Local Happenings

Rev. Spafford Kelsey has just completed his pastorate at Elk and Juhl. Twelve membs, 10 on confession of faith, were taken into the church. The young people presented him with gold cuff links and scarf pin in recognition of his service to them. He will remain a week at his parental home here and sails the following week for Germany to be absent two years. This recalls the honor that was conferred upon Mr. Kelsey last March when it was announced that he had been awarded "The Nettie F. McCormick Fellowship in Old Testament Hebrew" while a student at McCormick Seminary at Chicago. This gives him a trip abroad, travel in the Holy Land and a course in a college in either Germany or Scotland.

All departments at the fair this week have fine displays and some of them are unusually large. This is particularly noticeable in the horse and cattle departments. In the latter, shelter could not be provided for all on account of the number. Several were placed in hastily constructed pens, while others who expected to bring cattle to exhibit failed to do so when they heard that all stalls were in use. The Chronicle goes to press early this week and hence cannot give details regarding the races etc. If the weather man provides favorable conditions, in his line, the outlook is good for one of the best fairs ever held at Cass City.

The average number of gallons of water pumped per minute at the Municipal Light and Water plant during the hot days last week was 150 according to the records of Supt. Straube. During the evening when the lawn sprinklers were in use, water was pumped at the rate of 350 to 400 gallons per minute. While the supply has never failed at Cass City, water patrons should endeavor as much as possible to avoid wasting any water, especially when the pumps are working the hardest. In the event of a fire, all taps should be shut off as the demand upon the pumping machinery is the heaviest at that time.

Saturday evening the home of Mrs. Geo. Martin was the scene of a very pretty reception given in honor of her son, George LeRoy, and his bride. The house was prettily decorated with wild grape vines, ferns and purple and white asters. After the reception dainty refreshments were served. Mr. and Mrs. Martin left Tuesday morning to spend a few days in Lapeer before going to their home in Lawrence where he has accepted a position as superintendent of the schools.

There will be a United States Civil Service examination held at Sandusky, Brown City and Palms, September 13, 1913, for the position of rural carriers in Sanilac county. Under a recent ruling a county eligible list is maintained, and every person passing the examination is eligible for appointment to any postoffice within the county. At present there is a vacancy at Cumber and an appointment will be made from those who pass this examination.—EX.

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Striffler, Mrs. J. H. Striffler, Misses Margaret and Laura Striffler, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Ficker and son, James, Mrs. J. M. Bittner, Misses Ruth, Bittner and Lizzie Paul, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Bigelow and daughter, Eleanor, Miss Mayme Feather, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Schwieger and sons, Andrew and Edward, Mrs. Louisa Schwieger and Miss Kate Schwieger attended the assembly at Sebawaing Sunday.

About thirty-five of the members of the Y. P. A. met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Kaercher Monday evening to bid farewell to Miss Emma Muck, who leaves for Colwood this week. The evening was spent in a social manner and light refreshments, consisting of ice cream and cake were served. Miss Muck was presented with a silver spoon as a token of regard from the society.

G. E. Perkins made a hurried auto trip to Argyle Thursday with a Cass City physician with the intention of welcoming another grandchild to Mother Earth. Grandad and the doctor arrived too late however for the little fellow had already announced his arrival and claimed Mr. and Mrs. James Perkins as his parents.

Miss Maud Brown left Monday morning for Detroit. She will be the guest of Mrs. Wm. Brown in that city for a week and will then go to Highland Springs, Ohio, where she will make her home with her father and attend school.

Miss Ora McKim left Wednesday for a ten days' visit with her sister, Mrs. E. M. Allen, at Lake City. From there she will go to Mancelona where she will teach in the English department of the Mancelona high school.

Miss Belva Tibbals, who has spent the summer months with relatives at Brown City, returned home Monday. She was accompanied by Vernon Foster who will spend this week with his sister, Mrs. T. L. Tibbals.

A. L. Johnson, Ernest Reagh, John Sandham and John Reagh returned Monday from their auto trip to Alpena and other northern points. James Reagh of Hillman accompanied them to Cass City on the return trip.

Mrs. J. H. Scott and children left Tuesday morning for Detroit where they will live for some time. Mr. Scott having secured a position in that place.

Mrs. C. V. Cratzenburg and sons, Donald, Ivan and Karl, returned to their home in Ithaca Friday after a short visit at the home of L. B. Lauderbach.

Mr. and Mrs. L. V. Mulholland of Luther came Monday to visit at the home of D. Tyo. Miss Marie Tyo, who has been visiting them, also returned to Cass City Monday.

Alex Duncanson, who has been teaching school at Ypsilanti, came home Saturday for a short vacation. He has been ill for a short time and hopes to recuperate before beginning the fall school work.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Prutchev and daughter, Irene, and Mrs. Alice Nettleton and daughter, Thelma, left Friday for Alpena where they expect to spend a few weeks. The trip was made by auto.

Mrs. A. Scott and daughter, Eva, of Leonard came Tuesday to visit at the home of J. M. Bittner. Mrs. Scott returned home the same day but Miss Eva will visit here until the last of the week.

RICHARD PARR, SR.

Former Resident Died at Edmonton, Alta., Thursday.

E. H. Pinney and T. L. Tibbals both have received telegrams announcing the death of Richard Parr, sr., at Edmonton, Alta. The end came Thursday, Aug. 14, and the funeral services and burial were held Sunday.

Mr. Parr moved from Canada to Grant township about 35 years ago and lived on a farm there until advanced age and poor health made it prudent to retire from active farm life. He moved to Cass City several years ago and lived here until last spring when he and Mrs. Parr and their daughters moved to Edmonton, Alta., where their sons were located.

Mr. Parr has many friends in Cass City and Grant who extend their sympathy to the bereaved family.

DECKER WILL GROW

W. F. Ehlers Subdivides Land Into Lots for Village.

The extension of the D., B. C. & W. R. R. to the east promises greater activities for Decker. W. F. Ehlers, Shabbona's hustling business man, has purchased six acres of land in the center of the proposed village and this has been subdivided into lots which are now selling at $50 each. A bank, elevator, lumber yard, general store, hardware store, furniture store and hotel are promised industries for the new town. The Shabbona Milling Co. is seriously contemplating moving their plant to Decker.

Decker is located 11 miles from Marlette, 4 miles from Snover and 5 miles from Shabbona.

FOUND IN TUB OF WATER.

Mrs. Harriette Jones, 80, wife of the late M. L. Jones, was found at Vassar Monday drowned in a tub of water by her daughter, Mrs. Riley, of Caro.

She evidently had wandered out of her room into the yard during the night in her sleep, without awakening her daughter, who was taking care of her, and fell into a tub of water head first. Her head and shoulders were still under water when found. She had been in poor health for years. She is survived by a daughter and three sisters.

TRAIN IS WRECKED.

More than 275 passengers escaped death and serious injury Friday afternoon when Pere Marquette passenger train No. 4, on the Port Huron division, went into the ditch four miles south of Croswell.

The train consisted of three coaches and all the occupants were badly shaken up. A panic was narrowly averted in the second coach, occupied mostly by women, who made desperate dashes for exits. Only the cooler heads of the men, who blocked the doors and restrained them, saved a stampede.

A broken truck on the tender caused the accident. The train was running about 40 miles an hour when the fractured framework left the track, sending the cars into the ditch after it. The track and ties were torn up for a short distance.

ACCIDENT NEAR UNIONVILLE

Vassar Parties Injured When Auto Was Ditched.

An auto from Vassar driven by H. Rifenberg and carrying Mrs. Rifenberg, a bride of one week, Stanley and Howard Smith, advertising the Caro fair, was driving south out of Unionville Thursday evening at 8:30 when it went into the ditch at Austin Hayes' and turned turtle. The wind shield was all that saved the party, the glass was smashed but the frame held the machine enabling them to get out alive.

They were going about thirty miles an hour, the first turn was made, but not being acquainted with the road didn't make the second turn, and went straight into the ditch.

Mrs. Rifenberg is injured in the hip and side and otherwise bruised. Mr. Rifenberg was badly cut on the arm and lost much blood and otherwise badly bruised. Stanley Smith has a wrenched back and Howard Smith has a fractured wrist and sprained knee.

The latter was able to crawl out and although injured raised the auto so the lady could get out, while it took several to raise it afterwards.

Stanley Smith is a druggist of Ypsilanti, Howard Smith is manager of the Vassar Opera House and Mr. Rifenberg is in the dray and transfer business. The body of the auto is badly wrecked.

The accident occurred within a foot of the place where the Hover car was turned over and fatally injured Rev. Will less than a year ago.—Unionville Crescent.

CARO FAIR NEXT WEEK

Liberal Appropriations Made for Amusement Features.

Next week will be the big week in Caro and her citizens are preparing to entertain big crowds at the annual fair and night carnival.

The amusement features will be a happy surprise to every visitor. Though much has been said concerning these, it is difficult to comprehend their magnitude and beauty. The Wortham & Allen Shows alone require a showing space of 1200 feet besides the many other amusement devices such as the $20,000 carry-all with an anelectric organ that cost $10,000, the Big Eli or Ferris Wheel, Trip to the Moon and others.

More than $2,500 has been expended for free acts alone and include Japanese acrobats as well as some of the leading circus features of this country. Everyone has heard of educated baboons—three of these will be at the fair also.

Speed events, always a strong factor with this fair, are planned to satisfy the craving of the most fanatic whether his favoritism is with trotters, pacers, runners or motorcycle.

One of the stellar features of the Caro fair will be the daylight fireworks demonstration. Daylight fireworks have never before been shown in this part of the country and fair visitors will be treated to the unusual.

STAY IN MICHIGAN 'CAUSE IT'S BETTER

SO WRITES LOREN A. SHERMAN OF PT. HURON.

Michigan Better for Farming, Business and Pleasure than Other States.

L. A. Sherman of Port Huron, a world traveler has written this interesting and instructive letter to the Pt. Huron Times-Herald:—

Santa Barbara, Cal., July 29, 1913.

How can the slogan, "Stay in Michigan," be made thoroughly effective?

First, of course, there must be business and employment for the support of its people. In general terms it may be said that no other state than Michigan offers better opportunity for profitable business enterprises or for employment with good pay, and no other state is enjoying a greater degree of prosperity at the present time. Port Huron is sharing in this prosperity, but not in so large a degree as might be wished; yet perhaps nothing more can be done to enlarge its manufacturing industries than the Business Men's Association and individual citizens now are doing. Competition is sharp and merciless, and the chances of non-success in any business venture always are greater than the chances of success. The road to success lies along the line of "keeping everlastingly at it."

In these modern days, if a city, or section, or state, would hold its residents and attract others it is not sufficient to provide employment for them. There must be public "attractions," well paved, well lighted and cleanly streets, parks, convenient and cheap means of communication, and opportunities for recreation and amusement. The latter "attractions" will come as private enterprises where there is a demand for them but in the main a village, city section or state is made attractive by "public improvements" of varied character and wide range. Every municipality and commonwealth needs a "business administration" of its affairs, to the end that life may be rendered "worth the living" with the least possible burden upon private industry and enterprise.

In a previous letter I have shown how California is striving to add to its natural "attractions" the lure of public improvements of all sorts to induce easterners to come here with their money. Every possible source of water supply is being tapped, boulevards are being laid out in new sections, and the construction of good roads is proceeding almost "regardless of expense." Hundreds of millions of eastern money has been poured into the state in recent years and still the real estate owners and speculators and business men are reaching out for more and getting it. How can Michigan check the tide of emigration to California, that is coming here for climate and these artificial "attractions?"

I have visited all sections of the United States, giving study to climatic conditions, "attractions," natural resources and business opportunities, and among my conclusions are these: During six months of the year there is no finer climate than that of the lower Peninsula of Michigan.

BOARD AND ROOMS.

To the patrons of Cass City Schools:

I am receiving letters of inquiry regarding rooms and board for students who expect to attend school during the coming year, and I have no knowledge of who would take them or who would not. School begins in two weeks so it will be necessary for these young people to locate in the very near future. I would be glad to get a list of available places, and would thank all persons who are interested in the matter to leave their names at my residence in Cass City.

SILVERWOOD FARMER KILLED

Three Others Hurt as Auto Turns Over in Detroit.

Robert Wilson, a Silverwood farmer was injured so badly Thursday when his automobile collapsed on a pavement in Detroit that he died a few minutes after his body was removed from the wreckage. His brother-in-law, Wesley Harris, and his two sons were with Wilson at the time of the accident Harris was severely injured, but may recover. The two boys, Cecil and Elias, aged 11 and 9 respectively, were slightly bruised.

Witnesses of the accident are unable to account for its cause. They say the machine was traveling 10 or 12 miles an hour, came to a complete stop suddenly, skidded, and somersaulted over backward, imprisoning its occupants between the body of the machine and the top, which was crushed.

Wilson, who is 54 years old, is survived by his wife, Bessie, whom he married about a year ago, and her baby, and four other children by a former wife. They are Douglass, 13; Cecil, 11; Elias, 9, and Earl, 5. Cecil and Elias are the boys who were in the accident.

TO HONOR PERRY

Schools Will Pay Tribute to Nation's Naval Hero.

In order that Perry Day may be properly celebrated in the schools of Michigan on September 10, it will be necessary for the teachers in the state to make preparation, so the department of public instruction has just issued a bulletin of exceptionally appropriate material and this will be sent to teachers upon request. A Perry Day celebration will be doubly significant as it is to commemorate the victory of Perry on Lake Erie, which meant more to Michigan than to any other state in the union, and to emphasize the fact that there has been enjoyed a century of peace between Great Britain and the United States.

The bulletin contains valuable historical material and is attractively illustrated. A description is given of the million dollar memorial to be erected at Put-in-Bay for the building of which Michigan appropriated $30,000.

TOO MUCH CROPS

Lightning Failed to Strike Crandell Barn as Reported.

In reviewing the damage done to buildings north of town, a farmer living up that way mentioned that Harry Crandell's barn had been damaged by lightning during Friday's storm and the Chronicle contained that information last week.

The barn was damaged, but by too much crops instead of lightning, a post having given way by having too much weight to support. The Chronicle hopes that Mr. Crandell and his neighbors will be able to lay the reason for any missing boards on their barns in the future to big crops instead of freaks of lightning as in the present instance.

H. A. BISHOP IS NEW POSTMASTER AT MILLINGTON.

Brown City Business Places Close and Citizens Beautify Village Park.

VASSAR—A petition is being circulated among the business men for their signatures, asking the appointment of P. L. Varnum as postmaster at Vassar.

MILLINGTON—The postoffice was transferred from D. J. Evans, who has held it for five years, to Dr. H. A. Bishop, who held the same position during the Cleveland administration.

CROSWELL—Last week the Jeffersonian started the 56th year of its publication the first number having been printed at Lexington in August, 1858. Few papers in this part of the state have greater claims in point of age or excellence.

BAID AXE—In common with many others The Farmers' Elevator did not have a very profitable year and the financial statement showed liabilities of $13,921.16 with resources of $12,315.91. Another possible resource is a car of beans lost in the Dayton flood after delivery. If these can be realized upon the loss on the year's business will be reduced to $304.50.—Tribune.

BROWN CITY—Thursday of last week was a civic holiday in Brown City. Nearly every business place was closed and more than 100 men and boys gave their day toward making the public playground a more beautiful and useful piece of property. Everyone seemed to enter into the spirit of the day and the work that was accomplished exceeded the expectations of the most enthusiastic.

CARO—The special school meeting to vote on $15,000 bond for building an addition to the brick schoolhouse and $4,500 for heating plant, etc., in the white building, resulted in defeat of the proposition. The count of the ballots showed 61 against to 25 for. The opinion seemed to prevail that $4,500 was too much to put into the old white building, and some were opposed to an addition to the brick school, preferring an entirely new building on a different site. The school board is having plenty of trouble in discovering a proposition which will carry. Meantime no relief for the crowded schools is in sight.

SEASONABLE
NECKWEAR.

Smart Effects In Collars and in Fichus Designed to Accentuate the Picturesque Features of the Modish New Gown.

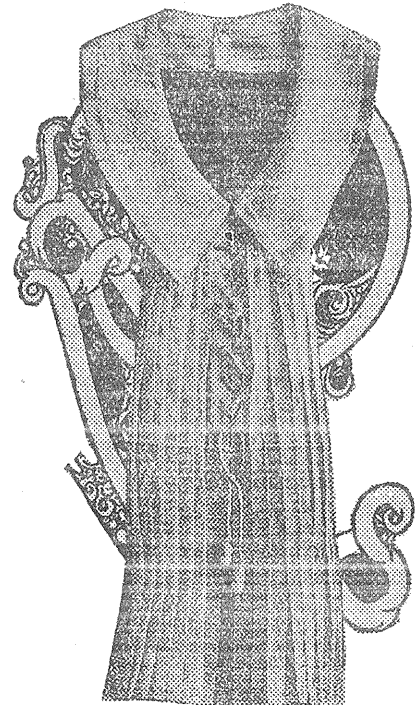

If the neck is not stylishly dressed the whole costume seems wrong. Just now a good deal may be spent on the furnishing of the neck alone. There is the frill of net or the delicate collar which finishes the edge of the bodice.

Frills are more fashionable than flat collars. The really ultra frill goes all around the neck and runs clear down to the belt along the edge of the bodice in front, often down both edges, outlining a little vest of shirred net or lace crossed in demure surplice fashion.

At the back the smartest frills rise in medic effect and are supported by invisible wires, and when this standing frill reaches the front of the neck opening it droops forward toward the throat and not away from it, against the gown, as is the ordinary habit of neck frills.

This fluffiness at the top of the bodice gives the neck a rather thick effect, which is precisely what fashion demands at the present time. The bare throat between the softly drooping frills of lace or net is exquisitely white and soft in effect.

Most bodices are cut rather deeply V at the front, but one may always add a tucker of net if so inclined. The tucker adds another item to the neckwear account.

Then there is the brooch which fastens the vest or tucker. This must be a dainty and yet not too ornate affair. Round or crescent shaped brooches are now more fashionable than long bar pins, and the favorite styles are pearl set circles or crescents and little bluebirds made of enamel.

The string of beads is a very modish feature of the summer frock, and these beads may range anywhere in price from a dollar to several hundred dollars. The short pearl necklace fitting closely around the throat is quite out of date, and fashionable necklaces are in what is called "opera length." the loop of the string of beads coming at the bust line and the necklace as it hangs about the throat outlining very effectively the deep V of the bodice fronts. Ivory finished beads are more fashionable than pearl beads, and one may select a string of colored glass beads or of imitation coral with perfect propriety if the color happens to harmonize with one's gown, for just now color is the fetish, and all dress effects subscribe to it.

There are women so constituted that even in the very hottest weather they can wear feather boas without apparent discomfort. But most of us are glad to substitute for these flatly plaited tulle or net boas finished with pendent ribbon in front. White tulle ruffles are worn with black gowns, black tulle ruffles with white gowns. Sometimes, instead of ribbon, the ends are formed of plaited tulle, held in at the top by a knot of ribbon or an ornament in jet or jewelry. These ruffles, though most popular in white, are also seen in brown, green, blue, purple, beige and black.

Neckwear for summer should be designed to afford the utmost coolness to the neck. Frills and plaitings of net and lace are conspicuous.

The low type is most in vogue, and fichus or side frills are often combined with low collars.

New tan eponge, chiffon lace and embroidered net are all used for the collars.

Fichu effects are popular, some of them being supplemented with a high collar wired like the Elizabethan or medic ruff.

For winter these high wired collars are to be very popular. Though they have been foreshadowed for some time, they are just beginning to be appreciated in Paris.

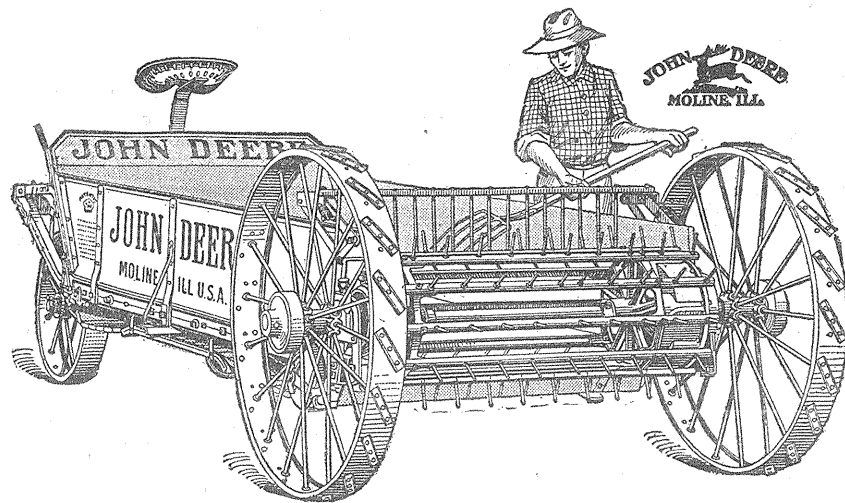

The surplice outline for the front of the bodice makes the fichu popular.

Most advance neckwear, whether it is a collar or fichu, has the edge finished with flutings or plaitings.

Illustrated here is a handsome fichu and collar of net and lace.

John Deere Manure Spreader Did That
For Farmer on Field of Wheat

When the first manure spreader was put out, and in fact for many years after, manure spreaders were considered an expensive luxury, for only the wealthier farmers could afford one. Today every farmer realizes that the manure spreader is an indispensable implement and that he cannot afford to be without one.

The John Deere spreader has been found to be the SIMPLEST in construction and MOST EFFECTIVE in results of any spreader on the market. It is the only spreader that has the beater on the axle.

Accurate account has been kept and it has been determined that a John Deere spreader has gained on a crop of wheat alone $4.80 per acre over the old hand way of spreading manure.

Good in Everything.

The late Sir Wilfred Lawson, well known as an English temperance reformer as well as a wit, invariably took a cheerful view of life and conduct. In conversation with him one day an ardent person railed forcibly against the practice of christening vessels with champagne before being launched. Sir Wilfred did not altogether agree and said a good temperance lesson might be learned from the practice.

"How can that be?" demanded the other.

"Well," replied the baronet, "after the first taste of wine the ship takes to water and sticks to it ever after."

The Sundowner.

A "swagman" or "swaggie"—so called from the "swag" or personal luggage wrapped up in a blanket strapped to his back—is a genuine Australian traveler in search of work, but a "sundowner" is the antipodean professional tramp. The sundowner strolls from one squatter's station to another, always taking care to arrive at sunset, for it is the traditional practice of Australian squatters to give food and shelter to all comers for the night.—Exchange.

Remarkable Cure of Dysentery.

"I was attacked with dysentery about July 15th, and used the doctor's medicine and other medicines with no relief, only getting worse all the time. I was unable to do anything and my weight dropped from 145 to 125 pounds. I suffered for about two months when I was advised to use Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. I used two bottles of it and it gave me permanent relief," writes B. W. Hill of Snow Hill, N. C. For sale by all dealers.—Adv.

Making the Horse Look Sleek.
The mane and tail of a horse may be improved in thickness by simply bathing them once a day with cold water. If any skin trouble is present pour on or rub in a mixture of two parts machine oil and one part of kerosene two or three times a week. Groom the horse thoroughly every day and feed carrots to improve the condition of the skin.—Farm Journal.

A Pony Sentinel.

During one of General Custer's Indian campaigns he had a boy bugler with him who was mounted on a circus pony he had picked up somewhere. The animal was not only full of tricks, but he proved himself a better sentinel than any of the soldiers. Three times in four months he saved the camp from a night attack when no other suspected that danger was near. Upon one occasion the pony, who was loose and walking about camp, discovered a sentinel asleep on his post. That was wrong, and the animal knew it was, and he gave the soldier such a bite on the arm as caused him to yell out and arouse the whole camp. Pony and boy both died in Custer's last battle.

Pleasant Company.

"Alcohol ties queer kinks in the brain," remarked a minister when the subject of intoxicants arose. "As I was going home on a recent Saturday evening I noticed a fellow walking with slow and unsteady gravity just ahead, mumbling to himself.

"As I overtook him I caught his words, and this is what he was repeating over and over to himself, anxious, no doubt, that he shouldn't forget his line of defense:

"'Been drunk an' ain't been home for three days, hic! Goin' home now, 'n' if dinner ain't ready I'm goin' t' raise old Harry. If 'tis ready I ain't goin' t' eat a gol-darned thing!'"—New York Times.

WEEK END BAG.

THE woman who travels as well as the one who pays many week end visits will appreciate the handsome bag illustrated here. It is equipped with all needed toilet belongings, while in the bottom of the bag is a space for a nightgown, kimono and bedroom slippers.

WHEN COOKING SPINACH.

Combining the Vegetable With Other Nourishing Foods.

Sweetbreads and Spinach.—Place the sweetbreads in a saucepan and cover them with cold water. Put the saucepan on the fire and remove it when it boils. Drain the sweetbreads and put them in cold water. Put them on a clean white cloth after having removed the sinews and then cover them with a cloth. Place over them a dish and then a small board, thus putting a slight pressure upon them. After half an hour withdraw them and lard them with small pieces of bacon fat.

Put them in a saucepan the bottom of which is covered with chopped bacon, onions and carrots. Braise them with slight moistening and add a sprig of parsley, thyme and a bay leaf well tied together. Sprinkle with melted butter, salt and lightly moisten with a quart of bouillon. Then let this liquid boil down completely. Moisten again with the same quantity of bouillon, boil it down again, moisten once more and finish cooking in the oven at a gentle fire, sprinkling them with their gravy. Serve them with their gravy passed through a fine strainer. Serve at the same time the spinach.

Bananas and Spinach.—This is an Italian dish. Take two pounds of spinach, one ounce of butter, one egg, three bananas, breadcrumbs, flour and seasoning. Pick and wash the spinach, put into a saucepan with a very little water and a pinch of salt, cook until tender. Peel and cut the bananas into quarters and season with red pepper, egg and breadcrumbs and fry in deep fat a golden brown. Keep hot. Drain the spinach well and melt a little butter in a saucepan and put in the spinach. Season with pepper, salt and nutmeg and sprinkle a little flour over. Cook for a few minutes, then serve on a hot dish with the bananas fried.

Infants' Caps.

For very young infants small, close fitting caps of lawn or silk are worn again. These are trimmed with fine lace or swiss embroidery, and the handsomest are hand embroidered. The Dutch cap and the plain, close fitting cap are the best sellers.

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE.

To freshen a skirt that has become mussed from packing or otherwise, brush carefully, so that all dust may be removed, and then hang over a tub of hot water.

To prevent the window shade from flapping when the window is lowered place an extra set of catches for the shade about a foot lower than the regular place.

To put a gloss like new on white silk wash and rinse well, then put into water containing a teaspoonful of methylated spirit to a pint of water and iron while damp.

Never throw a good tailored coat down carelessly if you wish to preserve its shape.

Sash curtains of swiss muslin hemmed by hand are less likely to pucker when washed than when run up on the machine.

To keep the light of oil lamps clear the burners should be boiled every month in water with a lump of soda in it.

Freshening Serge Suits.

Your blue serge suit may be cleaned in this way: Get half a pint of white vinegar and put it in a large pail of water. Don't make the water too hot—just warm—or the serge may shrink. After washing well rinse in warm water with two or three tablespoonfuls of vinegar added, and the serge will look equal to new. In drying hang the skirts up by the waistband and shake occasionally while drying. Men's and boys' navy serge suits may be freshened up by laying on a table and well brushing with vinegar and water, but not made too damp. Always lay a damp cloth over the articles when pressing.

New Dustpan.

A dustpan which makes it unnecessary to bend down is of brown japanned tin and has a long, removable wooden handle which reaches waist high and is at right angles to the pan.

Profligate Spendthrifts.

The wealth of many of the ancient Romans was reckoned far into the millions. Mark Antony during his somewhat checkered career squandered no less than $735,000,000, and Tiberius left at his death over $18,000,000, which Caligula spent in less than a year. Records show that this spendthrift paid $150,000 for one supper. Horace tells us that Pegellus, a singer, could in five days spend $40,000, and Clodius on a small wager swallowed a pearl worth nearly $40,000. The estate of Crassus was valued at $8,400,000. Lucullus dined at the rate of $8,000 a meal for several weeks, and Apicius squandered nearly $5,000,000 in a few weeks.

Old Philadelphia.

A book printed in England at the end of the seventeenth century says that Philadelphia contained many stately houses of brick and several fine squares and courts. Between the principal towns the "watermen constantly ply their wherries." There are no beggars to be seen, nor, indeed, have any the least temptation to take up that scandalous life.

Thin Gold.

Gold can be beaten so thin that it would take 282,000 gold leaves to produce the thickness of a single inch.

FARMERS' ELEVATOR

Caro Citizens Hold Meeting to Discuss Proposition.

Many expressions of dissatisfaction have been heard from farmers over the market conditions in Caro since the ownership of its two elevators fell into practically the same hands, and there has been much quiet talk about the organization of a Farmers' Elevator Company, to satisfy the demand for greater competition in the purchase of produce.

This condition, says the Advertiser, has arisen in the face of the fact that the local managers of the two elevators have paid prices in competition with each other and surrounding towns leaving unsatisfactory margins when the year rolled round, yet the suspicion is ever present with the seller of produce that he is not getting all he ought to get, and many believe a farmer company would better meet the needs of the community.

Three projects have been privately discussed: The organization of a company to build a third elevator; to buy one of the existing elevators and the third to buy one of the elevators and the flouring and feed mill of Cochran & Honeywell and operate both.

The proposal to build a third elevator met with little favor as it was recognized that the additional expenses involved in the ownership of three sets of buildings, machinery and the employment of three crews of men would prevent a living profit to all.

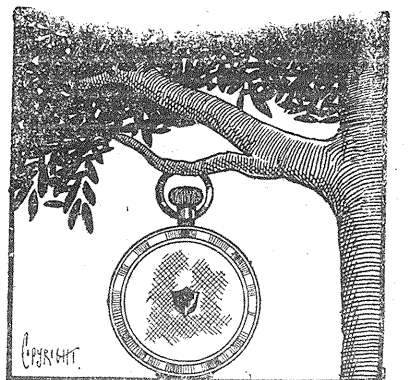

An informal meeting has been called for Wednesday evening, Aug. 20, when the question will be discussed.

Crete's Long Siege.

Crete endured the longest siege on record, beside which Troy's ten years seem but a skirmish. In 1048 the Turks, attempting to conquer the island, laid siege to the capital city of Candia, which, however, did not surrender until September, 1669, after twenty-one years. Again in 1821, when the Cretans revolted, the defeated Turks were able to hold the fortified cities against all attacks, and many of them were still uncaptured when the powers intervened nine years later.

The Argyle Case

A Novelization by J. W. McConaughy of the Successful New Play by Harriet Ford, Harvey J. O'Higgins and Detective William J. Burns, In Which Robert Hilliard Is Appearing :: ::

Copyright, 1912, by Journal-American-Examiner.

"You don't need me to clear her," she protested desperately. "You know she didn't do it. You know it was some one else. Why don't you find him yourself—without me? Leave me alone! Leave me out of it!"

Kayton's figure and his expression relaxed. He nodded in the friendliest fashion.

"You needn't say any more, Mrs. Martin," he assured her quietly. "What do you mean by that?" she demanded, with a new dread.

"You have told me what I wanted to know," replied Kayton. "How—what?"

"You have told me it was not Dr. Kreisler," he answered to the unspoken question. "You wouldn't risk going to the electric chair to protect a dead man?"

"You can't frighten me with that!" She whirled upon him furiously. "I had nothing to do with it, and you know it! You know who did it! You want me to make a confession to hang him with, and I won't do it! I won't do it!"

Kayton opened the door of an ante-room as the telephone buzz sounded. "Wait here a little," he said gently. "I may need you presently, even if you are unwilling to help me."

Manager Leischmann on the telephone announced some important arrivals in the outer office—Mr. Hurley, Miss Mazurek and Bruce, Mrs. Wyatt and Miss Thompson. The last party was the first received, and after a happy reunion and much excited explanation Kayton bundled them into one of the consultation rooms that opened off his sanctum, obtained a few necessities from Manning, who was in the outer office, and then he was ready for the lawyer.

As for that worthy, he did not enter with his wonted manner of pushing everything out of the way. He was almost reluctant, and his eyes were troubled. Kayton apparently noticed nothing of this, and his greeting was as cordial as ever.

"Well, I'm very busy this morning, Mr. Kayton," he replied, in response to the detective's inquiry as to how he did. "But I wanted to oblige you. What was the clew?" he inquired.

He did not settle himself comfortably in a chair and light a cigar. He remained standing above the desk.

Kayton was busy with his papers, some of which partly concealed the metal contents of a little pasteboard box.

"It's a little better than a clew," he replied at last cheerfully, looking up. "I think we've got the man that killed Argyle."

Mr. Hurley was paler than usual, and any one looking for signs would have noticed that more of the scant color left his face.

"Well, well," he began slowly.

"Sit down," interrupted Kayton with a hospitable wave of his hand toward the chair where Mrs. Martin had sat. But Mr. Hurley did not immediately avail himself of the offer. His lips had gone dry, and he moistened them before he asked:

"Ah! Who is it? Who is it?"

"Sit down and I'll tell you," replied Kayton lightly. The lawyer slowly sank into the chair, never taking his eyes off Kayton's face. The latter swung his chair around so as to directly face his visitor.

"Mr. Hurley," he inquired pleasantly, "did you ever try a lawsuit?"

Mr. Hurley started and stammered slightly as he answered:

"I'm—er—I'm an office lawyer."

"Oh!" murmured Kayton. He eyed the lawyer, and the lawyer stirred uneasily.

"Mr. Hurley," asked the detective quietly, "when did it first occur to you that Mr. Argyle was out of his mind?"

Mr. Hurley raised his eyes and met the detective's squarely.

"I don't get you," he said slowly.

"You will," was the grim assurance.

"You surely didn't think you'd interest a man in his position—a millionaire—in a scheme for promoting counterfeiting if he was in his right mind?"

Mr. Hurley was silent for a moment, but he no longer looked disconcerted. He knew now why he had been brought to Kayton's office. He gripped himself to fight for his life.

"Any business affairs that Mr. Argyle intrusted to me were private and confidential," he said, very deliberately. "I can't discuss them. Mr. Kayton, you forget that I am a lawyer."

"I don't forget it—I don't believe it," retorted Kayton.

Mr. Hurley achieved an excellent appearance of righteous anger suppressed.

"What do you mean?" he demanded. Kayton handed him the last page of the fake confession.

"Do you know that signature?" he inquired. With a hand that trembled not the slightest the lawyer adjusted his eyeglasses and studied the document.

"As you saw in the morning papers," continued Kayton grimly, "before you packed your bag, we arrested your friends last night and confiscated all their counterfeit money—all except the $100 bill that had been left with Mr. Argyle. I advised Mrs. Martin to do what she could for herself by making a complete statement of the facts as she knew them, and you'll be sorry to hear that her confession of what occurred between you and Mr. Argyle in the library that night charges you with murder."

As if he had paid but scant attention to Kayton's words, the lawyer tossed the paper back on to the desk.

"It's a lie!" he said coolly. "That's all a fake—to protect herself."

"Then you mean to say that Mrs. Martin was responsible for the death of Mr. Argyle?" demanded Kayton swiftly.

"That's exactly what I mean to say," returned Mr. Hurley. "I had no connection with these people whatever, except professionally for Mr. Argyle. I was retained by him"—he hesitated. "For what purpose?" demanded Kayton.

"For a perfectly legitimate purpose," replied the lawyer. "This woman thought she had a claim on Mr. Argyle—she was trying to get money"—

"C'm!" interrupted Kayton. "What sort of a claim?"

"I don't know."

CHAPTER XV.

The Case Is Cleared Up.

KAYTON laughed—a short, unpleasant laugh—and stepped quickly to the ante-room door. "Mrs. Martin," he called, "I'll have to trouble you to come in here again."

In obedience to the summons the woman slowly entered the office and paused when she saw Hurley. Before they could more than exchange glances Kayton said abruptly:

"Mrs. Martin, Mr. Hurley has just said that you murdered Mr. Argyle in an attempt to obtain money from him."

"What!" she gasped, and Hurley winced for the first time before her blazing eyes. "You, you!" Then she pointed her finger at him and turned to Kayton.

"It's a lie," she said with quiet intensity. "He killed him!"

"I believe you!" exclaimed Kayton, with a grim heartiness and a passing gleam of triumph in his gray eyes.

But Mr. Hurley was not beaten yet. "Mr. Kayton," he said contemptuously, "there's nothing whatever to connect me with the murder, and you know it."

"Oh, yes, there is!" Kayton contradicted him and there was a new and nasty ring in his voice. "There are several things. You came to my office to ask about that 'N. M.' personal and then immediately tipped off Mrs. Martin."

"All in my professional capacity," declared the lawyer doggedly.

"As a counterfeiter?" inquired Kayton, with light scorn.

"As a lawyer."

Kayton leaned toward him and his eyes snapped.

"It was as a lawyer, then, that you advised Kreisler last night to cease the practice of his profession until conditions were safer—for counterfeiting?"

The last vestige of color left the man's face, and Kayton could see that his forehead was moist.

"I don't recollect having given any such advice," he declared. He tried to maintain the contemptuous note, but there was a sudden hoarseness that he could not control.

"I was afraid you wouldn't," said Kayton grimly, picking up the sheaf of typewritten dictograph notes. "That's why I reminded you." He glanced at one of the pages. "It was as a lawyer, I suppose, that you exclaimed, 'This is a plant' when you heard that I had put Miss Mazurek in the house?"

As a lawyer, you laughed and said, 'So he's using me to throw the real criminals off their guard?' As a lawyer, you concealed from me that Mrs. Martin had a claim on Mr. Argyle. As a lawyer, you persuaded her to go to Mr. Argyle the night of his death to use her influence for your own purposes!"

Mr. Hurley wiped his forehead with his handkerchief and crushed it in his hand.

"You can't bluff me with any frame-up story of this sort," he rasped out in a hoarse voice.

Kayton gazed at him a moment and then dropped the papers on the desk.

"Well, Hurley," he said disgustedly, "you can go to the devil your own way. If you haven't sense enough to see that it's better to make a clean breast of it and stand for a charge of manslaughter you can go to the chair as a counterfeiting crook that tried to blackmail an old man and murdered him when he rounded on you! You're under arrest, and the charge is murder in the first degree!" He picked up the telephone as Hurley made a gesture to restrain him. "All right, Leisch," he said.

"Just a minute, Mr. Kayton!"

"You're just a minute too late," retorted the detective. "Here, boys," he went on, as a couple of his men appeared at the door. "Take this fellow away with you."

The next instant the handcuffs were on his wrists and the officers were searching his pockets. But he hardly noticed them. His face had suddenly grown haggard, his eyes dull with despair.

"Before God, Kayton!" he began, despairingly. "I tell you it was an accident! He'd gone into that counterfeiting, and all of a sudden he shifted and threatened to show me up. I took her there to use her influence to try to square it, and he tried to shoot me!"

"You knew all along that the man wasn't sane!" cut in Kayton mercilessly.

"I—I knew he was queer," stammered Hurley, now eager to admit anything that might bring a gleam of mercy to the hard, cold eyes that gazed into his. "But—but—"

Kayton's mouth shut grimly. "Better save that defense for the jury."

"But I tell you"—the tortured man's voice rose almost to a scream—"I tell you he'd have shot me! As soon as he heard who she was he pulled that gun, and I knocked it out of his hand and he tried to strangle me. I didn't want to hurt him. I just bent him off, trying to defend myself, and the first thing we knew he was dead on our hands!"

"I don't want to hear your troubles, Hurley," said Kayton coldly, sitting at his desk once more. "Tell them to the district attorney. Go on, boys! Take these apologies along with you."

And, still struggling, pleading, abject and terrified, he was dragged out of the office.

Kayton heaved a long, deep sigh, shook his head and turned to Mrs. Martin, who had drawn back against the wall while the terrible scene was enacted.

"Mrs. Martin," he said as gently as if he had never been inflexible in his life. "I suppose you would like to take care of Dr. Kreisler?"

Instantly her whole manner and expression softened wonderfully, and her eyes filled with tears.

"Oh, yes, yes!" she exclaimed, coming eagerly toward him. "If I only could!"

Kayton nodded sympathetically. "I'll send some one with you as soon as I can," he said, "and arrange that you'll only be detained as a witness." He interrupted himself to send for Miss Mazurek and went on: "I'll see you in about a half hour, Mrs. Martin, and I want to talk the case over with you."

The Next Instant the Handcuffs Were on His Wrists.

You think I've treated you brutally. I have, but it was the only way I could save you."

The woman's lip trembled, and her hand went to her breast.

"If I could feel anything at all I'd thank you," she said uncertainly. "But I'm dead—here!"

Kayton turned quickly to greet Miss Mazurek.

"I thought you'd like to say goodbye to Mrs. Martin," he suggested.

"Oh!" exclaimed the girl. "Shan't I ever see you again?"

"No!" was the low but emphatic response.

The girl held out her hand.

"Goodbye," she said gently.

The woman quickly seized the proffered hand and drew her close.

"Goodbye," she said brokenly and looked into the girl's eyes. "You're where I was twenty years ago. You have just the same possibilities for love and self sacrifice. This man loves you!"

Kayton turned a rich, blooming crimson and groped for something under his desk. As he groped he swore at it—whatever it was—under his breath.

"He's waiting to take your life and make it what he wants it to be," went on the woman. "Like me, you'll give everything."

She held the hand tightly, pressed it to her lips and gazed into the girl's face.

"Well, what matter?" she said softly. Then suddenly releasing her she turned abruptly and hastened out.
"Who is she?" gasped the startled girl.
Kayton coughed and continued the search, now among the papers on his desk.
"Poor soul!" he exclaimed, and his voice trembled, but not entirely from sympathy. "She had a daughter about your age—and lost her."

"Oh!" Miss Mazuret glanced toward the door as if of half a mind to follow. "I must do something for her."

Kayton looked up at her quickly.
"Anything you want to do for Mrs.
Martin you can always do through me," he said gently. There was a dull knocking in his ears that confused him until he realized that it was his own heart and that it was making this communion because the girl resolutely refused to meet his eyes.

"Oh, thanks, thanks!" she murmured confusedly. There was a silence. Kayton felt that if he didn't speak he would shriek and run out in a moment.

"Miss Mazuret," he said, and he seemed to have ridiculously little control of his voice. "The man who killed Mr. Argyle has—confessed. You're cleared." (Pause.) "And Bruce is cleared." (Longer pause.) "And now —you can go home—and forget all about this."

Then there was a very long pause, and Kayton had to hold himself hard and keep telling himself that he never had any such idea, anyway. At last the girl raised her eyes.

"No, I can't," she said simply.

"Mary!"
His feet got tangled in his chair and before he could extricate them the telephone jangled. He seized it viciously.

"Well, what is it?" he snapped. "Oh, Chicago he banged! Joe, I'm not going. You come in here in about a half hour—or, say, an hour—and I'll give you instructions. Take Cortwright with you. Yes—I've got an urgent case here."

"An urgent case?" questioned the girl anxiously.

"Yes," he said softly and smiled.
"Ours!"

Mothers! Have Your Children Worms

Are they feverish, restless, nervous, irritable, dizzy or constipated? Do they continually pick their nose or grind their teeth? Have they cramping pains, irregular and ravenous appetite? These are all signs of worms.
Worms not only cause your child suffering, but stunt its mind and growth.
Give "Kickapoo Worm Killer" at once. It kills and removes the worms, improves your child's appetite, regulates stomach, liver and bowels. The symptoms disappear and your child is made happy and healthy, as nature intended. All druggists or by mail,

The Love of a Woman.

If I loved a man I should love him so completely that I should never think of anything in which he had not the first and greatest share. I should see his kind looks in every ray of sunshine.
I should hear his loving voice in every note of music. If I were to read a book alone I should wonder which sentence in it would please him most. If I plucked a flower I should ask myself if he would like me to wear it. I should live through him and for him.
He would be my very eyes and heart

PROTECTION FOR CAMPERS.

Canvas Floored Tents For Hunters and Automobilists.

The larger of the two tents shown in the accompanying illustrations is designed especially for the motorist. The other is an excellent outfit for the hunter or fisherman.

The most important features of these tents are the canvas floor, which forms one piece with the sides and back, the absence of tent poles and the arrangement of protected ventilators.
The canvas floor prevents bugs or snakes from entering the tent, and when the floor is stretched over a bunch of leaves and grass a soft, dry bed is provided. The ventilators, of which there are four to a tent, are all adjustable from the inside, allowing as much or as little fresh air to enter as is desired.

The tents may be erected by throwing the roof lines over the branch of a tree and making fast. The larger of the two tents folds into a package but seven inches in diameter and twenty inches long.

DANGEROUS DUSTS.

Accumulations in Factories the Cause of Many Fires.

The danger of explosion or inflammation from the dust which collects in the more or less inaccessible places about factories and workshops has of late years claimed more and more of the attention of fire prevention experts.
There now seems to be no doubt that such accumulations of carbonaceous dust have been responsible for a great many fires the cause of which in the past was considered very much of a mystery.

In a recent report on this subject Dr.
R. V. Wheeler records the results of a long series of tests of dust collected from the roof timbers and other places of dust refuge about factories and workrooms. From most of these dusts he was able to produce inflammable gases by heating at comparatively low temperatures. He found that the finer the dust the greater was the danger of inflammation. The dusts from sugar and dextrine proved the most inflammable in his series of sixty samples.
Other dusts which under certain conditions may prove dangerous were shellac composition, cork, chicory, horn meal and mustard.

New Port of Ceylon.

A deep sea port has recently been laid out at Colombo, Ceylon, and it is to be ranked among the great ports of the world. The work started in 1895, and the area included within the protecting jetties is no less than 653 acres, which is somewhat more than for the port of Dover. A vast area had to be filled in so as to obtain ground for erecting the storehouses, quays, repair basins and coal docks. The jetties which protect the port in an almost continuous belt represent a total of two miles length. Good provision for the future is seen in the great size of the repair basin, this having about 700 feet length. The port has a depth corresponding to that of the Suez canal, but it is planned to deepen it to thirty-six feet upon three-quarters of the area. As to the cost, it is counted that the work involved an expense of $15,000,000, which is not high considering the scope of the enterprise. The present tonnage of the Colombo port is 10,000,000 tons.

Increasing Power of Explosives.

Increasing the power of an explosive by the addition of such metals as aluminium or silicon, whose oxidation during the explosion gives rise to an enormous amount of heat, is the method patented by Roberto Imperiali of Brescia, Italy, announces the Engineering and Mining Journal. When tungsten is alloyed with aluminium the thermal energy of oxidation is increased and the aluminium is rendered more resistant to the action of oxidizing salts.
Tungsten may be alloyed with both aluminium and silicon and a still more advantageous result obtained, or the tungsten silicide can be used.

These mixtures or alloys reduced to powder before mixing increase the power of any explosive to which they are added, due to their great heat of oxidation.

The Red Radish in Science.

An alcoholic solution of the skin of a red radish serves as an excellent indicator or test for acids and bases. In the presence of acids the colorless solution turns pink, while with bases—alkaline solutions—it turns yellow. It is well known that many plant extracts such as litmus and animal products like the cochineal bug possess this property of developing marked colors with acids and bases, but no other indicator is so simply made.

GIVE US A TRIAL.

by sending away to some so-called manufacturer for his lumber, we want that man to give us a trial. He will find that he can do a mighty sight better right here at home, where he can see what he is getting, before paying for it, than he can by sending his money away for material that he doesn't see until after it is paid for and it's too late to kick.

If you are going to build, don't place your order for your material until you get an estimate from us on the bill.

THE GIRL WITH THE HALO HAT WEARS IT WITH A COQUETTISH AIR

SMART HAT AND GOWN.

NEVER have opportunities for picturesque effects been so many as with the prevailing fashions. Illustrated here is a costume that might have done credit to some of the fair ladies who posed for Sir Joshua Reynolds. The gown is of pale yellow crape, with an apron tunic of chiffon embroidered in gold. A great scarlet poppy is attached to the black velvet sash on the left side. The wide floppy hat, with its frill of platted black net, is what is known as the halo hat, the halo effect being imparted by the frill. The girl who dons it wears it with a coquettish rather than a salutary air, as one would expect.

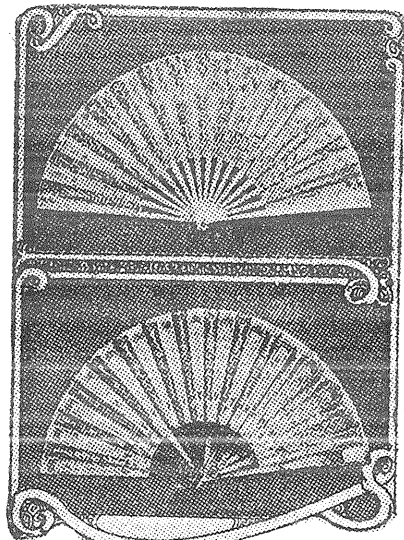

TOILET ACCESSORIES.

They Should Harmonize With the Color and Style of the Gown.

Milady is exceedingly careful in the choice of the accessories to her smart afternoon or evening toilet.

Fashion demands that the color note shall be a harmonizing one. Even the fan must emphasize the style period which the gown suggests, and dainty spangled and hand painted ones are popular. The lace fan is always modish.

Sashes in red, green, black, white and yellow, combined in stripes, are made of wide silk ribbon with a central wide stripe of velvet. These sashes are finished with black silk tassels four or five inches long. They supply character and style to white frocks of crape or satin.

White silk stockings, embroidered in colors, with gold and silver thread intermingled with colors, show the demand for rhinestone trimming. The centers of the flowers so elaborately formed are composed of tiny bright stones.

The black lorgnette ribbon is a feature of this season's dress. The narrow black ribbon of moire silk has tiny gold or jeweled slides and from it may depend, in lieu of a lorgnette or monocle, a locket, watch or any other trinket. The narrow line of black against a white bodice is particularly smart and effective. These ribbons are seen in navy blue, crimson, even in green and pink, but black is the correct monocle hue, and a ribbon of any other color is not correct form.

Button Trimmings.

Buttons are used now in unstinted quantities in trimming. Blouses, dresses, jabots, coats and skirts are trimmed with them in every conceivable style. The small buttons in curious shapes and very bright colors will be the most popular. Ball and semiball shapes are still popular, but what is called the floral crystal button is the newest. A clear cup shaped crystal button, with white porcelain center, decorated with tiny floral patterns, is a novelty. Pear shaped colored crystals and round crystals, small shaped, with a rose design in center, are also new styles. Bulgarian effects still continue among the fads of the hour. These are to be seen in crystal and in crochet. Another result of the Bulgarian craze is the revival of flat metal buttons decorated in conventional Bulgarian designs. These were very popular some years ago.

The perfect kitchen utensils are those of aluminum—easy to keep clean and very light to handle.

MIXING CONCRETE.

Care Must Be Taken to Use Only Clean Sand and Gravel.

Concrete, a manufactured stone, is made by mixing together portland cement, sand and stone or gravel, writes J. P. Peck in the Chicago Tribune. Various proportions of each are used, depending upon the use to which the concrete is put. About half an hour after mixing the mass begins to stiffen until, in from half a day or a day, it becomes so hard that it cannot be dented with the hand. By a month it is hard as stone—indeed, harder than most stones.

There are a few precautions that must be observed in mixing concrete, precautions whose neglect may mean the loss of an entire piece of work, to say nothing of the time and labor involved.

Keep the cement in a dry place. Do not use fine sand.

If a large quantity of fine sand is handy obtain a coarse sand and mix the two together in equal parts. This mixture is as good as coarse sand alone.

The sand should be clean. The presence of dirt is easily ascertained by filling a fruit jar with sand to a depth of four inches and adding water until it is within an inch of the top. After the jar has been well shaken the contents should be allowed to settle for a couple of hours. The sand will sink to the bottom, but the mud will form a distinct layer on top of the sand.

Great care should be used in selecting the "coarse aggregate" (stone or gravel). The pebbles should be closely inspected to see that there is no clay on their surface. A layer of clay prevents the "binding" of the cement.

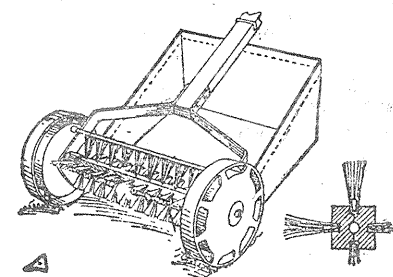

Water for concrete should be clean and free from strong acids or alkalis. This mixture in which all spaces (called "voids") between the stone or gravel are filled with cement is the ideal mixture. This mixture is rarely attained, as the voids in each load of gravel or sand vary slightly, and in order to be absolutely safe it is well to use a little more cement than will just fill the voids.

HANDY LAWN SWEEPER.

Cutters on Old Mower Replaced by Revolving Brushes.

A correspondent of Popular Mechanics tells how an old lawn mower was easily converted into a lawn sweeper that served to pick up leaves and cut grass in a satisfactory manner.

The sweeper was quickly constructed with little expense by removing the revolving blades and substituting a brush. The center part for holding the bristles of the brush consisted of two pieces of wood cut to the length of the old blades and then grooved to fit over the mower axle. They were fastened together on the axle with glue and nails, after which a hole was drilled through the wood and axle and a pin driven in to prevent the finished brush from turning on the metal axle.

The tufts of bristles were taken from a couple of old brushes, three-sixteenths inch holes, nine-sixteenths inch deep, were bored into the four sides of the wood axle three-fourths inch apart and the tufts well glued and inserted in them, then further secured with wood pegs or wedges. The ends of the bristles should just clear the knife on the mower when they are revolving. In running this machine over the lawn the brush will throw the leaves into the apron at the rear.

Cloth Pinions For Gears.

In place of rawhide or paper for noiseless, shock absorbing gearing, cloth or cotton fiber pinions are now being used with great satisfaction. The cloth is piled up between steel shrouds, subjected to a hydraulic pressure of several tons per square inch and held in compression by threaded studs passing through both shrouds and filler. The teeth are then cut. The pinion is as strong as cast iron. The teeth are elastic enough to come to a good bearing across the full width of the face. They are not affected by atmospheric changes and are not damaged by contact with oil. In fact, they are soaked in oil to exclude moisture and furnish constant lubrication. Such gears have been designed for transmitting from one-sixth to 150 horsepower.

Railroad Cars For Invalids.

The German railroad system provides a specially designed car for invalids and cripples who can afford to use it. Every possible convenience for the sick is contained in the car, and a compartment, opening on the level of the station platform with a double door, so that a stretcher can be carried in without difficulty, is set apart for the invalid and attendants. The other section of the car contains a kitchen and a handsomely upholstered compartment for members of the family and accompanying friends.

Revising the Geographies.

Recent explorations around the arctic and antarctic poles make necessary a revision of all geographies. These say that water covers two-thirds of the earth's surface, land being only one-third. The latest figures are: Land, three-sevenths; water, four-sevenths.

STAY IN MICHIGAN

'CAUSE IT'S BETTER

Michigan and the southern section of the lake region. For summer beauty, including richness of foliage, fields of green and gold, and variety of scenery, a large portion of the country from central Kansas to the Atlantic coast is unsurpassed. Michigan with its lakes, rivers, fine farms and beautiful villages and cities, being scarcely excelled in scenic beauty by New York or New England. California, in my estimation, at no time of the year presents natural scenic beauties so pleasing and restful to all the senses as those of Michigan and most other northern states during the summer.

It is my belief, based upon close observation and study, that on the average the man who cultivates the soil of Michigan intelligently stands twice as good a chance for a "good living" and a liberal return on his investment as the average agriculturist and horticulturist of California and other Pacific coast states; and as to business opportunities and the chances for employment with good pay, Michigan offers much more than the new comer can hope for in California.

The farmers of Michigan need good roads. They need them to render the marketing of their products easy and comparatively inexpensive. They need them to render farm life less isolated and more attractive. They need them for both business and pleasure motoring, as it is certain that in the future nearly every well-to-do farmer will have his motor car and seek to enjoy all its advantages, which cannot be realized without good roads.

Over a million automobiles are owned and used by the people of the United States today. California has approximately 115,000 registered motor cars with a population less than that of Michigan. Michigan has less than fifty thousand, with an annual production of cars in its factories of more than three times that number. Why should California lead Michigan by so large a proportion. One reason is that California has more residents of wealth and leisure than Michigan. Another and very potent reason is that most Michigan roads are poor during all seasons of the year, and many of them practically impassable for automobiles except in midsummer, while California has hundreds of miles of as good roads as there are in the world, and most of its roads are fairly good the year through.

It is certain that ownership and use of motor cars will increase rapidly in the future, until they become a chief means of pleasure travel and recreation for all the people, and for short haul business purpose. Hundreds of thousands of the residents of Michigan now count motoring their chief healthful recreation, and unless good roads are provided for their use thousands of those whose business and financial circumstances will permit will seek homes in California or some other more enterprising state within the next few years. To Michigan as a state, and to its people individually, it is a "business proposition" of the greatest importance to build comprehensive systems of good roads.

LOREN A. SHERMAN.

CARO—Elijah S. White, Elmwood's pioneer resident, was in Caro Monday, and received many congratulations from his numerous friends here. Mr. and Mrs. White passed their golden wedding anniversary, August 9, at their pleasant farm home, where they have lived a half century and where Mr. White began making a home in the wilderness in 1855, before Elmwood township was named. He held all of the town offices, and was supervisor twelve years. Mrs. White was a pioneer school teacher. Both Mr. and Mrs. White came from New York in 1855.—Courier.

OWENDALE—B. C. Banfield had his left leg and arm, and also the left side of his face filled with bird shot, Friday morning. The Smith & Warner farm of which Mr. Banfield is superintendent, has been bothered by sheep-killing dogs, and an armed watch was being kept for the dogs. Mr. Banfield accompanied by his son, Donald, had gone to the woods early in the morning to look out for them and with his son sat down on a log to read a letter. Phillip Keck, son of one of the beet-workers on the place strolled along on the lookout for dogs. His shot-gun was discharged and the load struck Mr. Banfield full in the side and two of the small pellets struck Donald in the leg. With the assistance of young Keck the wounded man walked to the house, and Drs. F. L. Morris of this place, and Sugnet of Gagetown were summoned. The doctors say that the greatest danger in the case now is the liability for blood-poison.—Herald.

Names of the Cowslip.

The cowslip or "paggie" has an immense variety of names to choose from. "We call it in English cowslip, or cowslap, or paggle," wrote Turner in 1548. And in the modern "Book of Flowers," by Katharine Tynan and Frances Maitland, there are collated not only such variants of "paggie" as pagle, paggle, beagles (Cambridgeshire) and cow-peggles (Hertfordshire), but palsy wort or palsy weed (from its supposed value in cases of palsy), crewells, fairy cups, horse buckles, cuckoo flowers, Peter wort, herb Peter, Peter keys, Peterkin, fairy bells, ladies' keys and cow striplings. The highlanders call it only "sobrach"—pleasant—London Globe.
