Music for every taste – disco country, band, novelty at Festival

It is almost impossible to have too much music at a party.

And when the village-wide Fourth of July party gets underway Friday there will be music to please all tastes throughout the day.

The bands range from Irish sing-alongs to Scottish bagpipes, from country and western to disco.

The festival parade will feature music in the way of high school bands from Cass City and Lakers. In addition, a drum and bugle corps, the Saginaw Eagles will also perform. They are a younger version of the famous Saginawers.

The Flint Scottish Band will bring a taste of the highlands to Cass City when this bagpipe group performs in the parade.

A number of floats in the parade will have their own recorded music to lend their special ambience to the affair.

The Tip-of-the-Thumb Square dancers from Harbor Beach will be dancing to the tune of good 'ol down home music during the parade and at an exhibition in the park afterwards.

Returning from last year will be the Kitchen Band comprised of members from the Unionville-Sebewaing Area chapter of the American Association of Retired Persons.

The band plays a variety of songs on modified kitchen instruments. They will also perform at the football field following the parade.

The musical extravaganza begins the night before the festival in the beer tent behind the Charmont with the Irish Gaels, an Irish sing-along group from Rochester, Mich.

They will be playing from 8 p.m. to midnight and do a variety of sing-along standards.

At 1:30 p.m. the Blue winner and the White runner-up will play and the as master of ceremonies, said there is no cover charge for the tent on Thursday but everyone who comes will have to join in the chorus.

A $1 cover charge will be asked Friday night when a local band, Windfall, performs from 8 p.m. to midnight.

Dillon said the group has been featured at dances and weddings around the area in past years and that the highlight of the show is their outstanding vocal abilities.

“I’ve liked their music for the last eight years,” Dillon admitted. Windfall plays all forms of music from rock to polkas to country and western, he said.

For those who like to move to the music, two dances, in addition to dancing at the beer tent, will be going on Friday night.

A square dance featuring the Rocking Eights Square Dance Club from Caro will take place in the recreation park at the pavilion from 8-11 p.m. Everyone is welcome to participate even if they have never danced before.

Lessons will be available and the group will also be putting on exhibitions of modern square dance routines.

For the younger set, a teen dance will be going on in the tennis courts from 9 p.m. to midnight. Kurt Proctor and Phil Martin will be spinning the records with rock and disco music being the mainstays of this event.

Musical tastes differ as much as night and day but the wide range of bands at the festival should please everyone.
