O-G considers offensive property transfer move

The Owendale-Gagetown Board of Education may go on the offensive regarding property transfers.

The board Monday night approved Phase I of Supt. Ronald Erickson's game plan by approving petitioning to have the Belk, Voelker and Parker parcels transferred back to Owen-Gage.

The state Board of Education has approved transfer of Belk to the Cass City School District and Voelker

The three are actually still and Parker to Elkton-Pigeon-Bay Port (Lakers).

First step will be to petition the Tuscola and Huron Intermediate School Districts' Boards of Education for transfer back of Belk, as Cass City, and Owen-Gage are in different intermediate districts and the Huron In-

Owen-Gage. Up to now, the superintendent said, Owen-Gage has had to bear the legal expenses involved in the property transfer cases while the would be receiving districts "have been doing nothing." Seeking to transother district on the defens-

The action would also focus attention on the district's property transfer struggles, including the fact that not all property owners in transferred parcels have wanted the transfer. One parcel (Parker) was transferred by the state board at the request of the Lakers board over what he called the "violent objections" of the property owners involved. The board tabled action on seeking transfer of property from the Lakers district until the March meeting, when it will have a chance to see a map of the district and potential areas for requested transfer.

OTHER TRANSFERS

Erickson reported on the hearing conducted Friday by state Board of Education property transfer hearing officer Raymond L. Godmer on the proposed transfer of the Dietzel parcel to Elktoning Voelker and Parker. Erickson described the state equalized valuation of above action as "all purely... about $300,000. defensive moves."

Although accepting the report, commissioners didn't necessarily like it.

"You don't mind if I doubt you, because I do," board Chairman Paul Nagy said to Graf concerning the agricultural figures, which were based on 181 sales of farm property.

Farm land values (not including buildings) range from $800 per acre in the southeast part of the county to $1,700 in the northwest.

The best farm land with buildings, Nagy continued, means $2,200 an acre, according to the report, "but if it's in the wrong location you would have a hard time getting it."

GOSLIN TAXES

Ingham County Circuit Judge James Kallman having lifted his restraining order against allocation of the Goslin school operating taxes, the board voted to allocate the more than $70,000 involved to the Cass City district.

Those in favor were Nagy. Russell, Ben Collon of Caro and Donna Rayl of Akron. Those opposed were Margaret Wenta, Fostoria, Robert Russell, Vassar, and Ken Kennedy, Millington.

Before the vote, Prosecutor Artis M. Noel advised allocating the taxes to Cass City, based on the Michigan Supreme Court ruling in the transfer case. His predecessor, Patrick Joslyn, had recommended the same.

Owen-Gage Supt. Ronald Erickson, in addition to protesting the taxes going to Cass City, also said it would be a conflict of interest for Royce Russell to vote on the matter as he had been Elmwood treasurer until last spring. Almost all of the Goslin property is located in Elmwood and Russell had been involved with dispersal of the Goslin taxes when

Russell told the Chronicle he had an "inkling" beforehand the question would be raised, so checked before the meeting started with Noel. The prosecutor said it was okay for the commissioner to vote on the ques-

OTHER ITEMS

Supt. Bruce Dunn of the Tuscola Intermediate School District and superintendents of local districts asked the board to establish a tax revolving fund.

Attorney John Axe of Detroit explained how the revolving fund would work. Huron Township Treasurer Arnold Schweitzer was also present to talk about the revolving fund in his county.

Under such a system, the county borrows money by selling bonds in order to reimburse school districts and local governmental units for uncollected taxes.

The school districts, etc., thus get all their property tax money immediately instead of having to wait for delinquent taxes to dribble in over a few years. The county collects the delinquent taxes and penalties, which are enough to pay the interest on the borrowed money Establishment of the revolving fund was probably to be considered by the board when it met this Wednesday to take care of unfinished business.

The board will also meet with Sheriff Hugh Marr regarding taking of bids for new patrol cars.

Tuesday, the board heard Marr. Drain Commissioner Ed Goodchild and Building Codes Administrator Paul Letter present their annual

The board also held in abeyance a request for a quitclaim deed for the new road that runs from the high school to the park, mostly on school property.

The board is willing to turn the road over to the village because the village will then continue to maintain it.

At the suggestion of J.D. Tuckey they did not sign the quitclaim. The hang-up is that the board wants some language in the agreement saying that the property will revert back to the district in case the road is terminated. Supt. Donald Crouse will confer with village officials.

The board decided that it would take an active role if further litigation issues from the transfer of the 'Goslin property'' from Owen-Gage to the Cass City School District.

Because of the cost to the residents involved in the court cases the board felt it was its duty to offer this assistance.

In other business the board approved the contracts of three new teachers and approved teachers' contracts for community edu-men arrested in Sanilac Northwest Sanilac county was the scene of two incidents within a week in which a man with a gun kept police officers briefly at bay before surrendering. No shots were fired in either incident. The first started about 3:30 a.m. last Wednesday when a neighbor called the Sanilac Sheriff's Department to report a disturbance in a home in the M-19-Cass

City Road area.

Deputies Ronald Matthews and Gary Biniecki arrived at the house. The occupant came out the front door with a shotgun, held them at bay for several minutes and threatened to kill them, the department reported. He then suddenly department and others. Officers from the Huron County Sheriff's Department, Bad Axe state police, Ubly police and other Sanilac deputies arrived.

A public address system was used to urge the man to surrender, which he did shortly after the various police units arrived. An unloaded 12-gauge shotgun was later found inside the house. It wasn't known if it was loaded when used earlier.

Arrested on a charge of felonious assault was Gary D. Ross, 30, of M-19, Ubly. He was arraigned in Sanilac District Court later that morning. Bond was set at $1,000, which has since been posted. Preliminary examination is scheduled this Thursday.

The second incident took place early Saturday. Sanilac county deputies were summoned to a house on Germania Road, Evergreen township, at 4:20 a.m. on a report of a man holding 8-10 people hostage at gunpoint, including his ex-wife, her children and some friends. It was someone in the home who called the sheriff's department, it reported.

The Huron and Tuscola County Sheriff's Departments and Cass City police also sent officers. The Sanilac sheriff's dispatcher was talking to the man on the telephone when officers arrived and after several minutes, convinced the 34-year-old Detroiter to surrender.

He was arrested on a charge of felonious assault and taken to the county jail. He was later released on

He appeared Tuesday morning before Judge Richard P. Riordan for arraignment. The judge cancelled bond, however, and ordered the man released because Prosecutor J. Anthony Sykora didn't have a warrant charging him with anything.

The reason, the prosecutor later told the Chronicle, is: that no one had yet signed a complaint, and without a complaint, the man can't be charged.

Since he hasn't been charged with a crime. Sykora asked that his name not be used.

He did expect that either a police officer involved in the case or someone who was held inside the house would shortly be signing a com-

Opening school with some roads closed draws fire

Opening of Cass City schools Tuesday of last week upset some parents in the Crawford-Englehart area southeast of Deford whose children were unable to get to school because roads were still blocked by snow. Students who couldn't make it were counted ab-

Supt. Donald Crouse said despite some roads being closed, attendance that day was 86 percent, probably better than Monday of this week, when many students were out with the flu.

Although it was the first time this winter that school was held without all roads being opened, school has been held in previous years with some roads still closed. Monday, Feb. 5, was the ninth day this school year that schools were closed that would have meant leavbecause of snow. The average is usually only 5-6 days per winter and the superintendent recalled one winter away. when no days were missed. because of snow.

One parent whose children couldn't get to school Tuesday (Feb. 6) was Shirley Beddow, who lives on Crawford Road between Burmon and Evelyn in Kingston township.

The only way to get out Monday and Tuesday was by snowmobile. She didn't take her two children in school Tuesday to Mushroom Road to get on the bus because

She said there are about 16 school children living in the immediate area (plus her own) and she was unaware of any of them going to school that day.

Wednesday morning a neighbor took her children to Mushroom Rd. on the one lane of Crawford that had been cleared by then. The school bus still wouldn't come down the road. It was completely cleared by the end of the day, so the bus did bring her children home. Roads in nearby Sanilac county, she said, were all cleared by Tuesday.

"We're not complaining because we know they (Tuscola County Road Commission) can't get to us right away, but because it hurts the kids," Mrs. Beddow commented.

She and some others in the area are planning to take their complaints to the Road Commission Thursday morning, with one of them to act as spokesman. They have an appointment at Crouse said the roads in Mrs. Beddow's area were not the only ones in the district still closed Tuesday. Dodge Road was closed, for instance. "It was not an isolated case.' Road Commission Clerk

James Miklovic said road clearing efforts are feeling the pinch of reduced funds. As of about a week ago, Please turn to page fifteen.

SNOWED UNDER - Lamton Road between Gilford and Mushroom Roads hadn't seen a snowplow this winter until last Wednesday, possibly out of indecision by the Tuscola and Sanilac road commissions over whose responsibility it was to clear the county-line road. It was a Tuscola county-loaderplow to the rescue, spending most of the day clearing it and the mile from Gilford to Deckerville Road. Nursing home mass By Jim Fitzgerald

The young priest walked among his elderly flock and touched their faces lightly, speaking soothing words as the called each of them by name. He told them they shouldn't be fooled by his beard: "I'm not Jesus Christ, I'm just Father Jim.'

The middle-aged son was there, sitting in the back, outside the flock. He had arrived at mass much later Ithan his mother, who was seated up front, in a wheelchair. Most of the flock were in wheelchairs, or shuffled slowly with the aid of walkers or canes.

This wasn't a church, it was a recreation room in a Inursing home. Father Jim comes every Saturday afternoon to say mass at a makeshift altar. One candle was lit. There was no one to play the piano, so hymns were sung a cappella. The middleaged son didn't know all the

He watched his mother as she sang. She looked toward the sound of the priest's voice, straining to see him with eyes that have failed her. He wondered how many thousands of masses his mother had heard since 1900, rand how many times they Shad attended the same ...mass, with the mother up . front, praying, and the son in back, a late arrival, not knowing all the words

Out in the hallway, there was a woman he sees every time he visits the nursing home. She can't propel her wheelchair with her hands, so she uses one foot. She thrusts the foot against the floor in front of her and drags the wheelchair forward, again and again and again. Sometimes her slipper comes off and it takes her many minutes to get her foot back into it. She doesn't want anyone to help her. She smiles at everyone.

There was an old man who wasn't a patient. He attended the mass with his wife, who appeared to be asleep in her wheelchair. The old man held his wife's head up, and he held her hand. The middle-aged son later learned that the old man comes to the nursing home and sits by his wife's side all day, every day. She is usually not conscious. He usually holds her hand.

Before the mass was over, some un-Christian thoughts pushed into the middle-aged son's mind. He thought of all he has read lately about neighborhoods suburban that don't want groups of old people living in their midsts. The suburbanites say the old people are breaking zoning ordinances' and lowering property values. They hire smart lawyers and go to court and ask judges to order the old people to go

There are many younger people who claim they have nothing against old people but they "just don't like to be around them." To the middle-aged son, this is the most perplexing prejudice of them all.

You can be prejudiced against Negroes or Irishmen without worrying about waking up someday to discover you have become black or Irish. You'll always wake up the same nationality you were when you went to sleep - a native Idiot.

But someday you'll wake up old, or you won't wake up at all. The middle-aged son was trying to decide what terrible punishment would be fitting for the idiots who run people out of neighborhoods because they're over 75. But then he remembered where he was, and he recalled that his mother had always advised him "to pay attention in church."

So he listened while Father Jim relayed the words of Jesus Christ. The priest's gentle preaching made the middle-aged son understand why some of the elderly flock might be fooled by his beard.

Towards the end of the mass, Father Jim suggested that his audience touch hands with those nearby and wish each other love and peace. The middle-aged son moved forward to kiss his mother. He wanted to tell her how sorry he was he didn't know all the words.

Debaters finish in top four in state

The Cass City High School debate team came within two wins of the state Class C-D championship at the 62nd annual Michigan Debate championships, Friday and Saturday, Feb. 2-3, finishing as one of the top four teams in its class in the

The team lost to Bad Axe in the semi-finals, which later lost to Negaunee for the state title. The other loser in the semi-finals was Ithaca.

The team of Bob Clark, Carrie Carpenter, Steve Corcoran and John Scollon, coached by Denise Gorsline, got the farthest of any Cass City team, though some past teams have made it to the state championships.

The competition was held at the Sheraton-Southfield

There were 15 teams that won their district championships in Class C-D to qualify for the state tourney.

Cass City debated five rounds Friday and a final qualifying round Saturday morning -- three times by the affirmative and three by the negative -- finishing with a 5-1 mark, to qualify for the semi-finals.

A flip of the coin decided that the affirmative team of Carpenter and Clark would debate in the semi-finals.

In addition to Cass City and Bad Axe doing so well in the Class C-D. Caro High School won the Class B championship.

The state championships, conducted by the Michigan Interscholastic Forensic Association, were sponsored by the Detroit Free Press and University of Michigan.

During the now completed debating season, Cass City won about 80 percent of its debates.

Topic during the season was: "Resolved: That the federal government should establish a program to significantly increase the energy independence of the United States."

Work camp site selection starts

The Tuscola County Plan- what will probably again be ning Commission, at a closed meeting in Caro last Thursday, considered posssible sites for a state Department of Corrections work camp in the county.

Commission Chairman Richard Dehmel later said a few sites were crossed off the list and the commission is "still trying to get information" about other possible sites.

When the list gets narrowed down to "three or four or less," the commission will let people living close to the sites know what is happening.

Exactly how the people will be notified, be it privately or possibly through their township board, hasn't been

"We want the people involved in the areas to know what is going on before the news media gets hold of it,' Dehmel said, expressing concern over rumors that have been published about possible locations.

Those sites still in the running are scattered in the county, he indicated, not concentrated in a few spots. The planning group next meets Feb. 22 in Caro, at a closed session. Dehmel expects the commission will then be able to notify possibly affected property own-

He expects it will have its recommendation ready for the county board by the latter's March 13 meeting. The county board must give the recommendation its blessing before submitting it to the state.

The state's timetable calls for construction to start by August or September of this year with occupancy a year

As of early this week, planning commission members were tentatively planning to visit a work camp elsewhere in the state Sat-

Art donations

Charitable foundations, once leading donors to the arts, have been diminished. Ford Foundation grants, for example, decreased from a peak of $20 million to only $4 million in 1977. Both the Ford and Rockefeller foundations now give to individual artists, not to arts organizations.

Since his death, if you judge by the stories in all the media, he was a man about town.

He was a man about town when he died. At least one columnist has been super critical because no autopsy was performed after his death. Implied here is that because Rocky had billions, the police were protecting I submit that if Rocky didn't have billions none of this would have happened. Cynically I suppose you could point out that if Rocky wasn't loaded he wouldn't have had that town house on West 54th Street and Miss Megan Marshack wouldn't have the neighboring apartment a few doors away.

Let's assume the worst of carnal motives and it was hanky panky time when Rocky died. (What a way to

All accounts that I've read still say that Nelson Rockefeller, 71 years old, died of a heart attack. He died after a long full life and left this vale of tears the way each of us wish for . . quickly and with no pain. When are autopsies conducted under those circumstances? His private life never interfered with his public life, with the exception of a divorce that may have ruined his presidential ambition plans.

That hurt no one but himself . . . unless you say that if Rocky hadn't divorced he might have been president and Richard Nixon might never have climbed to the throne.

He was governor of New York and he was vice-president of the United States and as such his political actions should be open for examination and criticism.

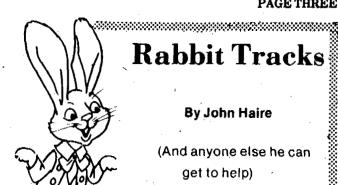

While in office his private life should be open for probing, too. What a man placed in a position of public trust does in the bedroom could reflect what he does in the council chambers. We have a right to know.

But now the man is dead. Dead. Dead. Whatever he did behind closed doors should remain there.

We owe him and his family that much. He spent a lifetime in public service. No matter the reason. He did it. Did it more capably than most.

But even if he proved inept there would be no reason for the pillory he and his family are suffering.

Rockefeller deserves the same treatment as you or I, even though he was rich.

apparently not considered

If you are opposed to cofanity, however, don't uy a Chrysler, Volkswagen, Mazda, or Toyota. You can Juy a Datsun.

All these revelations are epurtesy of the National Federation for Decency, hich has released results of s fall, 1978 television monitoring survey

The monitoring study was based on 762.5 hours of prime time network programming (which eliminated soap operas). The ederation, based in Tupelo, Miss., doesn't say how many blurry-eyed television Watchers participated in the

The report is divided into three categories, sex, protanity and beverage con-imption. For an unex-pained reason, the survey does not include violence. -Perhaps that means that it is okay for television to show a man beating a woman sonseless as long as he: 1) Poes not drink a beer first, Does not swear at her, and 3) Does not try to have şex with her. The survey lists the top 10 ex-oriented shows and the 10 least sex oriented shows, based on what the survey *atchers "considered a suggested sexual intercourse spene or a sexually suggestive comment" or "unnecessary and undue emphasis on the female anatomy."

Thus the top 10 sex-oranted shows are the CBS, BC and NBC Movies, Soap, Nove Boat, Three's Company, Dallas, Big Event, Charlie's Angels and Vegas.

Of the 10 least sex-oriented programs, there was a timee-way tie for first place between shows with no ofiding scenes. They were Grandpa Goes to Washington (since cancelled), the World Series and the American League Playoffs. That creates a mystery. What was going on during National League Play-offs that it didn't make the least top 10 category

On to profanity. The survey lists the words considered profane, which I won't repeat here. The most used word, 455 times, starts with "h" and it wasn't heck. The second most used word, 333 times, is the kind of dam that doesn't hold back

There wasn't a "least 10" because more than 10 programs contained no profanity. The 10 most profane, starting with No. 1, were CBS Movies, ABC Movies, Big Event, NBC Movies, Carter Country, M-A-S-H, The Word (which word?), Pearl, Lou Grant and The

Among the 10 highest ad ratio profanity sponsors (amount of profanity sponsored by divided number of ads run) were Chrysler (1st); Volkswagen (5th), Mazda (6th) and Toyota Datsun not only ranked first in the 10 least ad ratio profanity sponsors, it was also the only auto maker in the "10 least sex" category (second place).

Guess, what drink is most often consumed on television (not including commercials)? It's booze by a long shot. There were 2,630 persons shown drinking alcoholic beverages during the survey period (the watchers must have had a busy time counting during bar scenes) versus only 241 shown drinking coffee (probably by people recovering from hangovers). Third place went to soft drinks, 148 shown drinking it; fourth to punch and juice (presumably the punch wasn't spiked), 64, and fifth to milk,

The National Federation for Decency is opposed to titillation, except when it comes to promoting its survey. Officially it was called the "television monitoring program" but to make sure editors getting the results and press release would open the envelope And get this. Monday they came in, at the bottom Night Football was in ninth of the envelope was printed "TV sex monitoring report."

Gagetown council okays sewer grant application

Installation of a million dollar sewage disposal system in Gagetown is still in the distant future.

The future presumably moved a step closer last Wednesday evening when the village council approved application for a combined grant to pay the cost of designing the system and for its construction.

In September, 1977, the council directed its engineers, Edmands Engineering of Bay City, to submit an application to the Michigan Water Resources Commission (WRC) for $40,200 in combined federal and state funds to design a lagoon treatment system.

That was Step II, with Step III being funds to finance construction. (Step I was a feasibility study done by Edmands.)

Nothing much has happened since the Step II applioation was submitted in 1977, Edmands engineer Ralph Knop told council members last week.

Now, however, the WRC, which has control over the federal and state funds, is encouraging small communities to apply for joint Step II-Step III funds.

What that means is that if the applying community gets money to design the system, it is assured it will also get construction funds.

Under the old system, a community could get the Step II money, have a sewage treatment designed and ready for construction and then never, get the. money to finance building it.

The council approved application for the Step II-III funds. Knop could not say when it will be known whether or not Gagetown will get the money. It might not even be until after the start of the 1979-80 fiscal year, Oct. 1.

The village faces a March, 1982 deadline by the WRC to have new treatment facilities in operation.

At present, each building has its own septic tank, effluent from which flows into storm sewers and-or open drains and then into the Sheboygan Drain.

Total cost for Step II and III has been estimated at $1,145,000, of which the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency would pay $699,750; the state, $47,000, and Gagetown, $400,000.

However, that estimate was made in September. 1977 and costs have undoubtedly gone up since then, Knop said. The estimate has not been updated. Technically, the EPA pays 75 percent of the cost, the state, 5 percent, and the local government the remainder. However, not all the local costs, such as leads from the sewer mains, are covered by the federal and state grants, hence the local share is actually more than 20 percent.

Gagetown voters will have to approve sale of bonds to finance the local share for the project.

Council members expressed concern at the meetng, as they have done previously, that some residents won't be able to afford the cost needed to pay off the bonds.

The proposed tap-in fee is $1,000, which can be paid over a number of years, plus the cost of hiring a contractor to run a line from the house to the sewer main. Under state law, hook-up is mandatory.

There would also be a monthly service charge, estimated at $7.50 for homeowners.

The proposed system calls for installation of sewer mains throughout the village, into which wastewater from homes and other buildings would flow. It would be piped to two sewage lagoons on property the village already owns southwest of the village limits. Solids would settle on the bottom in the ponds. Once a year the relatively clean water would be pumped into the Sheboygan Drain.

The lagoon treatment system removes 85-90 percent of pollutants before the water is pumped into the drain versus a normal 30-35 percent for septic tanks.

After the meeting, Knop said that the Owendale Village Council, which applied for Step II funds the same time Gagetown did, recently approved application for the combination Step II-III funds. Edmands Engineering is also handling that proposed project.

A lagoon treatment system and sewers are also proposed for Owendale, with total cost about $100,000 less than that for Gagetown. Owendale stands 155th on the state priority list for funding of community sewage treatment projects, Knop told the Gagetown council, with Gagetown, 167th.

Hiring of a replacement was discussed. To be explored is the possibility of hiring sheriff's deputies to work in the village during their non-duty hours. The council met with the Elmwood Township Board to discuss a new contract for funding of the fire department. The last one, which was supposed to run three years, was written in 1966.

Eye transplant deaths unlikely in Michigan

Tragedies such as the deaths of two recent eye tissue transplant recipients in Idaho and New York City would be virtually impossible with techniques now in use in Michigan, according to Donald J. Massnick of Essexville, president of the Michigan Eye-Bank.

The widely publicized death from rables of an Idaho corneal transplant patient and that of a New York recipient who contracted Jakob Creutzfeldt disease (a rare neurological disorder), are believed to have occurred because of transmission of the diseases through donated corneal eye

In order to eliminate any possibility of the transfer of disease from the donor to the recipient, the Michigan Eye-

Bank for the past three years has carefully screened the records of donors for any known or suspected communicable disease which might be transferred to the recipient.

Two Michigan Eye-Bank laboratories, one at The University of Michigan and the other at Wayne State University, are responsible for the examination, processing and redistribution of tissue for corneal transplantation.

"Only tissue that is known to be healthy is used for corneal transplantation," Massnick emphasized.

All donor tissue is collected and is important to the overall effort to conserve and restore vision. That which might be potentially hezardous or does not other-wise meet the Michigan Eye-Bank's high standards for surgical use is utilized for research and training purposes, he said.

Corneal tissue never is used for transplantation if the donor suffered from a condition such as blood virus-related poisoning, disease or infection, syphilis or acute leukemia, Massnick

Other factors that may result in the eye tissue being judged unsuitable for transplantation include unknown cause of death, fever of unknown origin, jaundice, excessive time from the donor's death to removal of the eye tissue and extended time on life support systems prior to the donor's death.

When donated eyes are received by the eye-bank laboratory, a careful review of the cause of death and associated health conditions of the donor is made before examination of the eye tissue. Often it is necessary to telephone the hospital or doctor of the donor to obtain further information in order to decide if the tissue can be used for transplantation. A microscopic examination of the tissue then is undertaken and, if suitable, most corneas are placed in a tissue culture media for storage for up to four days if they are not to be transplanted immediately.

Since the development of the tissue culture storage method, it has been possible to utilize more corneal tissue because of the increased time it allows for investigation into the suitability of the tissue, obtaining culture test results and contacting eye surgeons and their potential recipients to arrange for the corneal transplantation.

Since the merger in 1971 of ent, Massnick said.

Future great for milking, Lake says

We have a great industry and it has, in my opinion, a great future," Michigan Milk Producers Association President Glenn Lake told area dairy farmers Saturday afternoon.

The organization's president for 23 years spoke at the annual luncheon meeting of the MMPA Deford local, held at the Shabbona United Methodist church.

Lake, who milks about 125 cows with a brother and one hired hand at their farm near North Branch, spoke mainly about the problems facing the dairy industry, saying to his audience, "With your help, we will solve these problems."

One is the effect of increase in the price of milk on sales to consumers. The price paid to farmers went up 18½ cents a gallon during the previous 12 months, the

A letter of congratulations was read from the Department of Michigan Auxiliary secretary, Frances Crakes, to the Unit for meeting the membership quota by Dec.

With the increasing price of food often in the news, he said, dairymen must promote their product. "We do have a great story to tell and we're telling it.

After the meeting, he commented that the increases in the price of milk apparently have not hurt consumer sales, possibly because the price of competitive beverages has also increased.

Earlier in the meeting, District 9 Director Mike Renn Jr. of Elkton said the MMPA through the American Dairy Association will spend over $3 million in 1979 promoting the sale of dairy products in Michigan this year. And the MMPA directly will spend approximately $300,000 for the same pur-

The soft drink industry spends nine times as much promoting its products as does the dairy industry, according to Renn. He cited results of a survey which showed the average 6-12year-old drinks 36 gallons of soft drinks annually but only 29.8 gallons of milk.

Another concern, Lake said, was Attorney General Frank Kelley's recent ruling that the legislature acted improperly in exempting by resolution farms with animals testing below the PBB legal limits from further testing. Kelley said the legislature needs to pass a law to accomplish that action.

Until a law is passed, according to Lake, already exempted farmers need to resume having animals tested before they can be

However, the state doesn't have the money to do all that testing, he continued, so the agriculture department and attorney general's office have reached a compromise that exempted farms (about 1,000 of the 9,000 dairy farms in the state) will remain

The MMPA president cautioned farmers to be aware of U.S. Department of Agriculture requirements, starting March 1, requiring packing houses to take a tissue sample after slaughtering to test for excessive residues of antibiotics. If tests reveal the animal has over the allowable limits, its meat can't be used for human consumption, but can be used for such purposes as dog food. The farmer will be notified if an animal he has sold was over the limit. The first 30 days the new regulation is in effect he will receive a warning, but after that, it's possible he might not get paid for it.

The impact on dairy farmers, Lake said, is that they will have to be more careful that the prescribed waiting period for effects of an antibiotic have worn off before selling an animal.

Bruce Protzman, of Caseville, a District 9 representative on the Southern Michigan Market Committee, also spoke about the anti-ability from his father who played fiddle, guitar and banjo in his younger days. He learned to play the fiddle by watching his father. Longuski's formal training consists of two weeks of accordion lessons "but it didn't work out."

In sixth grade, he wanted to play drums with the school band, which he al-ready knew how to play, but the teacher said he wasn't suited for it and should try learning the trumpet instead.

He never learned to read music which precluded him from playing in the high school band.

He did sing in the high school choir one semester, one reason being so that he could sneak into the choir room during lunch hour and practice on the piano.

He quit the choir out of self-consciousness about appearing before an audience because of his weight.

"Fats" Longuski weighed 253 pounds in the 11th grade. By being careful about what he ate and running in hot weather, he gradually slimmed down to his present 180 bounds on his 6-1 frame. "Most kids I graduated with don't recognize me now."

Maybe because he could hide behind his drums, he started playing professionally nine years ago. Although he taught himself to play various instruments along the way, his "bread and butter" has always been the drums.

The increase in the drinking age to 21 has had an effect on the band business, Longuski noted. It has meant a dropoff in bar business, thus fewer bars are hiring bands. In those still hiring bands, crowds are smaller and older. As a result, Lighthouse is playing fewer new rock and roll songs and more "nostalgia" rock and other type music.

HE DOES'T HAVE A preference as to type of music. "I like just about everything."

The Lighthouse members write some of their own music. They would like to record an album some day. Since Daryl doesn't read music - his brother is the only one of the trio who does it takes him longer to learn a new tune. If on a record, he must listen to it several times before he has it mem-

Longuski isn't opposed to full-time musical career, but at this point doesn't see that happening.

He is sure of one thing. "I'll always play until I'm dead or a cripple."

FIDDLIN' AROUND - Daryl Longuski's trademark when he performs is his black hat. The Van Dyke Road resident plays seven instruments.

The Elkland Township Fire Department assisted the Caro department Sunday afternoon in fighting a house fire on Elmwood Road near Colwood Road.

The home, totally destroyed, belonged to James Gray. Cause was not immediately determined.

The fire was reported at 2:20. Elkland sent a tanker at 3 p.m. It later returned to the fire station for a refilling and returned along with a pumper.

didn't give it any funds for the purpose this winter.

The Road Commission did transfer a man from its Vassar garage to the Deford garage when a snowplowgrader operator at Deford retired, but overall, the agency is shorthanded, according to Miklovic. The three road commissioners are looking at possibly closing some or all of its regional garages - at Deford, Vassar and Akron as a cost cutting measure but hasn't made a decision

"We would like to be doing a better job for the people," he added, "but there's only so much we can do with the funds available." Spending more money for snow and ice control means less for other purposes, such as road maintenance.

Tuscola county doesn't have the only road commission with a budget crunch.

Sanilac County Road Comi mission Engineer-Manager Fred Elwood said recently he expects the final tab for road clearing this winter to be $300,000, twice what was spent last year.

Major reasons for the blg increase were a substantial amount paid for overtime and more salt being used, which has increased in price.

One result will be a cutback in blacktopping this' summer. Only primary roads will receive any resurfacing. Any local roads blacktopped will have to be' done at township expense, whereas previously the Road Commission split the cost 50-50. The agency used to pay for spraying and brush and weed cutting along local' roads. If townships still want the service, they now will have to pay half the cost.

Two identical high bids were submitted for the 1949 Ford pumper, so the two bidders, both out-of-county residents, will be asked to submit new bids. Six bids were received.

If they back out the truck will be readvertised for sale. Assuming the two bidders submit new offers, the board will probably hold a special meeting to award the bid.

The 1944 pumper was the department's first fire truck and was used in recent years for exhibition purposes. The 1949 model pumper was no longer needed after the township bought a new pumper for $62,948 in Octob

New books at the library

-THE TEAMSTERS, by Steven Brill (non-fiction). The author penetrates to the heart of America's largest, most controversial union in a story as intricately plotted and peopled as a best-selling novel. He takes us inside the murder of Jimmy Hoffa . . . inside the pension fund that became the underworld's private bank . . . inside the gangster connections and luxurious lifestyles of union bosses. Based on prodigious research and packed with startling detail. "The Teamsters" may be the most controversial and crucial book of the decade.

THE HOUSE NEXT DOOR, by Anne Siddons (fiction). Colquitt Kennedy and her husband Walter's tranquil life in a luxurious country-like suburb in Atlanta is disturbed by very strange happenings in the house next door. There is a malignancy in the house threatening everyone who lives there. Colquitt knows that even at a risk to herself she must put an end to this evil.

GUINNESS BOOK OF WORLD RECORDS, 1979 (nonfiction). In 1974, Mrs. Matthewman of Yorkshire, England, knitted 836 garments with 9,770 oz. of wool; the only living man in the world to be struck by lightening five times is park ranger Roy C. Sullivan of Virginia. If this information doesn't appeal, the book is also rife with useful information such as highest mountains, data on U.S. Presi-··· dents, and the like.

'THE PRAISE SINGER, by Mary Renault (fiction): "The Praise Singer" paints vividly the Attic world of the 6th century B.C. as seen through the eyes of Simonides of Keos, one of the great lyric poets. Simonides lived in that time of relative placidity before the Persian Wars, when sculptors, singers, actors and athletes filled the Greek city-states protected by their patrons.

Cass City title hopes still alive after Vassar, Marlette wins

The Cass City Red Hawks retained an outside chance of winning a share of the Thumb B Conference title Tuesday night with a 71-51 decision over the Vassar Vulcans. The win, combined with a 62.61 loss to Caro by league. leading Frankenmuth Tuesday moved Cass City into a three-way tie for first place.

The Hawks have just three conference encounters left and a victory in each of them is essential to keep any title

Cass City will be heavily favored when they travel to Bad Axe Friday and there doesn't appear to be any way that tail-end Sandusky can defeat the Hawks when they meet Feb. 23.

That leaves only the Lakers in the final pre-game tourney tune-up and that game promises to be a drawn out battle to the final

The Red Hawks host Mayville in a non-conference tilt Tuesday, Feb. 20.

Vassar was powerless against the Cass City press Tuesday night and trailed at halftime, 36-20. That allowed coach Ron Nurnberger to empty his bench and everyone got to play. Clare Trischler led the Red Hawk attack with 21 points, followed by Rusty Hoag with 18. The team connected on 28 of 61 shots from the floor, 46 percent, and 15 of 21 from the free throw line, 71 percent.

Todd Wallace was leading scorer for Vassar with 19 points. His team made 23 of 64 shots from the floor, 36 percent, and 5 of 10 from the charity line.

Most of the excitement among the fans attending the basketball game Friday as Cass City hosted Marlette at the high school gym didn't revolve around the action on the floor.

MARLETTE GAME

It was reserved for the outcome of the Laker-Frankenmuth game running at the same time. For the Hawks need help if they are Conference picture and it looked for awhile as if the Lakers were going to provide it. There was a visible letdown when the Eagles finally won in the fourth overtime period.

Although the Hawks didn't dominate the game with the Raiders as they did in the first encounter, they still were in front all the way in a 66-53 decision and the feeling among spectators appeared to be the game was well in

One reason for this was probably because the Hawks jumped into an early 21-8 first period advantage and were never seriously threatened although the visitors remained within striking distance until midway in the final period.

One reason that the game wasn't more lopsided was probably due to the loss of Clare Trischler. The senior guard controls the flow of play when he's at the helm and plays aggressive defense as well. Trischler didn't play because of a tender ankle.

With the early first period berger was able to look at his bench for long stretches. Because of injuries and an absence, the Hawks faced the Raiders with just nine able-bodied players. Sophomore Todd Com-ment paced the early attack with seven points. In the second quarter balanced scoring kept the Hawks in command. At the half it was Cass City 35, Marlette 24.

Rusty Hoag paced the Hawk offense in the third quarter with six points. Hoag also made a pair of pretty passes inside to Ken Martin that resulted in buckets in the first half.

At one time in the third period the Red Raiders moved to within six points. But that was as close as they were to get.

By the end of the period the margin was 10 points. Midway through the final quarter it was 14 points and the starters started for the bench one after the other, through for the night.

Comment led four Hawks in double figures with 15 points. Ken Martin and Tim Severance each netted 11 to get back into the Thumb B advantage Coach Ron Nurn- and Rusty Hoag added 10.

The undefeated and state ranked Tigers defeated the Bulldogs in the first matchup, 61-53, Jan. 8.

'We could have beaten them the first time if we played better," Owen-Gage coach Phil Gray said, confident that his team is capable of playing better.
