

School costs lowest in state

Cass City had the distinction in 1977-78 of having the lowest per pupil expenditure of any school district in the state, according to a Michigan Department of Education survey.

The average was $1,049 for each of its 2,138 students. The highest expenditure was $2,662 in Oak Park (4,143 students), a Detroit suburb. Supt. Donald Crouse isn't sure exactly how the figures were computed. The $1,049 times 2,138 students comes to $2,242,762, yet the district spent $2,271,625 that year.

If a budget item was left out in computing the figures, he doesn't know what it was and whether it was left out in figuring the average in all school districts.

Crouse hasn't seen the survey yet, only an article about it in a Detroit newspaper.

As for why Cass City appears to be so frugal, he feels one reason may be the purchase in 1976-77 of football field lights and some other items, which were budgeted for repayment over two years but were paid for the first year.

As a result, the district ran a $59,955 deficit in 1976-77 but had a $58,605 surplus in 1977-78, the year of the survey, which would have reduced the average expenditure per pupil.

The average cost of educating a student in all school districts in Tuscola county in 1977-78 was $1,287; in Huron county, $1,355, and in Sanilac, $1,291.

Time changes

Don't forget before hitting the sack Saturday night — set clocks ahead one hour. Daylight savings time officially starts at 2 a.m. Sunday.

In addition to losing an hour of sleep that night — unless one goes to bed an hour earlier than usual — it also means it will get light an hour later in the morning but stay light an hour longer in the evening.

The easy way to remember which way to turn the clocks and when is: "Spring ahead and fall behind."

RECEIVING CONGRATULATIONS from Lambert Althaver, left, last year's Citizen of the Year, is Bill Kritzman who was named for this year's award Monday.

Lawyers still battle for Owendale track control

The off-the-track contest over who owns the Owendale Speedway is still awaiting the drop of the checkered flag.

Under past and present owner Wayne Dubs, the track on Sebawaing Road will reopen May 5.

At a pretrial hearing last Wednesday, Huron County Circuit Judge M. Richard Knoblock scheduled a non-jury trial Oct. 15 on the remaining issues in the case.

The tangled issue goes back to August, 1977, when Dubs agreed to sell the track to the Cass Land Co., owner of Thunder Road Speedway on M-53, north of M-81. David Duncan, who with his wife, Florence, operates Thunder Road, was a partner in Cass Land Co. at the time.

However, the two sides were never able to come up with a satisfactory contract to finalize the sale and the matter wound up in court.

The Duncans made one attempt to reopen the track in September, 1977, then started races there last year May 12. They ran them about a month, calling the track Huron County Speedway, before the issue went into court.

In June, Judge Allen E. Keyes, then circuit judge for Huron and Sanilac counties, signed a judgment allowing Dubs to retain possession pending a hearing to resolve all remaining issues in the case.

A hearing never was held. According to Dubs' attorney, Karl Kraus of Bad Axe, the Duncans did go to the Michigan Court of Appeals twice during the winter months. The first time they asked for a writ of superintending control, which would have meant the appeals court would have taken over the case. The second time, they sought to appeal Keyes' signing of the judgment.

The Duncans were rejected both times, however, the justices did say the second time that once the case was completed in circuit court, they could appeal the entire matter.

That left for the time being, according to Kraus, only the question of damages to be resolved in circuit court.

Cass Land Co. is asking for $10,000 compensation for damage done to the track, plus $50,000 exemplary damages. Dubs is counter-suing and asking for damages of any amount over $10,000 as decided by the court to pay for loss of business and good will and physical damage to the track.

Since Keyes signed the judgment last year, Huron county voters elected a judge of their own, Knoblock.

Since Knoblock is new to the case, he said at the pretrial hearing last week that he will allow Cass Land's attorney, John P. Ogurek of Farmington, to file a brief arguing that the issue of ownership should be reopened.

He has 45 days to do so, then Kraus has 30 days to file a response. The latter attorney said his impression is that even if Knoblock should decide that the ownership issue will be reheard, that wouldn't be done until the Oct. 15 trial, thus Dubs will be allowed to keep operating the track this season.

Mrs. Duncan told the Chronicle that Ogurek plans to file the motion in circuit court this week to reopen the case concerning the ownership issue.

She also said that although Cass Land Co. is still pursuing the case, her husband is no longer a partner in the company.

Efforts by the Chronicle to contact Ogurek were unsuccessful.

Spring grass fires now plaguing area

Rain Tuesday and Wednesday provided some relief, but it's the time of year for grass fires.

The Elkland Township Fire Department was busy last Thursday and Friday fighting a grass fire and grain storage bin fire, plus being called to two potential fires.

A grass fire Thursday afternoon on the south side of River Road consumed an estimated 10-15 acres.

The fire broke out shortly after 3 p.m. and took about 1½ hours to extinguish. A Department of Natural Resources bulldozer was brought to the scene to help fight the flames.

LeeAnn Papp, who lives on the east edge of where the fire was, said she had burned trash in a barrel that morning. She thought the fire was out, but some sparks from it some hours later spread to the grass and ignited it. The fire got into woods at the edge of the area.

At 11:40 a.m. Monday, firemen had to extinguish another grass fire in the same area. Fire Chief Jack Hartwick said the fire started from the road, so speculated it may have been started by a still burning cigarette thrown from a car window by a passing motorist.

Only a couple more acres burned and firemen were at the scene only a short time.

As of Monday, the fire chief said, the state Department of Natural Resources was still allowing issuance of burning permits. The fire department permits are re-

Name Bill Kritzman citizen of year

Bill Kritzman, Cass City, was named Cass City's Citizen of the Year Monday at the annual banquet of the Cass City Chamber of Commerce.

Kritzman has lived in Cass City since 1960 when the family corporation purchased the former H. J. Smith Store here.

He quickly became involved in the affairs of the community. He is past president and member of the Cass City Rotary Club, Trinity United Methodist church and Chamber of Commerce. He is now the president of the Industrial Development Corporation and a member of the finance committee of the Methodist church.

He has been active in the retail committee for business and a worker and supporter of Hills and Dales Community Hospital.

Kritzman graduated from Sandusky High School, attended Cleary Business College and Michigan State University. He and his wife, Jeanette, came to Cass City from Harbor Beach and the Kritzmans' three children were born here.

Kritzman was presented the award by Lambert Althaver, last year's Citizen of the Year. Althaver also outlined the progress and current status of the village from his viewpoint as president of the Village.

The junior citizens of the year were announced by Phil Keating. Honored were Frances Kozan and David Heins.

The two were selected from among several finalists who attended the banquet.

Kozan is active in the Methodist church and ranks 14th in her class. She is a member of the National Honor Society. She was active in forensics, debate, pep band, school plays and held several class offices during her high school career.

Heins is active in the Lutheran church. He ranked 17th in his class. He is a member of the National Honor Society. He participated in forensics, school plays, student council, varsity football and track. He spent a year as a Rotary exchange student.

Ken Jensen, administrator at Hills and Dales General Hospital, was the guest speaker.

He entertained with anecdotes taken from an apparently inexhaustible supply while pointing out the values of commitment and united effort in Chamber participation and in community involvement.

President Tom Herron was the master of ceremonies.

In his year-end report Herron had much to be cheerful about.

Tops was the addition of 31 new members, signifying the recent revitalization of the Chamber.

New activities underway or planned, Herron said, included snow removal on Main Street sidewalks, a welcome wagon, recognition of members in a series of stories and the progress already made towards what may be the largest single day celebration in the history of the village on the Fourth of July.

Another plus for the Chamber and the community was the report that the Christmas decorations would be handled now by the village.

Althaver said that in addition to assuming the workload there is money budgeted for addition to the display this year.

The Rev. James Van Dellen, pastor of Good Shepherd Lutheran church, gave the invocation.

New members of the board of directors include

Dale Deering, Bob Ashman, Dave Luana and Curt Strickland.

Cass City's operating tax revenues increase 16.2%

Cass Cityans will be paying 15½ mills on their tax bills they receive this summer, the village council decided Tuesday evening.

The council also approved establishment of an Economic Development Corporation and was told the sewage treatment plant project, although finally approved by the state, still is raveled in red tape.

Of the tax levy, 13 mills will be the same as village property owners have been paying many years to pay for village operations. The added 2½ mills will be to pay off the bonds for the sewage plant project, which voters approved in March.

The 13 mills, times the 1979 assessed valuation of Cass City of $16,104 million, will produce revenue of $209,356. With the council not feeling the village can get by on less than that, that was the levy approved.

That compares with a 1978 valuation, 16.2 percent less, of $13,862 million, and revenue of $180,211.

Of the $2.24 million increase in valuation, $562,300 of that comes from new construction, the rest from inflation.

The council had to decide how to deal with the Headlee amendment, which so far the state legislature has been unable to deal with.

The problem is that although the village levies only 13 mills (debt levies, such as for the sewage plant, don't count), its charter authorizes up to 17 mills, plus more if for special purposes.

Does the Headlee rollback provision apply to the amount being levied (13 mills) or the amount authorized (17 mills), if the valuation increase exceeds the increase in the consumer price index (7.7 percent last year)? The legislature has yet to decide.

The latest report from the state Department of Management and Budget, as of Monday, was that the two bills in the legislature dealing with implementation of Headlee both apply the rollback to the higher authorized levy, which thus means Cass City wouldn't have to reduce its millage.

DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION

The council approved creation of an Economic Development Corporation. Following publication of the required legal notices, it will be able to appoint the nine members of the EDC board at its May 29 meeting.

Prior to the vote, attorney William J. Danhof of Miller, Canfield, Paddock and Stone told the council the village is not liable in case of default for repayment of the EDC bonds. Creditors will go after the property involved in order to get repayment, like in a normal bankruptcy proceeding.

The chance of default is very low, according to Danhof, because banks and other financial institutions are very careful who they buy the bonds from, that is, who they loan money to.

Any EDC project must be approved by the village council before the bonds can be sold.

EDC bonds, interest on which is tax free, are now selling for 7-8 percent interest, he said, versus 11-12 percent for normal loans, hence the interest in financing commercial and industrial projects through the EDC.

SEWAGE PLANT

Village President Lambert Althaver reported the Water Quality Division of the state Department of Natural Resources on April 13 approved the plan for the expansion and improvement of the wastewater treatment plant — 2-3 months behind schedule for various reasons.

The plans now go to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency office in Chicago for approval, expected to take at least six weeks.

Provided it takes at the most, not much longer than that, Althaver said after the meeting, construction can still get underway this year.

If delayed until next year, inflation could add considerably to the estimated $6 million cost, of which the EPA will pay 75 percent; the state, 5 percent.

On attorney Danhof's recommendations, the village approved the resolution authorizing sale of $1.2 million in bonds to finance the local share (and later, the 2½ mills for repayment). The bonds will be sold to the Farmers Home Administration at 5 percent interest.

The sale must first be approved by the state Municipal Finance Commission, expected to take 4-5 weeks, although the official okay won't come until the EPA approves its 75 percent grant for the project.

APARTMENTS

The personnel committee recommended a change in the village zoning ordinance to allow "new" apartments in downtown buildings. Apartments are only allowed now if they were in existence prior to establish-

Rabbit Tracks

By John Haire

(And anyone else he can get to help)

Did you catch the story in one of the Detroit papers recently describing the trophy King Salmon caught by Bob Tuckey with help from Bill Wallace? (I didn't).

Anyway, it won a contest sponsored by the paper and was the largest fish caught that day in the St. Clair River.

Before leaving the dock, the pair were briefed on the "right" way to fish there for salmon. Down stream at specified depths and with only certain lures were the tickets, they were told.

All morning they tried it. Zilch. In the afternoon they forgot the tips and did everything in reverse of the accepted procedure.

Eureka, prize time!

Dr. Jack Clara of Cass City has a conversation stopper. It's a cane. At least, it's a cane most of the time.

But don't turn your back or it turns into something else. What is becomes is a pool cue. By unscrewing a cap here and there and replacing them somewhere else the transformation is completed in a matter of minutes.

And if Clara shoots pool to the standards of that well made pool stick take my advice: don't play with him.

Made a flying (literally and figuratively) trip to Chicago over the week end and I can personally confirm that the United Airlines strike has made things hectic.

There's no service from Tri-City, of course. And the lines from Detroit to Chicago and back are loaded.

My business finished, I arrived at the airport and attempted to fly stand-by on a 9 p.m. flight instead of the 10:45 flight where I was able to get a reservation. The clerk took my name, smiled and said that I was number 71 on the flight's stand-by list. I don't need to tell you that I didn't make it, do I.

A sequel to the story: When I got on my appointed flight I found another passenger with the same seat reservation. The flight attendant (I still call them stewardess) finally found another seat on the plane for me. Good thing, too. They would have had to call a cop to get me off that plane after I had waited 3½ hours at the airport.

Zonta Club installs five new officers

The Zonta Club held its monthly dinner meeting and installation of officers at the home of Florence Karr Tuesday evening, April 17.

New officers for the next two years were installed in a ceremony performed by Helen Baker. New officers are: president, Donna Wernette; vice-president, Lottie Konwalski; treasurer, Marie Roch; secretary, Betty Hurst, and board members, Cindy McConkey and Janice Chippi. Mrs. Chippi was unable to attend.

Plans were completed for the annual spring workshop for District 15 at the Colony House Saturday, April 28, with Cass City Zontians as hosts. Helen Baker is chairman.

It was voted to make a contribution to Zonta International for the Zonta International float in the Rose Bowl Parade Jan. 1.

Plans were completed for the club's participation in the July 4th celebration.

One new member, Anna McCallum, was initiated into the club by a ceremony performed by Esther McCullough.

The next dinner meeting will be May 15 with Joy Anthony as hostess and Edith Little and Gladys Fort as co-hostesses.

Overdue taxes go to units in Sanilac

Sanilac county governmental units will be receiving more than $1.6 million in delinquent tax payments in late May, county Treasurer Ken Rhead has announced.

The money will come from the county's revolving tax fund, for which notes were sold April 12 at an interest rate of 5.8185 percent.

Successful bidder (at the highest interest rate) for purchase of the notes was Manley, Bennett, McDonald and Co.

The total of more than $1.6 million was the amount of taxes due as of March 1. In exchange for the governmental units receiving the taxes immediately, the county will collect the delinquent taxes and penalties, which is more than enough to pay off the notes.

Townships closest to Cass City and the amounts they will be receiving in delinquent taxes, as of March 1 and excluding personal property taxes, will be: Argyle, $1,018; Austin, $2,950; Evergreen, $735; Greenleaf, $2,220; Lamotte, $1,373; and Moore, $1,925.

The Cass City School District, for the portion of it in Sanilac county, will be receiving $27,600; the Uby School District, $31,298.

The middle-aged son brought his mother violets for Easter. She wanted something else.

Actually, the violets were just an excuse for a visit that wasn't supposed to be made. The son wasn't scheduled to see his mother on Easter.

His large family is scattered across several cities, and there's usually no way all the members can attend the same holiday party. Most often, a few relatives get together in one town and a few others gather in other towns, and after dinner they all phone each other in memory of a departed uncle who worked for Michigan Bell.

For this Easter, the son and his mother were slated to eat ham in different towns. It shouldn't have made any difference to him. She wouldn't be alone on the important day; he had seen her the week before Easter, and he would see her again the week after.

And besides, as his wife reminded him, he has always claimed a day isn't special simply because the calendar says it's supposed to be special. When his wife says they have to be with their grandchildren on Dec. 25, he insists that Christmas is just as much fun on Dec. 27.

"The day you open the presents is Christmas, and the day you're locked out of the bank is Washington's birthday. It doesn't matter what the calendar says," the middle-aged son always growls. "A man brave enough to stretch tradition can avoid a lot of traffic by going on a Labor Day picnic in the middle of August."

His anti-calendar logic is unassailable. So how could he explain his compulsion to see his mother on Easter, even though he had a date to dine with other relatives many miles away from her? He tried flowers.

"Every son should give his mother flowers for Easter," he announced, rather stuffily. He went out and bought a dinky pot of African violets. He would have made a grander purchase, but he knew his mother had already received a huge Easter lily and other flowers from his sisters. There wasn't room for another big plant on the windowsill of her little room in the nursing home.

Why not have a flower shop deliver the violets? The middle-aged son didn't answer that question. But he did make a compromise against the calendar. He decided it really wasn't necessary to see his mother on Easter. He took the violets and drove to his old hometown the afternoon before Easter.

At the nursing home, he went directly to the recreation room where Easter mass was being said. Sunday mass is always a day early there, and it was the high point of every week for his mother. Her wheelchair was always in the same place, close to the makeshift altar. But on this Saturday, she wasn't there.

On his hurried way to his mother's room, the son talked to a nurse. He learned his mother had suddenly become very ill, while he was driving to visit her. She had been blind and weak for many months, but she had been able to visit her children and to enjoy picnic cocktail parties when they visited her. She had been his mother for more than 50 years, and he hadn't yet thought much about losing her.

He thought about it now. His mother was barely conscious. Her little sister (only 77) was at her side, as always.

"Boy, you must really be sick if you missed Easter mass," the middle-aged son said. "I hope the new pope is an understanding man."

She smiled. Perhaps she didn't really hear her son's lousy joke, but he hopes she did.

He held the little violets under her nose and asked if she could smell them. She didn't answer, ever.

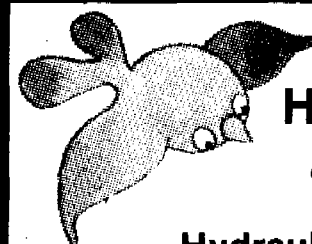

It turned out that the son did see his mother on Easter Sunday. He saw her when she was transferred to a nearby hospital and tubes were inserted into her arms and nose. He watched while she struggled to breathe and the time between each breath grew longer and longer.

Early Easter morning, the mother died.

The middle-aged son isn't sad. He is grateful for whatever force compelled him to make an uncharacteristic visit to his mother. He is grateful for her; she was a marvelous mother. He is also grateful that she got more than violets for Easter.

What the mother really wanted was to die, and she often said so. The last year was rough on a beautiful lady who always loved to dance but could no longer see to walk. She was ready to leave.

It hurts to let go, but it's a mistake to hang on too long. The middle-aged son's ache will last much longer than the violets, but it's a nice ache that reminds him of how much his mother loved him — and how much he loved her.

The Haire Net

Did you catch the NBC news show on the tube that explained the doomsday procedure for using the atomic bomb?

It showed what should happen if Russia launched atomic bombs and aimed them for all key points in the United States.

The show also went through all the procedures for retaliation by the United States.

The complicated methods used to safeguard against an accidental nuclear confrontation sound good. But following "the plan" in the short crisis period between the time the enemy bombs are fired till they strike targets here would be a minor miracle. The odds are at least 100 to one that they would be fouled up long before all the safeguard steps were followed.

The show also depicted the results of a nuclear holocaust with 130 million dead here and the same relative results in Russia.

Since Russians are as smart as Americans, it's sure that they, too, can figure all of this out. It's hard to imagine that they would dream of starting a doomsday war.

So what's the worry? A huge colossal mistake. History is full of them . . . but none with the almost sure consequences that one with the bomb would bring.

I've read reports that this threat of nuclear extension hangs heavy over all of us and is responsible for changes in the way we live.

I've read it, but I don't believe it. An atomic bomb war is too horrible to contemplate. There's a lot more worry connected with something like the atomic plant at 3-mile island.

We can get our teeth into that one. We can do something about it.

We also can worry about the little every day problems like disease, making a living and air pollution. Those things do shape our life.

For me, and I suspect for most of us, an atomic bomb really doesn't affect us much one way or another. Intellectually, we can mull the problem and have opinions on the solution.

But it's not real. Not really. Who can imagine 130 million dead? Who wants to? Not me.

After seeing that program I mentally shrugged my shoulders, physically grabbed my putter and rolled a few balls across the carpet.

My golf game. Ah! There's something to really worry about.

Your Neighbor says

Prayer should be allowed in schools

Should prayer be allowed in public schools?

The issue, presumably decided by the U.S. Supreme Court in the 1960s when it said it shouldn't be, has arisen anew in the U.S. Senate, where an amendment to overturn the court ruling was approved 47-37 April 5.

Some political maneuvering later led to a reversal of the Senate action.

Richard Parrott believes that prayer should be allowed in public schools.

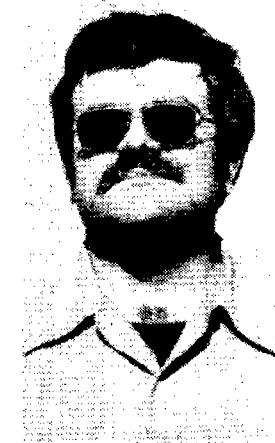

"I have a strong faith in God and what he has done for me," he explained. "Our nation was founded in God and I hope it gets back to a closer worship of God."

Although he feels prayer should be allowed, he doesn't feel it should be required. "How they work it out, I don't know," Parrott said, explaining there should be some means for children to be exempted. "I feel they have a right (not to pray). It's a free country."

Parrott operates a surface grinder, for Hydramet in Caro, a maker of precision cutting tools.

He and his wife, Debbie, have two children, Richard II and Lindi. They live at 3238 N. Dodge Road, Cass City.

PEDALING AROUND

By Mike Eliasohn

Who is this nation's most famous reporter?

Is it Joe Rossi of the "Lou Grant" television show? (Who is really an actor.) Is it Woodward and Bernstein of Watergate reporting fame? (Actually two people.)

How about Bill Overend? Bill Overend?

Yes, Bill Overend. He really is a reporter, for the Los Angeles Times. Most of you have probably seen him, although you have never read his stories, because he is featured in the Milky Way candy bar television commercial.

After rushing to get a story in just before deadline, he starts to relax with a Milky Way, only to be told the mayor is about to make a statement. He grabs his jacket and off he goes.

His role in the commercial has drawn criticism from fellow journalists, who don't feel members of the media should be identified with a product, candidate or cause, lest their credibility be questioned.

Overend doesn't see any conflict. "I suppose I couldn't do an investigative report on Milky Way," he told the Detroit Free Press. "I don't see a story on candy bars likely in my entire future in the business."

He declined to say how much he was paid for doing the commercial or how much he will get in residuals.

I agree with Overend and I think some of his critics aren't really concerned about loss of credibility but are actually jealous of the money he is making from the commercial.

The money will probably be enough for him to buy a new $20,000 Porsche while his fellow reporters are driving around in beat-up old Chevrolets (or my case, a beat-up old Gremlin).

I don't blame any journalists for being jealous of Overend, but they shouldn't try to disguise their jealousy by talking about such lofty ideals as conflict of interest.

Since I have no lofty ideals, I would hereby like to announce my availability for commercials. Potential sponsors don't even have to pay me Porsche prices. I am more than willing to settle for a Volkswagen Rabbit diesel, which gets better than 50 miles per gallon and probably doesn't cost more than $7,000.

To make it easier for potential manufacturers of products I could endorse, here are some suggestions: Midnight oil - I seem to burn lots of it.

Light bulbs - same reason as for midnight oil.

Seat cushions - I have made a definite impression on the one on my office chair.

Office chairs - I'm not a big wheel, but I do a lot of swiveling on mine.

Typewriters - Being old-fashioned, I would rather endorse a manual model than an electric one.

Typewriter ribbons - I have worn out a lot of them typing trash like this.

Cameras - How about this line for a commercial: "When there's a big fire, reporter Mike Eliasohn is there with his trusty"

American Motors - There's a fellow in a Volkswagen commercial who brags about his last VW lasting seven years. My Gremlin will be nine years old in July. Maybe: "When there's a big fire, reporter Mike Eliasohn gets there in his trusty American Motors Gremlin."

(Of course, if I do this ad, I won't be buying a VW Rabbit diesel.)

Huron County Big Brothers-Big Sisters, scheduled to go out of business Friday because of lack of money, won a temporary reprieve from Catholic Family Services (CFS).

The latter agency offered Big Brothers use of two unused rooms in its building on N. Port Crescent Ave. in Bad Axe. It started operating out of there Monday and will pay only minimal rent.

Two of four staff members will be retained, being paid with federal Comprehensive Employment and Training Act funds, good only until Sept. 30. Efforts are being made to find funds to keep the secretary.

Fund raising events will be continued.

The organization presently has a total of 43 Big Brother-Little Brother and Big Sister-Little Sister matches.

show opens Sunday

The second "Kaleidoscope of Art" show will open Sunday from 2-5 p.m. with a special public reception.

The arts and craft show sponsored by the Cass City Arts Council will be on display until May 5 in the Cultural Center. The community is cordially invited to attend the reception Sunday, meet the artists and view their work.

Many area artists will be displaying their work. Some of them will be Maxine Clara, Frank Demeray, Pat Britt, Kathleen and Julie Vargo, Liz Mantey, Yvonne Schultz, Greg Mark and Teresa Scollon, Ann Masters and Alice Guernsey.

The opportunity to participate in the show is still open. Anyone wishing to exhibit work should contact either Ann McDaniel, 872-3353, or Celia House, 872-3340. All types of media will be accepted for exhibit, for example, watercolor, oil, jewelry, pottery, weaving, metal work, needlepoint, rug hooking, quilt making etc. All work must be original, no kits, and recent, within the last year-and-a-half.

There will be about 25-30 artists exhibiting, according to show chairman McDaniel, almost all of whom live in the Thumb.

After Sunday, hours will be from 5-8 p.m. Monday, Thursday and Friday and 10 a.m.-3 p.m. Saturday.

Special tours other than during those hours, such as for school groups, can be arranged by calling Mrs. McDaniel or Mrs. House.

The first Arts Council Kaleidoscope of Art was about five years ago.

WOVEN - Alice Guernsey wove the fabric on her loom, then made this pillow. She will also have other samples of her weaving and patchwork in the show.

Taste testing slated

Michigan State University and the Tuscola Cooperative Extension Service are presenting a consumer taste testing program May 3 at Sacred Heart Parish Hall in Caro.

Guests will be Mary Zayner, MSU marketing consumer specialist, and Jan Jacobson, district marketing agent.

According to Extension Home Economist Peg Houck, a consumer test tasting panel will give Tuscola residents the opportunity to share their ideas and opinions about a variety of Michigan agricultural products.

Purpose of the panel is to give information concerning the product tested to the marketing firms, to give opinions and ideas to consumer marketing agents and to let consumers be aware of the changes that are occurring in the food industry.

The program is only open to people with reservations, and only a limited number can attend. The extension office in Caro can be called for information.

State milk output up in March

Michigan dairy farmers produced 412,000,000 pounds of milk in March, 2 percent greater than a year earlier, according to the Michigan Agricultural Reporting Service. Production per cow was 1,035 pounds, 2 percent greater than 1978. This increase in productivity more than offsets a slight decline in cow numbers to 398,000 head, 2,000 less than last year. Cow numbers have had a downward trend since December when there were 408,000 head in the state. This reflects a general decline over the years in cow numbers. High cull cow prices of recent months have been an added incentive for farmers to trim their herds. Contributing to increased output per cow was a higher rate of grain and concentrates fed to milk cows. A 7 percent increase over a year ago brought grain and concentrate fed daily to 15.1 pounds. Compared with February 1978, dairy products manufacturers in the state produced less American cheese and butter while ice cream output remained the same. American cheese at 1.6 million pounds and butter at 2.6 million pounds were down 1 percent and 7 percent, respectively. Ice cream output was 2.6 million gallons.

Pilot program is renewable

Okay $400,000 for water control

State agricultural leaders met Monday in Caro, to assure the success of a $400,000 agricultural water pollution control project in portions of Huron and Tuscola counties.

Purpose of the meeting was to coordinate and develop the activities of all groups within the project area, according to State Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) Executive Director Richard Grabemeyer.

The grant, one of two receiving the highest level of federal funding in the U.S., was awarded to the ASCS in Huron and Tuscola.

Dale Raven, East Central Michigan Planning and Development Region water quality planner, was responsible for writing and coordinating the grant application which led to the $400,000 federal grant being announced by Congressman Bob Traxler's office April 11.

According to Raven, grant funds will be used to financially assist farmers within the project area in implementing conservation practices aimed at reducing agricultural pollution flowing into Saginaw Bay.

The distribution of funds to farmers will come in the form of cost shares distributed through Huron and Tuscola county's ASCS offices.

The grant money will pay 80-90 percent of the total cost of the individual projects, according to Tuscola County ASCS Executive Director Virgil Bouck, with the farmer paying the rest.

Practices for which the cost-sharing funds will be available include vegetative cover, sediment retention and water control structures, windbreaks, conservation tillage practices, sod waterways, wildlife habitat and animal waste control structures.

Applications are now being taken at the ASCS offices in Caro and Bad Axe.

Monitoring of the success of the program, considered a pilot project, will be done by various agencies, such as the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, ASCS, East Central planning region and Cooperative Extension Service.

Assuming the program is successful, Bouck said, indications are that funding will be continued for four more years, hopefully for at least $400,000 annually.

Future funding, however, will depend on the recommendation of the U.S. Department of Agriculture and appropriation of the money by Congress.

Along with U.S. Congressional representatives, Monday's meeting included presentations by Michigan ASCS Committee Chairman Vernon Kretschmer, Grabemeyer, Soil Conservation Service State Conservationist Arthur Cratty, state Cooperative Extension Service Director Dr. Gordon Guyer and Farmers Home Administration State Director Robert Mitchell.

Other speakers included U.S. Forest Service Regional Management Specialist Paul Flink, Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR) Water Quality Division Assistant Chief William Bradford and Raven.

Presentations focused on the background and intent of the Saginaw Bay Agricultural Water Pollution Control project, the Washington viewpoint and how state-directed federal agencies can help to implement the project.

Joint Canadian and U.S. water quality studies made since 1922 noted that Saginaw Bay's shallow inner bay ranks as one of the most polluted bodies of water in the Great Lakes bordering the two countries.

The studies cited high levels of phosphate nutrients, excessive algae concentrations and low levels of zooplankton normally found in clean water.

The grant application stated that "siltation and nutrient enrichment has degraded much of the natural habitat which once supported the resident and migratory water fowl which frequent these coastal areas. Once a productive spawning ground which helped to support the wall-eye populations of Saginaw Bay, these habitats have also been degraded to the point where they are incapable of being used by these species."

According to Raven, grant funds will be used to financially assist farmers in implementing conservation practices such as wind breaks and ditch bank grading and seeding throughout the approximately 243,000 acre project area.

These are just a few examples of conservation practices that local ASCS offices will suggest to farmers. According to Raven, there are many more practices that can be adopted.

The grant received the highest level of federal funding along with a similar grant awarded in Tennessee. Only 21 grants of this type were funded nationally.

Raven said that without the efforts and support of Congressman Traxler, the director for District 9 of the Michigan United Conservation Clubs, DNR and the Soil Conservation Districts, Boards of Commissioners Cooperative Extension Service, and ASCS directors and committees in the two counties, the grant would not have been made.

The 10 a.m.-3:30 p.m. meeting was held at the Capri Restaurant.

PUBLIC NOTIFICATION OF THE EXISTENCE OF A PSRO DATA SYSTEM

Under federal law, health care services which may be paid for under the Medicare, Medicaid, and Maternal and Child Health Programs are subject to review by authorized physician organizations to determine if the services are medically necessary, of a quality which meets professional recognized standards of health care, and are appropriately furnished in a hospital or other health care institution.

Area IV Professional Standards Review Organization of Michigan has been designated as the PSRO responsible for these activities in Arenac, Bay, Clare, Huron, Iosco, Isabella, Midland, Saginaw, St. Clair, Sanilac, and Tuscola Counties.

A data system has been designed to support activities and will be functional on, or after April 1, 1979. This system will allow for the collection and analysis of specific, minimal information about hospitalizations of patients whose principle method of payment is through Medicare, Medicaid and Maternal and Child Health Programs.

Federal law mandates that the information acquired for these review purposes shall remain confidential and that unauthorized disclosure shall be punishable by criminal penalties. A data confidentiality and security policy is in existence and includes procedures for insuring that such unauthorized disclosure will not take place.

Additional information about the data system and the confidentiality policy and procedures may be obtained by contacting the individual indicated below.

The 1980 Chevy CITATION.

Come in and Test Drive One Today — You'll Love How It Looks On You

Citation is a car of many virtues. It's compact, but it's big inside. It's versatile, but sporty, too. It's quick, but also very smooth. It's brand new, but it has already gone through more preproduction testing than any car in Chevy history.

MID-SIZE ROOM FOR 5 ADULTS

Citation's engine is mounted sideways, so the passenger compartment can be bigger. In fact, in EPA interior dimensions, Citation is classified as a mid-size car. With the back seat folded down there's room enough for two adults in front, and 30 bags of groceries in back.

0 TO 50 IN 9 SECONDS FLAT

That's in engineering tests with the available 2.8 Liter V6 and automatic transmission. And that's acceleration you'll appreciate on a freeway. California figures not available. Citation is equipped with GM-built engines produced by various divisions. See your dealer for details.

THE PULL OF FRONT WHEEL DRIVE

The heart of Chevy Citation is its front wheel drive. Power pulls the car rather than pushes it. With 65% of the weight of the car over the driving wheels, you get good traction on wet roads, snow and mud.

CARRIES BIG LOADS (AND KEEPS IT A SECRET)

Behind the rear seat of a Citation Hatchback you get cargo room that's just a fraction less than the trunk space in our big Chevrolet Caprice. And there's a rear compartment panel linked to the hatch so what's inside is protected from view. The panel can be easily removed when you want more load height.

Keep that great GM feeling with genuine GM Parts

HELPING HAND -- Members of Karen Fischer's 4th-6th grade Sunday school class at the Cass City First Presbyterian church spent Monday and part of Tuesday last week raking leaves and washing windows for senior citizen members of the church as a practical example of their lesson on helping others. They may resume the service this summer on a regular basis for church members in need.

$471 million valuation gets county board okay

The Tuscola County Board of Commissioners Tuesday approved the 1979 county equalization report.

The report shows a total county state equalized valuation of $471.782 million, compared to $411.248 million in 1978.

The report will now go to the state.

Approval came after the board met with township supervisors and the county Equalization Director Donald Graf.

Commissioner Royce Russell of Elmwood township said although there was some disagreement about the report, there were no major objections.

The board spent about an hour with Sue Maxwell, president of the Protective Animal Welfare Society of Tuscola county.

There was discussion about the means of disposal of animals in the new county animal shelter to be completed shortly. The conclusion, according to Russell, was that PAWS may go along with use of the proposed decompression chamber if properly administered, but still vehemently objects to the county paying Fred Hodgins of Howell to get rid of excess animals. He sells most of them to hospitals and medical schools for research.

Board Chairman Paul Nagy appointed a committee consisting of himself and Commissioners Ben Collon and Robert Russell to meet with Hodgins and Mrs. Maxwell to discuss the matter. The contract with Unit I of the Fraternal Order of Police was signed. The board approved the three-year pact with the 31 deputies, license examiners, clerk-matrons, cooks and records clerk March 20.

Writing of the contract in official legal language was the cause for the delay in signing.

With some variations, the contract calls for an 8 percent pay increase the first year, which is retroactive to July 1 of last year, and 7 percent in both the second and third years.

Grain bin damage $3,000

quired for any burning in rural areas except for trash being burned in a barrel.

And even when the burning is taking place in a barrel, Hartwick cautioned, it should be watched closely to guard against sparks escaping and starting a grass fire.

GRAIN BIN

Damage was estimated at $3,000 in the fire Friday on the Al Merchant farm, on Milligan Road, near Spence, which started about 12:30 p.m.

According to Fire Chief Jack Hartwick, some welding was being done on a bin that morning. Sparks apparently ignited grain dust in the bin leg, which smoldered for a couple of hours before igniting.

The fire was confined by firemen to the leg, with most of the estimated monetary loss because of the destruction of the rubber conveyor belt inside it, which had metal cups attached for carrying grain into the bin.

OTHER FIRES

Firemen just got back to the station about 1:40 p.m., only to be called to the Tony Aleksink residence on Milligan, west of Spence, because of a grass fire.

Aleksink had a permit to burn grass along a ditch-bank, Hartwick said. The fire got out of hand, but Aleksink managed to get it out by the time firemen arrived.

Immediately after that, firemen went to Kelly Road, west of Cemetery, to investigate a reported fire. It turned out to be smoke from a smokestack at the cement block plant.

A LITTLE CHRONICLE WANT AD

500 summer jobs for poverty youth

There will be 500 jobs available this summer in the upper Thumb for youth from low-income families.

The Youth Employment and Training Program (YETP) will be funded with $542,827 in federal Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) funds. The jobs will be with government agencies and non-profit organizations and will pay the minimum wage of $2.90 an hour. Age limitation will be 14-21, but any 14-15-year-olds hired will probably only receive "career orientation."

Applications for the summer jobs should be available from high school counselors in early May, with "those most in need" getting priority, according to consortium Executive Director Frank Lenard.

An effort will be made through the Michigan Employment Security Commission and Department of Social Services to reach school dropouts.

There was no such program last year, Lenard reminded the consortium administrative board at its meeting in Cass City last Thursday, because there weren't enough jobs available. Potential positions were filled with regular CETA workers and by some other youth programs.

With the new low wage restrictions on regular CETA-funded jobs virtually eliminating new positions, finding jobs for YETP youngsters to fill won't be a problem.

Of the total grant, $70,776 will go for administration. The board approved a contract with the Human Development Commission in Caro to operate the summer youth program, with an advance of $42,000 to hire staff. Three intake workers and seven job coaches will be hired for three months to screen applicants and work with those hired, with the rest of the administration being provided by present HDC staff.

THERE WAS CONTINUED discussion (from past meetings) of the $6,635 annual wage limitation per employee for regular CETA jobs, which virtually eliminates use of the money for government jobs. Most will now be used for job training.

The board decided to try to make an appointment for a delegation to meet with U.S. Sen. Donald Riegle while he was in Michigan for Easter vacation in a "last ditch" effort to try to get the limitation changed.

The new rules went into effect April 1 but only apply to new positions. Persons employed before then continue to receive the same wage they received before, which with few exceptions is higher than $6.635.

If they were employed prior to Sept. 30 of last year, however, their jobs end Sept. 30. Persons hired with CETA funds after that can only stay in the program a maximum of 18 months.

FOR THOSE LOSING their CETA jobs Sept. 30, it was announced, they will be able to receive job training as under new regulations. 10 percent of CETA Title II and VI jobs funds must be used for training.

Those with Title II jobs can receive training if they so choose even after their job ends. Those on Title VI must receive it while they are still employed.

Title II was considered as a job program for those economically disadvantaged even during a period of full employment. Title VI was considered a program for when the economy sours and unemployment increases.

Numerous new Title VI project requests from various governmental units were approved, but except for those programs already underway, the positions probably won't be filled because of the wage restrictions.

FOR PERSONS IN TITLE VI, their jobs could end before Sept. 30.

The federal government is withholding one-third of the funds from the rural areas of Michigan, pending submission of an acceptable equal employment opportunity plan.

The original plan, as to how the consortium and similar agencies in other areas will avoid discrimination in hiring, was rejected.

With almost two-thirds of its Title VI funds spent, Lenard said, layoffs will start soon unless the U.S. Department of Labor approves the new plan, which had to be submitted Monday by the Michigan Bureau of Employment and Training.

Lenard said new federal hiring guidelines could affect the consortium and all other agencies administering CETA funds, as to such as the percentage of people from minority groups that must be hired.

"You're getting a pretty good picture of how the program is being crushed," he told the board.

Vandals break door windows at farm store

Damage was estimated at $40-50 to broken door windows at Merchant Farm Supply, 4454 Doerr Road.

Owner Al Merchant reported the vandalism to Cass City police Tuesday morning, April 17.

Broken were two windows, one 18-by-18 inches, the other, 12-by-18 inches, plus a hole was poked through the door screen.

Sophie Peters of 5032 Schwegler Road reported to Cass City police last Thursday that two wheel covers were stolen from her car while it was parked Monday, April 16, at Veronica's Restaurant, 6234 Main Street. Replacement value was $40 each.

Cass City police recovered a stolen bicycle from an 11-year-old boy, who along with his mother said he had found it among some trees. Harlan Dickinson, 6391 Church Street, reported his daughter's bike missing Sunday. The new three-speed was valued at $100. It was returned to him by police.

Gary O'Connor of 2255 Elmwood Road, Elmwood township, reported to deputies a radiator was taken from a pickup parked on his property. In addition, the radiator hose was cut on a dump truck and the radiator damaged in an attempt to remove it.

Total loss was estimated at $150. O'Connor reported the loss April 10, it having occurred some time since April 5.

Gagetown man hurt

Nine-year-old treated after pedaling into car

A nine-year-old Cass City boy was treated and released from Hills and Dales General Hospital Sunday after he rode his bicycle into a car.

Sheriff's deputies reported that Matthew Scott Baldwin of 4601 Elmwood Road was exiting the driveway at his home, east of Cedar Run Road.

June Perlacki, 52, of Elmwood Road, told officers she was westbound and stopped when she saw the bicycle, but the boy continued on, running into the front of the car. The mishap took place at 7:15 p.m.

Mark J. Yost, 21, of 2118 E. Bay City-Forestville Road, Gagetown, was treated and released from Caro Community Hospital after an accident at 11 a.m. Friday.

Sheriff's deputies reported he was southbound on Jacob Road, south of Bay City-Forestville, when his motorcycle hit a soft spot on the gravel road. He lost control and the machine fell over.

At 12:05 a.m. Friday, according to deputies, Tamara Lynn Vatter, 16, of 6556 Pine Street, Cass City, was southbound on Dodge Road, north of Gilford Road, when she lost control of her car after hitting a depression in the gravel surface.

The car rolled over several times, landing in a ditch on the west side of the road.

One of two passengers, Phillip Hennen, 16, of Detroit, was reported to have sought treatment from a doctor.

Keith W. Pobanz, 18, of 6787 Houghton Street, Cass City, was ticketed by deputies on a charge of failure to stop within an assured clear distance ahead after a 6:30 p.m. accident Saturday.

Officers said he was northbound on Greenland Road, south of Elmwood Road, lost control when he increased speed while crossing a narrow bridge and struck the car on the north side that was waiting for him to cross.

Driver of the struck vehicle was Thomas M. Kostanko, 34, of 6909 Pringle Road, Cass City.

At 12:01 p.m. April 17, Thomas A. Reehl, 35, of 4643 State Street, Gagetown, backed into a car exiting a parking lot in that community. Driver of the other car was Irene Volz, 39, of 6598 Third Street, Gagetown.

Reehl's vision was blocked, deputies said, by the vans parked on both sides of him, thus he couldn't see the car approaching.

At 5 p.m. last Wednesday, Wayne R. Wilcox, 36, of 5855 Cemetery Road, Kingston, pulled into the Auto Haven at Washington and State Streets, Kingston, to get some gas. He turned to miss a bicycle parked next to the building and his vehicle knocked over a gas pump. Deputies investigated.

At 1 p.m. Friday, Caro state police reported, Pat Richard, 25, of Bay City, westbound on M-81 near Wahjamega, stopped suddenly to avoid hitting the car in front, which had no brake lights and had stopped without warning.

Gary S. King, 20, Clothier Road, Deford, who was following the two vehicles, then drove off the north side of the road to avoid hitting the Richard auto.

Cass City police reported that at 5 p.m. Saturday, Jerome Root Jr., 55, of 4942 Schwegler Road, northbound on Brooker Street, was stopped at Main, waiting for oncoming traffic to pass.

Cass City police said he decided his vehicle was protruding too far out onto Main, started to back up and backed into the truck behind him, driven by Lewis Tibbits, 36, of 6317 Houghton Street.

Limits off

As of Monday morning, weight restrictions on roads were lifted. They had been in effect since March 7.

ing of the zoning ordinance and if they have been vacant no more than six months.

The committee surveyed 45 downtown business owners. Of 42 who returned the survey form, 35 supported a change, three wanted the present ordinance retained and four gave no opinion.

Those responding reported they have a total of 25 apartments, of which 21 are occupied, but committee member Dorothy Stahlbaum, a downtown business owner, feels there are more than that.

The village planning consultants, Vilican, Leman and Associates, will be asked to review the situation prior to the next meeting. Then, if the council approves allowing apartments, village attorney Clinton House will have to write a change in the ordinance. A public hearing will then be held before the council votes on it.

OTHER BUSINESS

The on-again, off-again rebuilding of Doerr Road from M-81 to Garfield Street and Garfield from Doerr to the railroad tracks is apparently on again. The village's application for $180,000 in federal funds was approved by the state, only there was no money available. Now the state has received $1 million, so the village may get a piece of the pie.

If it does, the council has to decide how to finance the $55,000 local share, with establishment of a special assessment district being mentioned as a possibility. Councilman Jim Ware explained there are other streets in greater need of rebuilding, but none of them qualified for the special federal program.

The parks committee recommended for now that there be no restrictions on which groups can sell refreshments from portable stands in the park, provided they have health department approval. Vendors selling for profit need a peddler's license from the village, but it was unclear from reading of the applicable ordinance whether they can sell in the park. The Rotary Club had asked at the March meeting for permission to put a refreshment stand in the park this summer.

A resolution asking the Tuscola County Board of Commissioners to hold a public hearing was approved on the request of Thumb National Bank and Trust to have its property on the west side annexed to the village. The hearing will be at 2 p.m. May 22.

Residents will be asked via a survey form to be printed in the Chronicle, to state their views on a possible ban on open burning in residential areas.

Clean-up days will be May 9-10.

The village will buy Christmas decorations for $3,640 from Bronner Christmas Decorations of Frankenmuth.

Portions of Ale Street and Huron Drive where the pavement has broken up completely will be paved later this year when an asphalt paving contractor is in town.

Many area residents help at Provincial House

Volunteers important to facility

They visit the Provincial House skilled nursing facility in Cass City as often as they can, offering their time and companionship and making people happy.

"They" are volunteers — men and women, young and old — who manage to find a few hours every month to devote to residents at Provincial House, 4782 Hospital Drive.

During National Volunteer Week, April 22-28, Provincial House staff and residents are joining the rest of the nation in recognizing the achievements of its volunteers, some of whom have special skills to share with patients.

Maggie Cole of Cass City, for example, works with residents on craft projects held daily as part of the facility's activities program.

Others, like Earl Engelhardt of Sebawaing, entertain with their musical talents. Engelhardt, an accordion player, visits Provincial House once a month to present an afternoon musical program.

A singing group from Decker, the Dorman Sisters, also visits monthly and delights an enthusiastic audience with its vocal repertoire.

Just recently, a group of women from the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in Owendale began coming to Provincial House on a weekly basis. Writing letters for residents who are unable to do so themselves, and reading to those with poor eyesight, the women are providing a valuable service, said Provincial House Activities Director Mary Vatter.

"Sometimes they write letters, read Scripture or just visit several patients in their rooms," Mrs. Vatter said.

"I wish I had the time to sit down with each resident individually as often as I would like to," she continued. "Some of them don't have families of their own who can visit regularly, and in those cases volunteers are needed even more."

Other church groups, ministers and Boy and Girl Scouts also volunteer their time.

Provincial House employees visit with patients and assist in any way possible those who need help, Mrs. Vatter explained; however, sometimes it's even nicer if a volunteer — someone not connected with the facility — wants to get involved.

"It shows the residents that there's somebody caring for them besides their families and the people here at Provincial House. It shows them that somebody cared enough to stop and visit."

One of the Owendale church women, Reva Russell, said that she has been enjoying her weekly visits to Provincial House. Recently, she spent part of an afternoon with resident Louise Graves, reading to her and carrying on an animated conversation after they discovered that they had mutual friends.

Others who want to become volunteers at Provincial House should contact Mrs. Vatter at 872-2174. "Community involvement is one of the most-needed things in a nursing home," she explained.

With assistance from volunteers, special events like summer picnics, ice cream socials, shopping trips, concerts and even camping trips have been made possible in the past.

Volunteers' individual expertise is always an asset when special activities like baking, sewing, dance classes, conversation groups, birthday and holiday celebrations and sing-alongs are held.

In fact, Mrs. Vatter said, just about any activity is more enjoyable for the residents if there are volunteers on hand. "We can always find something for volunteers to do. No matter how big or small the activity they're involved in is, it's very important to us."

4-H ACTIVITIES

Gardening for kids

By Bernard Jardot

No child is too young to experience the pleasure of gardening. But, gardening projects should be geared to a child's age level and capabilities so there is a good chance of success.

The sowing of a few seeds or setting out some plants can give children the feeling they are helping create the family garden. The best lessons are learned by doing.

As soon as they show an interest, encourage youngsters to have a small garden plot of their own. Help them choose vegetables or flowers that have easy-to-plant seeds and mature quickly so they won't have to wait too long to see the results of their efforts.

One good way for young people to learn about horticulture is through 4-H gardening projects and activities. The 4-H garden project will help the members acquire the knowledge and skills they need to plan and care for a vegetable or flower garden, lawn or commercial horticulture crop.

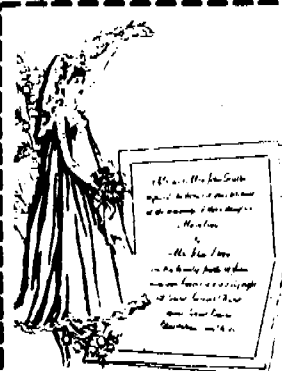

The program is educational and fun for girls and boys no matter where they live. Contact the 4-H office for more information, phone 673-3161 in Caro.

Artistry in glass: Richard Ritter uses glass as his canvas

By Mike Eliasohn

Glass to most people is something you drink out of or look through.

To Richard Ritter, glass is art, it is a means to create and on a down to earth level, it is the way he earns his living.

To say that he makes bowls and vases and paperweights out of glass is too simple. It is more fitting to say that he paints, but uses glass for his "paint."

Layer upon multi-colored layer. Designs and colors seemingly float in a sea of crystal, all in the mundane shape of a vase or bowl or paperweight.

Drive past Ritter's ramshackle place on Hoadley Road in Greenleaf township and one would never know it is the home of a nationally known artist. He does his creating in a studio out back, in an expansion of what apparently started out as a chicken coop.

He and his wife, Jan, moved there in December, 1977. The studio, though still not completed, was finished enough for him to start work there last August. Son Richard III came into the world seven months ago.

Originally from Novi, Ritter, 38, started out a commercial artist doing advertisements.

He did that for six years, until 1968. He then enrolled at the Society of Arts and Crafts in Detroit (now the Center for Creative Studies), starting out in jewelry making.

He made jewelry for a time, but when he started taking classes in glass design he found his calling.

He opened his first glass studio in Birmingham in 1970.

IF THE ARTIST APPEARS to have gone through stages -- from commercial art to jewelry to glass -- he admits it and that he might some day go on to something else. "I can't say, 'This is it.'"

Teaching has been an integral part of his career. He has taught at four art schools, including the Center for Creative Studies, and one year taught commercial art, jewelry making and glassblowing.

In 1972, he went to the Penland School of Crafts in Penland, N.C., to be an artist-in-residence. He was to stay there two years, but instead stayed there until his return to Michigan in 1977.

While in North Carolina, he met his wife, Jan. Originally from Pennsylvania, she is a stained glass artist, but hasn't practiced her craft since the birth of their son. The couple plans to build a studio for her to resume her work in the old barn on their property.

They live on 80 acres Ritter bought 10 years ago, when his brother was living across the road.

"I'll never go back to the city," he said, although admitting sometimes the isolated setting is a little too isolated.

HIS TECHNIQUE IS NOT something that can be learned in a few weeks' time -- some of it he has developed himself -- so it is even harder to describe.

Although most glassblowers melt down broken glass for their product, Ritter starts with the most basic of materials, sand. It's the purest he can get, which comes from Zanesville, Ohio, and he buys several tons of it at a time.

Making his own glass, though obviously more time consuming, gives him more control over his colors and more of them. "I'm really into colors, so that gives me my own pallet," he explained.

Much of his glass is made into thin rods of different colors. He then stacks them inside a cylinder into a design or pattern. The rods are fused together by pouring hot glass over them, then sticking the whole thing in the oven.

While still hot, the assemblage can be stretched out, while the design remains intact. The completed column is known as millifiori, which is Italian for "thousand flowers." Once cold, he uses an electric saw to cut the column into slices. Each slice, or "cookie," as he calls them, retains the same design.

He can also make the designs by forcing hot glass through a die in the shape of, for instance, a star, then when cooled, dipping it into hot glass.

A VASE, BOWL, PAPERWEIGHT or whatever starts out as a molten piece of glass on the end of the hollow blowpipe. He rolls the glass on a hard surface to get a basic shape, dips it into other colors of glass, adds his millifiori, or can dab on other colors in hot glass. The layers build up as he dips it into the pots of molten glass. He has a choice of four colors at a time, plus crystal.

If the finished object is to be some type of container, blowing on the blowpipe makes it hollow.

Close to the end, the piece can still take several forms. A small opening and it's a vase. Make the opening wider and it becomes a bowl. Spin the blowpipe and the glass on the end becomes a plate.

It's a back and forth, up and down process. Heat the glass, shape it. Add the millifiori. Dip the object into another color of molten glass. Shape it. Reheat it. Add some more. The artist must work fast for the glass hardens quickly.

When he's done, the object goes into the annealer, where it gently cools over a 24 hour period. Otherwise, the object would shatter easily.

SOMETIMES HE SHATTERS his pieces deliberately. Ritter has a good enough reputation in the art world that some people would buy one of his works because his name was engraved on it.

But if he isn't satisfied with what he has created, he won't sell it. Besides, he adds, if he occasionally sold a bad piece, "then you wouldn't have a reputation."

The advance planning -- for some of his intricate pieces, he first makes a drawing of what he wants to do -- the glass making, creating the millifiori, what he calls the bench work (creating the actual piece), then the grinding and polishing takes time and effort and concentration.

As a result, Ritter's creations don't come cheap. A paperweight or egg shaped "knickknack" might go for $45. A large and intricate vase can sell for as much as $1,000.

Ritter only goes to three shows a year, in Winter Park, Fla., Ann Arbor and Troy. Most of his works are sold in galleries in several states. Twenty of his objects were recently shipped to a gallery in Japan for sale.

Some people buy his works as an investment and some of what he has produced has already increased in value. Some buy them simply to have a beautiful object.

If some people want to use his beautiful objects for functional purposes, that's okay with Ritter. "A bowl, I think, is obviously to be used."

GLASS BLOWING -- Until Ritter starts blowing on the blowpipe, the glass is solid.

ROLLING the still soft glass on a hard surface early in the creation process gives it the basic shape.

HELPING HAND -- Wife Jan assists Richard Ritter in applying a decorative design in glass to the object he is making. Ritter also employs a neighbor youth, Jerry Cooper, as a part-time "third hand."

SHAPING -- While the glass is still soft, the opening is shaped. A small opening and shaping makes it a vase; a bigger opening, it's a bowl. Spin the blowpipe enough and it becomes a plate.

Miners found gold along banks of Cass River

Presumably, B.A. Elliott and Sam Wheaton never got rich from their mining, but the banks of the Cass River weren't a place one would expect to find a gold mine. They did find gold, though, along with graphite, zinc, copper and lead, enough to make it worth their while to take leases on several pieces of land along the north shore of the Cass River, southwest of Cass City.

Jack Esau, president of the Cass City Area Historical Society, said the area was east of the Dodge Road bridge.

When the Detroit News wrote about the pair in 1933, their mining with pick and shovel was a spare time activity.

"One can never tell, they say," the article said. "The outcroppings might lead to rich veins. But they'll not be disappointed if they fail. They're not expecting too much and enjoy their 'hobby.'"

At the time of the article -- it appeared in the Dec. 10 issue, Elliott was 50. He was a rural mail carrier covering a 31-mile route out of Cass City. When the roads were bad in winter, he had to cover half the route on foot.

Wheaton, 75, was a farmer, but had "been around." Twenty-five years earlier, he had spent some time prospecting in the cobalt area of Canada and found a block of mica "big as a house" and weighing several hundred tons.

A geologist he brought to the site confirmed it was solid mica and found a buyer. The deal, for a "fantastic sum," fell through because Wheaton suspected he was being tricked out of the greater share of the profits. As far as he knew 25 years later, the mica was still there.

Wheaton and Elliott found graphite, mixed with mica, in two places in Tuscola county, but not in quantities to make it worthwhile to develop their claim. Samples of the rock containing the minerals were sent to Washington to be assayed.

Community booster

Calka continues civic commitments

Editor's note: this is one of a series sponsored by the Cass City Chamber of Commerce about community boosters who are members of the organization.

B. A. Calka arrived in Cass City in 1946 after serving 4 years in the Navy to operate the Cass City Eat Shop.

The restaurant was an immediate success, the first of many successful business ventures for Calka. In 1952 he entered the real estate field with United Farm Agency. Six years later he formed the B. A. Calka Real Estate Agency.

It grew to cover most of the Thumb and then the offices were curtailed as Calka decided to slow up his hectic pace a bit.

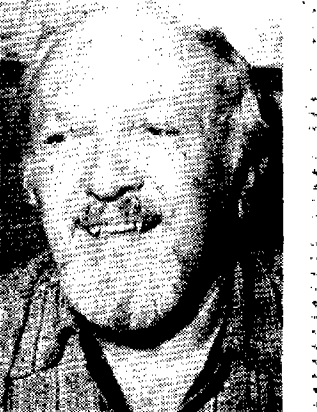

Recently, Calka reopened an office in Caro which is run by his daughter, Carla, who recently joined the firm.

The hectic business pace has not kept Calka from an active part in community affairs. He is a director of the planning commission and of the Hills and Dales Medical Center. He now serves as treasurer of the Hills and Dales General Hospital. He is a member and past president of the Lions Club, Chamber of Commerce and Upper Thumb Board of Realtors. Calka served many years on the village council and has been an active promoter in many community fund raising drives.

Calka has been named "Realtor of the Year" by the Michigan Real Estate Association and currently serves as a director of the Cass City State Bank.

His wife, Pauline, serves as secretary-receptionist for the firm. The couple has five daughters.

Bulldogs drop 2 to Tiger 9

Owen-Gage started its North Central D League season on the wrong foot Monday, losing both ends of a double header at Carsonville-Port Sanilac by identical 3-2 scores.

Dave Regnier was winning pitcher in both games. In the first, he struck out 12 as he went the distance. He gave up one walk and four hits.

In the second, he relieved Pat Gallagher, who pitched the first 4 1-3 innings. The two struck out four, walked four and gave up four hits.

The first game went seven innings (six is normal), with the Tigers scoring the winning run in the bottom of the seventh on a throwing error by Pete Klemkowsky. He was the losing pitcher, striking out nine and giving up four walks and two hits as he went the distance.

Al Haag had two hits for the Bulldogs, both singles. Carsonville won the game on only two singles.

Losing pitcher in the second game for Owen-Gage was Dick Glidden, who pitched all five innings and struck out two, walked six and gave up two hits.

Mark McDonald was top Bulldog batsman with a double and a single. The Tigers again won on only two singles.

The loss drops Owen-Gage to 2-4 overall. Carsonville is 6-0.

Next game for Owen-Gage, their first at home, is Monday against Akron-Fairgrove, starting at 4 p.m.

LAKER GAME

The Bulldogs split at Laker High School Saturday in a non-league contest, winning the first game, 6-5, and getting shellacked in the second, 11-4.

Sophomore Jim Kuhr started the first game for Owen-Gage and struck out two, walked three and gave up three walks and two hits in his two innings.

Pete Klemkowsky went the final four innings and was the winning pitcher, striking out four and giving up one walk, four runs and seven hits.

Aaron Deering went the first four innings for Lakers. He struck out five and gave up two walks, one run and five hits. Relieving him for the final two innings was Gary Binder, the losing pitcher, who struck out one and gave up five runs and four hits.

Jeff Hallock broke the game open for the Bulldogs in the top of the sixth with a home run to give his team a two-run lead. He also had a single. Doug Laurie had three singles.

Errors spelled the difference in the second game. Losing pitcher for the Bulldogs was Jim Kuhr, who gave up all 11 runs, but six of those were scored by Lakers on two Owen-Gage errors. He struck out four and gave up four walks and nine hits.

Freshman Randy Rada-baugh went the final 1 2-3 innings for Owen-Gage striking out three and giving up one walk and two hits.

Winning pitcher was Don Schafer, who went the final five innings, giving up one walk, one run and six hits. He struck out five. Gary Binder pitched the first inning for Lakers, struck out one and gave up three runs, one walk and one hit.

Jim Hendershot had two singles for the losers and Kirk Carolan hit a home run. For Lakers, Todd Dubey hit two doubles and a home run. Aaron Deering had a double and two singles.

O-G girls power to 2 wins

Host Carsonville-Port Sanilac was the victim Monday as Owen-Gage began its defense of the North Central D League softball crown.

The Bulldogs won the first game, 12-4, and the second, 25-5.

Jan Rapson was on the mound for the victors in the first game and only gave up one hit as she went the distance. Lori Carter was the losing pitcher.

Laurie Andrakowicz led Owen-Gage with a triple.

In the second game, Andrakowicz, Becky Howard and Tammy Kain combined to pitch a no-hitter. Losing pitcher was C. Cahoon, who went the distance.

Howard led the Bulldogs' 15-hit assault with three home runs and a single. Robin Sullivan added two doubles and a single, Julie Andrakowicz had two singles and a double, sister Laurie connected for two singles and Julie Enderle and Carol Goslin each had a triple.

The Bulldogs play host at Gagetown Friday to non-league Caro, starting at 4 p.m., and Monday host Akron-Fairgrove.

Fiddlers in Port Hope Saturday

The Original Michigan Fiddlers Association is sponsoring a fiddlers jam, boree and old-time square dance Saturday in Port Hope.

To be held at the Old Red Church, the jamboree will get underway at 2 p.m. The dance will start at 7 p.m.

Fiddlers from all over the state will take turns throughout the afternoon, playing favorite tunes. In the evening, a live band will provide music for old-fashioned square dancing. Anyone who plays a fiddle or other non-electrified musical instrument is invited to bring it and play along.
