Being proposed are tariffs, quotas on the number of cars that can be sold here, or pressuring the foreign car makers, especially the Japanese, to build production plants here.

Marie Nichols feels the ultimate solution is up to the American car companies.

"They shouldn't be bringing in all those foreign cars," she said, "but the companies here should be making little ones (cars) instead of all those big things.'

"If they'd make little ones, people wouldn't buy those foreign ones," she continued.

"All the American companies have to do, is make little cars that get some gas

New books at the library

PARLOR GAMES, by Robert Marasco (fiction). Who's demented? Susan, who jumped or was pushed off her New York City apartment balcony? Susan's unstable mother, Joanne, insisting that boyish toy compnay executive Peter is Susan's murderer, using the telephone as an instrument of torment, and hiring a man to vandalize his apartment? Peter's sister Gail, so obsesively protective of him? Novelist Marasco moves readers around these puzzles like tokens on a game board, deftly maneuvering changes of mind right to the final page, and along the way casting a chilly spell with tightly written, complete glimpses of terror beneath cool, urbane masks.

SNEAKS, by Edith Pinero Green (mystery). Dearborn V. Pinch is a delightful septuagenarian rascal. He is possessed of an inquiring mind and native stubbornness, traits that come in handy when he's forced to investigate a murder by himself. Very often he does launch his own investigation. since he has a habit of stumbling over bodies. In "Sneaks", Pinch is on his way to a funeral and discovers a body in the bushes in front of the funeral home. Against all common sense and the repeatedly expressed wishes of the police, Pinch starts his own probe and gets mixed up with some very cultured and dangerous crooks.

WHO EDUCATES YOUR CHILD? by D. Bruce Lockerbie (non-fiction). An in-depth analysis of the American educational system with specific advice on what an individual family can do to reclaim the inherent right to provide their children with the best possible education. It dwells upon the advantages as well as the disadvantages of sending your child to public schools where no religion is taught and makes a strong case for education in good Christian schools the CF gene.

The Greater Michigan Chapter of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation has launched a statewide educational project, "Kiss Your Baby," the week of Feb. 10-16.

The purpose is to alert parents to the symptoms of Cystic Fibrosis and other children's lung diseases, in the hope that early diagnosis and prompt treatment (an essential element in lengthening the life span of children with CF) will result.

One of the symptoms of Cystic Fibrosis is an extremely salty taste to the CF child's perspiration, which can be detected by kissing or tasting them on the forehead.

Other symptoms include:
1) recurrent wheezing; 2) persistent coughing and excessive mucus; 3) pneumonia more than once during childhood; 4) excessive appetite, but poor weight gain; 5) clubbing (enlargement) of fingertips.

Suspecting parents should consult their physician.

"It is estimated that respiratory problems in children take up to 70 percent of a pediatrician's time and is the leading cause of chronic absenteeism from school,' said Jeanne Mayan, president of the Greater Michigan CF Chapter.

"Furthermore, Fibrosis is second only to cancer in the number of young lives it takes and three out of four victims of this disease are not yet diagnosed. Early diagnosis of CF is essential to longer life for these children."

Cystic Fibrosis is an inherited disease for which there appeal and reversal of a trial court decision will be able to present their case before a different judge when the case is returned to the trial court for consideration, under a bill recently introduced in the Michigan House of Representatives by State Rep. Loren Armbruster (R-Caro).

Under present state law, cases which have been reversed after a successful appeal are normally remanded to the same judge for consideration.

The Armbruster-sponsored legislation would apply to multi-judge districts.

"Whenever an attorney succeeds in reversing a trial judge's decision, the case should be sent to a different judge," Armbruster said. "By doing this, the process would be fairer to both sides and their legal representatives because it would reduce the chances of any subconcious bias, particularly against the attorney who won the appeal."

The proposal would also give attorneys an opportunity to request a change of judges 10 days from the date a new trial is scheduled. Armbruster said he introduced the measure, which is patterned after an Indiana court rule, at the request of a
