NEW SHERIDAN IS SOLD AGAIN

THOMAS DALRYMPLE IS THE NEW PROPRIETOR.

Credit for Two Recent Sales Goes to Farmers and Lenox Real Estate Agency.

The ownership of the New Sheridan hotel has passed into new hands the second time in a little more than a month. On Dec. 16, Michael Sheridan sold the hotel building and furnishings to J. H. Honsinger of Crosswell. The first of this week a deal was made whereby Thomas Dalrymple of Smith Creek became the new proprietor. He took possession Wednesday morning.

A 200-acre farm of Mr. Dalrymple near Smith Creek figures in the transaction, which is now owned by Mr. Honsinger. The value of the farm is said, by parties in touch with the deal, to be $20,000.

Credit for the sale is given to the Farmers and Lenox Real Estate Agency. This agency also engineered the first sale of the hotel.

Mr. Dalrymple is well known around Smith Creek, has the reputation of being a good mixer and possesses other qualities of value to a hotel man. He formerly conducted a temperance hotel at Wales, St. Clair county.

HENRY KRUG

Funeral Held at Bethel Church on Wednesday.

Henry Krug, a respected farmer, died at his home in Elkland township on Saturday, Jan. 17. Mr. Krug had always been an active and vigorous man until two years ago when his health began to fail. Last September he went to Ann Arbor to consult specialists. After an examination, they found the patient not strong enough to undergo an operation. Since that time he has gradually grown weaker and death relieved his sufferings Saturday.

Henry Krug was born at Waterloo, Ont., on April 25, 1863. At the age of nine, he went to Huron county. In 1884 he was united in marriage with Miss Grace Purcell of Sheridan township and in 1902 they moved to Tuscola county where they have since resided.

Mr. Krug was a high-minded and sincere gentleman and was very actively interested in the church life and work of the community where he resided. He was a member of the Methodist Protestant church. Funeral services were held Wednesday at the Bethel church, Rev. W. B. Weaver of Pt. Huron and Rev. Holliday of Gagetown officiating. Besides the wife, deceased is survived by three sons, Harvey, Christopher and Dougald and one daughter, Mrs. Bert Clara, all of Elkland township; three brothers, John Krug of Bad Axe and Christopher and Jacob Krug of Uby; and three sisters, Mrs. Lloyd Morrison of Sheridan township, Mrs. Alexander Watson of Bad Axe and Mrs. Frank Kenney of Detroit. Other relatives from a distance who were present at the funeral were: Wm. and Robt. Purcell of Rodney, Ont., Mrs. Gean Parks of Detroit and Mrs. H. E. Morris of Bay City.

WORKING ON BRICK STACK.

Workmen started last Thursday to erect the brick smoke stack at the new power house building and within a week had nearly half of the 80-foot structure completed. The stack will weigh about 80 tons when finished.

Geo. Burt, a local contractor, is engaged in putting down the second 6-inch well at the new power house and yesterday noon had reached the depth of 110 feet. The first well was 187 feet deep when completed. An excellent quality of water was found in great abundance.

SOME QUEER CUSTOMS

Prevail at Weddings of Russian
Couples—Costs a Dollar to Dance

Some queer customs prevail among the Russian population of Sebawaing. When a couple prepare for marriage the bride's parents fit out both bride and groom with wedding clothes. It is also the custom at the wedding feasts of these people to have a dance, at which the orchestra generally consists of one of their number who plays the accordion. Any one desiring to dance with the bride must first pin a dollar bill on her dress and often the amount so appended reaches a comparatively large sum.

A few days ago a young Russian was expecting his fiancée from the old country and was making preparations for their marriage as soon as she arrived. She was expected with an acquaintance coming from the Fatherland, but when he came he brought the news that the maiden remained across the water. Not dismayed, and unwilling to disappoint his friends whom he had already invited to the wedding, the prospective groom went to one of his countrymen here and asked the hand of one of his marriageable daughters. Assent was promptly given and the marriage will be held on schedule time.—Blade.

PUT SHERIFF ON SALARY

Change Effective Jan. 1 Next in Saginaw County.

The board of supervisors of Saginaw county gave approval to the measure introduced last week providing for placing the office of sheriff on a salary basis after the present year and making changes in the office of county road commissioner, both of which had been reported favorably by committee. Few changes were made in the bill relating to the sheriff's office. The salary of that official is placed at $3,500, while the undersheriff will receive $1,800, a reduction of $200 from the salary originally provided in the bill. Other changes are of minor nature. Only three negative votes were recorded on the proposition to change the system in the sheriff's office.

SEATING CAPACITY OF CHURCH TAXED

REVIVAL MEETINGS DRAW BIG AUDIENCES.

Chorus of 100 Voices Under Leadership of Mr. Coffin Demonstrates
"Music Hath Charms."

"My! wasn't that a great service?" "Did you ever hear such splendid singing as that great chorus gave us under Mr. Coffin's directorship?" "Those solos he sings are sermons." "Coming? Of course! Cannot keep me away now—it's wonderful—these services."

The above expressions have been overheard by a reporter for the Chronicle and it but tells what is the dominant subject in our city these days—"The Revival."

Predictions Come True.

As was predicted, this town is passing through one of the greatest religious awakenings it has seen for years. The revival has captured Cass City, and were you to have witnessed the sleighs and cutters and big "bobs" coming into town you would see that it has reached out to the surrounding towns. At the close of a recent service a man came to Mr. Coffin and said, "I'm so glad to have been here; it was worth the coming." Some what amused, the director of music asked, "How far did you come?" "Oh! we drove 24 miles but that is not far; we will sing all the way home."

A certain merchant of town vouches for the truth of the following: "Many people outside are attending the services, also incidentally our stores." "Do you know," said this merchant, "these meetings are having a wonderful effect on our customers. They come in as happy as though they were preparing for some festival, and they buy good sized orders, intermingling between the order that they were at the revival last night. I say the meetings are fine business mediums, also productive to cheer instead of vice versa."

Music Attracts.

Coupled with the great work of Dr. Andrews is that of the great chorus—one hundred and more voices under the leadership of Harold R. Coffin of Chicago. "Music hath charms" is truly demonstrated each evening. Following the short inspirational service in the choir rooms the chorus take charge for the next half hour. Again at the close of the sermon another half hour is devoted to singing. Although the benediction is pronounced, it is no uncommon sight to see the great congregations again seated and remain so as long as the chorus sing. To have the privilege of listening to the rendition of the various hymns and greater selections is a rare treat. Such numbers as "Crown Him," "I Shall Not Be Moved," "Glad Day," "Saved," or "God Will Take Care of You," tell of the talent and voices that can be used in our city under leadership. The musical feature of the service has a charm and effectiveness to all who come. At the conclusion of some great climax—as only Mr. Coffin can draw from his singers—one wants to applaud but then again to hear, "Now the Day is over," "Lead me Gently Home Father," brings one to a sense of rest, comfort and tenderness of its own, that cannot be explained.

Mr. Coffin's solos have been those of sermons in song and many times the congregations have broken to tears like that of one person. "I love to sing to these people," stated Mr. Coffin, "for they seem so hungry for the Gospel in song." In speaking appreciative words of the chorus the director was heard to say, "Yes, indeed they do sing, and I am proud of them and their work. To direct this chorus and later on both chorus and congregations, carries with it a joy I cannot tell you of. The assistance of Miss McGregory at the piano and Mr. Wood as violinist is support par excellence."

Pastors and Members Line Up.

The pastors of the different churches and their members have come out enthusiastically with the evangelists and are faithfully and zealously giving their entire time and energy to the success of the meetings. As a natural consequence, the church, as a whole, (for are not the many churches one in the meeting, therefore, it is proper to state "church") is enjoying a great uplift and being wonderfully strengthened.

Evangelist Andrews' methods and his power of swaying the great congregation nightly is nothing short of

Some Hot Shots Fired by Evangelist J. B. Andrews.

Some of our religions are like an eight day clock. "Tick, tick, tick, tick" that is all they say—just mechanical old gait and pace—no go or life or "ginger."

I would rather a woman came at me shooting a pistol than with her scandal-mongering tongue. Sister, the devil will get you if you keep on peddling scandal, but after all he won't get much, will he?

I see no difference in playing poker for silver dollars and playing bridge-whist for silverware.

Some short-sighted preacher may preach a rich old sinner to heaven, and some ancient preacher may have said that "Colonel Dives was a generous man, kind to the poor and needy and sick" and people believed that old lie, who knew no better. But God's word says he was in hell, no matter what friendly preachers may say. God says he awoke up in hell.

If a man calls you a liar, and you are a liar, you have no right to complain. If you are not a liar, then he's a liar, and you have your foot on his neck right there.

If you start out to lick the other fellow don't pray over it first; if you do, prayer will take the last drop of fight out of you, before you can say "Amen."

one willing to be used as a worker and mouthpiece for God.

Mr. Andrews is not a "great" preacher as that word is usually understood, but that he is a great expounder of the Gospel in the tongue of the plain, simple, honest hearted person, is apparent. He inspires confidence.

GROWTHS HINDER WORK

Many School Children Suffer from Adenoids and Enlarged Tonsils.

Seventy-five per cent of children who fail to keep up with their grades in school work are mouth breathers. The cause of this condition is usually enlarged tonsils or adenoids or both. These throat growths interfere with the normal process of breathing, forcing the child to breathe through the mouth rather than the nostrils. If a child shows a tendency to breathe through the mouth, the parent or teacher should insist upon a medical examination and if the growths are found to be present to a dangerous degree they should be removed, as otherwise the entire physical condition and sometimes the mental condition of the child is impaired. Adenoids and enlarged tonsils make a child much more susceptible to colds, sore throat, tonsillitis, pneumonia, tuberculosis, anemia, catarrh, ear diseases and not infrequently less of hearing, while defective speech, dullness and lack of the power to concentrate often result, interfering with the student's progress in schools.

Evidences of adenoids are found in practically every schoolroom. The pronounced cases often cause the jaw to become deformed so that the upper teeth protrude and the arch is narrowed. While the enlarged growths are sometimes outgrown, the effects of them are permanent.

LIKES SPLIT SKIRT

One Editor Evidently in Favor of Latest Creations.

"I notice that all the pious old hypocrites of the country are loudly condemning the split skirt," observed a brother editor, after he had quit rubbering at a flash of a green petticoat that flitted by the window. "Personally," he said "the sight of a graceful ankle is a much more pleasing sight than the bustles and hoop skirt the ladies once wore, and for the life of me, I can't figure out why the sight of a lady's shank should retard civilization. The new fangled skirts, at least, don't encroach on the city sweeper and make the fine collection of microbes and street sewerage that the long skirts the women used to wear did. As near as I have been able to figure it out, the fashions in feminine clothes were started in an imbecile asylum and it has only been in late years that old Mr. Commonsense has had anything to do with them. Despite the knockers, none of whom incidentally ever shut their eyes at the 'terrible' sight, I contend that nothing as pretty and graceful as a feminine ankle was ever meant to be covered up and deprived of sunlight and ventilation. The slit skirt, in fact, is but another step in my humble judgment, towards the glorious day of woman's emancipation, now so near at hand."

HOW TO KILL BEAN DISEASE DISCUSSED

JOBBERS SEEK TO LEARN ABOUT
BEAN CULTURE.

Effective Remedies for Bean Afflictions Must Speedily Be Found.

That diseases which ravaged the bean crop of 1913 cost the farmers of Michigan $2,000,000, and that effective remedies for such afflictions must speedily be found, was the opinion expressed by almost every one of the 250 bean jobbers of Michigan, who assembled in mid-winter convention at Detroit last week.

Instead of leaving it up to the several thousand farmers of the state to fight menace to what is fast becoming one of the most important industries in Michigan, the bean jobbers are seeking to learn all about bean culture and to remove what prejudice the bean grower feels toward the middleman.

The entire delegation listened Wednesday afternoon to a paper on "Bean Diseases and Their Treatment," by Professor J. A. Muncie, who for a long time has studied bean culture. The information he furnished will be given general publicity among the state granges.

Honorable N. P. Hul' of Dimondale, represented the state grange. He referred to the past relations which had existed between the growers and the jobbers. He urged for co-operation in the fighting of bean diseases, and in the marketing to the best advantage for all.

There is a spirit of optimism concerning 1914 prospects. The tightness of money during the past few months affected the industry, said the jobbers. As many beans were placed for sale on the market in four months of 1913 as are usually brought out in nine months. A similar condition is not expected for this year.

THE NEWSPAPER EXCHANGE

Liner Advertising Gives Intimate
Story of Community's Life.

There is no section of the newspaper that comes home closer to where people live than the liner advertising. No matter how much more important theoretically the news from Mexico may be, the fact that your neighbor has offered his house for sale at a certain price touches you much more closely.

From these columns you read the intimate story of the town's daily life. The housewife is curious to know who is advertising for positions as servants. Working people want to know who is asking for help. People who own or who wish to buy or rent real estate are interested in the pending transfers. It is hard to find a class of people who do not follow these notices week by week.

Hence it is perfectly astonishing how many answers are often received from a simple little insertion in the "To Rent, For Sale, and Want Columns." Anything you can do by personal inquiry is multiplied a hundred fold by the press.

Some people will put in hours or days and time worth dollars, running around and making inquiries haphazard, when they want to rent a place or sell some property. Meanwhile a few nickles or dimes spent in the newspaper would reach a hundred fold more people. Usually the man whom you expect to interest has other ideas, while the newspaper brings inquiries from strangers and sources that would never occur to you.

This kind of advertising permits the buyer to get the best price, because he learns whether there is to be any competition. It gives the seller the most advantageous trade, because he finds whether there is really to be demand.

In many places farmers are already doing good business through the parcel post by newspaper advertising. They are developing a trade that would rather pay a special price than buy through middlemen. The liner ads are time savers and money earners.

CHAPTER XIV. The Prodigal Husband.

THE unlucky Brock, wild with rage and chagrin, had paced his temporary prison in the top story of the Tirol from 11 o'clock till 2, bitterly cursing the fools who were keeping him in durance more vile than that from which they had generously released him. He realized that it would be unwise to create a disturbance in the house by clamoring for freedom, because, in the first place, there already had been scandal enough, and, in the second place, his distrustful bondsmen had promised faithfully to seek out the devoted Conzle and apprise her of his release. He had no thought, of course, that in the meantime she might be duped into paying a bribe to the guard.

Not only was he direfully cursing the trio, but also the addepatated Medcroft and his own addepatated self. It is to be feared that he had harsh thoughts of all the Medcrofts, as far down as Raggles. His dream of love and happiness had turned into a nightmare; the comedy had become a tragic snarl of all the effects known to melodrama. It occurred to him at 2 o'clock that pacing the floor in the agony of suspense was a very useless occupation. He would go to bed. Morning would bring relief and surcease to his troubled mind. Constance was doubtless sound asleep in her room. Everything would have been explained to her long before this hour. She would understand. So, with the return of his old sophistry, he undressed and crawled into the strange bed. Somehow he did not like it as well as the cot in the balcony below.

Just as he was dropping off into the long delayed slumber, he heard a light tapping at his door. He sat up in bed like a flash, thoroughly wide awake. The rapping was repeated. He called out in cautious tones, asking who was there, at the same time slipping from bed to fumble in the darkness for his clothes.

"Sh!" came from the hallway. He rushed over and put his ear to the door. "It is I. Are you awake? I can't stay here. It's wrong. Listen. Here's a note—under the door. Good night, darling! I'm heartbroken." "Thank God, it's you!" he cried softly. "How I love you, Constance!"

"Sh! Edith is with me! Oh, I wish it were morning and I could see you. I have so much to say." Another querulous voice broke in: "For heaven's sake, Connie, don't stand here any longer. Our reputations are bad enough as it is. Good night—Roxbury!" He distinctly heard the heartless Edith giggle. Then came the soft, quick swish of garments and the nocturnal visitors were gone. He picked up the envelope and, waiting until they were safely down the hall, turned on the light.

"Dearest," he read, "it was not my fault and I know it was not yours. But, oh, you don't know how I suffered all through those hours of waiting at the cafe. They did not find me until after 2. They were drunk. They tried to explain. What do you think the authorities will do to me if they find that I gave that horrid man bribe money? Really, I'm terribly nervous. But he won't dare say anything, will he? He is as guilty as I, for he took it. He took it knowing that you were free at the time. But we will talk it over tomorrow. I've just got back to the hotel. I wouldn't go to bed until Edith brought me up to hear your dear voice. I am so glad you are not dead. It is impossible to release you tonight. Those wretches have the key. How I loathe them! Edith says the hotel is wild with gossip about everything and everybody. It's just awful. Be of good heart, my beloved. I will be your faithful slave until death. With love and adoration and kisses. Your own Constance."

"P. S. Roxbury has not made a sign. Edith is frantic." Several floors below the relieved and ecstatic Brock, Mrs. Medcroft was soon urging her sister to go to bed and let the story go until daylight. She persisted in telling all that she had done and all that she had endured.

"We must never let him know that we actually gave that wretch nearly $2,500, Edith. He would never forgive us. I admit that I was a fool and a ninny, so don't tell me I am. I can see by the way you are looking that you're just crazy to. It's all Roxbury's fault, anyway. Why should he get up and make a speech in London without letting us know? Just see how it has placed us! I think Mr. Brock is an angel to do what he has done for you and Roxbury. Yes, my dear, you will have to confess that Roxbury is a brute—a perfect brute. I'm sure, if you have a spark of fairness in you, you must hate him. No, no! Don't say anything, Edith. You know I'm right."

"I'm not going to say anything," declared Edith angrily. "I'm going to bed."

"Edith, if you don't mind, dear, I think I'll sleep with you." After a moment of deep reflection she added plaintively: "There is so much that I just have to tell you, dear. It—It won't keep till daylight."

Bright and early in the morning the tired, harassed night farers were routed from their rooms by a demand from the management of the hotel that they appear forthwith in the private office. This order included every member of Mr. Rodney's party, excepting the Medcroft baby. Considerably distressed and very much concerned over the probable outcome of the conference, the Rodney forces made their way to the offices—not altogether in an open fashion, but by humiliatingly unusual avenues. The Rodney family came down the back stairs. Brock was solemnly ushered through the public office by Mr. Odell-Carney and Freddie Ulsterwelt. It is not stretching the truth to say that they were sour and sullen, but, as may be suspected, from peculiarly different causes. At last all were congregated in the stuffy office, very much subdued and very much at odds with each other. Mr. Githens was there. Likewise the gentleman from the bank and a prominent person from the department of police.

Miss Fowler glanced about uneasily and was relieved to discover that her treacherous jailer was not there to confront her with charges. It had occurred to her that he might, after all, have tricked her into committing a crime against the government.

It was quite noticeable that Mrs. Rodney and Katherine did not speak to the Medcroft contingent—in fact, they ignored them quite completely. Mrs. Rodney was very pale and very deeply distressed. She cast many glances at the red eyed and sheepish Mr. Rodney—glances that meant much to the further torture of his soul.

"I am sorry to inform you, Herr Rodney, that the rooms which you now occupy and those of your friends are no longer at your disposal. They have been engaged for from some time this day by a—"

"Look here," interrupted Odell-Carney bluntly, "if you mean that we are not wanted here any longer, why not say so? Don't lie about it. We are leaving today, in any event, so what's the odds? Now, come down to facts. Why are we summoned here like a crowd of school children?"

The manager looked at Mr. Githens and then at the police officer. "Ahem! It seems that Herr Grubetz of the police department desires to ask some questions of your party in my presence. You will understand, sir, that the hotel has been imposed upon by—by these people. It seems, also, that the bank insists upon having some light thrown upon the methods by which Mrs. Medcroft secures money on her letter of credit."

"You are welcome to all that, sir," declared Mr. Odell-Carney, "but I am interested to know just why my wife and I are brought into this affair."

"Because you are guests of Mr. Rodney, sir, I regret to state. We have no complaint against you, sir. You are well known here. The—the others are not. They are—what you call it? Humbugs! It may be that they also have swindled you."

Mr. Rodney at this point leaped to his feet and rushed over to shake his fist in the face of the insulting hotel man. But Edith Medcroft arose suddenly like a tragedy queen and spoke her clear, determined voice stilling the turbulent spirit of her outraged host.

"One moment, please," she said. "This all can be satisfactorily explained. No wrong has been done. It will all be cleared up in time. We—"

"In time?" interrupted the manager. "Madam, this is the time. You are here with a man who is not your husband, yet who purports to be such."

"It may throw some light on the matter if I announce that the gentleman in question is my affianced husband." It was Miss Fowler who spoke. Every one stared at her as she moved over to Brock's side.

"If you will look in the office you will find a telegram there for me," went on Mrs. Medcroft, pale, but absolutely confident. The manager called out through the door. Absolute silence reigned while the reply was awaited.

"No telegram for Mrs. Medcroft last night or today," announced the manager sternly as he glanced through the slim bunch of blue envelopes. "There are four here for a Mr. Brock, who has not yet arrived in—"

"Brock!" shouted three voices in one. A tall man, forgetting his English and his eyeglass, sprang forward and grabbed the telegrams from the manager's hand. "Holy mackerel! Give 'em here!" he shouted. Two eager, beautiful young women were hanging to his elbows as he ruthlessly broke one of the seals. "The chump! It's from Rox! They're all from Rox—and they are two or three days old!"

Just then the unexpected happened. The office door opened with a bang, and the real Roxbury Medcroft stepped into the room. He halted just inside the door and looked about in momentary bewilderment.

"This is a private!" began the manager, stepping forward. A flying figure sped past him; a delighted little shriek rang in his ears. He saw Edith Medcroft hurl herself into the arms of her own husband. At the same moment Brock bounded across the room and pounced eagerly upon the welcome intruder.

"This is my husband!" cried Edith, triumph in her voice, tears in her eyes, as she faced the astonished observers. "Now, what have you to say?"

Northern Michigan Grown Seed Beans

BEANS in this part of the state were so badly damaged last season from blight and rust, we have purchased a carload of Northern Michigan Grown Seed Beans. These beans are free from rust and blight. Farmers who purchased this seed last year got from ten to fifteen bushels more beans to the acre than those who used home grown seed, in some instances receiving $25 to the acre more for their beans than their neighbors who used home grown seed.

The sins of the fathers fall upon the bean crop as well as the human family, and the only way to raise beans free from blight and rust is to secure outside seed grown on sandy land, free from diseases that have gotten in our home crop the past few seasons. Let us have your orders early. Sample can be seen at our office.

A Warmed Over Sensation.

The professional fire fighter is too frequently face to face with danger to regard fires in an aesthetic light, but the feelings of the amateur with a passion for "running with the machine" occasionally show an epicurean flavor. While rambling to a fire in a large town in Massachusetts one citizen overtook another, who was going in the same direction.

"Oh, dear!" the last gasped, quite out of breath. "I hope it's not the stove lining works; I've seen that twice already!"—Youth's Companion.

Age Limit For Cigars.

A cigar, according to a leading dealer, is practically worthless when it has reached the age of ten years. One dealer possesses as a curio a box of cigars that were packed forty-four years ago. In a rash moment the other day he smoked one of the old timers, but he vows he never will smoke another. All the aroma had vanished. Enough flavor was left to show that the cigar was made of tobacco, and that was about all. It burned well, however, and left a white ash.—New York Press.

"Very Remarkable Adder."

"Duncan McLaren, a Radical member of parliament for Edinburgh, brother-in-law of John Bright, a man mighty in figures, sued the Scotsman newspaper for libel," says J. Stephen in the New Witness. "He won his case and on the same day in the house of commons made a speech in which by some serious slip two and two became five or more probably seven. Next morning the Scotsman came out with a leader. 'The highest court in our land,' it was written, 'has declared that we must not call Duncan McLaren "a snake in the grass." We bow to its decision. But in the face of his speech last night in the house of commons we do not think that there is any tribunal that will punish us if we, as we now do, call Mr. McLaren a very "remarkable adder.""

Pleasant Greeting.

In a nearby city there lived a worthy old lady and her son John, who were once called upon to entertain a number of ladies at dinner during quarterly meeting. As John began to carve the broiled chickens he entered upon a flowery speech of welcome, but in the midst of his flattering utterances his mother, who was somewhat deaf, piped up from the other end of the table: "You needn't be praisin' of 'em up, John, I'm afraid they're a lot of tough old hens, every one of 'em."—Chicago News.

Real to Him.

Several years ago, when the late John T. Raymond was portraying the character of that famed optimist, Colonel Mulberry Sellers, he played a certain frontier town. In the play there was a famous trial scene. The jury chosen was composed of supers recruited from each of the cities in which they appeared. As the talesmen did not have to appear until the last act they usually enjoyed the earlier part of the performance from choice seats in the auditorium. On this particular occasion, when the district attorney was getting in some good hard licks on the defendant, Laura Hawkins, for the murder of Colonel Shelby and was denouncing the prisoner in scathing terms, one of the jurors a typical yap, arose and, shaking his fist in the prosecutor's face and with much emotion, said: "Yes, she did shoot him, and it served him — well right I was down in them front seats and I seed it all."

The uproar that greeted this outburst killed the rest of the performance, and John T. Raymond, who was a famous practical joker himself, enjoyed the situation fully as well as the audience.—Chicago Journal.

The American Girl.

A witty comment of President Cleveland on the American girl is recorded in "The Memoirs of Li Hwang Chang." When the famous Chinaman was in New York he was talking with President Cleveland about wives in China and America:

"The president was seeking enlightenment, and so was I. He laughed heartily when I told him that if he were president of China he would have, as he has here, but one wife in full legal status, but that undoubtedly he would also possess a secondary wife in each province or perhaps more. "No, no," he said, the tears of laughter running down his cheeks. "But, come to think of it, he continued, "it takes a man capable of managing sixteen or eighteen Chinese women to govern one American girl."

"That was a long while ago. The men now let the girls govern them."

Tap the "Eternal Seas."

The real inventor will come when he draws water not from the hills, but from the sea. There is water enough for all in the oceans. It is necessary only to separate the salt from the water and salt is supposed to be as wholesome as water when taken separately. Why cannot some genius cut that knot between salt and water and tap the "eternal seas" for the never failing drink of water? The water is there in abundance; the salt is there in superfluity. I merely suggest to some imaginative scientist that he should make a fortune by supplying the two commodities separately and cheaply.—London Chronicle.

Movable Nest Boxes.

It is frequently desirable to have nest boxes which are readily removable from each other. Such an arrangement is shown here. The frame pieces are strongly made of one inch stuff, firmly nailed together. The wires support the boxes and are firmly attached to the two ends and middle boards. Strips may be used in place of the wires if necessary. The nest boxes are made of half inch lumber and are eleven inches wide, twelve inches long and five inches deep. The bottom is made to project six inches, leaving a step for the hens to light on. A space of twelve inches should be left between the wires so as to give sufficient room for the hens.

CARE OF THE DUCKS.

Plenty of Drinking Water is an Essential.

Water in abundance for drinking purposes is a necessity, and amateurs sometimes make a great mistake in failing to recognize that fact, says the Farm and Fireside. Ducks fed on soft mash must have a chance to dip their bills in water to wash out their nostrils or they will be in danger of smothering to death, as the mash gets into their nostrils. Indeed, they sometimes get their nostrils filled with mud and rush to the water dish.

It will be seen that the dish in which water is given must be deep enough so that the ducks may bury their bills in the water. Self feeding fountains are best for young ducklings, as they prevent the youngsters getting their feathers wet, something which must be carefully avoided.

On large duck farms the ducklings are always driven to the houses on the approach of a storm. It is well to have the water dishes in the duckhouses all night, as they frequently drink. Many growers keep a lighted lantern in each house at night in order to keep the ducks from becoming nervous or alarmed and piling up in a corner.

Just Names.

You can see many things when standing for a minute on most corners in New York city. On this particular occasion it was at Forty-second street and Fifth avenue. A delivery wagon came whizzing by. On its side was the lettering "Doctor, the Butcher." Two men noticed it. "That reminds me," said one, "that uptown there is a man named Butcher who is a doctor." "Well, look in the directory some time," said the other, not willing to be outdone. "and you will find that there is Spring in East Twenty-eighth street, and Summer in Grand street, Fall in William street and Winter on Broadway."—New York Tribune.

A Joke on the Girls.

The late Timothy Woodruff once attended an alumni dinner in New York—the dinner of a co-ed college—and at this dinner in the course of a toast the president of the college said: "You can always tell a woman who has taken a university degree." "Tell her!" Mr. Woodruff interrupted. "What can you tell her? You can't tell her anything. She knows it all."

Her husband brought out the coat in a rather shamefaced way. There was no doubt the letter was just where she said. Reaching into the inside pocket, he groped down and down until he at last grasped the envelope. "Yes, my dear," he replied. fidence and possesses the gift of giving his messages with simple directness and with eloquent pathos. His sincerity is as evident as his earnestness is deep and abiding. The evangelists are aiming at no less than 500 conversions in this meeting.

Sermons Have Been Masterful.

It is a very difficult piece of work to state that this or that sermon was the best, for it is apparent that each one has had its own individuality and message to the community, however, the sermon in which "Social Pleasure" was the theme seems to be greatly discussed everywhere. At the very outset the evangelist made it known he knew well his subject from personal experience. "I am sorry to tell you I used to dance, but listen, there is now no more attraction in it to me than it would be to go out of doors and walk on my hands in the snow. I used to drink and there seemed to me times I could not stay out of a saloon, but I would just as soon take arsenic now as touch that stuff. God saved me over 20 years ago and He saved me just as positively as it is a fact you are here. I played cards, went to the theatre, etc., but listen, there has never been anything of that sort in my life since God saved me. Best of all, I don't want it. Paul said, 'If any man be in Christ he is a new creation,' and I know what he was speaking of. I have proven it. If I could get all the church members in this town to be converted and get what I am talking about—real regeneration—that revolutionizes our lives and fills us with God and makes us delight in the service of God, then the problem of the world would be solved. I have no disposition to question your religion and religious experiences but I say to you that when we are regenerated and made new creatures in Christ Jesus the love of these things are gone and we delight in the things that please God."

"Sister, if you say, 'I see no harm in the cards' it is because of a false christ in your religion. You are going to see it some day. You watch what I have told you. Do you know the reason you see no harm in it, is because as you held the deck of cards you only saw the spades, the hearts, the clubs, yea, the prize—that 'Vaaze' (vase). Next time you handle a deck of cards look down until you get to the bottom and underneath the last one you will see that smoking pistol that fell from the hand of the man who killed his fellow man. Look until you see the bloody knife that was used and plunged into a heart by the murderer."

"There are some girls here who should I speak personally to them they would say, 'I see no harm in the dance.' The evangelist told of awful results of the dance, testimonies of the fallen girls, that of those in charge of homes for the fallen, of the representative church bodies, and that all chief of police claim it to be the worst evil to control of all evils. Like a bomb thrown into the meeting the evangelist recently stated, 'I would go to your dances if invited.' Giving due time for it to sink, and during this said time, one hardly knew what would follow for many of the old pillars of the church were in a strange flutter of excitement at such an utterance. Seeing this Dr. Andrews explained conditions on the acceptance of same. 'You must agree to let me offer prayer, then to ask the young men to go to one side of the hall and the ladies the other, and taking partners from their own sex, let the dance go on. I would accept an invitation to your dance only under these considerations.' From the facial expressions it was apparent the gifted divine must continue through life uninvited.

Great plans are under way in the accommodation of over-flow services. The basement of the Methodist church has been renovated and heating arrangements made. A monster men's meeting for next Sunday afternoon is expected to be the greatest of its kind in Cass City.

RODENT PROOF CORNCRIBS.

Old Fashioned Sort Give Way to Steel Structures.

Every farmer knows that corn stored in the ordinary crib is exposed to more or less damage from rats, mice, birds and chickens, and he makes allowance for this loss. The extent of the damage from these sources depends upon the kind of crib used and the length of time the corn is in storage. In the old fashioned rail crib, which is now virtually out of date in the older states, the loss was very great.

During the last few years the steel crib has come into use as a rodent proof structure. There are several makes and styles of these cribs upon the market, but the principle involved in each is the same. A description of two steel cribs in use on the Ohio State university farm may be of interest to farmers who are unfamiliar with this method of storing corn. They are made of perforated galvanized steel, circular in form, and stand on concrete foundations. The perforations admit air, and further ventilation is provided by a perforated steel tube extending up through the center of the crib and out the top. The roof is of steel. These cribs have a capacity of 500 bushels each. They cost $150 apiece, not including the foundation and the cost of erecting.

In laying the foundation for the steel crib the excavation is made, and a foot or so of cinders is put down. On top of this several inches of cement are laid, then a layer of steel-sheets and finally another coat of cement. The steel sheets prevent the moisture from rising from the soil. The floor is raised slightly in the center, so that if water should gain entrance it would immediately run out of the crib.

These cribs have been in use over three years and have proved entirely satisfactory. They are absolutely rat, mouse, bird and chicken proof and, with the aid of a good padlock, are thief proof. Weights were kept of corn stored in them for over a year, and the only loss was due to evaporation of moisture. The steel crib then appears to be the safest place for the farm storage of corn.—Country Gentleman.

It Depends.

"If a man kills another man is he always put in jail, mamma?"

"Not always. Sometimes he is paid by the government to do it, and if he can only kill enough he will have monuments erected to him."—Life.
