After school classes set in Cass City

Registration for the brand ... new "Afterschool Specials" and "Super Saturday" youth enrichment and recreational programs is underway in the Cass City Public Schools, according to community education director Kathleen O'Donnell.

The classes get underway this week and end June 3. Veteran educator and administrator Art Holmberg will share his talents in chemistry and physics with 4th-6th graders in a class entitled "Come With me to the La-bor-a-tory.

Katy Jackson is cooking up something special with her high school students for K-3rd graders called "I Can't Believe I Cooked the Whole Thing!" Wrestling coach Russ Biefer will lend his expertise to 7th and 8th graders in a wrestling clinic and golf coach Mike Gogola will sharpen up the golfing skills of kids age 10 and above

Debate, forensics and drama coach Denise Gorsline will share the world of children's theatre with 4th-6th graders in theatre workshop

Saturdays at Campbell Elementary School, 4-5year-olds will take part in Super Kids Club.

The Intermediate School will house the following: "Clay Cookies" for 3-4-year-olds taught by Marilyn Biefer, "Writer's Cramps" by writer Linda Boynton, "Cheerleading Clinic" by Celeste Bader, "Sound of Music" by vocalist Colleen Stafford and "Puppets, Papier Mache, and Paint' by Linda Eisinger.

At the high school, Art Holberg will have his chemistry class; Dotty Scollon, "Chef's Club" for 4th-6th graders, "Lots of Knots" by Linda Mason, and Cindy Schantz will teach "From Here to Creativity" for 7th and 8th grade artists.

Hair Benders will demonstrate all the do's and don't's of hair styling and care April 15 for 6th-12th graders.

Other "Afterschool" Specials" will be tap dancing, taught by Mary Ellen Miller; "math madness," Carol Pasant; woodcrafts, Tim Brandon; gymnastics for 1st-4th graders, Gail Gengler; chess, Joe Guza; dog obedience, Janet Linsmier, and weaving, Alice Guern-

James McIntyre, assisted by Frank Cali, will be teaching the sport of soccer. It is hoped that leagues can be organized this year, as an aftermath of the interest shown by 8-14-year-olds last year. Coaches and officials are needed and interested adults can call the community education office. Recreational classes such as wrestling, soccer and gymnastics require a health card, obtainable at the community education office at the high school.

A countywide United Way program, according to Duskin, would be beneficial for the following reasons:

1) Increased financial support and services by member agencies without losing individual community funding support or involvement. 2) Increased potential for financial support. In 1962-63, a countywide United Way program raised $24,056. In 1979-80, separate campaigns raised a total of $23,229 in Tuscola county. Over 50 percent of the county is unreached by a United Way appeal, while cies. According to survey agencies provide services without needed financial assistance.

3) Reduced cost for agencies which now must make several budget presentations, to one presentation countywide, at the same time giving support to agencies with only one community interest.

4) Increased potential of getting designated pledges at places of work out of county back into the county and increased payroll deduction plans.

5) Reduced fund-raising efforts by individual agen-

wide organization or effort.

Most of the money raised locally is given to local organizations and causes, but the last time funds were distributed, a year ago, money also went to Big Brothers-Big Sisters, American Red Cross, Catholic Family Service, all of which directly serve the county -and $2,200 to Michigan United Way.

Had the local fund drive not exceeded its goal in 1978, Mrs. Tuckey said, the amount given to Michigan United Way could have been reduced. As part of a countywide organization, she wondered if there still would be that option. At present, there are only four United Way organizations in the county, in Cass City, Akron, Fairgrove and Vassar. Efforts are underway in Caro to revive the organization there after a three year lapse, with the aid of the Caro Jaycees and concerned citizens.

After a meeting Feb. 25 in which C. DeWayne Duskin, field representative for United Way of Michigan, spoke to the Thumb Area Regional Interagency Coordinating Committee, an ad hoc committee was formed with representatives from participating agencies. Purpose of the committee was to call together county

Most kids happy with parents the way they are

If kids could change anything between them and parents, their most wouldn't.

That was one of the findings in a limited survey conducted by Ilene Soldan of Cass City Road, Unionville, for a high school completion psychology class project.

She arranged to have her survey form passed out by a teacher in a study hall at Cass City Intermediate School. Parents had to sign permission slips before their children could fill out the form

Mrs. Soldan wanted to do a study of communications between parents and children. "I was going to interview parents, but too many parents are interviewed now (for such studies)." 'Then she decided, "Why don't I ask the kids?"

There were 24 students who filled out the form, eight boys and 16 girls, ranging in age from 12-14.

Fifteen live on farms, the rest in town. Nineteen live with both parents, one with foster parents, one with their mother, one with their father and two with their mother and a stepfather.

All but one or two said they are usually able to get along with and talk to both parents

Asked if they would change anything in the relationship between them and their parents, 20 said they would not, four said they would.

What would the four like changed? "The way they spoil me," said onc. "I you with an attitude of, 'Do would like to be raised not so as I say, not as I do,''' was closely guarded," responded another question. another.

Sixteen of the respondents go to church or want to go; eight never go.

"Did you hug your mom or dad or both this morning?" None of the boys had, but half the girls did.

The boys may not have been huggers, but five of the eight said they can tell their parents, "I love you." Fifteen of the 16 girls said they could express that emotion to their parents.

Can their parents show to their children that they have feelings, such as fear, loneliness, love, getting upset or crying? Twenty of the respondents replied "yes."

Apparently such an attitude by parents is common, as 19 responded in the affirmative.

The final question was whether little brother or little sister gets his or her own way or at least, does it seem that way.

Five declined to comment because they were the youngest. Of the rest, 12 said their younger brothers and sisters get their own way.

Seven said, "no." Mrs. Soldan titled her survey, "Raising My Parents." She got an "A" on the assignment.
