HEALTH TIPS

Poison ivy season has arrived again

By Frank Chappell
American Medical Association

Poison ivy season is here again.

You may have handled poison ivy last year and escaped with an itch, but don't push your luck. No one is permanently immune to poison ivy, oak or sumac.

The American Medical Association points out that the next meeting with this pesky plant could take place in your own yard, as well as in the woods and fields.

Poison ivy has appeared in city gardens. Sometimes that lovely vine climbing the side of your house is laced with the offending poison ivy.

Know how to detect poison plants and avoid them. Poison ivy and its close kin, poison oak, are three-leaved plants which may grow as low bushes or climbing vines. They may be mixed with honeysuckle and other climbers.

Poison sumac, an eastern swamp plant with seven to thirteen leaflets and small white berries, usually grows as a shrub.

If you have been exposed, carefully remove your clothes and thoroughly wash all affected areas with warm water and soap. Then sponge with an alcohol solution. Using rubber gloves, clean your clothes in an oil solvent and soapy water. Dry them in the sun.

Heilig takes management program

Gerald W. Heilig, 6250 S. Ubly Road, Ubly, wire drawing supervisor at General Cable Co., Cass City, completed the Unit I course April 25 in Wittenberg University's Management Development Program.

The series of five-day on-campus courses at Springfield, Ohio, are designed to strengthen the management competency and provide new insights into the management functions of supervisory personnel in industry.

The courses concentrate in four areas - behavioral studies and motivation, communications and leadership, management functions and methods, and economics and personnel relations.
