STATE REPAIR FUND FOR STATE ROADS

TWO PERCENT OF REWARD FUND AVAILABLE.

Roads Must Be Resurfaced, Shoulders
Repaired, Ditches Cleaned,
Weeds Cut, Etc.

Two per cent of the total state rewards for highways will be set aside as a state repair fund for state rewarded roads. Section 16, Chapter V., Act No. 283, 1909, as amended 1913, reads as follows:

"On or before December first of each year a portion of the appropriation for State highway purposes, equal to two per centum of total State rewards that may have been paid at that time, shall be credited to a repair fund which shall be paid out after December first of each year for repairs on State rewarded roads, in the same manner as State rewards are now paid: Provided, That such repairs shall have been made in accordance with specifications prepared by or approved by the State highway commissioner and that the amount so paid to any township or county shall not exceed two per centum of the total State reward money heretofore paid to such township or county, not counting any roads that may have been accepted and rewarded during the current calendar year." Instructions from the state highway department give the following information regarding the repair fund:

To draw this repair money after December 1st, 1913, the following requirements must be complied with:

Roads of all classes, which need resurfacing, must be resurfaced during the summer or fall of 1913.

All damage to the shoulders by washing rains must be repaired.

All weeds and brush along the shoulders and in the ditches must be cut and removed from the roadway, or burned.

Where needed the ditches shall be cleaned out so as to give a free and uniform flow of water.

Outlets to road ditches must be cleaned out, if necessary, so as to remove all water from the road allowance.

STATE ROADS ACCEPTED

Elkland and Novesta Twps. Had Each
Built Mile of Road.

K. I. Sawyer, a deputy from the state highway department, was at Cass City the latter part of last week and accepted the state reward roads that have been built in Elkland and Novesta townships. Each township has had a mile of road under construction this year.

According to the figures of J. J. Gallagher, highway commissioner, the mile constructed in Elkland cost the tax payers $200 less than the contractor's price of $1,974 for the job. The road is naturally better constructed under the direct supervision of the commissioner than it would be under a contract system. Under the former system the highway commissioner must devote more attention and time to the job than if it were in the hands of a contractor, but even so, the cost of the road plus the increased salary of the commissioner brings the cost less than the contractor's price.

Several citizens of Elkland, Ellington and Novesta townships have subscribed $184 payable in cash and labor to fix the road approaching the site for a bridge across the creek 1½ miles west and 1 mile south of Cass City, providing the Elkland township officials will place a bridge across the stream. The latter body are of the opinion that this is the opportune time to take action in the matter while the citizens of that district feel disposed to aid in improving the roadway mentioned.

RETURNS WITH BRIDE

Frank E. Orr and Miss Mabel Weibeck Married in Buffalo.

Frank E. Orr, who has been spending his vacation in Buffalo, returned home Thursday, and to the surprise of his friends, was accompanied by his bride.

Frank E. Orr and Miss Mabel Weibeck were married at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Margaret Weibeck, at Buffalo, Wednesday, July 23, at high noon. Rev. Oaksford of that city performed the ceremony in the presence of sixteen friends and relatives, the ring service being used. After the ceremony a wedding dinner was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Orr returned to Cass City Thursday and will make their home in the Parr residence on East Main street. Mr. Orr is employed in the Municipal Light and Power plant and has a host of friends in Cass City.

ONE TIME SELLS FARM

Chronicle Limer Brings Buyer Same Day Paper is Mailed.

Last week H. P. Woolman ordered and paid for a limer to appear in the Chronicle three weeks offering his farm for sale. The limer appeared for the first time in Friday's paper. The same afternoon a prospective buyer noticed the limer and drove out to look over the property, the next Monday a bargain was made and Tuesday the papers were executed which transferred the farm to Fritz & Waidley, the new owners. "That's what comes of having a good paper and a good farm," said Fred Woolman, the former owner's son, in commenting on the rapid work of a Chronicle limer.

One room in the power plant is set aside for the use of the village council.

O. A. Withey entered an unusual complaint regarding the fair in that it was held too late this year to allow him to exhibit some of his home-grown peaches. Mr. Withey will not ask to have the fair dates changed however, as he has four or five other varieties that will be ready for exhibition purposes at the regular fair dates—Aug. 19-22.

SEEKING OIL AT FOSTORIA

Michigan Men's Tests Were Successful at Wooster, Ohio.

George Bench and D. T. Godell, of Fostoria, Mich., passed through Detroit yesterday on their way home from Wooster, Ohio, where they recently located about 300 acres of oil-bearing lands for a syndicate of Michigan men.

The two men have invented a chemical preparation through which, they say, they can locate oil beneath the earth's surface. When they first appeared in Wooster their assertions were made fun of, but after some rather startling tests oil men in that country began to change their views. The two men, blind-folded, were led over a territory where there are pipe lines, some good wells and some "dry" holes. In each instance they were able to tell whether or not there was oil in the ground over which they stood.

The two men are confident they will discover oil in the vicinity of Fostoria.—Detroit News.

Sager, president of Northwestern college, of Naperville, Ill.; Rev. J. W. Heininger, pastor of Calvary church, Cleveland; Rev. H. A. Kramer, editor of Sunday school and Young Peoples' alliance literature, and several presiding elders of various districts of the church.

UNIONVILLE—Plans are being made for a merchants' and farmers' picnic here Aug. 13.

MAYVILLE—A street carnival and base ball tournament will be held here Aug. 13, 14 and 15.

SHABBONA—The Elmer creamery has been sold to the Shabbona Creamery Co., and the new parties have already taken possession.

BAD AXE—The cornerstone of St. Joseph's Catholic church in Rapson, near here, was laid Friday afternoon. Auxiliary Bishop Kelly, of Ann Arbor, and a number of assistants had charge of the ceremonies.

CARO—Harold Coad, who learned the drug business in the store of his uncle, G. H. Trestrain, and until recently has been in the employ of L. A. Hooper, has leased two store buildings on East Frank street nearest Montague avenue and will open a drug store in the near future.

CROSWELL—To have the thumb of his left hand bitten off by a horse was the misfortune which befell Oliver Gordon, living south of the city. Mr. Gordon was placing a bridle on the animal when it suddenly snapped at its master and got his hand in its mouth, biting hard enough to completely sever the thumb from the hand.

BAD AXE—The annual midsummer disturbance about city water is again on in Bad Axe and as usual it centers around the sprinkling of lawns. Last week several well known citizens were fined $3.00 because their hydrants were found running a few minutes over time. Claim is made that water is being wasted when it may be needed for fire protection.

INLAY CITY—The Grand Trunk officials were here to look over and make plans to use the Grand Trunk depot as a union station. Monday a car load of planks arrived to be used between the tracks as a platform at the depot. We have not heard any definite plans about the matter, but it is likely in a few weeks that the present P. O. & N. depot will be discontinued and all P. O. & N. trains will stop at the G. T. depot.—Times.

HARBOR BEACH—Huron Ave probably will not be paved this season. The contract given to Wehner and Toppin expired July 22nd and became null and void on account of there being no bids for the bonds offered by the city which the council would accept. The city refused to pay more than four and one-half per cent interest on the bonds, but on account of the present money market no bids for less than five and upwards could be obtained.

CARO—C. P. Black, of Lansing, has sold to F. A. Turner, the building now occupied by Gunsell & Maier and the lot which extends a short distance north of the buildings making a frontage of 33 feet. It is understood that the old "blue goose" will be torn down or removed and a new brick building erected for use by Turner & Riley as a hardware store. Gunsell & Maier will occupy the entire second floor and half of the first floor of the new Putman building. Tom Agar has an option on the lot adjoining Hotel Secor, which he is now trying to enforce in court, claiming a width of forty feet, which would encroach seven feet on the Turner lot.—Courier.

How to Build Up or Tear Down This Community

By J. O. LEWIS

Help Yourself by Helping Your Town.

THE attitude you maintain toward your home town—its business men and its institutions—is reflected in the success or failure of the same. The success and happiness of every citizen in any community lie in the interest he takes in that community and the good work he can do to assist in its upbuilding. EVERYTHING YOU DO TO HELP IN THE ADVANCEMENT OF YOUR OWN COMMUNITY YOU DO JUST THAT MUCH TOWARD YOUR OWN PERSONAL SUCCESS. No man can live and prosper unto himself alone, for you are interdependent, and, realizing this, as good citizens, you should unite and pull together for the common good, and, doing this, you will prosper as a community and as individuals.

NO TOWN CAN STAND STILL. IT MUST EITHER GO FORWARD OR DECLINE, AND IT IS UP TO YOU TO SAY WHICH IT WILL BE.

Some towns hustle and grow—that is, the people hustle and the town grows. They get the habit of boosting until every citizen becomes a booster, and pretty soon its reputation spreads and it becomes known far and wide as a good town, while others lapse into a state of innocuous desuetude—an easy rock along manner—that soon classes that particular place as a dead one.

If you are knocking and complaining stop it. Nothing hurts a town more. If you cannot say something good don't say anything, and, above all, don't knock. If you are not a booster become one.

The success of the retail merchant depends on the patronage of his home people, the home jobber is largely dependent on the patronage of his home retailer, the banks are dependent likewise on the success of all, while the success and happiness of the people depend on the success of the business men.

Now, one of the greatest injuries you can do your home town or community—to the business men who are dependent on your patronage—is to order your goods from mail order houses or patronize merchants in other towns. Every dime sent from your community to a mail order house is removed entirely from local circulation. Its principal and interest are both gone, whereas the money spent with the home merchant goes immediately into circulation and in due course comes back to you.

THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS ANNUALLY ARE BEING SENT TO MAIL ORDER HOUSES FROM THIS COMMUNITY, THUS DEPRIVING HOME MERCHANTS OF THEIR RIGHTFUL PATRONAGE.

And yet, no matter how much the home merchant is dependent on the patronage of his home people, he is supposed to give and to aid in every work undertaken for the material betterment of the town, and he does, being often coerced into giving by the demands of his customers, fearing to offend them because of the fear of loss of their patronage.

UNLIKE YOUR HOME MERCHANT, MAIL ORDER HOUSES PAY NO TAXES OR PRIVILEGE LICENSE TO DO BUSINESS IN YOUR COMMUNITY. NEITHER DO THEY CONTRIBUTE TO YOUR CHURCHES, SCHOOLS, PUBLIC ROADS, CHARITIES OR ANYTHING ELSE, AND, ABOVE ALL, THEY GIVE NO EMPLOYMENT TO ANY ONE IN YOUR FAMILY OR HOME TOWN.

You want your schools kept up, your churches supported, your streets kept in repair, your town properly policed and protected by a good fire fighting equipment, etc. In other words, you want your town to prosper, be well run and the people to be happy and contented. YET IF YOU ARE SENDING YOUR MONEY TO OTHER INSTITUTIONS IN OTHER CITIES AND TOWNS YOU ARE DEFEATING THE VERY OBJECT FOR WHICH YOU STRIVE.

Now, this town building is a serious matter—a great big proposition—and if you are not treating it—its business men—fairly you are not treating yourself fairly. You are undermining the very foundation of your well being.

SOMEBODY'S DAUGHTER

I do not know her name; perhaps you do. I have never seen her face; maybe her picture hangs on your bedroom wall.

By some strange chance her head might some day have rested on your shoulders. She's somebody's daughter; pray God, not yours.

Tonight the claws of the city are ripping at her soul. Loneliness and hunger have sapped her will and false pride has blinded her.

She is not a bad girl, just tired, numb. The dice were loaded. The game was crooked. The odds were too great for her wisdom and strength. The road was strange and the guide-posts lied.

Back-home life was a drab thing and sober-faced. The petty tyrannies of the little town, the eternal sameness of the years, starved her imagination.

Romance was hungry within her and cried for beauty and mystery and adventure. And out of deprivation sprang reckless yearning.

You did not understand, mother-of-her, wherever you are. You could not see with her eyes. Your own were filled with pictures of family wash and cooking and mending and brooms and dust cloths.

Fate has paid you in stingy and bitter pence.

But that is just what she saw, that and the thankless yoke under which the wives of poor men struggle and strain and surrender.

The wings of her fancy kept beating across the miles and carried her into a dreamland of joy and gaiety where work would be as child's play, with real money all her own, to spend as she chose—to buy what she wished.

But the wage shrank when it reached her—its purchasing power shriveled.

Five dollars a week (six, seven if you insist)—just enough to give shelter and sustenance.

At first she was straight—it was in her blood—in her traditions. The women of your family never contemplated the easier way.

But young girls who live alone can seldom protect themselves. Few have the intuition to comprehend until it is too late—some are too weak to fight it out—and some are too weary. And now she has paid the price—she has crossed the dead line.

The city has dropped its mask and she sits staring into its brutal, relentless, inexorable face. At last she realizes all that she has lost—all that might have been—the happiness that patience could have won.

She sees "the man back home" who one day would have brought his love and the children that love would have brought.

The robins are singing in the orchard. Spring has kissed the trees into blossom. The honest fragrance of fresh plowed loam rises from the lower meadow. Soon the wild roses will bare their hearts, field violets will purple the slopes and the sunlight will robe the hills with gowns of gold. But never again for her.

"When we know not the price to be paid, we dare."—Herbert Kaufman in Woman's World.

The following lines were received by the Chronicle from a western state subscriber:

"I enclose above editorial that I picked up this morning. It sets forth very succinctly the fate that befalls many a misguided girl in this great nation of ours. Country towns contribute a far greater proportion than we realize, and the fair town of Cass City, that we all love so much, has paid her toll to the white slaver.

"After reading this editorial my memory carried me back to my younger days when rumor pointed to several wayward girls in that community who went the way that ends in death. I hope the list has not been added to in these latter years. Conditions that are being unearthed these days throughout our country are indeed shocking, and the end is not yet, sad to relate, probably the half has not yet been told.

"It is a fact, that the city lures many country girls, and oftentimes ultimately to their ruin, and boys, too, am sorry to say. Many times have I thanked the good Lord that my early days were passed in a country village, where temptations are comparatively few and where a boy develops more naturally than in the modern city. After a boy or girl becomes old enough to know and can see things as they really are, then if they sell their souls they have but themselves to blame, but if this sad fate befalls them during the period when their characters are forming, who is wise enough to justly place the blame upon the youth, male or female, who doubtless has unwittingly fallen into an unrecognized pitfall?"

Admitted it, Brown—Come, wife, don't you think you are a bit inclined to be always behind hand?
Mrs. Brown—Well, I'll have to admit I wasn't much ahead when I took you.—Judge.

All honor to the man who earns his living by honest toil. He, it is, above all others, who is always pulling for better things. He is always on the front seat of the community band wagon. He is the first resident to greet the stranger and tell him that he is visiting the best town in the state. He is ready to fight at the drop of a hat, the fellow who willingly runs down the community's best along with its worst, and there is something inspiring in his cordial invitation to the chronic croaker to "move somewhere else."

Running a newspaper is just like running a hotel, only different. When a man goes into a hotel and finds something on the table which does not suit him, he does not raise his voice with the landlord and tell him to stop his old hotel. Well hardly. He sets that dish to one side and wades into the many dishes that suit him. It is different with some newspaper readers. They find an article occasionally that does not suit them exactly and without stopping to think it may please hundreds of other readers, make a grand stand play and tell the editor how a paper should be run and what should be put into it. But such people are becoming fewer every year.

HERE AND THERE.
The other day our neighbor aimed a blow at a fly that was crawling on the breakfast table. He missed the fly, but his effort was not wholly wasted. He knocked over his little boy, spilled the coffee pot on the family cat, broke three plates and a cup and saucer, and did ten dollars' worth of damage to the furniture and his wife's feelings.
"Wanted—A reliable man" read Mrs. Bascom from the advertising columns of the paper. Then she raised her glasses upon her forehead, looked severely at her husband, and remarked: "And the world'll wait a considerable number of centuries yet before it gets him."
A Vassar man visiting Detroit was being shown around by a citizen, who said: "Now, let's go and see the Widows' Home." The Vassar man put his finger to the side of his nose and winked and then said: "Not much, Mary Ann; I saw a widow home once and she sued me for breach of promise and proved it on me, and it cost me sixteen hundred dollars. No sir; send the widows home in a hack."
Where there is a will there is a way. Recently a man in an adjoining town wished to attend a show, but had not the means. To steal was not honorable, and to beg he was ashamed. At last a happy thought struck him. He went into a grocery store and bought a package of coffee on time, and so'd it for cash down the street. This gave him money enough to enter the show and buy refreshments.
Every young lady may mark it down as a fact that if she flirts and associates with "pick ups" she will soon have no others for associates. No matter how unjust it may be, there will always be a suspicion that those who are not above making acquaintances in this way are not as pure in heart and mind as they ought to be. It would be unjust to say no pure minded girls flirt. They do and many of them lose their purity by so doing. Others, though not so unfortunate, subject themselves to suspicions which every woman should be above.

Diamond Cut Diamond.

It falls now and then to a law officer to attend a meeting of the British cabinet in order to keep members right on points of law, and a story is told about a remarkable conflict of wit across the table between Mr. Gladstone and an attorney general of the day who had been called in.
The attorney general was Sir Richard Bethell, who was never a very manageable man and was proving a thorn in the side of Mr. Gladstone, then chancellor of the exchequer, with some big schemes on hand.
Mr. Gladstone was determined to take a certain course, and Sir Richard Bethell was equally determined against it.
He told the cabinet that it would be contrary to the law and, by way of supporting himself, produced a bulky and forbidding book of law, from which he read at great length.
Mr. Gladstone asked to be allowed to see the volume and, turning over the leaves, began to read another passage which qualified away the one the attorney general had read and set matters right from Mr. Gladstone's point of view.
Coming away from the meeting, a member of the cabinet asked Mr. Gladstone how he came to know that such a passage as the one he had read was in the book.
"It was not," said Mr. Gladstone, "and neither was the passage which Bethell read."

CHAPTER XII. Hurley's Visit.

AFTER he had gone Kreiser laughed to himself and slowly rocked the little gutta percha tray he held on the table before him. Mrs. Martin, who had lain on the lounge, watched him for a time in silence and at last arose with a deep sigh. Kreiser heard. The "cradling" stopped instantly, and he looked up, with a complete softening of his entire countenance.

"My dear heart, you are very tired," he said tenderly. The woman walked slowly over and stood beside him, looking down with love and dread in her eyes. He slipped one arm around her and rocked the tray with the other.

"Friedrich," she said suddenly. "I want to give it all up. Let's go!"

He raised his head. "Where is your courage, my dear?" he said in gentle reproach. "Where is your courage?"

"I don't know, Friedrich. I'm terribly afraid. I'm panic stricken! There's been too much—too much—Argyle's death!"

"Ssh!" he interrupted sternly.

But the woman's fears were uppermost. "And that morning with the detectives!" she went on, with a shudder.

"Ah, I shouldn't have gone there!"

"That was Hurley!" growled Kreiser, with a frown. "That was his rash advice!"

"No," said Mrs. Martin after a little pause. "I risked it myself—for the money. Honest money! I wanted to be able to say to you: 'Here, now we have enough. Let us cut loose from this life—all these people.' Friedrich, I want to be safe!"

He took her hand and patted it softly.

"They are foolish little fears," he said gently. "Think how we are already safe. And think of all the years that I have spent to make us safe. Look at it!" He lifted a hundred dollar gold certificate from the table. "It is perfect! I could pass that to the experts at the treasury. It will be the first time in the history of the world and"—

He struck his chest, and his eyes flashed—"and it is I who shall do it! In a few weeks the whole country will be flooded with them—Chicago, Denver, San Francisco, New Orleans, Philadelphia, Boston, New York—all on the same day. Then we shall go, with the whole world for our playground!"

But the woman could not be warmed with his enthusiasm. She shivered and her eyes roamed about the half lit room with a haunted, terrified look.

"We shall be hunted always—wherever we go," she declared in a low voice. "We can never get away from it. It's too big Friedrich—it's too big! They'd never let a man who could make a bill like that escape. You know if one of these men were caught he'd betray you to save himself. The government would pardon him—would pardon them all—to get you. Safe! Every prison in the world would be waiting for you!"

Kreiser's head sank slowly, and he stared darkly at the table from under his bushy, knitted brows.

"I shall never go to prison again," he said slowly and ominously. "If I am caught"—He felt her shudder and stopped in the middle of the sentence.

"I hope to God you'll kill me, too, then, Friedrich!" she cried. "I'd never have the courage to kill myself, and it would be the end of everything for me."

He rose and put both hands on her shoulders and gazed long and earnestly into her face.

"Ah, you are a great soul!" he breathed passionately. "You give up everything for me! You leave everybody; you give up your little daughter; you share prison with me! And I!" He made a gesture of bitter despair and self reproach. "I take—take—take! I am the selfish one! And now, when I say I would take my life, you would share death with me. Ah, you are the great soul!"

He turned back to his work to hide the working of the deeply lined face. The woman, too, moved off as if her emotions were too strong to control. She leaned on the mantel and stared into the blackened fireplace in silence for some time.

"Oh, if I could only make you feel as I do!" she exclaimed in dreary despair. "I'm so oppressed, Friedrich!" she turned to him again. "This is a great thing that you have invented—this process of color photography. Think what can be done with it! It would mean millions to you—and fame."

"Yes, my love," he replied gently, but shook his head. "In an honest world—yes! But they would cheat me. They would steal it. And, see, I must have money to finance it, to protect it. Then, when all this blows over—in Germany, perhaps. Who knows?"

The buzzer sounded loudly, and he looked up. "That must be Skidd," he muttered, and walking quickly to the door, he opened it and slipped out into the dark hall. He called softly and there was a confused murmur from below. Then he returned with heavy frown on his face.

"No, it is Hurley," he exclaimed. "Hurley!" echoed Mrs. Martin, staring.

"They're full of her flight. Everybody is now sure of her guilt."

"How terrible!" shuddered Mrs. Martin, with a catch in her voice. "Who is it that Kayton suspects?"

"How could you guess?" laughed Hurley scornfully. "A man with a mind like that! I judge he thinks it's Bruce—because he hasn't taken him into his confidence—and the boy's distracted. He's got the whole city searching for her."

"Friedrich," exclaimed the woman as if suddenly seized with a terrible dread, new and overpowering, "if they never find out the truth they'll never clear her! And if they do find out!"—The hiatus was sternly impressive. Hurley shrugged his shoulders.

"Oh, Kayton will cook up some story to cover his failure," he said lightly, and, laughing quietly, he went out and down the stairs to the street. He did not know that in the upper room of the house next door Manning was swearing at him softly, while two of his associates read his shorthand notes over the boy's shoulder. Manning revered his chief.

When the street door had closed Kreiser looked at Mrs. Martin and shook his head soberly.

"He should have kept away from this detective," he declared uneasily. "It is a bad thing when a man is too bold from apprehension. He should not sniff around traps."

The woman did not seem to hear. "Friedrich," she cried distractedly, "what have I done to Mary? I have tried to keep our lives as far apart as I could, but it seems as if the devil had drawn us together—to ruin her."

"It is not so," he assured her gently, taking her in his arms. "It is the luck of the game, just a little bad luck! It will pass."

"Oh, if you'd only listen to me!" she mourned. "If you'd only come away. If you'd only come away!"

"Bzzzz-r!" warned the buzzer from above the door.

"Who is that?" she demanded quickly. He could feel her turn rigid as stone in his arms, and he patted her cheek with his hand.

"It must be Skidd," he said quietly, and, releasing her, went to the door and softly opened it, listening to the sounds from below.

"Yes, it is he," he said, and frowned slightly. "Gage is with him. I'm afraid Skidd has been drinking."

But Hurley was irrepressible. "Have you seen the papers?" he chuckled.

The Scrap Book

One Better.

While the late Fritz Thaulow, the distinguished Dutch artist, was serving his turn on the international jury of awards of the Carnegie institute provisions for his stay in Pittsburgh were made at a hotel in which the furnishings were most complete and elaborate. The thing that most delighted Thaulow during his stay was the elaborate provisions furnished for bathing and made necessary by the Pittsburgh atmosphere. Thaulow fairly reveled in his porcelain and marble tub, the tessellated pavement and silvered plumbing. One night Mrs. Henry Frick had him to dinner. In a lull of the conversation he turned to his hostess with the thought uppermost in his mind. "You take a bath every day?" he blurted.

It was admitted.

"I beat you," cried Thaulow, with a boy's delight. "I take two."

Carving Your Life.

Chisel in hand stood a sculptor boy, With his marble block before him, And his face lit up with a smile of joy As an angel dream passed o'er him. He carved that dream on that shapeless stone

With many a sharp incision; With heaven's own light the sculpture shone—

He had caught that angel vision. Sculptors of life are we, as we stand With our souls uncarved before us, Waiting the hour when at God's command Our life dream shall pass o'er us; If we carve it then on the yielding stone

With many a sharp incision, Its heavenly beauty shall be our own, Our lives that angel vision.

Bishop Doane.

A Little Bit Awkward.

"It was, to say the least of it," a London letter remarks, "just a little bit awkward that the electric light went out the other evening at the town house of a presumably wealthy widow who had been doing a good deal of political entertaining of late. The guests, to the number of a dozen, had just finished their soup when the unfortunate incident occurred. The scramble to find a sufficient number of candles so that the dinner might proceed was attended with a good deal of difficulty and no little amusement. The butler, who is described as being a bit new to his job, was immediately sent off to telephone to the electric company, report the catastrophe and demand immediate attention to the matter. It was a trying moment for the guests when he returned to the dining room and announced in real cockney accent, 'Please, my lady, the gentleman what's on the telephone says they sent several warning letters unless the account was paid active steps would have to be taken.'"

A New Job For Martin Luther.

The little woman who occupied a seat close to the lecturer on a rubber-neck wagon which was bowling down Fourteenth street in Washington one day was curious. She was determined to get her money's worth out of the trip. The wagon was passing the famous statue of Martin Luther, which stands on a triangle near a Lutheran church.

"On your left," said the lecturer, assuming a pose which would have done credit to Solomon, "is the statue of Martin Luther."

"Who was Martin Luther?" asked the little woman.

"Why," replied the lecturer in disdain, "Rev. Dr. Luther, the first pastor of this church."—Popular Magazine.

Shoo to a Goose.

Samson, the butler at the "big house" on the plantation, enjoyed the pleasures of the table as well as his master. He was even suspected of taking tidbits from dishes before they were brought to the table, and he had a notorious weakness for roast goose. When, therefore, one day he served the goose with one leg missing the master spoke to him sharply.

"Where's that other leg, you black rascal?" he asked.

Samson looked at the maimed bird with a great air of innocence.

"Doan' you know, sah, no goose ain't never got but one laig, sah?"

"The devil it hasn't," replied the master.

"Yarsir, I kin show you, sah, ef you could spar' de time to come look at 'em."

"Show me, then," said the master, rising, "and be quick about it."

Samson solemnly led the way to the duck pond. There in the shallow water the geese stood on one leg.

"Dar dey is, sah," said Samson. "None of our geese has more'n one leg, sah."

But the master said "Shoo!" and the geese put down both legs and ran away.

Samson was not disconcerted. He grinned engagingly.

"You ain't said shoo to de geese on de table, sah."—New York Post.

The Taft Vote in Ohio.

Gus J. Karger, a Washington newspaper man, wrote much of the press stuff for Mr. Taft's campaigns both before the convention and afterward. He is a very close friend of Mr. Taft.

Karger is from Ohio and served on the reception committee at a dinner given by the Ohio society to Mr. Taft.

"Hello, Gus!" joked the president. "Are you one of these Ohio chaps?"

"Sure!" replied Karger. "I'm the fellow who voted for you out there."

"But," persisted Mr. Taft, "I got two votes in Ohio."

"Well," said Karger, "the other one was your own."—Saturday Evening Post.

GIVES WARNING OF PTOMAINE DANGERS

Health Head Urges Importance of Clean Ice Cream Cans.

LANSDING — "With the advent of hot weather there comes an enormous increase in the consumption of ice cream and with this consumption comes the usual reported cases of ptomaine poisoning," says a bulletin issued by State Dairy and Food Commissioner Helme.

"There are two conditions under which ptomaine poisoning is likely to result in the manufacture of ice cream—one is caused by the refreezing of cream that has once been frozen and returned. It is quite a common thing in many rural districts for ice cream to be furnished church socials with the understanding that cream not used can be returned the next day. If this cream is refrozen, ptomaines are very likely to develop.

"Dirt milk cans, and dirty ice cream cans likewise may develop ptomaines from the decomposition of old cream left in the cans. At nearly every railroad station in Michigan can be seen ice cream cans that are being returned, to the manufacturer after the cream has been used, and in nearly every case, the can is unwashed. A can in this condition, when it reaches the factory can hardly be sterilized.

Every retail dealer of ice cream should thoroughly wash all empty cans before returning them to the factory.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Danger.

She was even more afraid of cows than most girls, so when she spied a placid animal recumbent under a tree, peacefully chewing its cud, she at first refused to go through the pasture at all. Her husband calmed her fears to some extent, and they started by when the cow slowly commenced to get up, hind legs first, as they always do. At this the little lady shrieked with terror and said:

"Oh, Bob, hurry, hurry! He is getting ready to spring at us."—Exchange.

Cookery Points

Iced Chocolate.

There are various ways of preparing iced chocolate, but this method permits all the labor of preparation to be done hours in advance of serving time. Scrape or grate a quarter of a pound of unsweetened chocolate and put into a porcelain lined or aluminium saucepan with three-quarters of a cupful of sugar and one cupful of boiling water. Stir and cook steadily until a smooth, shiny paste is formed, but take care it does not burn. Add one and a half pints of boiling water and let boil slowly until a sirup is formed; then remove from the fire and stir every few minutes until cool. Flavor with vanilla and a suggestion of cinnamon, pour into a preserve jar, seal tight and stand in the refrigerator. When ready to serve add three-quarters of a cupful of rich cream and beat with an egg whip until light. Half fill the glasses with crushed ice, fill up with the sirup and top with a teaspoonful of whipped cream.

Nut Shingles.

Nut shingles are sure to be well received. Cream together one-quarter cupful each of butter, lard and boiling water, then mix in one-half cupful of molasses into which has been stirred one teaspoonful of soda. To one-half cupful of brown sugar add one-half tablespoonful of ginger, a little grated nutmeg and clove and a pinch of salt, and add all this to the other ingredients. This amount will require about three cupfuls of flour. The mixture should be chilled and then rolled very thin and cut into strips about three inches long and one inch wide. Spread chopped nuts over these and bake in a good oven. The baking requires only ten minutes or so.

Vanities.

Vanities! They don't sound very filling, but they are worth eating just the same, and they are so simple and easy to make that they are worth trying. Beat one egg very thoroughly, then beat into it one-half teaspoonful of salt and one tablespoonful of milk. Add flour according to your judgment, which being interpreted in the case of anything like cookies always means enough to roll very thin. The chief joy of the cooky lies in its crisp brittleness. Cut the dough into oblong pieces and make two or three bold, lengthwise slashes in each piece, then drop them carefully.

Dandelion Wine.

One gallon dandelion blossoms (gathered when the sun is shining so they will be open). Pour over them one gallon of boiling water. Let stand in a cool place for three days; then put into porcelain kettle, with the rind of three oranges and one lemon cut fine. Boil fifteen minutes; then strain. Add three pounds of granulated sugar and the pulp and juice of the oranges and lemon. When lukewarm add half of a yeast cake. Stand one week in a warm place, strain again, let it stand until it stops working; then bottle. This is said to be an excellent remedy for rheumatism.

Hard Sugar Cookies.

Hard sugar cookies are very easily made, for the directions are of the simplest. Cream one-half cupful of butter and beat in one cupful of granulated sugar and then one-half cupful of milk. Add one-half teaspoonful of soda, a pinch of salt and the flavoring. Almond is very good, also lemon. Use enough flour to make it possible to roll the cookies very thin. They will be very attractive if cut into hearts, diamonds, clubs and spades and a dainty addition to the card party refreshments. They should be baked to a delicate brown.

Raspberry Sherbet.

Place in a bowl one-half pound granulated sugar, one quart lukewarm water. Squeeze in the juice of three lemons, the grated rind of one and the white of an egg. Press through a cheesecloth into a bowl one-half pint preserved raspberries, add two drops carmine coloring and one tablespoonful Swiss kirschwasser and add the mixture to the water lemon ice, thoroughly mix with a silver spoon for five minutes. Strain through a Chinese strainer into a small ice cream freezer. Pack around with a liberal amount of ice and salt and let the mixture stand until well frozen. Serve immediately.

Carrot Saute.

Boil young carrots not longer than your forefinger for eight minutes in salted water. Rub and scrape off the skins, cover with boiling water and cook tender. Drain and cut each carrot into strips. Heat a tablespoonful of butter in a frying pan with a half teaspoonful of white sugar, a little salt and pepper and when it boils lay in the strips of carrots. Cook three minutes after the bubble commences.

Pineapple Cake.

Cream one cupful of butter with two cupfuls of sugar, add one cupful of pineapple juice very gradually, beat in one and one-half cupfuls of flour; then fold in the stiffly beaten whites of eight eggs, add another cupful and a half of flour and beat well before pouring into the baking pan. When baked spread the pineapple over the cake and cover with a plain icing.

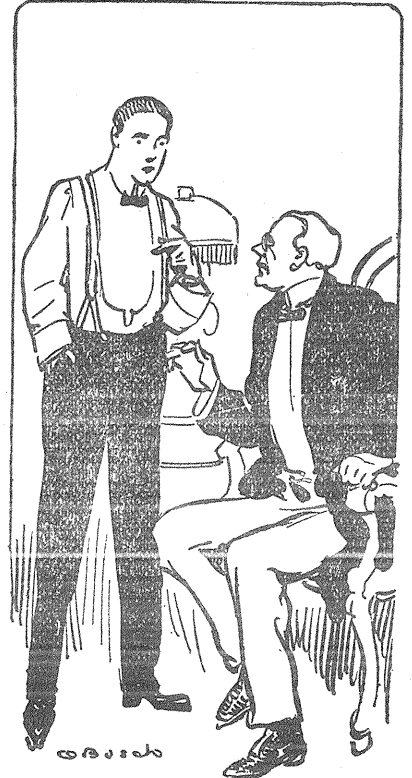

FELT SORRY FOR HIS TUTOR.

But the Student Wanted His Shirts, and He Got Them.

In "Princeton—Old and New," by James W. Alexander, is the following story:

"The mode of life was simpler in those days than now, but the same humor which still makes collegians so comic effervesced in the old days. When, for example, William Pennington, son of a former governor of New Jersey and himself afterward speaker of the national house of representatives, roomed next door to Senior Tutor Topping it was the custom for each man to hang on the outside knob of his door the bag containing his soiled clothes for the laundry.

"Pennington stuffed his own shirts one day in Tutor Topping's bag and waited for the day when the clean linen was returned and laid out on Topping's bed. Then, knowing that two of the younger tutors were in 'Topping's

"PLEASE RETURN THE SHIRTS I LENT YOU," room, Pennington knocked at his door. On entering he put on an embarrassed air, as if hesitating to speak in the presence of the other tutors.

"Topping in a lofty way said: 'These gentlemen are my friends. I have no secrets from them. Say what you wish.' Pennington still hemmed and hawed, but, again urged to speak, blurted out: 'It is not my fault, Mr. Topping. I did not want to say anything about it now, but as you insist I must ask you to please return the shirts I lent you, as I am in need of them.'

"Topping's rage and horror at being thus addressed before the younger tutors, who looked up to him as a Magnus Apollo, may well be imagined. He began to upbraid Pennington, who interrupted him by saying: 'It's no use, Mr. Topping, trying to deny the fact. I see the shirts there on the bed with your own things!' The tutor stood aghast, but Pennington stepped to the bed and picked out his own shirts, marked with his name."

Hard Work.

The idle man does not know what it is to enjoy rest, for he has not earned it. Hard work, moreover, tends not only to give us rest for the body, but, what is even more important, peace to the mind. If we have done our best we can rest in peace.—Lord Avebury.

Pretty Crooked.

People who have seen cottonwood lumber warp when it came from the saw can appreciate a story about the first sawmill erected at Fort Scott. After the first day's sawing the owner of the mill came down from town, where he had been celebrating the "opening" with the boys. He looked over the crooked boards scattered about the yard for a moment and then inquired with drunken gravity:

"Boys! (hic, has that lumber been measured yet?"

"It has not," replied the foreman of the mill.

"Well, when it gets still take a (hic) corkscrew and measure it."

A Cheerful Reminder.

A story is going the rounds about a London girl who went out to Australia with a number of other factory hands. She had never had any training as a domestic servant, and she knew nothing of cookery or housework, but she did not hesitate to apply for a position as cook. She was taken on, but her mistress very quickly discovered her deficiencies. Servants are scarce out there, however, so she set to work to train the girl.

After several lessons in cookery she at last produced a fairly satisfactory dish, tastefully surrounded by scalloped paper. Her mistress complimented her upon her neat ornamentation.

"Oh, yes, mum, that's one thing I can do well," was the reply. "You see, my trade in London was to make them scalloped linings for coffins!"

A Gracious Cook.

When Prince von Bulow was German ambassador in Rome he had an extraordinarily splendid residence. On his return to Berlin the house he occupied was far from equal to it, and the countess had misgivings as to how their chef, a very superior person who had been spoiled by a big salary and unstinted praise, would reconcile himself to the change, so before they started for Berlin she sent for him and explained in most apologetic terms, "Oh, please," replied he—"please don't for a moment permit your husband to give up his post in Berlin on my account!"

Don't Be Taken In

If somebody tells you that he can sell lumber or building material at a lower price than we offer you, don't be "taken in" without investigating. He's offering you "bait." We don't believe there's a dealer in the country who makes prices lower than ours. We don't see how he can—and stay in the business. But you know there's a big difference in lumber, and quality cuts a big figure. We will never slight the quality in order to cut the price. We want your confidence and your steady trade, and that we know we are not entitled to unless we give you a square deal all around and all the time. Try us.

Good Reason for His Enthusiasm. When a man has suffered for several days with colic, diarrhoea or other form of bowel complaint and is then cured sound and well by one or two doses of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, as is often the case, it is but natural that he should be enthusiastic in his praise of the remedy, and especially is this the case of a severe attack when life is threatened. NEW SCHOOL BOOK LAW Defines Three Ways in Which Books May Be Handled.

According to the new law which goes into effect August 15, it appears that school books may be handled in three ways. First, the retail dealer may purchase them from the publisher, using his own money therefor, and sell them at a fifteen per cent advance on the wholesale price. Second, school boards may purchase the books from the publisher at the net wholesale price therefor, and may furnish the text books to pupils at actual cost. Third, the boards may buy the books from the publisher at the wholesale price, using the district money therefor, and appoint a retail dealer or dealers as the agent or agents of the school boards. The agent or agents may sell the books at a ten per cent advance on the wholesale price as his commission.

ITEMS OF INTEREST FROM NEAR-BY TOWNS

VASSAR—Mrs. Marguerite Hoxsie, 57, wife of W. J. Hoxsie, president of the Reliance Milling Co., is dead after three days' illness with heart disease.

PORT AUSTIN—The Lunday Hotel barn, owned by Wm. Lunday, with contents including two horses, was totally destroyed by fire Sunday morning. It is believed some one slept in the barn and dropped a match, causing the fire. Loss about $3,000.

BAD AXE—Word has reached here of a terrible accident which happened to Gertrude Dutton, the 10-year-old granddaughter of Mrs. Nancy Garbut, both of Bad Axe, who are visiting in Grand Trunk. While out in the woods the little girl burned her feet so badly in muck fire that both of them had to be amputated.

SANDUSKY—During a scuffle at the boarding house on the Sanilac county stock farm, 2 1/2 miles east of this city, R. J. Leisure, cook, aged 59, of Detroit, was pushed from the steps of the house and his left leg was broken. All the ligaments were torn between the ankle and the knee, the bones shattered and protruded through the flesh. It was necessary to amputate the leg just below the knee.

LAPEER—There was very little interest apparently in the election Monday held for the purpose of deciding the question of a municipal lighting plant and also as to bonding the city for $35,000 to refund an interest bearing floating indebtedness. The season of the year undoubtedly had its bearing upon the light vote cast. The vote on the municipal plant carried by a majority of twenty-two out of 420 votes cast there being 221 votes in favor and 199 against the proposition. It is conceded that the majority of 22 votes is insufficient, as the constitutional provision requires a three-fifths majority, which in this case would require 252 votes in its favor. It therefore lacked 31 votes.

LEXINGTON—The Lexington canning factory has been up against a hard proposition for the past few days. They were right in the midst of the pea canning season when they discovered that the cans they were using would not hold the product. Many cans spoiled completely before the discovery, and the canned goods were hauled into a field and dumped. New and stronger cans were rushed to the factory by express Tuesday, and on Wednesday morning a special train from Saginaw, with a car of cans arrived at the local yards. From there they were hauled to the factory. Many expert chemists and packers in the employ of the company were sent to the factory to help save the canned peas, as it was estimated by one of the officials that the loss to the company would mean about $1,000. Jeffersonian.

BAD AXE—"Rags," the express car tramp dog, was in town over Friday night, coming in over the Saginaw division. He is quite a famous traveler, the trainmen claiming he has visited almost every city in the United States, and always traveling in an express car. When Rags takes possession of a car, only the messenger is allowed to touch any thing inside of it or he will protest very vigorously with his voice, although he was never known to bite anyone. The train men take great delight in making him "talk" by striking the car with their hands or picking up packages inside the car. He always rides with his head and fore feet out of the door, and takes great interest in watching the ground glide by beneath him. You would scarcely call him handsome, with his shaggy coat and dirty blue color, but the boys claim he is the most companionable fellow that ever hit the road.—Democrat.

PIGEON—In Huron county Democratic circles there is considerable skirmishing around for postoffices. At Sebawaing Postmaster Braun has two years yet to serve which is quite a ways off. Julius Armbruster is the only candidate so far to come out in the open, but it is generally understood that later on there will be others in the field for that office. It is understood that Ernest Clabuesch, now assistant cashier of the Pigeon State Bank, will receive the endorsement of a number of prominent Democrats for the postoffice at Pigeon. Mr. Kleinschmidt's term will expire about the first of next year. For the Caseville office it has been hinted that Robert Adams might be the successor to James Reeves. Editor Burrows of the Port Austin News and another Democrat by the name of Kelley are anxiously gazing at the Port Austin office. A report from Bay Port a few days ago was to the effect that J. D. Weeks wouldn't object to being the successor to W. J. Orr.—Progress.

MABEL'S CHITCHAT

Debussy Songs Heard at New York Recital.

HARMONIES THAT JANGLE.

Few Women Apply Principles of Beauty That They Admire Publicly to Their Home Decorations—Drawing Room Done in a Remarkable Scheme.

Dear Elsa—I heard a group of Debussy songs at a recital yesterday afternoon. You know, dear, it's a cult among the musically elect to affect a liking for the works of this very advanced modern French composer. For a long while I have been trying to become an enthusiast of Debussy compositions, but the recital yesterday sounded the deathknell of my efforts in this direction.

The group of songs interpreted by a young English soprano whose name—well, I won't tell you the name, for I can't spell it, and I'm sure you couldn't pronounce it—did everything in harmonical power to bring out the good qualities of the songs. Her efforts were futile, for this composer can bring together the most horrible collection of so called harmonious tones it has ever been my bad fortune to hear. The dictionary says that music is "the art of combining tones in a manner to please the ear." I don't think M. Debussy has ever consulted Noah Webster on this subject, for most of his stuff sounds like a small child strumming aimlessly on the keyboard of its mother's piano.

The artistic eye, however, was perfectly satisfied, even if the tympanum of one's ear received a cruel blow. The English vocalist who wrestled with the songs was the daintiest little creature imaginable. Her frock of tailored white satin was an unmistakable creation of a Parisian couturiere, and its simplicity was of the convincing genre I will try to describe it. The skirt, a plain, rather scant affair, had as its only trimming a single row of medium sized crystal buttons arranged directly up the front seam.

Attached to the very simple bodice were scant panniers after the fashion of Watteau, and the same French artist must have inspired the plait named for him which adorned the back of the frock. This plait, however, did not hang out from the frock, but was applied flat except at the bottom, where it flared slightly. The sleeves set into the drooped shoulder seam were long and close fitting, ending in lace ruffles falling over the hands.

The inevitable touch of black, beloved of the Parisienne, came in the guise of a black chiffon scarf that fell to the waist line at the back and draped carelessly over the arms, being held to the bodice at the right side above the waist line by a chou of black velvet.

Chic, smart little colonial pumps in black kid with big antique buckles finished this very girlish and simple costume. And, Elsa, dear, it was such a relief to be able to see Miss John Bull's pretty feet under the short skirt that had no suggestion of a "slit."

Speaking of another phase of art—interior household art—a young decorator spoke to me not long ago about the hopelessness of trying to make women apply their knowledge of the principles of beauty to their own homes. The average woman, said this young apostle of decorative art, regards painting and sculpture and music as she does the icing on a cake—palatable, but not necessary. The arts, she argues, are pretty stuff to sprinkle over the top of daily living, but as one of the valuable ingredients of a fine existence—oh, no!

It is the rare person who follows the plan of putting to practical use the beautiful effects she publicly admires. As an awful example of what I mean, I called the other day for the first time upon a woman in this town and was ushered into the drawing room to await her appearance. I gasped at the sight of it. Some ancestor must have inherited Joseph's coat of many colors, and out of its remnants she evidently had the furniture upholstered. Three chairs were of flowered red satin, three of brown plush. Four others and a sofa were blue. For fear of missing a shade or two she had hung portieres of brown with a Persian border.

I omit mention of the black embroidered cushions. Naturally I expected to see a woman of uncultured taste. When she entered I was amazed to find dangling from her belt the insignia of a fraternity to which only college women were eligible.

Doubtless she knew all about the laws of harmony and could have defined music in the words I just quoted from the dictionary. But it had never occurred to her that the use of art is to beautify one's surroundings and to have a decided effect on habits of daily living. My hostess herself was beautifully gowned. Of course her dressmaker may have been responsible for the charming result, but there are numberless women who are really inspired when it comes to dressing themselves, but fall far short of the mark in their home furnishings. The ideal person combines the two accomplishments, and, like Browning, we comfort ourselves with the reflection "that the thing I aspired to be and am not comforts me." Until we gossip together again believe me yours devotedly, MABEL.

NEAR TRAGEDY AT VASSAR

Hungarian Beet Weeders Pay Fines For Offenses.

A near tragedy occurred at the Russian farm, three miles north of Vassar last Thursday when John M. Martinka hit Steve Noyoto over the head with an axehandle, making a gash three inches long. Noyoto bled freely, and it was thought the wound would prove fatal, but he was somewhat improved and will probably recover.

The trouble was caused by John and Rosie Martinka and Noyoto trying to live under one roof, and a little jealousy on the part of John. Rosie gave her husband $21 and told him to skip after the fight, and he was arrested at the Michigan Central depot at Vassar, where he was trying to buy a ticket for Cleveland. Deputy Sheriffs Humes and Burgess arrested Rosie and Noyoto in Reese and the three were arraigned before Judge Lyons. Steve was fined $33.15 and Martinka $33.60 or 60 days. The men paid part and arranged to pay the balance.
