K. O. T. M. M. TO INCREASE RATES

OFFICERS RECOGNIZE NECESSITY OF RE-ADJUSTMENT.

Subject Will Be Considered at a Convention in Port Huron Sept. 12.

Those in control of the affairs of the Knights of the Modern Maccabees have recognized the necessity of re-adjusting the rates of that society and a convention has been called for consideration of that matter on Sept. 12. It will be held in Port Huron.

It has been apparent for some years that the system upon which the current cost membership of the Maccabees was originally established, is wrong. The lapse of time has made apparent the defects in it so that now they ought to be readily appreciated by every member.

The history of the society has been identical with that of every other current cost organization of society which collected less than sufficient to provide for the ultimate payment of all its certificates.

In the early years, there are rapid growth and enthusiasm, low death rate and very small cost. As years go by and more and more of the membership become concentrated in the older ages, the death rate increases and a greater number of assessments are necessary to meet the mortality cost. With the increasing number of these calls, dissatisfaction arises among its members, lap-sation sets in and it is impossible to grow.

All fraternal beneficiary societies instituted 25 or more years ago were organized under a wrong basis of insurance. Several years ago, through the efforts of the National Fraternal Congress, a strictly scientific mortality table was prepared which met with the warmest approval and indorsement of the various state commissioners of insurance. Many societies in the National Fraternal Congress have already adjusted their rates to conform to this table; others are preparing to do so, among them the Knights of the Modern Maccabees.

When it is understood that the change is made mandatory by the attitude of the insurance commissioners, it is apparent that no other course is left open for these fraternal societies. Besides the re-adjustment guarantees more safety and protection to the beneficiaries.

A PIONEER BUSINESS MAN.

(From the Sandusky Republican).

Thomas Doyle, who has been a resident of Sandusky ever since its birth, and who has seen it grow from a wilderness to one of the most up-to-date and progressive little cities of Eastern Michigan, has severed his many years of business activities here and located at Novesta, Tuscola county Mich., where he has engaged in the general merchandise business, at the old stand of McCaughy & LaMay.

Mr. Doyle has long been a familiar figure on our streets, and is one of the best known men in this vicinity. His long identity with the business interests of Sandusky established an acquaintance that very few men hereabouts enjoy, and all of whom join in most heartily wishing him the best of success in his new venture.

Mr. Doyle, as soon as he gets nicely settled in his new field of labor, will move his family to Novesta.

HAVE YOU SEEN THEM?

J. A. Caldwell is the owner of six sets of jack screws and has made a good fellow of himself loaning them to so many persons that now he cannot locate a single set. He has inquired for them and requested their return, but nary a one has he found. The Chronicle is making this endeavor to assist him in recovering his property.

PREMIUM LISTS READY.

The premium lists of the Cass City Fair are now ready for distribution and any person who has failed to receive a copy by this time may secure one from the fair officers or at the Chronicle office.

The fair will be here within a few weeks and all are urged to plan now for a big exhibit in all the departments. The dates of the fair are a month earlier than last year—August 22, 23, 24 and 25.

HE WOULDN'T COME BACK.

The conductor of a train was having trouble with a German who would not pay the whole fare. In despair, he at length stopped the train and told the man to get off. This the German gladly did and running ahead of the engine he began to walk the ties. The engineer whistled for him to get off the track. The German turned around and shook his fist at the train: "You needn't vistle!" he said, "I won't come back."

JURY DETERMINES VALUATIONS WEDNESDAY

Twelve Citizens Decide That New Street in West Part of Village
Be Opened Up.

Condemnation proceedings instituted by Village Attorney Brooker in behalf of the Village of Cass City were conducted at the council rooms Wednesday. A jury of twelve gentlemen was selected to determine the advisability of taking private property for the public improvement of the village.

The improvement sought is the opening of a street, commencing at West Main St., just west of Chas. Wilsey's residence, and running south to the G. T. R. R. depot and the property involved belongs to Wm., Michael and Chris Seeger, Mrs. Jno. Scriver and the Cass City Grain Co.

The jury deemed it necessary for the public convenience that the improvement be undertaken and determined the valuation of the property involved. In the table below, the first figures represent the price asked by the owners, and the second and third columns represent the valuation determined by the jury. Mrs. Rosina Seeger has a life lease of a part of the property and the valuation of her share as determined on Wednesday is represented in the third column.

Wm. Seeger	$250	$175	$25

MORT KEYSER SHOT THREE TIMES WEDNESDAY

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Keyser of Wickware Victim of Tragedy in Flint.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Keyser and son, Mervin, went to Flint Thursday morning in response to a telephone message received Wednesday evening which stated that the former's son, Mort Keyser, had been shot at Flint and was in a serious condition.

The Flint Daily Journal contained the following paragraphs regarding the tragedy:

"Alleging that the affections of his wife had been alienated, his home broken up and his two-year-old son tossed out into the world without a home, Andrew Pixley, 58 years old, a fireman in the employ of the Flint Power Syndicate, sought to obtain revenge at noon today by shooting Mort Keyser, 34 years old, an employee of the W. P. Stewart company, who, he charges, is the author of all his domestic troubles. Keyser was shot three times, one bullet entering the chest and lodging in the spine, one penetrating the right arm and the

PENNY POSTAGE NEAR.

How will it seem to put one cent stamps on your letters instead of two cents as is the case now with first-class matter? It begins to look as though one cent postage would soon be established. After having been in office two years Postmaster General Hitchcock has been able to put the department on a business basis and for the first time in thirty years a deficit has not been reported at the end of the year. Instead he has turned back to the federal treasury $3,000,000 which has been the amount usually sent to help the department out of the hole and has a surplus to boot. The talk now among government officials is that the penny postage will be inaugurated within a year or so.

MISS MABLE CLEMENT MARRIED AT CROSWELL

Former Cass City Young Lady United in Marriage With Wm.
J. Warner.

A pretty wedding took place at the home of T. J. Clement of Crosswell Wednesday, July 19, at 2:30 o'clock, when their only daughter, Lillian Mable, was united in marriage to William J. Warner of that place. As the strains of the wedding march were played by Miss Estelle Little of Pt. Huron, the bridal party entered the parlor, preceded by Mrs. Howard Law and Milton Warner, brother of the groom. Next came the groom followed by the bride leaning on the arm of her father, who gave her away. Rev. Townsend of the M. E. church performed the ceremony after which the party wended their way to the dining room where a bountiful wedding dinner was served.

Mid showers of rice, Mr. and Mrs. Warner left on the afternoon train for a short wedding trip. Mrs. Warner was formerly a Cass City young lady, living here until about three years ago when she moved with her parents to Crosswell.

Thumb Notes

BAD AXE.—A peculiar coincidence happened at the hospital last Friday, which resulted in an operation being performed upon both Mr. and Mrs. David Beadle of Harbor Beach. Mr. Beadle brought his wife to the hospital for an operation which took place in the morning. About noon he was attacked with appendicitis and was operated upon that afternoon. Both are recovering.—Tribune.

UBLY.—Miss Christina Cameron, daughter of Supervisor and Mrs. Donald Cameron of Sheridan township, died at the Hubbard hospital Wednesday of last week. The funeral was held in St. Columbkil church Friday last and burial was in the church cemetery. Miss Cameron was aged 29 years and was a trained nurse of rare skill, and a highly respected and beloved young lady.—Courier.

SANDUSKY.—For over an hour on Wednesday evening the streets of Sandusky were illuminated by electricity. For the first time in the history of this city electric lights blazed on the street corners. People who were congregated on the streets at about 7:30 o'clock that evening were somewhat startled when the current was turned on. Many others had learned during the day that the test was to be made and had gathered at the plant. It now remains for the city council to select a superintendent for the plant and Sandusky will be no longer in darkness nor without fire protection. The National Company, of South Bend, Indiana, have completed the work specified in their contract with the city, and the municipal plant is now a reality.—Farmer.

NORTH BRANCH.—About one-fourth of a twenty-acre field of heavy standing wheat was burned on the Arnell farm, in Burlington township, now owned by Ernest Hodges, having been set ablaze by a spark from a pipe which A. D. Sterling, a harvest hand, was smoking or from a match with which he had lit up and had thoughtlessly thrown into the tinder-like straw. Mr. Hodges, who had just started to operate the binder in the grain, sought safety for the team and machine in an adjoining corn field. Neighbor farmers were soon at the scene and by heroic work removed the threatened fences and succeeded in extinguishing the fire before it had spread to other fields toward which, fanned by a

SWAT THAT FLY!

The hot season of the year is now with us and with it the common house-fly. As the hot weather advances this common pest will continue to increase rapidly, unless active measures are taken to prevent it. Flies lay their eggs chiefly in stable manure, and if this is left without screens or other covers to keep the flies away, great numbers will be hatched in and around every stable. Local boards of health should make rules and regulations governing this common pest. Flies frequent filthy places, like sewers, garbage cans, cesspools and vaults and then they come into your house bringing filthy germs causing such diseases as typhoid fever, cholera infantum, summer complaint and other intestinal diseases. All refuse such as manure, garbage, decaying vegetables and fruits should be well covered or screened so that flies cannot gain access.

Screen your doors and windows and keep your food well screened.

Keep the flies out and you will keep disease out.

CHAPTER IV.

From the hallway came gliding in the sorrowful figure of Socrates Primmer. He caught his breath sharply at sight of Lucy, and then advanced, with his hands outstretched.

"Ah, my poor, poor cousin Lucy!" he wailed.

"Oh, cousin Socrates!" Lucy cried. "How nice of thee to come."

Medders looked on with kindly amusement. He had long known of Primmer's unrequited attachment for Lucy, and to him it seemed that the best course to pursue was to allow Primmer to weep it out. Primmer looked mournfully at Lucy and said: "As Riley might have written:

"Now my heart is full of sorrow and my soul would fain repine
For another fellow's courting that old sweetheart of mine."

"But," Lucy smiled, "I am not old, and I am not thy sweetheart, cousin Socrates."

"Verily, Socrates," Medders said, "thou wouldst make a poor sort of husband, weeping continually about the house. Thou mightst dampen the clothes on ironing day, though."

"Don't mind father, cousin Socrates," Lucy said. "He doth but jest."

"Harry said for me to ask thee to allow me to show thee to thy room," Uncle Medders, Socrates observed, lugubriously. "And his sister will come this moment to greet poor, poor Cousin Lucy."

Primmer led Medders out. Lucy looked about her, wondering, for a moment, but whatever her thoughts may have been, they were ended suddenly when Harry hurried in.

"I'm so sorry not to have met you when you arrived," he said, seizing both her hands, while she drew herself away in shyness.

"I am truly glad to see thee, Harry," she told him. "Thy house is most seemly."

Harry looked quickly at her. There seemed to be an undercurrent of hidden meaning in her words. But a glance at her lovely face, framed in the sunny hair escaping from beneath the simple Quaker bonnet, was enough to convince him that there had been no guile in her remark.

Lucy, in her plain, almost severe, gray dress, with just the touch of white at neck and throat, and the soft gray ribbons tying her bonnet beneath her chin, was a marked contrast to the dashing beauties he knew. But with all her simplicity of manner she had that indefinable quality called "charm," which may not be acquired through the donning of gaudy raiment and the heightening of the color of the cheeks, nor by any of the extraneous aids to beauty which need not be particularized here. And such charm, also, may not be lost at any moment by the one possessing it. Charm in a woman is like magnetism in a man. It manifests itself unconsciously and naturally, so that others measure the possessor by it and not by his or her appearance.

Harry drew her toward him, still holding her hands. There was no mistaking his wish. Lucy, unsophisticated though she was, understood him. "Nay, Harry," Lucy said. "Thee

DOUBLY PROVEN.

Cass City Readers Can No Longer Doubt the Evidence.

This grateful citizen testified long ago.

Told of quick relief—of lasting benefit.

The facts are now confirmed.

Such testimony is complete—the evidence conclusive.

It forms convincing proof of merit.

Mrs. C. F. Krister, Goodrich St., Vasar, Mich., says: "I am pleased to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as a first-class kidney remedy."

The chief symptom of my trouble was weakness of the kidneys, which was very annoying and inconvenienced me both day and night. I often had dizzy spells and believe they were caused by my kidneys. I had often heard Doan's Kidney Pills highly spoken of and I finally began their use. They acted just as I expected, restoring my kidneys to a normal condition." (Statement given November 18, 1906.)

A LASTING CURE.

Mrs. Krister was interviewed on September 1, 1909 and she said: "The cure effected by Doan's Kidney Pills in my case has been permanent. My health was never better than it is at the present time."

know I do not think a girl should be kissed before she is wedded."

"All right!" Harry laughed, dropping her hands. "You always have your way with me. A girl ought to be mighty careful who kisses her after she is married, too, don't you think?"

Lucy smiled quaintly. Some of Harry's jests were a bit too flippant for her. Harry went on:

"Really, I'm mighty sorry I didn't meet you at the train. But, you see, I had a little trouble with my machine this morning."

"It was as well that thee did not meet us. It would have spoiled father's plans. We wanted to find thee in thy usual atmosphere."

Again Harry looked quickly at her. The surroundings were such as to make him keenly alive to any possible suggestion of some other meaning than her words implied. But Lucy's face was as serious as ever. She looked about the room, and sighed:

"Thy house is just lovely."

"It will be," Harry said, glancing apprehensively at the door of the room where Mrs. Blazes was waiting patiently for her hat—"it will be when it's fixed up. Some things have to be moved out."

"And will thy sister—Carolyn—will she show me about the house?" Lucy asked.

"Certainly," Harry answered, gallantly. "But you don't need her. Just make yourself at home. Go anywhere you like."

Lucy started toward the room where Harry had placed Mrs. Blazes. But Harry was following her to detain her.

"And in here?" Lucy asked. "What have you there, Harry?"

"There? There?" Harry stammered. "Why—why, that's just some old junk in there. Wouldn't interest you at all."

"A junk room? How odd!"

"Yes—I—you see—I used to have a fad of collecting junk."

The sweat was standing on Harry's brow. He knew that Mrs. Blazes could overhear him, and his brief experience with that lady taught him that she had a natural feminine aversion to being termed junk. If she should decide to assert herself by opening the door and making a few remarks! The thought was appalling.

"Come, Lucy," he suggested. "Let's go and see—and see the goldfish."

"Nay, Harry," she smiled. "Let me see thy collection of junk. I did not know thee were an authority on that."

"Later, Lucy," he said. "Later."

"Then I will peep into thy library," she decided. "Is not this it?"

She started to the other door, opening into the room where the Count was whiling the time away and contenting his soul with such patience as he could muster.

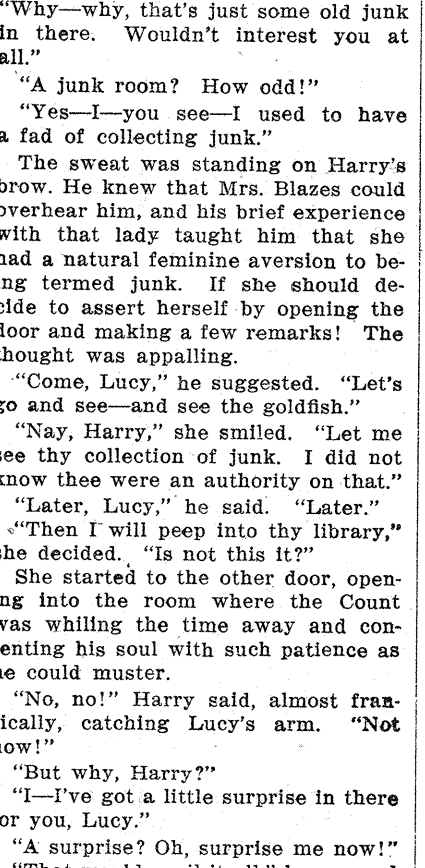

"No, no!" Harry said, almost frantically, catching Lucy's arm. "Not now!"

"But why, Harry?"

"I—I've got a little surprise in there for you, Lucy."

"A surprise? Oh, surprise me now!"

"That would spoil it all," he assured her, feeling that his ruse was working.

"How can it surprise me later, when I know it is to be a surprise, anyway?" she asked, with feminine logic.

"Well—it will be a surprise—and I—that is—"

"Now, Harry, thee has aroused my curiosity. I will see now."

"No," he told her, firmly. "Not now. Later."

"But now, Harry."

"Oh, come, Lucy," he said, with a man's usual lack of judgment. "Be reasonable."

"Ah, thee call me unreasonable! Oh, if father knew that already thee had called me that!" she pouted.

"No, no. I didn't say you were unreasonable. I just—just asked you to be reasonable."

"But that is the same thing!" She stamped her little foot with the words.

"Lucy, you misjudge me," he said, solemnly. "I simply was not ready for you to look in there yet."

"Alas!" Lucy almost wept. "To think that we have had our first quarrel already!"

Harry came near to her and murmured:

"Well, let us make up. One kiss to show me you forgive me."

"Nay, Harry," she protested, but not very forcibly. "Thee knowest I do not approve of that."

"How can you approve of a thing until you have it?" Harry wanted to know. And then—

Socrates Primmer, hat box in hand, appeared in the doorway, and what he saw sent his heart thumping to his boot heels.

"Woe is me!" he said, sadly. "The time to give her my present is not yet."

And as he turned to go he collided with Carolyn. That plump young lady accepted his apology gaily, and left him still delivering it as he went on down the hall, while she rushed to Lucy and greeted her effusively.

"We're going to have the jolliest time ever!" Carolyn cried delightedly.

"Well, Let Us Make Up. One Kiss to Show Me You Forgive Me."

"Come. Leave Harry to his own miserable company, and I'll show you your room."

As she turned, she remembered something.

"Harry," she said, "I want some pillows out of your room."

Carolyn rushed to the door of Harry's bedroom and seized the knob. Harry sank weakly into a chair and awaited the blow.

"It's all over," he said to himself. Carolyn tried the door, but it would not open.

"Why, Harry!" she said. "Your room is locked."

"Eh? Oh! What?" Harry said. "Locked? Now, who could have locked it?"

He fumbled in his pockets, meanwhile listening acutely for the sound which would tell him that Mrs. Blazes was presenting herself. But, blessings upon her head! She did no such thing. With a gasp of relief Harry said:

"I've left the key somewhere. I'll look for it after while."

Lucy looked at Carolyn with an awe-stricken face.

"Is that Harry's bedroom?" she asked, in horrified tones.

"Why, yes!" Carolyn answered.

"And I desired to see it! Oh! Harry, what must thee think of me. And how nice it was of thee to tell me it was only a junk room."

She went out with Carolyn, leaving Harry sunk dejectedly in a big chair. After the girls were gone he looked apprehensively first at one door, then at the other. Slowly he shook his head, trying to fathom the muddle into which he had plunged himself.

"If I had tried to fix this up for myself," he said, sighing deeply, "it couldn't have been worse."

But it could be—and was about to be—much worse.

CHAPTER V.

Unannounced, there entered the room a slender woman, whose face was half hidden by a huge, flopping, bushel-basket type of hat, the brim of which was draped with flaunting, flapping lace, and from whose crown lifted into the air a gorgeous array of feathers and ribbons and flowers. A tight-fitting gown, with the skirt so hobbled that her steps were painfully mincing, encased her form, and from behind her drifted the most remarkable train that ever was. She tottered in on her high-heeled shoes and peered about the place with a mingling of coyness and assurance that was amazing. Harry looked up, saw her, and groaned. Then he lapsed back further into the chair and mentally gave himself up to the inevitable with the words:

"Ye gods! Daphne Daffington!"

She looked him over coolly, and said:

"You!"

He nodded his head weakly. Things had been piling themselves up too rapidly for him to be able to face the situation with any assurance whatever.

"After all these years!" she exclaimed. "To find you at last. Where have you been all this time?"

"Oh"—confusedly—"I've been here and there—first at home and then away off."

"Well," she said, pursing her lips determinedly, "you're away off if you think you can shake me as easily now as you did the last time."

"I'm sorry, Daphne," Harry told her. "I know you have a right to think harshly of me."

"A right!" she said, scornfully.

"I know," he confessed, "that you think I treated you shabbily."

"Shabbily?" she sniffed. "You only call it shabby to ask me to go to a ball game, and leave me under an awning in a pouring rain—and that's the last I see of you in two whole, long, weary years!"

Harry squirmed.

"I guess that wasn't right, Daphne," he acknowledged.

"You said you were going for a cab," she accused him.

Harry jumped up suddenly.

"I'll go and get you one now," he offered.

Daphne stopped him with a steely glance, and demanded:

"Where's that hat I sent here?"

Harry stared at her for the moment with utter blankness. Then it slowly filtered through his brain that she was the milliner to whom Mrs. Blazes had telephoned. Daphne misinterpreted his stare for one of admiration, and with a remarkable imitation of shyness, she asked:

"Do you think my new gown is becoming, really?"

"It's a beauty," Harry informed her. "It's a beauty. How do you get it on? With a shoe horn?"

"There you go again!" Daphne said, accusingly. "You were always so full of sarcasm that you acted sour. I want that hat I sent over here."

"You never sent any hat here."

"Yes, I did. A yellow hat, trimmed with red popples. It was a duplicate of an imported model that I sold to one of my best patrons."

"I've heard of that hat," Harry mused. Then he said, brightly: "Why, you're not the renowned Mlle. Daphne, the milliner, are you?"

"None other," preened Daphne. "You see, I have risen to fame and achieved my ambitions, while you have been content to remain in obscurity."

"To my sorrow," Harry replied, "that is too true, Daphne. But about the hat, I really know nothing of it. There must be a mistake."

"It came here, all right," Daphne replied. "The party who got it wouldn't give his name. He just gave this number."

"Well, I wish such a hat were here. The messenger must have taken it to the wrong house. Now, Daphne, I want just such a hat as that, and I'll pay you a good price for it."

Daphne shook her head judicially, and fluttered her hands as though she had been asked to pluck a few stars from the sky.

"I can't make another," she said. "There aren't any more like the original. I had two models, but they're both gone. One I sold to Mrs. Blazes—"

"Mrs. Blazes!" Harry interrupted.

"Yes," Daphne said, "Mrs. General Blazes."

Harry looked at the door of his room, expecting Mrs. Blazes to come forth and enter the discussion. What construction Daphne might put on her presence, concealed, in his house, he feared to imagine. This, coupled with his old flirtation with Daphne, and her sensitively jealous disposition, would be sure to make things unpleasant for him. And, further, if she learned that Lucy was here, and discovered his fondness for Lucy, he knew mighty well what sort of a row she would kick up. He trembled at the thought. Daphne saw his trepidation.

"Why?" she asked. "What is Mrs. Blazes to you?"

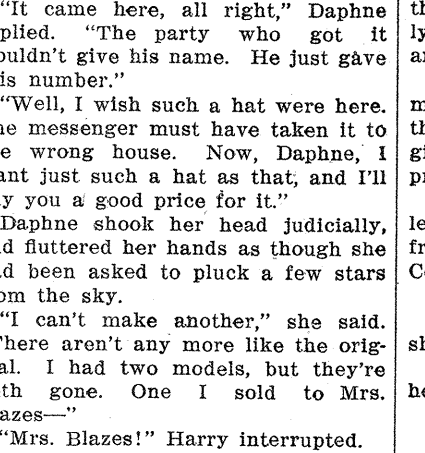

"Nothing," Harry said, fervently. "Absolutely nothing."

"Well, you acted queer. You always did act queer," Daphne said. "Anyway, the other hat was sent here, and I want to get it."

"But it isn't here," Harry assured her. "If it were, I wouldn't let you have it, because I want one like it myself. Can't you make one for me?"

"I might," Daphne said, assuming the coy air that she fancied to be so irresistible. "Why do you want a hat? Is it for your sister?"

"No, Daphne. You see, it's this way. I—I'm to have a guest—two guests. A young lady I'm greatly interested in—you see, it has been so long since we parted that I am sure you have forgotten me—and so—well, this young lady is to visit my sister, and—well, I've got to get that hat."

"Is the hat for her?" Daphne asked, interestedly.

"No," Harry blundered. "It's for another woman."

Daphne drew herself up with the pose of a tragedy queen.

"Alas!" she said, in denunciatory tones. "So you're up to your old tricks, are you?"

Harry wilted at that, and could make no sufficient reply.

"Well," Daphne decided, "I'll make you the hat—on one condition. I'll get it finished this afternoon, provided that you and I—just our two little selves—shall have one of our old time cozy, comfy dinners tonight."

Harry was aghast. This was too much. The more he tried to get out of his trouble the more new troubles were invented for him.

"Daphne," he said, "I—I simply can't do that."

"Two years ago," Daphne reminded him, "you would have jumped at the chance to have the dinner, and never have bothered about the hat."

"I know, but, Daphne, it is impossible. You see, these guests will be here, and I can't be away when I should be entertaining them."

"They won't miss you," Daphne said, cruelly. "You're not so very entertaining."

"I know it—and I'm at my worst today. So," with a hopeful cadence in his voice, "you get me the hat and we'll have that little dinner some other evening."

"No dinner tonight, no hat today," was Daphne's ultimatum, when from somewhere in the house came the voices of Lucy and Carolyn calling to Harry.

"Great Scott!" he muttered. "This thing's getting worse! They mustn't see you here."

"They?" Daphne asked. "Who are they?"

"One is my sister; the other is—the other girl."

"Oh, goodness, Harry!" Daphne almost wept. "I didn't mean to get you into trouble. Hide me, hide me! Heavens! If there should be any talk about me—just when my millinery business is doing so nicely. You ought to be ashamed to allow an innocent girl to take such chances as this."

But Harry was hurrying her toward the library door. At first he had unconsciously started her toward the other one, but halted, remembering that Mrs. Blazes was there. He mutely directed her to go into the library, and then said in a hasty whisper:

"Don't pay any attention to the man in there. Just hide yourself in there a few minutes, and I'll get the girls to go back downstairs on some pretext."

As the door closed on Daphne he left the room and so he did not hear from the library the voice of the Count saying:

"Well, py gracious! Little Daphne."

Nor the amazed tones of Daphne as she exclaimed:

"Why, Count! What are you doing here?"

To be continued.

It Beats the World to cure Rheumatism

Aching and enfeebled muscles should remind you of slowness of tissue repair. Eruptions of the skin and catarrh of the mucous membranes show diminished nerve power in the tissues.

In health or disease there is need of an internal bath. This is best obtained by drinking a glass of pure water with one or two tea-spoonfuls of San-Jak 30 to 60 minutes before breakfast, washing the blood. This passes quickly from the stomach and stimulates the bowels to increased peristalsis, overcoming constipation and its attendant ills. It is quickly absorbed and entering the blood stream bathes the cells of the liver and heart, then passes to the brain and washes out the cobwebs which clog new life every cell in the body.

San-Jak dilutes theropy secretions and dissolves all abnormal crystalline substances that may be in the blood and urine. SAN-JAK greatly promotes elimination, creates downward peristalsis, stimulates a flow of digestive juices. It dissolves the sticky mucous in the mouth and throat, allowing the membranes to be bathed in their natural secretions. San-Jak is the great medium of exchange in the body, by enabling the kidneys to absorb and eliminate alkaline sulphates which are the products of intestinal decomposition and in renal weakness or the real cause of Bright's disease.

Man does not wear out like a piece of machinery by constant disintegration for he is self renewing. When he loses his ability to self-renewal or fails in process of making young blood, the nerve tissue is not sufficiently nourished and his strength and health fall.

SAN-JAK is the only medicine which will enable you to keep a perfect balance between elimination and renewal of the body. Decay of the body at any time of life is unnatural. Permanent waste of the system can be avoided by the use of SAN-JAK.

Rheumatism, catarrh and bladder trouble, the source of trouble to humanity, is due to a too high or low specific gravity which may be regulated to normal by taking SAN-JAK.

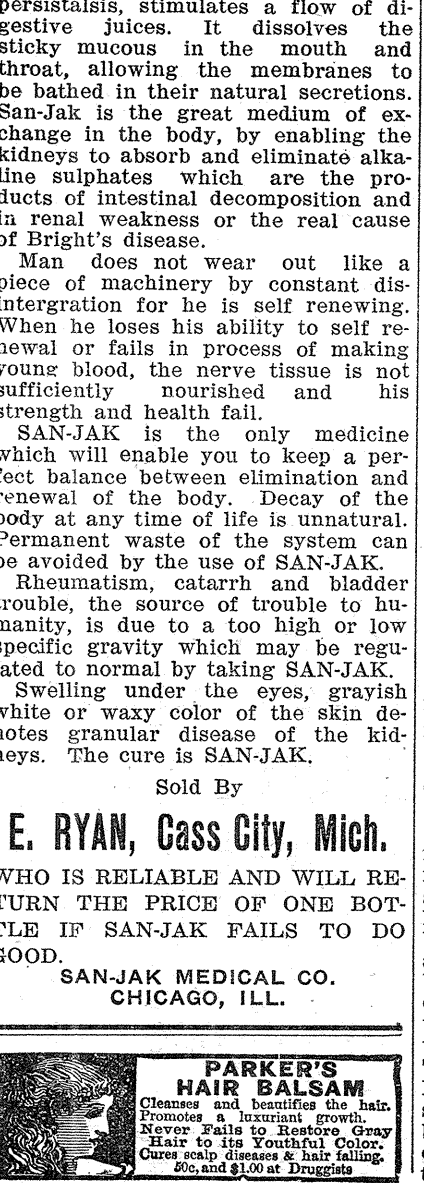

Swelling under the eyes, grayish white or waxy color of the skin denotes granular disease of the kidneys. The cure is SAN-JAK.

He had the goods and delivered them in fine shape—in all but one inning, when he failed to locate the plate with the bases filled and forced in the only run that Watertown was able to get."

Joseph Frutchey returned Friday from the Frutchey ranch near Hubbard Lake where he had gone to satisfy himself that Herb Frutchey and family and A. Frutchey had not been among the fire sufferers, no word having been received from them since the fires raged in northern Michigan. Mr. Frutchey greatly surprised his relatives when he announced his mission on his arrival at the ranch as none of them were aware of the seriousness of the fires which had swept a portion of that part of the state. In fact, they had only noticed a heavy cloud of smoke one afternoon, and little thought of the danger and sufferings which were being experienced by some of the citizens of the northern towns. The ranch is situated about 30 miles from Alpena and 15 miles from Hubbard Lake. Joseph Frutchey brought with him the mail which awaited them at their postoffice at Hubbard Lake and from their daily papers they gleaned the terrible details of the conflagrations. John Reagh received a letter recently from his father, Jas. Reagh, at Hillman in which he stated that it was also several days before he learned of the big fires.

DEEP DRAINAGE INCREASES ROOT SPACE

By R. J. BALDWIN, Michigan Farm School.

Fig. 1—In wet soil the roots grow near the surface and are left without water supply during drought.

Fig. 2—Roots grow deep in well drained soil and are not so much affected by drought.

Roots, as well as all plant tissues, require air, warmth, moisture in order to live and grow. The part of the soil which contains these things in the proper amounts will induce most rapid growth and soon become permeated with an interlacing system of rootlets. Unless soil is naturally underdrained by a porous subsoil, or artificially by tile, the lower strata will contain an excess of water, filling up the air spaces and making the soil cold and unfit for root growth. As a result the roots will grow as in Fig. 1, near the surface, where there is air and warmth. In case of drought later in the season, this will result seriously because the top layer of soil, where the roots are, will dry out and the plant, lacking deep roots, will suffer for the water it cannot reach. On the other hand, a plant growing in well drained soil, as Fig. 2, will develop a deep root system little affected by changes in weather. An additional advantage of a deep-rooted system is that the feeder roots have access to a food supply several feet below the surface, thus not depending entirely on the fertility of the surface soil. Heavy rains and spring thaws wash much plant food into the subsoil and unless subsoil conditions are suitable for root growth this fertility is lost. In this way deep drainage makes soils longer lived by increasing their depth, and thus bringing a greater supply of food within reach of plant roots.

Lime for Agricultural Purposes

By A. J. PATTEN, Experiment Station Chemist

Just at this time a great interest is being taken by farmers all over Michigan in the subject of lime for agricultural purposes. The practice of using lime is almost as old as agriculture itself. The Chinese were probably the first to use lime on the soil; it was also used by the Romans and by them the practice was introduced into England and France. In England the practice of marling the soil has been followed for centuries and often with very marked results. The first mention of lime in connection with American agriculture is found in the contributions of Ruffin in the American Farmer, in 1818.

Although lime has been used more or less extensively by the farmers of the United States for the past century its action upon the soil is not generally understood. Lime should never be considered as a fertilizer in the same way that barnyard manure or commercial fertilizers are. It can never take the place of these materials, but should be used in connection with them. Generally speaking, all soils contain a sufficient amount of lime to meet the plant food requirements of crops for all time; consequently the benefits from lime are shown in another way and it is usually spoken of as an amendment or modifier because it is capable of correcting conditions that may be inimical to the best growth of plants.

Lime may act upon the soil in three ways, viz., chemically, physically and biologically.

Chemical Action.—Lime acts upon the insoluble potash compounds in the soil and changes them into forms available as plant food. This action should not be depended upon, however, as a means of supplying the crops with available potash to the exclusion of commercial fertilizers, for unless the soil contains an almost unlimited supply of potash we are only hastening the time when the soil will be depleted of this form of plant food. Whether or not lime effects the availability of the insoluble phosphoric acid compounds is a disputed question. The most important chemical action of lime upon the soils is to correct acidity. Soils that have been cultivated for a great many years may become acid, due to the accumulation of organic acids produced by the decomposition of organic matter. Many crops are affected by an acid condition of the soil and in such cases are greatly benefited by the addition of some form of lime or material containing lime, such as marl or hard wood ashes.

Physical Action.—Heavy clay soils that puddle and bake after a rain are benefited by the addition of lime. It acts beneficially upon a soil in this condition by binding the fine particles together, thus making the soil more friable and easy of cultivation. It also makes it more open and porous, thus facilitating the movement of air and water in the soil. The action of lime on sandy soils is quite the reverse of that on clay soils, since it binds together the loose particles of sand and makes the soil more retentive of moisture.

Biological Action.—The decomposition of organic matter added to the soil in the form of barnyard manure, green manure, stubble, etc., is brought about by the action of the numberless bacteria that live in the soil. Certain of the soil bacteria living in connection with the roots of legumes, such as the clovers, vetches, alfalfas, beans and peas, are able to take nitrogen from the air and change it into a form that is available to plants. In order for these bacteria to accomplish the most good the soil condition must be favorable for their best development, and this condition is brought about by the addition of some form of lime.

There are several forms of lime that may be used for agricultural purposes and the choice of the form should depend upon the purpose for which it is to be used and also upon the price.

Burned Lime.—Burned lime is known also as stone lime, lump lime, quick lime and caustic lime. This form of lime is produced from the raw lime rock by burning. This is the most active form of lime and may be used at the rate of 700 to 1,000 pounds per acre. Much larger quantities are sometimes used, but the above amount should be sufficient in most cases. This form is usually obtained in large lumps and must be slaked before being applied to the soil.

Hydrated Lime.—When burned lime is treated with water it forms what is known as hydrated lime. This form is somewhat less caustic than burned lime and is always in a powdery form and may be readily applied to the soil. Seventy-four pounds of this form of lime are equivalent to 56 pounds of burned lime, consequently it should be used at the rate of about 900 to 1,200 pounds per acre.

Air Slaked Lime.—When burned lime is left to the action of the air it takes up moisture and carbon dioxide and gradually breaks down into a fine powder. This form of lime should be applied in about the same quantities as the hydrated lime.

Ground Limestone.—When ground limestone is used it should be pulverized so that at least 75 per cent will pass through a sieve of 80 meshes to the inch. The value of the ground limestone depends quite largely upon its fineness. This form of lime is not caustic and it may be applied to the soil in almost any quantity without fear of causing harm. However, the usual application would be 1,500 to 2,000 pounds per acre. One hundred pounds of ground limestone are equivalent to 56 pounds of burned lime or 74 pounds of hydrated lime.

Refuse Lime From Sugar Factories.—This form of lime, when it can be obtained dry and in powder form, is a good source of lime. It is partly hydrated and partly carbonated, and is consequently very similar to air-slaked lime and should be used in about the same amounts. This lime also contains a small amount of nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash absorbed from the beet juices.

Marl is found quite extensively throughout the state and many of the deposits are very pure calcium carbonate. In a dry, powdery form marl may be used as a substitute for lime and in the proportions recommended for ground limestone.

The burned lime, hydrated lime and air-slaked lime are caustic, diminishing in degree, however, in the order named.

When the lime is to be applied to heavy clay soils to correct the physical condition, the burned lime or hydrated lime are recommended, as these forms act more rapidly than the ground limestone. However, where the lime is to be used for correcting the acidity the ground limestone is recommended, providing it can be bought at a reasonable rate. It should cost, laid down at the nearest railroad station, not more than half as much per ton as the burned lime.

THE END OF TUBERCULOSIS

Hospitals For Advanced Cases.

By DR. WILLIAM H. WELCH.

It is not so easy to say exactly what has been responsible for this progressive diminution in the amount of tuberculosis, but Koch in Germany and Arthur Newsholme, the best vital statistician in English speaking countries, came to the conclusion that the factor that has done the most is what is called institutional segregation. That means the isolation of patients with tuberculosis, so far as is possible, in institutions. That should be emphasized today as the central feature of the campaign against tuberculosis, and the great need in this country is a supply of suitable hospitals for these cases of advanced tuberculosis.

CROQUETTES FOR OCCASIONS.

In mixing croquettes, it is much quicker done if four are rolled and dipped at a time, as one motion will crumb four and one motion will egg the same number.

Sweetbread and Mushroom Croquettes.—Cook a cup of mushrooms in a tablespoonful of butter, add salt and pepper and a cup of cold cooked sweetbreads cut in dice, a little lemon and onion juice and a cup of thick white sauce made with a cup of milk and a third of a cup each of butter and flour.

Fish Croquettes.—Take two cups of cold cooked fish, season with salt, pepper, a tablespoonful of chopped parsley, a little lemon juice and a few drops of onion juice. The cup of sauce for the mixture may be made with tomato or soup stock instead of milk for these croquettes.

Chicken Croquettes.—Chop the remnants of cold boiled or roasted fowl. If there is not sufficient meat, add pork or veal, boiled rice or mashed potato. Canned chicken will do nicely for croquettes.

Lobster Croquettes.—Take two cups of chopped lobster meat, season with salt, cayenne, a pinch of mustard and a fourth of a teaspoonful of nutmeg, a tablespoonful each of lemon and chopped parsley and one cup of white sauce; mix and roll as usual.

Veal Croquettes.—Take two cups of cold cooked veal, finely chopped; season with salt, pepper, onion juice and one green pepper finely chopped after parboiling for five minutes. Use a cup of white sauce and make as usual. Sweet croquettes of rice are very nice served with jelly or jam.

Shape vanilla ice cream in individual molds, roll in macaroon dust and serve.

A Joke and a Law.
Tradition is that the habeas corpus act was put on the English statute books as the outcome of a joke at the expense of a bulky lord. It was in the final division in the house of lords, and Lord Grey and Lord Norris were appointed tellers. Lord Norris was not attentive to his duties, and when a very fat lord came in Lord Grey counted the obese person for ten, at first as a joke; but, seeing Lord Norris had not observed, the other noble lord went on with the miscuit. By that means, says Bishop Burnet, a sufficient number of votes was secured, and the bill was passed. Long afterward the American colonists took over the act from England.

RECIPROCITY GOES THROUGH WITH EASE

SENATE PASSES THE CANADIAN RECIPROCITY AGREEMENT
BY VOTE OF 53 TO 27.

CANADA'S ACTION IS NOW
AWAITED.

When Accepted by Ottawa's Parli-ment, Measure Will Be Proclaimed Law and Become Effective.

The Canadian reciprocity trade agreement was passed by a vote of 53 to 27, after every amendment to it had been voted down. Thus the purpose of President Taft in calling the special session of the congress was attained.

The striking feature of the vote is that a majority of the Republican senators were against the measure as were the Republicans in the house, 24 Republican senators opposing the pact while 21 voted for it. Had the pact been in the form of a treaty it would have failed in that it carried by less than a two thirds vote. Being in the form of a bill only a majority was necessary.

The Canadian parliament has not yet acted on the agreement and with one exception the provisions of the bill as passed by congress will not become effective until the president issues a proclamation that Canada has ratified the pact. The exception to this procedure is in the paper and pulp section of the bill, which it is announced will become immediately effective when the president signs the law.

From the White House President Taft followed the votes on the various amendments and on the final passage of the bill with the keenest interest. "I am very much gratified and delighted that the bill is passed," he said. "It indicates the increase in mutually beneficial relations between Canada and this country."

Senator Penrose ventured the prediction that congress would adjourn not later than August 9 or 10.

HOUSE OF COMMONS GOVERNS

Constitutional Reform in England an Accomplished Fact.

The constitutional revolution appears to be an accomplished fact.
Great Britain in the future will be governed practically by the house of commons, with its hereditary upper house possessing only a veto with a time limit of two years. The peers find their one gleam of hope in the prediction that the next conservative government will overturn Asquith's revolution and restore the old constitution, but the radicals are confident that in such matters the hands of the clock will never turn back.

Ortie McManigal Near Collapse.

Ortie McManigal, the self-confessed dynamiter, whose statements implicated John J. McNamara, secretary of the Ironworkers' union, and his brother, James B. McNamara, as co-conspirators in the dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times plant and the Llewellyn iron works of Los Angeles, and numerous other outrages throughout the country, in a union labor war may never tell his story on the witness stand.

McManigal, whose wife was recently freed by court from the necessity of giving testimony of her knowledge of the alleged dynamiting conspiracy, is on the verge of a collapse, and his mind is said to be unable to fasten itself on the dynamiting case in any particular. It is declared.

If McManigal fails to recover his memory insofar as it relates to the conspiracy to which he confessed, the case of the prosecution will be knocked out, say labor counsel.

Other Nations to Join Peace Pact.

President Taft faced an audience at Manassas, Va., made up largely of veterans who wore the blue and the gray, within a few miles of the scene of the first great conflict of the civil war, and was applauded and cheered when he made a plea for international peace. He was covered with mud after a strenuous trip by auto from Washington.

The president declared that a general arbitration treaty both with Great Britain and with France probably would be signed within the next ten days. He added that he hoped within the next few days to announce that three other great powers would enter into similar agreements with the United States. He did not go so far as to indicate the nations that he had in mind, but it was generally believed that he referred to Germany, Italy and The Netherlands. Japan ultimately may come into the far-reaching peace pact, but the negotiations with that empire as yet are said to be merely tentative.

Ferdinand Finney Earle, of "affinity" fame, has found his third soul mate. The artist, according to letters he is said to have written friends in New York, is spending a honeymoon in Germany with the daughter of an architect of Walsingham, Berkshire, to whom he refers as Dora,
"the sweetest and dearest of them all."

Prof. R. H. Curtiss, of the U. of M., has been elected secretary of the Astronomical and Astrophysical Society of North America, to act in the absence of Prof. Hussy, who is now absent in South America.

A water spout that broke all records in size, shape and movement was plainly seen from Sparrow's Point, Baltimore, Md., and by the crew of the tug Hamilton in the Patapsco. It was the first spout seen in the river since 1903, when one much smaller and of a different form was observed. The spout was about 10 minutes in passing from the view of excited onlookers.

BLUE AND GRAY HOLD REUNION

Fiftieth Anniversary of First Great Battle of Civil War.

The Blue and the Gray marched across the fields of Manassas, Virginia, to meet each other again. This incident, unique in history, the meeting of Federal and Confederate veterans on the field where they fought a mighty battle just 50 years ago, attracted as witnesses the president of the United States, the governor of Virginia, home of the Confederate capital, and visitors from many states.

It was the crowning feature of the Manassas peace jubilee and reunion, which began with a sermon by Rev.
H. N. Conden, chaplain of the house of representatives, who lost his sight while serving in the Union ranks.

President Taft and Gov. Moon long ago accepted invitations to be guests of honor of the day, to review the lines of gray haired veterans and make addresses.

The reduction of the maneuver division, assembled at San Antonio, Texas, during the crisis of the Mexican revolution, has been practically accomplished in accordance with the orders of President Taft.

At the closing day of the meeting of the Michigan Association of Sheriffs, Prosecuting Attorneys and Chiefs of Police at Kalamazoo, it was decided to hold the 1912 meeting at Port Huron. Prosecutor Cowell, of Branch county, denounced the practice of "sweating" prisoners.

By grafting the shin bone of a dead man on a woman suffering from necrosis, thus practically giving her a whole new lower leg, the surgeons of the New York hospital for deformities have completed an operation unique in surgery. Up to now operations of this sort have been confined to experimental work done on dogs.

THE END OF TUBERCULOSIS

Value of Education.

By DR. EDWARD L. TRUDEAU.

The first and greatest need in the prevention of tuberculosis is education—education of the people and through them education of the state. It is evident that if every man and woman in the United States were familiar with the main facts relating to the manner in which tuberculosis is communicated and the simple measures necessary for their protection not only might we reasonably expect as direct result of this knowledge a great diminution in the death rate of the disease, but the people would soon demand and easily obtain effective legislation for its prevention and control. When a state has once become well educated and not before will the other requisites necessary to the control of the disease be forthcoming.

Not So Easy as It Seemed.

Twelve persons decided to lunch together every day and agreed not to sit twice in the same order. One of the number, a mathematician, surprised his associates by informing them that their decision meant that one and one-third million years must elapse before they would again be seated in the original order. Two men can sit together only in two different ways, three in six ways, four in twenty-four,
five in 120, six in 720, seven in 5,040, eight in 40,320, nine in 362,880, ten in 3,628,800, eleven in 39,916,800 and twelve in 479,100,000.—Buch fur Alle.

Your Neighbor's Experience.

How you may profit by it. Take Foley's Kidney Pills. J. S. Spencer, 1623 Beach St., Flint, Mich., writes:
"I have suffered from kidney trouble with dizziness every morning on arising. My kidney action was too frequent and when Foley Kidney Pills were recommended to me, I took them according to directions and in a very short time I was cured. My dizziness ceased, my kidney action became normal and regular. Foley Kidney Pills cured me, and I shall be glad to recommend them to others." For sale

Desperate Conscripts.

Conscription is not popular in the Turkish empire. Mr. A. G. Afialo tells in "Regliding the Crescent" how he met at the little station of Sesched, between Jerusalem and the sea, a body of ferocious looking ruffians wearing handcuffs and under a strong guard—all deserters. "Some idea of the abhorrence in which these undisciplined tribesmen hold their military obligations may be gathered when it is mentioned that several of the party had actually burned out of their own eyes with quicklime so as to render themselves useless in the field."

A FREE Prescription ADVICE

From a physician of 52 years' experience in college, sanatoriums and general practice. Weak, nervous men, regain your strength and vigor.

So great was my sympathy for weak men in the early years of my experience that I have made a study, special study, and formulated two prescriptions, one for men under 50 and one for men over 50 years of age. In my declining years, I want every man to have the benefit of my long years of careful study, research and long experience. I am now 73 years old and as strong and vigorous as at 40 and the rest of my life will be spent in aiding suffering manhood. I realize that my time is short, but will do all in my power to aid men and women who are helpless and seeking relief. I know there has been a great many disappointed when they thought relief in their grasp, but let me send you my free prescription and booklet of private lectures to men which is the result of study since I began lecturing to student classes, way back in '71. Since that time I have cured many cases that are now pleased to recommend me.

HUSBAND ADMITS HE SLEW HIS WIFE

CONFRONTED WITH FINDING OF HER BODY, W. E. LONSBERRY MAKES FULL CONFESSION.

DEED WAS COMMITTED SIX YEARS AGO.

Suspicion Was First Directed Toward Him by His Aged Mother, Who Told Minister Her Story.

Self-confessed murderer of his wife over six years ago, W. E. Lonsberry is in a cell in the Eaton county jail at Charlotte.

Several days ago he was arrested on the accusation of his own mother, who swore to a warrant charging him with having slain his wife on January 5, 1905. He steadfastly denied his guilt and asserted that his wife was not dead, but had run away.

However, the officers unearthed the body of the woman under the floor of a shed on the Lonsberry farm in Windsor township, and when confronted with this fact, Lonsberry made a clean breast of the whole affair.

Mother Tells Story of Murder.

Mrs. Lonsberry, the wife, disappeared six years ago and her husband gave it out that they had quarreled and she had left home. Nothing more was thought about the matter until about two months ago, when the husband's mother, who is 83 years old, went to her minister and told him that she had seen her son kill his wife six years ago. On his advice she went recently to Sheriff Donovan and repeated the story to him.

At first the sheriff was inclined to doubt it, but last week he and several deputies went to the Lonsberry farm in Windsor township and started a search. Mrs. Lonsberry, senior, insisted that her son had buried the body somewhere about the place, but just exactly where she did not know. The officers dug up the cellar under the house and searched two old wells on the farm, but without result.

They pulled up the floor of a sheep shed and began to dig. Three feet down they came upon the body of the dead woman. It was in a badly decomposed state, having been buried in lime. Nearly all the flesh was eaten away, but enough of the clothing was left to make identification possible. Besides there were two gold rings on one of the fingers, which Mrs. Robert Fulton, a neighbor, positively identified as having belonged to Mrs. Lonsberry.

Makes Clean Breast of It.

As soon as the sheriff got back after the discovery he confronted Lonsberry, who is 67 years old, with the facts, and Lonsberry announced that he was ready to confess. Justice Nichols was called, with Prosecuting Attorney McPeck and former Prosecuting Attorney Elmer N. Peters, and in the presence of these three and Sheriff Donovan Lonsberry told his story.

His wife and his mother did not get along well together, he said, and this started all the trouble. The wife had locked the old woman upstairs, and his demand for an explanation led to a quarrel. He struck his wife several times and at the last blow she fell. Her head striking the floor with great force. She lay there without moving and though he and his mother tried to revive her their efforts were in vain. This happened, he said, shortly before noon on January 5, 1905. He covered up the body and left it on the floor until midnight, when he carried it out to the sheep shed and buried it under the floor.

At the conclusion of his confession, Lonsberry said that he felt better now that it was all off his mind.

"The horrible sight of my own son killing his wife has been on my mind day and night," said the aged woman, "and in order to make my peace with God I thought it was my duty to tell the truth."

Steamer Huron Sinks Near "Soo."

With 200 passengers aboard the Star-Cote line steamer Huron went aground in a fog on a shoal off Richards Landing, Ont., and tore a hole 20 feet long in her bottom. A panic among the passengers was averted by the officers and all were transferred without mishap to the steamer City of Chatham, which ran alongside shortly after the accident.

A ladder was run from the damaged ship to the rail of the Chatham and in a short time all of the 200 were safe on the decks of the rescuing boat.

There's Many A Slip

Between "cheap" lumber and a bargain. Some people we know have read the glaring announcements in the agricultural papers, of lumber and sash and door bargains to be had by sending away for the material. And right there they slipped—or had one slipped over on them—for no matter how low the price, such junk as the would-be bargain hunter gets is never a bargain at all. They say a "sucker is born every minute" amongst we fellows in the country: that we're easy, and all that sort of rot. Take this tip from us: Don't buy lumber that you don't see first.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are but an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

BUILDING BEGINS AT COUNTY FARM

Old Frame Structure Removed to Make Room for Brick Addition Containing Several Rooms.

Ed. Weber of Caro was the only bidder for the construction of a brick addition to the building at the county farm when bids were opened as advertised and he was awarded the contract for $2,750 for the complete job. Supervisor McNeal of the committee of the board of supervisors having the matter in charge, is a contractor of long experience and after making a careful estimate himself, said the price was low for the job.

The addition will be 37x40 feet in size, brick with 12-inch solid walls, one story high, covered with best shingles, and includes all necessary plumbing fixtures, pipes and radiators connected to the heating system. Three chambers, a large dining room and kitchen are included, all will be heated by steam and the kitchen will be provided with range boiler, hot and cold water in sink, cupboards, work table, etc. The basement will afford ample storage for coal near the boiler, and the foundation and walls are strong enough to admit of raising the roof and adding a second story in the event of increased demand for rooms.

The old frame building which has been used as a kitchen and dining room for the inmates, is already removed and will be available for other uses when the new part is completed, which the contract provides must be by November 1, 1911.—Advertiser.

MARLETTE.—According to information given out on their recent junket through the Thumb the Saginaw business men are going to make a big effort to have another railroad run through the Thumb so that they can get a slice of the business of this territory. They realize that Bay City has the advantage with the new Handy Bros. road which is being extended through to the Polly Ann. To counteract this influence they propose to have the Pere Marquette extend its road from Sandusky through to Marlette or to Melvin. This would give them a direct touch with most of the towns of the county and would open a very fertile field for business. It is reported that the Saginaw business men will take up the matter in the near future.—Leader.

SANDUSKY.—The new law regarding the sale of liquor by prescription went into effect July 20 and the druggists of this city resumed the sale of same on that date. Under the old law the druggist was held solely responsible for all liquor he sold by prescription, but under the new law the physician issuing the prescription is held equally as liable as the druggist. Since the local druggists discontinued selling liquor some months ago considerable hardship was caused by the physicians being unable to obtain it when it was urgently needed in their practice, and were compelled to go outside of the county for it.—Republican.

MORT KEYSER SHOT 3 TIMES

third his left hand. He was taken to Hurley hospital. It was stated this afternoon that Keyser might be paralyzed in the lower limbs, but that he probably would recover.

"The shooting occurred in the upper apartment of the house at 1620 Beach street, in which Mrs. Pixley had been living since her separation from Pixley in June. Keyser was a boarder, according to Mrs. Pixley. He was the only boarder in the house Pixley went to the house shortly before noon and declared his intention of staying there until the domestic troubles had been settled. Within a few minutes after Keyser arrived and had started to eat dinner, Pixley, according to his own statement, pulled a revolver and shot at him three or four times. Keyser tried to get away and fell down the outside stairway at the house.

"Neighbors who heard the shooting went to the home of Deputy Sheriff Crego, which is about a block away, and informed him of the shooting. When Crego arrived at the house

Keyser was lying on the steps and Pixley was standing above him, attempting to reload the gun. Mrs. Pixley had her arms around her husband and was endeavoring to prevent further shooting. Deputy Sheriff Crego went up the back stairs and seized Pixley, who threw away the revolver when the officers laid hands upon him.

"On his way to the jail Pixley told the officer he was glad he had shot Keyser and stated that any husband would have followed a similar course under the same circumstances. "Mrs. Pixley, in her statement to the prosecutor, denied that there was reason for her husband's belief that Keyser had broken up their home. She declared that there had been nothing in her relations with Keyser to cause her husband to believe that anything beyond the lines of propriety had occurred.

"Pixley and his wife came to Flint from Rochester last March. Keyser has been a resident of the city about one year. He is not married. Mrs. Pixley was the divorced wife of a man named Fred Daniels, she stated, when she married Pixley three years ago. She is 32 years old."
