

A Well-Dressed Man

Is always a Pleasant Sight and Generally Gets the "Second Look."

Clothes do not make the man, but they are a pretty good indication of his worth, for they reflect his respect for himself and the men he associates with.

No man can over-rate the value of being well dressed. Correctness in one's attire marks the man of thought, and many a man owes his success to his appearance.

MANY AUCTION SALES.

Five Will Be Held in This Vicinity Next Week.

The auction sale season is now at hand and there promises to be plenty of sales this year. J. H. Striffler and A. A. McKenzie, Cass City's popular auctioneers, have five booked for next week.

The first will be held at the farm of Agar Bros., four miles east and two and one-fourth miles south of Cass City, on Monday, Oct. 7. A. A. McKenzie will officiate as auctioneer. Agar Bros. have purchased a feed barn at Capac and expect to leave the farm in a few weeks to take possession of their newly acquired property.

John Morrison has a big auction at his farm, one mile west and one-fourth mile south of Greenleaf, on Tuesday, Oct. 8. Mr. Morrison has rented his farm and expects to go to California in a few weeks where he intends to live for at least a year. J. H. Striffler is the auctioneer and the property will be sold without reserve.

On Wednesday, Oct. 9, T. W. Stitt, administrator of the Jennie M. Duncanson estate, will hold an administrator's sale on the Collins farm, one mile west and one and one-fourth miles north of Shabbona. J. H. Striffler is the auctioneer.

Robt. Wm. Atfield has rented his farm, one and one-half miles west and 80 rods south of Shabbona, and is advertising an auction sale on Thursday, Oct. 10. J. H. Striffler, auctioneer, and W. F. Ehlers, clerk.

McCracken Bros., one mile east and one-half mile south of Deford, who are going West, will have a sale Oct. 11. A. A. McKenzie, auctioneer.

DANGEROUS BUSINESS.

Fruit Stealers Can be Severely Punished for the Offense.

A great many boys and children, and many people much older, regard the entering of a garden or orchard and helping themselves to whatever may suit their fancy as a piece of mischievousness, not really regarded as criminal.

On page 3463 of the third volume of the compiled laws of this state, section 11645 says:

"Any person who shall enter a vineyard, orchard or garden during the months of July, August, September or October without the consent of the owner, and pick, take, carry away, destroy or injure any of the fruits, vegetables, or crops therein, or in any-wise injure or destroy any brush, tree, vine or plant, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not more than ninety days, or by a fine not less than five nor more than one hundred dollars, or by both such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court."

It will be seen that even the taking of an apple, peach, or melon makes the offender liable to a fine of $100 and ninety days imprisonment in jail. Just a few examples of this kind would have a wholesome effect and put a stop to much petty thieving.

O'DELL-FRITZ.

The spacious home of Mrs. I. Fritz on Cross street was the scene of a very pretty wedding Wednesday afternoon, Sept. 18, when her daughter, Miss Cecl E. Fritz, was married to Kenneth C. O'Dell of Detroit. Rev. Dr. Eugene Allen performing the ring ceremony in the presence of fifty guests. The bride, who was charming in a dainty gown of white French lawn and Valenciennes lace and bore a bouquet of Bride roses, was attended by her sister, Miss Lucy Fritz, as maid of honor, the best man being Carson O'Dell of Kinde, brother of the groom. The maid was gowned in pink silk mull and carried pink roses. Little Miss Naomi Fritz bore the ring in the heart of a rose, and the Mendelssohn wedding march was played by Earl Holms. After the ceremony, a three-course luncheon was served, Mrs. Roadman catering. Four little maids, served the refreshments, Misses Katie and Helen Cain, Ruth Coquillard and Katie Meyers.

The house was beautifully decorated, green and white prevailing in the parlor and green and red in the dining room, asters, salvia and ferns being lavishly used. The ceremony took place before a fern bank under a canopy of interlaced white ribbon. The sitting room was bright with golden rod.

The bride is a graduate of the Normal College and was last year a popular teacher in the city schools. She has many friends, and her wedding gifts were beautiful and valuable. Mr. O'Dell is a druggist in Detroit, after a wedding trip to Port Austin and Kinde, they will be at home after Oct. 1 at 532 Brush street.

Among the guests from out of town were Messrs. and Mesdames James O'Dell, St. Thomas, Ont., T. H. O'Dell, Kinde; George Mitchell and George Lang, Bayham, Ont.; L. H. Hall, Port Austin; J. E. Thatcher, Detroit; Dr. and Mrs. I. A. Fritz and John Fisher, Cass City; Mrs. Dr. Black and daughter, Beatrice, Misses Edna Graham, Vera Thatcher, and May Landon, Detroit; Mrs. Fred L. Smith, Traverse City; Dr. Perry L. Fritz, Pigeon; Grant Fritz, Jackson; and Ed Woods, Kinde; Mrs. J. Baxter, Richmond, Ont.; Mrs. Manning, London, Ont.; Messrs. and Mesdames Welch, Cass City; Mark Gregory, Detroit; G. O'Dell, Windsor, Ont.—The Ypsilantian.

PLEADS GUILTY.

C. L. Messer Gives Up His Fight and Admits Guilt Before the Judge.

The beginning of the end of the Messer case took place at Sandusky Wednesday night, when C. L. Messer plead guilty of embezzlement and threw himself on the mercy of the court. This case is one that has attracted a great deal of interest. It grew out of the defalcation of Messer while cashier of the Marlette State bank and the trial took the attention of the court some three weeks, with a verdict of guilty. Appeal was taken to the supreme court, which body reversed the verdict on a technicality, holding however, that the main points of the appeal were without foundation. This left the case in a very discouraging condition for the defendant and he evidently came to the conclusion that there was no further hope for him. The judge received his plea and deferred pronouncing of sentence until the court reconvenes Oct. 14, Messer being under bail till that time with the same bondsmen as heretofore.

It now remains to be seen as to whether Mr. Messer will be punished or not, some doubt of which has been expressed on all hands from the first. The decision is in the hands of Judge Beach in whom all have the greatest faith.—Marlette Leader.

SHOT DOWN IN ROAD.

C. W. Chadwick, a brother of Mrs. Elmer Bruce of Deford, was found dead in the road a few miles from his home at Atlanta, Mich., Thursday morning, with a bullet in his back. Chadwick had been dead several hours when found and there is no tangible clue. He had been working in Rose City, and while on his way home to Atlanta to visit his wife and children it is supposed that he was murdered, but the motive for the crime is not known.

Elmer Chadwick, a brother, from Alpena has been at Atlanta assisting the sheriff and coroner in their investigations. Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Bruce of Deford are also at that place.

CONTRACT LET.

The board of education of Brown City public schools at a meeting held on Tuesday, let the contract for building the new $5,000 addition to the public school building to Keating & Glover, contractors and builders of Cass City. The contract price is $4,330 with sureties in the sum of $2000 for the faithful performance of the work. The contract specifies that the building is to be completed and the keys delivered to the school board June 1, 1908.

Gentlemen Keating and Glover of Cass City were here Monday and Tuesday and after taking the contract, at once arranged with several teamsters here to break ground and they promise to begin work at once. They are fine gentlemen to meet, are business like in their manner and methods and will without doubt do a first class job.—Brown City Banner.

SURPRISED TOM.

Thos. Colwell was pleasantly surprised at his home three miles north-east of town last Saturday evening, on his return home from Cass City, to find that a few of his friends and neighbors had gathered there to remind him that it was his birthday. About nine o'clock another jolly troupe walked in which made the crowd number about twenty-five. When the crowd started from their homes, they started out to have a good time and they were not disappointed. The evening was spent in games and social chat. Mr. Colwell was presented with two rocking chairs and the ladies also remembered Mrs. Colwell with an elegant hand painted water set. Their daughter Edna's birthday being but a few days before she was presented with quite a number of presents.

About 11:30 an elaborate luncheon was served consisting of coffee, sandwiches, pickles and cakes galore, among them being a three-story birthday cake which their daughter, Mrs. Claude Shaw had made and brought with her about sixteen miles. The happy crowd began to separate and went their way homeward in the wee sma' hours, each one having felt they had enjoyed themselves immensely.

CLOTHES AND THE MAN.

Dante's Rebuke to the King With Whom He Dined.

That clothes made the man was as much a trite truth in Dante's day as now, according to an old story told by Sercambi. Dante was invited by a king to dine with him, along with a few other chosen friends, but he came attired quite shabbily, was given a place below the salt and was overlooked and apparently forgotten until the feast was over, when the king, having recollected himself, asked:

"By the bye, what has become of the poet I had intended to talk to?"

Dante, offended and hurt by the slight, had taken his departure, but returned when followed and invited anew. This time he came to supper superbly dressed in crimson velvet and gold and was served with extreme attention, but the courtiers observed with amazement that he poured the soup down his sleeves, tucked cutlets into his breast and smeared his rich attire with sauces.

"Good gracious, your majesty," observed the boldest of the supping nobles, "why has this poet such manners?"

The question was passed on to Dante, who gravely replied: "When I came here dressed shabbily and sat quietly in my corner, I was forgotten and snubbed. I now come in fine clothes and am very much attended to. I therefore concluded that it was rather my clothes than myself that you admired and invited and was willing to bestow on them a just share of your hospitality."—St. Louis Republic.

Beauty.

Beauty is not an accident of things. It pertains to their essence; it pervades the wide range of creation, and wherever it is impaired or banished we have in this fact the proof of the moral disorder which distrusts the world. Reject, therefore, the false philosophy of those who will ask what does it matter, provided a thing be useful, whether it be beautiful or not.—Gladstone.

FAIRLY WARNED.

The Little Sister's Advice to the Prospective Bride.

It was big sister's wedding day, and mother was in the kitchen helping the cook. Little sister was there, too, and added frayed nerves to the excitement by demanding to know every other minute what a marriage was.

Finally mother became exasperated. "If you speak again," she said, "I'll show you what a marriage is," and little sister sat down very meekly.

But little sister had caught the excitement and could not keep quiet. Just as mother and the cook were busiest she asked her question again. For a full minute the kitchen resounded with wails, and then mother placed little sister on the chair again.

"Now," she said, "you know what marriage is."

That night the clergyman stood under the marriage bell in the parlor. Into the room came big sister on the arm of her father. Halfway up the stairs little sister watched her through the door and cried softly. Finally she could stand it no longer.

Just as the ceremony was about to begin a form came flying down the stairs and little sister burst into the room.

"Oh, Milly, Milly," she cried convulsively, "don't you get married or you'll get an awful spanking."—New York Press.

Wanted a Square Deal.

There was once a sporting parson at Eastington, a place on the English coast which was a favorite landing place for woodcocks at the time of their immigration to England. When the birds arrived, exhausted by their long flight, everybody in the parish, including the parson, at once turned out to join in the sport of knocking them down with sticks. One Sunday the people were in church and the parson in the pulpit when the church door was cautiously opened and a head appeared, with a beckoning finger. "Well, what is it?" asked the parson. "Cocks is coom!" The parson hurriedly shut up his sermon case. "Shut the door and lock it!" he cried to the clerk. "Keep the people in church till I've got my surplice off. Let's all have a fair chance."

Good Reason to Hurry.

The trials of a musical accompanist are many, if we may credit all the stories told of them. A young professional recently played accompaniments for the performers at a private entertainment for a fashionable charity lasting for nearly two hours.

"Here, you see, I have no chance to take a breath for ten bars," said the amateur flute player, indicating to the accompanist a passage in his opening solo. "There are a number of such places in my solos, and if you'll hurry the time whenever you come to them it will be a relief to my wife, for all my family are subject to apoplexy and I've already had one slight attack."

Cleaning the Typewriter.

The most important thing in cleaning a typewriter is to get the dust and grit out of the machine—not farther into it, as is too often the case. At least twice a year every typewriter should be thoroughly cleaned with gasoline, and then the machine should be left alone until all the gasoline has evaporated. Then all points of friction should be oiled and the ribbon, which was, of course, removed at the start, replaced. Simply as a business proposition it pays to keep typewriters covered when not in use.—Circle.

SPORT IN THE MIDDLE AGES.

Hawking Then One of the Most Popular Forms of Hunting.

Have you ever noticed a hawk soaring and floating high up against the sky? Have you seen him busy apparently in embroidering a wonderful pattern of loops and curves, putting in a wing beat here and a long float there, and then suddenly, without a moment's warning, seem fairly to drop to the ground, pause a moment and then rise slowly and fly to some nearby tree?

The splendid flight was made with a purpose. He was looking out for his prey and when he saw with his keen eyes some field mouse scampering across a field, or a tiny bird covering in a bush, or picking up a meal among the grass, he fell from the sky, seized the little creature and took it off in his talons to eat it at leisure in some convenient tree.

This method of pursuing his prey was taken advantage of in the middle ages and later times to provide for man one of his most popular forms of hunting. The birds were chosen with greatest care, each kind was trained to hunt for his own particular sort of prey, and great parties of lords and ladies, followed by many attendants, rode out into the fields and marshes to "fly" their birds, as they called it, and watch them "strike their quarries."—N. Hudson Moore in St. Nicholas.

MAKING A BALLOON.

The Way It Is Patched, Varnished and Powdered.

A balloon consists of patches of cloth about a yard square sewed securely together. This is not because of any difficulty in making the fabric of a globular shape, for that could easily be done if the pieces were shaped like the skin on the section of an apple.

The reason is that no absolutely reliable fabric has yet been invented, and there is always the possibility of the balloon bursting. Should this happen to one of these patches, the escape of gas will not be dangerously rapid, as it would be if larger sections were used.

When the balloon is made it is carefully varnished, three coats being given, and each being allowed to dry thoroughly before the next is applied. If one coat is left moist the fabric will be attacked by a species of dry rot, which will make it as fragile as the paper this is printed on. In the early days of ballooning many fatal accidents were due to this defect, but now the utmost care is exercised.

When a balloon is packed up for a journey, powdered chalk is sprinkled between the folds, as otherwise they would stick together and tear.—Pearson's Weekly.

Hard on Joseph.

Outside the photographer's establishment in the little country town stood two figures—evidently father and son. At last they went in.

"O! want yer to take a picture of our Joseph, 'ere, maister," said the fond parent, and Joseph was promptly placed in a chair and requested to compose his features for awhile.

The photographer's specialty was quick developing, and soon several negatives lay before the purchaser.

The father gazed uneasily at them for a space and then said nervously:

"You say in the window, maister, as 'ow yer can touch up the pictures to give any effect agreeable to yer customers."

"That is so," assented the artist readily, hastening to add, with his best professional smile, "but in your son's case any retouching is absolutely unnecessary."

"Ow, ay!" said the father. "That be main like Joseph, but to tellex truth he's got to send un w' his testimonials for a job, an' I'd like yer to alter his photo to make him look honest like!"—London Mail.
