CONFERENCE APPOINTMENTS

Rev. R. N. Mulholland Returns to Cass City Again.

Rev. R. N. Mulholland, for two years pastor of the M. E. church at Cass City, has again been appointed to this place for the coming year, and the people of the charge are expressing themselves as being satisfied that no change has been made. He has proven himself to be a very efficient pastor in every way and a change would have been undesirable. Mr. Mulholland will find a heartier "welcome home" this time than at any time previous, as the people here have found in him a staunch, loyal citizen and a devoted christian man.

REAR-END COLLISION. Four Killed and Nearly Score Injured

Taft and Bacon Induce Liberals to Seek Mediation.

PALMA MAY NOT RESIGN

New Cabinet Likely to Be Formed and Congressional Election Held-Outlook, Decidedly Hopeful, Says Secretary of War.

Havana, Sept. 25.—Victory for the liberals or revolutionary party seems certain at the conclusion of a long conference Monday between a committee of the insurgents, of eight members, and the American peace commissioners. The insurgent committee announced that there was practically no difference remaining between them and Secretaries Taft and Bacon, and that they would receive a draft of the peace plans today. These probably would be agreed at a meeting to be held in the Presidio, where the prisoner members of thec ommittee are confined. Secretary Taft said he could give no details of what transpired at the conference, for the meason that it was now necessary to treat with the government leaders, and that the publication of the peace proposals might interfere with their prompt accep-

Palma Hears the News.

Messrs. Taft and Bacon went to the palace last night and informed President Palma of the outcome of the negotiations with the liberals. The absence of a definite statement from the commissioners makes it impossible to say whether the plans carry the resignations of the present administration and the congressmen elected last year or not.

There is a strong impression that President Palma will remain and reorganize the cabinet, but that new elections will be held for half the semators and representatives, in other words, those who were elected last year, and possibly also for provincial officers.

In discussing the situation with the Associated Press last night, Secretary Taft said that he would go over with Alfredo Zayas, the leader of the liberals, the variations that the liberal leaders desire in the memorandum of the peace program. "If we reach a conclusion," Secretary Taft said, "we hope to announce it tonight."

Mr. Taft evinced great pleasure at the progress made thus far, and it is evident that he regards the nemainder of the negotiations as a matter of working out the details of the peace agreement. This bears cut the insistent rumor in circulation here, that the government abandoned much of its leaders, and it was apparent that the peace commissioners felt that while there was no reason for rebellion in Cuba, there was real foundation for liberal complaint against the election methods of the administration party. Situation Reviewed.

The conference began at half past five, and continued until eight o'clock last evening. Practically all this time are two to be built in connection with was occupied by Secretary Taft's review of the situation. It was evident that he realized from the outset | Hampton roads, 1,500 feet. Together that peace could be established by recognizing, in the main, the contentions of the liberals. He discussed also with the insurgent committee the possible effect of the announcement of the peace conditions, and warned them that the continued independence of Cuba depended upon their calmness, wisdom and discretion during the process of settlement.

All Senor Zayas would say to the Associated Press was that matters were progressing excellently. Some points had not been agreed upon, but he was hopeful of a settlement. Last night Senor Zayas telegraphed to all the important commanders in the field that there were prospects that peace terms would be signed, and that the terms would be satisfactory to them.

Pittsburg Police Arrest Five Persons After Discovery of Murder.

Pittsburg, Sept. 25.—Frank Ricra, 42 years old, a Sicilian and local political leader of his race, was found dead of stiletto wounds on the porch of 4003 Laurel avenue, by a woman who stumbled over his body this morning. at New Prague, Minn. Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 25.—Four are dead and fifteen or more are injured as a result of a rear-end collision of a passenger train and a switch engine in the Minneapolis & St. Louis railroad yards at New Prague, Minn., forty miles south of Minneapolis, Monday.

The dead are: D. D. Demarais, of Minneapolis, traveling salesman for Wyman, Partridge & Co.; F. B. Brown of St. Paul, salesman for Foote, Schulze & Co.; George F. Klinkerfuss, St. Paul, salesman, Golzian & Co.; Frank Wrabeck, New Pragus.

According to L. F. Day, vice-president and general manager, the accident was caused by a switching engine in the yards running onto main track, on the time of the passenger train, which was about fifteen minutes

Both engineers jumped when they saw that the crash was inevitable. One engineer escaped and the other broke his collar bone. The passengers in the smoking car were the only ones hurt.

Miss Myrtle Vinton, of Minneapolis, and Miss Goldie Gorrell, of Marshalltown, Ia., did splendid work in caring for the injured. They were passengers on the train, and when the crash came at once set to work. They tore skirts into strips for use as bandages, and seemed to be everywhere that aid was needed. The efforts met with the highest praise on th part of others in the rescue work.

Herolc Rescue.

San Juan, Porto Rica, Sept. 25.—A heroic rescue took place here yester day. A private in the Porto Rican Provisional regiment fell overboard off Moro Castle. He was being swept away by the tide when First-Lieutenant Laurence Angel of the Porto Rican infantry jumped in to save him. Together the two men breasted the current, and the high seas in futile efforts to reach the shore. They had been in the water for some time and were nearly exhausted when Boatswain B. H. Marker went in and succeeded in bringing both men safely ashore.

Cables of Hoist Burned, and Miners Forced to Climb 1,000 Feet-Osceol: Consolidated Company Sustains Heavy Losses.

Calumet, Mich., Sept. 25.—Fire which endangered hundreds of lives broke ont underground in No. 1 shaft at the North Kearsarge branch of the Osceola Consolidated mine Monday.

There are 800 men employed at the property, most of them working un derground. When the presence of the fire became known the men made a mad rush for No. 3 shaft, where they were forced to climb mearly 1,000 feet to reach a drift connecting with No. 3, and many of these men en countered smoke and gas and were nearly overcome. They were revived when they reached the fresh air at the surface:

Number one shaft is supposed to be afire between the 1,200-foot and 1,700 foot levels. Before the shaft was sealed at the surface the smoke pour ed forth in great volumes, indicating that the fire is raging fiercely be low the surface. The heavy steel cable attached to the 10-ton rock skip melted in the intense heat, and the cage fell to the bottom of the mine. The crashing of the skip and cable was the first warning of the fire that some of the men in the bottom of the mine received. As No. 1 shaft is heavily timbered, it is feared the fire may reach great proportions and operations will be discontinued in the entire mine until the flames are smothered.

This may cause a large loss, as at the Tamarack mine the fire has not been subdued after nine months' effort and $1,500,000 loss in production.

DECIDING BY VOTE.

Important Questions Confront Employes on Vessels.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 25.-One of the most important labor questions that has come up on the great lakes for some time is now being voted on by the members of the Marine Firemen's, Oilers & Watertenders' union. It is to decide whether the big organization will withdraw from the international Longshoremen, Marine Transport Workers' association.

The voting has been going on for some days and the ballots will be counted next week, presumably in Buffalo, which is the headquarters of

Along with the question of casting aside the jurisdiction of the Longshoresmen's association, the men are expressing a choice as to what parent body they desire to affiliate with. Two propositions are before the members of the union—first, affiliating with the Lake Seamen's union; or, second, applying direct to the American Federation of Labor for a charter.

It is unofficially stated that there is no question of the union's withdrawal from the Longshoremen, the vote so far showing a heavy majority for this the system. move.

The firemen have a powerful organization, practically every fireman oiler and watertender on the great lakes being a member. The total membership is in the neighborhood of 7,000, and the finances are in good shape.

The bandits rode into the city last Wednesday night, blew the safe of the Newaygo County bank with dynamite and escaped with $2,000 in cash. The burglars are said to have passed through Hesperia Saturday night and were headed west.

Merrill and his men found a roll of 25 pennies stolen from the bank, at the race track. There, too, were found a revolver holster, and a partially burned candle, probably used in entering the bank.

Seeks to Aid in Vindication of Uniform of Army and Navy.

Oyster Bay, L. I., Sept. 25.—President Roosevelt has contributed $100 to be used by Rear-Admiral Thomas in a legal suit instituted recently at Newport, R. I., to determine whether or not a man can be excluded from a public place of entertainment because he wears the uniform of the United States army or navy.

President Roosevelt Monday made public a letter sent to Rear-Admiral Thomas in which he said:

"I feel that it is the duty of every good citizen to endeavor in every shape and way to make it plain that he regards the uniform of the United States army and navy, just as much when worn by an enlisted man as when worn by an officer, as a badge of honor so long as he behaves decently. There is no finer body of men in all our country than the enlisted men of the army and navy of the United States and I cannot sufficiently express my indignation and contempt for any man who treats his uiform save with the respect to which it is entitled.

He was born in Ohio in 1842 and entered the volunteer service of the United States as a second lieutenant in the Eighty-third Ohio volunteer infantry in 1862. He saw four years of active service at this time and was honorably discharged with the brevet of brigadier general. This Mr. Sullivan declined to do, and he secured action from the Democratic state convention which was interpreted as an indorsement of his attitude. The same convention indorsed Mr. Bryan's candidacy for the presidential nomination in 1908. In his recent Chicago speech Mr. Bryan said he did not want an indorsement given under such circumstances, and he made some quite pointed remarks about the course pursued by Another Sullivan in the public eye is James E. Mr. Sullivan, who was a prominent figure in connection with the world's fair at St. Louis, where he had charge of the physical culture department, is secretary of the American Athletic union and was American commissioner to the Olympic games. His work in this capacity was so much appreciated that King George singled him out for special honor and conferred upon him the

The possession of land is regarded with almost superstitious veneration by the peasants of Russia. A parallel of this feeling is found in the eastern tale of Nasr-ed-Din Hodga, who met a peasant one day with a donkey, over whose back hung two sacks, one filled with stones, the other with wheat, the stones having been added to balance the wheat. "Why not divide the wheat into two parts instead?" suggested Nasr-ed-Din Hodga. Delighted with the idea, the peasant did as he was advised and hung the two sacks of wheat over the donkey's back. "And where are your lands, O wise stranger?" he asked humbly. "I have no lands," answered the other. "Your estates, then, and your palaces?" inquired the peasant. "I have none," said the other. "Then your houses, your gardens, your orchards?" persisted the man, amazed. "I have none of these," smiled the sage. "What!" cried the enraged peasant. "Do you, who have no lands and no possessions, presume to give advice to me?" And he unloaded the donkey, rearranged the wheat and tests in running, boxing, jumping and stones as before and proceeded on his

There followed an impatient pause. Finally the teacher made this announcement:

"I am very sorry to say, children, that Miss Willet has been taken with a rather sudden hoarseness and will be unable to sing. She is willing, however, to recite a poem instead if you wish it. Do you?"

Disappointment flew into each little one's face at this change, and for a moment no one spoke. Then several boyish heads in the rear of the room became grouped as if in earnest conversation. Suddenly they parted, and Johnnie Marvin, a freckle faced, deep voiced scholar, stood up.

Travelers' tales which often add charm to the conversation of an agreeable person frequently render a bore more tiresome than ever, a fact that was amusingly illustrated by an occurrence in a Baltimore clubhouse not long ago.

You can trust a medicine tested 60 years! Sixty years of experience, think of that! What Bowser Knows of Cats

R. BOWSER'S general demeanor was paternal as he came home to dinner and hung his hat on its accustomed peg. Mrs. Bowser was assured that it presaged something, but just what she could not guess. He treated her with fatherly consideration all through the meal, and it was not until its finish that he said:

"Mrs. Bowser, we have a family cat." You have no doubt seen her lie down many times?

"About a million, I think," she replied.

"Then you must have noticed her turn around in a circle two or three times previous to lying down?"

"Why does she do it? Why do all find that you had something else to do than to speculate as to why cats turn around." said Mrs. Bowser as she thought of the work she had done that tell you, is descended to us from a wild state. She has never lost all her savagery. In her wild state she turns and surveys the locality for danger before seeking repose. That trait continues with her into domesticity. There you have it, and I hope you will remember it. In case a lady calls and there is a conversation about cats"-

"There will be no conversation about cats," she interrupted.

"Then remember what I have told you for your own good. You have seen hundreds of flies trying to get into the house, haven't you?"

"That reminds me that we ought to have three new screens."

"Don't try to switch off on any tangents, Mrs. Bowser, but answer me -why a fly wants to get into the house. He has all outdoors to himself. No traps or fly paper awaits him there. He can roam from Maine to California, and yet he is fool enough to want to get into the kitchen and be knocked down by the cook. Why is it? Did you ever give the matter a thought?"

"Several thoughts, Mr. Bowser. The fly finds a greater variety of food in the house. You don't find 'em in an empty house."

"Well spoken, but not the facts. A fly, Mrs. Bowser, is an insect of sentiment. He is not generally so taken, and that's where people make their mistake. While he appreciates the company of other flies he appreciates that of human beings more. If barred from human beings he takes to the horse or cow. His sole object in entering a house is to be near the cook or members of the family. Every time he is repulsed his feelings are hurt. I don't say you are guilty of murder every time you kill a fly, but I do contend that if people appreciated the situation of affairs there would be less fly killing. Take it and remember it that the fly would keep far from you if he wasn't lonely and did not wish for human society."

"And it's the same with the mosquito, I suppose?" she queried.

"Exactly. I am glad to see your interest increasing."

"But if the mosquito is seeking human sympathy why did you jump out of bed the other night and do all that swearing? Why did you bat at two or three in the room with the pillows? Why didn't you hang out a sign of, 'Human Sympathy Found Here?'

Can't Blame Mosquito. "Don't run things into the ground, Mrs. Bowser. If the mosquito takes a bite or two while looking for human sympathy it's all in the way of graft and can't be blamed. I have no recollection of any such incident as you We have owned horses and

"You have had every opportunity of studying them both." "I remember when one of our cows kicked you over, and when one of the horses ran away with you." "And you are probably sorry I didn't get killed. However, can you tell me if othliedown and get up the same way?" "I should say they did. If they don't, what of it?" "What of it? If you go to the store to buy tea and they give you catnip, what of it? A horse neighs and a cow bellows, and you might as well ask what of it. Can you answer the question I asked you?"

"They both lie down and get up the ame way."

"They do nothing of the sort. A horse sinks down behind and a cow in front. A horse rises on his front legs and a cow on her hind ones. If a lady should ever call here"-

"We shall talk about the heathen, probably, instead of horses and cows." "But why do these animals lie down and get up in different ways?" persisted Mr. Bowser. "You should learn for your own benefit."

"I'm sure I don't know."

Ways of Horse and Cow. "Then I will proceed to inform you. A cow sinks down on her knees first that she may examine the grass and see if there are any bumblebees' nests around. A horse sinks down behind "That's about the way I expected first that he may take a last look at you to answer. Perhaps forty out of the clouds and see what the weather fifty men would have answered the is to be. In rising a cow is still looking for those nests, and the horse wants to know if there is going to be a thunderstorm that day. I ask no credit for what I am telling you, though it has cost me many years of observation. For instance, how many persons in "If you had a house to run you would this town could tell you why cows and horses switch their tails?"

"They do it to keep the flies off, of

"Ha, ha, ha! That was the very answer I expected. It is the very one most people would give, and yet it's wrong. The tail switching is an involuntary motion and is practiced when there isn't a fly within a mile. Let a man stand still, and he will put his hands into his pockets. Let him sit down, and he will cross one leg over the other. These are things you should think of, Mrs. Bowser. Any time you want to ask me any questions about natural history I"-

Mrs. B. Asks Questions. "I want to ask a couple now. How many teeth has a horse, and why has a cow teeth only on one jaw?" Mr. Bowser was bowled over in a minute, but he didn't stay bowled. He rallied and answered: "A horse has thirty teeth, and any fool knows that a cow has teeth on both jaws."

"The male horse has fourteen teeth and the female only twelve, Mr. Bowser, while the cow has teeth only on one jaw, and that is the lower one. Can you tell me why this is so?"

"Because it isn't, It isn't so within

"But it is. Any veterinary surgeon or work on anatomy will tell you so." "Woman, don't try any tricks on shouted Mr. Bowser as he turned red and white. "I sit down here this evening to give you a few lessons in natural history, and you try to turn the whole thing into sarcasm. You talk of corroboration. I will now go out and get such proofs that I am right and you are wrong as will bury you right out of sight. By thunder, but you have cheek!"

Mr. Bowser went to the butcher and was told that Mrs. Bowser was right. He went to a livery stable and was told the same thing. He went to a grocer, who had been a farmer, and was sat down on some more. As a last resort he visited his family druggist and got it in the neck again, and the druggist added:

"Bowser, make a thorough job of it and find out how many teeth an ass

He left the store boiling over and seeing red, but salvation was at hand. A boy and a wheelbarrow came running down the sidewalk at a 2:40 gait, and as Mr. Bowser didn't get out of the way he was struck by the wheel and rolled into the street, and when assisted home by two kind pedestrians he knew that Mrs. Bowser's solicitude for his welfare would prevent her having another word to say about horses or M. ON WILLE'S AGGOUNT

By BEATRICE STURGES

Copyright, 1906, by C. H. Sutcliffe

Willie sat on the steps in a distinctly unhappy mood. It was the first of July, bright and beautiful. The garden was ablaze with flowers and he could pick as many as he wanted. His ball and books and little fire engine lay on the porch beside him, and his collie pup was begging him to come and play, but Willie had no heart for any of these at-

He was grieved. What was the use, he reflected, of being the only child if your father and mother go away for two weeks and leave you at home? What was the use of having a young aunt stav at your house if she shut herself up in her room and wouldn't come downstairs? And what was the use of being alive at all when the circus was coming to town in three days and nobody had invited you to go? Life was full of terrible problems. He was just wondering if he hadn't better cry about it when he saw a friend coming down the street and hastily changed his mind.

This friend was no less a person than Max Harwood, chief of the volunteer fire department of Norwood, commodore of the local yachting club and a hero in Willie's eyes. By some mysterious coincidence Commodore Max appeared on the scene with great promptness and frequency whenever Willie's aunt, Miss Marjory Dean, came for a visit, and as these visits had been rather numerous during the year just passed Willie knew him well enough to rummage through his pockets and to boast about their intimacy whenever any of the other boys needed a little wind taken out of their sails.

To Willie's surprise Max was passing with merely a wave of the hand, so the little boy jumped up and ran after him.

"Hello, Napoleon!" cheerily called his hero. It was his fancy to call Willie by the names of the world's great generals one after another "Good morning, commodore; aren't you coming in to see us?"

"Guess not, Hannibal: it's pretty early for company." "You have been earlier than this,"

said the child reproachfully.

"Well-er-I'm kind of busy this morning"-Willie was turning away to hide the hurt look in his eyes. Nobody wanted to bother him. Max saw this and hastlly added: "But get your cap and come along.

I'm going down-to fix up the boat. You can help me." The delighted child raced back to the house for his cap and then was off hand in hand with the commodore, happy as a lark. They worked all the morning on the boat and then the commodore took Willie up the river for a sail.

"Are you going to the circus, Agamemnon?" inquired Max, by way of conversation.

With a recurrent touch of gloom Willie was forced to admit that he didn't think he was.

"Well, I'd like to take somebody of just about your size," went on his host, and I think that somebody is you.

What do you say, my hearty?" "Fine! Fine!" shouted Willie. "Well, heave ho, there, and we'll splice the main brace. Keep out of the lee scuppers while I hoist the mainsail. Ha! Ulysses, what do you think of that?" And Max, who loved to mix up nautical terms for Willie's enter-landing at his own pier. "Did you ever shiver your timbers, commodore?" asked Willie.

"Lots of times, Wellington, and still live to tell the tale. Don't forget about the Fourth-side shows, fat lady, peanuts, evephants, pink lemonade-we'll

"Indeed I won't!" cried the child, wild with delight as he raced into the house to tell his aunt.

She was watching for him anxiously. "Oh, Willie boy, where have you Budut Hith the through the beautiful the morning?" she exclaimed, kissing him.

He told her treathlessly, and she listened to his admiration of the commodore with rising color.

"Isn't he perfectly splendid, Aunt Marjorie? They say there are ten elephants and the lions growl something awful! But I won't be afraid with the commodore. Only I wish you were coming too. Wouldn't you like it? I'm sure he'd take you, too, if you asked him."

"No, honey, I-I don't think so. I don't expect to see the commodore again; we-we aren't friends any

"Oh, auntie!" exclaimed Willie, in genuine dismay. "And he's so good

Willie thought for a minute that his Aunt Marjorie was going to cry, and then he was surprised to hear her say in a manuer singularly unlike her usual gentleness. "Maybe some people think he is good, but I know his true character, and I do not think you ought to go around alone with him.", This speech was rendered with all the dignity that a woman of the world, iged nineteen, could muster.

"You went with him alone to lots of places," complained Willie. "You went last night."

"Yes, and that's just the reason I'm not going again. If a man takes a girl to a dance and forgets her he will certainly forget a little boy when he takes him to the circus, and then what would happen to you?"

Really this was awful. Willie had never seen his dear little aunt in such a state, but she was very sweet to him and took him out driving that afternoon, stopping in the village to buy him candy and lots of fireworks for the Fourth. He didn't know what to think about his beloved commodore, but saw him the next day and promptly repeated the whole conversation. It seemed to him the simplest way out of the dif-

"Did you forget, commodore?" he in-

"Great Scott, Willie, maybe I did; she says so; but she wasn't lonesome." he said grimly. "Girls are queer creatures. Wellington: you'll find that out some day. But don't say another word about the circus. I'll fix it some way. You're going to see it as sure as your name is Vincingetorix."

So Willie kept his counsel and was petted much by his auntie for the next two days. On the morning of the Fourth he was firing off his crackers from the open window in his little nightelothes at 4 o'clock, and Marjorie said never a word of complaint. She had made up her mind to take him to the circus herself and to get away early to avoid any possible conflict with her former great friend, the commodorenow a stranger forever.

Before lunch was over, however, the commodore's touring car stopped at the door and the commodore was standing on the porch, cap in hand, announcing that he had come.

"Yes, I see," returned Marjorie coolly, but deliberately avoiding his gaze. Max had such a way of looking at one. "But what for?"

"Why, to take my friend Julius Caesar to the circus." Willie looked anxiously from one to the other in an ecstasy of hope and suspense. ("I told Willie"—

"Yes, I know," he interrupted, "but if you come, too, it will be all right."

"Oh. yes, auntie!" cried Willie, jumping with joyful anticipation. Marjorie tried hard to look cold and dignified. "Would you spoil that child's day?" asked the commodore, coming closer. "Marjorie, please!" His eyes urged her as well as his voice. She looked at him. "All right, I'll go. But it's just on Willie's account."

"Any reason will do," responded Max as he helped her into the car. "But maybe you can find a better one before we get home. I'm going to ride back here with you and William." He lifted the delighted child, gave him a hug, and put him in the front seat with the chauffeur. "William the Conqueror is going to have the time of his

The Turquoise Land.

Sinai was known as the "turquoise land" in very ancient times, and Dr. Flinders Petrie believes that it was the first mining center in the world. In his book on the subject Dr. Petrie tells of the various expeditions sent to Sinai by the Egyptian government. At the head of the party was the "commander," or "bearer of the seal of the god," the pharaoh. The official staff consisted of "masters of the house of metals," or assayers, scribes and secretaries, to make inventories of the output of the mines. Even more modern were the "devisers of metals," or prospectors. The working staff consisted of miners and their assistants. The commissariat had cooks, bread bakers, water carriers and even a doctor attached. The mines could only be worked for a certain period, from January to May, which is exactly the best period for archaeological work in Sinai today. The miners lived in camps, and the so called forts and camps were really miners' villages.

England and the Sea.

Yorkshire alone has a record of no fewer than twelve drowned towns and villages. There was Ravenspur, for instance, which was constituted a free borough by Edward I. at a cost of £300 and became a seaport of almost national importance. There it was that Edward Baliol embarked with a force of 2,500 strong in order to win the erown of Scotland. The town, bigger and more important than Hull, had five churches, a capacious harbor and a number of buildings befitting its rank and importance. Where are they now?-London Pall Mall Gazette.

LOCAL ITEMS.

One of the most serious draw-backs to the progress of children in school is the present lack of system in gradation, and the lack of uniformity between schools. For instance a child ought to be able to go from one school to another without loss, but sometimes is not well enough prepared for the work, and again is so far along that it must wait for the class to catch up. One of the important undertakings of the Michigan Teachers' Association has been the formulating, by a commission, of a "Uniform Course for Graded Schools." This commission will make its report at the meeting of the Association at Battle Creek in October and will be one of the most valuable features of the meeting.

The school savings bank system has been adopted by the Caro board of education and will be put into operation next Monday morning, Oct. 1. This system is one of the very best instinutions now known and has been in operation in the Cass City schools for several months with good success. Through its influence the children form habits of thrift and economy which alone are of great benefit in after years. No trouble has been experienced here in getting the children to save their pennies and other small change and now a number of them tell with pride about their neat little bank accounts. The parents are cooperating with the teachers and superintendent and the school savings system in Cass City is a success.

J. D. McCaughna opened his new store at Novesta Corners on Wednesday, the building having recently been built to replace the one destroyed by fire last spring. Mr. McCaughna, on opening day, distributed among his customers, pamphlets containing the history of Novesta township, compiled by John McCracken of Deford. The pamphlets contain a very neat record of the general township affairs for many years past. The printing was done at the Chronicle office. Mr. McCaughna is now running the business in his own name, the firm formerly being Sherman & McCaughna. The people of Novesta township realize they have a good merchant in their midst and as a consequence opening day was a very successful time for Mr. McCaughna.
