

Rob 4 on O-G class trip

One of the worst things that can ruin a vacation is a robbery on the road and the worst happened to four Owen-Gage High School students during their recent senior trip to Florida.

Three men entered the room occupied by Alan Haag, John Retford and Brad Erickson at the Caravan Inn, near Orlando, early the morning of Friday, June 6, and took a number of items plus $180 in cash.

All three students were in the room at the time along with Mary Kay Burrows, another student, who was preparing to leave when the robbery occurred. Burrows said she was forced back into the room by men who were waiting outside the door. One of them held a pair of scissors to her back, scratching her when they forced her into the room. She was the only one hurt.

She then ran into the bathroom but came out after the men threatened her.

"They said 'You better come out or we'll kill you,'" she said.

One of the men claimed to have a gun, but none of the students saw it during the incident.

According to Haag, the men were only in the room for about a minute. Just enough time to grab what they saw as valuable and take off.

Immediately after the robbery, the kids called the rest of the 12 students on the trip warning them to lock their doors.

They then called the police and chaperones, Burrows added. The police came and inspected the scene but the students are doubtful they will ever see their belongings again.

Whether or not the items were covered by insurance is still being investigated.

Haag said he had $50 stolen with his wallet and watch plus a gym bag containing an electric razor, hair dryer, shoes and clothes.

Retford said he had his watch, camera and $10 taken. Erickson had $128 and a camera stolen in the incident.

The students were near the end of their stay near Orlando, Fla., where they had been visiting for the week of June 1-7.

Even though they ran into bad luck while in Florida the kids said they tried to have as much fun as possible following the robbery. They agreed they did not want one bad incident to ruin an otherwise good time.

Year-old animal shelter working well, says officer

By James Iseler

It has been almost one year since the new Tuscola county animal shelter opened west of Caro on M-81 and animal control officer Jeff Quinn feels the new facility has some definite advantages over its predecessor.

The main improvement is size. The old shelter, located inside the Caro village limits, was only about half as big as the new one.

Where the old shelter had four pens to hold dogs, the new one has 12. Although the new pens are smaller they still add up to more space for dogs that are being held there. And since there are more dogs that means there are fewer dogs in each pen.

Quinn said the number of dogs that pass through the shelter has remained about the same but he added it is easier to care for them than it was before.

Each cage has two parts. One inside and one outside. Dogs are allowed outside during the day and the inside cages are cleaned. At night they are brought back in and the outside is cleaned. During the day the animals are allowed to wander back and forth.

In the old shelter, the cages were all indoors and had to be washed down at least twice a day, Quinn said.

Other additions which are improvements over the old building include a three-cage holding area for dogs suspected of carrying diseases and a food preparation room.

It also has an area for cats which, although not picked up, are accepted and held with the dogs.

The pound keeps only dogs, cats and puppies, referring all other animal reports to the Department of Natural Resources.

Although neither Quinn, nor deputy animal control officer Don Willis, can administer medicine to the animals brought in, they do feed and water them.

The question arises -- Only so many dogs and cats can fit into the shelter so what happens when it gets full?

From this thought, the image of the big bad dog catcher arises. A professional meanie who rounds up pets for the purpose of destroying them.

This is one image that Quinn wants badly to dispel.

He said he sees his job as a public protector, collecting loose dogs that could pose a danger to people in a county he claims is overcrowded with animals.

Most of the dogs brought to the county pound end up there because their owners no longer properly care for them.

A classic example, Quinn points out, is a litter of pups that can neither be kept or placed in suitable homes.

But the question remains -- what happens to them?

Once a week, usually Wednesday or Thursday, Fred Hodgins of Howell, comes to pick up those animals which are not claimed or given to people in search of pets.

For this he gets an average of $140 a week from the county.

Quinn said he would like to find homes for the animals brought to the shelter but, adds the fact that so many are brought in shows there are not that many good homes to be found.

When an animal is brought in it must be kept for four working days before it is shipped out or sold. This gives an owner time to come to the pound to retrieve their pet.

If a pet is brought in and a paper signed by the owners, it can be shipped out earlier.

Quinn and Willis go out twice a day on calls to answer stray dog reports. Each of them cover half the county.

Even so they cannot get all the dogs that are reported. There are a couple things people can do to help Quinn with his job.

If the dog is hanging around, try to catch it and keep it penned up until the animal control officer can get there. If the dog cannot be caught at least keep track of the direction in which it took off.

Quinn said he tries to be helpful to the owner when picking up a stray. If it is licensed he will attempt to return it. But, most dogs are unlicensed and that is where the problem occurs.

An unlicensed dog that is picked up then claimed as Quinn begins to drive off will probably be returned, as long as the owner stays cool.

But if they get belligerent, claiming Quinn is just picking up dogs for the fun of it, he said he is liable to take the dog to the pound anyway, forcing the owner to come and bail it out -- with a $10 fee.

3 area schools start teacher contract talks

Thumb area school districts appear to be following a statewide trend in negotiations among the various districts and the school unions.

It is the exception rather than the rule to find a district that has its labor contracts settled with the end of the fiscal year, June 30, less than two weeks away.

There are districts working with multi-year contracts that have no bargaining problems and a few that have hammered out a contract with relative ease.

One of these is in the Thumb where Marlette and the Marlette Teachers' Association reached a settlement in just nine meetings, coming into agreement well before the previous contract was due to expire.

But other districts are not finding it that easy. Although unable to predict a length for negotiations, Cass City Superintendent Donald G. Crouse said after looking at the teachers' proposals it could take "many, many meetings" before they settle.

One of the causes for variety in length of negotiations could be the introduction of outside bargainers, according to Marlette Superintendent Bob Frederikson.

He claimed the presence of such bargaining units as the Tri-County Bargaining Association tends to prolong settlements. Marlette teachers do not belong to the TCBA. Cass City teachers do.

Negotiations that stay within the district can be handled quickly, professionally and more effectively than those with outside bargainers, he said.

The TCBA represents 14 school districts in the three-county area and seeks to gain a fair settlement for all by comparing one to another.

At any rate, negotiations between teachers and Thumb school districts shape up to be a varied lot, depending on the stage each district is in.

CASS CITY

In Cass City, the TCBA and the Board of Education have begun the initial stages of working out a new contract.

The TCBA met Tuesday, June 10, with the Board's bargaining team, led by professional negotiator Al Luce of Saginaw, to present the teachers' proposals for a tentative two-year contract.

The present three-year contract expires Aug. 15. Neither side could predict how long it will take to settle since the entire Board has not even seen the teacher proposals or presented their own.

"If I were to say how long it would take it would be pure speculation on my part," Crouse said.

Another meeting is scheduled for Thursday, June 26. Although the proposals do not specify a two-year contract, Phyllis McCoy, negotiator for the TCBA, confirmed they were working on a two-year pact.

With the fluctuation in the cost of living, McCoy said a contract shorter than the present one would be best.

"We don't want to get tied into a three-year contract," Ms. McCoy said.

Both the Board and the TCBA must ratify the agreement before it becomes effective.

The present contract came about after a year of haggling and a strike by Cass City teachers.

Only two Board members were at the initial meeting so its reaction to the proposals was uncertain.

Crouse said the entire Board should see the document at its regular July meeting.

OWEN-GAGE

The Owen-Gage school district will begin contract talks Monday when the Board of Education sits down to hear the initial proposals of the TCBA.

Superintendent Ron Erickson said he has no idea at this point how the talks will go.

Owen-Gage is working to replace a three-year contract which expires Aug. 31.

UBLY

In Uby, negotiators are in the process of working out salaries for the last year of their three-year contract, according to business manager Mark Tenbusch.

The two sides have met four times so far but no real progress has been made, he stated.

The teams will meet again Wednesday, June 18.

That meeting should be more productive, Tenbusch said, with both sides presenting more realistic demands.

Until now, proposals from both sides have not been acceptable to the other side, he added.

New proposals are expected for Wednesday's meeting.

KINGSTON

Teachers in the Kingston school district will sit down to decide the school year calendar but that is all, according to Sharon Brandibur, secretary to the superintendent.

Teachers there settled last year on a contract that will operate through 1982.

CARO

The Caro school district has two years left of a three-year contract, according to Superintendent Lyle Lauer.

The only business to be completed is the teacher ratification of the school calendar. They are in the process of voting on the calendar by mail and Lauer said he expects it to pass.

Won't last a year, said cynics

Early days recalled as Cass City Rotary celebrates 50th year

The smart money in Cass City in 1929 was betting that Rotary would never start in the village and if it did would not last a year.

After all it took a lot of arm twisting for the dedicated Rotarians from the Caro club with help from Rotarians elsewhere to finally find 15 members willing to join.

It wasn't a time for striking out with a new anything. The depression had started and things were far from rosy.

After about two years of work 15 members signed and came up with the $20 membership fee.

Two charter members of the club are expected to be present when Rotary celebrates its 50 years Saturday night at Sherwood-on-the-Hill. They are Fred Pinney and M.B. Auten.

The club had been meeting for several months before the charter night which was held Oct. 7, 1930.

The first record of the club's activities appeared in the Chronicle July 25 when an address by Dr. M. Wickware was reported.

When Rotary formed Clara Bow was starring in "Dangerous Curves" at the Pastime Theatre in Cass City.

Cass Cityans were paying 25 cents a pound for coffee at the A&P (when they had the quarter), bread was selling for 8 cents for a 1½-pound loaf and Cass City beat Bad Axe in overtime in the basketball district tournament, 6-4.

Chevrolet was advertising a new super six-cylinder car and there was talk about improving M-53 near Detroit.

Despite the condition of the roads at the time the club was swamped with 225 Rotarians from all over Michigan and Ontario who descended on Cass City.

M.B. Auten, the club's first president, recalled the charter night, when the club celebrated its 25th anniversary in 1955. Part of what he said that night was:

"Back in 1928 and 9, Fred Striffler, classified 'Magnanimous Motor Magnate' used to expound on the marvelous merits of Rotary. I never believed him. He sold Chevrolets. He brought with him various celebrated help-mates such as District-governor M.R. Keyworth of Shabbona fame, and Paul King of Newberry days, but was always told it would interfere with the workings of that ancient and honorable organization known as the Community Club. Finally he brought pre-senator Herb Orr who wagered a new hat that Rotary would help rather than hinder the Community Club. (I paid). Herb cajoled, entreated, and finally connived by proposing to several members, 'Will you be the fifteenth member to sign up?' He even counted in Harry Young who never attended and said he wouldn't. Personally I signed upon the specific provision that I should have no office. On June 27, 1929, he sold Doc McCoy; you always could sell him anything. On the same date Harry Young, Walt Mann, Paul Allured, Al Knapp and Fred Pinney signed. A couple of days later he got Ernie Schwaderer and Sheldon Young. A year rolled around and on June 1, 1930 Herb came back and signed up Fred Bigelow, Herb Lenzner, John Sandham, Doc Schenck, Ashton Tindale, Larry Randall and M.B. Auten. The foregoing fifteen men were the charter members."

Regarding charter night: "We told the women there would be about one hundred. Later we told them one hundred fifty. The night came and so did Rotarians. We didn't know there were so many Rotarians. They came from Alpena, MI. Pleasant, Dearborn and all intervening towns and, when the last loads from Ridgely, Windsor and Blenheim, Ontario, rolled in, there were over two hundred twenty-five. Herb had done a good job but we ran out of food."

"IT JUST LIT UP" -- Fire engulfed this truck owned by Fred Auten as it was being driven down North Cemetery Road Tuesday. Dennis Hurley, (foreground, with firemen) said the fire started in the truck bed for no apparent cause.

Fire guts Auten pickup Tuesday

The Elkland township fire department was called to extinguish two blazes near Cass City this past week.

A pickup truck owned by Fred Auten, 4647 N. Seeger, was gutted Tuesday when a fire of undetermined origin ignited as the truck was traveling on Cemetery Road south of Huron Line Road.

Charles Auten of 6611 E. Milligan Road said he was using the truck to move furniture to Cass City when the fire occurred.

"I was driving along and I smelled smoke then I turned around and saw it was me," Auten said.

Auten and a passenger, Dennis Hurley of 6268 E. Cedar, pulled off the road and no sooner were out of the truck than the fire, which started in the bed, engulfed the cab.

Hurley stated he tried to unhook a trailer which contained more furniture but was forced back by the heat.

"It was either breakout some hot dogs or bail out," Hurley said jokingly.

Neither the victims nor firemen were able to readily determine a cause but Hurley guessed it to be a form of spontaneous combustion.

Destroyed in the fire were mattresses and bed frames belonging to Auten. Most of what was in the trailer remained relatively unscathed.

Auten could not estimate the value of what was destroyed, saying most of it had sentimental value. He added it was to be sold soon at a garage sale.

Firemen were called to Please turn to page 10.

"If It Fitz..." The art of vituperation

By Jim Fitzgerald

Most people don't know how to insult each other anymore. The extent of their imagination is to attach an affix to the front or rear of the same old four-letter word for copulation. This is tacky.

Today it is rare to hear a stylish exchange of verbal castigation, so it is nice that the choicest vituperation is best expressed in the written word, and can be preserved for posterity. Thus, many years after the deaths of my father, Edmund Fitz, and his favorite enemy, Westcott Smith, I can pamper my passion for brilliant barbs by rereading the letters they shot at each other. Smith operated the laundry that tore the buttons off my father's shirts in Port Huron, Mich. At one social gathering, Father was particularly vocal about his abused shirts. Word of this slander reached Smith, who immediately sent Father a lumberjack shirt and this note:

The young ladies who overheard your impassioned plea about a shirt were touched and impressed. They felt something should be done to cover a poor, withering body, so they pooled their money and bought this shirt. They chose this heavier type garment because it can fill so many purposes.

By day it can be worn as a shirt for appearance and warmth. By night it can be a night shirt. Then, as that frail body becomes more withered and the shirt no longer fits, it can be cut up to make bed socks or ear muffs or any of the many things that bring comfort to miserable people.

As time goes on and it is felt that this fine garment has about reached the end of its usefulness, your dear wife (heaven will surely reward her) can use the little pieces of shirt to stuff in that big mouth that has so annoyed the world, and thus bring a final end to a disagreeable noise that seems to have no counterpart anywhere.

Father answered swiftly: It is with a mingled feeling of disgust and contempt that I acknowledge receipt of the converted horse blanket sent to replace my precious white shirt which was mutilated by your destructive emporium and slyly repaired and returned after being subjected to an abortion of the art of needlecraft.

I accept your suggestion as to the various uses prescribed for this colorful monstrosity, as I would hesitate to wear the shirt in public only to have it snatched from my back by the rightful owner who has so patiently awaited its return.

As a community project, contributing to the general public welfare, may I suggest that you crawl into the laundry bag I recently returned to you, have the strings drawn tight, and then go for a ride in one of your antique trucks. As to your destination, I care not, as long as it terminates in a resounding splash.

There was a Christmas when Smith's laundry sent Father two gifts, a pencil and a calendar, both with advertising all over them. Father's thank-you note said:

As grateful as I am, I do feel, as a matter of conscience and justice, that one of these gifts should be returned so that you can further expand the scope of your generosity and bring joy to another home. Should this be distasteful to you, just as a slight token of my appreciation, I am agreeable to having you remove four buttons per week from each shirt instead of the customary two.

Father also wished the laundry a Merry Christmas, to which Smith replied:

We laughed and felt so good to discover that you had wished us a Merry Christmas. The same to you, you delapidated, senile, decayed, disagreeable old fool.

Ah. The two men loved each other, which is why no bleeping bleeps were necessary.

NO CHANCE

Remember, it's about as easy to please everybody as it is for everybody to please you.

Candidates to speak at forum

A "Meet the Candidates" night will take place Monday for Republican contenders in the Tuscola county sheriff's race.

The forum, sponsored by candidate Earl Scott of Caro, will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Cass City High School gymnasium.

Scott said the forum would be set up with a moderator to watch over the proceedings and make sure none of the candidates goes over his allotted 20 minutes for expressing their platforms.

The candidates participating in the event are Paul Bery of Caro, Bernie Lenda, Caro; Bruce Tait, Caro; Bob Eigner, Fairgrove, and Scott.

Following the platforms the audience will have an opportunity to ask questions. The Republican candidate for sheriff will be chosen in the Aug. 5 primary.

Only one Democrat, Millington Chief of Police Herbert Clancy, is on the ballot from his party.

The three spent six days last week at the camp in Clare as the guests of Cass City Rotary where students from the entire central Michigan area gathered.

Selected after interviews to represent Cass City were John Scollon, Tammy Tibbits and Deanna Sawdon.

Among the outstanding speakers, the one that impressed the three the most was Morley Fraser, assistant President of Albion College. His talk, "Leadership Lights the Way," was one that the students said was the best of all the many speakers that talked to the group.

On a lighter side, Scollon said that he will remember the 45' tower where campers were able to simulate mountain climbing by rappelling down. Rappelling is the technique of using ropes to descend sheer cliffs by means of a double rope passed under one thigh, across the body and over the opposite shoulder.

Miss Sawdon and Miss Tibbits said the challenge provided by the competition with outstanding students from other schools was what they will remember the longest.

TEST OF TIME

One's character has very little market value unless it has been put to the supreme test.

The fellow who itches for fame has lots of scratching to do.

The Haire Net

It was a beautiful day with the sun pouring down from a cloudless sky and the 83-degree temperature made just right by a soft south wind.

It was a day to enjoy. And we did as we floated down the Manistee for about 10 hours last Thursday.

The CCC did a magnificent job in this river, I said to the 20-year-old in the canoe with me while pointing to the endless structures built into the river.

CCC? he asked, what's that? He didn't know, how could he? That work in the river was completed about 40 years ago during what is now justly known as the great depression. The majority of the people in America now living were yet to be born. CCC stands for Civilian Conservation Corps and it was established when Franklin D. Roosevelt was president.

Its primary purpose was to give work to thousands of Americans unable to find a job of any kind.

Like many good ideas, it proved to be better in retrospect than it was regarded at the time.

A standard joke of the time about the corps was two coming, two going, two sitting, two moving.

Like most things new, it took time for us to come to grips with it. The government handing out jobs? Unheard of.

Forty years ago working to control silting of a river ranked right next to the wild talk you heard now and then about sending a man to the moon.

The river was always there and always would be. We didn't have the awareness of today's generation. It would never have occurred to us to wonder, as the 20-year-old did, about what the river would be like when he reached my age.

It's a hopeful sign, isn't it? To be concerned about the distant future of a river before you're old enough to buy a drink in Michigan.

It's likely that the Manistee will be as pure in the 21st century as it is today. Maybe more pristine.

But there are myriad other rivers in Michigan that didn't get the attention that the Manistee and other famous streams received.

Streams that need work if they are to come back from the ravages of unenlightened generations.

The economists say that Michigan is rapidly approaching, or in the midst of, depression-sized unemployment again.

Rather than welfare, why not the present day equivalent of CCC? That's not a new thought. It's been banded about for years and appears to be no closer to realization today than it was when revival talk first started.

Politics being what it is, there's probably not much chance that we'll return to the conservation programs of the '30s again.

Maybe there would be if we could form a flotilla and cart all the politicians in Lansing down the river.

If not, we could always capsize the boats.

(And anyone else he can get to help)

Hope springs eternal. This week I received a mailing from a golf magazine promising me a chance to win fabulous prizes without obligation.

Since it only cost a 15-cent stamp I returned the slip with the "winning" numbers.

The object, of course, is to hype circulation and it must work or the magazines wouldn't be spending all that money. It didn't work with me... I already subscribe.

Members of the business community are busy these days. Most business persons are members of the Cass City Chamber of Commerce and are plugging along with the myriad details concerned with staging the July 4 Festival.

In addition many of the same persons are busy planning for the annual sidewalk days sale sponsored by the retail committee. It's coming July 17-18-19 and is the big sale of the summer months.

The Chronicle has a couple of good used air conditioners that it plans to sell since converting to central air conditioning. The plan is to advertise them... but with this spring's weather, what's the use?

PEDALING AROUND

are essential

By Mike Eliasohn

My column of last week proposing that one Japanese couple would have to be married in this country for every Japanese car sold here was admittedly facetious.

For anyone out of work and his or her family, be they laid off from an auto industry job or some other type of work -- and for those starting out in life who can't find a job -- the situation is no laughing matter.

I don't feel that Congressman Traxler's efforts to limit foreign car sales here is the right approach. I do feel the problems of the auto industry, and thus of the American economy, go beyond the issue of the number of foreign cars sold here.

Even if all foreign car sales were eliminated, the U.S. auto industry can never go back to the way it was.

The base problem is energy.

The response to the increasing shortage of energy has been, and must be, smaller cars.

Simple logic says the smaller cars mean fewer jobs.

It takes, I would guess, about as many workers to assemble a small car as a large one, but the major effects of the downsizing will come elsewhere.

The tire industry is already feeling the effects. Even if car sales weren't down, it would still be closing plants and permanently laying off workers. Radial tires last longer than regular ones, plus small cars wear out their tires slower than do large cars. I recall reading that the rear tires of a small front-wheel-drive car are likely to last as long as the car.

Smaller cars need less glass and less steel and other materials. A four-cylinder engine has fewer parts than an eight cylinder engine. Presumably, fewer workers are needed to build them.

There are other worries as well. Increasing automation is one.

Another is the concern, recently expressed by United Auto Workers President Douglas Fraser, about the "world car" concept, that is cars being built with parts from many countries.

A Detroit Free Press article of a few months ago, which I unfortunately didn't save, told of the U.S. auto companies building plants in Mexico. Most of them, as I recall, were engine plants. The engines they turn out are to be used in otherwise made-in-America cars. The built-in-Dearborn car you buy in the future may have a built-in-Mexico engine.

The auto makers, of course, are doing that to save money. The new plants provide jobs for Mexican workers, which may have the benefit of cutting down on illegal migration into our country, but don't do much good for American auto workers.

A question that haunts me is that there are seemingly always more available workers than there are jobs.

If XYZ Co. announces it plans to build a plant somewhere, there are 100 communities banging on the company's door trying to get selected as the site.

It applies on a world scale, too. If sales of foreign cars were banned in this country, I'm sure there would be enough workers in the U.S. to build the additional American cars needed.

But what happens to the workers in Japan and Europe that would then be out of work? They also have families to support.

Part of the problem, I suggest, is that there are too many people in this world.

Birth rates cannot be brought down overnight (no pun intended), even if the nations of the world decided to make that a goal, and in the interim, how do we enable the people of the world to support themselves?

It's not funny, is it?

Funded by taxes

Free legal aid due for Thumb indigent Sept. 1

The upper Thumb should have free legal aid for indigent persons by Sept. 1, if expected federal funding is awarded to Lakeshore Legal Services of Mount Clemens.

A grant, allowing Lakeshore to expand into Tuscola, Sanilac and Huron counties, was approved recently by the Legal Services Corp., according to deputy director Wayne Barry.

Lakeshore is a non-profit corporation funded in part through the LSC in Washington, D.C. The LSC contracts quasi-public law firms to provide service where needed.

Congress appropriated funds last year allowing legal aid to expand into 13 Michigan counties, including Sanilac, Tuscola and Huron.

Lakeshore was the only office to actively seek the grant for this area, Barry said. Others were interested at the beginning but Lakeshore was the only firm to hold a public hearing, which took place last December.

At the hearing, strong support was shown for the establishment of legal aid although a representative of the Huron County Bar Association voiced some disapproval.

Barry said that is to be expected from bar associations but hopefully they will realize it is not as bad as they think.

Calling legal aid a "bugaboo to bar associations,"

Barry told the Chronicle in a phone interview that many bar associations tend to "expect things" from a non-profit firm.

Such problems as stealing clients from established lawyers, radical attitudes and extremist tactics were some of the stereotypes made of legal aid firms. But, he said, "I think they'll be pleasantly surprised."

Once funding is set up Lakeshore will staff the three-county area with an attorney, two legal assistants and a secretary that will "ride the circuit" to various locations.

The staff is primarily an experiment to see what kind of reception the idea meets, Barry explained.

"It lets people know we're available and then we'll see what happens."

The funding is needed for everything required of setting up a legal system from scratch, Barry pointed out.

"Everything from paper clips to a supervising attorney."

Though not a certainty, Barry said there was a chance the attorney could come from Lakeshore's home ranks. If so, the time could be even shorter.

Assistance would be provided only in civil cases, not including suits for damages.

Included in the service are such things as divorces, landlord-tenant disputes, guardianship and unemployment compensation.

People requesting legal aid would have to meet the national poverty level established by the U.S. Department of Labor.

At the December hearing Lakeshore said they were requesting $120,730 to fund the first 12 months of operation.

Barry said the firm receives additional funding from Macomb and St. Clair counties, where they are presently operating, the United Way of Detroit, the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act and the area Agency on Aging Region 1B. He added that hopefully once they see the services offered by Lakeshore the three area county commissions will also help fund the project.

Barry said there is evidence that legal aid is necessary in the area since many social service organizations have contacted his office requesting legal aid.

Although unable to help, Barry said he directed them to organizations that could. Until the office for the upper Thumb is set up, persons from this area will not be able to receive aid from the firm's Macomb and St. Clair offices.

Barry further supported the program by illustrating it as a way citizens can see tax dollars going to use close to home.

"For once their federal taxes will be brought back to them in the form of services," Barry said.

Caro youth pleads guilty to unauthorized car use

A 17-year-old Caro man pleaded guilty before Circuit Judge Martin E. Clements Monday to charges of joy riding in Millington township.

Raymond J. Johnson of 500 S. Almer, Caro, will be sentenced July 21 on one count of taking an automobile without authority of the owner and one count of using an automobile without intent to steal it.

Johnson admitted to taking the car May 7, from Melodie Hauger of Millington township. Bond for Johnson was continued until sentencing.

The arraignment of Michael J. Seddon, 19, 7650 Center Road, Millington, was continued by Judge Clements until July 7.

Seddon is charged in connection with the April 18 burglary of the Mayville public school. He is charged with one count of breaking and entering with intent to commit larceny and one count of maliciously destroying an automobile.

DISTRICT COURT

An appearance paper was filed in District Court

Wednesday, June 11, on behalf of Thomas M. McGee, 32, of 2198 Port Austin Road, Port Austin.

McGee's lawyer entered a plea of not guilty to charges of driving under the influence of liquor and failing to stop and identify himself at the scene of a property damage accident.

District Judge Richard F. Kern set a pre-trial hearing for McGee July 1. He is charged in connection with an accident that occurred at Third and Leach Streets in Cass City June 6.

McGee allegedly ran into a car owned by Daniel Olsen of 5506 Shabbona Road, Decker. The car was pushed for about twenty feet.

Russell J. Gidding, 39, of 755 W. Wells Road pleaded not guilty to DWI charges before Judge Kern Monday.

Gidding was arraigned on charges in connection with a June 5 accident that occurred north of Cass City on Cemetery Road.

Time to check equipment for canning season

It's time to get out your canning equipment to see what needs to be repaired or replaced.

Sharon Kennedy, Michigan State University Extension specialist in foods and nutrition, reminds home canners that the dial gauge on pressure canners should be checked for accuracy every year.

"If it has been dropped, if glass is broken or if the gauge is rusty, it should go back to the manufacturer for repair," Kennedy says.

Weighted gauges -- those that rock or jiggle at 10 pounds pressure -- don't get out of adjustment and don't need repair.

Check the gasket that seals the canner. If steam leaks around the gasket, pressure won't build in the canner. Replace the gasket if it gives a less than perfect seal.

Check canning jars for hairline cracks or chips in the rim that will prevent an airtight seal from forming.

For best results, Kennedy recommends only standard Mason jars for home canning. They are heat-tempered to withstand the thermal shock of boiling water and air cooling.

"Mayonnaise jars are not recommended because they are thinner, they break easily and they may have a rounded rim instead of a flat edge, so lids may not seal," she explains.

Two-piece canning lids of flat metal with sealing compound and a screw band seal best.

Screw bands may be reused but you should buy new lids each season. To prevent screw bands from rusting,

FEDERATED Cass City

Degrow to speak Monday

State Senator Alvin G. Degrow (R-Pigeon) will discuss legislation and the economy at a meeting of the Private Industrial Council, which is scheduled for 10 a.m. Monday at the Charnont in Cass City. The meeting is open to the public.

Don't stop filing says MESC

Even though they face a temporary cutoff of federal funds, jobless workers should continue filing for benefits at their local Michigan Employment Security Commission offices.

This allows unemployed workers to maintain their eligibility for payments and help speed retroactive payments when funding is restored, the MESC said.

Those who do not file will lose their right to benefits during the time they did not file.

The funding cutoff is a result of Congress' failure to pass a $1.1 billion appropriations bill.

The temporary cutoff will affect unemployed federal government workers, ex-military personnel, former postal employees, CETA employees and workers eligible for Trade Readjustment Allowances.

The MESC stresses, however, that state unemployment payments will not be affected.

Five injured in area accidents

A 19-year-old Caro woman is still listed in satisfactory condition at the Caro Community Hospital following a near head-on collision which occurred at 2 p.m. Tuesday, June 10.

A car driven by Susan C. Cramer, 2079 Forest Drive, Caro, collided with a car driven by Frank E. Terry, 50, of 6457 Bay City-Forestville Road, Cass City.

Terry was admitted to the Caro hospital and released the next day. A passenger of Terry's, David L. Harrington, 38, of 579 E. Frank Street, Caro, was treated and released.

According to sheriff reports, the Terry auto was westbound on M-81 when he attempted to make a left-hand turn onto Graf Road colliding with Ms. Cramer's car.

Terry was distracted by picketers that were demonstrating near the scene, deputies said.

Patrick R. Withey, 14, of 3795 Cemetery Road was treated and released the next day from Hills and Dales General Hospital after the motorcycle he was driving in a field near his home lost control.

The accident occurred at 6 p.m. Thursday, according to sheriff reports.

Frederick J. Fahrner, 29, was treated and released from Hills and Dales Hospital after he went off the road near the intersection of Penny and Dodge Roads. Deputies said Fahrner of 562 Sebewaing Road, Owendale, was northbound on Dodge, south of Penny when the accident occurred at 10:15 p.m. Friday night.

Dennis J. Brady, 17, of 3120 Hurds Corner Road, Caro, was cited for having defective equipment on his car following an accident in which his vehicle collided with a car driven by Mark J. Wilmont, 19, of 4970 E. Sanilac Road, Kingston.

The accident occurred at 5:48 p.m. Monday, June 9, when Brady attempted a left hand turn off Kingston Road onto Howard Street.

Deputies said a gas pedal, which was shaped like a foot, stuck, causing the car to go out of control.

CAR-DEER

Two area residents reported hitting deer that ran in front of their cars last week.

Mary J. Lash, 52, of 2195 Crawford Road, Cass City, told deputies she was westbound on M-81 east of Cedar Run when the accident occurred at 2:30 p.m. Sunday.

Jackie L. Putnam, 35, of 4307 Mushroom Road, Deford, told deputies he was southbound on Hurds Corner Road, south of Phelps Lake Road, when a deer ran in front of his car at 6:35 a.m. Thursday.

SMALL BLAZE -- Elkland township firemen work to extinguish a woodpile fire Wednesday at the home of Dan Hennessey. The fire apparently was started by a spark from a nearby trash fire, firemen said.

CCFCU and Active OK merger; Tuscola venture falls through

A proposed merger between the financially troubled Cass City Federal Credit Union and the Active Credit Union in Elkton has been approved by both boards of directors but there are still details to be worked out, according to the Active manager.

Details include moving the credit union office to Elkton and the National Credit Union Association absorbing any expenses incurred by the CCFCU, said Keith Rothfuss, manager and treasurer of the ACU.

Rothfuss would not elaborate further on the details. He did say that he has not yet talked to the NCUA about the results of the June 3 meeting in which they agreed to merge with the CCFCU.

A similar merger, between the CCFCU and the Tuscola County Federal Credit Union, fell through recently when the Tuscola membership voted to back out.

The NCUA must approve the Elkton-Cass City merger to make it final. One of the reasons is to see that the troubled Cass City office does not damage the healthy ACU.

That is the reason the merger with the TCFCU fell through, according to Stacy Dalton, manager of both the TCFCU and the CCFCU.

The Tuscola credit union has some problems of its own, according to Joseph Meyer, a federal examiner for the NCUA.

However, the problems are minimal, assured Dalton.

They stem from the closing of the Hydramet Corp. in Caro which employed at least two persons with loans from the TCFCU.

Dalton proclaimed absolute trust that the loans would be repaid as soon as possible.

The ACU should not be damaged by a merger with the Cass City credit union, Meyer said, adding an estimated 1-1½ months for the merger to be finalized.

It is not known whether the demands by ACU's membership will have any bearing on the finalizing time.

Once finalized the consolidation would allow depositors of CCFCU to make withdrawals that presently are severely limited.

However, all deposits are insured up to $40,000 and people will eventually get their money back, he added.

If this merger fails, the CCFCU may be forced to liquidate, meaning it would close and have the NCUA come in to bail out the depositors.

Meyer said liquidation is something he would like to avoid.

"We would rather that they merge so that the services can be continued in this area, he said.

But Dalton said he would not mind seeing Cass City liquidate since that would give the Tuscola credit union an opportunity to expand into the Cass City area.

"If everything is liquidated it would all be dissolved. There would be no books, no nothing. Tuscola would go in and start from scratch and do it right this time."

The financial problems of the CCFCU, which by law could not be discussed by Meyer or Dalton, were blamed on poor record-keeping by the former manager. He said there was no evidence of fraud.

The problems were uncovered during a routine review conducted by Meyer's agency more than a year ago.

An audit, designed to reconstruct all transactions during the poor record-keeping period, was only partially successful, Dalton said.

Without all the records, auditors were unable to bring the books totally up to date, he said.

Meyer of the NCUA said a merger between the Active and Cass City credit unions would be more involved than the unsuccessful Tuscola merger since the CCFCU is federally chartered and the ACU is state chartered.

Basically it amounts to more paper work, Meyer said, adding it should not take any longer than usual.

2 fires

the home of Dan Hennessey at 6181 E. Milligan Road last Wednesday when a pile of barnwood in his yard caught fire.

The blaze erupted around 3:30 p.m. after a spark from a nearby trash fire ignited the wood, firemen said.

No value estimate was available on the wood and firemen said that was all that was damaged.

Mrs. Seeger dies suddenly at 84

Alma Seeger, 84, of Cass City died suddenly Monday at her home.

Police said she apparently succumbed to carbon monoxide poisoning in her garage. Though an exact cause of death is pending a medical examiner's report, police said she apparently took her own life.

Mrs. Seeger was born Aug. 31, 1895, in Cass City, the daughter of the late Archiebald and Emeline (Striffler) Mark.

Miss Mark married Louis Krahling Nov. 5, 1927 in Cass City. Krahling died Sept. 15, 1936.

June 19, 1939, Mrs. Krahling married Andrew Seeger in Detroit. The couple moved to Cass City from Greenleaf township in 1940.

Mrs. Seeger was a member of the Salem United Methodist church, serving as treasurer for many years. She was also a member of the United Methodist Women and the Cass City Chapter of the American Association of Retired Persons.

She is survived by one daughter, Sharon Harris of Grand Rapids, three sisters, Mary Buehly of Uby, Lena Schwegler of Cass City and Martha Darling of Marlette.

Also surviving are one brother, Edward Mark of Cass City, and two grandchildren.

Funeral services are Thursday at 1 p.m. from Salem United Methodist church. Rev. Eldred Kelley will officiate.

Burial will be in the Elkland township cemetery.

Linda Gaymer new manager at loan office

Linda Gaymer of Farwell has been appointed manager of the Cass City office of Mutual Savings and Loan Association.

Ms. Gaymer brings with her 12 years' experience with financial institutions.

Ms. Gaymer joined Mutual Savings in 1970 as a loan clerk at the Mt. Pleasant office. Since 1977 she has worked in the Association's Saginaw office, where she served as loan officer and assistant vice-president.

Ms. Gaymer completed two years at Central Michigan University and numerous courses in finance and real estate through the University of Michigan and the Institute of Financial Education. She is a member of the Saginaw Chapter of the Women's Council of Realtors.

Ubyly man, 45, believed dead

It will probably be at least one week until anything further is known in the case of Thomas C. Welton, 45, a rural Ubyly man who disappeared last Wednesday and is feared dead.

Bones believed to be human were found Saturday in the ashes of a burned out smokehouse near Welton's home on E. Huron Line Road.

Although they will not be sure until a complete analysis is performed at the State Police Crime Laboratory in Bridgeport, a trooper at the Bad Axe post said Tuesday the Sanilac county medical examiner believed the bones to be human.

Also found in the ashes were the remains of a .308 caliber rifle which Welton's son had noticed was missing, along with a three by four inch piece of cloth believed to be Welton's. A single spent shell from the rifle was also found.

Welton, who had suffered personal and financial setbacks in recent years, felt the final blow Wednesday when a public notice of mortgage foreclosure and court-ordered sale of his 160-acre farm was published in the Huron Daily Tribune.

The farm had been in Welton's family for more than 100 years.

That night Welton had gone to bed but was gone the next morning when his sons woke up. When he did not return Thursday or Friday family members and police searched an area near the farm but with no results.

It was not until Saturday and a search involving 120 persons that the remains of the fire and bones were found.

The shed, once owned by Welton, was made of pine and burned intensely, troopers said. It was located about a half-mile from Welton's home.

An exact cause of death, providing the bones are determined Welton's, will not be published pending a report from the Sanilac county medical examiner.

In recent years Welton, who was known around the Thumb as the leader of "Calvin's Merry Makers," a polka band, went through a divorce and financial problems.

His farm is to be sold at a public auction July 17.

With DHIA testing

Computer tells farmer about his cows

When God invented dairy cows, he didn't think it was important to include built-in meters to measure how much milk they produced. But to modern dairy farmers, how much milk each cow produces is important. Cows that don't produce much milk are better off as hamburger to be replaced by more productive animals.

In the days when cows' output went into a bucket, all the farmer had to do was look into the bucket to see how much milk each cow produced. But in these days of large dairy herds and milk flowing from milking machines through piping into a bulk tank, that's not possible. That's where the Dairy Herd Improvement Association and Sylvester Abraham come in.

Abraham, of Garfield Street, Cass City, is one of the eight DHIA technicians in the upper Thumb. Their job, simply put, is to measure the output and content of milk of the dairy cows of their clients.

DHIA is a cooperative organization, with boards of directors in each county and for the state, loosely affiliated with Michigan State University.

Abraham, 62, has been a DHIA employee nine years, after a varied career, including working at the Nestles plants in Ubyly and Cass City, selling insurance and hauling milk. He was working at the now-closed elevator in Bay Port just prior to going to work with DHIA.

It isn't mandatory that dairy farmers belong to the association, but it is to their advantage to do so, Abraham explained. "If you have a pipeline (milking system), you wouldn't have any idea what each cow produces." Farmers who use buckets could weigh them, but as mentioned, very few still do. (Abraham has two customers who use buckets.)

month, within three days plus or minus of the date done the previous month.

Samples must be taken during both the morning and afternoon milkings, which means Abraham and the other DHIA technicians must get up even before the dairy farmers do since they have to drive to the farms. One of his clients starts milking at 4 a.m. each day.

Those joining DHIA have two choices. The official test must be done by the DHIA technician. The unofficial test means the DHIA supplies the equipment, but the work must be done by the farmer.

The fee is based partially on herd size. For a herd of 50 cows being milked, it would cost the dairyman $60 for the official test. If he did the work himself, what is known as owner-sampler system, it would cost $37.

EITHER WAY, THE testing is the same.

The test instrument used is called a milk meter. Hoses connect it with the regular milk lines.

Milk coming from the milking machine flows into the meter, off which can be read the number of pounds of milk the cow gave. A sample is drawn from the meter into a jar, after which the rest of the milk flows back into the pipe to the bulk tank.

A sample is kept for each cow. A truck making the rounds picks up the bottled samples each Wednesday and Saturday and takes them to the DHIA office in East Lansing, where tests are run for butterfat content and, if the farmer is paying extra, for mastitis, and progestin, to determine pregnancy.

Milk from cows with mastitis must be thrown away and the animal must be given an injection each time it is milked. The test shows whether the cow is on the verge of getting the disease, has it or is getting over it.

ABOUT A WEEK AFTER the tests are made, the farmer receives a computer printout from DHIA listing the test results for each cow.

The printout not only lists pounds of milk per cow and butterfat content, it also lists other information, such as when pregnant ones will calve (if the progestin test is performed), how much feed to give to the cows (if the farmer submits feed reports), and sire and dam identification.

The information obviously can be quite useful. Based on it, Abraham advised one dairyman to get out of business, that he wasn't making any money milking cows. The man took the technician's advice.

BECAUSE HE IS IN A lot of milking parlors, he is often asked for advice. The question may concern feed, cows or equipment. When the situation warrants, Abraham will refer the dairyman to another expert.

Abraham has 25 farmers on official test, and 15 on owner-sampler. For the latter, he only has to drop off and pick up the equipment and samples. The customers range as far away as Frankemuth and Caseville.

His clients are loyal, and also persuasive. Abraham, a widower, was thinking of retiring last year, but his customers persuaded him to stay on.

In 1974, he won an outstanding technician award from DHIA and last year received $200 in savings bonds for similar efforts.

He also had a role in another honor. In 1978, the cows of one of his clients, Harold Gremel of Canboro Road, Sebawaing, recorded the most pounds of milk per cow of any dairy herd in the state.

Hot weather cuts milk yield

A dairyman milking on a hot, sweltering day not only has to fight the sweat dripping from his brow but a reduction in his herd's efficiency.

Hot summer weather is just around the corner, bringing with it production problems in dairy herds, according to Dr. R.W. Stanley, chairman of the animal science department at the University of Hawaii.

Dr. Stanley's studies at the University of Hawaii have shown that dairy cattle gain excess weight, consume less roughage and show a drop in butterfat test and milk production when temperatures soar above 80 degrees.

Although Hawaii is blanketed by 80 degree temperatures all year, dairy herds in midwestern and northern states also suffer from reduced production brought on by high temperatures and humidity in the summer, Dr. Stanley says.

Research has shown that acid builds up in rumens of cows subjected to these temperatures, he explains, and that reduces appetites and feed efficiency.

Digestive acids are normally neutralized by sodium bicarbonate, a natural part of cows' saliva. But under high heat conditions, additional sodium bicarbonate may have to be fed to keep rumen acids in balance. "Under high heat conditions we can modify the ration by feeding sodium bicarbonate to enhance fat test and get a more efficient and persistent animal," says Dr. Stanley.

In an 18-week study done by Dr. Stanley and Dr. L.

Kung of the University of Hawaii, cows fed sodium bicarbonate gave more milk and butterfat, rid themselves of excess body fat and were more feed efficient than those without the feed ingredient.

Cows fed sodium bicarbonate in the grain ration outperformed the control group in butterfat production. Those Holsteins fed 1.8 percent sodium bicarbonate produced milk containing 3.55 percent butterfat on the average, while the control group averaged 3.29 percent. The group fed 2.8 percent bicarb in the ration averaged 3.2 percent butterfat test.

More milk was produced by bicarb-fed cows; those receiving 2.8 percent sodium bicarbonate did best, averaging 52.49 pounds of milk per day. The control group averaged 51.74 pounds per day.

Both groups fed sodium bicarbonate lost weight, indicating increased metabolic efficiency, Dr. Stanley adds.

The ration dairy cows receive -- and how much is fed -- determines the amount of supplemental sodium bicarbonate necessary to insure optimum production in hot weather, Dr. Stanley says.

Dr. Stanley suggests dairymen to start feeding bicarb at a low level -- 0.25 pounds per day -- as a general rule of thumb.

"Increase sodium bicarbonate levels at increments until you hit an optimum, then keep it there when results are noted," he explains.

Maintaining ration fiber levels during high temperature periods will also help keep butterfat tests from dropping, concludes Dr. Stanley.

Your Neighbor says Gas rationing is silly

In an effort to avoid a gas shortage that could cripple U.S. transportation, President Carter has proposed a standby rationing program that is expected to pass in both houses of Congress very soon.

However, such a program is "silly" according to Ted Schulz of River Road in Cass City.

The main problem with gas rationing is if it is used, those people who need the gas for their work will suffer most, he said.

Schulz is a good example. He is employed by Howard Masonry of West Branch, a construction firm that works in the Saginaw-Bay City area. In driving to work every day, Schulz uses a good deal of gas even though he drives a motorcycle to cut costs.

Rather than implement the forced conservation that rationing would bring, Schulz favors a sense of conscientious conservation by people now using gas.

He also claims that at the moment there is no shortage of gasoline, although there could be if foreign sources decide to cut back production.

Another alternative to rationing is the increased production of alternative fuel sources.

Schulz said he thinks sources such as alcohol fuels, commonly called "gasohol," and fuels derived from wood and animal waste have been effective in tests and could be developed on a larger scale.

With the present energy situation, everyone feels the pinch at the pumps but Schulz feels there is no need to go to the drastic measure of rationing.

HEALTH TIPS Sprays can hurt more than bugs

By Frank Chappell
American Medical Association

Are the bugs eating up your garden? Most insects can be knocked out with sprays, powders and other poisons, but the unwary gardener himself sometimes can suffer from the effects of the bug spray.

Read the directions on the container carefully and follow them. The manufacturer spells out the proper usage and safety precautions.

If the directions call for rubber gloves, protective clothing, or goggles, leave this alone, unless you are an expert.

Store the insecticide in its original container, with original label, in a safe, locked compartment, away from children and pets.

Destroy empty containers immediately.

Avoid inhaling sprays and dusts. Stay out of freshly sprayed areas.

Do not smoke while spraying or dusting.

If chemicals spill on the skin, wash immediately and thoroughly.

Cover bird baths, dog dishes and fish ponds before spraying. Pour left-over spray down a drain or into the soil. Don't leave it around in pans or pails.

In case of accident, follow the directions on the container. If in doubt, call your physician.

High court cancels O-G hearing

A hearing before the Michigan Court of Appeals to decide which school district, Owen-Gage or Cass City, gets tax money from the Goslin parcel was cancelled Thursday, according to Owen-Gage superintendent Ron Erickson.

He said the court did not tell him whether or not the appeal by Owen-Gage will be rescheduled. Nor did they give a reason for the cancellation.

"They just said it was cancelled. That's all they tell you," Erickson said.

Owen-Gage is appealing the October 1979 decision by Circuit Court Judge Martin E. Clements upholding Tuscola County Board's award of tax money from the Goslin land to Cass City.

Trained as attack dog

Former pet has only one master now

Shane will always remember Judy but she will be a faint memory at best.

As the final test in his training as a police dog, the 2½-year-old German shepherd must attack the woman that raised him from a puppy.

And even though it may be a hard bond to break, as the love for a pet often is, Judy Rocheleau of 4875 S. Elkton Road realizes it is for the best.

As a police dog, Shane can only have one master, and his new master and partner will be Kevin Kivel.

Kivel, a native of Elkton who recently graduated from Kirtland Community College with a degree in law enforcement, hopes Shane will be an asset in his search for a job on a police force in this area.

The dog will be Kivel's full-time partner, one the force will not have to pay.

As Kivel's partner, it is Shane's job to protect and aid him at all times and that is where the emotional break with Mrs. Rocheleau is necessary.

Shane is trained to answer the commands of one person and treat all others with a sense of suspicion. Under orders from Kivel, Shane could go so far as to attack a person attempting to pose as his master, according to Ron Forster, who is training the dog for Kivel.

Shane is not a vicious dog by nature. Under most conditions he is as gentle as the family fido but with one word from Kivel, he leaps into action.

THE DOG HAS BEEN training with Forster of Elkton for three weeks. There are about eight weeks of training left for Shane but Forster has no doubt the dog will be ready for service at the end of that time.

"When I saw what his reactions to the tests were, I knew it was just a matter of time before he got used to Kevin," Forster said.

The dog was first trained for obedience by Mrs. Rocheleau, then by Forster, who is president of the Man-Dog Training Club, of which Mrs. Rocheleau is a member.

He had been asked by Kivel to look for a dog that could be used for police work and saw Shane as a likely prospect. He performed tests for reactions to gunfire, other dogs and strangers and Shane scored 100 percent in all categories.

When looking for a police dog, Forster admitted he had a preference toward German shepherds for a variety of reasons.

They are easily adaptable to warm or cold weather and do not have the reputation for ferocity that goes along with Doberman pinschers, another often-used guard dog.

Size is also a factor. "When you're talking about a police dog you want something with some size to it. Bigger isn't always better but it is certainly a deterrent (to attacks)," he said.

Size is especially important in this case since Shane is being trained for crowd control.

The psychology factor of a German shepherd staring back at a crowd is often enough to hold any would-be mobs in line.

"It's always the thing of 'Who's going to be the first to take a chance and go up against the dog?'" Forster explained.

FORSTER SAID HE DISLIKED the term "attack dog" used in association with service dogs like Shane. It makes them appear uncontrollable and ready to attack anything, which is not true.

Shane, for instance, is registered in the United States and Canada as a "companion dog" which carries the understanding that he is under control whether he is on a leash or not. However, in the line of duty Shane will never be taken off a leash, Forster stressed.

The rating and the control it entails are necessary should the dog's master be called before a court of law to prove the animal did not attack someone indiscriminately.

"If you don't have that control, it's like a gun without a safety. You've got nothing, just a vicious dog," Forster said.

The dogs he trains are "professionals" and only obey the commands of the master. To make sure the skills do not slip from the dogs' mind, there is a constant brushing up process they go through.

Forster knows what he is doing.

He has been training dogs for 18 years and worked with a kennel in southern California, where he trained guard dogs for such celebrities as Buck Owens, Foster Brooks and retired General of the Army Omar N. Bradley. He is a native of Elkton.

USING DOGS AS THE only partner for a policeman is a relatively rare occurrence in this area, Kivel said, adding he is not sure why.

"When they hire me, they're getting the dog for nothing," Kivel commented.

Shane will be Kivel's only partner, no other human is necessary whether they are riding in a patrol car or investigating a burglary. Kivel swears Shane is just as reliable as a human partner.

The final test for Shane will come when he will have broken the "love bond" with those who have trained him, except for Kivel.

When he thinks the dog is ready, Forster will pose as a stranger attempting to harm Kivel. Shane must attack Forster as the trainer rushes the dog firing a pistol loaded with blanks. He must do the same with Judy, and do it convincingly. Both will wear padding.

Kivel is certain Shane will come through with flying colors. "He's my partner," he proclaimed proudly.

NOT TO BE TOYED WITH -- Though usually kind to his trainer Ron Forster, Shane is restrained by Kevin Kivel from attacking. Forster is impersonating a hostile stranger who could harm Kivel and Shane, at the sound of one word, is ready for action.

UP & OVER -- As part of his training Shane must learn to scale a variety of obstacles. He easily climbed over this stack of barrels which can be piled one tier higher, his trainer said.

"Operations and hospital rooms cost a lot more than you think."

STILL STANDING -- This dilapidated house, owned by Margaret McNeil of Pontiac, is still standing at the corner of Houghton and Brooker Streets but still is in disrepair. Circuit Judge Patrick Joslyn May 19 gave McNeil 10 days to repair the house. It will now probably be torn down after bids are taken by the county on the demolition job.

Plan now to keep home cool

Those occasional tantalizing hot days we've had this spring should serve as a reminder to make plans to keep your home cool this summer, suggests James A. Albertson, Bay City district manager for Consumers Power Co.

Albertson says there are a number of things you can do to keep cool, even without air conditioning, to help keep down your energy bill. The key to keeping cool lies with the way you use your electric appliances, Albertson says.

1) During the hottest part of the day, try to avoid using your range, dishwasher, clothes dryer or other major appliances which produce heat. Try cooking outdoors as much as possible and use the washing and drying appliances in the early morning or evening. A bonus toward physical fitness can be gained by carrying and hanging clothes on a backyard line to dry instead of using your clothes dryer.

2) Close drapes, blinds and awnings or shades to keep out direct sunlight. Not only will the house stay cooler if you have an air-conditioner, it won't have to run as often.

3) Close off rooms during the day, especially those that face the sun.

4) Open windows and doors in the evening and early morning to take advantage of the cooler outside air. This will also reduce the amount of time you need to operate your air-conditioner.

5) If you need a central cooling source in your home, consider an attic fan which draws air through your house and exhausts it through the attic. It can reduce or eliminate the need for air conditioning.

6) Although adding insulation to your home is primarily intended to retain heat during the winter, insulation also helps block out hot sun rays and helps reduce cooling requirements.

7) If you have central air conditioning, set your thermostat to the warmest comfortable temperature to help cut consumption. For example, raising the temperature from 75 to 80 degrees can save approximately 13 percent on your cooling energy usage.

8) If you have a window air-conditioner, close the hot air registers on your heating system to prevent the cool air from escaping to the basement.

If you are considering buying an air-conditioner this year, Albertson recommends you give some thought to energy efficiency. Window units and compressor sections of central air conditioning systems should be properly sized and placed on the north side or the shaded area of your home to maximize their efficiency.

Be sure to select an air-conditioner with a high energy efficiency ratio (EER). In the long run, this will save money and energy.

EER is determined by dividing the cooling capacity in British thermal units (Btus) per hour by the wattage rating of the unit. A 12,000-Btu per hour unit that is rated at 1,200 watts would have an EER of 10. Such a unit will cost about half as much to operate as one with an EER of 5.

As a rule of thumb, Albertson concludes, an EER of 6 to 7 is fair, 8 to 9 is good and 10 or more is excellent.

Hart wants counties to take over prisons

The chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee has suggested the state solve its prison overcrowding problems by shifting the responsibility from the state to the counties for dealing with non-violent adult offenders.

Jerome Hart (D-Saginaw) said the state would then increase funding to the counties for necessary capital outlay and operating expenses to upgrade and expand their jail programs. He estimated the shift would save the state $29 million in capital outlay cost and $13.6 million in annual operating costs.

He said the proposal could reduce the requirements in the state prison systems by approximately 5,800 beds.

Arrest pair for stealing gas

Two female juveniles were apprehended Monday night for apparently siphoning gas from a car owned by Linda S. Young of Cumber Road, Ubyly.

Cass City police officers said they were informed of a hose and can next to a car parked at the Charmont.

Upon arriving, officers found two girls with a hose sitting in a parked car with gasoline spilling from a can underneath the car.

Ms. Young said about four gallons of gas were missing from the tank. The incident occurred at 11:10 p.m.

The suspects were released in the custody of their parents pending action by Probate Court, police said. Their names could not be released due to their juvenile status.

Kristy Deering, 15, of 6457 Houghton Street reported a bike stolen from the corner of Church and Seeger Streets Thursday when she left it for about 10 minutes. The bike, valued at about $130, was taken at 12:10 p.m.

Two gold-colored watches, valued at $20 each, were reported missing last Wednesday by Raymond Spencer of 4215 Sherman Street.

Spencer told police the watches were taken sometime between May 15-25 while Spencer was in the hospital.

Lyda Staples, of 6517 Clothier Road, Kingston, reported malicious damage to her mailbox at 10:10 p.m. Thursday.

She told state troopers she was sitting by a window when a pickup truck with numerous lights pulled up to, then ran into the mailbox.

Troopers said Ms. Staples claimed the damage was intentional and has happened before. She had no idea who could have done the damage, troopers said.

Terry Houthoofd

Seeks GOP nomination for 84th district representative

Terry Houthoofd of Fairgrove has announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for State Representative from the 84th district.

Terry Houthoofd

Houthoofd is a graduate of Unionville High School. He received a bachelor of science degree at Michigan State and graduated from Thomas M. Cooley Law School in Lansing. He was admitted to the Bar June 2, 1980.

In seeking the nomination, Houthoofd said that he felt that the answer to the state's problem is to allow the free enterprise system to work. We must create a favorable climate for business to grow and that means less regulations, he added.

"Coming from a family who had to work hard all their lives, I have a great appreciation for the despair and frustration the working class of people feel today," Houthoofd said.

The Michigan Space Center in Jackson includes among its exhibits, the Apollo 9 command module which carried astronauts David Scott, Rusty Schweikart and Michigan's James McDivitt, into space during its 1969 flight.

Census first step in better control of dogs in county

The census is about to begin.

Hold it. What about those stories that the census is just wrapping up, finishing its seemingly uncountable count for another ten years?

Well, this is the "dog census" of Tuscola county and it is just beginning.

Animal control officer Jeff Quinn is attempting to find exactly how many dogs in the county are running around unlicensed.

He is taking on a formidable task to say the least.

Quinn claims at least half of the dogs in Tuscola county are unregistered and therefore illegal.

He admits finding them all is similar to tilting with windmills but if even a small amount are registered he will feel better.

"If we can get 10 percent more licensed, it will be worth it," Quinn said.

How does he hope to accomplish this major task?

Quinn said he will hire four workers, probably college students, to go around and check if a person has a dog and if so, is it licensed.

Naturally, not everyone with an unlicensed dog is going to be eager to broadcast it.

But Quinn hopes that by publicizing the "census" owners will have them licensed beforehand.

Those that have unlicensed dogs will be warned to get it registered. The initial warning from the temporary workers will be followed with a visit by Quinn to see if the dog has been tagged.

If not, the owner will receive a fine.

Quinn realizes not everyone will rush right out to have their dog licensed but he is hoping it will make some people think about their pet and perhaps turn it in to the shelter if they won't license it.

A major goal of the drive is to reduce the dog population of Tuscola county which Quinn claims is higher than it should be.

One of the reasons most dogs run around unlicensed is because many owners do not think their dog needs a license.

No one wants to admit their family pet could get rabies. The protection of that disease is a prime reason dogs are licensed.

The 1980 "dog census" will begin soon, Quinn said, though he is not exactly sure when. Starting with the cities and villages then moving to the country, the workers will attempt to count as many dogs as possible.

If it is successful, Quinn would like to make the count an annual event. He said that after a few years, the population of unwanted animals could be successfully checked.

For now, he is satisfied that since news of the count has gone out, more people have been licensing their dogs.

Beware of illegal fireworks peddlers

The State Police Fire Marshal Division cautions residents to be wary of firms that attempt to sell illegal fireworks in Michigan.

There have been flyers circulated in Michigan advertising such fireworks. About 80 percent of the devices advertised on one flyer (Big Don's Fireworks of Missouri) are illegal in Michigan, according to division officers.

The division further reminds citizens that ordering such fireworks will place them in jeopardy of prosecution if they are apprehended with the fireworks in their possession. People who desire to use fireworks should be sure to use those that are legal in Michigan for their own safety. Each year a number of people are injured from using illegal devices, officers also noted.

Fireworks prohibited in Michigan are those that send a projectile in the air or give an audible report or spin or twirl on the ground.

Citizens are also reminded that local communities may have ordinances that are more restrictive than the state law regarding the use and sale of fireworks. If they have any questions, they should contact their local officials.

Adversities are events that show what men are made of.

Lamotte on top in church play

It's a new season and there are new names at the top of the standings in the Cass City Church Softball Leagues.

In the American division, Lamotte boasts a perfect record, and is breathing the rarefied air of first place, something that the team hasn't been accustomed to in previous years.

In the National circuit Deford Red is in front. The Reds have challenged in the past but a division title has eluded them.

In action Tuesday, June 10, Deford Red lost its first game in four starts as they bowed to the Colwood Cubs, 14-0.

In other games the Church of Christ edged Missionary in a slugfest, 16-15, as D. Speirs outlasted M. Wilson on the mound.

Shabbona notched its second victory in 3 tries with a 13-8 nod over Methodist while the Lutherans had little trouble rolling past Colwood Lions, 14-4.

Last Thursday Lamotte squeaked by Deford Blue 10-9 and Deford Red remained a half game ahead of the pack with a 10-4 decision over the Methodists.

In another close game the Baptists edged Church of Christ, 12-11. Missionary had little trouble pounding out a 26-16 slugfest win over Colwood Lions.

Friday, Lamotte rolled past Methodist, 21-10, to remain undefeated.

In a game played June 3 and not reported previously, Deford Reds measured the Colwood Lions, 18-10.

Deford scored 10 runs in the second inning to make it easy for McKee to post the win. McKee and Babich led the winners with two hits. Lowell Smith and Chuck Kastraba had three hits each for the Lions.
