STOCKHOLDERS HAD ANNUAL MEETING

NEW BEAN ELEVATOR FOR FARM PRODUCE CO.

$5,320 Worth of Stock Sold at Annual Meeting Monday Afternoon.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of The Farm Produce Co. was held at the town hall Monday afternoon when directors were elected and the annual report given.

The report proved very satisfactory to the stock holders, the business of the company showing a net profit of 12 per cent for the year on the paid-up capital stock. As the company is about to build a new bean elevator and hay barn, the stockholders voted to pass by the dividend that might have been declared and carry the profit into the surplus account to be used by the company during the coming year.

The present paid-up capital is $13,130.00. It was decided to raise the capital to the full authorized capitalization of $20,000.00. On Monday, stock was sold to the amount of $5,320.00, which leaves $1,480.00 to be raised to realize the authorized capitalization. This amount is already in sight and the officers believe that there is no question but that the amount will be raised.

The board of directors were instructed to close a contract with F. E. Kelsey as manager for a term of three years. The showing of the company's progress under Mr. Kelsey's management is gratifying and the success of the organization as a money making institution is no longer in doubt.

A new bean elevator with a capacity of 10,000 bushels will be erected at once and it is expected that it will be ready for this fall's crop which will be harvested in October. A large hay barn with a capacity of 25 car loads will also be erected this summer. This will be situated north of the coal sheds of the company. The new bean elevator will be built on the south side of the company's grain elevator, according to present plans. This will make it unnecessary to move the present bean elevator and the bean crop can be handled there until the new building is ready for business.

The report of the company's business showed the following figures: Amount of beans shipped out during year, 53,000 bushels; wool shipped, 36,000 pounds. Total shipments of products, including beans and wool, 132 carloads. Shipment received at Cass City: Coal, 38 cars; salt, 3 cars; cotton seed meal, 2 cars; oil meal, 1 car; bran, 1 car; cement, 6 cars; tile, 12 cars; brick, 1 car; corn, 5 cars; total, 69 cars. One hundred seventy-five bushels of clover seed were shipped out and 213 bushels were sold at retail with 220 bushels of timothy seed.

All the directors of the company were re-elected at Monday's meeting. They are: I. K. Reid, J. A. Benkelman, Ephraim Knight, W. J. Schwager, Hugh Cooper, N. A. Perry and George Hall.

G. T. BRANCHING OUT.

It is rumored in financial circles that the Grand Trunk is trying to buy the D. & M. railroad and that there is a prospect of the deal going through. Just why the G. T. is after the line and how it expects to reach a connecting point is rather veiled in mystery, but that there is something doing along this line is assured. It is believed in some quarters that the Grand Trunk as a part of the deal would take over the Little Thumb road between Bay City and Caro and build from Caro to Wilmet on what was the P. O. & N., thus connecting with the main line.

FIRE AT BAD AXE

BURNS NINE AUTOS

Loss of $20,000 When Gasoline Tank Explodes and Fires Garage and Several Buildings.

Sunday morning about 9:30 the people of Bad Axe were startled by several explosions, and on investigation, it was discovered that the big Buick garage was a mass of flames. It appears that parties were filling the tanks of an automobile in preparation for a trip, and accidentally run the tank over, spilling oil on the floor. Suddenly the tank in the auto exploded, and at once the building was a roaring furnace. The fire gained rapidly, and it was feared for a time a large part of the business section would be wiped out, but the fire fighters were able to keep the fire in the section where it started.

The garage and nine automobiles in it were completely destroyed. Two buildings on the south, a store and dwelling belonging to George Kerr, were badly gutted, and the roof of a barn on the west was caved in by the falling of the garage wall. The blacksmith shop of Lon Pierce, a former resident of Cass City, was also badly damaged.

Of the automobiles lost in the garage the Buick people lost two; Welch & Cowan, two; Max Hirschberg, Asa Markel, A. C. Barclay, H. A. Pierce and a stranger one each. The loss by the fire is estimated at $20,000, partially covered by insurance.

BIG OUTDOOR ATTRACTIONS

Cass City Fair Will Present Strong, Unusual Features.

Flying machines at country fairs are still very uncommon, but the Cass City Fair, August 22 to 25, will have many uncommon features.

The daily flights of the airship at the fair in itself are an attraction which will draw people by the thousands from all over the Thumb of Michigan. This is because the general public knows very little about airships and because the opportunity of seeing these marvels of man's ingenuity is a rare one. In getting this attraction the Cass City Fair officers feel that they have reason to feel proud.

It is not a case of carrying all the eggs in one basket, however, for there are other outdoor features that will be as interesting as the airship. The special attractions are costing the fair management several times the amount expended in former years and there will be something doing every minute.

GAGETOWN WATER WORKS.

Work is progressing rapidly on the water works system which is being installed by the Village of Gagetown. Last week the engine and pump and air pressure pump were set in place and workmen are now busy in driving points to the depth of 9 to 12 feet for the water supply. In all about 16 of these wells will be put down.

Will pay highest market price for poultry. Will receive same on Monday and Wednesday of each week. O. Auten. 6-24.

I have a full stock of mower knives and sections for Deering, Champion, McCormick and Plano machinery. Machine oil for automobiles and farm implements. Quantity of barn paint. J. L. Hitchcock. 6-16.

LOCAL TEAM TRIMS SHABBONA, 8 TO 3

GAME CAME VISITORS' WAY UNTIL SIXTH INNING.

Chaffee Made Nice Running Catch of Fly in Sixth. Game Was Interesting.

Shabbona's unbeaten bunch of ball players came to Cass City Tuesday afternoon with the expectation of adding another scalp to their belt. It looked as though their hopes would be fulfilled during the first five innings of the game, the visitors' bringing in three runs and holding their opponents down to one. In the fifth inning the "balloon went up" and the locals hit the sphere freely, scoring four more men. Shabbona failed to score after the third inning, while Cass City scored one in the seventh and two more in the eighth, winning the game 8 to 3.

Fleming, first man to bat, was retired on a fly catch. "Big Noise" Phillips was caught napping on second and J. Jones swung. Munn started his program by striking out Dickinson. Chaffee was caught on a fly and Keating fanned.

In the second inning F. Parrott and Ehlers each scored, the local team assisting them around the bases by answering to the charge of "errors." E. Parrott tried to score, but was caught coming home. F. Phillips was caught out at first. Munn fanned. McKenzie walked, but reached second too late. Doc Graham reached second, but became so interested in the game that he walked away from that station and didn't get back in time. Winslow was slow in reaching first base.

Third inning Fleming fanned. R. Phillips made a nice two-base hit and scored. J. Jones was caught coming home and F. Parrott was slow to second. Schwaderer was retired on a fly. Bien and Dickinson were both out at first base. In the fourth inning Shabbona was retired in one, two, three order. Chaffee made a two-base hit and later scored. The three men that followed him failed to reach first, two of them fanning.

Fifth inning. Shabbona failed to PUBLIC DRINKING CUP MUST BE ABOLISHED.

Dr. Robert L. Dixon, secretary of the state board of health, has notified all railroads, steamship lines and other companies who have for their purpose the conveyance of the public, that after July 20 they must discontinue the use of public drinking cups in their conveyances or places of business. The state law gives the board of health authority in these matters.

SOUND SENSE.

The Mralette Leader suggests that the churches of that place close up these hot Sundays evenings and hold union services outside on the school grounds. The editor says there is good biblical authority for such proceeding and that other towns are doing it.

REPORTS NOT EXAGGERATED WRITES MRS. W. E. ADAIR

Papers Cannot Begin to Describe the Real Misery of Fire Sufferers in the North.

A letter was received by the Chronicle yesterday morning from Mrs. W. E. Adair of Oscoda, formerly of this city. Mrs. Adair says:

"I thought I would drop a line to you as I thought you would like to hear of our safety from the terrible fire. It was a terrible sight—one that no one could ever forget in a life time.

"We just moved into a little place of our own just between the Au Sable river and a body of water that they call the bayou, to lodge the logs in. The fire was coming on both sides of us but that bayou kept the fire from coming close to the house, although some of the boom logs which stuck up out of the water caught fire.

"Oh! it was terrible and I was alone. Lillah, my little girl, just collapsed with fright. Hugh was working in the mill at the time and could not leave the fighting of the fire till the last moment. He came home in time to get up on the house and pour pails of water on it. This must have saved it as the cinders were pouring down upon us all the time. I certainly think there is something in prayer as I prayed every moment of the time. We were so fortunate as my mother and Anna just left the week before for her home in Beaulieu.

"It was terrible to see the people, women and children, falling on their knees praying and men calling to their wives and families to follow them and every one trying to save some one or something. We have our house full and tents all around the little island. It is a sight. It is worse than the cyclone south of Cass City a few years ago.

"Now, do not think the papers exaggerate. They cannot begin to describe the real misery. I gave away everything I could do without. A man and wife and family came to our house the night of the fire. He was blind and could not see his little boy who was leading him. I had witch hazel in the house and washed his eyes and bound them up. The whole family is still with me now. I could not settle myself to write before."

URGENT APPEAL FOR WELFARE OF PUBLIC

SUGGESTIONS OF THE STATE BOARD OF HEALTH.

Large Numbers of Cases of Typhoid Fever and Infantile Intestinal Diseases Being Reported.

The State Board of Health of Michigan is making an urgent appeal to the public at this time, in behalf of public welfare, from the standpoint of health. R. L. Dixon, secretary of the board, says:

"This is the time of year when the most serious propositions regarding matters of public health have to be considered. At this time of the year, almost unbelievable numbers of cases of typhoid fever and of fatal infantile intestinal diseases are being reported; in fact, at the present moment the numbers of these cases exceed the numbers reported up to this time last summer, and appear to be increasing rapidly.

"Now, typhoid fever and infantile diarrhoeas are preventable diseases. Two things are necessary to prevent the continual increase in numbers of these diseases which are now threatening the people of Michigan. The first necessary is to know what to do, the second thing necessary is to do what you know to do. So many times statements have gone out from this office calling attention to the necessary precautions the guarding against these diseases, that we almost hesitate to restate them. However, with conditions as they now are, and the outlook as it now is, it certainly is the duty of this office to state as strongly as possible:

STOLE MARCH ON FRIENDS

Another of Gagetown's fair damsels surprised her many friends last Thursday by quietly stealing a march, going to Caro and was married at the M. E. parsonage.

Miss Margaret Edwina, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Stewart of this place, became the happy bride of Mr. Erwin Craft of Webster, N. Y. The bride drove to Caro and was met by the groom and were quietly married in the evening. Immediately after the ceremony the newly weds drove to the home of the bride, and before anyone had learned of the happy event they had taken their flight on the early morning train for New York where they will make their future home.—Times.

ANYONE CAN DO IT.

John P. Smith, formerly superintendent of the Cass City schools, who is now owner and publisher of the Memphis Bee says:

"Most anyone can be an editor. All the editor has got to do is sit at a desk six days out of the week, four weeks out of the month, and twelve months of the year, and 'edit' such stuff as this:

" 'Mrs. Jones of Cactus Creek let a can opener slip last week and cut herself in the pantry.' 'A mischievous lad from Piketown threw a stone and struck Mr. Pike in the alley last Tuesday.' 'John Doe climbed on the roof of his house last week looking for a leak and fell striking himself on the back porch.' 'While Harold Green was escorting Miss Violet Wise from the church social last Saturday night a savage dog attacked them and bit Mr. Green several times on the public square.' 'Isaiah Trimmer of Running Creek, was playing with a cat Friday when it scratched him on the veranda.' 'Mr. Fong, while harnessing a broncho last Saturday, was kicked just south of the corn crib.'"

PLOT CLEVER ONE IN "THE GIRL OF MY DREAMS"

Series of Mishaps and Misunderstandings Makes Entertaining Reading in New Serial.

The Girl of My Dreams.

Who is she, do you ask?

Well, if we told you all about her here at the very opening you might fail to read a most enjoyable comedy.

We will go this far, however, and state that the "Girl" in this new serial recently issued is responsible for a series of mishaps and misunderstandings that are anything but enjoyable for Harry Swifton, the leading male character.

"The Girl of My Dreams" in the original was a play by Wilbur D. Nesbit and Otto Hauerbach, one of the big musical comedy hits of last season. The plot was such a clever one that Mr. Nesbit was prevailed upon to novelize the story. He did so, with great success, and it is more entertaining if anything as a story than as a play.

Mr. Nesbit is not a novice at the writing game. He has a very fully developed sense of humor, which has placed him in the first rank of writers of this class. The story is illustrated with both line engravings and halftones made from photographs posed by the original "Girl of My Dreams" company.

The story is not a long one—less than five pages—and will be completed within a short time. The opening chapters appear in the Chronicle this week on page three.

The Scrap Book

Rather Liked the Affront.

Edward B. Clark, the Washington correspondent, was the agent for a Chicago paper at Pine Ridge at the time of the Indian uprising there. After the difficulty had been composed Clark got a telegram from his paper asking him to get an interview with Young Man Afraid of His Horses, a chief who had taken part.

Clark took an interpreter and went to the chief's tepee. The chief, still in his war paint, received him in the tepee and asked Clark to eat. Clark ate. Then, wanting to do the right thing and not knowing whether it was proper to tip a big Indian chief, Clark dropped three silver dollars into the hand of the chief's wife, and for fear the paint streaked but dignified warrior might consider this an affront he had his interpreter say to the chief, "In my country a compliment to a man's wife is thought a double compliment."

The interpreter repeated this sentiment to Young Man Afraid of His Horses. That dignitary grunted, rose, left the tepee and came back with four more wives.—Saturday Evening Post.

Life's Mirror.

There are loyal hearts, there are spirits brave,
There are souls that are pure and true;
Then give to the world the best you have,
And the best will come back to you.

Give love and love to your heart will flow,
A strength in your utmost need.
Have faith and a score of hearts will show
Their faith in your word and deed.

For life is the mirror of king and slave.
'Tis just what you are and do.
Then give to the world the best you have,
And the best will come back to you.

A Charming Woman

is one who is lovely in face, form, mind and temper. But it's hard for a woman to be charming without health. A weak, sickly woman will be nervous and irritable. Constipation and kidney poisons show in pimples, blotches, eruptions and a wretched complexion. But Electric Bitters always prove a godsend to women who want health, beauty and friends. They regulate Stomach, Liver and Kidneys, purify the blood, give strong nerves, bright eyes, pure breath, smooth, velvety skin, lovely complexion and perfect health. Try them. 50c at L. I. Myrtle—So Clarence Dough proposed to you the other day? Was he very nervous?

Natiea—I should say so. Why, he was up in the air.

Myrtle—You don't mean it. And were you calm, dear?

Natiea—No; I was up in the air, too. You see, he proposed to me when he took me up in his new balloon.

Acting Versus Drawing.

To a group of friends Ellen Terry once said: "Acting is not like drawing. You make a line. If it is wrong you rub it out at once and make another. With acting that is impossible. There is no altering. It must stand. I often feel as if I must cry to the audience, 'Oh, that is wrong, not as I meant it to be; let me act that part or sentence over again.'"

A NOVELIZATION OF THE PLAY BY
WILBUR D. NESBIT AND OTTO HAUERBACH
NOVELIZED BY WILBUR D. NESBIT

CHAPTER I.

Harry Swifton hummed a song to himself and threw a little more speed into his roadster.

He had every reason to be happy. Long regarded as a settled bachelor, though young enough to be the sort of chap all the girls were setting their caps for, he felt that this was to be the really great day of his life. Lucy Medders and her father were coming to visit him; his sister Carolyn was coming home from boarding school especially to play the hostess, the home had been made spick and span for the occasion, the sun was shining, the little birds were singing in the trees of the park, his roadster was running smoothly and—well, he hadn't a care in the world.

As he took corners in the driveways without slackening speed he murmured:

"Good little buzz wagon! You're the cupid that started all this."

In memory, he could see again that day of the summer before when in the same machine he was whizzing along a country road. Something happened, the machine skidded, with the usual result.

When Harry came to his senses he was lying on an old-fashioned hair sofa, in an old-fashioned Quaker home—but he thought he was in heaven.

Above him bent a Quaker damsel, demurely beautiful and distractingly calm. She was bathing his brow with a cloth wrung out of cold water to which some camphor had been added. "Do thee feel better?" she asked, in the softest of tones.

"It depends," he managed to say. "If you're going to stop this because I'm better, I'm going to have a relapse."

Then into the room came a stalwart old Quaker.

"Has the young man recovered, Lucy?" he asked.

"Yes, father," she said. Harry sat up, with an effort.

"I don't know how to thank you, sir," he said. "It was lucky that I went into the ditch right in front of your house."

With the word "lucky" he looked meaningfully at Lucy, but that self-possessed maiden did not seem to catch his double meaning.

The result of the accident is not hard to guess. Harry found himself so bumped and bruised that it took a fortnight for him to be well enough to return to his home. And in that fortnight he and Lucy became so well acquainted that it then became necessary for him to run up to see her—a mere matter of a hundred miles—once every week. And now he had induced her father to bring her to visit him and his sister.

He reviewed in his mind the events of the days since the accident. Pleasant thoughts, those, for a young man. They take his mind off the immediate surroundings, however.

Automatically he whirled around another corner—then began doing things with the brake, but too late.

Twenty yards before him approached another auto. In it sat a couple oblivious to their danger. There was a smash and a crash, a shriek and a yell. And then the three people picked themselves up.

The man in the other auto leaped to his feet first and shook his fists at Harry. The lady gathered her hair into a coil again and exclaimed:

"My hat! My beautiful hat!"

Harry followed the direction of her glance, and saw the object of her dismay. A handsome hat of yellow straw, adorned with large red flowers, was hopelessly entangled in the steering gear of his machine.

He extricated it—or what he could of it—and offered it to her. But with a tearful exclamation of despair she refused it.

"Secoundrel!" shouted her friend. "Vy do you go running around killing peeples, and ruining their hats?"

"My dear count!" cried the lady. "Not so loud!"

But the count was not to be calmed. In spite of Harry's efforts to explain matters, he continued his staccato expressions of wrath and vengeance, until, giving up the idea of straightening matters out, Harry popped into his own machine, skilfully ran past the other auto, and resumed his homeward ride. In a moment the count and the lady were in their seat again, the count wheeled his machine about, and the pursuit began. By some deft turnings and twistings Harry managed to evade them and at last reached home.

He dashed into the house, eager to change his clothes and be ready to go to the station to meet Mr. Medders and Lucy. "Pigeon" Williams met him. Pigeon, as he was affectionately called, was a young man who tried his best to be a chum of Harry—for the reason that he was unusually attracted by Harry's sister Carolyn. It was natural that Pigeon should be at Swifton's that morning. He wanted to help Harry have things ready to entertain Lucy and her father, and besides he thought it would cheer Carolyn up to see one of her old friends on her own arrival.

"Is Carolyn here?" Harry asked, as he came in.

"Sure," replied Pigeon. "She got here half an hour ago—mad as the dickens because you didn't meet her at the train. Why didn't you? If I'd known you weren't going to, of course I could have gone."

"I meant to," Harry replied. "But I had a bit of a smash-up in the park."

"Smash-up? Again?"

"Nothing that amounted to much. Head-on bump into one of these run-about things—run about a day and then blow up. German dignity in it, with a dash of brunette. No wonder he couldn't see me coming. He had to look at her."

"Didn't hurt them?"

"No. Just knocked the breath out of all of us. And her hat fell off, and my machine chewed it up. Look."

Harry dug into his pocket and produced the brim of the lady's hat, with a trailing string of red poppies. Pigeon laughed.

"Keep it for a souvenir?" he asked. "Don't know. The German fellow got mad, and I came away in such a hurry I forgot what I was doing. Stuck the thing in my pocket absent-mindedly, I guess."

"He got mad! No wonder."

"I think he's real peeved. When I made my get-away he got his old cook stove into action and tried to follow me. But I escaped."

Harry went into his room and Pigeon sat down.

"How's Carolyn looking?" Harry called to him.

"Fine and dandy. Say, Harry, Pigeon went on, maliciously, "the fellows have it in for you."

"In for me! Why?" asked Harry, in muffled tones, tugging at a collar button.

"They say you're a quitter. You used to be strong for stag parties, and all that, and now you don't care for anything but the country—and a country girl."

"That so?" Harry said, coming out. "Well, let 'em say what they please. I'm for the country—that's where you go for pure air, green fields, natural flowers, and natural girls. Pigeon, I'm through with all this bachelor stuff. No more of the stag suppers and poker parties for yours truly. I'm ready to quit and be good—if my plans work."

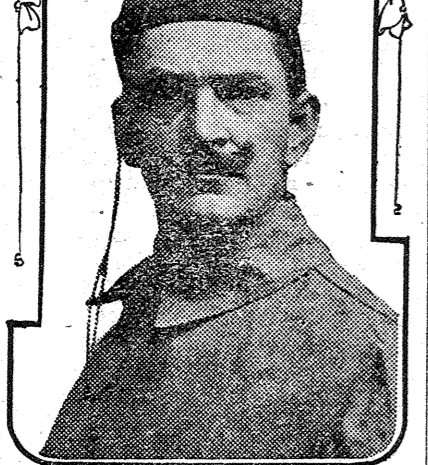

"I think you're dead right, Harry," Pigeon replied, solemnly. "Judging from my own experience. There's nothing in this bachelor life."

"Your experience? Here, Methusalem! Take a cigar. Why, you're not even old enough to use a safety razor, boy!"

Pigeon blushed boyishly and felt of his tender mustache with an embarrassedly guilty expression.

"You're always rubbing it in on a fellow," he complained.

Pigeon blushed boyishly and felt of his tender mustache with an embarrassedly guilty expression.

CHAPTER II.

Harry laughed sarcastically, and in the midst of his laugh Carolyn dashed into the room. A jolly, romping girl, just at the age when a girl doesn't know whether to keep on being a girl or to consider herself a woman, she paused for a moment at sight of Pigeon, then lost her formality and ran to Harry to greet him.

"Isn't she some girl, though?" Harry cried to Pigeon, with his arms around his sister. "Have to keep my eyes on you, from now on, young lady! You're getting to be too big and pretty."

"I'm not too big!" pouted Carolyn.

"Not a bit—and you couldn't be too pretty," Pigeon earnestly declared.

"I'll have to keep my eye on you, Harry," Carolyn giggled. "Wait until Lucy comes. Do you call her 'thee'?"

"I haven't turned into a whole Quaker yet," Harry answered. "Now you run along and see that this house looks like something."

"You'd better get some one to expurgate this den of yours," Carolyn flashed at him as she left the room. "Lucy and her father may be shocked at some of the things here."

"I'd like to know what there is in here to shock anyone," Harry said to Pigeon.

"Oh, nothing much," Pigeon chuckled. "But maybe that picture of the ballet girl and that figure of the Venus de Milo, and some of the other highly decorative effects are not quite what Lucy has at home."

"Why, those are works of art."

"Here's General Blazes to see you, Harry," called Carolyn from the hallway.

"Come right in, general!" Harry said. General Blazes, pompous, irascible and dignified, was Harry's attorney in several matters having to do with the estate left him by his father. He entered the room as gravely and as impressively as though he were approaching the bench of the United States Supreme court, and said:

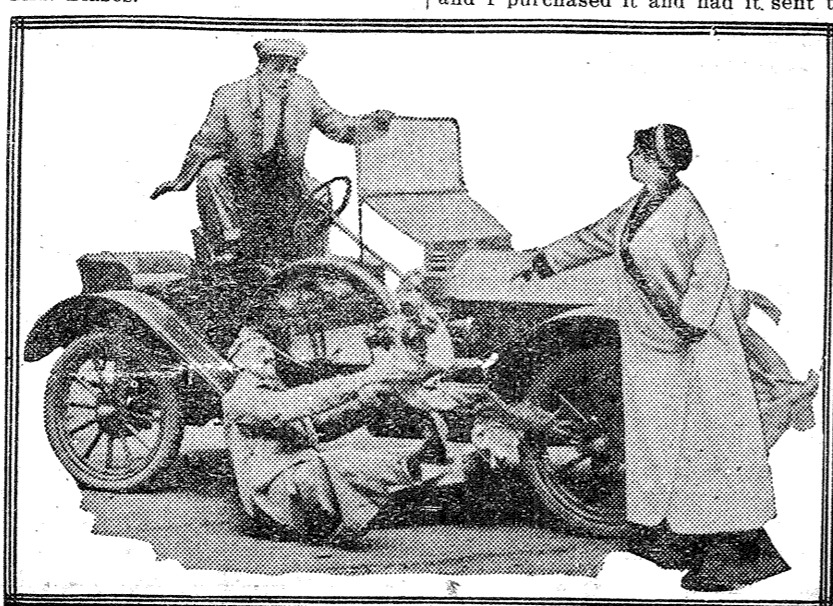

"Good morning, boy. Here"—taking a packet from his inside pocket—"here are the deeds, all duly signed and sealed. I believe you will need no further advice from me."

"Thank you, general," Harry said, taking the documents. "That's mighty good of you. I appreciate your kindness in bringing them in yourself."

"No trouble at all, I assure you. I was passing on my way to my offices."

"Won't you have a little nip of something to strengthen you for the walk?"

"No, thank you. I am rather in haste. I am slightly worried about Mrs. Blazes."

"My Hat! My Beautiful Hat!" She Cried.

"Worried? Why, I trust she is not ill."

"Not at all. She left early today, to shop for a sick friend."

"Shopping for a sick friend," chuckled Harry. "Are they having special sales of sick friends?"

The general ignored the jest, as, indeed, he ignored all jests.

"After that," he continued, "she was going to attend a luncheon where the ladies were to meet this Count von Fitz, who is such a social lion now."

"I've heard of him."

"Well," the general remarked, "I am dallying here when I should be hastening on. My wife should have been at home by this time. By the way, I don't believe you have met Mrs. Blazes."

"I met two of your wives at different times," Harry smiled; for the matrimonial experiments of the general were subjects of much comment.

"She's not one of the two," the general replied. "They left me by way of Reno long ago. I'm not a bam dit sorry."

Harry laughed again, for when the general became excited it was his habit to get his words twisted, sometimes with ludicrous effect.

The general regarded Harry's amusement with calm disapproval.

"My boy," he said, dropping his hand on Harry's shoulder, "let me give you one bit of good advice—not legal. When you marry for the third time—"

"But I haven't married my first yet," Harry protested.

"You will, however. And when you marry for the third time, don't marry a young, beautiful woman."

"Don't?"

"No. Don't. Half the time she's have you making a fam fool of yourself."

Having delivered himself of this sage observation, the general stalked to the door, turned and bade Harry farewell, and started out, to bump against a woe-begone person, who was coming in at the same moment.

"I—I beg your pardon, humbly!" exclaimed the newcomer, in a thin, high, weepy voice.

"Br-r-r!" grumbled the general, brushing by him.

The newcomer glided in. His long, dank hair hung down to his collar, his white, thin hands plucked with melancholy grace at the racyroft tie he was wearing, and his eyes, which were set deep in his head, gleamed weirdly.

"Alas!" he said, "it is you!"

"You're a good guesser, Primmer," Harry said, grasping his hand. "I'm glad you could come to see us."

Socrates Primmer, a distant cousin of Lucy, and a school teacher who considered himself a poet, had accepted Harry's off-hand invitation to come and visit him at the same time as Lucy and her father were to come.

Harry had not dreamed that Primmer would come, for he knew Primmer had long considered himself a suitor or the hand of the demure Quakeress. Nevertheless, here he was, and in the hand that was not adjusting his necktie was held a large hatbox, labeled, "Mlle. Daphne."

"Make yourself at home, old chap."

Socrates Primmer Was a School Teacher Who Considered Himself a Poet.

Harry said. "What's that? Your baggage?"

"This?" Primmer sighed, indicating the hatbox. "This is a present I bought for Lucy. I happened to see it in the window of a store near here, and I purchased it and had it sent to a minute. If the hat was sent here, I should know it. There may be a mistake. Ring up this milliner person and find out just what there is to it. Use the phone there, madam."

The lady smiled with relief, went to the phone and called for a number.

"Hello," she said. "Is Ma'mselle Daphne Daffington there? Is this you, Ma'mselle?"

"Daphne Daffington!" Harry muttered. "Can't be little Daphne I used to flirt with!"

"This is Mrs. Blazes," the lady said into the phone.

Harry started at that. "Mrs. Blazes!" he said in a hoarse whisper to the German. "Not Mrs. General Blazes?"

"Exactly!" the German assured him.

"Where did you deliver that duplicate of my hat?" Mrs. Blazes asked.

After the reply, still holding the receiver to her ear, she turned and asked Harry:

"What's the number of this house?"

"Three hundred and ten."

"They say it didn't reach here," Mrs. Blazes said into the phone.

"What? You are sure it did? You will come over yourself? Thank you."

She hung up the receiver and turned to Harry with:

"She is positive that the hat was delivered here, and to make sure she says she will come herself. Now, that hat is here, evidently. And I must have it."

"Yess," the German belligerently added. "Ve must haff it."

But Harry had by this time divined who the German was—he could be no one else than the dapper Count von Fitz, whose flirtatious escapades were discussed on all sides. And, this being Mrs. Blazes, and the General being worried because his wife had not yet come home, Harry could put two and two together and reason that the Count and the dashing Mrs. Blazes had gone for a jolly little ride through the park, which ride had been spoiled by the untoward accident which destroyed her hat.

"Why don't you go and get a hat—any kind of a hat?" he asked. "I'll be glad to pay for it, as I was partially at fault when your hat was ruined."

"Oh, sir," Mrs. Blazes answered, "I wouldn't dare to go home without that particular hat, or its exact duplicate. My husband is very jealous. He would be sure to want to know where the original hat had gone—in fact, it is his favorite hat. Please, please give me the hat."

"But I tell you I haven't it. I'd give it to you in a minute if I had it."

"Vat a nonsense!" the Count cried. Mrs. Blazes was about to say something, when a strange voice was heard outside.

"Right up here? Thank thee." It was the voice of Amos Medders.

"Great heavens!" Harry hissed.

"They've come. My future father-in-law, and my future fiancée!"

"Aha!" the Count said, malevolently. "Unless you gift us der hat ve vill make some trouble."

"Please go!" Harry begged. "Please! I haven't the hat. I'll get you a whole hat store, if you'll only go!"

But they were adamant. Mrs. Blazes, nerved to desperation because she knew she simply could not go home without her hat, planked herself into a chair and announced that she would stay right there until he gave her her own hat.

An inspiration came to Harry. Taking Mrs. Blazes by the arm he said:

"I'll send out and get you the hat. I'll get that milliner to rush another duplicate for you. Here, hide in here for a while. You understand that there be no end of talk if you were found here."

He rushed Mrs. Blazes to the door of his own room and pushed her in and slammed the door, then turned to the count.

"Now you may go," he said.

The Count was only too willing, but Lucy and her father could be heard coming nearer. Bewildered, Harry grabbed the Count by the arm and shoved him into the library on the other side from his own room.

"I can't meet them while I am in this condition," he said, looking about the room. "I'm so nervous they'll think I was guilty of something terrible or that I didn't want them here. If I were guilty I could carry it off easily." Thus does innocence get the hooks!"

And as Lucy and her father came into the room he slipped out the door leading to the back hallway.

Wonderingly, Lucy Medders and her father parted the hangings and entered Harry's den. They gazed about them, at the steins, the boxing gloves, the pipe racks, the pictures and all the other fittings of a bachelor's den.

On the table lay a deck of cards, a half smoked cigar, an opened box of cigarettes, and some scattered red white and blue chips.

"Oh-h-h!" Lucy gasped. "Isn't it lovely, father?"

"And this"—Mr. Medders said—"this is Harry's home?"

"It seemeth different from our own home, doth it not?" Lucy asked, shyly.

"Verily, daughter," Medders remarked, coming to a stop before the highly colored picture of the ballet girls, "there be nothing like this at home."

"Why," Lucy said, looking at the picture, "see the ladies in the rainy day skirts!"

"I see the ladies," Medders said, drily, "but where are the skirts? Verily, daughter, they must have feared a flood."

"Perhaps," Lucy offered, seeing that her father viewed the picture with disapproval, "perhaps it is a biblical scene."

"Nay, daughter. If it were, more people would be buying Bibles."

Medders turned from the picture, and his attention was caught by the statuette of the Venus de Milo. He looked at it intently.

"This is a sad sight, daughter," he remarked.

ther?" Lucy asked, innocently, not understanding that her father was expressing a dislike to such works of art. "Peradventure she broke them off trying to hook her dress in the back," she continued, merrily.

"She hath no dress to hook," Medders said, solemnly. "But, aside from these, the place hath a seemly look."

It Beats the World to cure Rheumatism

Aching and enfeebled muscles should remind you of slowness of tissue repair. Eruptions of the skin and catarrh of the mucous membranes show diminished nerve power in the tissues.

In health or disease there is need of an internal bath. This is best obtained by drinking a glass of pure water with one or two tea-spoonfuls of San Jak 30 to 60 minutes before breakfast, washing the blood. This passes quickly from the stomach and stimulates the bowels to increased peristalsis, overcoming constipation and its attendant ills. It is quickly absorbed and entering the blood stream bathes the cells of the liver and heart, then passes to the brain and washes out the cobwebs and awakens to new life every cell in the body.

San-Jak dilutes the ropy secretions and dissolves all abnormal crystalline substances that may be in the blood and urine. SAN-JAK greatly promotes elimination, creates downward peristalsis, stimulates a flow of digestive juices. It dissolves the sticky mucous in the mouth and throat, allowing the membranes to be bathed in their natural secretions. San-Jak is the great medium of exchange in the body, by enabling the kidneys to absorb and eliminate alkaline sulphates which are the products of intestinal decomposition and in renal weakness or the real cause of Bright's disease.

Man does not wear out like a piece of machinery by constant disintegration for he is self renewing. When he loses his ability to self-renewal or fails in process of making young blood, the nerve tissue is not sufficiently nourished and his strength and health fail.

SAN-JAK is the only medicine which will enable you to keep a perfect balance between elimination and renewal of the body. Decay of the body at any time of life is unnatural. Permanent waste of the system can be avoided by the use of SAN-JAK.

Rheumatism, catarrh and bladder trouble, the source of trouble to humanity, is due to a too high or low specific gravity which may be regulated to normal by taking SAN-JAK.

Swelling under the eyes, grayish white or waxy color of the skin denotes granular disease of the kidneys. The cure is SAN-JAK.

Some unthinking people may confuse you by arguing that the store which has no "advertising expense," can sell more cheaply! You know, however, that—excluding advertising expense—all stores have certain fixed expenses in common. These include rents, lights and heat, clerks and employees. These expenses have to be earned. The store that makes but a hundred sales a day must earn these expenses through the profits on these 100 sales. The store that, by adding something to these fixed expenses by advertising, makes 500 sales a day may prosper in a smaller per-sale profit. Would you rather pay one-hundredth part of a fixed sum—or one five-hundredth part?

Novel invitations in original verse were sent out to several young ladies to attend a lawn party at the home of Miss Winnifred Chaffee, west of town. Fourteen happy guests met at the opera house corner on Tuesday afternoon and were conveyed to the Chaffee farm via hay rack. On their arrival there, various games were played until six o'clock when a lawn supper was served. The evening was spent in story telling and the return trip was made in the same conveyance. On Tuesday afternoon Mrs. C. H. Mellon entertained the Royal Neighbors in honor of Mrs. E. E. Presley of Detroit. A short business session of the order was held, after which Mrs. Presley gave several piano solos. Then all were invited to partake of a real Royal Neighborly lunch. The dining room was prettily decorated with myrtle and the colors of the order—purple and white and the place cards contained a purple pansy. Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Schweitzer returned Friday afternoon from their trip through the middle western states. Both remarked that the prospects for a prosperous season for Michigan farmers looked very encouraging to them, especially when compared with the country they had just left. In North Dakota the crops looked well, but in Minnesota, Nebraska, Iowa and South Dakota they found the country much in need of rain and conditions were very discouraging especially in the last named state. Mr. Schweitzer said the hay crop was very light and the wheat yield would be about one-half the usual amount.

In Troy 32 per cent of the children in the orphanage lost their parents by tuberculosis, and they were exposed to it from the cradle. In Albany 42 per cent of the children in our orphanage show a predisposition to the disease. These children not only have to start life dependents, but are likely to fall down in their struggle to be self supporting. Here is dependency caused not by the spirit of pauperism; here are human lives made ineffective simply by the direct and deadly work of the tubercle bacilli.

was a favorite resort of Charles Lamb
in the days following his retirement

Care of the Bull

By R. S. SHAW,
Director Michigan Farm School.

"Endymion," Grand Champion National Dairy Show, Chicago, 1907. Owned by Heleendale Farms, Athens, Wis.

Ungovernable, ugly bulls are usually the result of mismanagement, except where the specially treacherous or vicious disposition is inherited.
As a rule the bull hands back to a man on the points of his horns the exact treatment accorded him at the points of the pitchfork prongs. The club has no place whatever in the handling of a bull and the same is also true of boisterous conduct of any kind on the part of the attendant.
Quietness and gentle but firm treatment are essential to the proper training of the bull. Never undertake to make the animal do anything without accomplishing the same. If there should be any question about the result do not undertake it. The man who is afraid of a bull should not attempt to manage him, as the bull will detect the first evidences of fear and begin to take advantage at once, finally becoming ungovernable.

Some Gasoline Engine Suggestions

By H. H. MUSSELMAN,
Professor Farm Mechanics Michigan Farm School.

Some one has said that the difference between a steam engine and a gasoline engine is that the ill of the former take minutes to detect and hours to correct while those of the latter take hours to detect and minutes to correct. This is largely true in that the gas engine ill is made up of minor difficulties which are easily corrected, but which are also easily overlooked. Stubbornness, a propensity sometimes attributed to the gas engine, is an indication that it is one of the most human of machines.
It might be added that this stubbornness is not due to any innate perverseness on the part of the engine, but rather a lack of acquaintance and consideration on the part of the operator. No machine will respond more readily to careful treatment and a thoughtful consideration of its pecularities.

The steam engine in the hands of a careless engineer will continue to run and pound until it is damaged past repair. The gas engine on the other hand will, in general, meet such treatment by a persistent refusal to start or run. This very characteristic is one of the safeguards against the abuse of the engine, but one should not wait for trouble to manifest itself in this form. There are some things about the engine that should have careful and regular attention.

Ignition troubles may be said to comprise about 90 per cent. of gas engine troubles. Broken connections, dirty spark plugs, weak batteries are ills with which even the novice is becoming familiar. Exasperating as these difficulties may be they can usually result in little harm to the engine itself since it will not run until they are corrected. Neither would it be necessary for me to state that black smoke coming from the exhaust indicates a mixture containing too much gasoline vapor or that white smoke from the same source indicates an excess of cylinder lubricating oil. It is the features of the engine which give no immediate trouble, but which through neglect will disable the machine in a comparatively short time that we wish to discuss.

On the other hand, no man should pursue foolhardiness and expose himself to danger unnecessarily. The great trouble is that most bulls are handled too little, being confined continuously for long periods in small dark and often filthy quarters. An attendant should move quietly around the bull, shouting, loud talking and quick moves excite the bull of nervous temperament.

While some object to the staff, still we believe it should always be used in handling the bull as a lead strap furnishes no protection whatever. We also believe that the stock bull which is not to be used in the show ring should be dehorned, even though the method may not be very apparent, as it modifies the danger quite materially. It is a regrettable fact that so many bulls just reaching maturity have been sent to the block because people were afraid to buy on account of improper handling and training.

will allow a leakage of gas. This is a serious fault and may result from any of the following: 1—poor lubricating oil. 2—Failure to turn on or have a sufficient flow of lubricating oil. 3—Overheating of cylinder. Only a good grade of gas engine oil which is intended to withstand high heat should be used. The writer has in mind an instance of this kind in which a chauffeur upon finding his cylinder oil exhausted borrowed some steam cylinder oil from a threshing crew. The deposit formed by the combustion of this oil rendered a large bill of repairs necessary. Neglect to turn on lubricating oil would be counted pure carelessness. The amount fed should also be watched and vary from 3 to 10 drops per minute according to the size of the engine. A better way to tell is to see that the piston is oily and presents a polished appearance. All engines under ordinary conditions of usage will not overheat. Failure to supply cooling water or see that the fan is running properly might cause serious results from overheating and consequently burning the lubricating oil or causing strain from undue expansion of the parts from heat.

The valves will also require some attention. When the engine is sent from the factory they are adjusted to open and close at the proper points in the stroke, which should be quite carefully done. Should the engine fail to deliver its full power the timing of the valves may be looked to as one cause of failure. Information as to the proper timing can be had by reference to the company's book of instructions which accompanies the engine or by consultation with the agent or company direct. The valves may also become worn or pitted with the heat so that in time they will not seat properly. A valve properly seated will show a bright surface entirely around its circumference. In case they are worn or pitted it will be necessary to have them reground to fit.

The fit of the connecting rod upon the piston pin and crank pin also should be noted occasionally. Loose-ness can be detected at either place
by shaking or moving the fly wheel slightly and holding the finger at once upon the connecting rod and piston or crank. In taking up the wear at these points be sure there is a sufficient thickness of "liners" between the parts to prevent clamping upon the pins when the nuts are drawn tight.
Lock nuts or some other means should be used to prevent these nuts working loose.

The crank shaft bearings should also be kept closely adjusted, but not so tight as to prevent a film of oil forming around the shaft for lubrication. The same suggestions for adjusting would apply to these bearings as to the connecting rod.

Keep other moving parts on the engine well lubricated and inspect the entire machine occasionally to see that there are no loose nuts or parts.

Caring for Injured Trees.

Trees that are scarred or bruised in cultivating should have the round bark cut away with a sharp knife and the wound painted over immediately.

Salt for Stock.

Don't forget that both the cow and the horse need salt. Give it to them in the ration or else keep it before them in the rock form.

Lincoln's Gettysburg Speech.
Mr. Lincoln was not the "orator of the day" upon the occasion of the dedication of the soldiers' cemetery at Gettysburg. That honor belonged to Edward Everett, who fulfilled his duties there by delivering one of his elaborate orations that kept him on his feet for more than two hours. It is said to have been a splendid oration, and yet it is clean forgotten, while Lincoln's little speech, prepared on his knee as he was traveling in the cars to Gettysburg, is known all over the world.—New York American.

Ingenious Etymology.
In an article in the Nineteenth Century the Rev. A. H. T. Clarke credits Professor Richard Porson with a philosophical jeu d'esprit. Porson was a great English scholar who, among other astounding feats of memory, could repeat all of Gibbon's foot notes by rote.

A farmer once meeting him in a public house challenged him to derive his own name, which was Jeremiah King, from cucumber. The farmer thought he had "stumped" the scholar, but Porson immediately accepted and won the challenge.

"Jeremiah King," he began, "Jeremy King, Jerry King, Jerrykin, Jerkin, Gherkin." Porson triumphantly concluded, "which is a cucumber."

Revenge.
Martha, aged five, precocious and observant, had been severely spanked
by her mother. She sat on the floor, her eyes filled with angry tears. Suddenly she rose with a determined look upon her little face and seized her hat.
"Where are you going?" asked her mother. "Out to tell all the family secrets to the neighbors," said the child firmly.—Life.

Mrs. C. F. Krisler, Goodrich St.,

a first-class kidney remedy. The chief symptom of my trouble was weakness of the kidneys, which was very annoying and inconvenienced me both day and night. I often had dizcaused by my kidneys. I had often heard Doan's Kidney Pills highly spoken of and I finally began their

A FREE Prescription ADVICE

From a physician of 32 years' experience in colleges, sanatoriums and general practice. Weak, nervous men, regain your strength and vigor.

So great was my sympathy for weak men in the early years of my experience that I have made it a special study, and formulated two prescriptions, one for men under 50 and one for men over 50 years of age. In my declining years, I want every man to have the benefit of my long years of careful study, research and long experience. I am now 73 years old and as strong and vigorous as at 40 and the rest of my life will be spent in aiding suffering manhood. I realize that my time is short, but will do all in my power to aid men and women who are helpless and seeking relief. I know there has been a great many disappointed when they thought relief their grasp, but let me send you my free prescription and booklet of private lectures to men which is the result of study since I began lecturing to student classes, way back in '71. Since that time I have cured many cases that are now pleased to recommend me.

YOU NEED AID. Let me help you to regain your former standing among men. In short, let me assist you to be yourself once more.

If you are suffering from falling memory, lame back or weakened manhood or nervous difficulties, LET ME SEND YOU A RECIPE in a plain sealed envelope that you can use in your own home. I am confident that you will thank me every day in your life after you have tested it for yourself.

Take advantage of this offer NOW before it is too late. Address me personally.

Music of Flapping Wings.

The slow flapping of a butterfly's wings produces no sound. When the movements are rapid a noise is produced, which increases with the number of vibrations. Thus the housefly, which produces the sound of F, vibrates its wings 21,120 times a minute, or 335 times a second, and the bee, which makes the sound of A, as many as 26,400 times, or 440 times a second. A tired bee hums on E and therefore, according to theory, vibrates its wings only 330 times a second.

My dizziness ceased, my kidney action became normal and regular. Foley Kidney Pills cured me, and I shall be glad to recommend them to others." For sale by L. I. Wood & Co.

The Fountain Head of Life Is The Stomach

A man who has a weak and impaired stomach and who does not properly digest his food will soon find that his blood has become weak and impoverished, and that his whole body is improperly and insufficiently nourished.

Dr. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY makes the stomach strong, promotes the flow of digestive juices, restores the lost appetite, makes assimilation perfect, invigorates the liver and purifies and enriches the blood. It is the great blood-maker, flesh-builder and restorative nerve tonic. It makes men strong in body, active in mind and cool in judgement.

This "Discovery" is a pure, glyceric extract of American medical roots, absolutely free from alcohol and all injurious, habit-forming drugs. All its ingredients are printed on its wrappers. It has no relationship with secret nostrums. Its every ingredient is endorsed by the leaders in all the schools of medicine. Don't accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this time-proven remedy of known composition. Ask your neighbors. They must know of many cures made by it during past 40 years, right in your own neighborhood. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N. Y.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are but an inflamed condition of the mucous caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

SEASONABLE IDEAS.

These are the days to be looking up and planning what will be wanted for the winter fruit closet. If you have never prepared any pickled cherries, try them this year, as they make a fine relish and are so easily prepared.

Olive Cherries.—Take one pint of vinegar and add to it a pint of water and two tablespoonfuls of salt, then add ripe cherries, with the stems left on, fresh from the trees. Be sure that the fruit is perfectly sound. In a few days they will be ready to serve and will keep nicely a year if there is sufficient of the liquid to cover.

A very attractive dessert is made by cutting rounds of sponge cake a few days old, then marking with a smaller cutter deep enough to scoop out. Fill this cavity with chopped strawberries or any fresh fruit, cover with sweetened whipped cream and decorate with a few fresh berries.

Rhubarb Jelly.—This is a quick and delightful dessert. Cut the rhubarb into inch pieces without peeling. To each quart add a pint of water and cook gently until smooth. Strain without pressure through a cheese cloth, reheat and sweeten. Measure and for a pint and a half add a half package of gelatine dissolved in a little cold water. When softened add to the hot rhubarb and pour into wetted molds. Serve with cream.

A Japanese ice cream is a dish unusual. Make an egg custard and thicken it with soft boiled rice put through a sieve; flavor with green tea and serve in glass dishes with cubes of preserved ginger on top.

A fruit pie may be made of any fruit. Bake the shell and fill with sweetened strawberries or currants, and dot with spoonfuls of whipped cream.

Pretty little boxes to hold either frozen mixtures or berries, make an attractive dessert. Take the sugar wafers and fasten them together with boiled frosting into boxes or triangles. When firm they are ready for the filling.

WANTS BENCHES TO REST

Novesta Lady Makes Timely Suggestions for Comfort of Public.

Mr. Editor:

Recently we read an article in the Chronicle from the pen of Harry Pinney, which was very timely, especially the rest room for Cass City. Many times we have heard the remark made by numerous lady friends that they should go to Cass City to do some shopping, but they were putting it off from day to day, for it was such a tiresome duty to perform after a hard morning's work in the kitchen. They dreaded to venture forth. We know of nothing more needed in Cass City than that rest room, except one thing Mr. Pinney neglected to mention, and that is at the fair ground which is up-to-date in many ways, yet lacking the most needed things—seats scattered here and there over the grounds where tired mothers can sit and rest themselves and babies. Other fair grounds have them, why not Cass City? We know of ladies who have staid home for this very reason and their husbands also as they did not care to go without their wives. Of course there is the grandstand but it is very hard to take a young child there for any length of time for they soon grow tired of one place as all mothers who have little ones can testify. If there were seats scattered about the grounds mothers could rest occasionally and the day would be a pleasure and none would be heard to say, "This is my last year at the fair; I am almost tired to death," as they have been heard to remark in former years.

We hope the officers of the fair association will give this their careful consideration. Other fair grounds have those restful places. Again we ask, why not Cass City?

MRS. R. BROWN.

Novesta.

Two Strange Diseases.

According to a well known medical authority, the seemingly strangest of all known diseases are called astasia and akathisia. Astasia is a nervous affection, and a person suffering from it cannot stand upright. If he tries he will be obliged to hop and jump whenever his feet touch the ground. Akathisia is the exact opposite of astasia, since a person suffering from it cannot remain seated. The moment he sits in a chair he is obliged to start up again. A person afflicted with akathisia can walk easily, but cannot sit, whereas a person suffering from astasia cannot stand upright and cannot walk in the ordinary manner owing to the contraction of the lower limbs.—New York Herald.
