CASS CITY SCHOOLS FOR YEARS 1912 AND 1913,

New School Building Advocated by Professor of Education in University.

University of Michigan. Dept. of Education. Ann Arbor, June 3, 1912.

Cass City, Mich. My dear Sir:

I take great pleasure in informing you that upon the recommendation of the Committee on Diploma Schools the diploma relation between your high school and this University is continued for the years 1912 and 1913. The Committee is of the opinion that smaller classes in the high school continued additions to the library, and above all, a new school building would greatly improve the efficiency of your school.

Very respectfully, A. S. WHITNEY, Professor of Education.

PERRY-LOUNSBURY

Pretty Wedding at Farm Home of Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Perry.

A pretty home wedding was celebrated Wednesday noon in the home of Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Perry, when their daughter, Miss Gladys, was married to Emory Lounsbury, in the presence of about forty relatives and friends. The decorations of the home were in pink and white, carried out in carnations and snowballs.

As the strains of the wedding march, played by Miss Jessie Spence, sounded through the rooms, the bridal couple, unattended, took their places under a wedding bell. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. B. Weaver. After the congratulations and best wishes of their friends, a lovely wedding dinner was served. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and useful gifts. The bride's gown was king blue taffeta, trimmed with cream lace. Her travelling costume was pearl gray suiting with trimming of black

NO ONE STRONGER THAN HIS STOMACH.

The celebrated Dr. Abernethy of London was firmly of the opinion that disorders of the stomach were the most prolific source of human ailments in general. A recent medical writer says: "every feeling, emotion and affection reports at the stomach (through the system of nerves) and the stomach is affected accordingly. It is the vital center of the body * * * * ." He continues, "so we may be said to live (through) the stomach." He goes on to show that the stomach is the vital center of the body. For weak stomachs and the consequent indigestion or dyspepsia, and the multitude of various diseases which result therefrom, no medicine can be better suited as a curative agent than

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

"Several months ago I suffered from a severe pain right under the breast-bone," writes MRS. G. M. MURKEN, of Corona, Calif. "Had suffered from it, off and on, for several years. I also suffered from heart-burn, did not know what was the matter with me. I tried several medicines but they did me no good. Finally, I was told it was my liver. I did not dare to eat as it made me worse. Whenever I swallowed anything it seemed that I would faint—it hurt so, I grew very thin and weak from not eating. Was told to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I took five bottles of it, and could feel myself getting better from the first dose. I could eat a little without pain and grew strong fast. To-day I am strong and well and can do a big day's work with ease. Can eat everything and have put on flesh wonderfully. I will say to all sufferers write to Dr. Pierce, He has my undying gratitude,"

Training the Country's Coming Watchmen

By Former United States Senator WILLIAM E. MASON

"We put out the eyes of those who must Stand on the watch tower of the future, To warn us of our danger."

-John the Unafraid. NCE there lived a king and although his city was well protected by a great wall, each citizen stood his turn as watchman in the towers. Thinking it more of profit to use the children of his kingdom for watchmen, he confined them long hours in daylight and darkness to watch for the enemy. Too much use of the undeveloped eye destroyed the sight, and he reared a nation of blind and was easily conquered by the enemy.

The employment of children in the shops and mines, before their body has grown to natural size, is to dwarf the body. The refusal of opportunity to study is to dwarf the mind. The watch towers of the republic cannot be well manned by physical and mental and moral dwarfs. The enemy is not from without but is within the very walls of our city. They oppress the poor and weak, debauch the young men and women, pollute our ballot box, and the need of honest watchmen goes on apace. How dare we trust our future to a nation of incompetents? We would not trust our labor to the horses who were destroyed as colts. The girls of the republic are to be the mothers of the future republic. What sort of men will they bear for our future, if deprived of the right to grow to full stature, mentally and physically?

The early Christian called:

Watchman, tell us of the night, what the signs of promise are?

And the loyal watchman answered:

Traveler, o'er you mountain height, see the glory beaming star.

When the republic was in a death struggle with the fever of slavery, the lover of human liberty called, in the language of Whittier:

How wears the night away?

Watchman, on the outer wall,

And after Vicksburg, the answer:

I hear the birds of morning call,

I see the break of day.

I am sure now you understand that child labor means putting out the eyes of those who must, in the future, serve in the watch towers of the republic.

CHAPTER XXII.

It Was Delirium.

I was sure he was dead. He did not move, and when I caught his hands and called him frantically, he did not hear me. And so, with the horror over me, I half fell down the stairs and roused Jim in the studio.

They all came with lights and blankets, and they carried him into the tent and put him on the couch and tried to put whisky in his mouth. But he could not swallow. And the silence became more and more ominous until finally Anne got hysterical and cried, "He is dead! dead!" and collapsed on the roof.

But he was not. Just as the lights in the tent began to have red rings around them and Jim's voice came from away across the river, somebody said, "There, he swallowed that," and soon after, he opened his He muttered something that eves. sounded like "Andean pinnacle" and lapsed into unconsciousness again. But he was not dead! He was not dead!

When the doctor came they made a stretcher out of one of Jim's six-foot canvases-it had a picture on it, and Jim was angry enough the next dayand took him down to the studio. We made it as much like a sick room as we could, and we tried to make him comfortable. But he lay without opening his eyes, and at dawn the doctor brought a consultant and a trained nurse.

The nurse was an offensively capable person. She put us all out, and scolded Anne for lighting Japanese incense in the room-although Anne explained that it is very reviving. And she said that it was unnecessary to have a dozen people breathing up all the oxygen and asphyxiating the patient. She was good looking, too. I disliked her at once. Any one could see by the way she took his pulsejust letting his poor hand hang, without any support-that she was a purely mechanical creature, without

Well, as I said before, she put us all out, and shut the door, and asked us not to whisper outside. Then, too, she refused to allow any flowers in the room, although Betty had got a florist out of bed to order some.

The consultant came, stayed an hour, and left. Aunt Selina, who proved herself a trump in that trying time, waylaid him in the hall, and he said it might be a fractured skull, although it was possibly only concussion.

The men spent most of the morning together in the den, with the door Now and then one of them shut. would tiptoe upstairs, ask the nurse show her patient was doing, and creak down again. Just before noon they all went to the roof and examined again the place where he had been found. I know, for I was in the upper hall, outside the studio. I stayed there almost all day, and after a while the nurse let me bring her things as she needed them. I don't know why mother didn't let me study nursing-I always wanted to do it. And I felt helpless and childish now, when there were things to be done.

Max came down from the roof alone, and I cornered him in the upper hall.

"I'm going crazy, Max," I said. "Nobody will tell me anything, and I can't stand it. How was he hurt? Who hurt him?"

Max looked at me quite a long time. "I'm darned if I understand you, Kit," he said gravely. "You said you disliked Harbison."

"So I do—I did," I supplemented. "But whether I like him or not has nothing to do with it. He has been injured-perhaps murdered"-I chok-"Which-which of you æd a little. aid it?"

Max took my hand and held it, looking down at me.

"I wish you could have cared for me like that," he said gently. "Dear little girl, we don't know who hurt him. I didn't, if that's what you mean. Perhaps a flower-pot-I began to cry then, and he drew me to him and let me cry on his arm. He stood very quietly, patting my yes, and the nurse shut the door. There was no use, even if I had been allowed in, in trying to explain to him. To attempt such a thing would have been to presume that he was interested in an explanation. I thought bitterly to myself as I brought the nurse cracked ice and struggled to make beef tea in the kitchen, that lives had been wrecked on less.

Dal was allowed ten minutes in the sick room during the afternoon, and he came out looking puzzled and excited. He refused to tell us what he had learned, however, and the rest of the afternoon he and Jim spent in the cellar.

The day dragged on. Downstairs people ate and read and wrote letters, and outside newspaper men talked together and gazed over at the house and photographed the doctors coming in and the doctors going out. As for me, in the intervals of bringing things, I sat in Bella's chair in the upper hall, and listened to the crackle of the nurse's starched skirts.

At midnight that night the doctors made a thorough examination. When they came out they were smiling.

"He is doing very well," the younger one said-he was hairy and dark, but he was beautiful to me. "He is entirely conscious now, and in about an hour you can send the nurse off for a little sleep. Don't let him talk."

And so at last I went through the familiar door into an unfamiliar room, with basins and towels and bottles around, and a screen made of Jim's largest canvases. And some one on the improvised bed turned and looked at me. He did not speak, and I sat down beside him. After a while he put his hand over mine as it lay on the bed.

"You are much better to me than I deserve," he said softly. And because his eyes were disconcerting, I put an ice cloth over them.

"Much better than you deserve," I said, and patted the ice cloth to place gently. He fumbled around until he found my hand again, and we were quiet for a long time. I think he dozed, for he roused suddenly and pulled the cloth from his eyes.

"The-the day is all confused," he said, turning to look at me, "but-one thing seems to stand out from everything else. Perhaps it was delirium, but I seemed to see that door over there open, and you, outside, withwith Max. His arms were around vou."

"It was delirium," I said softly. It was my final lie in that house of mendacity.

He drew a satisfied breath and lifting my hand, held it to his lips and kissed it.

"I can hardly believe it is you," he said. "I have to hold firmly to your hand or you will disappear. Can't you move your chair closer? You are miles away." So I did it, for he was not to be excited.

"It's awfully good of you to do this. I have been desperately sorry, Kit, about the other night. It was a ruffianly thing to do-to kiss you, when I thought-

"You are to keep very still," I reminded him. He kissed my hand again, but he persisted.

"I was mad-crazy." I tried to give him some medicine, but he pushed the spoon aside. "You will have to listen," he said. "I am in the depths of self-disgust. I-I can't think of anything else. You see, you seemed so convinced that I was the blackguard that somehow nothing seemed to matter."

"I have forgotten it all," I declared generously, "and I would be quite willing to be friends, only, you remember you said-

"Friends!" his voice was suddenly reckless, and he raised on his elbow. 'Friends. Who wants to be friends? Kit, I was almost delirious that night The instant I held you in my arms it was all over. I loved you the first time I saw you. I-I suppose I'm a fool to talk like this."

And, of course, just then Dallas had to open the door and step into the room. He was covered with dirt and he had a hatchet in his hand.

"A rope!" he demanded, without paying any attention to us and diving into corners of the room. "Good heavens, isn't there a rope in this confounded house!"

He turned and rushed out, without any explanation, and left us staring at the door.

"Bother the rope!" I found myself forced to look into two earnest eyes. "Kit, were you very angry when I kissed you that night on the roof?"

"Very," I maintained stoutly. "Then prepare yourself for another attack of rage!" he said. And Betty opened the door.

She had on a fetching pale blue dressing gown, and one braid of her vellow hair was pulled carelessly over her shoulder. When she saw me on my knees beside the bed (oh, yes. I forgot to say that, quite unconsciously, I had slid into that position) she stopped short, just inc.de the door, and put her hand to her throat. stood for quite a perceptible time looking at us, and I tried to rise. But Tom shamelessly put his arm around my shoulders and held me beside him. Then Betty took a step back and steadied herself by the door frame. She had really cared, I knew then, head in a brotherly way and behaving but I was too excited to be sorry for her.

"I-I beg your pardon for coming in," she said nervously. "But-they And just then the nurse opened the want you downstairs, Kit. At least, I door to the studio, and with Max's thought you would want to go, but-

Just then from the lower part of the Mr. Harbison was conscious. His kouse came a pandemonium of noises: eyes were open, and he was staring at women screaming, men shouting, and us both as we stood framed by the the sound of hatchet strokes and splintering wood. I seized Betty by He lay back at once and closed his the arm, and together we rushed

CHAPTER XXIII.

Coming.

The second floor was empty. A table lay overturned at the top of the stairs, and a broken flower vase was weltering in its own ooze. Part way down Betty stepped on something pale, with a bandage around his head, sharp, that proved to be the Japanese paper knife from the den. I left her on the stairs examining her foot, and hurried to the lower floor.

Here everything was in the utmost confusion. Aunt Selina had fainted, and was sitting in a hall chair with her head rolled over sidewise and the poker from the library fireplace across her knees. No one was paying any attention to her. And Jim was holding the front door open, while three of the guards hesitated in the vestibule. The noises continued from the back of the house, and as I stood on the lowest stair Bella came out streaked with soot, and carrying a kettle of hot water.

"Jim," she called wildly. "While Max and Dal are below, you can pour this down from the top. It's boiling."

Jim glanced back over his shoulder. 'Carry out your own murderous designs," he said. And then, as she started back with it, "Bella, for Heaven's sake," he called, "have you gone stark mad? Put that kettle down. She did it sulkily and Jim turned to the policeman. "Yes, I know it was a false alarm before," he explained patiently, "but" this is genuine. It is just as I tell you. Yes, Flannigan is in the house somewhere, but he's hiding, I guess. We could manage the thing very well ourselves, but we have no cartridges for our revolvers." Then as the noise from the rear redoubled, "If you don't come in and help, I will telephone for the fire department," he concluded emphatically. I ran to Aunt Selina and tried to straighten her head. In a moment she opened her eyes, sat up and stared around her. She saw the kettle at

"What are you doing with boiling water on the floor?" she said to me, with her returning voice. "Don't you know you will spoil the floor?" The ruling passion was strong with Aunt Selina, as usual.

I could not find out the trouble from any one: people appeared and disappeared, carrying strange articles. Anne with a rope, Dal with his hatchet, Bella and the kettle, but I could get a coherent explanation from no one. When the guards finally decided that Jim was in earnest, and that the rest of us were not crawling out a rear window while he held them at the door, they came in, three of them and two reporters, and Jim led them to the butler's pantry.

Here we found Anne, very white and shaky, with the pantry table and two chairs piled against the door of the kitchen slide, and clutching the chamois-skin bag that held her jewels. She had a bottle of Burgundy open beside her, and was pouring herself a glass with shaking hands when we appeared. She was furious at Jim.

"I very nearly fainted," she said hysterically. "I might have been murdered, and no one would have cared.

Lawrence McGuirk, Better Known as 'Tubby.'

I wish they would stop that chopping, I'm so nervous I could scream."

Jim took the Burgundy from her with one hand and pointed the police to the barricaded door with the other.

"That is the door to the dumb-waiter shaft," he said. "The lower one is fastened on the inside, in some manner. The noises commenced about eleven o'clock, while Mr. Brown was on guard. There were scraping sounds first, and later the sound of a falling body. He roused Mr. Reed and myself, but when we examined the shaft everything was quiet, and dark. We tried lowering a candle on a string, but-it was extinguished from below.' The reporters were busily removing the table and chairs from the door. "If you have a rope handy," one of them said, "I will go down the shaft." (Dal says that all reporters should have been policemen, and that all policemen are natural news gather-

"The cage appears to be stuck, halfway between the floors," Jim said. "They are cutting through the door in the kitchen below."

They opened the door then and cautiously peered down, but there was nothing to be seen. I touched Jim gingerly on the arm.

"Is it—is it Flannigan," I asked, 'shut in there?"

"No-yes-I don't know," he returned absently. "Run along and don't bother, Kit. He may take to shooting any minute."

Anne and I went out then and shut the door, and went into the dining room and sat on our feet, for of course ie bullets might come up through the floor. Aunt Selina joined us there, and Bella, and the Mercer girls, and we sat around and talked in whispers, and Leila Mercer told of the time her grandfather had had a struggle with an escaped lunatic.

In the midst of the excitement Tom appeared in a bath-robe, looking very and the nurse at his heels threatening to leave and carrying a bottle of medicine and a spoon. He went immediately to the pantry, and soon we could hear him giving orders and the rest hurrying around to obey them. The hammering ceased, and the silence was even worse. It was more suggestive.

In about fifteen minutes there was a thud, as if the cage had fallen, and the sound of feet rushing down the cellar stairs. Then there were groans and loud oaths, and everybody talking at once, below, and the sound of a struggle. In the dining room we all from the dining room, with her face sat bent forward, with straining ears and quickened breath, until we distinctly heard some one laugh. Then we knew that, whatever it was, it was over, and nobody was killed.

The sounds came closer, were coming up the stairs and into the pantry. Then the door swung open, and Tom and a policeman appeared in the doorway, with the others crowding behind. Between them they supported a grimy, unshaven object, covered with whitewash from the wall of the shaft, an object that had its hands fastened together with handcuffs, and that leered at us with a pair of the most villainously crossed eyes I have ever seen.

None of us had ever seen him before.

"Mr. Lawrence McGuirk, better known as 'Tubby'," Tom said cheerfully. "A celebrity in his particular line, which is second-story man and all-round rascal. A victim of the quarantine, like ourselves."

"We've missed him for a week," one of the guards said with a grin. 'We've been real anxious about you, Tubby. Ain't a week goes by, when you're in health, that we don't hear something of you."

Mr. McGuirk muttered something under his breath, and the men chuckled.

"It seems," Tom said, interpreting, 'that he doesn't like us much. He doesn't like the food, and he doesn't ilke the beds. He says just when he got a good place fixed up in the coal cellar, Flannigan found it, and is asleep there now, this minute."

Aunt Selina rose suddenly and cleared her throat.

"Am I to understand," she asked severely, "that from now on we will have to add two newspaper reporters, three policemen and a burglar to the occupants of this quarantined house? Because, if that is the case, I absolutely refuse to feed them."

But one of the reporters stepped forward and bowed ceremoniously

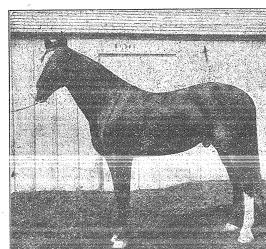

"Madam," he said, "I thank you for your kind invitation, but—it will be impossible for us to accept. I had intended to break the good news earlier, but this little game of burglar-in-acorner prevented me. The fact is, your Jap has been discovered to have nothing more serious than chickenpox, and-if you will forgive a poultry yard joke, there is no longer any necessity for your being cooped up." Then he retired, quite pleased with himself. One would have thought we had exhausted our capacity for emotion, but Jim said a joyful emotion was so new that we hardly knew how to receive it. Every one shook hands with every one else, and even the nurse shared in the excitement and gave Jim the medicine she had prepared for Tom. Then we all sat down and had some champagne, and while they were waiting for the police wagon, they gave quite shaken from his experience when the dumb-waiter stuck. The wine cheered him a little, and he told his story, in a voice that was creaky from disuse, while Tom held my hand under the table.

He had had a dreadful week, he said; he spent his days in a closet in one of the maids' rooms-the one where we had put Jim. It was Jim waking out of a nap and declaring that the closet door had moved by itself and that something had crawlthat had roused the suspicions of the his hand over his scrubby chin, and said he hadn't had a shave for a week. He took somebody's razor, he said, but he couldn't get hold of a portable mirror, and every time he lathered up and stood in front of the glass in the dining room sideboard, some one came and he had had to run and hide. From Carlyle's Essay on Burns. He told, too, of his attempts to escape, of the board on the roof, of the home-made rope and the hole in the cellar, and he spoke feelingly of the pearl collar and the struggle he had three days it was concealed in the the studio.

We were all rather sorry for him.

The wagon came for him just as he finished his story, and we all went to the door. In the vestibule Aunt Selina suddenly remembered something, and she stepped forward and caught the poor fellow by the arm.

"Young man," she said grimly. "I'll thank you to return what you took from me last Tuesday night." McGuirk started, then shuddered and turned suddenly pale. "Good Lord!" he ejaculated. "On the stairs to the roof! You!"

They led him away then, quite broken, with Aunt Selina staring after him. She never did understand. I could have explained, but it was too awful. On the steps McGuirk turned and took a farewell glance at us. Then he waved his hand to the policemen and reporters who had gathered around. "Good-by, fellows," he called feebly.

CARLYLE ON BOBBY BURNS

Opinion Expressed by Fellow Countrymen of the Worth of Scotland's Great Poet.

Contemplating this sad end of Burns, and how he sank unaided by any real help, uncheered by any wise sympathy, generous minds have sometimes figured to themselves, with a reproachful sorrow, that much might have been done for him; that by counsel, true affection and friendly minis trations, he might have been saved to himself and the world. We question whether there is not more tenderness of heart than soundness of judgment some to poor McGuirk. He was still in these suggestions. It seems dubious to us whether the richest, wisest, most benevolent individual could have lent Burns any effectual help.

Counsel, which seldom profits anyone, he did not need; in his understanding he knew the right from the wrong, as well perhaps as any man ever did; but the persuasion which would have availed him lies not so much in the head as in the heart, where no argument or expostulation could have assisted much to implant it. As to money again, we do not beed under his bed and out of the door, lieve that this was his essential want, or well see how any private man men in the house—and he slept at could, even presupposing Burns' connight on the coal in the cellar. He sent, have bestowed on him an indewas actually tearful when he rubbed pendent fortune, with much prospect of decisive advantage. * * * Many a poet has been poorer than Burns; but no one was ever prouder; we may question whether, without great precaution, even a pension from royalty would not have galled and incumbered more than actually assisted him.-

Constipation, if Neglected, Causes Serious Illness

Constipation, if neglected, leads to almost innumerable complications affecting the general health.

Many cases of typhoid fever, appendicitis and other severe diseases are traceable to prolonged clogging of the bowels. Regard-the effects of constipation, C. E. Ayers, 6 Sabin St., Montpelier,

Vt., says:
"I was afflicted with constipation and biliousness for and at times became so bad I would become unconscious. I have been found in that condition many times. Physicians did not seem to be able to do me any good. I would become weak and for days at a time could do or work. Not long ago I got a box of Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets, and after using them found I had never tried anything that acted in such a mild and effective manner. I believe mild and effective manner. I believe I have at last found the remedy that suits my case." Thousands of people are sufferers from habitual constipation and while possibly realizing something of the danger of this condition, yet neglect to long to employ proper curative measures until serious illness often results. The advice of all physicians is, "keep your bowels clean," and it's good advice.

Japanese Wit.

A Japanese official at a luncheon in New York told a story that recalled the Russo-Japanese war. "In your city of Washington," he said, "in those troubled days when it was pretty certain Russia and Japan would have to fight, a Russian and a Japanese met at a dance. Politely enough the two men discussed the coming war, and then, as they were about to part, the Russian said: "I won't bid you goodby, but au revoir. I'll soon be in Tokyo, you know, drinking your health in champagne.'

"'Oh,' said the Japanese, shaking his head and smiling, 'I'm afraid my country isn't rich enough to give her prisoners of war champagne."

the states, I have never seen so many idle and penniless laborers, who have been in the Northwest for years. As private, changes come and we all for skilled labor, out of 300 in Edmontrust that as the months go by the ton, only 90 are working and the working season don't last only about five or six months in the year. There ties in their new associations as to are few factories here, and what few there are, there are 20 men for every Wickware's response showed how job. As for farm labor, the days thoroughly he appreciated our faith are so long few will remain on farms. You can see to read the finest print at 3:30 a. m., and at 10:30 p. m. at this time of the year.

As to crops, there is only one thing which does well here and that is yellow turnips as the season is so short nothing else can mature well. There are only two seasons here and they are July and winter. It's too long but not two from one egg. The hen to feed cattle nearly eight months in the year and the present time is very dry here and nothing but clouds

I am told by good authority that it was so cold during the past winter a man would freeze and would not know it. It is hard to find a man with perfect members.
