

New books at the library

STEPPING, by Nancy Thayer (fiction). Zelda Campbell accepted the traditional roles of wife and mother and she attempted to succeed at stepmothering when her husband's daughters of a former marriage came to visit. The beautiful story about the life of one woman who comes to terms with herself, the people she loves, and the barriers between them.

DETROIT 1985, by Donald MacDonald (non-fiction). An irreverent look at the auto industry, and its relationship to the government, the energy crisis - and the consumer. The author exposes every facet of the big business of making and selling cars, from the marketing strategies of the giant corporation to the dealerships and the UAW.

THE COMPLETE BOOK OF BALLROOM DANCING, by Richard Stephenson (non-fiction). This indispensable handbook contains clear, step-by-step instructions for today's most popular ballroom dances, including eight different versions of the Hustle. Also included are a fascinating history of ballroom dancing and a guide to general dancing skills.

Family films at 7:30 p.m. Monday: "A Day in the Life of Bonnie Consolo" and "Golden Fish."
