A. M. McDermott, of Los Angeles, Cal., who visited his brothers, H. L. and Hugh McDermott, here last week, made a novel trip over the Rocky Mountains on a mule's back this spring. Mr. McDermott was in Mexico in the interests of a mining company with which he is associated. After completing his work, the opportunity presented itself and Mr. McDermott took advantage of it to make a trip over the "great divide" at a point 500 miles south of the United States border. From summer heat and ripened harvest fields to a winter's climate, the trip was accomplished in less than a month with various stages of climate between the two extremes. Mr. McDermott inspected the proposed route of a railroad which is being built over the trail that he followed and the various rocks and minerals found in the mountains made the trip an instructive and profitable one to one of his profession—a mining engineer.

SCARCITY OF WATER.
The amount of water that could be drawn from the wells at the Marlette water works was not sufficient for the demands made upon the system last week. The situation is a grave one and the board of works has asked the assistance of the patrons to tide over the trouble.

Whybrew, and together go to the state camp meeting at St. Johns Aug. 6-17.

Nancy's Ghost

By Edward H. Cooper

(Copyright.)

"This house," Monica told me impressively, "is stuffed with ghosts; they walk about all over the old wing in crowds." "That's where your bedroom is," added Sylvia pointedly.

She Was Standing There Quietly, Looking at Me.

They would have preferred the sword-brandishing person, but this was better than nothing. What was it? "Are you Nancy?" I asked. Nancy was one of the apparitions I had been told about.

It Can't Be Beat.

The best of all teachers is experience. C. M. Harden, of Silver City, North Carolina, says: "I find Electric Bitters does all that's claimed for it. For Stomach, Liver and Kidney troubles it can't be beat."

clumsy attempts to open it. But no sign of an opening could be found, and at this hour of the night decent regard for one's fellow-creatures forbade an attempt to kick it down.

Next day, however, the question was settled in the simplest way. I asked Monica for more details about Nancy, whose history she had slurred over so slightly on the evening of my arrival; and Monica, weary of such a long silence about her favorite ghosts, and thankful for any one who would take an intelligent interest even in the least exciting of them, told me the child's story.

It was a smaller room than the other, unused and completely neglected. The floor was bare, and in the middle of it stood a round, empty table, thick with dust. There were some curious three-cornered drawers in the table, which swung open sideways, instead of allowing themselves to be pulled out; and we looked into them hurriedly, hastening to see what was to be seen while the fast-dying daylight lasted.

"Betty has told me to-night that I am very ill and perhaps I shall die. If I die, I want my doll to be buried with me. She is the only person I love in the world, and the only person who loves me."

The instantaneous action proposed by Monica was not possible, for certain reasons of politeness; but the permission of various authorities having been obtained next day, the doll was buried as near as possible to the little maid, who had come to us in this regulation ghostly fashion to plead that her last wish might be carried out.

FORDNEY SHOULD BE RE-NOMINATED

F. W. Redfern of Clinton County Gives Pertinent Reasons.

If Success in Undertakings Is a Measure of Fitness, Our Congressman Certainly Merits It.

One of the high privileges belonging to every American voter is that of being a critic, and one of the penalties which every man occupying a prominent public position has to pay is being obliged to submit to criticism. It may be all very well to relieve the gall and get rid of the venom in one's heart by telling the other fellow what a blankety blank fool he has made of himself when he has done right for 99 times and perhaps missed the hundredth. But the David Harum in some men crops out as it did in his version of the golden rule, "Do unto others as you would have them do to you, but do it first."

Now, I am not writing this article as an apologist for Mr. Fordney, our present member in congress. He needs none, but is abundantly able to give it to every man that asks a reason for his acts and for the faith that is in him. But it sometimes does a man good to let him know that his services are appreciated and that his work for his country, and his state is held to be of as much importance as is his duty to his immediate constituency.

The high position which Mr. Fordney by his ability in congress has been able to attain on important committees and the influence which he unquestionably wields in the great council chamber of the nation, marks him as a man whose opinions are sought and whose influence is courted. And he stands today in point of ability, in usefulness and also in legislative experience the peer among Michigan's exceptionally brilliant representation in congress. It is needless for me to go into the details as to how Mr. Fordney won his high position in the opinion of his conferees. But of the esteem in which he is held by an appreciative constituency and as to how he obtained that, I will say a few words. Close and unremitting application to the business interests of everybody in the eighth congressional district was the basis of his popularity and usefulness. This is a broad assertion, but it is literally true. The great interest of the capitalist and the pension claims of the old soldier or the soldier's widow received equal attention and very many of the old soldiers and their widows are today in the quiet and comfortable enjoyment of homes which they would not have but for the efforts of this man whom they affectionately call "Joe Fordney."

But Joe has offended somebody. There hasn't been postoffices enough to go around in some localities, while in other places the requirements of the civil service rules have been so strict that some would-be appointee has failed to answer the required percentage of questions and of course "Joe" is to blame for his failure and he thinks a change is needed.

While others—less honorable than those just mentioned—are envious, and for envy would retire the most thoroughly equipped man in ability, in influence and legislative experience in the eighth congressional district.

One other reason assigned for a change is that Mr. Fordney favored Mr. Cannon of Illinois, for president. Well, up to the time of an actual nomination, hadn't he as much right to be in favor of Mr. Cannon for that high position as you or I had to favor Mr. Taft?

And be it said to the everlasting honor of "Joe Fordney" that he was loyal to his convictions and stood by his friend to the last. And now that the nomination is made and Mr. Taft is the nominee, he will have no more earnest or loyal supporters in his fight for the presidency, than "Honest Joe Fordney" of Michigan and that grand old man from Illinois, Speaker Cannon.

Mr. Fordney seeks a re-nomination. If faithfulness in the discharge of duty counts for anything, he is entitled to it. If success in his undertakings is any measure of his fitness, he merits it. If high character and moral worth are a requirement, he has them. If all of the above are, as in this case, coupled with the necessary legislative experience to fit a man to be something besides a figurehead in the greatest deliberative body in the world, then there is no doubt that on the first day of next September Joseph W. Fordney will be re-nominated to represent the eighth congressional district of Michigan in the next national congress.

F. W. REDFERN.
St. Johns, July 10, 1908.

Political Palaver

There are no less than seven candidates for the republican nomination for sheriff in Oakland county. Similar lively contests are on for nominations in a number of counties. The primary vote is expected to be heavy in these counties.

During the present week Dr. J. B. Bradley has been campaigning Ottawa, Van Buren, Berrien, St. Joe and Monroe counties. Next week Dr. Bradley will make his initial appearance into the "Thumb" and will devote his time to ascertaining for himself just what may be the prevailing conditions.

It is now practically settled that Attorney General Bird will not be a candidate for justice of the supreme court, but will ask for a renomination to his present office. This being the case, Roger Irving Wyckes of Grand Rapids and Senator James D. Mackay of Detroit have announced that they will not be candidates for attorney general. The latter will ask for a third term as senator although he thinks it would be disastrous to give Governor Warner a third term.

It is interesting to note that while Professor Ferris has not admitted that he will accept the democratic nomination for governor this fall, his assistants at the Ferris Institute have not been so backward. When the Ferris Institute closed for vacation last week they gave each of the 1,100 students a card on which was a picture of Professor Ferris and this inscription: "Tell your father to remember and vote for Ferris for governor at the primary election in the fall." It looks as if Woodbridge N. Ferris is carrying on a lively flirtation with the nomination.

Dr. J. B. Bradley, who is seeking the Republican nomination for Governor, has gotten out a new card. On one side is the portrait of the candidate with the statement "For the whole people, For the entire state, No factions, All sections." Or, the other side under the head "What Michigan Needs" is a tabloid platform which reads as follows: 1. Economical administration. Close supervision of state expenditures. 2. A state wide primary law. 3. The ad valorem taxation of telegraph and telephone companies. 4. State control and capitalization of public service corporations. 5. An anti-Lobby law. 6. Destruction of the "machine"—prohibition of political work by state employees. 7. Reforestation and development of state resources.

HORSES IN SUMMER.

Care and Attention They Should Have During Hot Weather.

Extreme hot weather brings more or less suffering to a horse. The animal that has not received the proper care and attention is very apt to become a victim of heat exhaustion. A bran mash twice a week will assist in keeping the system cool, and in case of overfat a dram of pulverized saltpeter added to the mash will be beneficial.

When the weather is very hot it is better to allow the teams two hours for dinner instead of one, and they should not be fed until they are somewhat cooled off. It will also be best to take off the harness while the horses are eating their dinner. This extra labor is offset by the comfort given the animals.

In a three horse team the middle horse is more liable to heat exhaustion than the rest on account of the additional amount of heat radiated from the horse on either side of him. It therefore is advisable to so change the horses that one will not be compelled to be in the middle more than a half day at a time.

Should it be seen that the animal lags, droops his head, pants hard or ceases to perspire he should at once be unhitched and the harness removed; then with a hose or sponge very cold water should be applied to the back and crown of the head, after which he should be allowed to stand in a shady place outdoors.

If, however, the exhaustion becomes more pronounced and the eyes of the horse are bloodshot, the nostrils fiery red and the pulse bounding strong and fast, give, in addition to the above treatment, four ounces of good whisky in a pint of water or one ounce of aromatic spirits of ammonia and two ounces of spirits of nitrous ether in a quart of water, repeating the dose every hour until the pulse becomes normal and the horse stops panting and holds up his head; then give him a half pailful of water in which one ounce of pulverized saltpeter has been dissolved. The next day give one-third of an ounce of the saltpeter in the drinking water three times.

If, after all this treatment, the horse lapses into a condition of semiconsciousness, which can be told by a sleepy look, the eyes half closed, forgetting to chew the food taken into the mouth and staggering when attempting to walk, he should be given two grams of Iodide of Potash three times daily in the drinking water. The food should be composed of soft mashes and fresh green grass and the head kept cool by applying cold water, but not ice packs, as they are apt to produce softening of the brain.

It is dangerous to bleed a horse for heat exhaustion or sunstroke and equally harmful to dose him with tincture of aconite.

THE VETERINARY.

A mixture of equal parts of licorice and ginger in the hog feed two or three times each day is recommended for the pig that coughs. A lump of coal tar placed well down the throat while the pig is held up on its feet is also good.

Cure For Caked Udder.
When a milk cow has caked udder it very often arises from lying upon something hard—cornstalks or a cob—and may cause trouble and annoyance to the dairyman. A cure, easy, simple and effective, is to take of poke root, freshly dug and chopped, one pint, boiling it in one quart of water until it is a well done mulch. Apply as hot as possible thoroughly all over the swollen part after milking, as that is the surest and best time, when there is no haste.

To Prevent Lamb Colic.
After losing lambs for a number of years from colic, says a breeder, and not being able to find any cause by careful examination of the entrails I concluded the trouble was caused by the lamb getting too much milk, as it is always the largest and fattest that die. So I remove the flock at once to the poorest pasturage possible, and the trouble ceases at once. I also find by experience that if the flock is kept on the newly sown fields the lambs are not so apt to be affected.

Removal of Warts.
One ounce of acetate of lead dissolved in a quart of water and this applied to the growth will remove warts and other fungous growths in farm animals. Be careful that too much does not reach the tender skin around the wart.
