Residents' protests halt Houghton reconstruction

Construction of curb and gutter, the first step in rebuilding of Houghton Street between West and Brooker Streets, has been suspended temporarily pending resolution of a dispute over what width it should be.

Residents along the street have signed a petition threatening that if it isn't 39 feet from curb to curb, they won't pay the special assessment for curb and gutter.

Plans call for it to be 32 feet wide, which according to village Superintendent Lou LaPonsie, is the standard width in Cass City for residential streets.

According to Jim Seale of 6349 Houghton Street, no one along the street realized that until Saturday when he and neighbor Ron Weippert of 6371 Houghton measured the distance between two newly installed drains from where the curbs will be behind them. The measurement came to 32 feet.

Then Houghton east of West Street was measured and that was 39 feet wide.

The two men then circulated a petition, which reads: "We the people of Houghton Street between West and Brooker Streets, protest the 32-foot street. We will not pay for the curb and gutter of the street and demand that the street be 39 feet wide."

There are 15 houses on the affected portion of Houghton and there were 12 names on the petition. The owners of one house were away, Seale said, one house is rented and the third was in the process of being sold.

The petition was presented to LaPonsie Monday, with a copy given to village Councilman Elwyn Helwig.

The village superintendent said Tuesday all council members have been notified of the petition and a decision on the street width will be up to them.

The council isn't scheduled to meet until Aug. 14 and the contractor for the curb and gutter and drainage work, Andrew Barnes Jr. of Cass City, has been told to stop work until then.

In the interim, Barnes and his men will work on the other two streets slated for curb and gutter this year, Brooker and Downing, both between Main and Church.

Those two streets and Houghton will be paved next year.

The council's street committee, Helwig and Jim Ware, will probably study the situation before Aug. 14 in order to make a recommendation to their fellow trustees.

The major concern, according to Seale, is that if the street is only 32 feet wide, there will only be about one lane for traffic if cars park along both curbs.

LaPonsie told the Chronicle that residential streets are only 32 feet wide for a purpose -- to discourage persons from parking in the street.

There are some exceptions, he explained. Those classified as "major" streets are 40 feet wide, for instance, on Downing, which is being rebuilt. Brooker is also a major street, but will only be 32 feet wide when reconstructed to preserve the trees there.

Houghton Street east of West Street, although classified a local street, is wider because of traffic in front of the Baptist church. Streets are also wider in front of some other churches.

West Street is also a local street, but is 40 feet from Pine to Garfield because residents protested before it was rebuilt. They wanted it wider, which the council agreed to, because of trucks going to and from the industrial plants on Garfield.

The outspoken Seale accused village officials of trying to save asphalt (and thus saving money) in making the street only 32 feet wide "and just to show people they're the boss."

Houghton Street is lined with trees but Seale feels they won't be harmed if the street is 39 feet.

What happens if the council decides to stick to the 32-foot width?

"They can go ahead and put it in," he vowed, "but we won't pay."

Neighbors help

DeLong fire loss may be $75,000

Bob DeLong's 110 Holstein cows got milked Monday night about 4½ hours late. What was of significance was that they still had a place to be milked.

Late that morning, his milking parlor was a shambles, the result of a fire that broke out shortly before 10 a.m. The DeLong dairy farm is on Hadley Road, a short distance north of Bay City-Forestville Road in Greenleaf township.

But with the aid of lots of volunteer help, the parlor was made usable by 10 p.m. DeLong, who talked to the Chronicle Tuesday night, didn't want to name anyone yet who helped out of fear he would forget someone.

Elkland Township Fire Chief Jack Hartwick estimated damage at $50-75,000. Cause is believed to have been electrical as the origin of the fire was traced to the utility room which housed compressors and electrical connections.

The fire, reported to the fire department at 9:50 a.m., started fast. DeLong said he had been in the room where it started only 10 minutes earlier.

He was in the field across the road spreading manure when he saw the smoke.

The cement block milking parlor was attached to a pole building calf barn, the total structure being 36-by-80 feet. The 22 or 23 calves were safely removed.

The pole building was built last summer; the milking parlor in 1973. A holding area for cows about to be milked was also part of the structure.

DeLong said the cement block portion was salvageable except for the top row of blocks, which suffered heat damage, plus a few others. The roof over the entire structure was destroyed. Most of the sides of the pole building were salvageable.

Except for a few lines, all of the milking equipment had to be replaced -- milk tank, vacuum pump, compressors, milkers, and plumbing.

The 1,250 gallon milk tank which the fire rendered unusable was full at the time of the fire. Several days worth of grain stored in the building, fed to the cows while they were being milked, was damaged.

The intense effort was made to get new milking equipment installed because moving the cows elsewhere, probably to the farm of his father, Don DeLong, on Englehart Road, would have meant a drop in production due to a change in environment. "They would have dropped production in half easily," Bob DeLong said.

There was no problem milking Monday night because it was dark and their udders were more than full, but Tuesday morning, some of the cows had to be pushed to get them into the parlor, he said. Lack of a roof was enough for some of them to sense something was different.

The plumbing lines "run everywhere" in the temporary arrangement. DeLong hopes to have a new roof on by next week, after which the plumbing will be installed permanently. Plastic is temporarily covering the building.

Newly built hutchies, intended to go on Don DeLong's farm, were brought in to house the calves.

Elkland township firemen were assisted by Bingham township-Ubly firemen who had a tanker and a pumper there, and the Bad Axe Fire Department, which had a tanker at the scene. Some water to fight the blaze was pumped from the DeLong swimming pool.

The dairyman's only consolation was that the fire could have been worse. "We were very fortunate it didn't get into the big barn (next door) with the hay," he said. "Then we would have got into big, big trouble."

BACK AGAIN

Two weeks after Elkland township firemen extinguished a barn fire on Bay City-Forestville Road, east of Buehly Road, they were back there again Saturday.

The barn, which belonged to Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Garety, was leveled about 1½ years ago. What burned July 7 was primarily straw on top of the barn floor.

Until a few days prior to Saturday, the Garety's said, the remains were still smoldering.

Based on what the Garety's said, firemen speculated that the fire did reignite.

After the first fire, according to Mrs. Garety, most of the floor was still intact and the beams salvageable. But during the two weeks, as the fire continued to smolder, about half the floor had fallen into the basement. The fire Saturday took care of the rest.

Firemen were there from about 9-10:30 p.m. The Elmwood township-Gagetown department assisted by bringing a tanker to the scene.

TREES BURN

A fire which spread from two barrels in which trash was being burned resulted in the loss of 24 evergreen trees Saturday afternoon.

Elkland township firemen were called at 1:30 to the John Connolly residence, southeast of the Cemetery and Kelly Road intersection.

They said the trees which burned were about 4-6 feet high and planted in rows. Firemen were there about 20 minutes.

WAGON FIRE

Bingham-Ubly firemen extinguished a loaded hay wagon fire Sunday morning on M-19 in Austin township.

The fire was near the home of Gary Particka. Loss was estimated at $300. Cause was not immediately determined.

Eye changes for 1980 festival

Several comments, criticisms and ideas were voiced when members of the Chamber of Commerce met last Wednesday evening at a special meeting at the Char-mont to discuss plans for next year's Fourth of July festival.

Festival chairman and chamber President Tom Herron expressed his thanks to all who contributed in making this year's first Fourth of July festival "a huge success."

"The only organization to lose money was the Chamber," he said. "We lost about $1,000, but then we didn't expect to make money."

Herron said definite plans for next year's festivities will start in September. The festival will be kept to a one day affair, with a rain date set for Saturday, July 5.

There will be more of an attempt to get a variety of musical performers in next year's parade, according to parade chairman Mike Weaver. "We can do this by planning eight months in advance and contacting the different bands, groups and performers way ahead of time."

Discussed was the possibility of offering more prizes to floats in different categories, including most original, popular, comical, etc.

"This will only happen if we get a lot more floats in competition," Herron said. This year's parade had 15 floats entered in competition.

There was also discussion concerning the route of the parade. Proposals were made to have it go down Scotty McCullough Drive next year to ease traffic congestion and allow a reviewing stand to be set up for dignitaries.

Herron thought more strict marshaling of the parade is needed in the beginning to keep Main Street as clear as possible before the parade starts.

One chamber member suggested the parade should be organized in General Cable's parking lot and then route from there to Main Street.

Chamber members also discussed the king-queen contest for next year. Members felt more publicity will be needed to encourage more people to be candidates.

More short acts for festival stage shows are needed during the day to entertain people, Herron suggested. He said he wanted to get theater groups and a variety of other performers this year, but started late in getting them to come.

"Next year, we'll get them in advance and we'll keep the show short," Herron said.

CHAMBER MEMBERS thought that sports events could be improved tremendously. Some ideas for sports contests for next year included: Horsehoes, archery, cross-cut sawing and grease-pole race.

"We need to include more kids' games and more activities for older persons, including senior citizens," Please turn to page 14.

State inspectors say

Federal meat inspection would be raw deal for consumers

By Mike Eliasohn

It makes a big difference who inspects the meat that ends up on kitchen tables, according to three state meat inspectors who live in the area.

If Uncle Sam takes over meat inspection from the state, it will be consumers who suffer, say Tom Lounsbury, Eddie Paladi and Wilbur Norrington.

Admittedly, they have a vested interest in the outcome of the Washington-Lansing funding dispute. If the federal government takes over the meat inspection program, they likely will be out of work. (See sidebar story.)

Lounsbury lives on Dodge Road, Cass City, and has been a Michigan Department of Agriculture meat inspector for about nine years. He usually works at Maurer Slaughter House, Ubly, four days a week and Walsh Packing and Slaughter House, Pigeon, one day a week.

His father-in-law, Norrington, lives on Bevans Road, Caro, and has been inspecting meat about 10 years. (Lounsbury met his wife, Virginia, about four years ago at a meat inspectors' picnic in Caro.) He is usually at Deering Packing in Silverwood two days a week, at Caro Packing two days and works relief the other day.

Paladi, also a meat inspector for nine years, is permanently assigned to relief, that is, he goes wherever he is needed. He usually works within a radius of 50-75 miles of his home on Cass City Road, west of the village.

FEDERAL STANDARDS

Most of the attention in the funding imbroglio has focused on what goes into a hot dog.

Federal standards for processed meats allow inclusion of pig snouts, ears, lips and stomachs. Michigan standards don't, but would go down the drain with a federal takeover.

The issue is much more complex than that, however, according to the three meat inspectors.

Under Michigan law, a state inspector is in a slaughter or packing house whenever animals are being slaughtered or processed, no matter what the size of the facility.

Under federal standards, there would only be inspectors at meat plants which process meat to be sold retail and operate full-time.

Packing houses which aren't big enough to operate five days a week will only be allowed to do custom slaughter, that is, on order from a customer. For instance, a farmer might bring in an animal for slaughtering and processing, then take the meat home with him.

Most of the probably 13 or 14 packing houses in the upper Thumb do mainly custom work, but also slaughter some meat for retail sale.

Since most of them don't operate full-time, they wouldn't be able to process any meat for retail, which would drive many of them out of business, according to the three inspectors.

Also, Paladi said, many of the plants in this area are old and wouldn't be able to comply with more stringent federal standards (for building and equipment).

With fewer packing houses in this area, the result will be higher meat costs for consumers, they claim.

The trio doesn't feel inspection standards will decline in places with full-time federal inspectors.

But under federal control, there wouldn't be as many inspectors. Custom packing houses will only be inspected about once every six months, and then, unless the inspector happens to be there on a day when slaughtering is being done, it will only be checked for cleanliness.

With only periodic inspections, they definitely feel some meat plant operators will take advantage of the situation and sell unhealthy meat, as well as some "shyster dealers" who will try to sell unhealthy animals to packing houses.

WHAT THEY DO

A meat inspector's job starts at a slaughter house before the kill begins. The plant is inspected for cleanliness and all animals are checked while still alive for signs of anything wrong.

Usually, outward appearance is a good indicator of something wrong inside, but not always. Norrington recalled an instance where an 1,100-pound steer appeared in excellent condition, but when the animal was cut open, it was so racked with cancer the red meat had already turned gray.

After the animal is killed blood samples are taken of all female cows 2 years and over and all mature bulls to check for brucellosis (Bang's disease).

Then the hide comes off, after which the inspector checks the glands, liver, heart and kidneys for any abnormalities, such as signs of disease or presence of antibiotics. If a lymph node when cut through feels sandy, for instance, it indicates tuberculosis. Enlarged lymph nodes indicate cancer.

In small houses, Norrington, Paladi and Lounsbury said, an average of about 85 percent of animals are healthy. The percentage is smaller in large houses. Of the remaining 15 percent, at least part of three-fourths of those can be salvaged.

Meat inspectors can condemn up to three-fourths of an animal. To condemn the whole thing, a MDA veterinarian must be called in.

When a diseased animal is discovered, it means a shut-down of the line. All equipment must be sanitized, the floor cleaned, and workers must change whatever clothing came in contact with the animal and wash their hands and arms.

That might not happen at some plants without an inspector there. "Some of them would keep going," Norrington said.

That basically is the slaughter inspector's job.

Rabbit Tracks

By John Haire

(And anyone else he can get to help)

Over the years the Chronicle publisher, editor and many reporters have been caught with egg on their face.

Ron Przystas, the Chronicle's summer intern, went them one better. He stood too close to the egg throwing contest held during sidewalk days. It missed his face, but not his arm and chest. Splat!

Oh well, he's here to gain experience.

Floyd "Shorty" Luettkie has a special interest in the Miss Universe contest held over the boob tube recently. I suppose that all you who know Shorty are saying, "What else is new?" But that's not it.

What drew his attention was that the event was held in Perth, Australia and he spent 26 months there in service.

He reports that it hasn't changed that much. The buildings are bigger and so are the ships, but it's still Perth.

The TV people were telling everyone how it was possibly the friendliest place in the world.

That's exactly the way it was when I was there, Shorty confides.

If you missed it here last week, Mike Eliason and I were at odds over the relative merits of a trivia item concerning the marathon and crowning of the winner by Miss Michigan.

He felt it was good. I didn't and asked for comments. Right now Mike is leading, 2-0.

One of his supporters is Gerald Prieskorn who says that the marathon item was better than reading about John's raspberries.

Rebuttal: Prieskorn was chairman of the race held during the festival.

Just when it appeared that the older than the Chronicle's 88 years fun contest had run its course we received another entry. Mrs. Albert Jones reports that John D. Jones will be 94 in December. He lives on the family homestead in Shabbona.

The addition of his name makes the list total 24.

Gerald Prieskorn may not have the proper regard for the pearls that drip from this typewriter, but his mother-in-law, Mrs. Glenn Folkert, has.

You put out a very fine paper, she confided while visiting here the other day, and I read every word of your columns. Isn't she a person of rare discernment?

Lions exchange program

8 from abroad visit Cass City

Three Swedes, three Finns and two Japanese are experiencing the American "way of life" as local families host them in the Cass City Lions Club's first foreign exchange program, headed by Allen Witherspoon.

"This is a summer program to give the participants a taste of the country they go to," said his daughter, Kim Witherspoon, who was one of the first students in the program. She went to England in the summer of 1977 for eight weeks. "With eight people coming here this summer, we're hoping to send more students from the area to foreign countries next summer."

The 6-8 week program allowed Kim's sister, Kari, to spend part of her summer in England. She returned Wednesday after being there since June 20.

The eight students who are visiting the United States this summer are:

"If It Fitz. . ." Important worries

By Jim Fitzgerald

It was bad enough to be haunted by a toothless old woman. Now I can't stop thinking about two little kids whose mother has no food to feed them. With petty stuff like that pushing into my mind, it's hard for me to find time to worry about important things.

Will there be a recession? Will inflation ever stop inflating? Have I got enough gasoline to get through the week end? Should I prove my patriotism by turning off the air conditioning at home and opening the windows?

These crisis questions should be occupying my thoughts. But, damn it . . . Several weeks ago, at the bus station, the toothless old woman got on the bus I was taking home from work. She was a mess. Dirty dress, ugly face, misshapen body.

She didn't have bus fare. The driver ordered her off the bus. But she continued down the aisle, asking passengers for 50 cents. No luck. The bus was almost full, but everyone ignored her.

The driver cursed loudly. "She does that all the time," he announced. "I can't allow begging on the bus." He grabbed the woman by the elbow and hurried her onto the street.

It was a few minutes before we drove away. The evicted woman walked along the outside of the bus and rapped on the windows. She was still begging for 50 cents "so I can go home." No one looked at her, but everyone knew she was there.

There are several good reasons for never giving money to panhandlers: They have more money in their mattress than you have in the bank. Whatever you give them, they'll spend on booze and then fall in the river. They really have good jobs as newspaper reporters and it's not your fault they don't know how to manage their money. I kept telling myself these reasons as the bus pulled out and the toothless old woman shook her fist in our exhaust fumes. Weeks later, I'm still telling myself I was street wise to keep my 50 cents. It's cool to be street wise.

But, damn it, late at night when I should be worrying about the energy crunch, I find myself wondering if that old hag ever got home. And if she didn't, did anyone care? I keep asking myself why I didn't give her the lousy 50 cents. I don't hear any good answers.

Lately, when I'm not worrying about the toothless old lady, and when I should be fretting about inflation, I'm thinking too much about something I read last week in a church newsletter. The person in charge of a help-the-poor program wrote:

"A young woman came in the other day with two small children, one about seven, and the other two. The children had not eaten in two days, nor had the mother. She left her husband because he had continually beaten her and she said she couldn't take it anymore."

"She was out on the street, no family and no friends to turn to. She was hungry and scared, and didn't trust anyone. All she wanted was food for her babies. None for herself. She said she would find a way to survive if she just had food for them. But our food supply was too low. We didn't have the proper food to give her. We fed them right then with sandwiches, but what was she to do that night or the next day?"

End of newsletter. But not the end of thinking about it. I know it's not my fault that dumb woman married a brute and gave birth to two kids she can't afford. I know she's lazy and would rather be on welfare than take a job as president of General Motors. But, damn it . . .

National surveys show Americans should worry about inflation and the energy crisis. As a good citizen, I know I should be doing my share of worrying about shrinking paychecks and $1-a-gallon gas. That's why I resent the intrusions of the toothless old woman and the two hungry kids into my head. Those boat people from Vietnam make my mind wander, too.

I really want to worry about the important things. Damn it, maybe I do.

The Haire Net

There are guys who are perfectly content spending vacations puttering around the house, the yard, the neighborhood.

In these days of energy shortages they may be the lucky ones. After all if they are happy staying at home, why not?

It's a philosophy I agree with. Your free time is your own to spend the way you want to.

Still there is a feeling that the folks that stay home just don't know what they are missing.

I can hear them now saying what they are missing are strange beds, disgruntled workers, rip off businessmen, sunburn, rainy days under a leaky roof, poor but expensive meals, and kids with short tempers confined to cars. That all may be true. Probably is. But time passes. The short term aggravations fade and the good times remain.

There are two great bonuses that a vacation away from home brings.

The first comes long before you step into a car, plane or train.

That's when you bring out the travel folders and plan that week away from it all. (Two weeks if you are lucky. More than two indicates you are rich or have a nine-month job.)

Over the years there have been some pleasant hours spent in the Haire hutch planning a trip for next year or maybe the year after that.

More often than not the plans of winter fail to materialize when the summer comes. When the plans do jell it's a bonus. When they don't nothing is lost; they still are on the back burner ready for another winter dream session.

Right now dream trip time is a trip in January or February to fish in Argentina. The odds are great that I'll be sloshing through the snow as always but . . . it just MIGHT BE POSSIBLE.

That's the first of the vacation bonuses. The second is even greater.

That's recalling the good times you had after you return. The shared experiences of a train ride in Canada on a gas turbine that ran only briefly before it was discarded, even though it went 100 miles an hour. The kids with their first whirl at water skiing. The majestic red woods of California. The thrill of a ride over the gorge at Niagara Falls. The big sky country of Montana. The drunken rodeo cowboys the night after the "world's greatest rodeo."

Not much in themselves but symbols of a time together with the family or with friends.

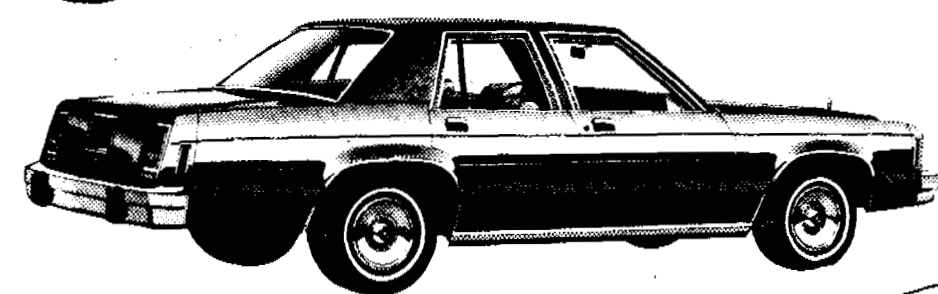

There were times on some of these vacations when everything wasn't peaches and cream. But those are quickly forgotten. I can't recall one specific sour vacation time today although there were periods in many when there were.

I can recall the highlights of nearly every one going back to a three-day pass in Chicago the day victory in Europe was announced in World War II.

They can't take those away from me and the money they cost are as insignificant as a pedestrian on the sidewalk seen from a high flying plane.

On to Argentina.

PEDALING AROUND

Stretching
a point

By Mike Eliasohn

You may find it strange that I as a newspaperman -- newspaperperson if you prefer -- don't read a daily paper every day, but there is a reason for it.

It's those green rubber bands.

I guess not all newsboys -- whoops, news carriers -- wrap their papers with a rubber band, though some do. Some even still fold them like I did when I was a kid. (I never advanced beyond the rank of substitute carrier for a friend of mine.)

My problem is I can't stand to throw anything away that might be useful some day, and rubber bands can be useful.

Thus I would be afraid if I subscribed to a daily paper, my apartment would soon be awash in a sea of green rubber bands. It's bad enough with the one rubber band I get a week from the Shoppers' Guide.

But for those who do get daily newspapers wrapped in rubber bands who can't stand to throw them out (the rubber bands, that is), I am working on a solution.

Not only will the solution make me a more patriotic American in the eyes of President Carter, it will help solve our energy problem, lessen pollution, increase employment and bring families closer together.

My solution is a rubber band powered car.

Remember all those jokes in the early days of small foreign cars about how they were powered with rubber bands? Those were jokes, but my car will be for real.

Admittedly, my car won't be very big. It will only hold one person, but that is big enough for the man of each household to get to work.

The cars will be delivered minus engine, thus the first task of all families will be to weave all those little green rubber bands they have collected into one large green rubber band. That will be the powerplant.

The advantage of a woven big rubber band is that it will still work even if some of the little rubber bands break. If a single large rubber band were used and it broke, the car would come to a halt.

For the car to work, the rubber band will have to be wound up at night, ready for dad's journey to work the next morning. That's where the other part of family togetherness comes in. (Weaving the little rubber bands together was the first part.)

After dinner, family members will mount their seats on what might be described as a stationary bicycle with four seats. (With only four, small families are encouraged.) Instead of turning a wheel, however, the "bicycle" winds up the rubber band for the car.

The car will be parked in front of the "windercycle," the rubber band pulled out and attached to the winder mechanism. After a half hour of furious pedaling by the family members, the rubber band will be wound tight and the car would be ready to go the next day.

There would only be enough power in that rubber band to get father to work, however. Here's where the solving unemployment comes in.

The unemployed can be put to work running portable "windercycles." They will move from car to car in parking lots, winding up each vehicle's rubber band so that the driver can get home each night.

An increase in parking fees will pay the salaries of the winder crews.

At this point, I will end this column. I think I have stretched this idea as far as it will go.

GRANDSTAND ASSEMBLY -- Robert Trisch was one of several workmen assembling aluminum bleachers Tuesday before the start of the Tuscola County Fair. Total seating capacity will be 2,200, compared to 3,000 before the June 19 fire.

98th annual

Fair set for Sunday with seating additions

The 98th annual Tuscola County Fair gets underway Sunday, with a few improvements on the fairgrounds that fair officials say is just the beginning.

According to fair Manager Walt Jackson, 10 rows, each 180 feet long, of aluminum bleachers are being installed this week to replace part of the grandstand lost in the fire June 19. Total cost is approximately $35,000 ($32,000 for the bleachers, $3,000 for labor).

"Workers have also started putting up new restrooms near the grandstands and everything should be finished well before Sunday," Jackson said.

The fair manager also noted that most of the underground wiring for the fairgrounds was destroyed in the fire and an $8,000 replacement project is underway.

"We won't have all the electrical finished by the time of the fair, but all the telephone cables should be rewired by that time."

With the new addition to the grandstand, Jackson said total seating capacity will be 2,200.

The original aluminum bleachers not damaged in the fire seat 500, while the addition will seat 1,200.

"We plan to borrow a section of 500-seat bleachers to put in front of the originals and give us a seating capacity of 2,200," the fair manager said.

Jackson is considering placing a third deck of aluminum bleachers with a roof to be installed before the 1981 Tuscola County Fair, which is also the fair's centennial.

"There has been nothing definite planned yet, but we are taking it under consideration," he said.

Among the features of this year's fair will be four days of harness racing, two days of tractor pulling, the 4-H and FFA livestock sale and a bigger midway.

The Vinson Amusement Co., of Fort Myers, Fla., is providing the rides this year for the second time in as many years and promises new and better rides.

The "Skyway" ride, a double ferris wheel, will again be featured. There will also be an expanded kiddieland and special side-show attractions.

THURSDAY

Senior citizens will be admitted free to the grounds and grandstand until 6 p.m.

The annual 4-H and Future Farmers of America livestock sale starts at 1:30 p.m.

Police roundup

Damage set at $1,000
to 4 vandalized trucks

Damage was estimated at $1,000 to four Erla's Food Center and Packing trucks which had their windshields and/or radiators damaged.

Don Erla reported the damage to Cass City police at 5:20 a.m. Wednesday, July 18, it having occurred sometime since 9 the previous evening. The trucks were parked at the firm's store and packing house on Church Street.

Two of the trucks had both their windshields and radiators damaged. One had only its windshield broken out and the other had its radiator punctured.

Police are investigating the possibility that the damage is connected to the strike by employees at Koegel's Meats in Flint, where Erla's picks up some of its meat.

Also last Wednesday, village police investigated the theft of three 10-speed bicycles, all taken the day before.

Danny Schram of 6379 Garfield Street reported his Schwinn was taken from the rear of his house. It was valued at $150.

Joyce LaRoche of 6593 Houghton Street said two bikes were taken from inside her garage. One was a yellow Sears, the other was orange, make unknown. Value was unknown.

Ronald W. Martin of 6161 Lakeside Drive, Huntsville Trailer Park, Cass City, reported to sheriff's deputies Friday that someone had entered his truck after 1 a.m. that day. It was parked next to his mobile home.

Removed from the dash was an AM-FM radio and 8-track tape player valued at $325. Also taken was a plastic bag containing 300 rounds of ammunition, a hunting knife in a case and 100 pain pills in a prescription bottle, value unlisted. Damage from a scratched door post, done by the thieves in entering the vehicle, was estimated at $25.

Cass state police, were called Monday evening to the White Creek Club on Dodge Road, north of Deckerville Road, to investigate a break-in. It was reported by Francis Withey.

Entry was apparently gained through sliding glass doors in the rear of the building. Inside, troopers found all the chairs tipped over, paper towels strewn all over, and a gallon of tile sealer dumped on the carpeting. Nothing was discovered missing.

Officers speculated the damage was done by juveniles as bicycle tracks were found in the grass behind the building.

A fight on Phillips Road, Novesta township, turned out to be non-existent by the time deputies arrived.

It was originally reported that deputies, Cass state police and Cass City police were dispatched to the scene. The fight was reported at 9:55 p.m., July 15.

The woman who saw it said two vehicles stopped in front of her house and the occupants started yelling at each other in an obscene manner.

She thought someone might get hurt so called the sheriff's department. The two vehicles departed, however, about 10 minutes before deputies arrived.

AROUND THE FARM Watch for bean bugs

By Don Kebler

On Tuesday of last week, bean producers, elevator managers and farm chemical dealers attended a disease and insect information update meeting at the Wickes Elevator in Fairgrove.

All the potential insect problems in dry beans were discussed along with the diseases. Most of the types of insects that feed on dry beans have been assumed to be minor concern. However, aphids are high on the list as problem insects in beans. The tarnish plant bug or lygus bug causes damage to the dry bean in the pod which is not mistakable. The aphid will carry bean mosaic virus from diseased plants to infect non-diseased plants.

The most important means to try to prevent the damage these two insects can inflict on dry beans is to know what they look like and make field inspections.

Early detection is necessary and in the case of the aphid you should start now. The tarnish plant bug can't damage the beans in the pod until blossoming starts. Early aphid detection allows one to spray before they can severely spread mosaic virus to your fields.

To spray for bean insects because your neighbors do may be unnecessary. To spray after damage and disease occurs is for revenge.

Be on the alert and start now making at least bi-weekly and systematic inspections of your fields. Your Extension Office will help you identify your bean insects.

I met with the Tuscola county chapter of the Michigan Pork Producers directors as they finalized the program for this year's Tri-County Barrow and Carcass Evaluation Show Aug. 4 at the Tuscola County Fair. There will be six trophies, two plaques and 25 premiums awarded during this event.

The more important purpose of this event is the knowledge swine producers and finishers receive to enable them to produce top dollar hogs.

The barrow show judging teaches what a top quality barrow looks like. The carcass show tells how much lean meat is produced, size of loin eye muscle, back fat, length of loin and meat color and texture. With this information, the producer can produce top dollar hogs whether they are for breeding or finishing for market. Producers buying their feeder pigs can find out the quality level of the feeder pigs they buy.

Entries for this event will be weighed and tattooed Friday, Aug. 3, at the Caro fairgrounds from 10 a.m.-noon. All barrows between 200 and 240 pounds can be entered.

Cancer Society holds elections

Board members of the Tuscola County Unit American Cancer Society met in the basement of the Tuscola County Advertiser July 9. Ione Perry of Cass City presided at the business meeting.

The following were elected to serve in the coming year: President, Betty Kochalka; vice-president, Janice Rands; secretary, Gail Gengler; treasurer, Joanne Wendling; delegate, Ione Perry; public education, Sandy Gaudreau; professional education, Jane Mitchell; service, Ethel Young; public information, Tina Hoard, and memorial, Diane Kanyok.

Betty Kochalka reported that this year's crusade had reached $26,935. Of that, $14,730 was obtained from residential crusade. The remainder came from memorials and special events. It was announced that $2,360 was obtained from the recent Walter Hagen Golf Tournament in Caro.

Rudy Petzold showed a copy of the literature he mailed to more than 4,000 homes as a plea to the areas which were not covered in this year's door-to-door crusade.

Sandy Gaudreau reported on the townships that had participated in the crusade. She also reported on films she had shown recently.

Ruth Hoffman, division representative, reported on a new program, "I Cope," which is being organized for cancer patients and their families. She also said plans are under way for a "I Quit" program.

New books at the library

THE NOSTRADAMUS TRAITOR, by John Gardner (fiction). The unexpected appearance of a German woman in England in 1978 triggers an investigation into the past, which reveals not only bloodcurdling plots and counterplots in wartime Germany and France, but their strange connection with the present.

CALAIS, by Kathleen Winsor (fiction). Winsor, author of "Forever Amber," has written a fascinating novel about a young woman who wants more than anything to become an actress. As she works her way to the top, we watch as she absorbs her roles and plays them - developing a talent which carries her beyond human limitation to the realm of art. This is the story of what it is like to be a star - the pressures, the exhilaration, the loves, the disappointments, and above all, the burning ambition that conquers all obstacles, except death. The alluring, complex, demanding world of the theatre comes alive in this wonderfully involving book.

DON'T MOVE-IMPROVE, by Cle Kinney and Barry Roberts (non-fiction). This graphically illustrated book shows how you can imaginatively redo your present living space to get precisely what you want - at the lowest possible cost. Authors Kinney and Roberts help you pinpoint your exact needs, and then present clever and unique ways to improve your present home - by installing new window and door arrangements, adding wings, carving new rooms from existing space, and using light and color to best advantage. Over 300 photographs, charts, and line drawings illustrate their creative, professional solutions.

Your Neighbor says

Kennedy assassination was a conspiracy

The House Assassinations Committee finished its $5.4 million investigation of the deaths of President John F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King Jr. last week, with the majority of its members concluding "both assassinations probably occurred as a result of conspiracies."

Roy Wagg agrees with the committee's findings. "I don't think Oswald acted alone. It looks like it was too well planned for that."

At the time of the assassination, Wagg thought Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone, but over the years since then decided, "I thought it was a conspiracy."

The Assassinations Committee partially based its majority conclusion on acoustics tests made of a tape recording from a motorcycle policeman's open microphone at the time and place of the Kennedy shooting. The tests showed a supposed fourth shot from elsewhere than where Oswald was.

Wagg agreed with that conclusion.

As for the assassination of Martin Luther King, he said, "There was probably more than (James Earl) Ray behind it."

A farmer, Wagg and his wife, Shirley, have three children, Karen, Kim and Kevin, all at home. They live on Spence Road, Cass City.

Community booster

In 57th year

3rd generation
at Fort's store

Editor's note: this is one of a series sponsored by the Cass City Chamber of Commerce about community boosters who are members of the organization.

Fort's Store in Cass City was a family operation when it was started by the late Alfred and Mrs. Fort in 1922 and it is still a family operation today.

Fifty-seven years after it opened the store is under the direction of the third generation of the family.

Ralph Retherford joined his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Phil Retherford in the business after graduating from Cass City High School.

Phil Retherford worked in the store with his wife from 1952-67 and then bought the business. When Fort's opened it was primarily a fruit and vegetable outlet.

Today it is a party convenience store and the only store in Cass City that has a license to sell liquor. The license was acquired in 1938.

The business was incorporated three years ago. Phil is the president, Ralph the vice-president and Betty the secretary-treasurer.

Both of the Retherfords are lifelong residents of the area and graduated from Cass City High School. Before coming to the store, Phil operated a farm in the Deford area.

Besides Ralph, the couple has one other son, Ed, a teacher at Alpena who also captains a charter fishing boat.

Dr. Sang H. Park

New physician
starts practice

Minus some of his office equipment, Dr. Sang H. Park began his practice in Cass City last Thursday.

The 33-year-old specialist in obstetrics and gynecology was formerly chief resident in that specialty at Misericordia Hospital in the Bronx, New York, before moving to Cass City July 1.

"I have been waiting for my desk and other equipment to arrive here for three weeks," he said last week. "I do have an examining table and some other equipment now, but the other things should arrive very soon."

Park moved to Cass City because he has admired the closeness of a small community, as compared to the anonymity in the big city.

"The people here are very kind and I am looking forward to serving them. I like the communication and the feeling of togetherness here, plus Cass City has less air pollution than New York."

Park took his pre-medical and medical training at Seoul National University, South Korea, before coming to the United States in 1974. For two years he interned at St. Joseph's Hospital in Towson, Md., near Baltimore.

After that, he went to Misericordia, where he completed three years of residency. He is a junior fellow in the American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology.

Cass City is where I and my family will settle down," he said. "I am applying for U.S. citizenship this year and am very happy to be here."

Park is married and has two boys. His wife's name is Myung and the boys' names are Eddy, 3½, and Jimmy, 7 months. They live at 6810 Herron Drive.

His office is in the Hills and Dales Medical Clinic, 4672 Hill Street, across from the hospital.

According to hospital Administrator Ken Jensen, contact with Park was first made through Daniel Pace, who was administrator at Harbor Beach Community Hospital before going to Misericordia as assistant administrator. Pace knew of the need for an obstetrician-gynecologist in Cass City and recommended Park.

The last such specialist here left in July, 1977.

Missionary
Day Aug. 3
at Bay Shore

Everyone is invited to attend Missionary Day at Bay Shore Park, Friday, Aug. 3, at 10 a.m.

Speaker for the day will be Rev. Douglas Crowder of Goodrich. He and his wife, Elaine, spent many years in Zaire as houseparents and support missionaries. Rev. Crowder spoke in many Thumb churches during the Mission Saturation Event last winter.

Rev. Murt Eastman will again be entertaining the elementary and junior high age children during the morning and afternoon sessions. Rev. Eastman uses magic, ventriloquism, puppet skits, and scene-o-felts in his presentation of the gospel each day at Bay Shore. Dinner will be served in the dining hall at noon.

At 3:30, a tea will be served by the Sebewaing church. Special music will be furnished by Salem church of Pigeon both morning and afternoon.

HEALTH TIPS

Unsafe boating can lead to drowningBy Frank Chappell,
American Medical Association

Boating is increasing as a family summer pastime all across the nation. And the boom in boating has greatly increased the potential hazard for drownings.

With boat traffic getting heavier each summer on the lakes and streams and shorelines, boat operators must understand and practice safe boating practices.

The American Medical Association reminds that boating equipment should be checked before leaving shore.

Essential safety equipment for a boat includes an anchor, a fire extinguisher, oars, a horn, running lights, a signal mirror and a first aid kit.

A life preserver or flotation cushion should be provided for each person aboard. Nonswimmers should wear life jackets at all times afloat. Some states have laws requiring such equipment before boats can be licensed for hire.

Most boating accidents involve faulty operation, negligence, or ignorance. The skipper should know his or her boat, keep his mind on business, and operate the boat according to nautical rules. And by all means stay ashore in threatening weather.

If water skiing is on your list of water activities, make certain you and other members of your family who might try the sport know how to swim. There should be at least two persons in the boat when pulling water skiers.

Good physical condition is a prerequisite for water skiing. The skier should practice basic maneuvers before adding new or advanced skills. A life jacket or belt should be worn at all times.

A hard fall might knock the skier temporarily out of the water. In case of a fall the skier should stay with the skis and signal the boatman that he is all right. Ski only during the daytime, never at night.

"Keep that Great GM feeling with Genuine GM Parts."

ing, the Walbro Corporation Board of Directors declared a dividend of $.10 per share of Walbro common stock payable July 31 to shareholders of record June 29.

"The gains in sales and earnings resulted from strong performance by our carburetor, fuel pump and plastics product lines. Performance of our die cast aluminum and magnesium product lines did not match this pace - due primarily to a strike which began early in June," said L.E. Althaver, President and Chief Operating Officer of the multinational firm headquartered here.

Looking ahead for the last six months of '79 Althaver said that the cost of materials and labor continues to increase, presenting a strong challenge to the maintenance of overall margins of profit. That, plus inflation and the availability and cost of energy, may have an adverse effect on sales and earnings.

Meat inspectors' duties

The processing inspector's job, though it may be done by the same person, is somewhat different.

They check such items as making sure sausage is cooked at the proper temperature, spices are mixed in with sausage in the specified amounts, hamburger has no more than 30 percent fat and that everything is done in a sanitary manner.

"You don't want to take clean, wholesome meat and put it through a dirty grinder," Lounsbury pointed out.

Meat inspectors have one basic rule, he added. "None of us would pass anything we wouldn't eat."

MEAT INSPECTORS (from left) Tom Lounsbury, Wilbur Norrington and Eddie Paladi. Norrington has been an inspector for the Michigan Department of Agriculture Animal Health Division for about 10 years; Lounsbury and Paladi, about nine years each.

Talk over 1980 festival

Herron said.

The chamber president complimented Enoch (Red) Osentoski for the "great job" he did with the tractor pull.

"I think there were more people at that event than any other," He listened to ideas from chamber members about roping off the tractor pull and charging a fee to get in to watch.

"There are expenses in this and they have to be covered," Osentoski commented. He suggested the village extend the track for next year's festival.

ARTS AND CRAFTS chairman Nancy deBeaubien said over 50 entries were present at this year's festival and she expects the number to be even bigger next year.

"We required a $5 deposit from each dealer and gave it back to them once they had arrived and set up," she said. "Next year we should ask for $10 each and put it towards the chamber's expenses."

It was suggested that the pony pull area should be separate from the tractor pull so that the pony pull won't have to start late, as happened this year. Herron said it wasn't "too successful" for that reason.

The swimming events and marathon race both ran "very well" according to those at the meeting. Both will be included in next year's activities and the number of participants is expected to grow substantially.

TUG OF WAR CHAIRMAN Wayne Dillon said his event was a lot of fun, but next year he wants "life insurance for the officials."

The only problem was that many of the spectators couldn't see some of the matches, but that may be solved by moving the event to the north end of the toboggan hill, opposite the tractor pull location.

The chamber was told by Jaycees President Dan Ulfig that the hot air balloon distracted several softball players who were batting and looking right at it when their tournament was going on.

One solution offered was to move the balloon to where many of the parked cars were on the other side of the diamonds and farther away.

Abandoning the historical and industrial displays due to a lack of interest was considered.

Herron suggested the disco dance and other teen events should be scheduled for next year and that the dance should be kept outside with no charge to the participants.

PARKING AND TRAFFIC control need to be tighter and more regulated, the festival chairman said. "We were lucky there was no one seriously injured this year and we should find a way to keep all the cars out of the park next year to remove any possibility of an accident."

All the groups sponsoring the concession stands reported making a substantial amount of money and the chamber is considering asking for a percentage next year from those organizations to cover some of the festival cost.

"We want the concession stands to be all local people," Herron said. "We don't want anyone from the outside taking the service group's business away."

Supported was a move to keep the beer tent out of the park and at the Charmingont so that alcohol problems could be kept "at a minimum." The group did consider having the tent opened the night before the festivities and also to look into the possibility of having more beer taps to reduce problems.

THE FINAL ITEM DISCUSSED about next year's festival was the possibility of having fireworks. Because of the cost (about $3,000 minimum), the chamber was unable to afford any fireworks this year and accordingly, disappointed many people expecting them.

"We'll try to have them next year," Herron said. "It would be a great drawing card if we did. I know it would."

He admitted the festival committee made mistakes this year and vowed to avoid those problems next year.

"There are a lot of areas that need improvement and a lot of things we can do to change the festival to make it better."

"But it's got to be a community effort if we want to make next year's festival an even greater success."

Kingston man hospitalized after cycle accident

A Kingston man was reported in satisfactory condition Tuesday afternoon at Marlette Community Hospital, where he has been since an accident at 9:40 p.m. Saturday.

Deputies reported Gerhard Mock, 29, of Clothier Road, was southbound on unpaved Cemetery Road, south of Mayville Road, when his motorcycle hit several chuckholes.

His machine went out of control, went off the west side of the road, came back on it and fell onto its side. The cycle slid about 100 feet before coming to a halt.

LeRoy A. Hayward, 24, of 4186 Mushroom Road, DeFord, was discharged from Caro Community Hospital last Thursday, the day after he was in an accident on Plain Road, north of Riley Road.

Deputies quoted him as saying he was northbound when several deer ran into the path of his vehicle. He lost control and it went into a ditch on the east side and struck a tree.

Sherry Ann Briolat, 16, of Ubyly, was treated and released Friday from Huron Memorial Hospital, Bad Axe, after an accident on Atwater Road, near Nugent Road in Bingham township.

Huron county deputies reported she was westbound when she momentarily looked away from the road at some mail on the car seat. Her car then ran into the rear of one driven by Monica S. Delor, 69, of Ruth.

Mrs. Delor, plus a passenger in the other auto, Judy Briolat, 15, both sought their own treatment for minor injuries.

Anna Gabler, 59, of 3700 Hadley Road, Decker, and her passenger, Herman J. Gabler, 70, same address, both sought their own treatment after an accident at 5:08 p.m. Saturday.

Deputies said they were eastbound on Shabbona Road, west of Crawford, when the driver lost control. The car swerved back and forth, then went off the south side and rolled over in a ditch, landing upside down.

Mrs. Gabler was ticketed on a charge of violation of the basic speed law. Herman Gabler was given a ticket charging him with interfering with the driver, because he had grabbed the steering wheel, according to officers.

William F. Voss, 45, of Owendale, sought his own treatment after his truck ran off M-53 at 6:15 p.m. Monday and hit the Army Reserve Center, a mile north of Bad Axe.

Voss told Huron county deputies he was attempting to turn left off northbound M-53 onto M-142 when the truck went out of control. It also struck a utility pole breaking it and damaging the wires.

At 3:15 p.m. Saturday, according to Cass City police, Nelson P. Anker, 76, of 5222 Cedar Run Road, was attempting to pull into a parking place on Main Street, east of West Street, and struck a parked car.

Owner of the parked car was Edmund Vargo of Sebewaing.

Deputies reported that at 11:40 a.m. Monday, Michael J. Reinelt, 17, of Harrison Road, Kingston, backed into a car parked in front of the Kingston Post Office on River Street.

Owner of the parked car was Rev. Kenneth Boileau of 3435 River Street.

Extra job funds total $536,000

The Thumb Area Consortium has received an unexpected gift -- $536,852 in federal Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) Title VI funds, enough to provide 150 temporary jobs.

Consortium Director Frank Lenard had been trying to obtain $150,000 additional, but instead received the larger amount.

The money comes from other CETA coordinating agencies in Michigan who were unable to spend their allocations.

Lenard told the consortium administrative board last Thursday that he doubted his agency would be able to spend all of the $536,852, but would "make every effort" to do so. It can only keep 10 percent of any of the money left over as of Sept. 30.

Hiring will be done by the Tri-County Public Service Agency, with referrals made by the Michigan Employment Security Offices.

Those hired will receive the minimum wage of $2.90 an hour and do such jobs for local governmental agencies and non-profit organizations as brush cutting, cemetery clean-up, fairgrounds maintenance and painting.

Prior to receiving the added money, the consortium was to have received $459,188 during the present fiscal year for the category designated for Title VI projects.

The number of CETA jobs for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1 has been expected to be limited because of the federally imposed average wage limit of $6.635 annually, which worked out to $3.18 an hour.

It will now be $7.093 as of Oct. 1, which works out to about $3.40 an hour. That will make it, Lenard said, "somewhat easier to hire people."

The reason for the change, he explained, is that the minimum average CETA salary allowed must be 10 percent above the federal minimum wage, which changes Jan. 1. It will go up from $2.90 per hour to $3.15.

Snover girl to play softball in Belize

Two Sanilac county girls have been named to the Michigan 4-H all-star girls' softball team which will compete against high school and city girls' teams in Belize, Central America, July 19-31, according to Danny Sandmann, Sanilac county 4-H youth agent.

Sharon Romzek, Snover, and Kay Pringle, Peck, are among 15 girls, ages 14-19, nominated by county youth agents and softball coaches throughout the state. The Michigan Team is the first 4-H sports team in the United States to compete in another country. Next year, the Belizean team will travel to Michigan to play.

Softball is the national women's sport in Belize, and the Belizean women's team was the defending champion of the Pan American Games.

In addition to playing Belizean softball teams, the 4-H team, accompanied by coaches, is donating softball equipment to a school for the deaf and will teach the students the fundamentals of softball.

Other activities will include a visit to ancient Mayan ruins and a morning in Chetumal, Mexico.

The softball exchange is made possible through the Michigan State 4-H Youth Program and the Partners of the Americas program.

The Partners of the Americas program is the world's largest volunteer program involved in international development. It links individual states with Latin American countries in joint projects in agriculture, health, arts, sports, education, tourism and business.
