fair this year will be an unqualified success. Much interest, even more than usual is shown by the community for the success of the big event, now only a few days away. On every hand inquiries may be heard concerning the attractions, races, exhibits, etc., and as the time draws nearer the interest increases. Cass City is famous throughout the Thumb country for her fairs, the crowds that attend each year testifying to the popularity of the exhibition. Very few complaints are heard concerning it.

This year the officials and superintendents are redoubling their efforts to please. The grounds are in better condition than ever before, the halls have been put in fine shape ready for the exhibits and good weather is the only thing now necessary for a week of pleasure. The Chronicle is not in direct communication with Big Chief Weatherman, but it is rumored that President Koepfgen has been and will altogether likely be on hand next week with the goods.

The superintendents ask that the xhibits for floral and agricultural halls be brought to the grounds early so that they will have a reasonable ength of time to arrange the articles in their respective places. Tardy exthe people who have the arranging in charge, so please bear in mind that you can't come too early.

The special attractions are of a high order and will consist of a Chinese trick house; Chic, the trick bicycle rider; Latena, the lady contortionist: and fancy shooting. Good music will be furnished for the fair by a band.

There will be horse races Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons as follows: Wednesday, 3-minute farmers' trot or pace, $25; half mile half mile run, farmers' horses, $25. trot or pace, $200; three-fourths mile hand base burner. Jas. McKenzie, run, $75.

ASSAULTER PUT AWAY.

Caro, Mich., Sept. 21.—Cyrus Gould was convicted in the circuit court Friday and sentenced to Jackson prison to from 12 1-2 to 15 years. The trial was started Thursday.

Gould's victim was Mrs. Frank Kartman, a young Russian woman, who can speak but little English and the assault was most cowardly. Gould engaged Kartman and his wife to work in his beet fields in Ellington township and on the night of Aug. 1 As in previous years, the Cass City started to drive Mrs. Kartman and her baby to the farm, her husband takina another rig with some others. About four miles from town is where the assault was committed.

Gould, who is separated from his wife, once served 90 days in the De troit house of correction, a marrled woman figuring in the other incident.

LIQUOR BONDS AGAIN REFUSED

Bondsmen Must Reside in Village Where License Is Granted.

John McLellan and George Jackson, who applied to the village council for a license to sell liquor in the Hotel McLellan, last week, secured still another surety to their bond. Two sureties, Jas. H. Wright of Indianfields township and Thos. Hennesey of Elkland township, were on the first bond presented and Asa A. Evritt of Elmwood was the last surety secured. Mr. McLellan was quite certain that the council would not have any grounds for refusing to grant the license with three sureties, and he intimated if they did, they would commence selling the goods without the

The license, however, was again refused by the council Monday evening, the reason given being that the sureties were not residents of the village. This feature of the law was a new one to the principals who say that they thought that residence in the county was sufficient for the sureties. They have decided to stay out of the busihibitors cause no end of hard work for ness until thay can secure bondsmen with the required qualifications.

Hiram Perkins' Cure.

By F. A. Mitchel.

HERE are two pictures extant of Timothy Portley, the one in which he stands among a group of packing house employees in high boots, trousers and woolen shirt, the other in which he is dressed in the height of fashion, his natural florid complexion subdued by the artist. The first was Tim Portley, butcher. The second is Timothy Portley, multimillionaire. He would give a thousand dollars for each of the group pictures to burn them.

Portley lived most of the year in his country place twenty miles from the city. Time was when he hadn't a pickel to take him, tired and hungry, home from his work in the evening. Now there are express trains running past his place to the city, but they are not good enough, certainly not fast enough, for him. He has his own automobile, capable of making a mile a minute, and it has often taken him from his house to his office in half an

The Arlington turnpike furnished a direct line between Mr. Portley's house straight piece of road over which he gave his chauffeur orders to make fifty miles an hour. At a quarter past 10 take another road, doubling the disevery week day morning and a quar- tance to the city. On reaching it he ter past 4 in the evening, the hours of Mr. Portley's passage, the farmers living on this stretch of road were obliged to stop work to see that there were no children or stock in the way. Amos Green lost a horse and Joseph Briggs a cow. In both these cases Mr. Portley sat in his car, was handed a check book by his secretary, filled out checks for double the amount claimed by the owners of the stock, tossed them at the the ground to be picked up by the pay-ees the payer dashed away. The next thing to fall under Mr. Portley's juggernaut was something that could not be paid for in money. Daisy Burton, fourteen years old, was crossing the road when she heard the squawk of a horn and saw Mr. Portley's automobile coming. She turned back, but, seeing the automobile turning in the same direction, started again to cross. The automobile changed its course at the same time. It had slowed down, but could not be stopped in time to prevent a collision. Daisy was knocked to a distance of twenty feet. where she lay in a heap. Mr. Portley took in the situation and ordered his chauffeur to drive on. A cloud of dust marked his going, and a crowd of indignant countrymen, among whom stood the father of the child, shaking his fist at the retreating automobilist.

marked the scene of the accident. Hiram Perkins, a middle aged, weather beaten farmer, whose skin hung loose in grooves on his face and neck, lived on the next farm to the Burtons. The only thing in the world he loved was Daisy. From the time she could toddle across the fields between his and her father's house he had made a pet of her. While her father was shaking his fist at Portley Perkins picked up the girl, covered with dust and blood, and carried her into her home. There he bent over her and groaned. When she opened her eyes and looked at him with a faint attempt at a smile he dashed out of the house, mounted a horse and galoped away for a doctor.

The only inconvenience it occasioned Mr. Portley was having to take the train every morning to the city instead of his automobile. He dared not go over the Arlington pike till the damage had been paid, and there was no other direct road to town. Farmer Burton did not come at once to a frame of mind to accept money for the injury to his child, and it was some time be fore the matter was settled. Meanwhile the farmers living on the pike discussed the situation. Daisy would be crippled for life. Must they continue to risk the same misfortune or worse for their children? There was a state law regulating the speed of automobiles, but there was no one whose duty it was to enforce it, nor

Portley heard a crackling noise and

"Hey, you old fool! Are you crazy?" yelled Mr. Portley.

Hiram ceased turning his crank and looked at the automobilist.

"Why, no; I reckon not," he replied. "I'm only shootin' at a mark."

"Go on, Pete," said Mr. Portley to his chauffeur. The automobile gave a few preliminary puffs, and Perkins began again to turn his crank, sending a storm of bullets across the road. The chauffeur shut off in a hurry.

"What do you mean," roared Portfashion?"

"How much do you want to stop your practicing when I want to pass your farm?" There was a world of calm intensity in Hiram's tone and manner as he replied: "You hain't got money enough to stop my practicin' at any time." Mr. Portley refrained from further argument. He felt sure that if he couldn't buy his way from the farmer and his office, and on that pike is a he could buy it through a lawyer. He gave orders to his chauffeur to turn and hurried back in no good humor to went straight to his lawyer's office, told how Hiram Perkins was monopolizing the highway and asked how he should proceed.

"There's no law," said the lawyer, "to prevent a man firing on his own property, even if the highway runs through it."

"What! No law to keep him from said the multimillionaire, rising, with a scowl and a firmly set jaw, "he's welcome to do so." When Portley returned in the afternoon on his accustomed route, approaching Perkins' farm he again heard the rattle of rapid fire. He ordered his chauffeur to slow down and when within a hundred feet of the line of fire to creep. Hiram was turning the crank of his gun.

A shot a trifle out of line whistled ominously near Portlev's nose. It was the will of a multimillionaire against a simple farmer. The farmer won. Portley backed his machine, turned about and disappeared in a cloud of dust. Hiram looked after him. There was the same quiescence in his outward appearance, but a close observer would have noticed a light in his eye and a slightly quicker breathing. "Perkins' method," as it was called, spread among the farmers, and wherever a man owned property on both sides of the road he stationed himself before his house with a weapon, some with repeating rifles, some with revolvers, and one ingenious farmer constructed a catapult to throw stones at the rate of one every five seconds. Notices were put up along the road that ten miles an hour was the limit of speed allowed. All automobiles running faster were sure to find some farmer who, apparently realizing that Uncle Sam needed to produce a nation of marksmen, had set up a target across the road and was sure to be practicing when the biggest and fastest machine passed. Some automobilists drove faster than ever, slowing up at the danger point, but they were reported by the farmers to those doing the practicing and on the next trip were obliged to turn back, losing the right to use the road altogether. No law was violated; no automobilist was injured. Persons driving their machines on the road at a moderate rate never heard or saw any firing, and many of them wondered while passing Perkins' farm to what use he could possibly put his old rapid fire gun.

Daisy Burton will limp all her life and will find it hard if she has to make her own living. There are those among the farmers' wives-women can see further ahead in such matters than men-who declare that the day will come when she will have a strong, level headed husband to work for her in Hiram Perkins.

What He Needed. Employed in one of the largest iron foundries in Baltimore there is a man who has a wooden leg. None of his fellow workers, however, knew of this until recently, so perfectly did the artificial support take the place of the missing member. One day not very long ago something happened to the belting in the machine shop. Being an expert mechanic, this man was sent to repair the break. He climbed up a high ladder with as much grace and agility as could any man with two perfectly sound legs. But while busily engaged on the belting the ladder slipped from under him, and, with a crash, man and ladder landed in a heap on the floor.

The man's head struck against a piece of machinery, and he was rendered unconscious. Some one telephoned for a doctor. Before the physician arrived the injured workman regained consciousness. He did not make any attempt to get up, however, but simply lay on the floor with one of his legs doubled up under him.

Then the physician came and made a hasty examination. He pulled the bent limb from under the man, straightened it out, took one long look and, turning to those gathered round, said gravely: "This is no case for me, gentlemen.

What this man needs is not a doctor, but a carpenter!"-Baltimore News.

Trouble Ahead. "Then your husband won't give up his club?" queried the friend. "No," replied the patient young wife, and I don't propose to give up mine." "Yours? Why, I didn't know you had one."

"Neither does he, but the next time he comes home late from his I'll be on hand with mine."-Catholic Standard THE DAINTY BUTTERFLY.

THE GRAY EYED MAN.

He Is a Fighter, So Be Cautious In Provoking Him.

"I always feel a bit nervous," remarked a sergeant of police, "when I have to arrest a man with gray eyes, for I know that he is a born fighter and that I am likely to have a tough

"Most men when they are fighting retain a certain amount of discretion and remember that a brutal assault on the police is a very serious offense. But the man with the gray eyes, though he may in his calmer moments be quite aware of the folly of resistance, forgets all about that when his blood is up. He thinks of only one thing, and that is to win the fight.

"It isn't among criminals only that the gray eye denotes the fighter. I have observed the same thing among professional pugilists, an enormous proportion of whom have gray eyes.

"With soldiers and sailors it is just the same. Many of our foremost generals and admirals have eyes of this color. It is the more remarkable when we remember that the number of people who have gray eyes is small compared with other shades.

"The moral is that when you are dealing with a gray eyed man you should be cautious in provoking him." -London Answers.

Mexico's Famous Parrots. In the state of Tamaulipas, in Mexio, parrots of the much prized "double ellow head" variety, famous as conersationists, are found in countless locks. Indeed the woods are literally full of them and are vocal with their harsh cry from sunrise to sunset. They seem to have but one note. It is only in confinement that they are imitative. In this country they are worth $10 apiece. Parrots build their nests in holes and hollows of trees, and in parts of Mexico they are so numerous that every available cavity is occupied by them in the nesting season. Nevertheless the work of procuring their young is extremely arduous, even for the expert natives. Trees in the tropcs are commonly festooned with many climbing vines of thicknesses varying from a thread to the size of a ship's cable, and all this network of vegetation is usually infested by myriads of desperately fierce ants of large size, which both bite and sting. Many an unfortunate peon, it is said, has lost his life while engaged in this pursuit, because, tortured beyond endurance by the ferocious insects, he was unable to retain his grip.—Argonaut.

East Indian English

Here is part of an actual speech deivered in an East Indian court of law by a pleader: "What they say is very, if not most, ridiculously absurd to believe. Indeed, it is incredulous. They say that the blood flew, and they did nothing to put the wounded into ease. This, sir, is a lie, an unmitigated lie, or, rather, a falsehood or fable or story or, as Byron sarcastically observes, a terminal exactitude. These buffaloes never used to graze on the field, which ls not actually even proper grazing meadow. The destination which they started was half a mile from the cynosure to which they went. Unless they did not ride on lightning horses, how could they reach to that premises in five minutes? Can any man-idiot even-will not believe such a stupid oncoctation.'

deep in the contents of the big trunks, juvenile friendships made during the voyage were terminated with affectionate demonstrations when a recent ship came in. One little girl, clad from head to foot in an orgy of check, effusively kissed her farewell until she reached a little mite of a boy of five, the incarnation of Buster Brown, who turned contemptuously away from her with: "Gee! Can't you say goodby without kissing? It gives me the creeps to be mauled about by girls."-Exchange.

Gastric Juice.

There are two tides of secretion of the gastric juice—the psychic and the chemic. When food enters the stomach its impact on the gastric mucous membrane induces the chemical tide. The psychic flow of the gastric juice is controlled and brought into action by the brain centers; hence it is that things eaten with deliberation and relish, while the mouth waters, are much better disposed of by the processes of digestion than enormous quantities of more nutritious food swallowed in a mechanical manner.—New York

PURE WATER.

B. B. H., Cody, Wyo.: Is there any danger of contaminated water by digging the well in a place lower than the barn and stock lots?

Answer.-It is generally supposed that it should never be dug in a ravine or low place, especially if the spot on which the well is to be located is a few feet lower than the barn or any place from which impurities can drain into the well.

This all depends on the lower strata of the earth. It has been found that nearly all forms of bacterial or germ life exist in the upper twelve feet of the soil's surface. If moisture or water passes through the fine particles of the soil for twelve feet or more, it is perfectly sterile, no matter where the well is located. If there is a direct crevice from the yards to the well, the water will be contaminated even if the well is located on the highest hill on the farm.

The best way to prevent contamination of the water is to make the walls water tight and dig the well twelve feet deeper than necessary. Then fill in the bottom with twelve feet of sand. In this way the water will have to pass down on the outside of the walls and then filter up through the twelve feet of sand. This will insure its purity.

BULL NOSE.

E. M. T., Topeka, Kan.: I have some shoats which are coughing and sneezing, and some of them have swellings on the nose which seem to be sore. The urine is offensive to the smell. Their appetites are good, and they seem to be well in other respects.

Answer.—It is probable that the pigs are afflicted with "bull nose." The well animals should be removed from the afflicted ones and placed in a new, clean pen. When this disease is once acquired, there is no cure. It may be arrested by smoking the pigs with camphor gum. This is done by confining the animals in a tightly covered box and placing a little camphor gum on a hot stove lid. They will inhale the fumes. The trouble is no doubt infectious, and one animal will become infected from another. The cough and offensive smelling urine are perhaps due to other derangements of the system.

TOBACCO THRIPS.

P. T. F., Niles, Mich.: What are some of the more simple remedies for tobacco thrips?

Answer.-Several simple methods of overcoming the bothersome thrip may be followed with excellent success. One is to keep the ground perfectly clear of all catch crops between crops of tobacco. It has been found that the thrip will pass this period successfully on any of the common small grains and on many of the weeds. By keeping the field free from all of these its increase can be prevented. Another simple method is to keep a border of ten or fifteen feet on all sides of the field | from the womb and an enlargement of free from vegetation. This border, however, may be planted to corn with nearly as satisfactory results.

MOLD ON BUTTER. A. B. M., Elk Point, S. D.: What causes mold on butter and what may prevent it?

Answer.-Moisture, air and heat are necessary to the growth of mold. Mold is a plant growth and must have the essentials required by plants before it can make a growth. If the vessels containing the butter are perfectly dry and if the air is kept away from the butter while it is in the common cool cellar, there is no danger of mold. It has been found that the spores from which the molds grow may remain dry for a number of years and when exposed to moisture and air will come to life. This shows the necessity of keeping everything clean. Do not set the butter where there is any filth. As nearly as possible inclose it in air tight glass vessels and keep the temperature where it will remain solid.

CONTAGIOUS ABORTION.

W. K. J., Billings, Mont.: What is really meant by contagious abortion? Is there any other kind of abortion? How does abortion spread? What is the best remedy? What are some of the symptoms?

Answer.-Abortion is the premature expulsion of a fetus at a stage when it is not sufficiently developed to live if separated from its mother. ure two kinds of abortion-accidental and contagious.

Contagious abortion is caused by germ which gains access into the womb of the cow and destroys the navel string, through which circulation passes from the mother to the This may happen at any stage of pregnancy, but the greatest per cent of such cases occur from the fourth to the seventh month. These germs may be carried from one cow to another by the bull. In serving an infected cow he contracts enough germs to infect the next cow he serves. These germs remain in the womb and multiply rapidly enough to destroy the fetus. The germs may also gain access into the well animal by other means. If the well cow lies down at such a place where her external genital is brought in contact with some of the germs on the floor or ground, they will quickly enter the womb. Rubstanding so closely together that the well animal's tail touches that of an infected animal is a means of spreading the contagion.

Cows should not be bred for two or three months after an abortion. The best practice is not to breed them beef cattle. Treatment will effect a cure in some cases, but in the majority it will not. However, as soon as the dead fetus is removed it should be seen that the cow is properly cleaned and that every bit of the fallings, together with the fetus, is burned. Wash the stall in which the abortion took place and disinfect with bluestone at the rate of five ounces of the material to each gallon of water. Then dissolve one dram of corrosive sublimate in a gallon of boiled rainwater which has cooled to blood heat, and in this shake up one ounce each of alcohol and glycerin. Inject this into the tract. Each morning wash the section near the root of the tail with the same material. Repeat the injection once each week for three weeks and then breed.

As soon as the animal shows signs of aborting she should be separated from the rest of the herd and placed into small round rolls. For each two under strict quarantine. The symptoms of the trouble are a swelling of lated sugar, two teaspoonfuls of saltthe external athe udder.

IDEAL MULE.

Farmer, Jeffersonville, Ind.: What characteristics are necessary to make up the ideal mule as considered by the mule buyers at our large markets?

years the majority of buyers have favored a medium large animal, one that weighs from 1,300 to 1,400 pounds, but that is also smooth and as graceful as it is possible for a mule to be. More attention is being paid to style and carriage now than ever before. An active, graceful animal will sell for more than a lazy, slovenly looking beast, all else being equal.

The ideal mule should have a clean, graceful head set on a medium long A knotty head and a thick, short neck show stubbornness and laziness. It should also have a strong shoulder and a clean, firm leg. In length of body the animal should have what is termed a long coupling. He him are bartered for secondhand should not be short between the back of the shoulders and the front of the articles not only valueless, but actually hips. The ong coupled animal has a lung and digestive capacity which insures endurance and health. The back should be level, slanting gracefully from the hip bone to the root of the tail. The feet should be reasonably large and well shaped. A small, narrow hoof may develop a case of blemished pasterns if the animal has a great deal of heavy work to do.

When the at all, but to promptly turn them into growth drops out wash the place with castile soapsuds and apply a little vaseline.

> COLIĆ CURE.—A. N. R., Spokane, Wash.: There are a number of good remedies for colic. One is equal parts of laudanum and turpentine given in two ounce doses three times a day or more frequently if necessary. Another simple remedy is to give two tablespoonfuls of common table soda in a quart of sweetmilk. This remedy can be given every hour till relief is afforded. Still another to be used when all others fail is one ounce of sulphuric ether. two ounces of essence of peppermint and an ounce of laudanum mixed well and given in a quart of warm water as a drench. When the Greenlander of the east coast goes a-shopping, it is no light matter of a day or a week. He keeps on walking, summer and winter, for it Answer.-For the past three or four takes him anywhere from one to two full years to reach a settlement where there are shops. Whole colonies sometimes join in these pilgrimages from their northern dwelling places, camping by the way as weather and inclination permit. One might suppose that such protracted journeys would be followed by long stays at the place of business. Not so. The Eskimo spends little more time over the shopping for which he has come so far than does a woman bargain hunter at the periodical drapery sales with us. Sometimes two hours finish the transactions, and the purchaser will start on his long return journey northward. The fine bear and fox skins which he has brought with clothes, tobacco, old iron and many injurious to the buyer. DO YOUR LEVEL BEST.

Put the Right Spirit Into Your Work and Keep Your Ideals High.

Put the right spirit into your work. Treat your calling as divine, as a call from principle. If the thing itself be not important, the spirit in which you take hold of it makes all the difference In the world to you. It can make or mar the man. You cannot afford grumbling service or botched work in your life's record. You cannot afford to form a habit of half doing things or of doing them in the spirit of a drudge, for this will drag its slimy trail through all your subsequent career, always humiliating you at the most unexpected times. Let other people do the poor jobs, the botched work, if they will. Keep your standards up, your ideals high.

The attitude with which a man approaches his task has everything to do with the quality and efficiency of his work and with its influence upon his character. What a man does is a part of himself. It is the self expression of what he stands for. Our life work is an outpicturing of our ambition, our ideals, our real selves. If you see a man's work, you see the man.

No one can respect himself or have that sublime faith in himself which is essential to all high achievements when he puts mean, half hearted, slipshod service into what he does. He cannot get his highest self approval until he does his level best.-Success.

A GIRL'S HEELS

Her Shoes Said to Be an Index to Her Character.

"If you want to know whether a girl is slovenly or not look at her heels," said the wise woman to the young man who was contemplating matrimony. "Her gown may be prety, her hat becoming, her neckwear trim and neat and her gloves well fitting, but if her heels are run over look out for her. Her trimness in other respects simply denotes that she is neat spasmodically, that she will make an effort to keep things tidied and in order only when she is urged to or beeause she has some special provocaion. But by nature she is slack. The nan that marries a girl with perpetually run over heels will find her comng to the breakfast table as soon as the honeymoon is over in a tumbled cimono and with her hair in curl papers. She never will be a good house-

"On the other hand, I've seen girls who maybe did not have such a trim appearance, whose hair was apt to be little flying, but whose heels rested irmly on the ground, and never did discover they were in the slovenly Maybe they were not careful enough of outward appearances, but hey kept their buttons sewed on, rips repaired, spots sponged off and their cooms in immaculate order." — Exhange.

Envy.

"I wish I were strong and healthy and magnificent as that man over here," sighed the delicate, thin man, but, then, it isn't worth while to envy people, to envy anybody, in this old world. I had a friend once who was aller than he and finer and more magnificent, a man of splendid physique. You'd think, to look at him, that he would have lived forever, but he is lead now. Died of some slight trouble of indigestion that a delicate man might have lived through, and this is all I have left to remind me of him, ring with this handsome intaglio. It is almost priceless to me and, in fact, almost priceless of itself. Intaglios are very rare these days. This is exceedingly rare. Some time I will send you a letter and seal it with the ring, so you can have the intaglio also to remind you that it isn't worth while to envy anybody in this old world."-New York Press.

Bismarck as a Drinker.

When Bismarck was in London in 1843 he was invited to visit the famous brewery of Barclay & Perkins, and his hosts, having heard of his reputation as a beer drinker of great prowess, presented to him an enormous tankard of old ale, in the confident expectation that he would be obliged to admit himself vanquished by it. "I seized the tankard," Bismarck told Sir Charles Dilke, who recounted the story, "and I thought of my country and drank to Prussia and tilted it till it was empty. Then I thanked my entertainers courteously, I hope and succeeded in making my way as far as London bridge. There I sat down in one of the stone recesses, and for hours the great bridge went round and round me."

The Great American Boss.

The average American is blase almost before the English girl is ready to leave her school, says a writer. The English girl never leaves her governess and home before she is eighteen, while at the same age the American girl has seen much of the world. Yet the American girl retains her vivacity and her interest in everything, and it is that one quality, I think, above all others that wins for her the admiration of the Englishwoman. The American woman never looks to her husband as master, while the Englishwoman is taught to do so from her birth.-Tit-

What This Mark Means

When a manufacturer is ashamed of his product he puts no trade-mark on it-or perhaps a special trademark for a dealer foolish enough to buy "seconds." When he is proud of his product, he puts his trademark on the goods.

The genuine ATKINS SAWS bear the Atkins mark of pride, and it represents more than fifty years of growth of experience, of "know-how." It represents a reputation that has been earned by conscientious effort through half a century to make the best saws the world has known.

Watch Your Watch

Look inside your watch a moment. The balance wheel is making 18,000 vibrations an hour if its in good condition. If the movement is sluggish, there is something wrong. It will move 3,558 miles in a year and it requires less than one-tenth of a drop of oil to make it run. But it needs that little badly. The least increase of friction on the bearings alters the motion. Don't take chances. Let me clean and oil and put your watch in order for a year. It will pay you 'and' make you like your watch better.

For Thin, ${\it Poor Blood}$

You can trust a medicine tested 60 years! Sixty years of experience, think of that! Experience with Ayer's Sarsaparilla; the original Sarsaparilla; the strongest Sarsaparilla; the Sarsaparilla the doctors endorse for thin blood, weak nerves, general debility. But even this grand old medicine cannot do its best work if the liver is inactive and the bowels constipated. For the best possible results, you should take laxative doses of Ayer's Pills while taking the Sarsaparilla. The liver will quickly respond, and so will the bowels.

Nervous Indigestion

The action of digestion is controlled by nerves leading to the stomach. When they are weak, the stomach is deprived of its energy. It has no power to do its work. If you want permanent relief, you must restore this energy. Dr. Miles' Nervine restores nervous energy, and gives the organs power to perform their functions.

"For many years I was an acute sufferer from nervous indigestion; at times I was so despondent life seemed almost a burden. I tried all kinds of remedies and various physicians with little or no relief, until one night last summer I saw Dr. Miles' Nervine and Heart Cure advertised. I resolved to make one more trial which I did in the purchase of one bottle of Nervine and one of Heart Cure. In a few days I began to feel better, which encouraged me so much that I continued the medicine until I had taken more than a dozen bottles. I am very much improved in every way; in body, mind and spirits since. I make a spepoint to recommend the medicine, and I feel a sincere pleasure in knowing that several persons have been benefited through my recommendations."

"Jealousy eats into happiness as acid destroys linen," declared Katherine sententiously.

"Despite which epigram you will marry Kenneth Hadley," scoffed her friend. The two girls had paused at the corner of the street, where Katherine intended taking a car. It was not in sight, so she turned to finish the

"Why not?" she asked. "I am not the woman to give ground for jealousy, while Kenneth, on his part, knows I would never forgive unjust suspicion, which is what jealousy amounts to. Real love insures perfect trust and faith."

"With some natures, possibly. But Kenneth Hadley could no more help being jealous where he loves than he could stop breathing and live," retorted Mildred. "Why, at the Meresdale euchre party every one but you could see"-

We come into the world alone, depart alone. So must there always be silent places in our lives to which even the nearest can have no key."

Her friend, unconvinced, started to say goodby, but returned impulsively

"Theoretically, Katherine, there is truth in your argument. Jealousy is no temptation to you. Should you meet Kenneth walking with a girl I doubt if it would occur to you to even ask her name. Your error is making secrets of nothing"-

The other's eye flashed resentfully. "You say that because I would not tell you where I am going now.'r "Nonsense! It's none of my affair. But suppose you had met Mr. Hadley

"What luck brings you to this part of town?" he inquired

"Business," was the light response. "Which, in woman's vocabulary, means pleasure." A quick look showed he was conscious of the evasion, though he did not press the point. "Wish I could return with you, but an appointment forbids. How dusty it is! Give me your handkerchief, Kathe. There's a rude black smudge dangerously near your eye." Katherine laughed and, feeling for her handkerchief without success, remarked that she must have dropped it somewhere, adding, "Use yours." At his compliance she thanked him, nodded goodby and was gone. She was seated at the piano drawing soft melody from its keys in the mellow light of the shaded lamp when Hadley arrived. He watched her for some moments before she discovered his presence. Then she swung round gayly on the stool, with extended hands.

"Come and kiss me, which ceremony you omitted when we last met." As he crossed toward her something

In his expression made the girl draw back from the invited caress. "What is the matter?" she asked. "I've brought back your property,"

He tossed a crumpled bit of linen into her lap. A large K embroidered showed conspicuously in one corner. "My handkerchief! Thanks! Where did you find it?" "You ask that? Tell me rather what takes my promised wife to visit Charles Truax."

"I answer no question put in such a tone."

"It is my right to know." The man's es took angry measure of her resistance. "I put the same question this afternoon, and you evaded it. I thought when you insisted on your rights and privileges that your little secrets were no concern of mine. What do I find: That you have been closeted in the private office of a married man, an old flame of yours. Truax refused an explanation. What have you to say? A woman of leisure, you cannot plead business in a factory as an excuse."

"Argument is useless, Kenneth"-Katherine's voice was as cold as her look-"quite useless. If I told you this, there would be something else tomorrow. I am not the woman for you. You are not the man for me." "Did you love me as I"- began the man passionately.

"It's not a question of love," return ed the girl. "I'm not going to allow you to spoil my life with your unbearable doubts, nor will I sacrifice my individuality on the altar of your jealousy. We have gone through this before, and you beat down my reason by appealing to my affection. Now I choose to be free, to put you out of my life once and for all."

In the days following Hadley strove to reopen the question, but Katherine would neither answer his appeals in writing nor grant him an interview, so at last silence fell between them. Then the girl tried to take up her life where it had been broken into by the coming of Kenneth, tried to rejoice in her recovered freedom, but as the weeks passed they grew heavier, dragging at her heart like the ball and chain on the convict's foot. She suffered in a manner that she could neither understand nor have believed possible and grew resentful at the persistent aching and craving that possessed her.

By night she tossed restlessly, insomnia her jailor, half choked with a grief to which she would give no outet. She had resented Kenneth's masterful claim on her and on her pur-Why, then, when this supervision was lifted was she not content? Love she believed subservient to individuality. When one or other must be sacrificed she had had no hesitation in her choice. She had made a fetich of ego, to find in the end love had so undermined it that she was no longer an entity, sufficient to herself. Then succeeded days when, half desperate in her unhappiness, she nearly capitulated; hours when it seemed as though an irresistible force impelled her to Kenneth, but always pride rose forbidding, and she made no sign.

"Kenneth sails Saturday," Mildred told her at last, risking a quarrel, having been forbidden to mention the "There being nothing to keep name. him here now," she continued comfortably, "he may never return." She watched with satisfaction the result of this stab. "I've often wondered," she persisted, "that you never regretted the break, but it's too late now, so it's better as it is."

Katherine made no response, but that night she wept for the first time. and long bitter sobs washed away every feeling but the love that gave them birth. She realized now that over her love for Kenneth his faults had no control. Human nature is so frail that it must love and cling where it can in spite of weakness.

Early Saturday, when Hadley was er or later. about to board an outbound vessel, a light, caught at his sleeve. He turned at the touch.

"Katherine!" No thickness of veil could disguise her in his eyes. There they stood, silent, incapable of speech, staring at each other. The man recovered first and drew her toward the end of the dock, where great packing cases afforded some seclusion.

"As much as you wish. I-I've missed you so-your faults-my faults. Recognized. what do they matter, Kenneth. I'm wretched without you-I"-

Then Hadley understood. Only at the last moment had he sufficient presence of mind to get his trunk pulled off the steamer before she slipped her moorings.

Kashgaria.

There are few places in the world so difficult to get at as Kashgaria. Though it lies in Chinese territory, the journey from Peking occupies no less than six months. From India caravans take two months, having to cross meanwhile the three highest mountain ranges in the world by way of several passes measuring 18,000 feet above sea

Then from the tail end of the Russian railway system in central Asia one may reach Kashgaria in three weeks by several routes, all involving the transit of difficult and storm swept Kashgaria is said to cover an area of 350,000 square miles—a statement that has little interest until considered in relation to the proportion which is cultivated by man. It is startling to realize that human endeavor has been capable of rendering fertile little more than a hundredth part and that ninety-nine hundredths of it is irredeemable desert.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Why He Waited.

The following story is told of the bishop of Sodor and Man's visit to Melton Mowbray some time ago, says the Philadelphia Inquirer: A brougham awaited him at the station, and he stepped into it, expecting to be taken at once to his destination. To his surprise, however, the coachman sat motionless on the box without the least intention, apparently, of leaving the station. At last the bishop inquired why he was waiting.

"Well, sir," said the coachman, "I was told to wait for the Bishop of Sodor and Man. You've arrived, sir, Once there was an Estimable Lady named Mrs. Killjoy who used to hunt for Trouble with a Search-Warrant. She was not happy unless she was being Insulted. Before any one chirphave Bricks thrown at her Character. Mrs. Killjoy held to the obsolete Theory that Man was put into this Mundane Trouble Factory to protect weak and defenceless Woman from all Slurs Slights, and Insults. That is why she picked out for her True Knight an undeveloped Specimen, about the size of a Philadelphia Squab, with four-incb Biceps. His steady Assignment was to fight her Battles. Mrs. Killjoy was one of those Sensitive Plants who could not get into a Trolley without having some one rudely Stare at her. She always suspected that the He-Salesmen in the POISONED GLOVES.

They Had Their Home In Italy With the Borgias and Medicis.

Perfumed gloves have contributed argely to the bright and cruel side of romance, of fact and of fiction. They had their home in Italy, the home of the Borgias and De' Medicis, and it is said, with how much truth will never be known, that many an untimely death was caused by wearing perfumed gloves whose scented palms concealed a deadly poison. It seems to have been a favorite pastime of the notorious Alexander VI. and of his more notorious son, Caesar Borgia, to invite a friend to dine, show him every attention as a guest, present him with a beautiful pair of perfumed and poisoned gloves and next day send flowers to his funeral, accompanied by a little note, polite, but firm, requesting the immediate transference of all the proprty of the deceased to the coffers of he Borgias.

There is an interesting and very ugly story of a famous poisoner of the fifteenth century who confessed under the water cure to having murdered for a consideration about fifteen people by means of poisoned gloves. The poison she employed was so slow in taking effect that for years she remained undiscovered and finally came to grief through her own foolish boasting .-Kansas City Star.

THE GREAT RACHEL.

Fondness of the Famous Actress For Scarfpins.

A rather comical story relating to the great Rachel and at one time her deoted admirer, Prince Demidoff, runs this way:

It seems that upon the occasion of the prince's visits to the charming actress she would often greet him in playful mood and while criticising his attire, which was the special object of his thought, would draw from his necktie the pin which secured it, a cameo, topaz, ruby or whatever i might chance to be, and place it in her pincushion or upon her corsage.

This habit greatly amused the prince, it seemed so childish and such a mischievous act, and it really added to her charm in his eyes. One day, however, he called wearing a sort of stock and consequently had no jewel. The observant maid noticed that there was no pin in the tie of Demidoff, and when she announced him to his mistress mentioned the fact. "It is the prince, but he wears a stock."

"Then say I am out," replied Rachel. Finding himself refused an inter view, the prince set about learning the real reason. It mightily amused him, and thereafter he never appeared without the bauble that had always proved the sesame to the great actress' presence.-Minneapolis Journal.

The Poet Shelley.

Shelley lived with ardor among ideas, aspirations and passions in which there was something at once irresponsible and abstract. He followed every impulse, without choice or restraint, with the abandonment of a leaf in the wind. "Oh, lift me as a wave, a leaf, a cloud!" was his prayer to the west wind and to every influence. Circumstances meant so little to him that he was unconscious of the cruelty of change to sentiment, and thus of the extent of his cruelty to women. He aimed at moral perfection, but was really of a perfect aesthetic selfishness. He was full of pity and generosity and desired the liberation and uplifting of humanity, but humanity was less real to him than his own witch of Atlas. He only touch ed human action and passion closely in a single one of his works, and he said of "The Cenci:" "I don't think much of it. My object was to see how I could succeed in describing passions I have never felt."—Arthur Symons in Atlantic.

A Superman's Pain. Among the acutest of the small miseries of my existence has been that of seeing a man or more frequently a woman take up and lay down in the midst of a running fire of desultory conversation in the trains, on the steamers, in the halls of hotels or on the seashore a story on which I might have spent all my strength and have written, as I supposed, with my heart's blood.—Hall Caine in Book Monthly.

The Attraction. Mr. Gotsum-Maria, how long has that young Smoothley been coming here to see Nellie?

Mrs. Gotsum-Let me see. You remember when the papers published that story about your having sold a gold mine for half a million?

"Well, as nearly as I recall it, that's the time when he began coming."

Agreeing With Beamish.

By LULU JOHNSON.

Copyrighted, 1907, by Jessie Morgan.

"It looks like a graveyard," said Au-Frey, with a little shiver, as she stared into the body of the theater.

On the stage the open fire skylights flooded the bare space with light and created a grateful draft, but the body of the house was swathed in white thin cloths over the rows of the rounded backs of seats, suggesting an orderly row of tombstones. In the broad foyer back of the balcony one of Manager Beamish's "No. 2" companies went through its rehearsal, while still another touring organization occupied the side lobby downstairs, but it was the Avenue stock company, the pride of Beamish's attractions, that occupied the stage. Audrey Harwood smiled at the thought that this season she was rehearsing with the crack company on the stage instead of one of the less important companies in the lobby.

The year before she had labored through a small part with a road company, and it had not been until the ast of the season that Basil, the general stage manager for Beamish, had noticed her work on one of his trips of inspection and had promoted her to the metropolitan company.

"It's been the graveyard of many a blasted hope," retorted Maida Terry, the leading lady, with a laugh, "and Beamish is the ghoul that goes prowling around the place seeking whom he may devour. There he comes now,' she added as the burly form of the manager was discerned descending the staircase leading from the balcony, where he had been watching the rehearsal of the minor company. Now he settled his huge bulk in a seat at the rear of the house, his pudgy hands clasped across his fat stomach, while he viciously chewed the end of an unlit cigar. Beamish was an inveterate smoker, but he ived in dread of a fire that might put his house out of business for a time, and he never smoked in the theater. ven in his own office.

His presence made itself felt to Howard Basil, though the latter stood with his back to the auditorium. Some of the actors played better with the maniger's eyes upon them, others grew nervous and confused, and Audrey, coming under Beamish's notice for the irst time, failed utterly in her scene. As her voice faltered and broke there came a gruff shout from the rear of the house, and the company eyed the girl commiseratingly, while Basil dropped the rehearsal to answer Beamish's

"Get another girl for that part of Mona," was the terse command. "That stick you've got there is rotten."

"She will play all right," was the re "She rehearses badly, and ponse. then she is nervous because you are out here."

"I want another girl," was Beam-ish's emphatic answer. "It's only a bit that she plays, but it comes in Terry's big scene, and we can't have that spoiled. Get rid of her."

"If I thought that she would spoil it, I should not have engaged her,' answered Basil quietly. "The girl will remain in the cast."

"Give the part to Ashton," ordered Beamish. "Let this girl out tomor row."

"I have full control of the companies," said Basil, whose face had grown very white. "Miss Ashton can play the part at a pinch. Miss Harwood can live the part. If she goes,

"I've got you under contract," sputtered Beamish.

"I just mentioned the important clause of that contract," retorted Basil. "You will break it by your own action."

The younger man stood quietly for a moment, while Beamish chewed his cigar viciously. Basil was a man Moreover, he had hard to replace. seen the English production of the piece and had read the play with the author. It would never do to let him go on the eve of a production. Beamish rose heavily to his feet.

"I don't suppose that you will object to Ashton understudying?" he asked gruffly. "Not in the least," said Basil. "I'll send for her this afternoon."

He returned to the stage. Those better versed in the Beamish methods had guessed that the stage manager had been fighting for Audrey and had told the girl so. She flashed him a grateful glance, but he merely took his place by the table and ordered the rehearsal of the scene over again. It was not until after the company had been dismissed that Audrey had a chance to speak to him.

"How can I ever thank you?" she said gratefully. Basil looked down into the wistful face. "By doing as well as you possibly can," he said. "I want you to justify my judgment, and I am certain that you can. There will be an understudy here tomorrow, but don't worry. If Beamish wants to pay any extra salary, let him. It is seldom that he indulges in that luxury."

He turned away to hide the real answer to her question. The temptation was strong upon him to take her in his arms and tell her that he loved her and it was because of his love that he had fought. To do so would seem to be presuming upon his action. Mentally he cursed Beamish for raising this barrier against his hopes.

Miss Ashton appeared the following morning, sitting in one of the front seats and studying the business care- George."-London Standard.

fully, but Audrey played without a break, and at the dress rehearsal even Beamish was pleased to grunt a grudging assent to Basil's praise.

Then came the opening night. The house was crowded, for it was an early opening of the season, and the other theaters were still dark. Beamish gleamed upon the crowd of notables streaming into the house. He knew that he had one of the strongest plays of the hour. To score a hit would mean perhaps an all season run at the home theater and a tremendous advertisement for the road companies. But his hopes were dashed when Basil came out front with a worried look upon his face. "Terry was thrown out of her automobile on her way to the theater," he reported. "The physician thinks she has fractured her skull." "And we've got to lose all this?" asked Beamish, with a wave of his cigar. The accident to his leading woman appealed only to his own selfishness and cupidity. "Miss Harwood is dressing for the part," explained Basil. "She can play it, I am certain. It would never do to turn the crowd away. We could never get them back on a later night." Beamish nodded a grudging assent. He knew that Basil had stated the situation properly. To get another woman or wait for Miss Terry to recover would upset the play and give it a blow from which it could never re-carry the girl through." Basil hurried behind the scenes to make the announcement, and Beamish lumbered in to lean over the rear rail of the orchestra floor. At the end of the first act he went back on the

"Going great," he said shortly. Then he turned upon his heel and walked back to his place of observation.

In the second act Audrey had her big scene, and, forgetful of self, she threw herself into the part. She could not act well at rehearsal, but now the lights and the crowd acted as a stimulus. Nerved by the further desire to justify Basil's confidence, she surpassed herself. At the end of the act the house rang with cheers, and her success was assured.

After the last curtain the crowds in the restaurants were discussing her wonderful work, but she still lingered in the dressing room. The other players had gone, and only the cluster of electric lights in the center of the stage illuminated the place, emphasizing the dark shadows thrown by the stacked scenery.

Beamish and Basil were talking as she came down the dressing room corridor, and they did not hear her soft footfalls as she approached. "I suppose you'll marry her, you're so stuck on her," grumbled the man-"Your objection to her work sealed my lips," said Basil coldly. "I could not seem to demand her love as the price of her being retained in the com-"Bosh!" said Beamish, with an uneasy laugh. "You're a fool not to grab ner up before some one else does." "I don't agree with you," said Basil grimly. Audrey stepped into the circle

"I do," she said quietly. "Howard, nay I ask your escort to my hotel?" Beamish in his excitement forgot himself and lit his cigar as the two passed out. For once a member of his company had agreed with him.

A Pretty Bit of Courtesy.

At one of the public receptions given at the White House during the Cleveland administration an old lady who was drawn up in the line that was pushing its way forward to shake hands with the president's wife dropped her handkerchief just before getting to Mrs. Cleveland. She was too old and rheumatic to stoop down and recover it, and those back of her in the line were too intent upon getting the one fleeting glimpse possible of the mistress of the White House to notice the old lady's loss, and the handkerchief was trampled upon roughly.

Just before the old lady reached her Mrs. Cleveland stepped out of her place and deftly picked up the handkerchief, tucked it in her dress and, taking her own fresh one, which was of the most delicate, dainty lace, smilingly handed it to the old lady with the sweet remark, "Please take mine, and when you get home send it back to me, will you?" And when the handkerchief came back to her Mrs. Cleveland returned that of the owner, freshly laundered. lying on the top of a beautiful box of rosebuds that came from the White House conservatory.

STORE NEWS FROM WILSEY @ CATHCART'S

The fall months are here, suggestive of weather that is cooler. Why not be fortified against it? Have you thought about it? If not, let's remind you that while you have been busy so have we selecting what we thought was the cream of goods that you might benefit by it later in the season. What about a warm Coat first for the children for they are ever first in the parents' mind. A nice long coat, nicely braided and trimmed. In blues, browns, greys and reds, and at the very modest price of $2.00.

Now if that don't suit you here's something heavier in Frieze or Beaver or Tweed effects, nice large sleeves, plenty of trimmings and all that go to make the young heart glad, and not so very much more either, $4.00, $4.50, $5.00, $5.50, $6.00. If you are still looking for something better, smooth as they make them, just look at the Kerseys, Tweeds and Plushes. You'll wish you had seen them first. Priced from $8.00, $10.00, Enough about the children, they can't have all. How about the self-denying mother? Nothing too good for her if it cost $100. But we can't all have $100 coats this year. Beans are too poor, but you will be surprised how good we could make her look to you all for a very little money. First, we could fit her out with a well made and trimmed Coat; our idea of a cheap coat—one that has the guaranteed wearing qualities and color keeping, something that with a month's wear will not be hanging down at the corners, something we will stand behind and priced at $8.00. Maybe you would not mind a few dollars more, heavier and finer material, a little more trimming, satin lined, and just worth every dollar in it and priced from $11.00 to $15.00.

* Do not forget that we are showing the finest line of Short Coats in Astrachan, Carcucal and Broadtail, finest of imported material. Just the thing for nice Dress Coats and priced from $10.00 to $35.00.

BLANKETS

Maybe you have your winter coal bought and in; then you should be looking for your Blanket supply. Cold weather comes quickly. We have some snappy goods in this line, We are giving you fair warning. The White Robin's Return. Editor Chronicle:

The white robin is an albino and to us a real curiosity. In the early part of the season we had it as a frequent visitor, then for a long time we saw nothing of it-feared something had befallen it. The other day, to our surprise, it reappeared, whiter and glossier in plumage than earlier in the season. In behalf of the dear bird upon which we look as an old friend we evoked the muse in a new strain thus:

Absent so long
Bird of our song,
Bird of our song,
The loss of white robin we had to deplore;
Daily at first
The vision would burst,
Fair in its flitting,
Restful in sitting,
Chirping its greeting,
Then it was gone and we feared evermore.

Sudden and wise To our surprise
There on our wood-pile 'tis perched as of yore;

Plumage so white,
White in despite
Days of its matching,
Brooding and hatching,
Nest-care and watching—
Plumed as contented its season's work o'er!

Now, 'tis the word
Heard from this bird
As we interpret its action and lore;
'Soon and for long
Flight is my song;
South lands are fitter,
North winds are bitter,
Birds with a twitter
Speeding must flee until winter is o'er,"

Dear bird again
Shall thy refrain
Gladden once more when the winter is o'er?
Comes with the spring
Flash of white wing
Telling us surely
Guarded securely Instincts are purely
Part of that providence all should adore?

This, or more stern
Shall we discern
Flight meaneth safety with life's summer o'er?
Other white wings—
Other glad springs—

Are they to meet us—
Wistfully greet us
Wrap and complete us,
Till their full meaning our lost shall restore? JAMES MACARTHUR.
