MODERN TEXT BOOK CRITICIZED

NOT PRACTICAL ENOUGH FOR STUDY OF ARITHMETIC.

Teachers Hold Profitable Session
at District Meeting at Cass City Saturday.

Modern text books in arithmetic were criticized as not being practical enough for present day use and the need of better writing in schools was emphasized at the district meeting of teachers held at Cass City Saturday.

J. E. Kennedy, superintendent of the local school, presided as chairman and the morning session was opened with prayer by Rev. W. B. Weaver.

"The first essential in teaching writing the teacher must know the correct forms of each letter in the alphabet," said S. S. Purdy, Supervisor of Writing of the Saginaw Schools. "A good plan is to have the alphabet constantly before the pupils, either on a script alphabet chart or written upon a blackboard." Mr. Purdy drew an ellipse with a straight line through its center and explained how all the letters are formed by some part or parts of the same. He urged the teachers to drill the children in exercises of this nature frequently and insist upon neatness, accuracy and correct position.

Speaking on the subject of "Value of Oral Arithmetic," B. H. McComb, principal of the Kingston schools, emphasized the thought that the present method of text book teaching is not practical enough for every day use. As an example he said that it would be more profitable for a farmer's son to know how to determine how many rods of fence are required to enclose a field than to be able to figure how long it takes a dog to overtake a rabbit. Oral arithmetic assists the pupil to think logically, quickly and accurately. The discussion that followed was very helpful and many practical suggestions were advanced by the Misses Lillian Webber and Eunice Hendricks and Commissioner Bush and Superintendent Kennedy.

During the morning session, Miss Carola Fritz played a pleasing piano solo and Albert Tewksbury of Kings- town gave as a reading "Barbara Frietchie" by Whittier. Mr. Tewksbury gave a comic recitation in response to an encore.

The first subject of the afternoon session was "How to Teach Reading." Miss Agnes Gilbert, teacher of the county normal training school, gave some very helpful instruction to the teachers present. Her suggestions were illustrated by demonstrating classes in reading in charge of Miss Blanche Patterson, a graduate of the county normal and now a teacher of the first grade in the Caro schools. The classes were composed of seven pupils of the first and five pupils of the third grade of the county seat schools. Miss Patterson had a very sweet way in dealing with the children who seemed very bright and clever and the methods displayed seemed very practical.

"What the Public Expects of Our Schools" was the subject of J. C. Corkins' address. He said that the effort of the teachers should be to get the greatest efficiency of purpose for the money, time and energy expended in behalf of the pupils. A 14-year-old child should be able to write a business letter correctly spelled, punctuated and capitalized; have a thorough knowledge of arithmetic through fractions and percentage; have a general knowledge of geography in regard to the location of cities, lakes, rivers, etc., especially of those in the United States and Michigan; also a general idea of United States history. According to Mr. Corkins' views, the boys should be taught by men teachers only, and every pupil, rich or poor, bright or dull, should be treated impartially.

Miss Hazel Mead sang a solo at the afternoon session and responded to an encore.

DISEASE OF HONEY BEES.

The United States Department of Agriculture calls attention to the fact that American foul brood has been found to exist in Tuscola county. The Department has no means of knowing how long the disease has existed in the region, but desires to notify bee keepers of the trouble and to suggest that, if not already informed concerning the disease, they inform themselves at once. Very frequently colonies of bees are destroyed by diseases and the loss is attributed by the bee keeper to some other cause. Farmers' Bulletin No. 442, The Treatment of Bee Diseases, gives a description of the brood diseases and methods of treatment. It will be sent free on request to the Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Attention is also called to the fact that brood diseases do not at all injure honey for human consumption, so that there need be no fear on the part of purchasers of honey.

Handy Bros. are Holding Meetings with Farmers and Citizens of Sanilac County.

Handy Bros. are holding meetings of farmers and others in Sanilac county with what appears to be the intention of extending the D. B. C. & W. to Sandusky, and possibly to Port Huron, provided they receive sufficient encouragement from the property owners in line to be benefited by such a road.

Representatives of the firm together with their engineer, general freight agent and Walter Wixson, their attorney, were in Crosswell for a short time last week where they met a number of business men. They briefly outlined their plans, but decided to enter into correspondence with the Board of Trade and put up to them a definite proposition.

At Sandusky they met with the transportation committee of the Sandusky Improvement association Wednesday morning and details were more fully discussed. The outcome of this conference was that the railroad people asked that Sandusky raise $10,000 and provide terminals; the farmers residing in proximity to the line on both sides of the city for a distance of six miles be assessed by a graduating scale—that is, abutting property be taxed $4 per acre, and so on down for a distance of three miles on either side of the line. Where farms are crossed by the road the tax $2 per acre.

SEEKING MEDICINE TAKES STRYCHNINE

FORMER CASS CITY MAN DIES IN SAGINAW.

Edward Crawford Dies as Result of Mistake as to Contents of Bottle.

Edward Crawford, for several years a resident of Cass City, died at his home in Saginaw Monday afternoon, after taking a dose of strychnine which he had mistaken for medicine. He was 51 years old and a member of Elkland Arbor. A. O. O. G.

The Saginaw Courier-Herald prints the following article regarding his death:

"Edward Crawford, aged 51 years, died at his home, 934 South Weadock avenue, yesterday afternoon, after taking a dose of strychnine which he had mistaken for medicine. He had been in ill health for several months and was taking prescribed medicine which was in a bottle. After the medicine had been exhausted the bottle was used to hold the poison, which Mrs. Crawford had used to kill rats. Mrs. Crawford had left the house to get some bromo seltzer for her husband when he was suddenly taken with an acute pain in his stomach. He went for his usual medicine but finding his mistake stumbled to the door and hailed a passerby who called Dr. English. Nothing could be done for him, however.

"Mr. Crawford was born in New Jersey in 1860. He came to this city four years ago. He is survived by his wife and two children, Mamie and Clarence; his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Crawford, of Pontiac; a brother and three sisters, Emanuel, Margaret and Etta, of Pontiac, and Anna, of Detroit."

APPRECIATES NEWSPAPERS

Geo. S. Lovelace Extends Thanks for Assistance Rendered in Trying Period of Society.

George S. Lovelace, Great Commander of the Knights of the Modern Maccabees writes the Chronicle under date of Feb. 3 as follows:

"Now that our readjustment of rates is completed, it is my sincere pleasure to extend to you and to the press of Michigan generally, our heartfelt appreciation of the assistance rendered during a most trying period in the affairs of our society.

"Although we did everything possible to thoroughly inform our members as to the necessity of the changes made, still our best efforts would hardly have availed were it not for the stand taken by the newspapers of the state. Your assistance helped us to transfer at least 75 per cent of our membership to a safe and sound basis of protection and today the Knights of the Modern Maccabees are fully 100 per cent better and stronger than ever before.

"For this, we beg to acknowledge our heartfelt appreciation for your kindness."

MAIL CARRIER SERVICE FOR TOWNS

CITIZENS ARE URGED TO TAKE PROMPT ACTION.

City and County People Are Favored,
but Town People Suffer Unjust Discrimination.

The business men and their organizations in every town which does not have mail carrier service are being urged to bring immediate and energetic influence to bear upon their United States Senators and Representatives in Congress to persuade them to work and vote for legislation extending mail delivery carrier service to all towns having 1000 or more inhabitants.

No letter carrier is employed in Cass City and the post office profits are spent elsewhere, while the business men suffer inconvenience and financial loss by being compelled to collect and deliver their own mail. The postmasters at all presidential post offices should have competent carrier assistance. In the large cities free delivery is established, and the rural delivery has been given the country residents, but town people suffer unjust discrimination. Every progressive town should at once petition Congress for mail carrier service.

Last year there was a surplus in the postal funds and the government is now ready to create a new and economical mail delivery system as soon as the people in the towns will evidence their demand for modern facilities such as are enjoyed by the city and rural residents.

The report just issued by the Post Office Department says:

"The City Delivery Service is now in operation in 1,541 cities, serving more than 46,000,000 people. On the 42,000 rural routes 20,000,000 people receive their mail from rural carriers. This leaves a considerable percentage of our people, the majority of whom reside in towns and villages, without any form of Free Delivery Service, and under the present laws there is no way by which the department can relieve this inequality. x x x It is believed, therefore, that an experimental service should be authorized."

To provide for the experimental inauguration of a town mail delivery service in communities having 1,000 to 10,000 inhabitants, a bill known as the Griest bill is now pending before the Committee on Post Office and Post Roads of the House of Representatives.

Prompt action commending the establishment of a town mail delivery system must be taken to secure the enactment of such legislation during present session of Congress. Residents of towns are urged to adopt resolutions in their local organizations, present petitions of citizens to their congressmen and write letters to congressmen urging action.

COOKE WINS MATCH

Secures Two Falls Out of Three
from His Opponent.

About seventy-five people attended the wrestling match which was held at Doerr's hall Monday evening. The contestants were Edward Fitch and Norman Cooke. As this was the first match in town for some time, not a little interest was centered on the contest.

The crowd was very enthusiastic, both men were applauded vigorously. Marc Wickware, the referee, acquitted himself nobly, his decisions being received favorably by the spectators. The men were equal in weight, their net tonnage being about 175 pounds each.

Time was called at 9:15 p. m. Fitch secured the first fall in 45 seconds. Cooke got the better of Fitch in the next two falls, putting his shoulders to the mat in 2 1/2 and 4 1/2 minutes. The match went through without a trace of unsportsmanlike conduct.

WENT LIKE HOT CAKES.

E. W. Jones advertised kitchen lamps at 15 cents as a special for Saturday, in the Chronicle last week. The entire lot of 71 lamps was sold before 4:00 p. m. and Mr. Jones says that he could easily have sold 100 of them during the day if that many had been in stock.

And yet there are a few people left who say it doesn't pay to advertise.

PLEASANT GATHERING AT PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Reception for New Pastor and His Wife and a Farewell for Mr. and Mrs. H. L. McDermott.

Tuesday evening a large company of people, the greater part of whom were members and attendants of the Presbyterian church, gathered at the Presbyterian church parlors to attend a reception given in honor of the new pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. S. H. Edgumbe and a farewell for Mr. and Mrs. H. L. McDermott, who leave next Monday with their children for Los Angeles, California.

The early part of the evening was devoted to a social hour which gave opportunity for the guests to meet Mr. and Mrs. Edgumbe and to enjoy mingling with one another. F. E. Kelsey then called the gathering to order and announced the numbers of a very delightful program in which Mesdames Schenck, Wickware and Pinney sang a trio; Laverne Hays and Dorothy McKim recited "Two Little Bluebells;" Misses Hazel Mead and Ora Higgins sang a duet; Miss Jessie Duncanson gave the reading "The Picture on the Wall;" and Mesdames Schenck and Pinney sang a duet. All the numbers were greatly enjoyed and generously applauded. All responded with a second selection except the last number.

Mrs. A. J. Knapp, in behalf of the Ladies Aid and members of the church, presented Mr. and Mrs. McDermott with a set of silver spoons, and Mr. McDermott was tendered a fountain pen as a gift from members of the Sunday school. Mrs. Knapp spoke particularly of Mr. McDermott's excellent work in all the departments of the church, expressed the regret of the community in losing so excellent a family and voiced the sentiment of those assembled that they may find happiness and health in their new surroundings.

Mr. McDermott responded, and after expressing his gratitude, said that he regretted leaving Cass City because of the many friends he would leave here. He also spoke of the work of the church and said that it would best progress when every one did his part instead of leaving all the work to a few persons. The local church he continued was never in a better condition than at the present time and the outlook for a successful year under the new pastorate was very promising.

When the company adjourned to the dining room to enjoy a self-serve lunch, a beautiful spectacle presented itself. Six young ladies, clothed in white, were seated around a table covered with snowy linen and decorated with carnations and ferns. The electric lights, directly above the table and decorated with festoons of pink crepe paper, gave a dainty tint to the scene. The ladies in charge of the refreshments were: Misses Irene Tindale, Mamie Brook- er, Mabel Robinson, Stella Doerr, Lillian Goff and Bessie Miller.

CANDIDATES IN SIGHT FOR COUNTY OFFICES

POLITICAL GOSSIP OF INTEREST TO THE VOTERS.

Numerous Names Suggested for Nomination for Officers While Others
May Not Be Opposed.

The Caro Advertiser says: Political gossip relating to county affairs is beginning to claim the attention of persons most interested, and thus early numerous names are heard mentioned in connection with the several offices to be filled at the general election to be held next November.

The prospective candidates themselves are coy about the matter, but observing persons have noticed some of them in attendance upon the various institutes for farmers held in several villages of the county during the past few weeks, and while none have publicly announced their desire to serve the public, two or more names have been heard in connection with several of the official positions slated to change in person next January.

Judge Clark is on the last year of his first term as Judge of Probate, and has handled the perplexing cares of the office with such marked fidelity and ability, that no name has been suggested to oppose him for the nomination on the republican ticket.

The claim of the sheriff of the county to a second term has been generally recognized in the past as just, and there is no present prospect of a repetition of the big scrap among republican candidates which occurred two years ago. CHAPTER III.

I Might Have Known it. The minute I had consented I regretted it. After all, what were Jimmy's troubles to me? Why should I help him impose on an unsuspecting elderly woman? And it was only putting off discovery anyhow. Sooner or later, she would learn of the divorce, and—just at that instant my eyes fell on Mr. Harbison—Tom Harbison, as Anne called him. He was looking on with an amused, half-puzzled smile, while people were rushing around hiding the roulette wheel and things of which Miss Caruthers might disapprove, and Betty Mercer was on her knees winding up a toy bear that Max had brought her. What would he think? It was evident that he thought badly of us already—that he was contemptuously amused, and then to have to ask him to lend himself to the deception!

With a gasp I hurried myself after Jimmy, only to hear a strange voice in the hall and to know that I was too late. I was in for it, whatever was coming. It was Aunt Selina who was coming—along the hall, followed by Jim, who was mopping his face and trying not to notice the paralyzed silence in the library.

Aunt Selina met me in the doorway. To my frantic eyes she seemed to tower above us by at least a foot, and beside her Jimmy was a red, perspiring cherub.

"Here she is," Jimmy said, from behind a temporary eclipse of black cloak and traveling bag. He was on top of the situation now, and he was mendaciously cheerful. He had not said, "Here is my wife." That would have been a lie. No, Jimmy merely said, "Here she is." If Aunt Selina chose to think me Bella, was it not her responsibility? And if I chose to accept the situation, was it not mine? Dallas Brown came forward gravely as Aunt Selina folded over and kissed me, and surreptitiously patted me with one hand while he held out the other to Miss Caruthers. I loathed him!

"We always expect something unusual from James, Miss Caruthers," he said, with his best manner, "but this—this is beyond our wildest dreams."

Well, it's too awful to linger over. Anne took her upstairs and into Bella's bedroom. It was a fancy of Jim's to leave that room just as Bella had left it, dusty dance cards and favors hanging around and a pair of discarded slippers under the bed. I don't think it had been swept since Bella left it. I believe in sentiment, but I like it brushed and dusted and the cobwebs off of it, and when Aunt Selina put down her bonnet, it stirred up a gray white cloud that made her cough. She did not say anything, but she looked around the room grimly, and I saw her run her finger over the back of a chair before she let Hannah, the maid, put her cloak on it.

Anne looked frightened. She ran into Bella's bath and wet the end of a towel and when Hannah was changing Aunt Selina's collar—her concession to evening dress—Anne wiped off the obvious places on the furniture.

"What's that young woman's name?" she asked me sharply, when Anne had taken the towel out to hide it.

"Anne Brown, Mrs. Dallas Brown," I replied meekly. Every one replied meekly to Aunt Selina.

"Does she live here?"

"Oh, no," I said airily. "They are here to dinner, she and her husband. They are old friends of Jim's—and mine."

"Seems to have a good eye for dirt," said Aunt Selina and went on fastening her brooch. When she was finally ready, she took a bead purse from somewhere about her waist and took out a half dollar. She held it up before Hannah's eyes.

"Tomorrow morning," she said sternly, "you take off that white cap and that fold-over apron and that black henrietta cloth, and put on a calico wrapper. And when you've got this room aired and swept, Mrs. Wilson will give you this."

Hannah took two steps back and Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed. Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are but an inflamed condition of the mucous membrane, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

caught hold of a chair; she stared helplessly from Aunt Selina to the half dollar, and then at me. Anne was trying not to catch my eye.

"And another thing," Aunt Selina said, from the head of the stairs, "I sent those towels over from Ireland. Tell her to wash and bleach the one Mrs. What's-her-name Brown used as a duster."

Anne was quite crushed as we went down the stairs. I turned once, half-way down, and her face was a curious mixture of guilt and hopeless wrath. Over her shoulder I could see Hannah, wide-eyed and puzzled, staring after us.

Jim presented everybody, and then he went into the den and closed the door and we heard him unlock the cellarette. Aunt Selina looked at Leila's bare shoulders and said she guessed she didn't take cold easily, and conversation rather languished. Max Reed was looking like a thunder-cloud, and he came over to me with a lowering expression that I had learned to dread in him.

"What fool nonsense is this?" he demanded. "What in the world possessed you, Kit, to put yourself in such an equivocal position? Unless"—he stopped and turned a little white—"unless you are going to marry Jim."

I am sorry for Max. He is such a nice boy, and good looking, too, if only he were not so fierce, and did not want to make love to me. No matter what I do, Max always disapproves of it. I have always had a deeply rooted conviction that if I should ever in a weak moment marry Max, he would disapprove of that, too, before I had done it very long.

"Are you?" he demanded, narrowing his eyes—a sign of unusually bad humor.

"Am I what?"

"Going to marry him?"

"If you mean Jim," I said with dignity. "I haven't made up my mind yet. Besides, he hasn't asked me."

Aunt Selina had been talking woman's suffrage in front of the fireplace, but now she turned to me.

"Is this the vase Cousin Jane Whitcomb sent you as a wedding present?" she demanded, indicating a hideous urn-shaped affair on the mantel. It came to me as an inspiration that Jim had once said it was an ancestral Guessed She Didn't Take Cold Easily.

urn, so I said without hesitation that it was. And because there was a pause and every one was looking at us, I added that it was a beautiful thing.

Aunt Selina sniffed. "Hideous!" she said. "It looks like Cousin Jane, shape and coloring."

Then she looked at it more closely, pounced on it, turned it upside down and shook it. A card fell out, which Dallas picked up and gave her with a bow. Jim had come out of the den and was dancing wildly around and beckoning to me. By the time I had made out that that was not the vase Cousin Jane had sent us as a wedding present, Aunt Selina had examined the card. Then she glared across at me and, stooping, put the card in the fire. I did not understand at all, but I knew I had in some way done the unforgivable thing. Later, Dal told me it was her card, and that she had sent the vase to Jim at Christmas, with a generous check inside. When she straightened from the fireplace, it was to a new theme, which she attacked with her usual vigor. The vase incident was over, but she never forgot it. She proved that she never did when she sent me two urn-shaped vases with Paul and Virginia on them, when I—that is, later on.

"The cause in England has made great strides," she announced from the fire place. "Soon the hand that rocks the cradle will be the hand that actually rules the world." Here she looked at me.

"I'm not up on such things," Max said blandly, having recovered some of his good humor, "but— isn't it usually a foot that rocks the cradle?"

Aunt Selina turned on him and Mr. Harbison, who were standing together, with a snort.

"What have you, or you, ever done for the independence of woman?" she demanded.

Mr. Harbison smiled. He had been looking rather grave until then. "We have at least remained unmarried," he retorted. And then dinner was again announced.

He was to take me out, and he came across the room to where I sat collapsed in a chair, and bent over me.

"Do you know," he said, looking down at me with his clear, disconcerting gaze, "do you know that I have just grasped the situation? There was such a noise that I did not hear your name, and I am only realizing now that you are my hostess! I don't know why I got the impression that this was a bachelor establishment, but I did. Odd, wasn't it?"

I positively couldn't look away from him. My features seemed frozen, and my eyes were glued to his. As for telling him the truth—well, my tongue refused to move. I intended to tell him during dinner if I had an opportunity. I honestly did. But the more I looked at him and saw how candid his eyes were, and how stern his mouth might be, the more I shivered at the plunge. And, of course, as everybody knows now, I didn't tell him at all. And every moment I expected that awful old woman to ask me what I paid my cook, and when I had changed the color of my hair—Bella's being black.

Dinner was a half-hour late when we finally went out, Jimmy leading off with Aunt Selina, and I, as hostess, trailing behind the procession with Mr. Harbison. Dallas took in the two Mercer girls, for we were one man short, and Max took Anne. Leila Mercer was so excited that she wriggled, and as for me, the candles and the orchids—everything—danced around in a circle, and I just seemed to catch the back of my chair as it flew past. Jim had ordered away the wines and brought out some weak and cheap Chianti. Dallas looked gloomy at the change, but Jim explained in an undertone that Aunt Selina didn't approve of expensive vintages. Naturally, the meal was glum enough.

Aunt Selina had had her dinner on the train, so she spent her time in asking me questions the length of the table, and in getting acquainted with me. She had brought a bottle of some sort of medicine downstairs with her, and she took a claret glassful, while she talked. The stuff was called Pomonar. Shall I ever forget it?

It was Mr. Harbison who first noticed Takahiro. Jimmy's Jap had been the only thing in the menage that Bella declared she had hated to leave. But he was doing the strangest things: His little black eyes shifted nervously, and he looked queer.

"What's wrong with him?" Mr. Harbison asked me finally, when he saw that I noticed. "Is he ill?"

Then Aunt Selina's voice from the other end of the table: "Bella," she called, in a high shrill tone, "do you let James eat cucumbers?"

"I think he must be," I said hurriedly aside to Mr. Harbison. "See how his hands shake!" But Aunt Selina would not be ignored.

"Cucumbers and strawberries," she repeated impressively. "I was saying, Bella, that cucumbers have always given James the most fearful indigestion. And yet I see you serve them at your table. Do you remember what I wrote you to give him when he has his dreadful spells?"

I was quite speechless; every one was looking, and no one could help. It was clear Jim was racking his brain, and we sat staring desperately at each other across the candles. Everything I had ever known faded from me; eight pairs of eyes bored into me, Mr. Harbison's politely amused.

"I don't remember," I said at last. "Really, I don't believe—" Aunt Selina smiled in a superior way.

"Now, don't you recall it?" she insisted. "I said: 'Baking soda in water taken internally for cucumbers! baking soda in water externally, rubbed on, when he gets that dreadful, itching strawberry rash.'"

I believe the dinner went on. Somebody asked Aunt Selina how much overcharge she had paid in foreign hotels, and after that she was as harmless as a dove.

Then half-way through the dinner we heard a crash in Takahiro's pantry, and when he did not appear again, Jim got up and went out to investigate. He was gone quite a little while, and when he came back he looked worried.

"Sick," he replied to our inquiring glances. "One of the maids will come in. They have sent for a doctor."

Aunt Selina was for going out at once and "fixing him up," as she put it, but Dallas gently interfered.

"I wouldn't, Miss Caruthers," he said, in the deferential manner he had adopted toward her. "You don't know what it may be. He's been looking spotty all evening."

"It might be scarlet fever," Max broke in cheerfully. "I say, scarlet fever on a Mongolian—what color would he be, Jimmy? What do yellow and red make? Green?"

"Orange," Jim said shortly. "I wish you people would remember that we are trying to eat."

The fact was, however, that no one was really eating, except Mr. Harbison, who had given up trying to understand us, considering, no doubt, our subdued excitement as our normal condition. Ages afterward I learned that he thought my face almost tragic that night, and that he supposed, from the way I glared across the table, that I had quarreled with my husband!

"I am afraid you are not well," he said at last, noticing my food untouched on my plate. "We should not have come, any of us."

"I am perfectly well," I replied feverishly. "I am never ill. I—I ate a late luncheon."

He glanced at me keenly. "Don't let them stay and play bridge tonight," he urged. "Miss Caruthers can be an excuse, can she not? And you are really fagged. You look it."

"I think it is only ill humor," I said, looking directly at him. "I am angry at myself. I have done something silly, and I hate to be silly."

Max would have said "Impossible," or something else trite. The Harbison man looked at me with interested, serious eyes.

"Is it too late to undo it?" he asked. And then there I determined that he should never know the truth. He could go back to South America and build bridges and make love to the Spanish girls (or are they Spanish down there?) and think of me always as a married woman, married to a dilettante artist, inclined to be stout—the artist, not I—and with an Aunt Selina Caruthers who made buttons and believed in the Cause. But never, never should he think of me as a silly little fool who pretended that she was the other man's wife and had a lump in her throat because when a really nice man came along, a man who knew something more than polo and motors, she had to carry on the deception to keep his respect, and be sedate and matronly, and see him change from perfectly open admiration at first to a hands-off-shed-is-my-host's-wife attitude at last.

"It can never be undone," I said soberly.

Well, that's the picture as nearly as I can draw it; a round table with a low centerpiece of orchids in lavender and pink, old silver candlesticks with filigree shades against the somber wainscoting; nine people, two of them unhappy—Jim and I; one of them complacent—Aunt Selina; one puzzled—Mr. Harbison; and the rest hysterically mirthful. Add one sick Japanese butler and grind in the mills of the gods.

Every one promptly forgot Takahiro in the excitement of the game we were all playing. Finally, however, Aunt Selina, who seemed to have Takahiro on her mind, looked up from her plate.

"That Jap was speckled," she asserted. "I wouldn't be surprised if it's measles. Has he been sniffing, James?"

"Has he been sniffing?" Jim threw across at me.

"I hadn't noticed it," I said meekly, while the others choked.

Max came to the rescue. "She refused to eat it," he explained, distinctly and to everybody, apropos absolutely of nothing. "It said on the box, 'ready cooked and predigested.' She declared she didn't care who cooked it, but she wanted to know who predigested it."

As every one wanted to laugh, every one did it then, and under cover of the noise I caught Anne's eye, and we left the dining room. The men stayed, and by the very firmness with which the door closed behind us, I knew that Dallas and Max were bringing out the bottles that Takahiro had hidden. I was seething. When Aunt Selina indicated a desire to go over the house (it was natural that she should want to: It was her house, in a way) I excused myself for a minute and flew back to the dining room.

It was as I had expected. Jim hadn't cheered perceptibly, and the rest were patting him on the back, and pouring things out for him, and saying, "Poor old Jim" in the most maddening way. And the Harbison man was looking more and more puzzled, and not at all hilarious.

I descended on them like a thunder-bolt.

"That's it!" I cried shrewishly, with my back against the door. "Leave her to me, all of you, and pat each other on the back, and say it's gone splendidly! Oh, I know you, every one!" Mr. Harbison got up and pulled out a chair, but I couldn't sit; I folded my arms on the back. "After a while, I suppose, you'll slip upstairs, the four of you, and have your game." They looked guilty. "But I will block that right now. I am going to stay—here. If Aunt Selina wants me, she can find me—here!"

The first indication those men had that Mr. Harbison didn't know the state of affairs was when he turned and faced them.

"Mrs. Wilson is quite right," he said gravely. "We're a selfish lot. If Miss Caruthers is a responsibility, let us share her."

"To arms!" Jim said, with an affectation of lightness, as they put their glasses down, and threw open the door. Dal's retort, "Whose?" was lost in the confusion, and we went into the library. On the way Dallas managed to speak to me.

"If Harbison doesn't know, don't tell him," he said in an undertone. "He's a queer duck, in some ways; he mightn't think it funny."

"Funny," I choked. "It's the least funny thing I ever experienced. Deceiving that Harbison man isn't so bad—he thinks me crazy, anyhow. He's been staring his eyes out at me—"

"I don't wonder. You're lovely to-night, Kit, and you look like a vixen."

"But to deceive that harmless old lady—well, thank goodness, it's nine, and she leaves in an hour or so."

But she didn't. And that's the story. To be continued.

TRUE SUCCESS

By Rev. Stephen Paulson

TEXT—The righteous also shall hold on to life, and they shall have peace, and shall wax stronger. Job 17:9.

Every right-minded person should desire success. The young man who does not desire to be successful might just as well pick out his coffin, for he will never be of much account in this life. But what is success? That is what we want to talk about, for there seem to be widely divergent opinions on that subject.

Over 400 years ago Columbus was about to discover a new world. His seamen grew impatient of the privations and hardships of an apparently hopeless voyage. Westward sailed the little flotilla over a shoreless sea, where no island or cliff gave relief to the weary eye. Now and then a bank of cloud on a far horizon revived hope only to plunge them into deeper gloom. At last dejection ripened into discontent, and terror into mutiny, which was still only by the courage and resolution of the great explorer. No land was yet in sight, but Columbus persuaded them to hold on three days longer. On the second day some tree-twigs were seen floating; then a plank cut by a hatchet; then a branch of hawthorn in flower. These silent witnesses told of land not far off; and now the men who the previous day were breathing rebellion, gathered around their commander with extravagant flattery imploring his forgiveness.

It is no doubt a truth old as humanity that "nothing succeeds like success." One stroke of good business gives a man a better chance for a second; but let a man equally deserving meet with one failure, and success licks further away.

One of the worst features of our age is the worship of mere success, apart from the means by which it was attained. Personal worth may go to the wall; a man is measured according to his prosperity. There is a success that is not worth having, and there is failure that is more to be desired than success. The fact is that the common conception of the subject requires amendment.

What is your ideal of success? In the majority of cases the answer would be, fortune or position. Well, these are fine things to have, but they can be bought too dear. They are bought every day at the price of honor, self-respect, a good conscience, peace of mind, and even immortal hope. The price is too great. America is full of the "get-rich-quick" spirit. We revel in stories of millionaires who were bare-footed newsboys in their youth. And it is true that many of these men deserve credit for their energy and foresight. But can we not get a higher ideal of success than the mere accumulation of riches?

In our text we are given the necessary elements of success. "The righteous also shall hold on his way, and he that hath clean hands shall wax stronger and stronger." Here are mentioned three things which are absolutely necessary to every young man's success in life, and they are piety, perseverance, and purity.

First we have piety, or love and trust in God. No true success can be obtained without that. It is true that by throwing conscience to the winds, you may occasionally make gains which, to the upright are impossible; but there is a curse which pursues such profits even in that world. There is no doubt that the youth who enters upon life with a sense of accountability to God, has great advantage. Lord Lytton says, "A man is already of consequence in the world when it is known that he can be implicitly relied upon." It is a great mistake that many young men make to drop their religion as soon as they get out into active business life.

Our next quality is perseverance. "The righteous man shall hold on his way." The failure of many young men in life is due to the lack of this power to hold on. A young man enters business, but after a few months he thinks he has made a mistake, so he begins to study medicine. Soon he grows heartily weary of that, and he thinks he is cut out for the law. Thus he drifts from one thing to another, and makes a success of none. He lacks perseverance, the power to "hold on." It is an excellent thing for a youth, as soon as his school days are over, to have to depend to a great extent upon his own exertions. President Garfield once said, "In nine times out of ten, the best thing that can happen to a young man is to be tossed overboard and compelled to sink or swim for himself. In all my acquaintance, I never knew a man to be drowned who was worth saving."

The third requisite to success is purity. "He that hath clean hands shall wax stronger and stronger." This is the outward and practical side of piety. Let the prayer of the palmist be yours, "Create in me a clean heart, O God." That is necessary to clean hands. You must conduct a clean business if you would have clean hands. You cannot be a party to dishonest dealing and remain undefiled. You cannot touch pitch and not become smirched. Here is where your piety and faith in God should be your stay. Your Christian principles are worthless unless they decide your course, leaving all the consequences to God.

To Prevent Horns Growing on Young Calves

When circumstances are favorable, as in the case of farmers who build up their herds by raising the progeny, the horns may be prevented from growing by a simple and practically painless method, and the custom of preventing the growth of horns is becoming more popular and more generally practiced under all conditions except in the case of calves dropped on the open range. The calf should be treated not later than one week after its birth, preferably when it is from three to five days old. The agent to be used may be either caustic soda or caustic potash, both of which may be procured in the drug stores in the form of sticks about the thickness of an ordinary lead pencil and five inches long. These caustics must be handled with care, as they dissolve the cuticle and may make the hands or fingers sore. The preparation of the calf consists in first clipping the hair from the parts, washing clean with soap and warm water, and thoroughly drying with a cloth or towel. The stick of caustic should be wrapped in a piece of paper to protect the hands and fingers, leaving one end of the stick uncovered.

Moisten the uncovered end slightly and rub it on the horn buttons or little points which may be felt on the calf's head, first on one and then the other, alternately, two or three times on each, allowing the caustic to dry after each application. Be very careful to apply the caustic to the horn button only. If it is brought in contact with the surrounding skin it will cause pain. Be very careful also not to have too much moisture on the stick of caustic, as it will remove the skin if allowed to run down over the face. After treatment, keep the calf protected from rain, as water on the head after the applications of caustic will cause it to run down over the face. This must be carefully avoided. —U. S. Value of Farm Manure.

Farm manure is too valuable not to care for it. It will add a new store of plant food to the soil, combines with the soil and makes some of the insoluble plant food available. Makes the soil warm up earlier in the spring, makes the soil hold more water for the plants, improves the tilth of the sandy and clay soils, increases the number of soil organisms, promotes fermentation and supplies food to the organisms which help to make plant food available.

FANCY CAKES FOR FESTIVITIES.

Small cakes that will keep indefinitely are a reserve that all wise housewives desire to have on hand. The following has good keeping qualities:

Rocks.—Cream a cup of butter, add a cup and a half of sugar, three eggs, a teaspoonful of cinnamon, half a teaspoon of allspice, a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in two tablespoonfuls of water, a pound each of walnuts and dates cut fine and two and a half cups of flour. Drop from a spoon on a buttered sheet.

Oatmeal Cookies.—Brown the oatmeal until a light color and put through the meat chopper. Take a cup of shortening, two cups of oatmeal, two cups of flour, a cup of sugar, a teaspoon of cinnamon and one of soda, two eggs and seven tablespoonfuls of sour milk. A few nuts and raisins may be put through the meat grinder with the oatmeal and added, if desired.

Rice Cookies.—Cream a half a cup of butter, add a third of a cup of sugar gradually, one egg well beaten, three-fourths of a cup of flour, a half teaspoon of vanilla. Beat well and drop from a spoon on a buttered sheet. Spread thinly with a knife dipped in cold water. Put four large raisins on each cookie. Blanched almonds or strips of citron cut in small pieces may be used.

Nut Cookies.—Beat the yolks of two eggs until thick, add a cup of brown sugar gradually, a cup of nut meats, then the whites of the eggs, and six tablespoonfuls of flour mixed with a few grains of salt. Drop from the tip of a spoon on a buttered sheet. Spread and bake in a moderate oven.

Cocoanut Cream Cookies.—Beat two eggs until light, add a cup of sugar gradually, a half cup of shredded cocoanut, a cup of cream and three cups of flour sifted with a teaspoonful of salt and three teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Chill and roll out one-half inch thick. Shape with a small round cutter and bake in a moderate oven.

Nellie Maxwell.

This is the season of the year when mothers feel very much concerned over the frequent colds contracted by their children, and have abundant reason for it as every cold weakens the lungs, lowers the vitality and paves the way for the more serious diseases that so often follow. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is famous for cures, and is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all dealers.

Ancient Rules For Carving.
Our ancestors fully recognized the value of good carving, and many were the rules by which a carver was expected to be governed. The ancient "Boke of Kervynge," among other things, admonishes him to touch venison only with his knife and to "set never on fische, flesch, beeste ner fowle more than two fyngers and a thumbe." Fingers he was naturally obliged to use since forks were a luxury of later date and were not in private use until James I's reign. Piers Gaveston, the favorite of Edward II., had three silver forks for eating pears, but this was regarded, no doubt, as a great and special luxury.

Arabia's Wild Horses.
The wild horses of Arabia will not admit a tame horse among them, while the wild horses of South America endeavor to decay domesticated horses from their masters and seem eager to welcome them.

Do you know that more real danger lurks in a common cold than in any other of the minor ailments? The safe way is to take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, a thoroughly reliable preparation, and rid yourself of the colds as quickly as possible. This remedy is for sale by all dealers.

There is no better medicine made for colds than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It acts on nature's plan, relieves the lungs, opens the secretions, aids expectoration; and restores the system to a healthy condition. For sale by all dealers.

The KITCHEN CABINET

NOT the cry, but the rising of the wild duck impels the flock to follow him in upward flight.

—Chas. S. Sargent

Size is not strength. Reputation is not character.

FOR THE HOLIDAYS.

This is a delicious confection that will keep indefinitely: Put a pound of dates, a pound of raisins, a pound of figs, a fourth of a pound of almonds, half a pound of pecans, half a pound of Brazilian nuts all through the meat grinder. Mix until thoroughly blended, and if not moist enough add a little honey. Pack in wax paper lined boxes or in glasses. This may be cut in squares and dipped in fondant or chocolate.

Rice Jack.—Boil together a cup of sugar, a cup of molasses, two tablespoonfuls of water, and when hard if dropped in cold water, add a tablespoonful of butter and a pinch of soda. Stir in three cups of puffed rice and spread in a buttered dripping pan to cool.

Salpicon of Fruit.—A shredded pineapple, a banana, one orange, a grape fruit finely divided. Boil a cup of sugar, a tablespoonful of water until it hairs, then add a tablespoonful of lemon juice, and when cool pour over the fruit. Serve in glasses with a little of the Maraschino juice and a cherry on top.

Panache.—Cook together until it forms a soft ball when dropped in cold water, three cups of sugar, half brown and half white, a tablespoonful of butter and a cup of cream. When cooked add a cup of nuts and set away to cool before stirring.

Peanut Bar or Brittle.—Put a cup of sugar in a sauce pan and melt it over the fire. When a golden brown stir in a cup of shelled peanuts. Pour into a buttered pan to cool.

Cream Candy, Uncooked.—Beat the white of an egg slightly, add a fourth of a cup of cream, milk or water, then add confectioner's sugar until stiff enough to handle. Flavor, add nuts or fruit, mold in balls and lay on waxed paper to become firm.

Nellie Maxwell.

Denmark's Sovereigns.
Denmark has had a most curious array of sovereigns. The Blue Tooth, Forked Beard, Simple, Hungry, Barefoot, Lamb, Pious and Cruel being among them. This latter, who was Christian II., belied his real name by gaining the additional title of the Nero of the North. There was probably little happiness in Denmark when he sat upon the throne.

WAYS OF SERVING CHICKEN.

Chickens are not now so expensive that one may not feel extravagant to serve one occasionally.

Braised Chicken.—Dress, clean and truss a four-pound fowl. Fry two slices of fat salt pork, cut one-fourth inch thick, then add five slices of carrot cut in small cubes, one-half a sliced onion, two sprigs of thyme, one sprig of parsley, a bay leaf, and cook ten minutes. Add two tablespoonfuls of butter and fry the fowl, turning often until the surface is well browned. Place on a trivet in a deep pan, pour over the fat, add two cups of water or chicken stock. Cover and bake in a slow oven until tender, basting often.

Serve with a sauce made from the fat in the pan.

Maryland Chicken.—Dress and clean and cut up two small chickens.
Sprinkle with salt, pepper and dip in flour, egg and crumbs; place in a greased dripping pan and bake thirty minutes in a hot oven, basting after the first five minutes' cooking, with a third of a cup of melted butter. Arrange on a platter and pour over two cups of cream sauce.

Fried Chicken, Southern Style.—Cut up the chicken at the joints as for serving, plunge in cold water and while wet dredge with flour, salt and pepper, having as much flour adhere to the chicken as possible. Try out a pound of fat salt pork, cut in pieces and cook the chicken in this until tender and well browned. Serve with a white sauce made of half milk and cream.

Woman's Story of Revere's Ride.
It is said that the best description of Paul Revere's famous ride and of the activities of the hours just preceding the battle of Lexington, April 19, 1775, was written by a woman, Mrs.
Hannah Winthrop, of Cambridge, who vividly described "the horrors of that midnight cry."—Magazine of Ameri-

ings are kind. That dull pain or ache

Diabetes or Bright's disease. Take Electric Bitters at once and see back efit from their use for kidney and a great kidney medicine." Try it.

Oldest Lighthouse.
La Coruna, the Spanish harbor, boasts, it is said, of the oldest light-house in the world, it having been built by the Romans in the time of Trajan, between 98 and 117 A. D.
About 111 years ago the structure was overhauled and partly rebuilt, though the lower part of the pile was found to be in perfect condition, a tribute to the building ability of the Roman masons. When the weather is favorable the light can be seen a distance of twenty-two miles at sea.

A Nervous Woman Finds Relief After Many Years

Women who suffer from extreme nervousness, often endure much suffering before finding any relief.
Mrs. Daniel Kintner, of Defiance,
O., had such an experience, regarding which she says:

"I had stomach
trouble when I was eighteen years old
that broke down
my health, and for years I suffered
with nervousness,
headache, indigestion and nervous spasms. The
spasms got so bad
I would have them
three or four times a week. After trying nearly every remedy recommended, I began taking Dr. Miles'
Nervine, and I must say it helped me wonderfully. I have had no severe nervousness for several years."

MRS. DAN KINTNER,
1002 Pleasant St., Defiance, O.
Many remedies are recommended for diseases of the nervous system that fail to produce results because they do not reach the seat of the trouble. Dr. Miles' Nervine has proven its value in such cases so many times that it is unnecessary to make claims for it. You can prove its merits for yourself by getting a bottle of your druggist, who will return the price if you receive no benefit.

be keeping his weather eye on the job, ready to take a hand if trouble developes, but is not inclined to oppose Sheriff Hanna's natural aspiration to succeed himself.

For the office of clerk, many enthusiastic friends of Clerk Reavey are urging him to enter the race for another term, but like another distinguished American citizen, he "is not saying a word."

Guy N. Ormes of Tuscola, who was in the race for clerk four years ago, shows every indication of giving his friends an opportunity to show their preference for him again this year and the names of two others are frequently heard in connection with this office: Robert Brown, for several years supervisor of Novesta township and some time chairman of the board of supervisors, and Winfield S. Cottrell, a capable and popular resident of Fremont.

William C. Sanson of Koylton, a former supervisor and who lost the nomination for county treasurer four years ago by a narrow margin, has received much favorable mention and is likely to be found in the running for that office when the campaign fairly opens.

For register of deeds, Joseph Walton, now in charge of the abstract business of Ealy & Co., and for several years clerk of the village of Caro, is favored by many acquainted with his ability, and Charles H. Richardson of Tuscola is expected to make good his promise to make the race again this year.

Friends of Prosecuting Attorney T.
C. Quinn have urged him to try for a third term, but he says "Not for me. I shall be glad to be relieved of the trials and responsibilities of the office." H. H. Smith of Caro and John C. Corkins of Cass
City are expected to be pitted against each other for the honors and emoluments of that office.

If all who have been suggested as successors to William W. Kelley contest for the office of county drain commissioner, it will be a merry battle and the victory will be to the swift. The administration of the affairs of the office by Mr. Kelley has been so satisfactory, even in the face of his poor health a portion of the time, that he would doubtless receive strong support should he decide to become a candidate again.

Six others have been mentioned as willing to accept the arduous duties of the office, and they are here set down in the order in which their names have been heard in connection with the office: Albert Hunter, Dayton; Charles M. Pierce, Caro; E. J.
Teskey, Kingston; David Harp, Fremont; R. D. Black, Caro; Charles Neal, Caro.

For representative in the state legislature, James H. Millikin has served two terms and expresses himself as well satisfied with the experience and will not seek re-nomination at the primary. Friends of Supervisor
A. J. Sherman of Watertown and Supervisor Charles W. McNeil of Arbela are urging them to run, and R. S.
Weaver, for several years past the president of the Tuscola Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Co., has also been frequently mentioned.

Mr. Weaver's name has also been used in connection with the office of state senator from the Tuscola-Lapeer district, now occupied by Senator Couley, democrat of Lapeer, a man who developed surprising strength when elected two years ago.
Friends of Mr. Weaver argue that he would be an ideal candidate for either office, but under existing conditions they believe he could defeat Senator Conley, leaving the question of representative to succeed Mr. Mil-likin in the strong hands of the other prospective candidates.

 Commenting upon changes in the R. F. D. No. 3 of Shabbona, B. F. Phetteplace will certainly be missed by the patrons of the route. He was efficient, prompt and cordial in manner. We, citizens of this locality, would be pleased to place the name of B. F. Phetteplace before the people of Evergreen as a candidate for highway commissioner at the primary election this spring. THUMB NOTES.

George R. Mousley, a hardware dealer of Gagetown, filed a petition in bankruptcy in the United States court at Bay City and Referee Marston appointed Harry S. Myers, of Clare, receiver.

Robt. P. Reavey, county clerk of Tuscola, issued 30 marriage licenses during the first 29 days of January. This is more than one a day, Sundays included. Did leap year make business so flourishing is a question the clerk is now considering.

Under a speed of about 25 miles an hour, a bad wreck occurred to a train on the P. M. railroad, at 3:15 Friday morning, five miles south of Port Hope village, badly injuring one passenger and two of the crew. The train was on its regular morning run to Palms and on account of the heavy snow was pulled by two engines. As it gathered speed, it struck a place where heavy frost had raised the track, and as the second engine passed over it, the rails spread, toppling the engine, baggage car and two coaches into the ditch and badly smashing them up. It is reported Conductor Ed. Whiting and Engineer R. E. Stringer were badly hurt, both having ribs broken and receiving internal injuries. Fred Koglin of Port Hope, a passenger, was also seriously injured.

The proposition to bond the township of Winsor for $50,000 for the purpose of building a system of stone roads carried by a large majority at the special election held in Pigeon on Saturday. The township already has 10 miles of improved highways and it is proposed to build 25 miles in addition. This will cover nearly all the main roads leading into Pigeon.

Ralph Ballagh has sold a part of his Longview Farm, just south of Elkton to James Neeley. The sale includes the buildings and 140 acres located just outside the village limits, and the consideration is $15,000.

Rudolph Pabst died at his home in Lexington Monday. He was the man who gave Bad Axe her peculiar name, discovered the original axe which was so "bad" that it would not cut kindling to build a camp fire when he and a party were locating pine land in 1860, on the spot where the city of Bad Axe now stands.
