R. R. MEETING

GIVEN.

Situation at Present Looks Favorable for Extension of G. T. R. R. from Cass City.

The railroad situation at the present time looks very favorable for the extension of the Grand Trunk Railroad from Cass City to Bad Axe.

One-third of the right of way has been obtained in Elkland township free of charge and the remainder of land required for this purpose in this township can be secured for $1.800. The right of way in Greenleaf township will cost about $2,200. A committee of Greenleaf citizens is circulating a subscription list and expect to raise $1,000 towards the securing of the right of way.

At a meeting of the local improve ment association held Tuesday eve ning, the general opinion prevailed that the expense of securing the right of way should be spread as an assessment of 1 per cent on the valuations. A petition was presented which requests the village council to ed in the corporation. Dr. D. P. sis. meeting with good success.

25 YEARS OF MARRIED

Mr. and Mrs. Archie Mark Celebrated Silver Wedding on Saturday, December 23.

Thirty of the relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Mark gathered at their pleasant farm home in Elkland townshin Saturday. December 23, to celebrate the silver wedding of Mr. and

The day was a joyous and happy one. The guests were all immediate relatives except Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Benkelman. Mrs. Benkelman was bridesmaid at the wedding 25 years ago. Those present from a distance were John Mark of Jackson and Mrs. N. Karr of Kingston.

At noon, the guests sat down to well ladened tables, prettily trimmed in holly, and enjoyed a delicious dinner. A seven-section brides cake in pyramid form featured the table decerations.

Mr. and Mrs. Marks were married in the house which they now occupy. Their married life has been spent in Elkland towknship where they are well known and have many friends. Their home has been blessed by five children-Edward, Mary, Lena, Martha and Alma.

They received many pretty gifts of silver Saturday.

JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD

CHAPTER XIII.

N a single breath the face of Jean Croisset became no more than a mask of what it had been. The taunting smile left his lips and a gray pallor spread over his face as he saw Howland's finger crooked firmly on the trigger of his revolver. In another instant there came the sound of a metallic snap.

"The devil! An empty cartridge!" Howland exclaimed. "I forgot to load after those three shots at the cup. It's coming this time, Jean!"

empty cartridge. "The great God!" gasped Jean.

"M'seur"-From deep in the forest came the baying of the Mackenzie hound. This time it was much nearer, and for a moment Howland's eves left the Frenchman's terrified face as he turned his head to listen. "They are coming!" exclaimed Crois-

set. "M'seur. I swear to"-Again Howland's pistol covered hi

"Then it is even more necessary that I kill you," he said, with frightful calmness. "I warned you that I would kill you if you led me into a trap, Croisset. The dogs are bushed. There is no way out of this but to fight-if there are people coming down the trail. Listen to that!"

This time, from still nearer, came the shout of a man and then of another, followed by the huskies' sharp yelping as they started afresh on the trail. The flush of excitement that had come into Howland's face paled until he stood as white as the Frenchman. But it was not the whiteness of fear. His eyes were like blue steel flashing in the sunlight.

"There is nothing to do but fight," he repeated, even more calmly than be-"If we were a mile or two back there it could all happen as I planned

"They will hear the shots," cried "The post is no more than a gunshot beyond the forest, and there are plenty there who would come out to see what it means. Quick, m'seurfollow me! Possibly they are hunters going out to the trap lines. If it comes

"What then?" demanded Howland.

"You can shoot me a little later," temporized the Frenchman, with a show of his old coolness. "Mon Dieu, I am afraid of that gun, m'seur. I will get you out of this if I can. Will you give me the chance, or will you mouth when Croisset sprang to the head of the dogs, seized the leader by his neck trace and half dragged the team and sledge through the thick single room was lighted by a window bush that edged the trail. A dozen paces farther on the dense scrub open ed into the clearer run of the low hanging banskian through which Jean started at a slow trot, with Howland had evidently been employed as stools, a yard behind him and the huskies and a cracked and rust eaten sheet following with human like cleverness in the sinuous twistings of the trail which the Frenchman marked out for them. They had progressed not more than 300 yards when there came to them for a third time the hallooing of a voice. With a sharp "hup-hup" and a low crack of his whip Jean stopped the dogs. "The Virgin be praised, but that is luck!" he exclaimed. "They have turned off into another trail to the east. m'seur."

Howland had broken the breech of his revolver and was replacing the three empty cartridges with fresh ones.

"There will be no mistake next time," he said, holding out the weapon. "You were as near your death a few moments ago as ever before in your life, Croisset-and now for a little plain understanding between us. Until we stopped out there I had some faith in you. Now I have none. I regard you as my worst enemy, and. though you are deuced near to your friends, I tell you that you were never in a tighter box in your life. If I fail in my mission here you shall die. If others come along that trail before dark and run us down I will kill you. Unless you make it possible for me to see and talk with Meleese I will kill you. Your life hangs on my success." "I am glad that you changed your mind. m'seur. and I will not tempt you again. I will do the best that I can.' said Jean. "Within an hour it will be snowing heavily," he affirmed. "If they do not run across our trail by that time, m'seur, we shall be safe."

He led the way through the forest again, more slowly and with greater caution than before. Half an hour later the Frenchman halted where the banskians climbed the side of a sloping ridge

"If you could trust me I would ask to go on ahead," whispered Jean. "This ridge shuts in the plain, m'seur, and just over the top of it is an old cabin which has been abandoned for many years. There is not one chance his way up the ridge with the dogs tugging at his heels. At the top he swung sharply between two huge door. There was still but little snow the lee of the largest of these, almost denly on a small log but. "Mon Dieu, so far I have saved my hide," he grinned. "Now, m'seur, look for yourself and see if Jean Croisset has not kept his word!"

A dozen steps had taken him through a screen of shrub to the opposite slope of the ridge. With outstretched arm he pointed down into the plain, and as Howland's eyes followed its direction he stood throbbing with sudden excitement. Less than a quarter of a mile away, sheltered in a dip of the plain, were three or four log buildings rising black and desolate out of the white waste. One of these buildings was a large structure similar to that in which Howland had been imprisoned, and as he looked a team and sledge appeared from behind one of the cabins and halted close to the ear a moment before. "There is only wall of the large building. The driver was plainly visible, and to Howland's astonishment he suddenly began to ascend the side of this wall. For the moment Howland had not thought of Jean's attitude drew his eyes. The Frenchman had thrust himself half out of the screening bushes and was staring through the telescope of his With an exclamation he turned quickly to the engineer.

"Look, m'seur! Do you see that man climbing the stair? I don't mind telling you that he is the one who hit you over the head on the trail and also one of those who shut you up in the coyote. Those are his quarters at the post, and possibly he is going up to see Meleese. If you were much of a shot you could settle a score or two from here, m'seur."

The figure had stopped, evidently on a platform midway up the side of the building. He stood for a moment as if scanning the plain between him and the mountain, then disappeared. Howland had not spoken a word, but every nerve in his body tingled strangely. "You say Meleese-is there?" he questioned hesitatingly. "And he-who is that man, Croisset?" Jean shrugged his shoulders and drew himself back into the bush, turning leisurely toward the old cabin.

"Non, m'seur, I will not tell you that," he protested. "I have brought you to this place. I have pointed out to you the stair that leads to the room where you will find Meleese. You may cut me into ribbons for the ravens, but I will tell you no more!"

Again the threatening fire leaped into Howland's eyes.

"I will trouble you to put your hands behind your back, Croisset," he commanded "I am going to return a certain compliment of yours by tying your hands with this piece of babeesh. which you used on me. After that"-

"And after that, m'seur"- urged Jean, with a touch of the old taunt in his voice and stopping with his back to the engineer and his hands behind him. "After that?"

"You will tell me all that I want to know." finished Howland, tightening the thong about his wrists.

The door was closed, but opened readily as he put his weight against it. The through which a mass of snow had drifted, and contained nothing more than a rude table built against one of the log walls, three supply boxes that iron stove that had from all appearances long passed into disuse. He motioned the Frenchman to a seat at one end of the table. Without a word he then went outside, securely toggled the leading dog, and returning, closed the door and seated himself at the end of the table opposite Jean The light from the open window fell full on Croisset's dark face and shone in a silvery streak along the top of Howland's revolver as the muzzle of it rested casually on a line with the other's breast. There was a menacing click as the engineer drew back the

"Now, my dear Jean, we're ready to begin the real game," he explained. "Here we are, high and dry, and down there-just far enough away to be out of hearing of this revolver when I shoot-are those we're going to play against. So far I've been completely in the dark. I know of no reason why I shouldn't go down there openly and be welcomed and given a good supper. And yet at the same time I know that my life wouldn't be worth a red copper if I did go down. You can clear up the whole business, and that's what you're going to do. When I understand why I am scheduled to be murdered on sight I won't be handicapped as I now am. So go ahead and spiel. If you don't I'll blow your head off." "You may shoot, m'seur," Jean said

"Once more, Croisset-will you tell "Non, m'seur."

A deafening explosion filled the little cabin. From the lobe of Jean's ear there ran a red trickle of blood. His face had gone deathly pale. But even as the bullet had stung him within an inch of his brain he had not flinched.

"Will you tell me. Croisset?" This time the black pit of the engineer's revolver centered squarely between the Frenchman's eyes.

"You are good with the pistol, m'seur." "I would not profit by killing youjust now," mused Howland, seating himself again on the box and resting his chin in the palm of his hand as he looked across at the other. "But that's a pretty good intimation that I'm desperate and mean business, Croisset. We won't quarrel about the things I've asked you. What I'm here for is to see Meleese. Now, how is that to happen?"

Isn't that so?"

"For the life of me I don't know," replied Jean as calmly as though a bullet had not nipped the edge of his one way I can see, m'seur, and that is to wait and watch from this mountain top until Meleese drives out her dogs. She has her own team and in ordinary seasons frequently goes out alone or with one of the women at the post. Mon Dieu, she has had enough of sledge riding of late, and I doubt if she will find pleasure in her dogs for a long time." "I had planned to use you," said Howland, "but I've lost faith in you. Honestly, Croisset, I believe you would stick me in the back almost as quickly as those murderers down there."

"Not in the back, m'seur," smiled the Frenchman, unmoved. "I have had opportunities to do that. Non, since that fight head there I do not had opportunities to do that. Non, since that fight back there I do not believe that I want to kill you." "But I would be a fool to trust you.

Isn't that so?"

"Not if I gave you my word. That is something we do not break up here as you do down among the Wekusko people, and farther south."

"But you murder people for pastime –eh, my dear Jean?" Crossiet shrugged his shoulders with-

"It would bring Meleese up to this cabin-tonight."

"Are you sure, m'seur?" "I am certain that it would. Will you go?'

He rose and went to the old stove. It was still capable of holding fire, and as it had grown too dark outside for the smoke to be observed from the post he proceeded to prepare a supper of hot coffee and meat. leese and her people. He had assured himself that his every move was to be a cool and calculating one; that nothing-not even his great love-should urge him beyond that reason which had made him a master builder among men. As he stood with the snow falling heavily on him he knew that his trail would be covered before another day: that for an indefinite period he might safely wait and watch for Meleese on the mountain top. And yet slowly he descended to the foot of the ridge and headed into the plain, taking the precaution to bury his feet deep in the snow that he might have a trail to guide him back to the cabin. There would be no harm done, and he might get a glimpse of the light, of her light.

It came on his vision with a suddenness that set his heart leaping. A dog barked ahead of him, so near that he stopped in his tracks, and then suddenly there shot through the snow gloom the bright gleam of a lamp. pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitu-tion and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure Send for list of testimonials. Address: F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo,

We Are Cranks on Good Lumber

Yes, we know the price cuts a big figure. And you'll find prices nowhere lower than right here. But at the same time, we believe that it always pays to give a man just a little bit better than he actually pays for, a little better than he can get anywhere else for the same money. And we've won out by sticking to that policy, too.

There's a mighty big difference in the quality of material that goes by the same name. If you want the best at the same price you would pay for inferior stuff elsewhere, buy from us. We'll protect you in both quality and price. We are cranks on

REMEMBERED BY FRIENDS.

(Contributed.)

Mrs J. N. Dorman thanks the dear friends of Cass City who gave her the Christmas post card shower with the loving wishes writen upon them. She also received a large handbag filled with gifts from old friends in Marlette with instructions that only one gift was to be taken from the bag each day until emptied. Each was a surprise and planed to give pleasure and food for thought to brighten each day and enough of them to last over a month. Her heart is filled with gratitude to God who to so lovingly remember the in. This idea was carried out shut-in. by Mrs.

Isaac Cragg of Cass City, having passed the 62nd milestone on Christ-mas Eve, was almost deluged by a shower of cards, 75 having been received up to that time, expressing best wishes and long life. Now bebest wishes and long me. Now being confronted with the problem how best to express gratitude for being so kindly and thoughtfully remembered by so many of my best friends who are scattered from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast and know ing that the Chronicle enters many of those homes, would beg a little space to say that no gift could be more appreciated than these greetings of love. They will be placed with our most sacred treasures to keep memory bright of these loving expres-Yours respectfully, ISAAC CRAGG.

"Best on Earth" This is the verdict of R. . Howell, Tracy, O., who bought Foley's Honey Tar Compound for his wife. "Her case was the worst I have ever seen, and looked liked a sure case of consumption. Her lungs were sore and she coughed almost incessantly and her voice was hoarse and weak. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound brought relief at once and less than three bottles effected a complete cure." L. I. Wood & Co. May the Year of 1912
