CASS CITY, MICH., FRIDAY, JULY 19, 1907.

NEW ROAD NEARLY COMPLETED had been received that he was much THRIPS ON OATS THIS SUMMER improved.

Township Will Then Have Six Miles of State Reward Road.

Chris Schwarder, who has the contract for building the two and onehalf miles of the state reward road north of town, expects to complete the job next week. The last of the gravel needed for the first coating was hauled Tuesday and there now remains but the work of hauling gravel for the last coat on about a mile of road.

The work has been pushed rapidly the past few weeks and from ten to ifteen teams have been engaged in hauling gravel, while for a few days there were more than fifteen teams employed on the job. Mr. Schwarder is doing a good job and has been employing men in this and adjoining townships almost exclusively, thus putting the money paid out on the job in circulation in this community. The building of this road is apprebiated by residents of the township, and especially by those living north of town. When this road is completed it gives this township six miles of highway built on the state reward plan-one mile east of Cass City, two and one-half miles west and two and one-half miles north.

The new road north of town shows more than ever the need of fixing the street between the school house and Main street. A light coat of gravel will put it in fine shape someone says. Let the village fathers think it over.

JACOB A. KOLB DEAD.

Jacob A. Kolb, who has been in Cass City several times in late years buying horses and is well known here, died early Thursday morning, July 11, at Hot Springs, Ark., following an attack of bronchitis.

Mr. Kolb was 24 years of age and at that place in which work Eli B. was associated with his father in Detroit in buying and selling horses. His death came as a great shock to Travis is to make it the largest boys' the family because the young man had division of a Y. M. C. A. in the world. gone away for his health and word

He contracted a severe cold in his throat, bronchial trouble developed and he went to Indiana hoping to find relief. He became much better and started for home last week. On his way to Detroit he was seized with a severe fit of choking and as soon as he reached his home his physician advised him to go to Hot Springs. This n that city his death occurred.

W. N. Straube tendered his resignation at the council meeting Monday evening as superintendent of the electric light and water works plant and as commissioner of public works, the same to take effect yesterday. The resignation was accepted. Mr. Straube was offered a position last week as electrician in a station of the Missouri River Light and Power Co. at Helena, Mont., and decided to accept the same as it offers an increased salary with an eight hour day. Another reason for Mr. Straube's action is that he believes the climate of that state will be beneficial to his wife's health. Mrs. Straube expects to follow Mr. Straube in a few months. Mr. Straube has been superintendent of the power house here for over not been appointed.

"The plan which has been evolved and worked out, to make the churches correlative to the Y. M. C. A., adds 500 to the membership in the boys' division and that takes in the lads from about 16 who are in the intermediate classes and the boys' classes which takes all down the youngest who can be admitted to the privilages of the institution. It is not the intention to take the places of the churches in any way but simply to supplement the work of the churches and bring about a closer relation between the Y. M. C.

Complaints of Condition of Crop Heard All Over the State.

From all parts of the state, complaints are coming in with respect to the condition of the oat crop. The last week has seen a notable change in the outlook. The young oats in a large part of the state have suddenly become as if stricken by blight, the outer leaves turning yellow and afterwards-reddish-until,-after-a-little time, the field appears as if badly rusted. A closer examination shows that there are few if any rust pustules and the appearance on the surface is just enough different from that produced by rust to raise a doubt as to the real cause of the difficulty.

Careful examination with the aid of a powerful lens shows the culprit to be a minute insect called a thrips, very small, and very quick in its movements, jumping like a flea when disturbed and disappearing completely. These little creatures have narrow wings with fringes of long hair instead of the ordinary form of wings. They scrape the surfaces of the oat leaves and cause them to become withered and to turn yellow and die. Now, this little creature has never been seen in numbers by the writer eight years and during that period has and it is very difficult to judge just proved to be a man well qualified for what will be the outcome of the inthat position and his work has al. festation. If one might judge by the ways won the approval of the village behavior of its relatives one would exofficials. He expects to leave for pect the condition to improve after Montana this week and the Chronicle one or two good rains, since thrips, joins with his many friends in wish- in general, thrive in hot, dry weather, ibg him success. His successor has and do not do well when it is moist. However, it seems to be quite serious in places where there has been a fairly good supply of rain. The larger the plants are the better they fare.

Now, there seems to be nothing one can do to check, the trouble at this would be a benefit, but such a course seems to be impossible. All plant life seems to be more susceptible to insects when plants are in poor condition for any reason, and the backward, cold, wet spring furnishes a very sufficient reason for the lack of vigor and resisting power which they should have to help repel the invaders. NEW M. D. AT GREENLEAF.

Dr. Morris, who has been a resident of Lexington for the past year and a half, will shortly remove to the village of Greenleaf in Greenleaf township, where he has purchased a handsome residence with office near by, a complete outfit of household furniture, horses and carriage, etc. It is in the center of a fine country, and he steps into a good practice at once. The doctor and his good wife have made solid friends among the best people of the village, who sincerely regret to see them go and who wish them unbounded prosperity. The doctor's friends recognize his ability, and are well posted as to his clean record in everything that goes to constitute a true gentleman. He is a graduate of the Michigan College of Medicine and Surgery, and stood at the head of his class, bearing off exceptional honors. This comes direct from the president of the college.-Lexington News.

Crash Came at Time When Places Were Filled With Customers-Several People Still Missing.

London, Ont., July 17.-Crystal hall, a three-story brick building on Dundas street, and one of the landmarks of Sondon, collapsed late Tuesday afternoon, and a score of persons were buried under the avalanche of bricks, mortar and timbers. The falling walls from Crystal hall fell upon Brewster's five and ten cent store, a low structure adjoining on the east, completely burying it. The stores of Hamilton, Long & Co., and W. J. Reid & Co., on the first floor of Crystal hall, were filled with wreckage. Nine persons are known to have been killed, four are missing and five are seriously injured as the result of the collapse.

The building was being remodelled. A number of old supports had been taken out and iron girders had been placed. The crash came shortly after 5 o'clock, when all three stores were filled with customers. It seemed that the front wall of Crystal hall fell out into the street. An instant later the east wall gave way and fell on to the Brewster. As the front wall fell into Dundas street, passing pedestrians had narrow escapes. Two women walking on the sidewalk heard the crash and started to run. One of them was swallowed up in the wreckage while the other escaped. A woman with two children narrowly escaped the falling debris. The fire and police departments, with all uty Sheriff Mallory and made a desthe ambulances and physicians that perate attempt to escape. They were could be mustered, at once began the work of rescue. On account of the thought by local officers that the pair great confusion at the scene, it is impossible to account for all those supposed to have been in the building when it collapsed.

Cries were heard from the wreckige in the Brewster store and a party located three girls in an adjoining cellar, imprisoned by wreckage. They said they were not injured and asked for food and water.

Frank Reid, manager of the Reid store, says all his staff escaped. Six men who were at work on the building are unaccounted for.

The pile of ruins seems impregnable, and though the rescuers work with frenzy, they will be hours releasing any who may be in the thick of the wreckage. The building was owned by Peter

Did Toaz Commit Suicide or Was He Murdered?

Charlotte, Mich., July 17 .- The coroner's jury, after deliberating four hours and a half, have been unable to agree whether Constable Tom Toaz committed suicide or was murdered. Toaz lived at Grand Ledge and was shot at his home late on night a few weeks ago. They stood three to three. A point in favor of suicide was that all doors and windows of the house were still locked just after the shooting. Mrs. Toaz told the jury that in the excitement when she saw her husband's body dead downstairs she may have found the woodshed door open and closed and locked it.

GENERAL MARKETS.

Detroit Grain Market. Detroit, July 17, 1907. WHEAT-No. 1 white, 91c; No. Success of Annual Flowers.

The success of annual flowers depends a good deal upon the condition of the soil in the first place and in keeping it clean and mellow afterward. In heavy or clayey soil the seeds often fail to germinate or if a crust is permitted to form on the surface and the top soil becomes too hard and dry. The raising of flowers from seed is then pronounced very difficult and involved in great mystery.

Generally those who attempt and fail with flower seeds do not feel enough interest or do not give time enough to understand what they are doing. In dealing with a clayey soil a crust may be prevented by sprinkling fine leaf mold over the surface of the sowing or some perfectly mixed compost of leaf mold with old cow manure. This will keep the surface friable and in fine condition, and the seeds will sprout freely. Novices are apt to plant their seeds too deeply, to literally bury them.

No seed can germinate without three conditions-namely, moisture, warmth and air; hence if the ground is too dry the seed cannot swell and grow; secondly, if the earth is too cold only the hardiest plants will start; the more tender kinds must be left till the weather and soil become warm if they are to be sown in the open garden. and, thirdly, the seed must have air by being planted in a mellow, porous soil. In large nurseries some of the gardeners are constantly employed in making composts. Huge heaps are continually worked over and finely intermixed until they become almost as fine as flour. Nothing could be better to start the seeds in and to cause successful growth afterward. Composts cannot be made in a hurry. Some months at least are required to effect a sufficient diffusion and intermixture of all the parts.

For Lawn Planting.

The black spruce (Picea nigro) is a distinctive and attractive tree, a particular variety of black spruce (doumetti) being one of the best for lawn planting, says a writer in Country Gentleman. The black spruce is not a rapid grower, but this is no great disadvantage, since its shrublike form makes it attractive while still small in size. This, in fact, is one great advantage in planting these trees-they give the effect and beauty of shrubs while growing up into tree size, since they are branched close to the ground and have a rounded shape by pruning and close branching, all of which makes them available as features in ornamental planting as soon as set.

Farmers visiting the State Fair should make a special effort to see the display of corn. The products of Michigan cornfields will be gathered from every section of the state and be displayed under one roof.

CHAPTER XVI.

HREE weeks later the steam barge Pole Star sailed down the reach of Saginaw bay. Thorpe had received letters from Carpenter advising him of a credit to him at a Marquette bank and inclosing a draft sufficient for current expenses. Tim Shearer had-helped make out the list of necessaries. In time everything was loaded, the gangplank hauled in, and the little band of argonauts set their faces toward the point where the Big Dipper swings.

The weather was beautiful. Each morning the sun rose out of the frosty blue lake water and set in a sea of deep purple. The moon, once again at the full, drew broad paths across the pathless waste. From the southeast blew daily the lake trades, to die at sunset and then to return in the soft still nights from the west.

The ten horses in the hold munched their hay and oats as peaceably as though at home in their own stables. Jackson Hines had helped select them from the stock of firms changing locality or going out of business. His judgment in such matters was infallible, but he had resolutely refused to take the position of barn boss which Thorpe offered him.

"No," said he, "she's too far north. I'm gettin' old, and the rheumatics ain't what you might call abandonin' of me. Up there it's colder than hades on 'a stoker's holiday."

So Shearer had picked out a barn boss of his own. This man was important, for the horses are the mainstay of logging operations. He had selected also a blacksmith, a cook, four teamsters, half a dozen cant hook men and as many handy with ax or saw.

"The blacksmith is also a good wood butcher (carpenter)," explained Shearer. "Four teams is all we ought to keep going at a clip. If we need a few axmen we can pick 'em up at Marquette. I think this gang 'll stick. I picked 'em."

There was not a young man in the lot. They were most of them in the prime of middle life, between thirty and forty, rugged in appearance. "cocky" in manner, with the swagger and the oath of so many buccaneers. hard as nails. Altogether Thorpe thought them about as rough a set of customers as he had ever seen. Throughout the day they played cards on deck and spat tobacco juice abroad and swore incessantly. Toward himself and Shearer their manner was an odd mixture of independent equality and a slight deference. It was as much as to say, "You're the boss, but I'm as good a man as you any day."

Constituting the elite of the profession, as they did, Thorpe might have wondered at their consenting to work for an obscure little camp belonging to a greenhorn. Loyalty to and pride in the firm for which he works are strong characteristics of the lumber jack. For this reason he feels that he owes it to his reputation to ally himself only with firms of creditable size and efficiency. The small camps are for the youngsters. Occasionally you will see two or three of the veterans in such a camp, but it is generally a case of lacking something better. The truth is Shearer had managed to inspire in the minds of his cronies an idea that they were about to participate in a fight. He retold Thorpe's story artistically. The men agreed that the "young fellow had sand enough for a lake front." After that there needed but a little skillful maneuvering to inspire them with the idea that it would be a great thing to take a hand, to "make a camp" in spite of the big concern up river. Shearer knew that this attitude was tentative. Everything depended on how well Thorpe lived up to his reputation at the outset. But Tim himself believed in Thorpe blindly. So he had no fears. A little incident at the beginning of the voyage did much to reassure him. Thorpe had given orders that no whisky was to be brought aboard. Soon after leaving dock he saw one of the teamsters drinking from a pint flask. Without a word he stepped briskly forward, snatched the bottle from the man's lips and threw it overboard. Then he turned sharp on his heel and walked away without troubling himself as to how the fellow was going to take it.

Next morning by daybreak every man was at work. The hatches were opened, and soon between-decks was cumbered with boxes, packing cases, barrels and crates. In their improvised stalls the patient horses seemed to catch a hint of shore going and whinnied. By 10 o'clock there loomed against the strange coast line of the Pictured rocks a shallow bay and what looked to be a dock distorted by the northern mirage.

The men were on him again.

"That's her," said the captain. Two hours later the steamboat slid between the yellow waters of two outlying reefs and with slackened speed moved slowly toward the wharf of log cribs filled with stone.

Thorpe knew very well that the structure had been erected by and belonged to Morrison & Daly, but the young man had had the foresight to purchase the land lying on the deep water side of the bay. He therefore anticipated no trouble in unloading, for, while Morrison & Daly owned the pier itself, the land on which it abutted belonged to him.

From the arms of the bay he could make out a dozen figures standing near the end of the wharf. When, with propeller reversed, the Pole Star bore slowly down toward her moorings, Thorpe recognized Dyer at the head of eight or ten woodsmen. It looked suspicious.

"Catch this line!" sung out the mate, hurling the coil of a hand line on the wharf.

No one moved, and the little rope aft er a moment slid overboard with a ing lines. All was ready for disembarkation.

Bryan Moloney, a strapping Irish-American of the big boned, red cheeked type, threw some water over the four stunned combatants. Slowly they came to life. They were promptly yanked to their feet by the irate river men, who commenced at once to bestow sundry vigorous kicks and shakings by way of punishment. Thorpe interposed.

"Quit it," he commanded. "Let them go. The men grumbled. One or two were inclined to be openly rebellious. "If I hear another peep out of you," said Thorpe to these latter, "you can climb right aboard and take the return trip." He looked them in the eye until they muttered and then went on: "Now, we've got to get unloaded and our goods ashore before those fellows report to camp. Get right moving and hustle!"

So Dyer and his men picked themselves out of the trouble sullenly and departed. The ex-scaler had nothing to say as long as he was within reach. but when he had gained the shore he turned.

"You won't think this is so funny when you get in the law courts!" he shouted.

Thorpe made no reply.

With thirty men at the job it does not take a great while to move a small eargo thirty or forty feet. By 3 o'clock the Pole Star was ready to continue her journey. Thorpe climbed aboard, leaving Shearer in charge.

"Keep the men at it, Tim," said he. "Put up the walls of the warehouse good and strong and move the stuff in. If you get through before I return you preached on temperance last Sunday. might take a scout up the river and fix on a camp site. I'll bring back the lumber for roofs, floors and trimmings with me and will try to pick up a few axmen for swamping. Those fellows won't bother us any more for the present, I think. But it pays to be on deck. So long."

When Thorpe returned to the bay he found the warehouse complete, Shearer and Andrews, the surveyor, were scouting up the river. "No trouble from above, boys?" asked Thorpe.

"Nary trouble," they replied. The warehouse was secured by padlocks, the wagon loaded with the tent and the necessaries of life and work. Early in the morning the processionlaughing, joking, skylarking-took its way up the river trail. Late that evening, tired, but still inclined to mischief, they came to the first dam, where Shearer and Andrews met them. "How do you like it, Tim?" asked Thorpe that evening.

"She's all right," replied the river man, with emphasis, which for him was putting it strong.

At noon the following day the party arrived at the second dam. Here Shearer had decided to build the permanent camp. Injun Charley was constructing one of his endless series of birch bark canoes. Later he would paddle the whole string to Marquette, where he would sell them to a hardware dealer for $2.50 apiece.

Injun Charley looked up and grunted as Thorpe approached.

"How are you, Charles?" greeted Thorpe reticently. "You gettum pine? Good!" replied

Charley in the same tone. [TO BE CONTINUED.]

Proof of the Value of This Important Medical Agent

FOR WOMEN

Great Physicians Recommend It for the Cure of Woman's Ills.

The National Standard Dispensatory s a medical work of nearly two thousand pages, acknowledged as standard authority by the medical profession everywhere. It was edited by such world-famed physicians as Hobart Amory Hare, M. D., professor of therapeutics and materia medica in the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia, Henry H. Rusby, M. D., of Columbia University, New York, and others of equal prominence.

This great-medical authority decribes the action and use of the best medicines recognized in the pharmacopeias of the United States, Great Britain, and Germany, with numerous reference to others. In discussing the properties of Life Root, this best of authorities explains the wonderful action of this medicine on the delicate menstrual organism of women. The remedy favors an increased discharge when the menses are too scanty and painful, and regulates the menstrual function when irregular or too pro-fuse. Notice that the effect is to regulate and restore normal functions of these organs, no matter whether the trouble be suppressed menstruation, or its opposite, profuse.

This medicinal plant, Life Root, vith others of equal value, are found in Zoa-Phora. Your druggist will sup-ply you with this remedy, already prepared, compounded in just the right proportions, and put up in sealed, sterilized, dollar bottles. Ask him for Zoa-Phora—no further explanation will be needed. Each package contains complete and explicit directions for using the medicine, also a copy of "Dr. Pengelly's Advice to Women," a little book of great value, explaining about the various forms of womanly weaknesses and disease and the proper treatment for their cure. If you desire more information about Zoa-Phora, the Zoa-Phora Company, Kalamazoo, Mich., will: cheerfully answer all inquiries. No higher authority regarding the value and use of a medicine is known that that above mentioned. In addition, and to prove conclusively to the most skeptical, the value of Zoa-Phora, we have the personal experience of Dr. Pengelly, the formulator of Zoa-Phora, who used this prescription constantly in his private practice for many years in treating the various diseases and ailments to which the delicate organism of woman is singularly subject.

The occurrence pleased the men, for it showed them they had made no mistake. But it meant little else. The chief danger really was lest they be come too settled in the protective attitude. As they took it, they were about good naturedly, to help along a worthy greenhorn. This they considered exceedingly generous on their part, and in their own minds they were inclined to look on Thorpe much as a grown man would look on a child.

Fine weather followed them up the long blue reach of Lake Huron, into the noble breadth of the Detour passage, past the opening through the Thousand islands of the Georgian bay, into the St. Mary's river. They were locked through after some delay on account of the grain barges from Duluth and at last turned their prow westward in the Big Sea water, beyond wharf. which lay Hiawatha's Po-ne-mah, the splash. The captain, with a curse, signaled full speed astern.

"Captain Morse," cried Dyer, stepping forward, "my orders are that you are to land here nothing but M. & D. merchandise."

"I have a right to land," answered Thorpe. "The shore belongs to me." "This dock doesn't," retorted the other sharply, "and you can't set foot on her."

"You have no legal status. You had no business building in the first place"began Thorpe, and then stopped with a choke of anger at the futility of arguing legality in such a case.

The men had gathered interestedly in the waist of the ship, cool, impartial, severely critical. The vessel swung her bow in toward the dock. Thorpe ran swiftly forward and during the instant of rubbing contact leaped.

He alighted squarely upon his feet. Without an instant's hesitation he rushed on Dyer and with one full, clean in-blow stretched him stunned on the dock. For a moment there was a pause of astonishment. Then the woodsmen closed upon him.

During that instant Thorpe had become possessed of a weapon. It came hurling through the air from above to fall at his feet. Shearer, with the cool calculation of the pioneer, had seen that it would be impossible to follow his chief and so had done the next best thing, thrown him a heavy iron belaylng pin.

Thorpe hit with all his strength and quickness. He was conscious once of being on the point of defeat. Then he had cleared a little space for himself. Then the men were on him again more savagely than ever. One fellow even succeeded in hitting him a glancing blow on the shoulder.

Then came a sudden crash. Thorpe was nearly thrown from his feet. The next instant a score of yelling men leaped behind and all around him. There ensued a moment's scuffle, the sound of dull blows, and the dock was clear of all but Dyer and three others who were, like himself, unconscious. The captain, yielding to the excitement,

The Shaping of an Old Tree the Most Important Factor.

Every man who owns an orchard of any extent should be able to do his own grafting. The most important factor in the top grafting of an old tree is the shaping of the top. The old top is to be removed during three or four or five years, and a new one is to be grown in its place. The original plan or shape of the top will have to be followed in the general outline. Bailey in his pruning book gives the following advice: Branches should be grafted, as a rule, where they do not exceed an inch and a half in diameter, as scions do better in such branches than in very large stubs. The operator should endeavor to cut all the leading stubs at approximately equal distances from the center of the tree. The cut is a good illustration of an old apple tree top grafted. Top grafting is performed in spring. The best time is when the leaves are pushing out, as wounds made then heal quickly, and scions are most apt to live, but when a large amount of grafting must be done it is necessary to begin a month or two earlier. On the other hand, the operation can be extended until a month or more after the leaves are full grown, but such late scions make short growth, which is likely to perish the following winter.

gans to do their work. "Almost three years I suffered from nervousness, indigestion, and palpita-tion of the heart. I could not eat or sleep with comfort, or walk or talk without suffering. Altogether I was in a bad condition. My doctor did not seem to do me any good. I had tried so many remedies that I did not have much hope of any of them doing me any good. Dr. Miles' Nervine was suggested by a friend. I got relief from the first, and after a few days I fell like a new person. When we speak of mining investment; we recognize that their exists a great deal of unjust prejudice against the subject; because people generally confound the word "mining" with "wild-catting," something of an entirely different character, made odious by unscrupulous men who have accepted investors' money simply for the purpose of SEARCHING FOR a mine.

We want to come right out frankly and informally and say that when we use the word "mining" in connection with the operations of this company, we use it in the legitimate sensethe taking of valuable ore from the ground where it has been found and proven itself to exist in profitable quantities. The ore from the mine which we own and are developing assays from $36.38 to $70.-55 per ton. The present stockholders purchased the mine and carried work along as a close corporation, offering no stock for sale, until this time, when, with the value of the property fully proven, with valuable ore found in abundant quantities, a block of this stock is now offered to careful investors for the purpose of completing the work of development and marketing the ore.

This is mining, not "wild-catting," such as has been proven by statistics to be 32 per cent safer than farming, 29 per cent safer than mercantile business, 41 per cent safer than manufacturing, and even 17 per cent safer than banking.

We want you to become interested, intelligently interested, in this proposition. No one ever got rich working by the day or week on a salary. No one ever got rich by putting a few dollars in a savings bank and leaving it there. It is by saving and intelligently investing it where large returns must result that makes money grow. If you are desirous at all of finding a more than ordinary good opportunity for the investor of $10, $100, or $10,000, you will ask us to mail you a full description. We will include some valuable statistics on mining as compared with other industries, as well as a history of some notable mining successes. These things are worth knowing, so drop us a card for your own benefit and information. This stock is now selling at 10c per share. $100 buys 1,000 shares. The first advance in price will double the value of your investment.

married we decided to rent the department of agriculture calling me to the Capital City of the United postpone house hunting until our honeymoon was over.

After visiting about forty real estate agents and looking over all sorts of obviously undesirable rentals, owing sometimes to location, sometimes to Marjorie quite as well as it did me, I condition and sometimes to our limited means, the forty-first agent suggested that we buy.

"Don't be a tenant," he urged. "Don't have a landlord to boss you you shan't do. Be independent. Own to worry about the rent coming due. Don't allow yourself to be handicapped about making the repairs and innovations you want because of spending your money on some one else's property. Don't always walk in the shadow of the dread of moving. In a word, buy your house now and start right."

Marjorie quite agreed with the agent. as I could see by her looks. Besides, she kept nudging me, as if to say, "Pay attention to that now, will you?" "I am quite agreeable to buying," I admitted, "if I had the money, but our expenses have been quite heavy of late"-

Marjorie blushed charmingly.

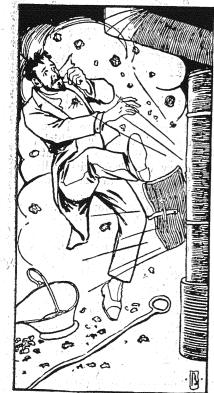

"Yes, yes. I understand perfectly," agreed the agent, beaming over his gold bowed spectacles. "I was married once myself, and I've never begrudged the money I spent on the honeymoon, not a cent of it! No, sir! later. And he chucked me in the short ribs playfully, no doubt, but with such violence that I must have grunted like a hog fat for the killing.

"Oh, I don't begrudge it any," I answered as soon as I had recovered my breath, "but I thought that I'd have to wait until I had paid what I now owe before I buy a house."

"You'll rise, you'll rise!" chuckled the portly agent, his whole fat body shaking with genial mirth. "And I contend that you should own that home, and own it at the beginning. That's the magic word of successnow!

"If you have any practical suggestion to make, I'll be glad to hear it," I ventured, looking at Marjorie, who was

We all three seized vacant straps on the crowded trolley and set out for what was to be our new home. From the outside the house looked fine and well worth the $5,000 asked for it. The interior was, if anything, still better, and only $2,000 was asked as a first payment, the remainder going on a mortgage at the usual 5 per cent rate. The agent did not directly urge us to buy. "You are a young coup's," he said frankly, "and I want to see you added to my already large family of happy householders. I may further say that I have been quite taken with the apa house somewhere in Wash- pearance of both of you. This house, ington, my duties as clerk in you observe, has all the modern conveniences-hot water heat, electric lights, hot and cold water, gas for States. We had been wise enough to sooking and everything, in fact, that is considered essential for housekeeping needs and luxury.'

As I had the $2,000 and a little more than that tucked away in the bank for a nest egg and as the house pleased agreed to Mr. Splitacre's terms, received my deed with only a day's delay and found that my troubles had begun.

In the first place, I had to buy my and tell you what you shall and what | furniture on the installment plan, and it cost four times as much as I exthe roof over your heads. Don't have pected. The percentage I had to pay the dealer-for installments, I found, don't mean all trust-ate a large hole in what was left of my bank account, and it began to look as if, when I got through, only a broken shell would remain of my nest egg. It was late in the fall when we moved in, and right then we began to learn our lesson about modern conveniences. Before I fairly learned to run the hot water heat the temperature in the rooms ranged anywhere from 32 degrees to 110. As a consequence both Marjorie and I had colds which necessitated the attendance of a physician. We agreed to pay his bill on the installment plan. Then the water pipes in the second story froze, and the amount of damage done before the plumbers got around to do more was almost incredible. So was the bill that we received a little plumbing firm agree to allow me to pay them a certain percentage of my salary each pay day. They said theirs was a cash business, but they would agree to make an exception in my case, provided I would promise solemnly that I would say nothing about it to the neighbors, as they did not care to be bothered with outstanding bills. A leak in the gas pipes occurred in the middle of January. It was discovered in a rather odd manner. I located it, but felt no pride in the achievement. I was going down cellar to fix the fire for the night, and when I opened the door of the heater there was a deafening explosion. The force of it threw me down, nearly stunning me and horribly singeing a dress suit -I had been at a Masonic meeting that evening-and incinerating a Vandyke beard and a pair of the first eyebrows ever had. Half the asbestus covering was knocked from the heater, and the very fire was blown up the chimney. The concrete floor was, I imagined, dented in places, and the jar started another costly leak in the water pipes.

The gas men endeavored to repair the damage, but they somehow failed to fix things as good as they were before. In vain they tampered with this and tinkered with that. The awful odor of gas permeated the whole house, insinuating itself into every room, no matter how hard we tried to keep it out. It finally became so odious that we fairly dreaded the jingle of the electric gong, having become ashamed of repeating to constant callers the old excuse that we were "having it fixed." "It's just too mortifying," sobbed Marjorie one evening, "to have Mrs. Banks call and sit there with her handkerchief held to her nose with one hand and her vinaigrette with the other and looking at me as if I were a segment of limburger cheese or had been eating onions. If I have explained this unexplainable thing to one person, I have to a hundred, and I don't think either that half of them believe me!" It was easy to see that the situation was wearing on my wife's nerves as well as on mine, though I took it out in a different way from sobbing, to the chagrin no doubt of the recording angel.

aext door. When Marjorie and I saw them, we recalled that Miss Sphinx had had a three days' illness not long before, during which time she was confined to her room with a dreadful toothache and neuralgia and could see no callers except the dentist.

While I was at work days Marjorie was nearly distracted with installment collectors. The plumbers' man came twice a day, and the furniture dealers' man took the place of an alarm clock, a dinner bell and the curfew. There were others. The neighbors came to think they were all friends of ours, and we were cut socially for associating with such disreputable looking people. The plumbers' man, you see, was a short, stocky built fellow who always wore a greasy red necktie, a slouch hat and a coat ripped at random. The furniture dealers' man never had his shoes blacked, wore no collar or necktle and was so tall that he would have attracted attention in a museum for freaks. The others varied regularly in size, like the strings of a harp, and all seemed to take an equal delight in pushing the button at our front door while clothed in the most abhorrent fashion.

When the electric light wires set fire to the house through imperfect insulation, driving us out of doors in dishabille in the middle of the night, I decided that the climax had been reached. and Marjorie agreed with me to a T. The insurance company paid for the damage, and a round sum it cost them. With the utmost duplicity, I next day began to sing the pleasures of owning one's own home, provided it had all the modern improvements, and kept at it constantly until one of my coworkers, named Tuttle, who was going to get married, approached me in a quiet, hesitating sort of way, asking if] would like to sell my house.

Without appearing too eager I told him I might dispose of it if I got the right price. You can imagine how my heart went to my throat as I made him this answer. From the height of my superior experience I saw that young man as he was, and I realized that, green as he might be, he was no greener than I had been when I bought a house with all the modern improvements. He hesitated, started to speak, appeared to think better of it and finally said he would see me the n The next day he came with Miss Angel. I presume that was her name. I heard him call her by it in a whisper. They consulted together after making a thorough and delightful rummage of every nook and corner. The house, now well furnished, looked even better than it did when Marjorie and I had seen it in the first place.

noblemen of Venice were ushered into the dining room. Among them were skilled critics of art work. They looked at the lion long and carefully and asked Signor Faliero what great sculptor had been persuaded to waste his skill upon a work in such a temporary material. Faliero could not tell, so he asked the head servant, who brought Antonio before the company.

When the distinguished guests learned that the lion had been made in a short time by a scullion, the dinner was turned into a feast in his honor. Some may not have heard how the boy Antonio took advantage of this first great opportunity, but all know of Canova, one of the greatest sculptors of all time.

Circumstantial Evidence.

Once while two famous students of Blackstone were arguing a case one said he could illustrate his part of the argument, which was that of circumstantial evidence, by a story of a boy who was fond of custard ple. One day when left alone at home he got into the pantry and, finding a custard pie, ate it all. Then, thinking of a certain strap which was hanging in the hall, he caught the house cat and smeared custard over its paws and mouth and turned it loose to roam at its will.

Finally the old man returned and soon saw the cat with its telltale mouth and marks of its paws upon the floor. Getting a rope, he tied the poor cat to a tree limb, went to the house and got his gun. The boy, who had hidden himself in the rear of the barn, remarked as he heard the report, "There goes another victim of circumstantial evidence."-New England Mag-

Be here at 10 o'clock, and I'll go with you to see whatever place or places you'd like to look at."

I gave a rather reluctant consent.

The next day we were right on time. When the agent came in, he apologized profusely for having kept us waiting, so that Marjorie even ventured to thank him for condescending to notice us. "With your pressure of business," she remarked, smiling sweetly, "it is really kind of you to bother with us and when you don't know that we will buy at all?

I had an impression that he did know we would buy, but I refrained from offering any comment, and inside of five minutes I, too, was under the agent's magnetic spell. We had picked out a house which was neither in the central part of the city nor quite out of it, a pleasing medium between the busy section and the suburbs.

The first relief we had was during those days when the gas was shut off at the main in the street while an entire new set of pipes was being put in, and even these, as it turned out, were destined to give us trouble from time to time.

The April rains went through the slate roof in places much as if it were a sieve, and the labor of patching it meant more installments for the carpenter, while two of the ceilings were ruined, and, with installments for one thing or another coming due all the time, I found myself unable to raise the money to have them fixed.

In June an awful odor arose from the basement. I thought a cat must have died between some partitions, but Mrs. Banks of the handkerchief and vinaigrette assured us it was the sewage. Investigation showed that this was backed up in an alarming manner. The cellar was again flooded, and this

"I'll give you $7,500 for it and not a cent more," he said at last, with the air of one who has plunged into and crossed the Rubicon.

What did I do? Oh, I held out for eighty-five hundred and succeeded in getting eight thousand. By this lucky stroke we cleared our debts and had the money to buy and pay for a little place in the country, which we expressly stipulated should have no modern improvements. There are no pipes in the house to burst. We draw water from a well with an old fashioned well sweep. We light our house as our forefathers used to do, and we have great fireplaces to heat it in the same way. The cellar is in practical disuse. I chop the wood and carry in from the shed what coal we burn. The roof, with old fashioned shingles, is as tight as a drum. Marjorie and I are satisfied. "Just think," she was saying last night, "we have lived here a year and have had no trouble at all. The neighbors all talk about the perfect health we enjoy and refer to us as a model household. Baby has the fresh air he needs, and he gets the milk warm from the cow."

TRY THIS PLAN MR. MERCHANT.

A plan for drawing trade to a town that has been successfully worked at several points might be adopted to advantage in this city. The plan is as follows: An agreement was reached between all the merchants whereby they offered special sales on certain days, each merchant selecting some special line of goods upon which he made a lower price than usual. Thus one dry goods house would sell gloves at a special price, while another would offer bargains in dress goods. One hardware merchant would reduce the price of skates. Every line of business was represented and care was day was extensively advertised in the surrounding country, the names of the merchants and their special sales being in all cases stated. The farmers responded in a gratifying manner been carried out in several cities.

Winifred Lane and Josiah Dent had been lovers since their A B C days. For seventeen years now she had worn the ring he had sold his first colt to buy. Together they had "stood up" for her brother Dick and Eliza at Dick's first wedding, while all the assembled company commented upon them and looked forward to another wedding.

Her father's failing health had brought the first postponement. Then Dick came home a widower and his delicate baby became "Aunt Winnie's" charge. Dick's second marriage had brought a gleam of hope. But Julia Rebecca declined to live on the farm, town, leaving to his sister the care of her mother and the farm. Six years later Mother Lane and Julia Rebecca had both died in the same week, and Dick, cheerfully consigning his orphan brood to his sister's care, had taken an extended trip west. Through it all Josiah had waited patlently, declaring always when Winifred offered him his release that there was but one woman in the world for him, and Winifred had settled down to cheerful performance of daily duty, brightened by the "some day" that would yet be hers.

The patiently awaited day seemed near at hand on this dull November afternoon. Richard Lane had unexpectedly appeared at his sister's home accompanied by his third wife, and without any unnecessary delay had ing out. For instance, during the taken his children to the western town in which he was located.

Miss Lane stood on the front veranda luck with wives so far, but I've a notion this will last," she said aloud as she went slowly indoors.

How still it was! The children's voices seemed to echo through the empty rooms. Winifred's eyes filled with scalding tears.

"Yes," she said in a tone which held both regret and relief, "they're gone for good, and I s'pose I'm free at last. Of course he'll hear," she continued presently. "Maybe he'll be over tonight. I'd better tidy up.'

Miss Lane lit the parlor lamp and, after a little hesitation, pinned on her best lace collar. "It'll do no harm even if nobody comes," she argued to herself. But the clock struck 8 and 9, and no one came. "He hasn't heard yet," she assured herself as she went to bed. The vigil was repeated the next evening and the next. Winifred became perplexed.

"When Dick married his second, Josiah was here before tea time," she reflected. "But I won't begin to worry until Sunday," she sensibly determined. "Josiah 'll be at church, and he'll hear about Dick." Sunday was ushered in with a drizzling rain, but in the afternoon the sun shone bravely. Miss Lane went to evening service attired in the neat gray dress and bonnet which had been purchased for her brother's second wedding, twelve years ago. Feeling lonely, she gladly accepted an invitataken that no conflicts occurred. tion from the minister's wife to a seat Prizes were then offered to the farmer in the front pew. With pardonable coquetry, she lingered a little going out. A casual glance through the open door assured her that he was waiting in the entry and the merchants were well pleased as of old. She had nearly reached with the plan. The idea has already him. In another minute she would have slipped her hand within his arm with the fond assurance of ownership when a blond head, surmounted by a bright red turban, came between them, and Josiah went down the steps with pretty Nettie Searles clinging to his Miss Lane walked home through the starlight alone. Lighting the lamp, she went directly to a mirror and gazed long and thoughtfully at the reflection within, comparing it with the girlish prettiness of the face beneath the red turban. The glass refused to flatter. The angular form, the careworn brow and hollow cheeks, the lines about the patient mouth, all spoke of burdens borne and labor accomplished. "My best years have gone and I've got dull and uninterestin' in all this time. Her first thought was one of renunciation. The freedom she had offered in years gone by she would freely give now. But she thought of the future and hesitated. Not on her own behalf -self had been put entirely out of the question from the first. But as she remembered tales of Mrs. Searles' housekeeping and the flippant remarks she had heard from Nettie's lips she felt suddenly impelled to warfare on Josiah's behalf. "Red cheeks and dimples can't insure a comfortable home," Miss Lane Applications will now be received decided sagely. "If it was any nice for emplopment in and around the girl that's been well brought up I wouldn't hesitate 'a minute. But all paign. Either call in person or write. Bloomville knows that Nettie's reputation for dressing and flirting far outdoes her skill in housekeeping. I've no right to shrink from trying to save Josiah from a miserable home. His one hope is in my holdin' him fast to our engagement, and, talk or no talk, "I'll spend the winter with Cousin

Emma," she decided. "There ain't soul in Bloomville knows her address Dick says she don't look within a dozen years as old as I do, and she's a year older. She always was real tasty. Maybe I can pick up a few hints from her. Looks and dresses and general up-to-dateness makes lots of difference to a man."

All the next day she toiled steadily setting her house in order. And Tuesday morning while waiting for the expressman she penned a note to her recreant lover:

Dearest Josiah-I write 's inform that I am well and expect is spend this whiter in the city. I leave today, so I shall not have the pleasure of seeing you before I go. But you will be constantly in my thoughts, and your ring, as always, will be my reminder of our engagement. Yours until death, WINIFRED.

"It will show him that I'm holdin' him fast," meditated Miss Lane as the train sped cityward. "And as I didn't give any address, he won't know where to write. He isn't one to go very far with that Searles girl until he breaks with me. And he can't break with me until he finds out where to send a letter."

Bloomville was golden with dande lions and white with apple blossoms when Winifred Lane came home to her own. "Not a soul knows I've come," she reflected as she unpacked the new trunk. She sighed suddenly. "Well, by tomorrow I shall know. He's had the winter to consider in, and if he's still set upon it I'll give him up."

Josiah Dent came up the church steps with a look of discontent upon his comely face. In the months that had passed since Winifred's, disappearance he had nursed a growing sense of injury.

"'Tain't fair," he complained, "keeping a fellow on the fence so. Her best years have been spent for Dick anyhow, and a woman ages faster'n a man. If she'd given me her address, I'd have settled it months ago."

Josiah went up the aisle to his own pew. Above the high back of the minister's pew there arose a white sailor hat, swathed with an airy muslin scarf. Beneath it soft waves of curling hair rippled across a brow from which all traces of care had been resolutely smoothed away.

Josiah, watching with some curiosity until she turned her head slightly, caught the clear profile and noted the soft color in her cheek. It was Wini fred! All at once there dawned upon him the truth that immortal youth is not at the mercy of added years and that better than the passing beauty of girlhood is that womanliness which shall outlast the ages.

"I'm glad I didn't know where to write," thought Josiah, with a sense of narrow escape and a growing feeling of anxiety.

Winifred was unaware of his presence until she heard his voice in the closing hymn. As the last notes ceased she turned to him, smiling straight up into his anxious face.

'Well, Josiah," she said.

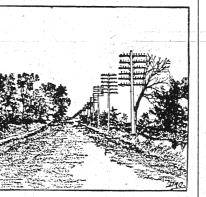

And Josiah wondered why he had not known before that raiment, whether it be the unbecoming gray-of past years or the crisp muslin that seemed to give back to him the love of his early years, was not worthy of a passing thought. It was the old Winifred who smiled up at him out of those clear eves. Nettie Searles and the throng about them were alike forgotten. He only thought of the woman before him--the only woman in the world for him-and all Bloomville had its answer to a long winter of speculation and comment as on 300 feet sand from a stream near by he stooped to kiss her in the crowded

BUILDING BETTER ROADS.

Construction of Highways Now Recognized Branch of Business.

Road building has now become a branch of business which is destined to play an important part in the future of highways of the United States, says the Architects and Builders' Journal. The construction will no longer be conducted by haphazard methods, hampered by incompetence and ignorance, but regulated by scientific principles, which apply to this as well as to other improvements.

The development of suburban sections in the neighborhood of large cities has had much to do in creating a demand for better "oads, and the appearance of the automobile in increasing numpers has exerted an influence of far reaching importance in this connection. Men with a eye to possibilities have studied conditions and concluded there should be money in road building besides an added convenience and pleasure to the public. In several cities corporations and companies have been formed and active operations have been started with gratifying results. It has been demonstrated that good coads may be built under organized forces, with proper machinery and other requirements as cheaply as the poorly constructed under the unsatisfactory system of . the past. The introduction of bitulithic and other modern paving materials has solved the problem of securing smooth and durable

Beginning with suburban drives, this system of modern roadbeds will extend from town to town in thickly settled sections of the country, and the benefits from the same will be shared by the farmer as well as those who ride or drive for pleasure. Good roads are paying investments, a fact which the American people have been slow to grasp.

Roadmaking In Which River Sand, Kaolin and Clay Were Used.

In his report of road improvement done in Delaware, State Highway Commissioner Francis A. At the expense of the local taxpayers the foundation was graded by a scraper, to a slope one one inch to the foot, from the center line to the side ditches, then rolled with a steam roller. On this foundation four inches of O. sand were spread, then four inches of Ø clay, which was covered by three inches of sand. These layers were thoroughly mixed by harrowing, then rolled down smooth and hard.

"The March of the Men of Harlech."

In military music the march occupies a prominent position and has been employed not only to stimulate courage, but also from about the middle of the seventeenth century to insure the orderly advance of troops. One of the earliest instances of rhythmical march is the Welsh war strain, "The March of the Men of Hariech," which is supposed to have originated during the siege of Harlech castle in 1468. In England the military march was of somewhat later development. Sir John Hawkins in his "History of Music" tells us that its characteristic was dignity and gravity, in which respect it differed greatly from the French, which was brisk and alert, and apropos of this subject the same author quotes a witty reply of an Elizabethan soldier to the French Marshal Biron's remark that "the English march, being beaten by the drum, is slow, heavy and sluggish." "That may be true," he said, "but slow as it is it has traversed your master's country from one end to the other." - Chambers'

BUSINESS

At the corner of Shelby and Cruft streets in Indianapolis, where the city's southern border runs, there is a big/ silver poplar tree that serves an even better purpose than that of being a good shade producer. It might be called a postoffice substation, for on its trunk there are just ten rural delivery mail boxes, and they serve to keep the neighborhood in touch with the outside world, says the Indianapolis News. sort at all, but they serve the purpose. Claiming the distinction of being the first man in the United States who ever carried a rural mail route, E. P. Wright, who resides on the Jackson pike in Franklin township, Ohio, is still employed in the mail service. carrving R. F. D. No. 3 from the South Columbus branch station, says the Columbus Dispatch. Hale and hearty at the age of threescore and ten. Mr. Wright makes his daily trips and has to his credit fifty-five years in Uncle Sam's service.

There are ten women carriers in the rural service in Missouri. Kansas has Ø. twelve, Oklahoma six, Texas six, and Arkansas three.

every two foot, with roll jelly cake in between. Well, yes! Recollect how the Suţoţ.

perintendent would stick his handkerchief under his collar and say cheerfully: "Now all help yourself!" Then everybody fell to and helped himself. If you were a timid boy and held back till all the chicken was gobbled up, you regretted it-you regret it still. You didn't help yourself, and nobody else helped you. Remember that picnic when the gang of fellows from the city happened along and lit into the fried fowl? City chaps are al-ways hungry. They helped themselves, and there wasn't anything left for the town boys but the bones.

Life is a picnic. Not a Sunday school picnic-not exactly. But it's a picnic dinner all the same. The feast is spread for you. Everybody help himself now!

SUPPOSE YOU'RE A MERCHANT IN THIS TOWN. THERE'S FRIED CHICKEN AND ROLL JELLY CAKE ALL AROUND YOU, BUT YOU LET THE CITY CROWD COME IN AND SNATCH IT RIGHT FROM UNDER YOUR NOSE, ALL YOU GET IS THE BONES AND SCRAPS.

The city fellows are helping themselves. They reach out long fingers-the mail order monthly and the price catalogue -and pick up the choice bits. Why don't you try a few fingers of advertising in your local paper, dive in ahead of the gang from outside, get there first and help yourself to the chicken? "Now all help yourself!"
