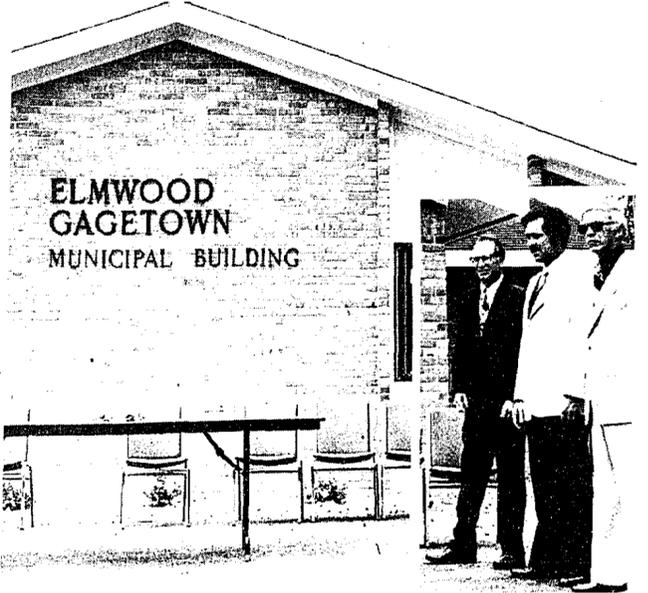

Village President William Downing introduced the village council members.

State Sen. Alvin DeGroot, R-Pigeon, spoke and State Rep. Loren Armbruster, R-Caro, was introduced.

The new building contains separate offices for the township, village, and fire chief, fire apparatus room, meeting room with kitchenette, and garage area for fire trucks.

The building cost $173,000, with $150,000 paid for with federal public works funds, with the township and village equally dividing the rest of the cost. Construction began last November.

About 50 persons attended the dedication.

Clyne escapes second time from Huron jail

Former Deford resident Ronald Clyne escaped Sunday night for the second time from the Huron county jail -- and for the second time, he was recaptured.

Clyne, 19, started serving a one-year term in April for unlawfully driving away an automobile without intent to steal. The charge was in connection with his having taken a used car from a Bad Axe dealership for a test drive, then failing to return it.

He and George M. Risner, 20, of Fort Jennings, Ohio, escaped about 2 p.m. Saturday from an enclosed exercise yard by climbing onto a ledge, grabbing an overhead conduit pipe, then inching their way along the side of the jail to an opening in the wall, where they jumped over the side.

Other prisoners in the yard yelled the men were escaping but there were no deputies around to hear their shouts.

Risner, who was being held pending extradition to Ohio on larceny charges, was captured about 15 minutes later when he tried to steal a car from the driveway of a Bad Axe home.

The owner of the car grabbed him when he saw Risner try to drive it away. The keys had been left in the car.

Clyne, who was barefoot, told deputies after his capture Monday he ran to a wooded area just north of the city limits, where he hid for about four hours. He then hitchhiked to Caro, spending Saturday night at his uncle's home there.

Sunday, he went to visit friends in Deford. He was arrested at 7:56 p.m., by Tuscola county deputies as he was walking along Deckerville Road, west of Deford.

Huron County Sheriff Richard V. Stoken said the 24-by-30-foot exercise yard won't be used again until a screen is put over the top of it.

Clyne and Risner appeared Tuesday before District Judge John T. Schubel on the charges against them.

They both pleaded innocent to the escape from jail charge. Risner also demanded examination on the charge of unlawfully driving away an automobile. Preliminary examination on that charge was set Aug. 2. Trial date on the jail break charges will be set later.

Students going to S. America

Two Cass City High School students will be spending their junior year in South America as participants in the Rotary Club exchange program.

They are Renee Erla, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Erla of 6779 Pine Street, and Lori Ziehm, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ziehm of 6221 Green Road, Gagetown.

Renee will be staying in Oruro, Bolivia, about 120 miles southeast of La Paz. Lori will live in Belo Horizonte, Brazil, about 200 miles north of Rio De Janeiro. Both are scheduled to leave Aug. 12.

Renee has taken two years of Spanish in high school, the language spoken in Bolivia.

When Lori applied for the program, she requested assignment to South America because she also had studied Spanish, for 1½ years. She was assigned to Brazil, the only country there where Portuguese is spoken, so since early this year has been taking lessons in that language from Linda Sutter.

A 1978 graduate of Cass City High School, Linda spent her junior year in Brazil as an exchange student.

The two girls will return home next July.

Your Neighbor says

$10,000 is too much for a car

Planning to buy a car in 1985? The average family sedan might cost you $10,000.

Ford Motor Co. marketing analysts recently determined the average price of a 1978 model car is $6,500.

Figure the average yearly price increases, due mainly to increasing labor and material costs plus the expense of meeting government standards for emissions, safety and fuel economy, and it's likely the average car in 1985 will cost $10,000.

Rob Alexander doesn't think he will buy a car that year if that's what they cost. "That's too much money for a car."

The price won't deter everyone, however. "Some people are always going to buy one, no matter what. Everybody needs a car."

If prices do go up that much, he thinks more people will try and keep their old cars running as long as they can.

People do become accustomed to higher prices, Alexander admitted. He paid $5,400 for his 1976 Pontiac Grand Prix. Several years ago, he thought $3,000-3,500 was a lot to pay for a car.

Along with the increase of cars is the increase of gasoline. Although Alexander can visualize more persons riding bicycles or mopeds around town, he doesn't see it cutting down on their driving that much to conserve gasoline. "People are stubborn, no matter what," said, and thus unlikely change their driving habits.

Alexander, 24, is single and lives on Woodliff Street. He works as a stock handler at Walbro.

HEALTH TIPS

Keeping cool in the summer

By Frank Chappell, American Medical Association

Is the heat wearing you down? It's hot in most of the United States in mid-summer. In the desert and in the south it's even hotter. But July and August are not all over, even in the mountains. Regardless of whether you blame the heat or the humidity, it's still hot.

There's nothing you can do about the outside temperature. Unless you are fortunate enough to have an air conditioned office or shop, home and auto, there's nothing much you can do about it inside either.

But there are some things you can do to be more comfortable, things that will help you beat the heat, the American Medical Association points out.

Stay out of the sun as much as possible, especially during the middle of the day when rays are hottest. Wear light, loose clothing, the less the better. The ladies have an edge over the men in this respect.

Drink more liquids than usual, but take extra salt only on your physician's advice, particularly if you have liver or kidney trouble or a heart condition.

Take a shower or dip in the pool once or twice a day to cool off. Get plenty of rest and sleep. Eat your regular diet and don't go overboard on cold cuts and salads, unless you like them anyway.

Get up early in the morning to do your heavy work on the lawn or garden. Or work at dusk in the evening. Try to avoid heavy exertion during the hottest hours of the day.

You need exercise in the summer as well as in the winter, but don't overdo it, especially on extra hot days. Don't overdo physical exertion, whether at work or play.

The more relaxed outdoor life of the summer months has many advantages to compensate for the heat. Stay relaxed and use common sense, and you can beat the heat — at least somewhat.

Senior ID program restarting

The Thumb Area Commission on Aging announces revitalization of the Thumb area senior citizen identification card and discount opportunity project is now under way.

Purpose of this project is to provide senior citizens with a uniform means of identifying themselves in order to secure the special discounts and rates that are available for them at various business and service places in Huron, Sanilac, and Tuscola counties.

Volunteers are now recontacting merchants currently participating to see if they wish to continue and are contacting new merchants to explain the program and ask for their support. Participating merchants make all decisions as to the amount of discount they will offer and any limitations on those discounts.

Sites throughout Huron, Sanilac and Tuscola counties will be set up in late August and September where people 60 years of age and older will be able to purchase identification discount cards for $1. Any surplus monies after expenses will go into other services for senior citizens.

A directory will be given to card holders in all three counties listing participating businesses.

Merchants who would like more information on the program can contact the Thumb Area Commission on Aging in Caro at 673-4175, Bad Axe at 269-6302 and Sandusky at 648-4647.

Big Brothers/Big Sisters

Being an only child, with no neighbor children to play with, can make a very lonely summer for a seven-year-old. If you live in the Unionville area and like outdoor sports, why not give this boy a try?

This sharp little eight-year-old from Reese doesn't have much opportunity to have fun. He would love to have a man help him learn to ride his bike, play sports with him, and just be a good listener.

Undivided attention from a woman is needed for this insecure 10-year-old from Millington. She likes swimming, horses, outdoor activities, and games. Why not give her a chance to build some confidence?

With her Big Sister having moved from the area, this cute little 10-year-old is anxiously waiting for a new special friend. She likes all types of activities—swimming, arts and crafts, and bike-riding. If you live in Caro, she would make a

New books at the library

THE SILVER BULLET, by Ann Finlayson (fiction-youth). When Sergeant John Luckless accepts a charge from General Burgoyne to deliver a secret message to General Howe in New York, the British soldier plays a game of hare and hound with the American rebels who, curiously, seem to know exactly who he is. Partially based on a true incident, this freewheeling Revolutionary War adventure revolves around an entertaining, resourceful, and charismatic underhead.

THE ILLUSTRATED ENCYCLOPEDIA OF CRAFTS AND HOW TO MASTER THEM, by Grace Berne Rose. A useful how-to-encyclopedia of 80 crafts, with instructional drawings and inspirational photographs. For both the beginner as well as the experienced craftsman it covers varieties of projects in wood, paper, metal, stone, leather, graphics, painting, pottery, glass, enameling, textiles, sculpture, casting, and plastics. Besides the 300 beautiful drawings, there are 81 photographs of craft masterpieces ancient and modern.

THE SPECIAL CHILD HANDBOOK, by Joan and Bernard McNamara (non-fiction). For parents and families as well as professionals, a guide to the special requirements of physically, emotionally, and mentally handicapped children. The McNamaras were dismayed by their own unpreparedness and by the lack of available professional guidance and services when they were faced with five children who had special needs. Their book covers many common situations and potentially troublesome problems that arise in the care of handicapped children and offers sensible advice and a great deal of compassion. The chapters cover recognition of the handicap, professional diagnosis, school and educational programs, and sources of emotional and financial support. Directories at the end of each chapter supply the addresses of organizations and other resources.

Reserve unit training to start

Once again, B Battery 4-38th Field Artillery in Bad Axe will be moving to the field for two weeks of annual training at Fort McCoy, Wis. The advance party personnel will arrive at Fort McCoy Friday. Convoy drivers, persons driving their own cars, and personnel riding on the bus will report Sunday.

The first week of training is designed to refresh the Battery personnel in the basic fundamentals of the Field Artillery and progress up through the most complicated procedures. Safety is stressed heavily. Other activities the first week include maintenance of all vehicles and section equipment and organization of the company area, administration and dry and live fire practice.

During the second week, B Battery will participate in a four-day field training exercise in which it will stay in the field four days and three nights.

Within this time frame there will be a 24-hour tactical problem in which the battery will provide continuous around the clock artillery support. Also during the training period an evaluation of all battery training standards will be conducted by active Army personnel.

B Battery Commander, 1st Lt. Kurt Eugster, is hopeful that it will add the battalion's "best firing battery" award to his unit's collection. B Battery received the award last year. The best battery award goes to the top overall unit within the battalion.

Other units within the Battalion are Headquarters, C Battery and Service Battery, all of Bay City, and A Battery of Saginaw.

Poor driver hits doors

Thieves foiled in rare big machinery heist attempt

Ron Cybulski still has his $35,000 combine, thanks mainly to luck. But he and his father are going to have to replace the doors on the latter's old wood barn. Thieves attempting to steal Cybulski's combine drove right through them. Cybulski lives on Hutchinson Road near Colwood. His four-year-old Massey Ferguson combine was being kept in a barn on the farm of his father, Steve Cybulski, on Elmwood Road, west of Dodge Road. Apparently sometime between midnight and 2:30 Friday morning, the would-be thieves broke into the barn through the large doors that had been nailed shut. Doors on the other side of the barn were locked. Investigating sheriff's deputies believe the attempted theft took place before 2:30 as that is when a heavy rain fell, wiping out any tracks. Cybulski had been working lately on the combine transmission, which would only work in low gear and reverse.

Whether it was due to the transmission or ignorance by those trying to take it, the combine started in reverse and went through the nailed shut doors. A bean header for it was sitting behind the combine so once it started moving backwards, it pushed the combine header along.

The header acted like a bulldozer blade. The combine ran all the way across the road but came to a halt jammed against the header, which in turn was jammed against the mound of dirt it pushed in front of it.

A neighbor, Marion Pomeroy, awoke to hear the combine still running. It had come to rest in the bean field of her and her husband, Fritz. They reported the incident to the sheriff's department at 4:03 a.m.

Cybulski estimated damage to his combine at $3,000 and said the bean header will probably have to be replaced. The drive belt was broken.

The theft of large farm equipment in the county isn't too common. The only theft officers at the Tuscola County Sheriff's Department and the Caro state police post could recall within the last year or two was the theft of a large tractor from a Millington implement dealer.

To make it harder for would-be thieves, Farm Bureau insurance offices in Caro and Sandusky (for members only) and state police posts in the Thumb have available for loan a kit for marking farm equipment.

The owner dials his driver's license number onto the stamp, then marks the equipment with a permanent ink, over which is placed a sticker through which the number shows.

The sticker says in large letters, "Warning," and in smaller letters, "This property has been marked for ready identification by any law enforcement agency anywhere in the United States."

The borrower of the marking equipment receives a booklet showing where to put the driver's license number on each piece of farm equipment, so that it can easily be spotted by police agencies. For instance, on a tractor, it goes on the right side frame rail, 12 inches from the front.

In addition to the designated location, the number also should be placed in a location known only to the owner, and also on large components, such as hydraulic cylinders and batteries.

Marked farm equipment may be a deterrent to would-be thieves. If it is taken and later recovered, the driver's license number will enable police agencies anywhere in the United States to locate the owner.

The Sanilac County Farm Bureau has had an intensified program underway since last fall to get its members to mark their equipment.

The program got off to a slow start, according to its chairman, Faye Adams of Snover, because farmers were too busy trying to get their crops in during the wet weather and once winter set in, it was too cold. Equipment kept outside can't be marked if the temperature is below freezing.

At this point, she doesn't know how many members have participated in the program.

Chairmen have been appointed in each township. When it's their "turn", the chairman has several of the kits available for use by Farm Bureau members in the township. When everyone is done, the equipment is turned over to another township.

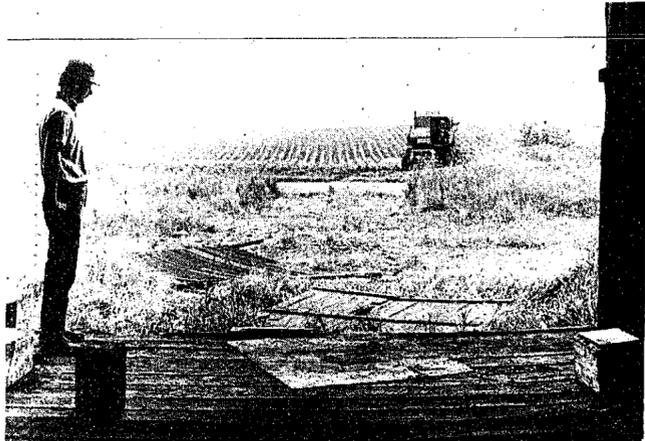

Mrs. Adams said it usually takes a day of on-and-off effort to mark the equipment. The spot where the number will be applied must be cleaned, the number is stamped and the sticker placed over it, then the item and the places where the numbers were placed should be recorded.

The Farm Bureau is encouraging marking of equipment statewide.

Stoney Creek

Opposition to drain fades

Clearing of the Stoney Creek Drain in northwestern Sanilac county appears a near certainty as opposition to the project has evaporated. A lawyer was consulted by the opponents, who could have gone to circuit court to try to stop the project. It appears that won't happen now, according to Jim Waldorf, one of those who originally objected to the proposal, because the cost to those who would have received the fewest benefits is nowhere as much as anticipated.

Opposition came from those living north of Deckerville Road who felt the project was too costly for the benefits they would receive. The drainage problems have been south of the road.

The board of determination held a hearing July 10, after which it gave the go-ahead to the project. The day of review, in which individual property owners within the drainage district learned how much they would be assessed to pay for the project, was July 14.

The per-acre assessments, determined by Sanilac County Drain Commissioner Stuart Armstead, are based on the amount of benefit received. They range from $4.46 per acre for those getting the least benefit, to $33.35 for those getting the most.

"I think that was a pretty equitable solution," Waldorf said of the assessments worked out by Armstead. Those opposed in the beginning weren't against cleaning the drain but thought the deepening, widening, straightening, etc. proposed were more than was necessary, and at $187,000, too costly.

Early per-acre cost estimates for those living north of Deckerville Road, Waldorf explained, were much higher than the final figures, which were low enough to overcome most objections. On his own property, for instance, he was originally told it would cost him $35-40 an acre. The final figure was in the low $20 range.

Waldorf said he had talked to about 20 property owners and only a few were unhappy, adding that a few would be unhappy under any circumstances.

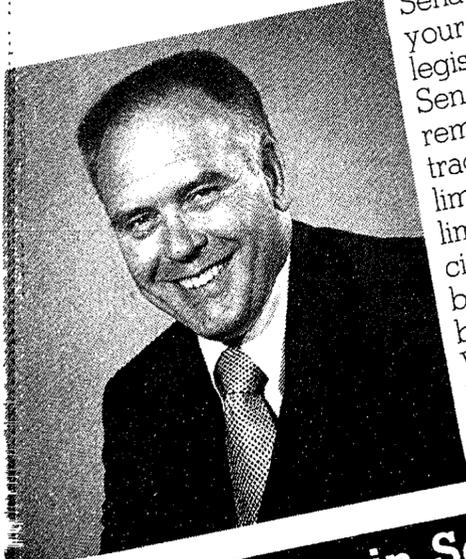

Property owners are paying 38.5 percent of the $187,000 project cost. The county-at-large share is 38.34 percent; Evergreen township, 19.75; Lamotte township, 2.80, and Department of State Highways, .61.

Property owners, who had until Tuesday to appeal their individual assessments to the Probate court, will have three years to pay. The first billing will appear on their December tax bills. The county and townships could also appeal their assessments to probate court, but Armstead didn't expect that to happen.

Gordon Johnson of Richmond is contractor on the project. Work should start in September and the drain commissioner hopes to have all excavation and bridge reconstruction done this year.

Leveling of dirt will probably wait until next spring.

Exchange student returns after one year

Paul Guernsey: Swedes not "cold", just shy

"There are people who say the Swedish race is rather cold, but 'shy' I think is the better word."

Paul Guernsey, 17, describes himself as "rather quiet myself." He knew two exchange students from there who attended Cass City High School in recent years. "I thought they were very gentle people, rather quiet."

He found that quality appealing and when he applied for the Rotary Club exchange program, he asked to go to Sweden.

He left for there last August and returned here June 28. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Vic Guernsey of 6331 Dale Street, he will be a senior at Cass City High School this fall.

He stayed with a family in Nykoping, a small port city of about 40,000 population on the Baltic Sea approximately 60 miles southwest of Stockholm.

He spent the year with the same family. The father was an anesthesiologist at the local hospital; the mother was a housewife. Their oldest son worked in another city, one son attended a university, another went to the same school Paul attended, and the youngest was spending the year as a Rotary exchange student in Illinois.

The shy nature of the Swedes, Guernsey said, "made it very hard at first, being inward, but after awhile, they opened up to me and were very generous."

That wasn't the only problem he had at first. Other than a few words he learned from the exchange students here, he couldn't speak any Swedish, which made it "a very difficult time, the first three months or so."

Most Swedes also speak English, which "didn't make it easier for my learning Swedish."

Students at his school asked him whether he wanted them to speak to him in English or Swedish. He told them Swedish.

"It was very difficult to follow along (in school)," he said of his first few months, "it was impossible really."

He and the other four exchange students in Nykoping (one from Canada, the rest from the U.S.) took 10 hours of Swedish lessons a week from a private instructor. By Christmas, he no longer needed to take the course.

THE SCHOOL HE ATTENDED was for students going on to a university, with students there in their late teens. The students were enrolled in one of three "lines." Guernsey was in the social sciences line, mainly history and civics, plus some math and biology.

The other lines were natural science and humanities, primarily the study of languages.

The students learn English or German as a primary foreign language and Spanish or French as a secondary language. It was not unusual to meet people who spoke several foreign languages, Guernsey said.

He found the school very informal, with teachers called by their first name. Grades were based on tests scores.

The students, according to Guernsey, were self-disciplined and didn't take advantage of the informality. Part of their studious nature, he felt, was due to the pressure to get good grades in order to go to the university and partly due to their maturity. Students in his class were 18 or 19 years old.

There were few extra-curricular activities in school. There was physical education, but no sports teams. For sports competition, students have to belong to non-school clubs. There are clubs for such sports as soccer, ice hockey, and basketball, with the clubs competing against those from other towns.

Paul played on occasion with the local basketball club. By Swedish standards, the club was good, though not of championship caliber, but he felt it could have been beaten by the high school junior varsity team here.

On this side of the Atlantic, the bushy-haired Guernsey doesn't play basketball.

He plans on playing on the varsity football, wrestling, and track teams during his senior year.

THE WEATHER OF Sweden is somewhat similar to ours, but due to its far northern location, the hours of daylight aren't.

In winter, it doesn't get light until about 8:30. The sun sets at 4 p.m.

In summer, it's a very long day in terms of daylight. In June, for instance, the sun came up at 2:30 in the morning and didn't set until 10:30 at night.

Guernsey found the Swedish temperament matches the season. During winter, with the few hours of daylight, the people are very serious and very business-like.

In summer, people are outgoing and often stay up long hours. The lack of sleep then, Guernsey found, doesn't bother the Swedes and didn't bother him.

The Cass Cityan did have an opportunity to travel while he was there, usually by train. He traveled from the north end of Sweden to the south. He took the last few weeks off from school and with another exchange student, visited Germany, Austria, Italy, France, England and Belgium.

The Swedes are very energy conservation minded. Homes are built with thick walls and triple-pane glass. His family had a car but usually traveled around town by bicycle.

In addition to missing his family and friends - he wrote about 200 letters during the year - Guernsey also missed driving a car, although now that he is back, "I don't miss it now" when he doesn't drive.

He hopes to go back to Sweden for a visit some day and said it would be a nice place to retire.

He feels he learned a lot about Cass Cityans by going to Sweden, about how people are outgoing here and friendly, "just how natural people are and not afraid to say anything."

"I think it made me a lot more aware of what is going on around me," he added, "and inside myself."

SCHOOL DAYS - From up on a hill, Guernsey photographed this view of the school he attended in Sweden. The school year there runs from the end of August to mid-June; the school day from 8:30 a.m.-4 p.m.

SOUVENIRS - Paul Guernsey examines some of the items he brought back from Sweden.

Important liability bills pushed through House

During the whirlwind wrap-up session of the Legislature prior to the summer recess, much important legislation was overshadowed by the concentrated work on the 1978-79 fiscal year budget.

One such item of consumer interest is the House of Representatives' last day approval of product liability legislation which includes two bills establishing guidelines on legal actions regarding product liability insurance.

One measure (HB 5689) provides evidence that a particular product presumably met safety standards will be admissible in a court case. Also, in a case involving a product's safety, a person could get an award, even if the person was partially at fault in an accident because of negligence.

In such circumstances, however, any award will be reduced by the degree of negligence involved.

available and at a lower rate.

STATE BEGINS HOME IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM

The Michigan State Housing Development Authority has inaugurated a home improvement program designed to help low and moderate income families to upgrade older homes with low-interest loans.

The program, authorized last year by the Legislature, will expend up to $100 million in three years to assist up to 20,000 homeowners, according to Housing Development Authority Director Richard Helmbrecht.

At the outset of the program, currently loans are available only through 13 lending institutions, scattered throughout the state.

The only large cities represented in the program are Detroit and Grand Rapids. Helmbrecht said the authority has contacted banks in Flint, Lansing, Saginaw and other large cities and hoped they would get involved as the program got underway to make the program available statewide.

Persons participating in the program could get loans with as little as one percent interest if their gross income is less than $7,999. Interest rates increase gradually as income rises above that. The largest interest charged is nine percent to persons whose income is between $17,000 and $17,830.

To qualify, a person must own the home and be a reasonable credit risk.

The home must be either older than 20 years or damaged through a natural disaster. Loans can also be made to correct health or safety hazards or to make energy conservation improvements.

Cases involving injury or death must be brought within three years after the accident. The three-year statute of limitation is also stipulated for basic product liability cases.

Under the bills, if a product is used more than 11 years it would no longer be presumed safe. A person then would have to prove that a specific defect on the product was responsible for any injury or death.

To guard against nuisance suits, claims a judge finds frivolous can be dismissed, with legal fees assessed against the party bringing the suit.

A second bill (HB 6541) requires insurance companies in their annual reports, to list the premiums collected and losses incurred for product liability insurance.

Also required would be materials on any complaint seeking damages against a policy because of injuries. An insurance company would have to file a report on a defective product with the Insurance Bureau within 30 days after filing an answer to a complaint in court.

The bills were drafted after a series of public hearings and discussions were held with lawyers, insurance officials and business leaders on the difficulties of obtaining product liability insurance.

Supporters of the legislation indicate the bills will give manufacturers and businesses better chances to protect themselves in court, while also allowing consumers the right to make legitimate complaints.

Supporters also hope the bills may help make product liability insurance more

Jewelry adds a touch of class to your classroom coordinates

Smart students are choosing fashions that take them back to school with class, and jewelry is a definite part of that trend, reports the Jewelry Industry Council.

Girls today favor the fine jewelry look of thin gold chains, delicate bracelets and dainty pins. But these subtle accents are being used in imaginative new ways to add eye appeal to classic blazers and sweaters.

The popular stickpin will be going back to school in literally dozens of new styles. But it's only one of many eye-catching decorations for lapels, ascots and cowli necklines.

Some of the sharpest dressers on campus will be wearing scatter pins—clever little groupings of bees, butterflies and other popular fauna and flora in everything from gold and precious stones to colorful ceramics.

You can also win fashion points with gold or silver pins like men's tie tacs, worn two or three at a time.

"Hobby" pins such as musical clefs and tennis racquets also rate an "A" from the back-to-school crowd. You can make your own monogram with a grouping of letter pins.

Chains are still going strong, but the big news is that they're also going long. The newest ones stretch to 40, 50, and even 60 inches. What can you do with one of these new super-chains? In a word: everything!

Wind it around your neck, wrap it around your waist, drape it like a bib, or just let it all hang out. Any way you wear it, this type of chain goes a long way toward meeting your need for a really versatile piece of jewelry.

Another versatile item is fashion's newest eye-catcher, the lariat. Whether it's tipped with tassels, beads or rhinestone-studded arrows, this open-ended version of the chain can be fastened high or low, to suit your neckline or your mood.

Bracelets stack up as one of the biggest fashion stories on campus. An armful of skinny square bangles is the latest look for the coed who knows all the fashion angles.

For the girl who prefers the charm of old-fashioned jewelry, there's the antique look of cameo pins and pendants. And the girl who likes a dash of color in her jewelry is really going to have a field day.

Coral, carnelian, jade and other precious stones brighten gold and silver pins, pendants and chains. Fashion jewelry glows with jewel tones of red, green and blue.

Rhinestones also add their glamour to the campus scene. You'll see them sprinkled on chains, bracelets and stickpins that capture the look of fine jewelry.

That back-to-school essential, the watch, also takes on a fine jewelry look, in timepieces that have sleek, slim cases, classic Roman numerals and elegant chain or bangle bracelets.

Class rings, as much a part of the school scene as pencils and books, also show slimmer, more elegant lines. Often, they're available with distinctive styling details, such as the wearer's initials or date of graduation on the ring.

Like other fine jewelry favored by youthful students of fashion, today's class rings really have class!

Newspapers have effect on children

How much effect will having a newspaper in the house, or using one in conjunction with schoolwork, have on children? Quite a bit, according to a report published recently by the Newspaper Advertising Bureau, entitled "The Influence of Childhood Exposure to Newspapers on Adult Newspaper Habits."

According to the study, in which more than 3,000 adults were interviewed, four out of five recalled that there was generally a newspaper at home during their adolescence.

Today, 70% of these people read a newspaper regularly.

Almost half (43%) recalled that a newspaper had been introduced into the classroom as a regular part of their schoolwork.

Today, 66% of these adults read a newspaper frequently, as opposed to 62% of those who did not have exposure to a newspaper in school.

Owen-Gage land transfer awaits Judge Kallman ruling

The loss of three more parcels of property was the subject of a hearing Friday in Ingham County Circuit Court.

A written opinion from Circuit Judge James T. Kallman is now awaited by the two sides in the case.

The hearing was on a motion by the state attorney general in behalf of the state board of education requesting the judge to remove his injunction against transfer of the Belk parcel to the Cass City School district and the Voelker parcel to Elkton-Pigeon-Bay Port (Lakers) and to allow the Elenbaum parcel to remain in Lakers.

The state board had approved transfer of all three parcels out of Owen-Gage. The school board appealed all three transfers, with the case involving the Elenbaum parcel being an effort by Owen-Gage to get it back.

Assistant Attorney General Charles Keeley argued that the injunction should be dissolved, thus allowing Elenbaum to remain in Lakers and for the Belk and Voelker parcels to be transferred.

Action on the other transfers was awaiting a decision in the Goslin case.

The U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear an appeal by the Owen-Gage School Board of that decision. The board now has an appeal before the U.S. District Court.

Representing property owners in the three parcels in the hearing Friday was attorney Robert Kleeb of Howell.

man of Dearborn represented the Owen-Gage board.

Judge Kallman will now issue a written opinion on whether he will dissolve his injunction, thus allowing Elenbaum to remain in Lakers and for the Belk and Voelker parcels to be transferred.

Kleeb said after the hearing Friday that the judge traditionally issues his rulings 10 days after the hearing.

Even if the judge approves the transfers, Owen-Gage could appeal his decision to the state Court of Appeals.

Owen-Gage Supt. Ronald Erickson told the Chronicle the district probably will appeal a negative decision, although the decision to appeal will have to be approved by the school board.

The main issue in the Goslin case, which affected other transfers, was whether or not more than 10 percent of a school district was transferred from it, voters had to approve all subsequent transfers, or as those seeking to get out of the district contended, the 10 percent rule applied to each individual petition to transfer property to other districts.

The state Supreme Court agreed with the other latter contention, and thus approved transfer of the Goslin parcel, which formed 9.3 percent of the original Owen-Gage district.

The Elenbaum parcel forms 8.4 percent of the district; Belk, 2.8 percent, and Voelker, less than 1 percent.

Accident round-up

House, home collide in highway accident Thursday on M-46

A house and a home collided last Thursday in an accident on M-46 northwest of Vassar.

Caro state police reported that Albert J. Anthes of Anthes Brothers Building Meiers of Cass City was backing the home eastbound. He pulled to the left to avoid a mailbox and sideswiped a motor home that was in the process of passing him.

The motor home was driven by Hazen J. Pratt, 72, of Armada. The right side rearview mirror on the vehicle was broken in the 11:10 a.m. mishap.

Anthes, 57, lives at 6228 Dodge Road, Cass City.

INJURY ACCIDENTS

Larry Kidney, 24, of 6555 Third Street, Cass City, was reported in fair condition Wednesday morning at Hills and Dales General Hospital, where he was taken after an accident at 5:15 p.m. Tuesday.

Caro state police reported he was eastbound on M-81, and was attempting to pass another car but instead rammed the vehicle in the rear. His car then knocked down a mailbox.

Driver of the other car was Nancy Hutchinson, 34, of Spencer Road, Cass City. The accident took place west of Koepfgen Road.

Frederick H. Bishop, 31, assigned to the Air Force radar station at Port Austin, was treated at Bay Medical Center in Bay City following an accident Friday.

Sheriff's deputies reported Ben Hobart, 45, of 2558

Hobart Road, Gagetown, was turning right into a private drive from the north shoulder of Dickerson Road, east of Graf Road, when his truck was struck by the westbound Bishop auto.

The accident took place at 2:20 p.m. Bishop was transferred from Caro Community Hospital to the one in Bay City for treatment for dental injuries.

James T. Vaughn, 36, of Mount Clemens was treated and released from Hills and Dales General Hospital last Wednesday evening after a mishap on the Hunt gravel pit property off Doerr Road, north of Elmwood Road.

Cass City police said he drove his vehicle over a hill and it then slid over the other side.

Paul F. Torres of 6307 N. Dodge Road, Gagetown, was treated and released from Hills and Dales after an accident on McEldowney Road, north of Bay City-Forestville Road, at 4:45 a.m. Saturday.

He told deputies he was southbound on McEldowney when he went into a ditch to avoid colliding with a northbound car which was passing another car.

Richard Erla, 53, of 4633 Huron Street, was treated and released from Hills and Dales after an accident at 11:55 a.m. Tuesday.

Cass City police said he was eastbound on Main Street and the left side of his car was struck by a truck southbound on Ale Street.

Driver of the village-owned truck was Eldon Stoutenburg, 44, of 4291 Maple Street.

As of late Tuesday afternoon, the accident was still under investigation.

OTHER ACCIDENTS

Cass City police reported last Thursday afternoon that Elizabeth Niester, 69, of McAlpine Road, Owendale, as she was pulling out of a parking place at Erla's Food Center, struck a car headed south in the exit lane. Driver of the other car was Linda Lou Woodward, 32, of 7635 Deckerville Road, Deford.

Another accident took place in the Erla's parking lot the following afternoon. Police said Ellen K. Morgan of 6773 Houghton Street backed into the parked car of Ruby Crow of 4100 Turner Road, Kingston. At 5:50 p.m. Friday, ac-ording to village police, Richard J. Tuckey, 19, of 4533 Downing Street, driving a Tuckey Block Co. truck, missed the driveway into the company's gravel pit off Doerr Road, started backing up and backed into the southbound auto of David M. Wright, 31, of Lakeside Drive.

Sheriff's deputies reported that at 2:15 p.m. Sunday, Cyril J. Pitcher, 58, of Hoppe Road, Unionville, was westbound on Hobart Road, west of Jacob Road, when he lost control of his car. It ran off the south side of the road into a ditch.

At 1:30 a.m. Monday, deputies reported, Maureen M. O'Connor, 19, of 6790 Pine Street, Cass City, was southbound on Cedar Run Road, south of Hoppe Road.

Her car went off the inside of a curve into a ditch on the southeast side of the road. She was ticketed for driving with an expired license.

A two-car accident took place at 12:05 p.m. Monday involving two cars eastbound on M-46, east of Froede Road. Deputies said Kevin L. Phelps, 22, of Mayville, was attempting to turn left into a private drive as another car was attempting to pass him and the two vehicles collided. The other driver was Ray E. Francis, 67, of 1767 S. Phillips Road, Deford.

3-5 years

Trisch sent to Jackson

Samuel E. Trisch, 32, of 521 State Street, Caro, was sentenced Monday by Circuit Judge Norman A. Baguley to 3-5 years in the State Prison of Southern Michigan at Jackson for attempted forgery.

The sentence is to be served concurrently with a sentence for forgery. He was originally sentenced on that charge to 4-14 years at Jackson, but he is scheduled to be resentenced July 31.

The resentencing is because he pleaded guilty July 5 to being an habitual offender, which means the forgery sentence can be increased by half, to a maximum of 21 years.

He pleaded guilty to being an habitual offender in a plea bargain agreement with the prosecution, in exchange for which he was allowed to plead guilty to a reduced charge of attempted forgery in the case for which he was sentenced Monday. He was originally charged with forgery, involving a forged check for $350.

Trisch escaped from the Tuscola County Jail July 9, but was recaptured less than 24 hours later. He wasn't charged by the prosecutor with escape because all sentences in Michigan are served concurrently, thus conviction would not have increased his prison sentence.

Also Monday, Elmer Gould, 28, of Flint, was placed on three years' probation for attempted larceny over $100. He was sentenced to six months in the county jail, with credit given for two days served, and the last five months of the sentence suspended without date. Serving of the five months will be at the judge's discretion. Gould was fined $200 and assessed $200 court costs.

He was ordered to take alcohol counseling and will be allowed to participate in a work release program.

He was charged in connection with entering of a Fairgrove township home April 1.

A motion for setting of bond pending appeal by Kenneth H. Diener, 18, of 3670 Pine Street, Akron, was granted.

He is appealing his June 5 conviction for violation of probation, for which he was sentenced to 270 days in the county jail, with credit given for 51 days served. He had been on probation for attempted breaking and entering.

Dave Lovejoy takes new post

Coach shortage: school seeks 5 grid mentors

Resignation of teachers has resulted in a shortage of coaches at Cass City Schools and it may be that administrators will have to go outside the system to fill existing vacancies.

Two resignations announced this week were by Dave Lovejoy, Deford principal, and Dale McIntosh, who gave up the assistant football coach position while remaining in the system.

Lovejoy resigned to accept a position as elementary principal in the Caro school system.

Lovejoy was also the golf coach. His spot has been filled by a new teacher, Mike Gogola, who will enter the system this fall.

Lovejoy's resignation also leaves a vacancy at Deford. His departure will be received with regret by the school board as he was a well regarded and popular administrator.

Filling the vacancy in the football ranks will pose a greater problem than that of filling the golf coaching spot.

McIntosh's surprise resignation leaves only new head coach Don Schelke coaching football at the school. Needed are a varsity assistant, two freshmen and two junior varsity coaches.

Supt. Don Crouse said that it is possible that a couple of the openings could be filled by new teachers arriving in the system.

We also have three or four qualified persons from the area who can fill in, he said.

All-star game Thursday

Novesta-Deford Red fight for final play-off position

The Cass City Church League play-offs start Monday and all but one of the four open spots in the National and American divisions have been decided.

Also already determined are the regular season division champions, the Baptists in the National and Lamotte in the American.

Joining Lamotte in the play-offs will be Deford Blue, Missionary and Methodists.

In the National division, the Lutherans, Baptists and Shabbona have nailed down play-off spots. Still to be determined is the fourth position which will be decided between Deford Red (5-5) and Church of Christ (5-6).

Tuesday, July 18, Lamotte just about clinched the division championship with a 14-11 decision over Methodists. Mike King bested Tim Johnson. Leading stickers for the winners were Dale McLaren and Jim D'Arcy. Henry Cooklin and Tim Johnson paced the Methodist attack.

Missionary pounded out a 10-5 decision over Shabbona as Roger Root bested Les Severance on the mound.

Doug Taylor, Jim Brown and Root paced the Missionary hitters while Roy Sefton and Tim Severance were big hitters for Shabbona.

Deford Red stayed in contention for a play-off spot with a 13-4 win over Church of Christ Friday.

Lewis Tibbits bested Gary Warju. If Warju could pitch like he hits it would have been no contest. He rapped a single, two doubles and a triple for the losers.

Tibbits, John Taylor and Ed Stoutenburg paced a balanced Deford attack.

In another Friday game, Deford Blue stayed in second with a 13-2 win over the Catholics in the American division.

T. Dorema and G. Stephens were leading hitters for the winners, who were also helped by a circuit clout by J. Trischler.

Alvin McKee, the winning hurler, allowed only a hit by Rick Rabideau.

The Baptists were defeated for the second time this season Monday as the Methodists rose up to whip the National division leaders, 11-9.

The annual all-star double header will be played Thursday night at the park.

Lewis Tibbits announced that a village official will throw the first pitch and that an official of the Ministerial Association will give a prayer before the competition starts.

Larry Robinson tossed the win over Jack Hillaker. For the Methodists, Henry Cooklin showed the way with three hits including a circuit clout over the fence. Brian Helwig rapped two hits for the losers.

Shabbona kept the Catholics without a victory this season with a 21-3 decision behind Les Severance. Larry McClorey took the loss.

Durrell Caister, Bill Bad and Ken Copeland rapped three hits each and Phil Bader was credited with an inside the park homer. Dan Erla had two hits, including a triple, for the Catholics.

Church of Christ topped the Colwood Lions Monday to keep alive hopes for play-off spot. Kurt Littlew credited with a 12-2 decision over Keith O'Dell. Gary Warju hammered an inside the park homer and Jerry Toner did the same for the losers.

It was a bad night for Colwood as the Cubs lost to Missionary, 9-6.

Root won over Dr. Smith. He was helped by Jim Tuckey at the plate while Dale Smith led the losers' attack.

Ouvry dumps league leader

Cass City Ouvry dumped co-league leading Caro Sunday in the first game of a double header in the Thumb Baseball League, 1-0.

Cliff Parrish pitched a one-hitter to register the victory. He helped himself by starting the winning rally with a base hit. Clare Trischler and Tim Severance followed with singles and Doug Taylor's hit drove in the winning run.

The nightcap was an equally good ball game but the score was reversed as John Amend pitched a 1-0 shutout for Caro.

Cass City's coaches will be pleased with the split in doubleheader. The straggling Caro team also plays Saginaw during the week stay sharp for the Sunday games.

Cass City plays on Sunday only.
