

Delay could be costly

Sewage plant building won't start until 1980

Thanks to bureaucratic red tape at the state and federal levels, construction of the Cass City sewage treatment plant improvements won't get underway until next year, the village council was told Tuesday evening.

The delay could prove costly for village taxpayers. Another delay will be in sending of summer tax bills, due to the legislature's slow pace in implementing the provisions of the Headlee Amendment. That may force the village to borrow money until tax revenue starts coming in.

Also revealed were the results of the unsentimental survey of citizens' sentiment regarding open burning. A 5-1 majority favor allowing it to continue.

Voters in March approved a $1.2 million bonding proposal to finance the village's 20 percent share of the estimated $6 million cost for improvement and expansion of the sewage plant.

The timetable, which even then was behind the original schedule, called for construction bids to be opened by May 15, construction to possibly start a month later, and completion by June 1, 1981.

But with the state putting up 5 percent of the cost and the federal government, 75 percent, assurance has to come from those two sources that they will put up their share before bids can be taken.

The Water Quality Division of the Michigan Department of Natural Resources has finally given its okay, but, it was reported Tuesday, didn't get the last of the required documents to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency until May 2.

Federal officials have now indicated to village officials that they will try to get the project approved by June 30. It will then take at least 60 days to get bid specifications ready, potential bidders will need more than 30 days to review them and after bids are opened, it's expected to take 120 days for them to be reviewed, due to the complicated nature of the project, and for them to be awarded.

That means it's 1980, and with construction costs going up every month due to inflation, the $6 million estimate may not be enough.

If the worst happens, village President Lambert Althaver said after the meeting, there are various options. They include trying to reduce the cost by eliminating something from the project, rejecting the bids and seeking new ones and seeking additional bonding authority -- hence higher millage -- from voters.

Meanwhile, another problem has developed. The final settling tank at the present plant has been out of operation since early December because high water level and a spring underneath caused the tank to float, then tilt.

Efforts to float it back into position by pumping sand, cement and lime underneath had to be suspended because of cold weather. Since then, small cracks have developed in the 40-foot diameter tank, making it impossible to repair.

An effort will be made, Althaver said, to get building of a new tank incorporated into the bidding process for the sewage plant project. Original plans called for the present tank to be used in the renovated plant.

TAXES

Normally, village tax bills would be in the mail by June 10.

The state, however, has put a moratorium on municipalities sending out their summer tax bills until the legislature passes legislation needed to implement provisions of the Headlee amendment.

Although Cass City is in better shape financially than many cities and villages, Althaver said, there may only be enough funds to keep the village operating an additional month without new tax revenue coming in. That would mean the village may have to get a short term loan to get by until it can start collecting taxes.

BURNING BAN

Utilities Committee Chairman Nat Tuttle reported on results of the mail-in survey printed in the Chronicle to gather citizen opinion on whether open burning should continue to be allowed in residential areas.

Of the 131 replies received -- "I didn't think we'd get this many," he said -- 121 wanted to see open burning continue.

Some did suggest the practice be confined to daylight hours to cut down on having to smell smoldering trash at night.

Tuttle didn't hide his own feelings. "I'd like to see no burning at all."

The matter was referred back to the public utilities committee for more study, including present trash pick-up in the village and the cost if all burning were banned.

STREETS

Andrew Barnes Jr. of Cass City was awarded the bid for construction of curb and gutter on Houghton Street between West and Brooker and Downing and Brooker Streets between Main and Church. They will all be repaved next year.

His bid was $13,675. The only other bid received was that of Lasky Construction Co., Bad Axe, for $15,827.

In order to save the trees on Brooker, the rebuilt street will only be 32 feet wide instead of the originally planned 40 feet.

Before Doerr Road from Main to Garfield and Garfield from Doerr to the railroad tracks can be rebuilt, the council must pass a new ordinance dealing with establishment of special assessment districts in order to have affected property owners pay for curb and gutter along the route.

Prior to a change by the legislature, the village had followed procedures spelled out in the state law for establishment of special assessment districts.

In order that the project won't be delayed, a special meeting was set for 8 p.m. Tuesday, June 5, to approve the new ordinance. A public hearing will then be held at the regular meeting, June 26, to hear from affected property owners.

Street Committee Chairman Jim Ware reported the state highway department is recommending that parking be banned on Main Street for 1,200 feet from the railroad tracks west to the village limits. It prefers that instead of the village-suggested alternative of constructing third lanes for cars turning from Main onto Doerr Road and Comment Drive.

OTHER ITEMS

The swimming pool will be open as soon as the weather is warm enough, possibly by this week end.

Advertising for bids to be opened June 26 was authorized for extension of the storm sewer, water and sewage lines, plus leveling, in the village industrial park.

MOBILE HOME FIRE -- Firemen search for the cause of the fire that resulted in substantial damage last Thursday to the mobile home of David and Judy Keller in Huntsville Trailer Park.

Fire causes heavy damage to trailer

A fire last Thursday evening left a family of three at least temporarily homeless. The fire in Huntsville Trailer Park resulted in severe damage to the mobile home of David and Judy Keller.

The couple have a 2-year-old daughter and are temporarily living with Mrs. Keller's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Don Tracy, on Cumber Road, Uby.

Elkland Township Fire Chief Jack Hartwick said cause of the fire was traced to a faulty power cable where it entered the electric box, located in the utility room of the 12-by-60 foot mobile home.

According to Keller's mother, Mrs. Carl Keller of Patterson Road, Uby, all that possibly is salvageable from the mobile home is some living room furniture. Despite repeated washings, the smell of smoke still could not be removed from their clothes.

The couple was waiting until an insurance adjuster inspected their home, to learn whether it would be rebuildable.

Mrs. Keller said her son and daughter-in-law are in need of pots and pans and probably other items. People who may be able to help can call her at 658-8409 or the Tracys at 872-4049.

David Keller was the only one home when the fire started about 7 p.m. Firemen were there less than an hour.

Firemen were called to the Richard Mika residence on Green Road, north of Cass City Road, at 11:15 Saturday morning.

A piece of burning cardboard in the fireplace had drifted up, became lodged in the chimney and started smoking. It burned up before firemen arrived.

Farmers' market in Cass City?

A downtown farmers' market in Cass City?

If there's enough interest by farmers and gardeners, it's very likely one will be established here this year.

The possibility was discussed at a breakfast meeting Wednesday, May 23, of the Retail Committee of the Chamber of Commerce.

Nothing elaborate is being proposed, according to downtown merchant Dorothy Stahlbaum.

The market would be located in the village parking lot behind the Gamble's store and would start once the produce is in season.

There won't be any booths. Sales will be out of pickup truck tailgates, car trunks or from tables, if the sellers choose to bring them. There won't be any charge to participants for use of the space.

The proposed market day will be Thursdays, presumably in the mornings when many merchants feel is becoming the primary shopping day for housewives, Mrs. Stahlbaum explained.

The idea, she said, came from a merchant who suggested it as a one-shot deal

It was then realized that by then, many crops would be out of season. The only practical way to sell a wide variety of produce would be to establish the market on a weekly basis, from summer into fall.

Whether the market is established depends on whether there are farmers and gardeners with goods to sell.

Those interested in selling at such a market should notify Gamble's store owner Mike Papp.

Rain stays away for observance

The threat of rain was only a threat as the weather stayed dry for the Memorial Day parade and service in Cass City Monday.

The parade route led down Main Street to the Elkland township cemetery for the memorial service. The invocation, address and benediction were given by Rev. Robert Taylor of the Cass City Missionary church.

The Cass City High School Band, directed by George Bushong, played the National Anthem and a lone member played "Taps."

Mrs. Lilah Wilhelm gave a prayer while fellow American Legion Auxiliary member Mrs. Frankie Anker placed a memorial wreath. The American Legion provided the firing squad. Master of ceremonies was Jack Esau.

Idle thought. Did I miss them or am I right in assuming that not one veteran of Viet Nam marched in Monday's Memorial Day parade in Cass City?

Jack Esau kept his streak going Monday. It was the 21st straight year he has been master of ceremonies at the Memorial Day services at Elkland township cemetery.

Never during all those years has it rained during the service. (But it has been plenty moist immediately before and after.)

First hand energy report.

Ex-Cass Cityans Ivan and Gloriagay Vader are back in their Caseville home after spending the winter in Ontario, Calif., about 30 miles from Los Angeles.

The gas crisis started there in late April, Vader said, when he stopped by the Chronicle Friday. He and his wife were in only one long gas line before they left. It was about a block long and they had to wait 45 minutes before getting to the pumps. Lines were longer in the more populous Los Angeles area.

Once they left California they had no trouble getting gas. The Vaders paid as much as 95.9 cents per gallon for regular just before crossing the California border and as little as 72.9 in Missouri.

The Haire Net

Rarely does the president of General Motors appear in the public spotlight. Unlike his counterparts at Ford and Chrysler who are nearly household figures in Michigan.

That's changing a little with the new GM boss Elliott "Pete" Estes. He participated in a question and answer session with Energy Czar Brock Adams over public television Monday.

It's easy to see how he climbed the corporate ladder to the top. He's tough, knowledgeable and articulate.

He accuses Adams of making a political statement when he asks for a "re-invented car." He also says that GM with its new X-cars is producing everyday a car more efficient than the government's prototypes that cost millions to build.

Estes forcefully hammers home salient points on the GM and auto industry program today.

Adams doesn't come away from this fray looking like a dummy either. He keeps pointing out that other industrial countries are doing better in average mileage. He keeps hammering away on the oil shortfall in the years ahead. He keeps saying that new products, new metals, new ideas are needed to meet this crisis.

Estes answers by talking about the turbine engine and the electric car. He says that there will be an electric car in production within a very few years.

Adams says that car development has been an evolutionary process and what is needed now is a revolutionary process.

Estes points out that redesigning the car has been an expensive process, costing $1 billion for each mile per gallon increase. That's the easy increase. From now on, he estimates, it will cost about $1 billion for each tenth of a mile increase.

If by now you are beginning to ask just where does the bulk of the blame lie, you are coming away from all of this the way I did.

With admiration for the job that the auto industry has already done and a sneaking suspicion that more could have been accomplished. More, that is, if the profit picture were ignored more.

There's a feeling, too, that if Adams hadn't been there prodding the industry that it would never have gone as far as it has in increasing gas mileage.

As a staunch advocate of the free enterprise system, the debate left me agreeing that the government role of devil's advocate is the proper one.

Regardless of the drawbacks of the program think what it would have been snafued into by now if the government had stepped into an active production role.

In short, the program today is far from perfect but it could have been in much worse condition than it is.

There will be cars to drive and energy to run them at the turn of the century.

What they may look like and run on is anything but clear.

"If It Fitz..."

On Hayakawa's solution

By Jim Fitzgerald

Sen. S. I. Hayakawa of California has come up with a brilliant idea for dealing with the gasoline crunch. We should all be grateful for his suggestion which, if followed to its logical conclusion, could not only solve motor-ing problems, but could also bring the beloved Adolf Hitler out of retirement.

"Let the gasoline prices go up," Sen. Hayakawa suggested. "The important thing is a lot of the poor don't need gas because they're not working."

Hayakawa added that wealthy people could continue to drive Cadillacs regardless of gas prices because "that's what it means to be wealthy."

The marvelous thing about the senator's idea, even beyond its unassailable logic, is its extreme flexibility. Ironically, a let-the-prices-go-up edict, if sternly enforced, could solve inflation problems in areas far removed from the freeways.

No one can argue with the fact that people with no jobs have nowhere to go. No one ever drives anywhere except to work. So, as Hayakawa wisely pointed out, it won't hurt jobless people to price gas beyond the reach of their savings accounts or welfare checks.

The same thing can be said about retired people living on fixed incomes. They don't have jobs, so they also have nowhere to go. What do they care if they can't afford to fill their tanks?

To carry Hayakawa's brilliant reasoning a few steps further, let the price of clothing go up. People without jobs don't need clothes.

They don't go anywhere, so it can't hurt them to sit around home naked. If they can't afford fuel oil, they can keep warm by running in place. This would make up for the exercise they're missing because they're too shy to go bowling in the nude.

Let the price of food go up, too. Food provides energy. Energy is what people burn at work. People without jobs don't need energy. If they get hungry, they can eat garbage. A generous government could subsidize their diets by ordering garbage collectors to stay out of poor neighborhoods, thus allowing the jobless people to keep all their garbage.

Hayakawa's let-the-prices-go-up philosophy could be extended in a more limited fashion to people who do have jobs but are extremely low paid. It could even include middle-income families with more than 1.5 children.

These semi-paid people do need gasoline to get to work, and food to provide energy to expend for their meager salaries. But once they've purchased gas and groceries they can't afford anything else. So there's no reason the price of clothing shouldn't continue to climb.

An enlightened bureaucracy can establish guidelines by which poorly paid workers are allowed to wear no clothing on the job. They can be employed in bowling alleys. This would be a doubleheader of efficiency.

Not only will the cost of pants go up without hurting semi-paid workers. Also, completely unemployed people won't mind bowling nude in heated recreation centers where the hired help is equally nude. This will put physical exercise where it belongs and eliminate structural damage previously caused to flimsy housing by widespread running in place.

As indicated earlier, Sen. Hayakawa's solution must be sternly enforced if its full potential is to be realized. It is important that authorities make certain that all jobless and semi-paid people stay home and/or nude and/or hungry at all times. This is the only way to assure the Cadillac drivers will always have enough gasoline, food and clothing to give them sufficient knowledge of what it means to be wealthy.

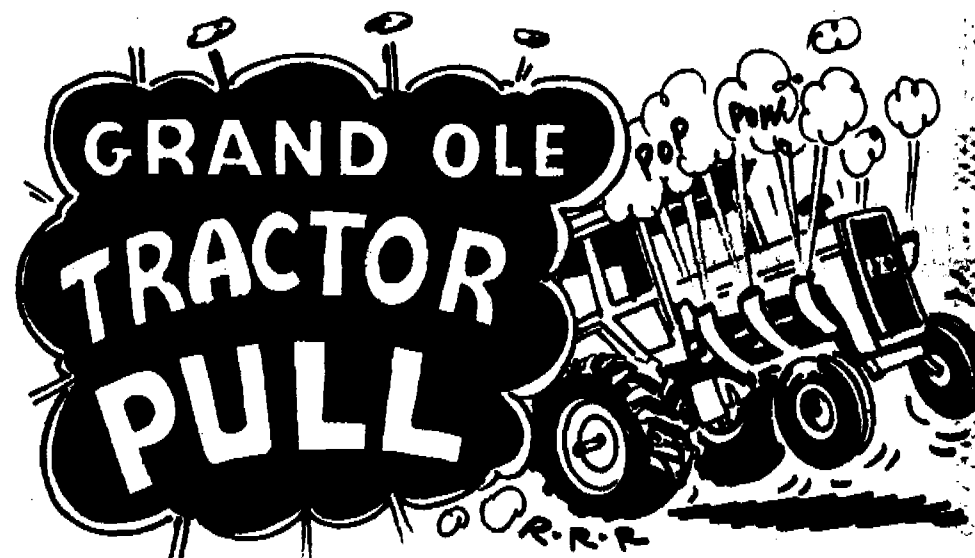

It will be a great aid to law enforcement if a quick, simple system of identification is established. Perhaps an appropriate symbol could be tattooed on the forehead of all jobless and semi-paid people. Maybe a zero.

This is just a suggestion. Implementation of the Hayakawa program should be left to a person with extensive experience along those lines. If he is still alive, Adolf Hitler would be a wise choice. But if Hitler is as dead as J. Edgar Hoover, I suggest the job should go to no one other than Sen. S. I. Hayakawa himself.

Good
skates

By Mike Eliasohn

It happens first in California, or something like that.

Hula hoops, hot rods, Frisbees. Name the fad and chances are it started in California.

Almost all television programs are made in California, thus if the Golden State has its way, we will all be "laid back" some day, sitting in our hot tubs, watching life roll by.

I thus find two of the newest California fads disturbing. I also think it is more than coincidence that both fads have sprung up at the same time.

The first fad is talked about almost every night on the television news. It's called "waiting in line to get gasoline."

The other fad is roller skating. In case you haven't heard, roller skating is in, in, in.

Not the old clamp-on-your-shoes-where-is-the-key type. The new shoe type ones have colorful, long wearing polyurethane plastic wheels. Sometimes in place of the conventional brown, black or white leather, the skates are attached to what look like jogging shoes.

Skating has become big, big business. In addition to the sale of skates, skating clothes, skate rentals and roller rinks, there are skating discos, books being written, a skating magazine, skating movies being made and advertisements featuring skaters.

In the hotbed of skating, Venice, Calif., housewives roll down supermarket aisles and skate their way to the laundromat. On week ends, thousands of skaters take over the 3-mile long asphalt "boardwalk" along the beach.

Strange, isn't it, that all this is going on while there is a gasoline shortage.

It is impossible to confirm, but I strongly suspect there is a conspiracy.

After all, the roller skating industry has the most to gain by a gasoline shortage. If people can't get gas to drive to work, then they can skate there.

If there is some gas, but not a lot, they can park their car at the gas station at night, so it will be first in line when the station opens in the morning. They put on their skates, roll home, then in the morning, skate back just before the station opens.

"Aha!" you say. The roller skate industry might be a multi-million dollar industry, but the oil business is multi-billion. Why would an elephant consort with a mouse?

Simple. By getting more people onto skates, the oil companies sell less gas, which they can then stockpile until prices go up.

Face it, roller skating is a fad. In a couple of years, when all but the fanatics get tired of skating and want to go back to their cars, the price of gasoline will have jumped to $1.50-$2 a gallon. In the meantime, the oil companies aren't completely out in the cold.

The plastic used for skate wheels is made from petroleum, plus there are motorized skates (30 miles per hour and 220 miles per gallon).

In other energy news, from the Clinton County News: Merle Green is a co-owner of the largest dairy herd in Michigan, 4,000 cows, which "produce" 11 million pounds of manure annually.

Green is also a member of the Ovid-Elsie School Board and his farm is close to the high school.

What does that have to do with energy? He and the school administration are exploring the possibility of building a methane generation plant. The manure from Green's cows would be used to generate the methane, which would be burned to heat the school.

The digested sludge that remains after the methane is produced is rich in nutrients and could be sold as fertilizer.

In Scottish dancing

Local girls have
'fling' at festival

Four girls from the Cass City area had their fling Sunday -- before an audience at the Alma Highland Festival.

Participating in the Scottish dancing competition were Amy Doerr, 16, Julie Groth, 15, and sisters Beth, 9, and Katha Cleland, 13. The four have only been dancing since February, when the Cass City Community Education class began.

The 10-week class was taught by Cynthia Blair, a ballet and Scottish dancing instructor and substitute school teacher from Flint. Six students took the once-a-week class. The four girls decided to continue their dancing after their class ended.

They made their public debut last Wednesday before the audience at the Girl Scout Court of Awards at the intermediate school.

Miss Blair and two of her pupils from Flint also took part in the program, as well as her mother, Esther Leuenberger, who did the narration.

As was explained during the program and as Miss Blair explained later, most Scottish dances tell a story or symbolize something. The sword dance symbolizes battle and the trows dance tells the story of when the kilt-wearing Scottish men rebelled against a law requiring them to wear trousers. ("Trows" means trousers in Scottish.)

The Scottish national dance, the fling, doesn't symbolize anything, however.

Like karate and other martial arts, Scottish dancers are graded as to their competence level, but instead of receiving brown or black belts, they receive medals.

Beginners start with a pre-bronze medal. Amy, Beth and Katha -- Julie was unable to go -- went to Detroit May 21 to dance before a judge who had flown in from Scotland. They were all judged to be competent enough to receive their pre-bronze medals.

Their instructor is two rungs from the top level. She has her associate teacher medal now and is planning to try for the teacher and judge medals, the top two levels.

Scottish dancers can, if they so choose, demonstrate their competence by dancing in competition, which is what the four Cass City girls did Sunday at the festival in Alma.

Each was entered in the beginners' class for their age group.

Although the girls weren't experienced enough to win, they did have a good time, Julie Groth said.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Groth of 4144 S. Seeger Street. Amy is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Doerr. Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Cleland Jr. are the parents of Beth and Katha. The Doerrs and Clelands live on Germania Road, Uby.

The four girls will make their next public performance during the Cass City 4th of July celebration. They will also be among Miss Blair's students dancing in the Flint Festival July 15.

Their instructor has danced in such places as Kansas City, Florida, Chicago, Canada and Scotland. "Hopefully, some of my kids will get to dance there," she said of the land where Scottish dancing originated.

Thumb farmers
follow pattern

Upper Thumb farmers signed up for the federal Wheat and Feed Grain Set-Aside Program in about the same proportion as did farmers statewide.

Enrollment for the 1979 program ended April 30. More than 28,000 Michigan farmers enrolled, over 36 percent of those eligible.

Huron county had the highest percentage in the upper Thumb, 1,270 out of an eligible 2,940, which is 43.2 percent.

In Sanilac county, 36.9 percent enrolled, about 1,100 out of an eligible 2,977.

The lowest response, 26.8 percent, was in Tuscola county. Only 720 of 2,687 eligible enrolled.

The average for the three counties was 35.6 percent, slightly under the state average.

The enrolled farms in Michigan have over 3 million acres, over 52 percent of the state's normal crop acreage (NCA). Based on the farmers' planting intentions, they will set aside more than 387,000 acres.

Sanilac county has the most acres enrolled in the upper Thumb, 151,097, which is 49.4 percent of its NCA. Intentions are that 16,632 acres will be set aside.

There are 118,930 acres enrolled in Huron, 35.7 percent of the NCA of 333,446. Set aside should be 20,650 acres.

Although not too many farmers signed up in Tuscola, many of those who did have large farms. Thus, of the NCA for the county of 260,667 acres, 108,801 were enrolled, 41.7 percent. Set aside should be 11,365 acres.

Last year, about 250,000 acres were set aside in Michigan and the 25,000 farmers who enrolled qualified for more than $27 million in program payments. Participation in the set-aside program is voluntary.

SWORD DANCE -- Getting ready to perform a sword dance, symbolic of war, is Scottish dancing instructor Cynthia Blair.

Reducing watts saves
money

If the thought of saving money by saving electricity puts a sparkle in your eye, these bright ideas from The Consumer Credit Institute, a counseling service of over 800 consumer finance companies, should help you lighten your financial load.

The big wattage eaters are any appliances that have compressors, such as air conditioners, refrigerators and freezers. A self-defrosting refrigerator or freezer costs far more to operate than a manual defrost. An air conditioner with a clogged filter wastes electricity.

You can save by using fluorescent lights instead of incandescent, and a dimmer on major lighting circuits.

Neighbors
help keep farm going

Although Raymond Roberts is down, thanks to his neighbors, he's not out.

Roberts, whose farm is on S. Elkton Road, Cass City, was injured in a farm accident May 10. He cracked and chipped his hip and is now home recuperating.

That left only his wife, Grace, to run their dairy farm.

Since then, however, she has had lots of help from neighbors.

Roy Powell, Don Miljure and Gerald Auten planted the Roberts' 45 acres of corn last week.

Robert and Judy Rocheleau also helped.

The sons of Shirley Doerr, who operate their own dairy farm, have been helping do the chores.

Mrs. Roberts was milking the 19 cows, but they have since been sold. That still leaves 26 cows, either dry or with calves to take care of.

As for her husband, Mrs. Roberts said it isn't known yet how long it will be before he is able to get back to work.

Your Neighbor says

The Bible is my favorite book

"If I have time, I usually read my Bible. That's my most important book," said Esther Joles.

Her reading habits correspond with the findings of a Gallup poll of the nation's reading habits, conducted for the American Library Association.

The poll found that in the non-fiction category, the most popular books were the Bible and other religious books.

Romantic novels and historical romances topped the fiction list.

Other than the Bible, Mrs. Joles primarily reads newspapers and farm magazines. She and her husband, Nathan, farm.

Another question in the Library Association poll put her in the minority. Only a third of the parents interviewed believed watching less television would encourage their children to read more.

Would less TV watching result in children reading more? "It certainly would," was Mrs. Joles' response. "I think they watch too much television."

She also feels that applies to adults. "Reading doesn't hurt anybody."

Mrs. Joles and her husband live on Maxwell Road, Gagetown.

They have two sons and a daughter, all married, five grandchildren and two step-grandchildren.

HEALTH TIPS

Low calorie diets can be deadly

Anyone who tries to lose weight by going on a very low calorie diet of any kind is risking serious illness and even death, according to State Health Director Dr. Maurice S. Reizen.

He said that investigations by the federal Center for Disease Control strongly suggest that the recent deaths associated with liquid protein diets involved heart damage similar to that seen in victims of starvation.

"The implications of these conclusions are quite serious," Reizen said. "It seems that these deaths were not caused by any particular components in the liquid protein diets nor by the lack of any particular vitamins, minerals or electrolytes. Instead, it appears that the deaths were caused by too few calories to sustain life."

"Since the intake of the persons involved ranged from 300 to 500 calories per day, we have grave concerns about people who try to lose weight on a very low calorie diet of any kind. Some of those who died on such a diet did so after only two months."

Based on these findings, the Michigan Department of Public Health strongly recommends that anyone trying to lose weight should be on a diet which provides at least 1,200 calories per day. Persons on any substantially lower calorie diet should be hospitalized and under close medical supervision, Reizen advised.

Last year, the department issued a public health advisory urging the public not to use liquid protein diets and advising doctors not to prescribe them.

As a follow-up to that advisory, the department with the cooperation of the Lansing Dietetic Association, recently issued a booklet containing guidelines for consumers to help them evaluate weight reduction diets. "Such information is more important than ever," Reizen said, "now that the preliminary findings of CDC implicate all very low calorie diets as serious risks."

The booklet is available from county health departments, including the Tuscola County Health Department on M-81, west of Caro.

Dr. Patricia Mutch, president of the Michigan Dietetic Association, pointed out that the booklet does not promote a specific diet plan, but is an aid to judging the safety of any diet, as well as evaluating the services received from persons who may offer diet counseling.

Bean group director retiring

Maynard D. Brownlee, the only man who has served as executive secretary of the Michigan Bean Commission since its establishment by the Michigan Legislature in 1966, will retire Aug. 31.

He will be succeeded by James E. Byrum, a native of Michigan and more recently of St. Louis, Mo., where he has been product supervisor with Monsanto.

Both men are natives of Leslie, were born on farms, received on-the-farm job experience and are graduates of Leslie High School.

Brownlee, 64, has spent his entire working career in businesses related with grains and beans. He worked for country elevators after graduation from high school, and joined Farm Bureau Services in 1938, serving in buying beans and grains, sales department and management. He became executive secretary of Farm Bureau Services in 1957, remaining until he joined the newly-established Bean Commission April 1, 1966.

Byrum was born June 18, 1953, attended Lansing Community College after graduation from high school, and graduated from Michigan

State University in 1974. He was a senate aide in the State Capitol, worked in Peoples Bank of Leslie, and joined Monsanto after graduation. He was sales representative, which involved promoting herbicides in Michigan, and three years later was promoted to product supervisor.

He will take over his new duties June 4, working with Brownlee through June.

Foster care picnic set Saturday

In connection with Governor Milliken declaring May as Adult Foster Care Month, a picnic has been planned for Saturday at the fairgrounds in Caro for all Tuscola county adult foster care residents and providers.

In Tuscola county, 28 foster care providers, in cooperation with the Department of Social Services and other public and private agencies, daily provide the supervision, training, assistance or protection these adults need as they learn to care for themselves.

The foster care providers also help these adults become integrated into the community by assisting them in gaining employment, developing new interests, or in participating in various social, educational and recreational activities.

The efforts of the foster care providers and public and private agencies cannot be completely successful, however, without support from the rest of the community. Caro area businessmen have contributed many prizes and refreshments for the foster care residents' picnic again this year.

Volunteers and Department of Social Services staff will be supervising the games, such as bingo and softball. Music will also be provided.

All foster home providers and foster care residents are invited to attend. Festivities begin at noon.

Rites held for Mrs. Dickinson

Miss DeLong was married to John Dickinson April 11, 1905, in Cass City. They made their home in Bad Axe for many years. Mr. Dickinson died March 21, 1974. Mrs. Dickinson attended the Salem United Methodist church of Cass City.

New books at the library

BENEATH THE BLUE MOUNTAIN, by Richard S. Wheeler (fiction). Senor Olivera's forebears had held their land in Arizona territory under a Spanish crown grant for many generations, but when the territory is ceded to the United States as part of the Gadsden Purchase, Nathaniel Hapgood, a New England Yankee, sets out to homestead a part of the land. A deadly confrontation between the two men and the two cultures ensues.

THE COMPLETE SCARSDALE MEDICAL DIET, by Herman Tarnower (non-fiction). There may be corners of America where word of the Scarsdale diet has not penetrated, but it's doubtful. More likely, the audience for this book will be those who have tried the diet and wonder if there is a magical "chemistry" about it (no, says Dr. Tarnower), and those who want to know more about it before embarking on the program. Tarnower outlines his basic diet, explains its principle of "no substitutions," and also offers other diets. Tarnower also answers hundreds of questions dieters ask -- surely the largest compendium of diet information published recently.

ANSWERS ON BLUEPRINT READING, by Roland Palquist (non-fiction). A newly revised edition which is a complete instruction manual for understanding blueprints for machines and tools, electricity, and architecture. This book contains shortcuts, helpful hints, and suggestions for making and reading blueprints and all types of drawings as well as information on graphic symbols, drafting instruments, slide rules, and electronic calculators.

John I. Rumpitz dies Tuesday

John I. Rumpitz, 78, died Tuesday, May 22, at Huron Memorial Hospital, Bad Axe, after a long illness.

He was born Sept. 9, 1900 in Minden township, Sanilac county, the son of Joseph and Catherine Rumpitz.

He farmed in Austin township until 1947, when he moved to Ubyly. He then worked on road construction until 1965.

His wife, the former Ida Acton, died Jan. 23 of this year.

He is survived by two brothers, Clarence and Archie Rumpitz, both of Ubyly, and nieces and nephews.

A rosary was recited at Zinger Funeral Home, Ubyly, last Wednesday evening by Ernie Zinger and last Thursday evening by Father Edward O'Reilly.

Funeral services were conducted Friday morning by Father O'Reilly at St. John's Catholic church, Ubyly.

Burial was in the church cemetery.

New bean seed variety available

Tuscola county navy bean growers should be aware of a new bean variety now available as certified seed, and take precautions against the spread of mosaic virus, present in serious infestations last summer in some areas of the Saginaw Valley, according to Tuscola County Extension Director Bill Bortel.

The new bean called "Tuscola" is the newest bean variety released from Michigan State University and is now available through Michigan certified seed growers and most retail seed outlets. Breeder seed was grown in Idaho three years ago, and foundation seed was produced in Michigan two years ago.

Tuscola has yield and maturity characteristics that are similar to Sanilac. Its outstanding feature is its resistance to mechanical damage, which should improve seed quality, net yield, and its ability to be canned. "I believe navy bean growers should be trying the new variety 'Tuscola' since it has many favorable characteristics and has consistently yielded with Seafarer and Sanilac," Bortel said.

MOSAIC VIRUS

During the past winter, the Michigan Department of Agriculture (MDA) offered a testing program for seed-borne bean common mosaic virus. The virus is believed to have been brought into Michigan last year via infested beans shipped from Idaho. The disease is readily spread by aphids and causes extreme deformity in infected plants of susceptible varieties.

Some varieties (for example, Seafarer) are resistant to the disease and do not transmit the virus although they are still infected. However, the virus can cause sudden death of infected plants.

Sanilac, as well as most colored bean types, are susceptible to one or more strains of the virus, and infection by the virus results in reduced yield and more mosaic-infected seed. If mosaic virus is determined to be seed-borne by the MDA test, the seed should not be planted. Getting rid of the infected seed is the most effective way to control this disease.

When purchasing the seed type which is susceptible to mosaic virus -- Sanilac and most colored bean varieties -- growers should request the results of the mosaic test.

Seed lots from the United States are especially suspect and should have been tested. Planting mosaic virus infected seed will not only develop in-field symptoms (twisting, deformity, reduced yield) but will also allow spread of the disease to neighboring fields.

Kingston area group tops at share-the-fun

Tuscola county 4-H clubs hosted their annual Share-the-Fun Night May 17 at Kingston Elementary School.

Community booster

Bensingers work together in businesses

Editor's note: this is one of a series sponsored by the Cass City Chamber of Commerce about community boosters who are members of the organization.

Charlene and Gordon Bensinger are comparatively new to the Cass City business scene but they are lifelong residents of the Upper Thumb area.

The co-owners of the Buds & Blossoms Flower Shop have operated in Cass City for three years now.

A year and a half ago they opened a sister shop in Uby. The Bensingers have been members of the Chamber and active on the Cass City retail committee.

Both are members of the Presbyterian church of Uby where Charlene is treasurer. Gordon was born in Uby and his wife in Elkton.

The couple has two children. A daughter Karen is the manager of the Uby store. A son, Gordon, is a graduate from Uby High School.

Both Gordon and Charlene work in the family business. Gordon designs the floral arrangements and supervises the business. Charlene keeps the books and helps with the flowers when needed.

Looking back at 23-year career

Kids are marvelous, says Mrs. Brown

Margaret Brown's 23-year teaching career comes to an end June 7, but she isn't counting the hours.

If she were, she would not have had to look up the date on her school calendar when asked what her last day was.

"Oh, definitely," the mother of three daughters and grandmother of five replied. "I like teaching. I like children. I like the people, but I think it's time for some of the younger teachers to get a whack at it."

Besides, she and her husband Hazen, a semi-retired farmer, have "a lot of things we wanted to do and waited a long time to do." Among those things are travel, though with no special destinations in mind, photography and gardening.

Mrs. Brown, 62, grew up in the Shabbona-Argyle area. Her last name was McQueen then.

She had two years of college at Central Michigan before she got her first teaching job, grades K-6, at Port Sanilac, starting in the fall of 1940.

She was there a year, then went to Lee School, grades K-8, north of Sandusky. She was also there a year. About a month before school got out, she married Hazen Brown, whom she had met the summer before.

They moved to the farm where they still live, on Walter Road northeast of Cass City. The new bride dropped out of teaching for 16 years to raise her family.

The Browns have three daughters, Nancy Hutchinson, a teacher at Campbell Elementary; Marilyn Brown of Fenton, a junior high home economics teacher in that area, and Louise Wright, a cosmetologist at Hair Benders in Cass City.

The couple has three grandsons and two granddaughters. Two of the grandsons are in Mrs. Brown's reading class but after telling the students at the beginning of the year that they would be treated no different than any other student, it hasn't made any difference.

SHE RESUMED HER teaching career in grades K-8 at Wickware School, east of M-53 on Cass City Road. She was there four years, after which the one-room school merged with the Cass City District.

From 1962-65, she was at another one-room school, Lang School south of Argyle. She had as many as 42 students. She believes, but isn't positive, that that district came to an end after her final year there and merged with the surrounding districts (Sandusky, Deckerville, Cass City and possibly Ubyly).

After taking classes at Bad Axe and correspondence courses, Mrs. Brown received her bachelor's degree from Central Michigan at the end of the summer in 1965. That was the same time that daughter Nancy got her degree.

Her next job was teaching sixth grade at Deford Elementary School. She was there two years, then moved to the Intermediate School when the sixth grade was transferred there.

Mrs. Brown liked the one-room schools and bigger small ones, like at Deford. In contrast to the present set-up, where she has to "stay within gunshot" of what the other sixth grade teachers are doing, in the small schools, "You're more free to teach things when children are enthused about them." (There are five sixth grade classes at the Intermediate School.)

THE VETERAN EDUCATOR has stayed with the sixth grade.

"I like children that age (11-13). They're too big to be little and too little to be big. They're at that awful age when they don't know if they're coming or going, but I really like them."

In terms of discipline, Mrs. Brown doesn't think kids have changed over the years. "I don't think they're any worse now than they were then."

That doesn't mean that youngsters haven't changed. "When I first started teaching," she continued, "they weren't so talkative, that is, they didn't talk back to you."

"Now they are so much better educated, they have no reverence for anybody or anything that does not qualify or has earned it."

She attributes much of that to the influence of the modern age. When she was growing up, people didn't have contact with others often outside of their own community. Now that has changed.

THE SPACE AGE EM-phasis on the sciences has had its negative effects. She finds children don't have the imagination they once did, with the evidence showing up when she asks them to write an assignment and use their imagination. "They want to stick to facts now."

"Maybe the time for fantasy is past now," the teacher said with a tinge of regret. "Fantasy is nice, but maybe not realistic when everybody is concerned with something like Three Mile Island."

Parents have also changed. When Mrs. Brown was growing up, punishment was done out at the wood shed and everything was right or wrong. Parents had no in-between. Now there are "in-betweens."

Is Mrs. Brown, after 23 years of teaching, pessimistic about the future? Heavens, no.

"The kids are marvelous. No matter what they do, they seem to grow up and be responsible citizens in spite of us."

MARGARET BROWN has been correcting papers for 23 years. The sixth grade teacher at Cass City Intermediate School won't be done correcting them until June 7.

Keeping cool with less watts

A room air conditioner has become a priority item on many consumers' shopping lists this spring.

The Better Business Bureau has some tips to consider before investing in one.

Cost-wise buyers can enjoy the most efficient cooling at the lowest cost by buying a unit that is the correct size with a high energy efficiency rating, and by using and maintaining it properly.

WHAT SIZE

Perhaps the most important consideration when buying a room air conditioner is the size. If a unit is too large for the room, the consumer will spend more than is necessary to buy and operate it. Although it may cool the room faster, it may not stay on long enough to eliminate the humidity from the air, leaving the room cold and clammy. A unit that is too small will not be able to do an adequate or efficient job.

A unit's size is determined by its cooling capacity, expressed in BTUs (British Thermal Units).

Buy a unit with the proper BTU rating for the room it will be put in. To determine BTU requirements, measure the room's width, height, and length, and determine how well insulated it is and how much exposure to the sun it has.

The consumer or a responsible dealer can calculate the BTU requirements from this information by using the "WHILE-divided-by-60" formula: $W \times H \times L \times E$, divided by 60.

W refers to room width, H to room height, L to insulation, and E to sun exposure. The 60 is a common denominator used for all rooms.

After taking the room's measurements, estimate the insulation factor by giving a well insulated room a 10 and a poorly insulated one (or one with many windows) an 18. To determine the exposure, find out which direction the room's longest wall faces and give it a 16 if it faces north, a 17 if east, an 18 if south, and a 20 if west. Plug these numbers into the formula and the answer will be the BTU requirements for that room.

For example, a room that is 15x8x20, well insulated, with the long wall facing south, would have a BTU requirement of $15 \times 8 \times 10 \times 20 = 24,000$ divided by 60 equals 7200 BTUs.

Once this figure has been determined, look at the BTU ratings on information tags accompanying room air conditioners in the store to determine which is the correct size (cooling capacity) unit to buy.

EFFICIENCY RATING

After deciding on the proper size unit, consider the EER (Energy Efficiency Rating), which indicates the cooling power produced by an air conditioner per watt of electricity used. The information tags attached to units give their energy use in watts.

To figure the EER, divide the BTU capacity of the unit by the watts rating. For example, a unit with a B.T.U. capacity of 10,000 and a watts rating of 1,000 would have an EER of 10. EER ratings on air conditioners usually range between 5 and 12. Generally, a score of 11 or over is excellent, while 9 or less is good. A unit having an EER lower than 7 will use energy inefficiently and money will be wasted in operating costs.

OPERATION AND CARE

Be sure to carefully read the manufacturer's warranty or guarantee information and all instructions for installing, operating, cleaning, and servicing the unit.

In general, don't over cool a room. A setting no lower than 78 degrees is recommended to conserve energy and lower operating costs.

Turn off units when not at home and keep doors and windows closed when units are running. Draw shades or draperies over windows exposed to the sun. Be sure filters are cleaned or replaced according to the manufacturer's instructions.

The Better Business Bureau reminds consumers that although room air conditioners may increase their energy bill, the amount of the increase can be controlled by buying and using units wisely.

State chamber seeks tax relief

The Michigan Chamber of Commerce wants increased property tax relief and elimination of the sales tax on residential utility bills.

The chamber has suggested the relief be paid for by an increase in the general sales tax rate.

Frank Stocking of Ford Motor Company, the chamber's tax analyst, said the proposal would probably mean delaying property tax relief for up to a year since the sales tax increase would have to be approved by the voters.

He said, however, the time would allow legislative leaders time to rally support from such a plan.

Stocking said the tax shift plan in the House Taxation Committee appears to be going nowhere because it does not have the proper support from the right leaders.

The chamber proposes raising the sales tax rate up to 5 percent, from the current constitutional maximum of 4 percent, which would produce about $440 million more a year for the state.

The elimination of the sales tax on utility bills would use up about $100 million of that, leaving about $340 million for additional property tax relief through a more liberal circuit breaker.

Beverage industry fighting to scrap returnable bottle law

By Warren M. Hoyt
Michigan Press Association

Do you have a small fortune tied-up in deposits for returnable beverage bottles and cans in your garage?

The future of Michigan's non-returnable beverage law remains uncertain as challenges surface from the industry and individuals.

Representatives from beverage distributors and dealers are urging that the ban on non-returnables, which went into effect last December, be either modified or scrapped because it will cost more than $300 million in increased labor costs and capital expenditures.

However, the Michigan United Conservation Clubs, (MUCC), which successfully initiated the petition drive to get the proposal on the November ballot, counters by saying the beverage industry is trying to make the non-returnable container law fail by forcing unjustified higher prices.

At a recent legislative hearing of a special study committee, proponents and opponents levelled charges at one another casting a shadow on the effectiveness of the new act.

Dealers and distributors claimed the law had unreasonably increased their costs, which have to be passed on to consumers.

Supporters charged that consumers were being gouged by distributors who unfairly blamed increased costs on the ban.

Thomas Washington, executive director of MUCC, reported a top brewery official had told him that price increases for beer and soft drinks in the state was an attempt to make the bill fail. He declined to name the individual making the claim but noted he was an executive with one of the top five breweries in the nation.

Washington said implementation of the ban generally has gone well with litter cleaned up, energy resources saved and the public accepting the switch to returnable containers.

"The only development troubling MUCC is a thinly disguised attempt by some within the beverage industry to gouge Michigan consumers with price increases which they attribute to the bottle bill," he said.

Edward Deeb, of the Associated Food Dealers, however, said individual stores had to spend as much as $13,000 in capital expenditures just to get ready for the ban. He added those same stores will have to spend an additional $6,500 in 1979 due to the ban.

The ban will also cost dealers more for labor, just to handle the empty returnables, and more for other incidental costs such as pest controls.

A dealer from Mount Pleasant said he has added 50 cents to a case of beer to cover such costs as a 37 percent increase in the amount of fuel and labor necessary to comply with

Lions seek hosts for summer exchange students

Homes are being sought in the Cass City area to host foreign students visiting this summer as participants in the Lions Club International Youth Exchange.

Cass Cityan Al Witherspoon is state chairman for the program, as well as for the Lions district of Tuscola, Bay, Genesee and Saginaw counties.

There will be 160 youngsters, ages 16-21, from 10 countries coming to Michigan this summer. So far, 130 have been placed. Some of the remaining 30 will be living in this area if homes can be found.

Those for whom homes are still being sought are from Sweden, Finland and Japan.

Other countries from which youngsters are coming are England, France, Austria, Switzerland, Israel, Germany and Belize.

Those from countries where English is not the native language, Witherspoon said, do speak English, but are generally better at reading it than speaking it.

Each country's youngsters arrive together, with the groups arriving from June 20 through July 14. They will stay 5-8 weeks.

"It's not tourism, but a serious effort to help share another culture," Witherspoon said of their visits.

For that reason, host families should do nothing special for their guests, such as going on special trips, but should treat them as members of their family. The guests have their own spending money but the hosts will have to pay the cost for room and board.

The host family will also have to pay a $5 administration fee and pick up (and return) their guest at Detroit Metropolitan Airport.

Families interested in hosting a youngster can call Witherspoon at 872-2321.

The exchange isn't one-way. There will be 47 Michigan youngsters going to foreign countries this summer as participants in the Lions Club exchange.

One of them and the only one from Cass City is Witherspoon's daughter, Kari, who is going to Sweden. Two summers ago, sister Kim went to England.

He said his primary duties as state chairman for the exchange program are corresponding with his counterparts in other countries and coordinating flight schedules. It's his first year as state chairman, second year as district chairman.

High school students interested in participating in the program in future years should start planning now, he said, and can contact him for details.

1980 census work starts

Workers compile address lists

the new law.

Deeb said the ban will cost the beverage industry as much as $300 million.

Robert S. Weinberg, who runs a research firm working for beer brewers, said another 6-12 months are needed to collect all the data necessary to draw conclusions on price and impact. He said the ban can result in increased costs, but it can also result in some savings for the industry.

"I really wonder if anyone knows precisely what has happened. Prior to the law there were lots of people speculating on what would happen, now people are looking at fragmentary data," he concluded.

Meanwhile, inventories of bottles and cans are stacking up, not only in store warehouses but also in residential basements and garages.

Census Bureau address compiling operations for the 1980 census have begun in Michigan from an office located in Detroit, according to office manager Betty Hughes.

Temporary workers are being hired now to begin putting together lists of addresses from which mailing labels will be prepared for use on the 1980 census questionnaires. They will be mailed to each of some 80 million households nationwide in late March 1980.

Mrs. Hughes said the address-collection phase of the census operation will take several months to complete. Also involved are checks of the lists to make sure all area dwelling addresses are included.

Census workers will drive or walk thousands of miles of streets and roads asking at each household for a correct mailing address. These address lists play a vital role in taking an accurate census since they are used to record completed questionnaires returned by mail.

Households which do not mail back a completed census form within several weeks after Census Day in 1980 will receive a visit from a census taker, who will interview householders for the information required on the questionnaire.

The 1979 address collection activity in Michigan is part of a Census Bureau program involving 35,000 temporary workers nationwide to compile lists containing approximately 30 million addresses. Another 50 million addresses have been purchased from commercial mailing list companies.

Persons interested in applying for temporary census jobs should contact their nearest Michigan Employment Security Commission office or the Michigan census office, 144 W. Lafayette, Room 1034, Detroit 48226, telephone (313) 226-4821.

Temporary workers usually will work three to four weeks each and will be paid on a per-address basis. For an eight-hour day, the average worker will earn $27 to $30. Applicants for the jobs must pass a written examination.

NOVESTA TOWNSHIP BOARD

Letter to the Editor

Lori is 'loving it' in Brazil

Oi! (Hello in Portuguese). I'm writing to you from Belo Horizonte, Brazil. I'm here as a Cass City Rotary exchange student and am absolutely loving it.

The name of the city means "beautiful horizon" and the city is about the same size as Detroit. My state, Minas Gerais, is famous for its mining of coal and precious stones.

I spent six months in the home of Sr. Walter Santos, about an hour's drive from Belo Horizonte. My "father" is a financier of a chain of banks. My "sister," Georgia, is six years old and my three "brothers" are all younger than I am. The oldest is now in Indiana as a Rotary exchange student.

At noon each day, we were all driven into Belo Horizonte to attend school for five hours. My school requires uniforms, gold pants and black T-shirt, no jewelry and no make-up. I tried to study biology, chemistry, mathematics, physics, electronics and electricity, all in Portuguese.

During our summer vacation, your winter, I spent a month traveling and visiting families all over the north of Brazil. At Manaus, I took a small canoe trip down the Amazon River which was so thrilling to see. The river has a lovely perfume-like smell.

On the coast, I visited Sao Luis, Fortaleza, Recife, and Salvador. Fortaleza is close to the ocean with beautiful, big beaches and clear, warm water from the Atlantic Ocean. A real tropical treat in the evenings would be to sit in grass-roofed restaurants and eat crab and other seafood. Four days of carnival in Recife was exciting but exhausting. Normal life stops, people dance "Samba" in the streets all day and in the clubs at night. At the end of the festival, most Brazilians sleep all day.

When I returned from vacation I moved into the city of Belo Horizonte to the home of the William David family. My second Brazilian father is a very busy doctor. My new mother loves to compete in tennis matches. My brothers, Ricardo, 16, and Claudio, 13, complete my new family. I have many more classes at the Catholic school I attend in the morning now. Afternoons I study grammatical Portuguese at the University of Minas Gerais.

I'm now used to having beans and rice every day (and hardly ever potatoes), maids to help with house work, having half a day of school and thinking, speaking, and living with another language -- Portuguese!

Brazil's importance in the world is growing every day and changing. Even Rio de Janeiro is building a McDonald's. This is a beautiful country and its people are too! It will be hard to say good-bye.

Sincerely,
Lori Ziehm

Editor's note: Lori is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ziehm, 6221 Green Road, Gagetown. She will be a senior at Cass City High School in the fall.

Hawks bow out in tourney

TODD ALEXANDER takes a last cut for the Cass City Red Hawks. The senior outfielder was the lead-off man for the Hawks where he combined a good batting eye for walks and base hits to generate offensive power for the team. The Hawks lost to Mayville, 5-0, in the pre-district.

The Cass City Red Hawks came to the end of the tournament trail Friday in the pre-districts held at Cass City.

The Hawks bowed to the shutout, three-hit pitching of Stoke, 5-0.

The Hawks had their shots against his southpaw slants and loaded the bases three times. But he was tough in the clutch for the winners.

Earney Stoutenburg was fairly effective on the mound for Cass City. He struck out 10 and allowed just six hits . . . unfortunately the hits were bunched, three in the second and three in the fifth when Mayville scored all of its runs.

The Hawks fought to the wire. In the final inning Stoutenburg singled and Todd Alexander and Tim Severance followed with walks to load the bases with no one out.

But Johnson tapped one to the pitcher which went to home and to first for a quick double play and the end of the threat.

That's the kind of a day it was as Cass City went to the sidelines in the annual spring one defeat and out tournament.

Saginaw 9 wins Cass City holiday tourney

Raymond's Sports Center of Saginaw was the winner of the week-end fast pitch softball tournament in the Cass City Recreation Park, sponsored by the Osentoski Realty and Auctioneering softball team.

The team won the first place trophy with a 3-2 win in the bottom of the seventh inning over Pauly's Insurance of Clarkston.

The tournament was supposed to run Friday, Saturday and Sunday, but all games were rained out Saturday, so the final games were't played until Monday.

In addition to the teams already mentioned, others competing were Reese IGA, Markee Electric, Flint; Munger Merchants; Bay City Towing; Hillaker's Auctioneering, Cass City; Misty Lounge, Flint; Mary Williams, Flint.

All teams competed in the round robin tourney, with the top two teams in each division making it to the playoff games Monday.

In the first playoff game, Raymond's, 3-1, played Markee, also 3-1. The game went to 12 innings before Raymond's won it, 3-2, to advance to the championship round.

Pauly's, 4-0, won the other playoff with a 1-0 victory over Bay City Towing, 3-1.

Markee won the consolation game, 1-0, for fair place in the tournament.

Trophies were given to the top three teams, plus individual trophies to each player on the championship team.

Boys and girls both win

Bulldogs roll to districts

Port Austin proved no match for Owen-Gage in softball pre-district play Friday at Gagetown.

The game ended after 4½ innings because of the 10-run mercy rule with the Bulldogs ahead, 21-2. A normal game is seven innings.

Winning pitcher was Tammy Kain, who gave up five hits, two walks and struck out one.

Six Bulldogs got more than one hit, led by Laurie Andrakowicz with three doubles. Carol Goslin and Terry Sontag each had a single and a double. Kain, Dana Laurie and Deb Gettel each hit two singles.

The winners got 15 hits off losing pitcher Becky Yaroch. She struck out two and walked two.

District play starts at the Gagetown field at noon Friday with Akron-Fairgrove vs. North Huron. Owen-Gage plays either Caseville or Carsonville-Port Sanilac at 2:15. The finals will be at 4 p.m.

BASEBALL GAME

The Owen-Gage baseball squad qualified for the districts with a pre-district win last Friday over Caseville, 6-0.

The game was played under less than ideal conditions at Port Austin.

The Bulldogs, now 18-5 overall, will probably be playing Kingston in the districts Friday at Peck. Game time is 3 p.m. and the winner plays in the district finals at 5 p.m.

Winning pitcher over Caseville was Pete Klemkowski, whose season mark is now 10-3. He gave up three hits to the Eagles, five walks and struck out 11.

Losing pitcher was Craig Guster, who pitched all but the final out for his team. He gave up eight hits, two walks and struck out eight. Dan Fitzpatrick got the final out.

Leading hitters for the victors were Jim Henderson with a single and a double and Mark McDona'd and Dick Glidden, each with two singles.
