You, Farmer, what about that rye in your wheat field? Going to let it ripen and spoil your wheat crop? Don't you know that it would be to your credit to go carefully through that held and cut the rye out perfectly clean? If you don't, you'll be the loser, mind you.

The following letters remain unclaimed at the P. O. at Cass City, Mich., for the week ending June 18, 1901. Cora May Dellaree, Annie Michael, Mrs. J. E. Brayton, Mr. John L. Gray. When calling for the above, please mention advertised. H. S. Wickware, Postmaster.

Cass City, as a village, can boast of much beauty, but the most beautiful and picturesque spot is on east Third Street, where dwells an aged and respected lady, who devotes her greater share of her time in making her home surroundings beautiful; and well may she be proud, for Mrs. Hubel's flower garden presents a handsome sight now. It is a solid bed of bloom—veritably a bower of beauty. Mrs. Hubel takes great pride in the fruits of her labor and so does every one in the village. It's worth a trip down there to behold the marvellous beauty of her garden.
