CONDENSED MILK PLANT FIRED

DEFORD'S TROUBLE BREWING IN-STITUTION GONE.

Flames Discovered Late Tuesday
Night and Entire Plant a Heap of Ruins.

The plant of the Standard Condensed Milk Co. at Deford was totally destroyed by fire late Tuesday night. The potato cellars of Bruce Bros. located about 20 feet north of the milk plant were saved, the fire fighters devoting their attention to the cellars when they found they were unable to check the fire in the condensory plant.

George Portice discovered the fire while unloading coal at the plant of the Deford Grain and Lumber Co. He gave the alarm and men rushed to the scene of conflagration carrying fire fighting implements. A few reached the second story where the fire started on the west side and tried to put out the flames with hand fire extinguishers. They were unable to make any headway and reported that it looked as though the floor had been soaked with oil. The appearances indicated that the fire was of incendiary origin. Citizens believe that there had not been any fire in the building for several days and an oil stove in the office in the other end of the building from where the fire started was the only means of heating.

The plant was valued between $10,000 and $11,000, it is said, but it had been offered for sale last fall at about $6,500. It is reported that the plant was insured for $6,000.

The original building, 45 by 56 feet, as purchased from W. M. Neep & Son, was enlarged in the summer of 1912 by a two story addition on the south 72 by 26 feet and an addition on the west side 35 by 48 feet.

The affairs of the company have been in a constant turmoil for over a year owing to dissatisfaction among the stockholders and the affairs of the corporation were placed in bankruptcy court a few months ago for settlement. The plant has never been in actual operation as a milk condensory.

FIVE FARM SALES

Listed in the Chronicle Today for Auctions Next Week.

Auction sales, though numerous, are bringing in good returns to farmers this spring. A rather remarkable incident in this respect is the sale of Sim Bardwell held recently when he offered his personal property at $1,200 before the sale and was pleasantly surprised to have the sale figure up to $2,000 when Striffler & McCullough, the auctioneers, completed their afternoon's work.

The Chronicle presents five farm auction announcements to its readers this week.

Joseph Leishman has decided to quit farming and will have an auction 6 miles northeast of Caro on Monday, Mar. 23, when he will offer an 80-acre farm and live stock and implements. Striffler & McCullough are the auctioneers and the announcement appears on page five.

Ed. and Chas. Brooks have sold farm, 1 mile west and 1 mile north of Argyle, and will have a sale on Tuesday, Mar. 24. T. B. Tyrell is the auctioneer and the list of property offered is given on page four.

Nelson & Pelfon have decided to quit farming and will have a sale on the Peter Brown farm, 5 miles south and 1 1/2 miles west of Uby, on Wednesday, Mar. 25. Striffler & McCullough are the auctioneers and particulars are given on page four.

H. W. Goodrich has sold his farm, 3/4 miles west of Deford, and will have a sale on Thursday, Mar. 26. The list of property is printed on page five and Striffler & McCullough are the auctioneers.

James Walters uses space on page 10 to enumerate a large list of personal property which he will sell at auction at his farm 4 miles south of Gageton. This sale commences at 12 o'clock on Friday, Mar. 27, with Striffler & McCullough as auctioneers.

Space has been sold in next week's Chronicle to Duncan Gillies, who will have an all day sale 2 miles east of Old Greenleaf on Monday, Mar. 30; Geo. Gekeler, 3 miles west and 1 mile north of Shabbona, for a sale on Tuesday, Mar. 31; and Hiram Bearss, 2 miles west and 3/4 miles south of Cass City, on Wednesday, April 1; Jas. Davis, 5 miles east of Cass City, on Thursday, Apr. 2.

NATIONAL CHILD WELFARE LEAGUE

A NEW MICHIGAN ORGANI-ZATION.

For Benefit of Neglected Children in Rural Districts is Producing Wonderful Results.

Mrs. Esther Bonham, district superintendent of the Michigan National Child Welfare League, was in Cass City last week with a view of organizing a local league to study child welfare.

Child welfare in the rural communities of the state has been undertaken this past year in Michigan by the National Child Welfare League with wonderful results. The work is supported entirely by voluntary gifts and membership fees and is doing a vast amount of good throughout the country.

Until very recently the study of social question, and the application of modern philanthropy have been confined almost entirely to the cities and especially to the great congested centers of population. The welfare workers of America are just beginning to see that all matters of social and family uplift relate as truly to the rural as to the urban classes.

It seems strange that with problems of equal importance to be studied, the large cities have had nearly all the attention. About forty per cent of our American people live in cities and fifty-four per cent in rural districts and actual majority of 6,725,500 farmer and village folks over their urban competitors for life, liberty and happiness.

The survey of the National Child Welfare League shows that sixty-five per cent of children sent to orphan asylums and child placing institutions come from the rural districts of the state; and fifty per cent of the reasons why children have been taken from their own homes is "Poverty."

There has not been an organization of any kind to look after the poor families in the rural districts and it has been the easiest way to break up the family and send the children to some institution. The National Child Welfare League has come into existence to look after the welfare of needy families in the rural districts of the state in a systematic way. Local Child Welfare Leagues are being organized in all communities. Trained social workers are employed by the League and sent to all parts of the state to make investigations of cases reported by the local leagues. Aid is given according to the circumstances found while hundreds of children have been kept in their own homes through the services of the League, since its organization, last March and at a recent meeting of the board of directors it was decided to increase the efforts of the League to save the family home. The work of the National Child Welfare League is not overlapping the work of any other organization in the state.

In the educational department a careful study of family desertion is being made which will be educational along the lines of prevention. This will hasten the day when orphaned children will be less numerous because human life will be better protected. The home is the unit of our civilization, and what greater work can be accomplished than preserving the home in its entirety to society and to the state? The office of the Michigan branch of the National Child Welfare League is at 1207 Chamber of Commerce, Detroit, Mich.

Among the 18 postmaster nominations for Michigan sent to the senate from the White House Tuesday afternoon are Prescott L. Varnum, Vassar, and John H. Brewer, Inlay City.

The crew of Michigan Central passenger train No. 202, which killed Mrs. Hannah Carpenter, at Millington, pleaded guilty Monday to a charge of running the train faster than provided by law, and paid fine of $15.

M. Beckhold, a Bingham township farmer, was seriously injured when an enraged boar charged on him, tearing large pieces of flesh from his leg. Climbing upon a wagon he finally fought the hog off with a pitchfork. He was taken to the hospital at Bad Axe.

A live deer was seen on a knoll on Wm. Higgins' farm, six miles from Vassar. It was the first one seen in that vicinity in 40 years. A posse was formed to hunt the animal, when some one thought of the game laws and found that the season would not open until next November.

A. B. Simonson, of Sandusky, is the first to announce himself as a candidate for prosecuting attorney of Sanilac at the August primaries. There are several candidates, including the incumbent, H. O. Babcock, H. C. Morris, of Marlette; George Meredith, of Minden City, and Fred Farr, of Sandusky.

As Fred Jones, 18 years old, was walking along the Michigan Central railroad at Vassar some one threw a whiskey bottle out of the window, striking Jones in the face and severing his nose. The boy picked his nose from the gravel and rushed to a physician's office. The nose was sewed back on. The physician believes that it will grow back in place.

Democrats of Sanilac county gathered at Sandusky Mar. 12 and organized a Thomas Jefferson club. There was a clash between the regulars and the progressive wing as to whether the word progressive should be incorporated in the name of the club or not. The following officers were elected: President, W. J. Erwin, Marlette; John Dunford, secretary; John Trainer, Melvin, treasurer.

James Wilson of Ellington shipped 28 head of fat cattle to the Buffalo market last Saturday that averaged 1438 pounds each and sold for $8.85 per hundred pounds, or an average of $127.16 each. He bought the bunch in Chicago last October and on a feed of silage and cotton seed meal made an average gain of 280 pounds each. When weighed for sale in Buffalo they showed a shrinkage of only 28 pounds in all, an average of only about a pound and a half each. —Caro Advertiser.

EARLY HURON COUNTY NEWS

FROM COPIES OF HURON CO.
NEWS OF '71-'79.

Copies of Early Newspaper Are in Hands of J. W. Brackenbury.

Early news of Huron county is interestingly portrayed in copies of the Huron County News, published by W. F. Clarke at Port Austin, when that town was the county seat in the early seventies. J. W. Brackenbury of Cass City has several numbers of this newspaper in his possession.

In the issue of Nov. 9, 1871, the proceedings of the board of supervisors are printed and in these are found the deliberations which fixed the salaries of the county officers as follows: County treasurer, $900; county clerk, $500; sheriff, $500; prosecuting attorney, $800; probate judge, $550; superintendent of schools, $500.

In the advertising columns are found announcements of C. B. Cottrell of Pt. Austin, real estate dealer; W. H. Cooper & Co. of Pt. Austin, general merchants; J. Aldrich Holmes of Caseville, general merchant; Wood & Co. of Pt. Crescent, lumbermen and general merchants.

Fire of 1871.

"It is with much pleasure we are able to state that but very few of those who have suffered by the late fires have left the country. A considerable number were taken to Port Huron and elsewhere by the boats that first brought relief to Forestville and White Rock, but most of these have returned; and now that the first shock of the disaster is over, new courage and a determination to overcome misfortune are everywhere exhibited. We hear of the people being busily engaged in the erection of new houses (most of them small and rough, but will answer for the time), while several saw mills and shingle mills will be built and ready for operation in the spring. The weather is proving favorable for out-door work and every day is being improved.

"Sand Beach is an exception. From present appearances nothing worthy of the name of a town will appear at that point very soon. Mr. R. W. Irwin, a principal business man there, has taken up his residence in Port Austin, and will engage in business here. Carrington, Pack & Co. have sold out their stock of goods to Pack, Jenks & Co., of Rock Falls, and will discontinue all business at Sand Beach, leaving that place without a store."

Walked 33 Miles to Meetings.

Joseph Brackenbury was supervisor of Grant for several years and frequently walked from his home in Grant to Pt. Austin, a distance of 33 miles, to attend the board of supervisors meetings. His son, J. W. Brackenbury of this city, made the trip on foot with his father one time when he was 14 years of age and remembers a visit to the News office when Editor Clark presented him with a book. Supervisor Brackenbury was active in politics and the News of Nov. 14, 1872, contained the following article:

"The township of Grant justly claims to be the banner township of Huron county. At the election of last week, the entire vote cast was for the chieftain and statesman whose name she bears. And more creditable still,—when the outside pressure to produce a contrary result is taken into consideration,—is the fact that the vote was straight for the entire republican ticket. The number of voters out was 35 and had the day been at all favorable we are assured an increased vote with a similar showing would have been the result. To Joseph Brackenbury, the worthy supervisor of the township, much of the credit is due for the clean record we have the pleasure of noting. Good for Grant! She is worthy of the great name she leaves! May her people live long and prosper, and continue faithful to the right side."

Slow Mails in '79.

Back in '79, Huron county towns had troubles similar to those which cause so many complaints now about the snail pace of the P. M. R. R. In the July 24th number of that year, the News says:

"The mail matter coming to Port Austin from Detroit, under the new contracts, is provokingly irregular. For instance, Monday night's mail, via Caro, may bring us all the Saturday dailies. Tuesday night, via Port Huron, none at all; and Wednesday night, (after putting to press) brings us the daily papers of Monday via Port Huron, and those of Tuesday, via Caro. And so of other mail matter distributed at the Detroit postoffice. Now if the postmaster there would only have the letters and papers starting or distributed at his office for Port Austin, sent over the Detroit and Bay City route, it will be taken care of at Vassar and Caro and reach here in two instead of three days, as it takes when sent via Port Huron."

HEAD CRUSHED

Roy McLellan, Sanilac Co. Farmer,
Killed by Fall Against Flywheel.

Roy McLellan 19 year old son of James McLellan, a farmer living seven miles south of Sandusky, fell against the flywheel of a gasoline engine Tuesday evening and was instantly killed. The top of the head was torn off and both arms were torn from their sockets.

The engine is used for cutting wood and running a feed cutter. As young McLellan was passing it his foot slipped and he plunged against the wheel head first.

Domestics.

Domestics are female Tories of the China factories, smuggled into unsuspecting homes as servants.

A domestic can show more carelessness with a piece of cut-glass than a fool can with a gun that isn't loaded. They have long been suspected, too, as plain-clothes fustianists of the light, heat, and power companies, as they have less concern about the high cost of living than a leading lady has of her subordinates in the chorus.

In cities, these promoters of bankruptcy are useful, not alone in keeping the police awake and well-fed, but in assuring the citizens one of these otherwise elusive arms of the law is contiguous to their property every night after ten o'clock, and that if any one wishes to rob their home he must agree not to molest the kitchen.

There was a time, so our ancestors tell us, when the life of a domestic was not one of ease. They were then brought into homes with the distinct understanding that their headquarters was the fourth room back, and that their entertainment was to be extracted from the broom and wash-tub, the piano and parlor being for the mistress of the house. No one, however, gives full credence to this.

There are, though, even now some off-brand domestics who are very kind to their mistresses. It is said these often ask off not more than four or five days a week, and in some instances even offer to take care of the children should the mistress wish to step out for an hour or two.

But the life of a twentieth century domestic is not all glory. She is expected to be able to adore almost everything over which she reigns, even to the dog and the cat, but such adoration must never be permitted to drift toward the paternal portion of her realm.

POULTRY OPPORTUNITIES.

The Farm Is Most Conducive to Successful Poultry Raising.

The foundation upon which all successful poultry operations rest is constitutional vigor, according to poultry experts of the department of agriculture. Without a high degree of health it is utterly impossible to progress in poultry work, and there is no other place where conditions are so conducive to poultry success as they are on the farm. The farmer has the advantage of having free range for his birds, which means an unlimited supply of bugs, insects, green feed and grit as a food supply.

Poultry strongly constituted means highly fertile eggs and the production of good, strong chickens. Eggs produced from fowls that have free range on the farm hatch better than those from fowls that do not have that advantage. In feeding the farmer has the advantage over other poultrymen. Where live stock is kept there is a considerable amount of grain dropped upon the ground which could not be utilized other than by poultry. This grain in most cases would be a total loss to the average farmer unless eaten by the fowls.

On most farms milk is available for feeding. Its value as an egg producer is not exceeded by any other one feed in existence. Chaff from the barn loft, containing many feeds that are readily consumed by poultry, can be used as a bed or litter in the poultry house instead of being wasted.

It is essential to successful poultry raising to know at all times the ages of your fowls. This can be readily done by toe punching chicks as soon as hatched, which will obviate the killing of the young hens and pullets before their days of usefulness are over. To do this use a small harness punch, perforate the outside web of the right foot between the toes, and the following year punch on the inside web of the right foot. The age of the flock can thus be told year by year.

As soon as the hen starts to molt after the second laying season it is advisable to market her, as in molting she will produce very few eggs, and by keeping her through this period, which lasts about ninety days, there is little to gain, and often the fowls die during this time.

CUTTING SILAGE CROPS.

A Great Deal Depends Upon Choosing of Proper Time.

Corn and various sorghum crops will most generally be used for silage crops. Corn should be cut for the silo when the grain has begun to harden. There should still be a sufficient amount of green material in the plant to make it pack solidly in the silo. It is often-times very difficult to harvest a crop in this ideal condition.

The use of water in filling is almost a necessity where dried out corn is placed in the silo. The exact amount necessary cannot be stated in positive terms. Enough water must be added so that the material will pack solidly and pass through the necessary fermentation. The most satisfactory way to apply this water is by directing a stream into the blower.

The Kaffir and sorghum should be allowed to become well matured likewise in order to make ideal silage. These crops as a rule remain green much later in the season, and the period in which they can be properly placed in the silo is longer than it is with corn. It is especially important that the sweet sorghum be allowed to reach full maturity before being placed in the silo. These crops have shown themselves to be very valuable as silage crops. These crops sometimes become frosted by an unseasonable frost. It is then necessary to place them in the silo at once whatever the stage of maturity. If left in the field after the leaves have been frosted a considerable portion of the finer parts will dry up and be lost.

The senior-junior debate upon the question, "Resolved that a debating society is essential to the high school," was the chief feature of the Monday morning exercises. The affirmative was defended by seniors, Alfred Farrell, leader; Ersel Wallace and Ray Yakes and the negative by Everett Higgins, leader; Myrl Rowley and Ruth Bittner. Although the unanimous decision of the judges was awarded to the negative side, yet both were commended upon their ability in handling the question. Steps have been taken for organizing a high school debating society where all may have a place. The program was concluded with pleasing selections by senior male quartette.

MINIATURE HOUSE.

How to Make Kiddies Happy With New Plaything.

The fastidious small doll need no longer use a special sort of furniture, which comes from Germany and has been in vogue in doll-dom for years, of somewhat uncertain period and style. She can now find in some of the most exclusive shops perfect miniature copies of the mahogany furniture used in the house of her small mistress' parents and yet of a size suitable for a doll's house.

Highboys eight or ten inches high, old fashioned cradles, bureaus, chairs and beds can all be obtained in mahogany stained wood. A diminutive mirror, gilt framed and with a pretty colored print in a small panel at the top, suitable for hanging over the highboy, can also be had for the asking. Simple brass candlesticks and tiny white wax candles would be suitable accessories for a colonial room in a doll's house, and rag rugs, crocheted, can be purchased in sizes beginning as small as three inches in diameter. White enameled furniture for the doll's house is made for bedrooms, living rooms and dining rooms, and a whole house can now be furnished in white.

All the latest conveniences and labor saving devices, vacuum cleaners, sewing machines, typewriters, chaffing dishes and automobiles are also made in sizes suitable for the doll's house of medium size. Fireplaces, with ever burning fires of tinsel, come five inches high, with andirons and bellows in a stand at their side. Tea sets, perfect in every detail; tray, teakettle, teapot, cups and saucers, with tiny spoons and sugar tongs, sets of dishes and table linen, birds in cages, desk sets with pen, paper and desk pad; toilet articles for dressing table and washstand, fur rugs and telephone are all now made for the doll's house.

Economize

My wife and I have economized all our lives and for that reason I have managed to build up a business large enough to be in a position to give you more for your money than any other firm in the Thumb of Michigan. I admit that I sell at a smaller margin than any other firm in this section and there is a reason.

I buy the best possible goods at the lowest possible price, am very particular about my credits and get settlements for goods when they are sold. Did you ever think when you buy 40 rods of wire and have it charged that you were paying 20 per cent for the use of the money, and when you buy a roller for $20, or have it charged till fall for $23 that you are paying 30 per cent for the money? How much better it would be for you if you made your settlement when you get the goods. You could have your notes come due any time you desired and pay any time when you pleased and stop your interest at any time. You may take a year and then have six or eight months to take advantage of the markets in disposing of your crop. When you have a charged account, about Sept. 1 they commence to hound you for the money and you get mad and sell a cow or some other article for less than it is worth and pay the bill and in the end you have paid about 30 per cent for the money when you could have taken all of the time you wanted at 7 per cent.

Think it over. Come in and see if I am not right. It is 10 years this spring since I commenced to sell implements to the farmers in this community and on Thursday, Mar. 26, we are going to have an

and the Oliver people are going to send experienced instructors here to explain the merits of the Oliver line and prove to you that I have the exclusive Oliver contract for 1914. Come in and spend a day with us. We will use you right and promise you a good time.

usually in and out of the apartment a number of times daily, provided a welcome diversion. Aggie explained in response to his question that Mary had gone out to keep an engagement with Dick Gilder.

"Mary has been with him a good deal lately," he said, half questioningly.

"That's what," was the curt agreement.

"Think she's stuck on him?" "Why not?" Aggie retorted. "Bet your life I'd be if I had a chance. He's a swell boy, and his father's got the coin too."

At this the man moved impatiently, and his eyes wandered to the window. Again Aggie studied him with a swift glance of interrogation.

"Joe, if there's anything on your mind shoot it."

"It's Mary," Garson explained, with some embarrassment; "her and young Gilder."

"Well?" came the crisp question.

"Well, somehow," Garson went on, still somewhat confusedly, "I can't see any good of it for her."

"Why?" Aggie demanded, in surprise.

"Old man Gilder's got a big pull, and if he caught on to his boy's going with Mary he'd be likely to send the police after us—strong! Believe me, I ain't looking for any trip up the river."

"We ain't done nothin' they can touch us for," Mary says so.

"Whether we've done anything or whether we haven't don't matter," he objected. "Once the police set out after you they'll get you. Russia ain't in it with some of the things I have seen pulled off in this town."

"Oh, can that 'frail talk' Aggie exclaimed roughly. "I tell you they can't get us. We've got our fingers crossed."

A noise at the hall door interrupted her, and she looked up to see a man, while behind him appeared the maid, protesting angrily.

"Never mind that announcing thing with me," the newcomer rasped to the expositing servant in a voice that suited well his thick set figure, with the bullet shaped head and the bull-like neck. He was Cassidy, who had had Mary Turner in his charge on the occasion of her ill fated visit to Edward Gilder's office four years before.

"Hello, Joe!" he cried familiarly.

"Well?" Joe demanded.

"Just a little friendly call," Cassidy announced in his strident voice.

"Where's the lady of the house?"

"Out," Aggie spoke very sharply.

"Well, Joe," Cassidy went on, "where she comes back just tell her it's up to her to make a getaway and to make it quick."

"Say," Aggie retorted viciously, "you can't throw any scare into us. You ain't got anything on us. See?"

"Nothing on you, eh? Well, well, let's see," Cassidy regarded Garson with a grin. "You are Joe Garson, forger?"

As he spoke the detective took a notebook from a pocket, found a page, and then read: "First arrested in 1891 for forging the name of Edwin Goodsell to a check for $10,000. Again arrested June 19, 1893, for forgery. Arrested in April, 1898, for forging the signature of Oscar Hemmenway to a series of bonds that were counterfeited. Arrested as the man back of the Reilly gang in 1903. Arrested in 1908 for forgery."

"Haven't any records of convictions, have you?"

"No, but we've got the right dope on you, all right, Joe Garson." He turned savagely on the girl.

"And you're little Aggie Lynch," Cassidy declared as he thrust the note book back into his pocket. "Just now you're posing as Mary Turner's cousin. You served two years in Burning for blackmail. You were arrested in Buffalo, convicted and served your stretch. Nothing on you? Well, well!"

Again there was triumph in the officer's chuckle. He went on speaking with obvious enjoyment of the extent to which his knowledge reached.

"And the head of the gang is Mary Turner. Arrested four years ago for robbing the Emporium. Did her stretch of three years."

"Is that all you've got about her?" Garson demanded with such abruptness that Cassidy forgot his dignity sufficiently to answer with an unqualified yes.

"Nothing in your record of her about her coming out without a friend in the world and trying to go straight? You ain't got nothing in that pretty little book of your'n about your going to the millinery store where she finally got a job and tipping them off to where she come from?"

"Sure, they was tipped off. We got to protect the city."

"Got anything in that record of your'n," Garson went on venomously, "about her getting another job and your following her up again and having her thrown out? Got it there about the letter you had old Gilder write, so that his influence would get her canned?"

"Oh, we had her right the first time."

"You did not. She was railroaded for a job she never done. She went in honest, and she came out honest."

"And that's why she's here now with a gang of crooks," Cassidy retorted.

"Where else should she be?" Garson demanded violently. "You ain't got nothing in that record about my jumping into the river after her. That's where I found her—a girl that never done nobody any harm, starving because you police wouldn't give her a chance to work. In the river because she wouldn't take the only other way that was left her to make a living, because she was keeping straight! Have you got any of that in your book?"

"Anyway," the officer went on, with a new confidence, now that his eyes were free from the gaze that had burned into his soul, "you've got to clear out, the whole gang of you—and do it quick."

"We don't scare worth a cent," Aggie snapped, with the virulence of a vixen. "You can't do anything to us. We ain't broke the law." There came a sudden ripple of laughter, and the charming lips curved joyously as she added, "Though perhaps we have bent it a bit."

"Well, you've got the tip," Cassidy returned, somewhat disconcerted, after a stolid fashion of his own. "It's up to you to take it, that's all. If you don't one of you will make a long visit with some people out of town, and it'll probably be Mary. Remember, I'm giving it to you straight."

Cassidy turned and went noisily out of the drawing room. As she heard the outer door close behind the detective Aggie's expression grew vicious.

"The truck horse detective!" she sneered. "An eighteen collar and a six and a half hat! He sure had his nerve trying to bluff us!"

"Perhaps it wasn't a bluff, Aggie," Garson suggested.

"Well, what have we done, I'd like to know?"

Garson answered with a note of weariness that was unlike him.

"It ain't what you have done," he said quietly. "It's what they can make a jury think you've done. And once they set out to get you—God, how they can frame things! If they ever start out after Mary"—He did not finish the sentence, but sank down into his chair with a groan that was almost of despair.

CHAPTER VII.

A Legal Document.

MARY TURNER spent less than an hour in that mysteriously important engagement with Dick Gilder of which she had spoken to Aggie. After separating from the young man she went alone down Broadway, walking the few blocks of distance to Sigismund Harris' office.

Harris regarded his client with an appreciative eye as he bowed in greeting and invited her to a seat.

"I sent your cousin, Miss Agnes Lynch, the release which she is to sign," he explained, "when she gets that money from General Hastings. I wish you'd look it over when you have time. It's all right, I'm sure, but I appreciate your opinion of things, Miss Turner—particularly of legal documents."

"Thank you," Mary said. "And have you heard from them yet?"

"No," the lawyer replied. "I gave them until tomorrow. If I don't hear then I shall start suit at once." Then the lawyer's manner became unpleasantly bland and self-satisfied as he opened a drawer of the desk and brought forth a rather formidable appearing document, bearing a most impressive seal.

"You will be glad to know," he went on unctuously, "that I was entirely successful in carrying out that idea of yours as to the injunction. My dear Miss Turner, Portia was a squawking baby compared with you."

"Thank you again," Mary answered as she took the legal paper. For a moment her glance ran over the words of the page.

"It's splendid!" she declared. "Did you have much trouble in getting it?"

"Why, no," he declared. "But at the outset when I made the request the judge just nearly fell off the bench. Then I showed him that Detroit case to which you had drawn my attention, and the upshot of it all was that he gave me what I wanted without a whimper. He couldn't help himself, you know."

That mysterious document with the imposing seal reposed safely in Mary's bag when she returned to the apartment.

Mary had scarcely received from Aggie an account of Cassidy's threatening invasion when the maid announced that Mr. Irwin had called.

"Show him in," Mary directed.

"Who's the gink?" Aggie demanded.

"You ought to know. He's the lawyer retained by General Hastings in the matter of a certain breach of promise suit."

"Hope he's brought the money."

"Leave the room now," Mary ordered. "When I call to you come in, but be sure and leave everything to me. Merely follow my lead. And, Agnes—be very ingenue."

"Oh, I'm wise—I'm wise," Aggie nodded as she hurried out toward her bedroom. "I'll be a squab—surest thing you know!"

Next moment Mary gave a formal greeting to the lawyer who represented the man she planned to mulet effectively.

Irwin lost no time in coming to the point.

"I called in reference to this suit which Miss Agnes Lynch threatens to bring against my client, General Hastings."

"It's not a threat," Mr. Irwin. "The suit will be brought."

"You realize, of course, that this is merely plain blackmail."

"If it's blackmail, Mr. Irwin, why don't you consult the police?"

Mary turned to the maid, who now entered in response to the bell she had sounded a minute before. "Fanny, will you ask Miss Lynch to come in, please?" Then she faced the lawyer again, with an aloofness of manner that was contemptuous. "Really, Mr. Irwin," she drawled, "why don't you take this matter to the police?"

"You know perfectly well," the lawyer said bitterly, "that General Hastings cannot afford such publicity."

"Oh, as for that," Mary suggested evenly, and now there was a trace of flippancy in her fashion of speaking. "I'm sure the police would keep your complaint a secret. Really, you know, Mr. Irwin, I think you had better take your troubles to the police rather than to me. You will get much more sympathy from them."

The lawyer sprang up with an air of sudden determination.

"Very well, I will then," he declared. Mary pushed in his direction the telephone that stood on the table.

"3100 Spring," she remarked encouragingly, "will bring an officer almost immediately." She leaned back in her chair and surveyed the baffled man amusedly.

"Nevertheless," he rejoined, "you know perfectly well that General Hastings never promised to marry this girl. You know"—He broke off as Aggie entered the drawing room.

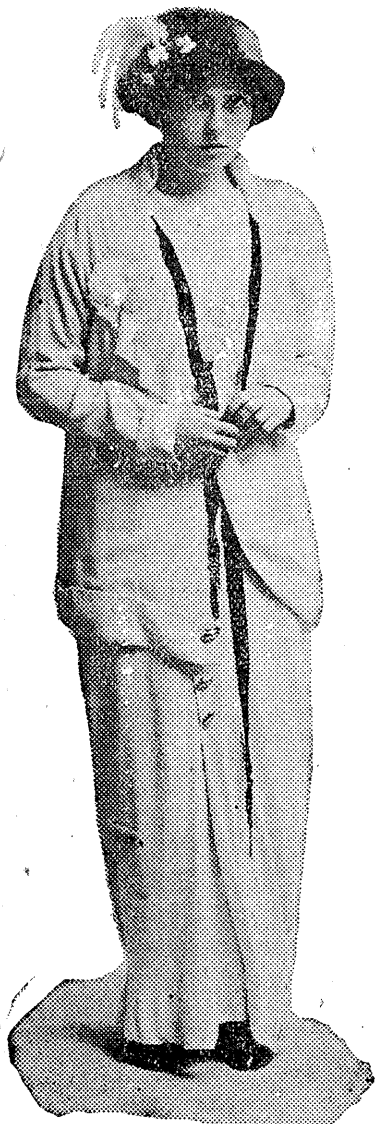

Now, the girl was demure in seeming almost beyond belief—a childish creature, very fair and dainty, guileless surely, with those untroubled eyes of blue, those softly curving lips of warmest red and the more delicate bloom and the rounded cheeks. There were the charms of innocence and simplicity in her manner as she stopped just within the doorway, whence she regarded Mary with a timid, pleading gaze, her slender little form poised lightly as if for flight.

"Did you want me, dear?" she asked.

"Agnes," Mary answered affectionately, "this is Mr. Irwin, who has come to see you in behalf of General Hastings."

"Oh," the girl murmured, her voice quivering a little as the lawyer, after a short nod, dropped again into his seat, "oh, I'm so frightened!" She hurried, fluttering, to a low stool behind the desk beside Mary's chair, and there she sank down, drooping slightly and catching hold of one of Mary's hands as if in mute pleading for protection.

"Nonsense!" Mary exclaimed soothingly. "There's really nothing at all to be frightened about, my dear child. You mustn't be afraid. Agnes, Mr. Irwin says that General Hastings did not promise to marry you. Of course you understand, my dear, that under no circumstances must you say anything that isn't strictly true and that

"Oh, I'm so frightened!"

If he did not promise to marry you you have no case—none at all. Now, Agnes, tell me, did General Hastings promise to marry you?"

"Oh, yes—oh, yes, indeed!" Aggie cried falteringly. "And I wish he would. He's such a delightful old gentleman!"

The legal representative of the delirious old gentleman scowled disgustingly at this outburst.

"Was that promise made in writing?"

"No," Aggie answered gushingly.

"But all his letters were in writing, you know. Such wonderful letters! So tender and so—er—interesting!"

"Yes, yes, I dare say," Irwin agreed hastily, with some evidence of chagrin.

"But you're quite sure, Agnes," Mary questioned gently, "that General Hastings did promise to marry you?"

"Oh, yes," Aggie declared tensely. "Why, I would swear to it." The timid eyes, so appealing in their soft luster, went first to Mary, then gazed trustfully into those of the routed attorney.

"We're beaten," he confessed defeat, turning his glance toward Mary, whom plainly he regarded as his real adversary in the combat on his client's behalf. "I'm going to be quite frank with you, Miss Turner, quite frank," he stated, with more geniality, though with a very crestfallen air. "We can't afford any scandal, so we're going to settle at your own terms." He took from his pocket a thick bill case and from this a sheaf of banknotes, which he laid on the desk before Mary, with a little laugh of discomfiture over having been beaten in the contest.

As he did so Aggie thrust forth an avaricious hand, but it was caught and held by Mary before it reached above the top of the desk, and the avaricious gesture passed unobserved by the attorney.

"We can't fight where ladies are concerned," he went on, assuming as best he might contrive a chivalrous tone. "So, if you will just hand over General Hastings' letters, why, here's your money. You have the letters, haven't you?" he demanded abruptly.

"We can't afford any scandal."

Aggie coyly took a thick bundle from its resting place on her rounded bosom.

"They never leave me," she said.

"Well, they can leave you now, all right," the lawyer remarked unsympathetically. He reached quickly forward for the packet, which Aggie extended willingly enough. But it was Mary, who, with a swift movement caught and held it.

"I think," Mary explained tranquilly, "that you had better see our lawyer, Mr. Harris, in reference to this. We women know nothing of such details of business settlement."

"Oh, I see," he said disagreeably, with a frown to indicate his complete sagacity in the premises.

"I thought you would, Mr. Irwin," Mary returned. "If you'll take the money to Mr. Harris Miss Lynch will meet you in his office at 4 o'clock this afternoon, and, when her suit for damages for breach of promise has been legally settled out of court, you will get the letters. Good afternoon, Mr. Irwin."

The lawyer made a hurried bow which took in both of the women, and walked quickly toward the door.

"Oh, you forgot your marked money, Mr. Irwin," Mary said.

The lawyer wheeled and stood staring at the speaker with a certain sheepishness of expression that bore witness to the completeness of his discomfiture. Without a word he walked back to the desk, picked up the money and restored it to the bill case.

"Young woman," he said emphatically, "you ought to have been a lawyer."

And he took his departure, while Mary smiled in triumph and Aggie sat gaping at astonishment.

"You've darn near broke my heart," she cried, bouncing up violently. "Letting all that money go out of the house. Say, how did you know it was marked?"

"I didn't," Mary replied blandly. "But it was a pretty good guess, wasn't it? Couldn't you see that all he wanted was to get the letters and have us take the marked money? Then, my simple young friend, we would have been arrested very neatly indeed—for blackmail."

"Geel!" she cried. "That would have been fierce! And now?" she questioned apprehensively.

Mary's answer repudiated any possibility of fear.

"And now," she explained contentedly, "he really will go to our lawyer. There he will pay over that same marked money. Then he will get the letters he wants so much. And just because it's a strictly business transaction between two lawyers, with everything done according to legal ethics!"

"And it's actually the same old game!" Aggie mused.

CHAPTER VIII.

The Thief.

MARY was in joyous spirits after her victorious matching of brains against a lawyer of high standing in his profession when she had entered the telephone booth, which had been installed in an extra closet of her bedroom for the sake of greater privacy on occasion. During her absence from the drawing room Garson again came into the apartment seeking her. On being told by Aggie as to Mary's whereabouts he sat down to await her return, listening without much interest to the chatter of the adventuress. The maid appeared and said:

"There's a girl wants to see Miss Turner."

"She says it's important. I guess the poor thing's in hard luck from the look of her," the kindly Fannie added.

"Oh, then, she'll be welcome, of course!" Aggie declared, and Garson nodded in acquiescence. "Tell her to come in and wait, Fannie. Miss Turner will be here right away." She turned to Garson as the maid left the room. "Mary sure is an easy boob," she remarked cheerfully. "Bless her soft heart!"

A minute later a girl perhaps twenty years of age stepped just within the doorway and stood there with eyes downcast after one swift, furtive glance about her. Her whole appearance was that of dejection. Her soiled black gown, the cringing posture, the pallor of her face, proclaimed the abject misery of her state.

"Are you Miss Turner?" she asked in a voice broken by nervous dismay.

"Really, I am very sorry," Aggie replied primly, "but I am only her cousin, Miss Agnes Lynch. But Miss Turner is likely to be back any minute now."

"Can I wait?" came the timid question.

"Certainly," Aggie answered hospitably. "Please sit down."

As the girl obediently sank down on the nearest chair Garson addressed her sharply, so that the visitor started uneasily at the unexpected sound.

"You don't know Miss Turner?"

"No," came the faint reply.

"Then, what do you want to see her about?"

"She once helped a girl friend of mine, and I thought—I thought—"

"You thought she might help you," Garson interrupted.

"You have been in stir—prison, I mean," Aggie hastily corrected the lapse into underworld slang.

Came a distressed muttering of assent from the girl.

The conversation was put to an end by the entrance of Mary, who stopped short on seeing the limp figure huddled in the chair.

"A visitor, Agnes?" she inquired.

At the sound of her voice the girl looked up and spoke with some degree of energy.

"You're Miss Turner?" she questioned.

"Yes," Mary said. Her words rang kindly and she smiled encouragement.

A gasp burst from the white lips of the girl, and she covered as one stricken physically.

"Mary Turner! Oh, my God! I—"

She hid her face within her arms and sat bent until her head rested on her knees in an abasement of misery.

Vaguely startled by the hysterical outburst from the girl, Mary's immediate thought was that there was a pitiful instance of one suffering from starvation.

"Joe," she directed rapidly, "have Fannie bring a glass of milk with an egg and a little brandy in it, right away."

The girl in the chair was shaking soundlessly under the stress of her emotions. A few disjointed phrases fell from her quivering lips.

"I didn't know—oh, I couldn't!"

"Don't try to talk just now," Mary warned, reassuringly. "Wait until you've had something to eat."

Aggie, who had observed developments closely, now lifted her voice in tardy lamentations over her own stupidity.

"Why, the poor gawk's hungry!" she exclaimed. "And I never got the dope on her. Ain't I the simp?"

The girl regained a degree of self control and showed something of forlorn dignity.

"Yes," she said dully, "I'm starving."

Mary regarded the afflicted creature with that sympathy born only of experience.

"Yes," she said softly, "I understand." Then she spoke to Aggie.

"Take her to my room and let her rest there for awhile. Have her drink the egg and milk slowly and then lie down for a few minutes anyhow."

Half an hour afterward Aggie reported with her charge, who, though still shambling of gait and stooping, showed by some faint color in her face and an increased steadiness of bearing that the food had already strengthened her much.

"She would come," Aggie explained. "I thought she ought to rest for awhile longer anyhow."

"I'm all right, I tell you," came the querulous protest.

"Are you quite sure?" Mary said to the girl. "Then tell us all about it—this trouble of yours, you know. What is your name?"

"Helen Morris."

"I don't have to ask if you have been in prison. Your face shows it."

"I—I came out—three months ago."

"And you'd made up your mind to go straight?"

"Yes." The word was a whisper.

"You were going to do what the chaplain had told you," Mary went on. "You were going to start all over again, weren't you?"

The bent head of the girl bent lower in assent.

"It doesn't work very well, does it?"

"No; I'm whipped."

Mary's manner changed. She spoke cheerfully for the first time.

"Well, then, how would you like to work with us?"

away when they do and get your bit as well."

There flashed still another of the swift, sly glances, and the lips of the girl parted as if she would speak. But she did not; only her head sagged even lower on her breast and the shrunken form grew yet more shrunken.

"It doesn't suit you? Good! I was in hopes it wouldn't. So, here's another plan. Suppose you could go west—some place where you would have a fair chance, with money enough so you could live like a human being till you get a start?"

There came a tensing of the relaxed form, and the head lifted a little, so that the girl could look at her questioner.

"I will give you that chance," Mary said simply. "if you really want it."

The wretched girl sat suddenly erect, and her words came eagerly.

"Oh, I do!" And now her hungry gaze remained fast on the face of the woman who offered her salvation.

"Then I have just one thing to say to you first. If you are going to live straight start straight, and then go through with it. Do you know what that means?"

"You mean keep straight all the time?" The girl spoke with a force drawn from the other's strength.

"I mean more than that. I mean forget that you were ever in prison. I don't know what you have done—I don't think I care. But whatever it was, you have paid for it—a pretty big price too."

"I have, I have!" The thin voice broke, wailing.

"Well, then," Mary went on, "just begin all over again, and be sure you stand up for your rights. Don't let them make you pay a second time. Go where no one knows you, and don't tell the first people who are kind to you that you have been crooked. If they think you are straight, why, be it. Then nobody will have any right to complain. Will you promise me this?"

"Yes, I promise," came the answer, very gravely, quickened with hope.

"Good!" Mary exclaimed, with a smile of approval. "Wait a minute," she added and left the room.

"Hub! Pretty soft for some people," Aggie remarked to Garson, with a sniff.

Mary returned soon. In her hand she carried a roll of bills. She went to the girl and held out the money.

"Take this. It will pay your fare west and keep you quite awhile if you are careful."

But, without warning, a revulsion seized on the girl. She shrank again and turned her head away as her body trembled.

"I can't take it!" she exclaimed. "I can't! I can't!"

"Didn't you come here for help?"

"Yes," was the faltering reply, "but—but I didn't know—it was you!"

"Then you have met me before?" Mary said quietly.

"No, no!" The girl's voice rose shrill. Aggie spoke her mind with frankness. "She's lying."

Garson agreed. His yes was spoken in a tone of complete certainty. That Mary, too, was of their opinion was shown in her next words.

"So you have met me before? Where?"

The girl unwittingly made confession in her halting words.

"I can't tell you." There was despair in her voice.

"You must."

The girl only crouched lower.

"I can't," she cried again, panting as if in exhaustion.

"Why can't you?"

"Because—because—" The girl could not go on.

"What were you sent up for?"

"For stealing."

"Stealing what?"

"Goods."

"Where from?"

"The Emporium."

In a flash of intuition the whole truth was revealed to the woman who struggle no more. She could only sit in a huddled, shaking heap of dread. Mary soon mastered her to such an extent that when she spoke again, as if in self communion, her words came quietly, yet with overtones of a supreme woe.

"She did it!" Then after a little she addressed the girl with a certain wondering before this mystery of horror. "Why did you throw the blame on me?"

The girl made several efforts before her mumbling became intelligible, and then her speech was gasping, broken with fear.

"I found out they were watching me, and I was afraid they would catch me. So I took them and ran into the cloak room and put them in a locker that wasn't close to mine and some in the pocket of a coat that was hanging there. God knows I didn't know whose it was. I just put them there—I was frightened!"

"But they caught you later. Why didn't you tell them?"

"I was afraid," came the answer from the shuddering girl. "I told them it was the first time I had taken anything, and they let me off with a year."

"You cried and lied, and they let you off with a year. I wouldn't cry. I told the truth—and—" Mary's voice broke in a tearless sob. The color had gone out of her face, and she stood rigid, looking down at the girl whose crime had ruined her life with an expression of infinite loathing in her eyes.

Aggie took advantage of the pause. Her voice was acid. "Some people are sneaks—just sneaks!"

Somehow the speech was welcome to the girl, gave her a touch of courage sufficient for cowardly protestations. It was more like the abuse that was familiar to her. A gush of tears came.

"I'll never forgive myself, never!" she moaned.

"Oh, yes, you will," Mary said malevolently. "People forgive themselves pretty easily. Stop crying. Nobody is going to hurt you." She thrust the money again toward the girl and crowded it into the half reluctant, half greedy hand. "Take it, and get out."

The contempt in her voice rang still sharper. "Go, before I change my mind!"

The girl needed no second bidding. With the money still clutched in her hand she went forth swiftly, stumbling a little in her haste, fearful lest at the last moment the woman she had so wronged should change in mood and take back the money.

Freed from the miasma of that presence, Mary remained motionless for a long minute, then sighed from her tortured heart.

"A girl I didn't know," she said bewilderedly, "perhaps had never spoken to—who smashed my life like that! Oh, if it wasn't so awful it would be funny! It would be funny!"

HOW TO DRESS FOR WINTER MOTORING.

A woman who has toured much says that for a long run in cold weather she designed a scheme of attire that proved entirely satisfactory, and her advice, being based on experience, is likely to prove of use to readers, so it is handed on. Protection from cold being the great point, she had a serge skirt made, lined to give extra warmth, and with this wore a plain silk skirt and pulled over it a white jersey, with a collar coming well up around the neck, on the style of the ordinary fisherman's knitted ones. Over this came a dark blue fur lined motor coat, and for headgear she wore a knitted cap with ear flaps that fastened under the chin. As a result there was no veil to get untidy or blown about, no risk from chilly air, while the cap fitted closely enough to keep the coiffure perfectly in order whatever the speed or the amount of wind that might be blowing.

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE

PARABLES OF THE KINGDOM.

Luke 13:18-30—March 22.

"Not every one that saith unto Me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the Kingdom of Heaven; but he that doeth the will of My Father which is in Heaven."—Matthew 7:21.

TWO illustrations of the Kingdom occur in this lesson. In one case the Lord likens the Kingdom to a grain of mustard seed, which from a small beginning became a large bush, in whose branches the birds lodged. This evidently was intended to picture the outward appearance of the Church—so prosperous as to invite the birds. Elsewhere Jesus declared that the birds represented the Wicked One and his agents, ever ready to take away the seed of Truth and to work adversely as respects the Gospel program. (Matt. 13:4, 19.) In Revelation also the Great Teacher speaks of the Church as becoming Babylon, confusion, and "a cage of every unclean and hateful bird."—Revelation 18:2.

Again the Master illustrated the experience of His Church as an embryotic Kingdom. His second parable tells of a woman who hid some leaven in three measures of meal, until the whole was leavened. This, Bible students are coming to understand, signifies a corrupting of the Divine Message—the spiritual food which God had prepared for the Church.

A woman in symbolic language represents a church system; and the Master tells us that such a church system will mix leaven, ferment, in the food of God's family until the whole mass will be corrupted. For be it noted that in the Bible leaven is always used as a symbol of sin. This parable shows that the faith once delivered to the saints will be mixed with error, until it will no longer be nourishing to the family. St. Paul pictures the same matter, saying that in the latter days "some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of demons."—1 Timothy 4:1.

These false doctrines are what are troubling the people of God today. Our hearts are better than our heads; for the hearts of the consecrated are in tune with the Infinite One, while the creeds of the Dark Ages are quite out of tune. The blessings coming to Bible students result from breaking loose from the creeds formulated in the Dark Ages and getting back to the teachings of Scripture. The Word of God is sufficient, that the man of God may be thoroughly furnished.—2 Tim. 3:16, 17.

Some dear Christian people, looking at matters from a wrong angle, are still deceived into thinking that it is possible for the Church, as the Kingdom of God in an embryotic condition, to do the work which God assigns to that church in her future, glorified condition.

The Called Saved.

Some inquired of the Lord. Will there be but few saved? Jesus did not give a direct answer, doubtless for two reasons:

(1) The Holy Spirit had not yet come, and His followers could not then understand God's Plan thoroughly.

(2) It was not due time to explain all the particulars of the spiritual salvation of the Church, and then later the restitution of the world to human perfection.

For a certain time the door to the High Calling stands ajar. The possibilities of entering were first presented to the Jews. After finding the "Israelites indeed" God has directed this selection amongst the Gentiles for more than eighteen centuries. Apparently the gathering of the Elect is nearly completed. As soon as the last one shall have passed through the door, it will shut.

About that time, a great awakening of religious thought will come to the world, in the midst of a great Time of Trouble. Then many will begin to say that they have neglected the prize. There will be lamentations amongst this class, and a crying, Lord, Lord, are we not to be of the Bride class?

But the Lord will disown them as respects the Bride company. Then they will be in great sorrow. Weeping and gnashing of teeth will prevail.

This will not be in some far-off place of eternal torture, as once we supposed; but, as the narrative intimates, it will be right here on earth, amongst a class who neglected the privileges of the High Calling when they knew of it.

The Lord intimates that some of these will have been in close touch with Him and His followers. They had a form of godliness and claimed to have done many mighty works, yet the Lord will disown them as respects Kingdom privileges. They will not have a share even in the earthly Kingdom. It will be given to the Worthies of the past who lived and died before the High Calling was opened up.

The heirs of the Kingdom will not be entirely Jewish; for Israel as a nation was not sufficiently holy. When the call to joint-heirship went to the Gentiles, some came from all directions to share in the Kingdom. Thus the first in privilege and opportunity failed.

stood looking down at the cowering creature before her.

The accusation was cut short by the girl's shriek.

For a moment Mary lost her poise. Her voice rose in a flare of rage.

ANOTHER WHITE HOUSE WEDDING

Engagement of Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo and Eleanor Wilson, President's Youngest Daughter

THE announcement of the engagement of Miss Eleanor Wilson, youngest daughter of President and Mrs. Wilson, has caused country wide attention. While gossips for some time had linked the name of the pair, the declaration that they were to be married created a big stir at the capital, and the news was quickly heralded to all parts of the country.

On several occasions since the wedding of Miss Jessie Wilson to Francis B. Sayre those who claimed to know considerable of the affairs of the president's family had it that Miss Margaret Wilson was engaged. As quickly as these rumors assumed the proportions of news items they were promptly and emphatically denied at the White House. When however, the final declaration was made that the youngest daughter of the president and the builder of the Hudson tubes and the present secretary of the treasury is fond of society and has many friends in Washington outside of the administration circle. She is a good dancer. Mr. McAdoo has been her most frequent dancing partner at the informal dances of the Chevy Chase club. She has recently joined the Riding and Hunt club and follows the bounds.

Miss Wilson was educated in private schools at Princeton and then spent two years in St. Mary's college at Raleigh, N. C., of which the president was Dr. McNeely Duhose, whose wife was an intimate friend of Mrs. Wilson. She had acquired a taste for painting from her mother and spent two years, after leaving St. Mary's, in studying at the Academy of Fine Arts in Philadelphia.

Mr. McAdoo was born at Marietta, Ga., on Oct. 3, 1863. He attended the University of Tennessee, but left college in his junior year to become deputy clerk of the United States circuit court at Chattanooga. He was admitted to the bar at the age of twenty-one and practiced for awhile in Chattanooga. He became interested in railroad affairs when he held the post of division counsel for the Central Railroad and Banking company and the Richmond and Danville railroad.

He went to New York in 1892 and in 1898 formed a partnership with William McAdoo, afterward chief magistrate of New York city. In 1902 he organized the company which acquired the old tunnel under the Hudson that was begun in 1874 and proved a failure. In 1903 he was elected president of the Hudson and Manhattan railroad company, the $70,000,000 corporation which built and controls the Hudson river tubes.

Mr. McAdoo's first wife was Sarah Houston Fleming, whom he married in 1885. He has six children, the eldest daughter and eldest son being married. The eldest son is Francis H. McAdoo, who married Miss Ethel McCormack of Baltimore last September. Miss Nona McAdoo is the present head of her father's home in Massachusetts avenue.

It has been stated by many that no one man had more to do with the successful campaign of Woodrow Wilson for the presidency than William G. McAdoo.

When early in the race for the presidency illness forced William F. McCombs, chairman of the Democratic national committee and Governor Wilson's campaign manager, to lay down the duties of his position they were taken up by Mr. McAdoo.

Completed Hudson Tubes.

It was McAdoo, a commuter between New York and New Jersey, who took up the old scheme of tunneling the North river and carried the plan to completion. He was a southern lawyer who had obeyed the impulse that carries so many of Dixie's legal luminaries north to illumine the dark places of New York's law. He had had long and careful training, despite his comparatively young age, in railroad law, and he conveyed the knowledge into the solution of the Hudson tunnel problem when he tackled it.

SECRETARY WILLIAM G. M'ADOO, MISS ELEANOR WILSON AND MISS WILSON IN THE BIRD MASQUE "SANCTUARY."

were betrothed, friends of Miss Wilson and Mr. McAdoo declared that the engagement had existed for several weeks. It was said that Mr. McAdoo virtually acknowledged the engagement at the dinner given by him in Miss Wilson's honor soon after his return to Washington, on Feb. 19, from his long trip on the business of locating reserve banks.

In default of statements to the contrary, official Washington took it for granted that another White House wedding would take place in June, following the adjournment of congress. It was known that Mr. McAdoo had been a frequent caller at the White House during the past year and had been much in the company of Miss Wilson, so that Washington society was not taken completely by surprise at the report and only awaited the official acknowledgment of the parents of Miss Wilson.

Mr. McAdoo's Career.
Mr. McAdoo is fifty years old and Miss Wilson twenty-four. Mr. McAdoo became a grandfather recently, when a son was born to his eldest daughter, who is the same age as Miss Wilson, at her home in Arizona.

Miss Eleanor Wilson is tall and dark, unlike her sisters, Mrs. Francis B. Sayre and Miss Margaret Wilson. She uty clerk of the United States circuit court at Chattanooga. He was admitted to the bar at the age of twenty-one and practiced for awhile in Chattanooga. He became interested in railroad affairs when he held the post of division counsel for the Central Railroad and Banking company and the Richmond and Danville railroad. He went to New York in 1892 and in 1898 formed a partnership with William McAdoo, afterward chief magistrate of New York city. In 1903 he was elected president of the Hudson and Manhattan railroad company, the $70,000,000 corporation which built and controls the Hudson river tubes.

Mr. McAdoo's first wife was Sarah Houston Fleming, whom he married in 1885. He has six children, the eldest daughter and eldest son being married. The eldest son is Francis H. McAdoo, who married Miss Ethel McCormack of Baltimore last September. Miss Nona McAdoo is the present head of her father's home in Massachusetts avenue.

It has been stated by many that no one man had more to do with the successful campaign of Woodrow Wilson

As division counsel in Tennessee for the Richmond and Danville railroad company he had had to learn all about rights of way, maintenance and operation and damage suits and other complex branches of railway law. It is recorded that he learned them with an exceedingly high degree of thoroughness. What he learned stood him in good stead when the time came for the planning of the tunnels.

Miss Eleanor Wilson, known as Nell in the family circle and among her intimate friends, inherited her mother's artistic ability and has made quite a reputation for herself by her productions and acting.

Miss Wilson made a big hit when, in the presence of President and Mrs. Wilson and 400 summer visitors from Cornish, N. H., and the surrounding country, she took the leading role in "Sanctuary—A Bird Masque," which was put on at Meriden, N. H. In the audience were many artists, playwrights and literary folk.

Miss Eleanor Wilson's acting was the subject of much favorable comment. She spoke her lines with great clearness and with simple charm, but with a distinct musical quality that carried its effect home. The performance was repeated recently at the Hotel Astor, New York.

The Linn union, has been invited to meet the local union April 3 and they will be entertained at the M. E. church parlors. A special program is being prepared.

The W. C. T. U. have printed programs for their work for the coming year. This shows a businesslike method of doing work and at the same time are a pleasure to the members.

The next meeting of the union will be with Mrs. Wheeler, March 27. An invitation to attend is given to all who are interested in temperance work.

"It's The Best Polish I Ever Used"

That's What Every One Says Who Tries

Black Silk Stove Polish

DON'T imagine for a moment that all brands of stove polish are the same. Don't get the idea that to keep a nice glossy shine on your stove you must black it every few days. It's not a question of off-repeated application. It's a question of the stove polish to use.

Black Silk Stove Polish is so much better than other stove polishes that there is absolutely no comparison—it's in a class all by itself. It makes a brilliant glossy shine that don't rub or dust off. It anneals to the iron—becomes a part of the stove. It makes old stoves look like new and lasts four times as long as any other shine.

Get a can and give it a trial. Try it on your parlor stove, your cook stove, or your gas range. If you do not find it the best stove polish you ever used, your dealer is authorized to refund your money. Black Silk Stove Polish has been made by the same formula and sold under one name for 30 years.

Here is what some of the ladies write us:

"I sent to you for a can of Black Silk Stove Polish and found it so much better than any I had ever used that I asked my hardware dealer to order a supply. He did so, and is now selling nearly everyone in the place your polish. I had no idea there could be such a difference in stove polishes."

"I was visiting friends and they used Black Silk Stove Polish on their stoves. It made the best shine I ever saw, and after blacking, the polish did not rub or dust off. It is way ahead of any polish I have ever used."

Ask Your Dealer for Black Silk Stove Polish and refuse a counterfeit brand. Costs you no more than the ordinary kind, so why not have the best. Made in liquid or paste—one quality.

Black Silk Stove Polish Works, Sterling, Ill.

Use Black Silk Air-Drying Iron Enamel for grates, fenders, registers, stove pipes, etc. Prevents rusting. Not affected by heat or cold. Produces a permanent glossy black surface. Can, with brush for applying enamel, only 25 cents. Ask your dealer.

Use Black Silk Metal Polish for nickel, brass, silverware or tinware. It has no equal for use on automobiles.

Cookery Notes

Careful Marketing.

The art of marketing properly is one which requires considerable study and skill, and the exact needs of the household should be ascertained to a nicety. There is no need to buy four herrings when three are ample, neither is it wise to buy perishable goods in large quantities.

Where one person has to plan the entire work of the household special care must be devoted to the marketing to allow sufficient time for the cooking and leave the mistress of the house leisure to attend to domestic matters.

A list of the various meat, fish, vegetables, etc., which are in season each month should be kept handy, and when the housewife takes her walks abroad to do the required amount of shopping she will know exactly what can be found in the shops and by careful experience note where the best quality of goods can be obtained for the smallest possible expenditure.

Food of poor quality is never economical. Doubtful eggs are a most unsatisfactory investment. Far better pay a little more for a reliable article than make an unwise purchase. This same remark applies to fish, meat and vegetables.

All goods which deteriorate quickly should be renewed daily. Butter should be as pure as possible and after purchasing should be removed from the paper and kept in a cool larder till required.

The choice of eggs is always rather a precarious venture, one fairly reliable proof being that if the egg appears clear when held before a lighted candle it may generally be assumed that it is fresh.

Good Coffee.

An authority on culinary matters says that in making good coffee a great deal depends on the kind of coffee that is used. The price is not always to be depended on in selecting it. Sometimes better results may be obtained with a moderately priced coffee than with an expensive kind. The best plan is to experiment until you find a kind that is satisfactory and then stick to that and to the dealer who supplies it. The quality of coffee is often influenced by the way it is kept in the shop; also sometimes when out of one grade an unreliable grocer will substitute another and cheaper quality. In the buying of coffee much depends on the good faith of the dealer.

A correspondent claims that she makes splendid coffee for breakfast in the following way: She uses a scant tablespoonful of coffee to a cup of water for each person. She puts it in the coffee pot with cold water in the evening before going to bed. In the morning she lets it boil for ten minutes, then sets it back on the stove and lets it simmer for another ten or fifteen minutes. In this way she extracts all the strength there is in the coffee.

An Administration Dainty.

The charlotte russe being a favored dessert at the White House and grape juice in the menage of the secretary of state, it would seem that the grape juice charlotte russe would be popular in administration circles. To make it take a quarter cupful of cold grape juice, one-half cupful of hot grape juice, one teaspoonful of gelatin, one-half cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of double cream, white of one egg, one tablespoonful of lemon juice, lady fingers, candied violets. Soak the gelatin for five minutes in the one-quarter cupful of cold grape juice, then dissolve in the hot grape juice. Add the sugar and lemon juice and let stand till cold. Beat the white of egg stiffly and gradually beat the grape juice mixture into it. Beat till it will hold its shape, keeping in ice water meanwhile. Line glasses with lady fingers and pour in the mixture. Decorate with the cream, beaten firm, and the candied violets.

Dutch Cabbage.

The good housewives of Holland are fond of cooking cabbage as follows: Take a small head of white cabbage cut in fine shreds, four tart apples peeled and sliced, one large tablespoonful of butter or drippings, a tablespoonful of salt, half a teaspoonful of pepper and a sprinkling of cheese or nutmeg. Stir over a slow fire for at least three hours. Mix together one tablespoonful of vinegar, a little flour (not more than a level teaspoonful) and a tablespoonful of jelly. Just before taking from the fire add this mixture to the cabbage. Let it boil up once or twice and serve.

Croquettes of Macaroni.

Boil one-quarter pound of macaroni in salted water until very tender. Drain and toss in saucepan with one tablespoonful of butter, half an ounce of Parmesan cheese, quarter of an ounce of cooked tongue cut in dice. Spread on a buttered platter, cover with buttered paper, press it well down and set away to cool. Divide with a knife into five parts, roll each one in grated cheese, then in beaten eggs and in cracker crumbs. Drain and serve on a folded napkin.

Baked Pumpkin.

Peel and cut some pumpkin into dice and stew until tender, but not soft. Drain and when cold place in a buttered baking dish, add half a cupful of sugar, a tablespoonful of salt and a tablespoonful of butter. Bake brown.

WEDDING BOXES.

How to Make Receptacles For Bride Cake at Home.

It is quite possible to cover small boxes for wedding cake at home if you have clever fingers and are willing to spend the time necessary to do the work well.

A wedding cake box should, of course, always be simple. White is the only color permissible on it unless a small bunch of flowers, with green stems—the flowers must be white—is used as decoration.

If you would make these boxes buy small boxes of the desired shape and size and then buy paper to cover them.

White crinkled paper can be used. A good way to put the paper in the cover, which is the only part that shows when the box is closed, is to paste it only on the under side. Cut two strips of paper, one the width of the box, another the length, both running with the grain of the paper.

Paste the end of one strip to the under part of one end of the cover; draw it out over the end, the top and the other end of the cover, and then cut it off, allowing an inch of paper to paste on the under part of the other end of the cover. Fasten the crosswise piece in the same way.

Make tiny white paper flowers and fasten a little bunch of them to the cover with a small bow of baby white satin ribbon.

These boxes are dainty and can be made at little cost. The cake which is put in them should be daintily wrapped in waxed paper.

How to Warm Wrapped Bread.

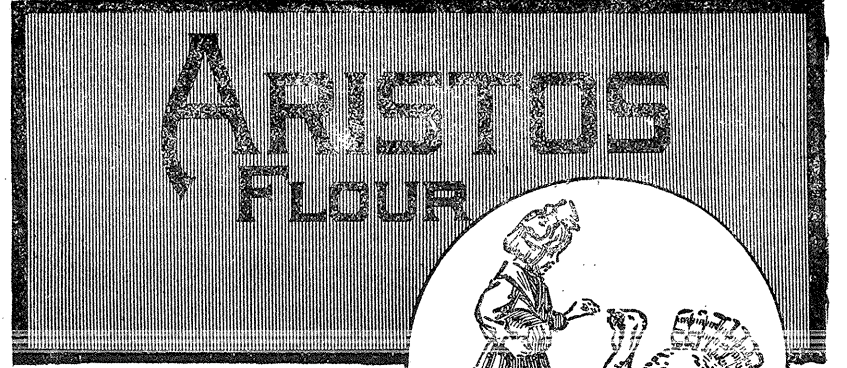

Many persons who are fond of freshly baked and even warm baker's bread have, it seems, been opposing the modern sanitary methods of having all bread wrapped and sealed cold and not handled by clerks or exposed to dust, flies, germs and filth on counters or in wagons. The bureau of chemistry of the department of agriculture regards the wrapping of bread as so important that it has caused the plant chemistry laboratory to make a series of experiments to determine whether those who like fresh or warm bread cannot get what they want in wrapped form. Bread fresh from the oven if wrapped while warm becomes moist and clammy and of unpleasant flavor. Loaves therefore must be allowed to cool thoroughly before being wrapped.

After some experiment the experts found that if a cold wrapped loaf is unwrapped and placed in a pan in the oven in good medium heat for ten minutes it will be as good as fresh, crisp without and tender within, and at the same time will be free from any pollution it might have gained if conveyed unprotected from baker to consumer. The bureau believes that if lovers of warm bread will try this plan they, too, will become ardent advocates of the clean, wrapped method of purveying bread.

Winter's Chills Breed Kidney Ills

Chilly, damp, changing weather is hard on the kidneys. Even more irritating are colds, grip, pneumonia, tonsillitis, quinsy and other infections. The kidneys get congested and inflamed, and this causes backache and disordered kidney action. Though serious in its latter stages, kidney disease is not hard to conquer if a good kidney remedy is used when the first signs of kidney trouble are noticed.

The best recommended kidney remedy in the world is Doan's Kidney Pills. You hear it everywhere. Get a box.

Spring is Breaking; Backs are Aching

Backache is often the first sign of some form of kidney disease that has been coming on for months. Look for the other signs;—lame back, sharp pains when stooping or lifting, dizzy spells, nervousness or despondency, with irregular, painful or distressing action of the kidneys; if these signs exist, decide that the kidneys need attention, ere the trouble turns to gravel, dropsy or Bright's disease.

Read this home testimony and then give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial.

Mrs. Bert Gowen, Pine and West Sts., Cass City, says: "I can speak a good word for Doan's Kidney Pills, as they have done good work in my home. Anyone suffering from pain in the back and other symptoms of disordered kidneys will make no mistake in giving Doan's Kidney Pills a trial. They are fine."	W. C. Dickinson, Main St., Cass City, says: "A strain was the cause of my kidneys becoming disordered. My back was weak and often I was seized by a catch in my loins when I attempted to lift. The kidney secretions were unnatural and irregular in passage, causing much annoyance. After using Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Wood & Co.'s Drug Store, my condition improved greatly. I was soon free from every symptom of kidney complaint."	Mrs. A. Koppelberger, Garfield and West Sts., Cass City, says: "I first used Doan's Kidney Pills about seven years ago. I was afflicted with kidney trouble and suffered from a weak back and trouble with the kidney secretions. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Wood & Co.'s Drug Store, cured me. When I have taken them since, for slight recurrences of the former trouble, they have always brought prompt relief. Others of my family have taken this remedy with good results."	John Fisher, Grant and Pine Sts., Cass City, says: "I was caused much suffering by kidney trouble. I had pain and lameness across the small of my back and when I stooped or brought any strain on the muscles of my back, the suffering was worse. I knew that my kidneys were disordered and when Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my attention, I procured a box at Wood & Co.'s Drug Store. They soon improved my condition and before long, I was in much better health."	A. McGillivray, Main St., Cass City, says: "An attack of lumbago and lameness across my back led me to use Doan's Kidney Pills. I could see a decided improvement from the first and the pain and lameness in my back was soon driven away. I know that Doan's Kidney Pills are an excellent remedy."	Mrs. William H. Withey, Oak and Houghton Sts., Cass City, says: "My kidneys were disordered for some time. My limbs became swollen and I was caused annoyance by the kidney secretions. Shortly use of Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Wood & Co.'s Drug Store, brought me great relief. I now feel better in every way."

Economy Hints

A penny saved is a penny earned.— Benjamin Franklin.

How to Marry on $75 a Month.

THIS is the story of a young couple who are to be married in a short time. Both have sensible and economical ideas. The man's salary is $75 a month. He is young, hard working, sober and in a good business, with prospects of "raises."

The girl is pretty, sensible and well trained. She knows just what income they are going to have and that it must cover everything. This is the way these young folks are planning to use the income, and before the knot is tied they are going to try to find a place to live where such conditions are possible.

Their rent must not exceed 20 per cent of their income, or $15 a month. Their table expenses must be covered by 30 per cent of their money, or $22.50 a month (that is only $5.50 a week for two people). Fuel, light and a wash-woman's wage must not be more than 10 per cent, or $7.50 a month. Their clothing must be kept within 15 per cent, or $11.25 a month (a little more than $5 a month for each).

Then there will be 25 per cent of their income left, or $18.75 a month, which must cover such items as insurance, church dues, savings, books or "higher life," as the things that lift us above our daily monotony are called.

If these young people can keep within these apportionments they can be happy and free from immediate worry. If the income is raised, half of the raise ought to be put aside for an emergency fund.

You see, in the division of the $75 a month there is no room for extravagance. Everything must be carefully bought. All divisions of salary, of course, like this one just quoted, are theoretical. Naturally the smaller the salary the larger the proportion that will be spent for food. But the percentages are offered as scientific signposts that point in the right direction.

Young married people who work together and plan their income, who share alike the burden and the joys of life, grow very near and close to one another. So much can be done, so much borne, when love is the guiding star. The young man whistles as he goes out to work, even if the breakfast has not been very big, and the young wife sings as she washes up the breakfast dishes and plans her bills of fare with a careful thought for the cost.

NEW METHODS.

How to Clean Window Shades by Latest Method.

If the window shades are soiled at the bottom and if they are sufficiently long, cut them off, make a new hem and rehang. The neat appearance will repay you for the trouble. If they are not long enough to permit of this treatment turn the shades top to bottom. In stitching in the hem fold the hem carefully and slip the stick into place before stitching. Then there is no danger of cracking the holland.

Sometimes the paper which has been used for lining the cake pan sticks to the cake. Warm the loaf slightly; then it may be the more easily removed.

A few seeded raisins or chopped dates added to the nut or apple salad is well worth while.

If the red tiles of the vestibule become dull, try rubbing them with lemon dipped in salt. After half an hour wash in the usual way. The tiles will be perceptibly brightened.

If the white of egg is used in mixing a mustard plaster there is little or no danger of blistering the most sensitive skin.

How to Darn Table Linen.

To darn table linen stretch the article smooth and tight in embroidery hoops. Remove the presser foot from the sewing machine, loosen the tension, slip the hoops under the needle and without turning the hoops sew back and forth until the hole is neatly filled. Then turn the hoops and proceed in the same manner across the stitching already put in. The result is gratifying, and only a few moments are required for the work.

To patch a tablecloth take a piece of linen the size of the hole and coat it with white soap to make it stiff. Trim the hole evenly. Place the patch under the hole after the edges have been soaped and trimmed. Place under the presser foot of the machine and sew the patch backward and forward. If very fine thread, 100 or 150 is used, it will scarcely show. Sew on both sides, and when the tablecloth is laundered and pressed you will find that you have a very neat patch.

How to Make Buttons Stay On.

"At last I have found a way to prevent the laundress from tearing buttons from underwear," said a mother recently. "I button all garments up securely and turn them wrong side out and tell her not to turn them. They come clean as easily as before, and I haven't lost a button from the wringer since I tried it. This is an amicable adjustment of a long standing source of friction."

HOW TO REGULATE THE FURNACE.

A furnace authority says: "In mild weather it is not necessary to 'shake down' the furnace fire. You can economize on fuel and still have a fire ready to start full blast should the north wind begin to blow. With the furnace poker rake down only part of the ashes, forming a sort of crater by piling out the ashes thoroughly from the bottom and the top. Into this 'crater' put the fresh coal. This is really a sort of furnace within the larger one and holds the fire without using coal to heat the whole furnace. When the cold snap comes shake the grate thoroughly, shovel on fresh coal and open the drafts."

ARRANGING FLOWERS.

How to Keep Them Best When They Are Costly.

In the winter, when flowers are costly and rare, it is wise to learn how to make the best of them. When arranging them never put too many blooms in any one jar or vase. Flowers are seen to far greater advantage if loosely and simply arranged, and they last much longer, too, because they get more air and water.

A very good plan is to fill a bowl with water and to throw into it a number of ordinary bottle corks. These, you see, will buoy up your flowers and keep them in position without showing at all.

Another good scheme is to stretch a piece of very coarse mosquito netting over an ordinary round embroidery frame and set it over a soup plate or bowl filled with water. The stems of short flowers are then thrust through the net, which prevents the flowers from slipping.

Slender, clear glass specimen vases, which hold only two or three blooms, show off roses and carnations to the very best advantage, but they are apt to be top heavy and upset if placed in a strong draft. You will find, though, that a little lead shot placed in the bottom of such glasses will make them as stable as a rock.

Change the water in the vases every day, and if you will take the trouble to snip a tiny piece off the end of each stalk just as often, holding the end of the stalks under the water while you do so, you'll find your flowers will keep fresh much longer. This prevents air getting up into the little stem tubes, thus hindering the flowers from drawing up as much moisture as they require.

See that no leaves are left on the stalks inside the vase either. If they are they will quickly decay and make the water stale.

HOW TO CURL HAIR.

A Natural Looking Wave That Will Last a Week.

To wave the hair so that it does not receive any injury and yet will retain the wave for some days requires the expenditure of a slightly longer time than would be necessary in the ordinary way, but even the busy woman, the clerk or typist, could and would spare a little while, say, on a Saturday afternoon or Sunday morning, to waving her hair if it would last for the remainder of the week.

Shake the hair down, brush it out. Then dip a perfectly clean brush into some soft water and pass it through the hair, making it slightly damp, but not wet. Then take a slip of soft, thin muslin the full length of the hair and about five inches wide, make it quite damp, take a strand of the hair, fold the muslin over it and apply the waving tongs, making the waves in the usual way, from the roots downward.

The waving tongs should not be too hot and should remain on the muslin until it becomes dry. Then redamp the muslin and apply to another strand of the hair till the whole head has been treated.

When all the hair has been waved comb it through lightly and dress it. This wave will remain in for a week.

How to Make Ginger Nuts.

Three and a half pounds of flour, a pound of butter, half a pound of sugar, five tablespoonfuls of ground ginger, three tablespoonfuls of ground allspice, two teaspoonfuls of ground cloves, two teaspoonfuls of ground cinnamon, a quart of New Orleans molasses.

Put the flour, butter, sugar and spices together and, with the molasses, knead into a dough until it is fine and smooth, then let it remain in a cool place until it becomes chilled. Mold it into small cakes the size of a cent. This is done by rolling and pressing a small piece of dough in the hand. Place them on lightly buttered tins, brush them over with molasses and water and bake in a moderate oven.

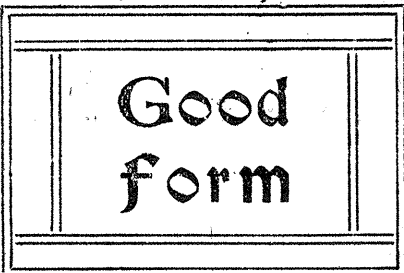

This recipe can also be used for ginger cookies.

How to Keep Range Bright.

The kitchen range should always be kept bright and immaculately clean, and this state of affairs can easily be secured with just a little care. A handful of crumpled newspaper rubbed briskly over the entire surface after each meal will keep it evenly polished. This kind of rub-up is especially necessary after the top of the range has been splattered by fat from the pan.

How to Prevent Milk From Burning.

To prevent yourself the annoyance of having boiling milk stick to the pan or kettle try first greasing the pan with a little butter.

Neat Morning Attire.

There has been so much said and written against wearing in the morning old, worn-out silk gowns with soiled or tattered lace and keeping the front hair in curling papers that it is to be hoped that no woman with any self respect appears at the breakfast table in such attire.

It is really a disguise, for she would hardly be recognized an hour or two later when, neatly gowned, she may start out on a shopping expedition.

As far as possible washable morning dresses should be worn. A dress made opening down the front, in one piece, is quickly donned, and the many pretty sailor collars that are worn now are easily adjusted. It takes but a few minutes to put on such a collar and a little bow, and the whole effect is pleasing.

No woman would wish to sit at the breakfast table opposite a man who were soiled clothing and presented an unkempt appearance. A man's eyes are quite as keen, even if he says little and kindly makes excuses in his heart.

Possibly if he said more his wife would be more careful, but she may have the idea that he does not notice what she wears, and so the careless habits are acquired. If that is the case, let her try appearing in a prettily made but simple morning dress some day, with her hair as neatly arranged as if it were for dinner instead of breakfast, and see if her looks do not call forth some pleasant comment from the man usually silent.

The highest compliment one woman ever had paid her, she says, was when her husband remarked, after many years of married life, that in all that time he never had seen a day when she was not tidily dressed for breakfast.

Greeting One's Hostess.

At a reception attended by men as well as women they enter the room together, stand first before the first hostess of the occasion, as there is always a head for such affairs, and greet her. She in turn presents them to any of the others in the receiving line that they are not acquainted with.

At a private house it is the lady of the house who greets them. If they do not know her they can easily introduce themselves, when the man says, "This is Mrs. Blank, is it not?" She replies that it is.

He may then say, "I am Mr. B. and wish to introduce my wife" (or whoever the lady is that is with him). Mrs. Blank should say she is pleased to see him, and in turn she presents him and the lady to the others in the receiving line.

At a very large, semipublic affair there is usually a master of ceremonies. He is supposed to make all introductions. If he is not personally acquainted with those invited he takes their cards and introduces them by name to all in the receiving line.

After Theater Suppers.

Usually for an after the theater supper a menu has already been prepared and ordered served at such an hour. If left to guests each should express some preference, never anything the most extravagant, but the preference, say, for tea or coffee or whatever is really wished. If wine is to be taken the men of the party do the ordering; but, as a rule, the affair is thought out and proposed by some especial member.

COMMUNICATION.

Editor Chronicle:

Will you kindly allow space for reply to statements in the editorial columns of the Huron Co. Tribune. On March 6 appeared this item: "French farmers down in Quebec are supplying the Boston and eastern hay markets this year free of duty as a result Michigan farmers are selling hay at $6.00 per ton." The truth is Michigan farmers are compelled to do nothing of the kind. Hay is quoted on the Detroit markets at from $14.50 to $15.00 per ton. The expenses of getting hay to Detroit from here baled would be about $5.00 per ton (this includes baling, freight and commission) there is no reason why farmers should sell less than $10.00 per ton which is much higher than prices were for a number of years under a protective tariff. By the way I called at a farmer's place near Cass City last week who was selling hay from his barn for $10.00 per ton and could readily sell any amount at that price, the buyer hauling it away himself. The extravagant statements made by the Tribune apparently for political effect may in Mr. English's opinion serve to help the standpoint cause in Huron Co., but in my opinion they will do no good before an intelligent public.

Tombstone in a Cage.

Very unusual is the story connected with an iron cage erected over the grave of an East Indian officer who was a keen big game hunter. He had the cage made so that by undoing the screws at the end it could easily be taken to pieces, and he utilized it for two purposes. On his tiger shooting expeditions he had it covered with green boughs, when it effectively concealed him from his quarry, while at night it covered him while he slept. The bars, however, were not sufficiently close to make him quite secure, and one night he was so badly mauled by a tiger that he died of blood poisoning. —London Strand Magazine.

Belgium has 600 persons on the square mile and they live, but they all work. Average size of farm 5 acres. Cows give the milk and plow and harrow. A traveler made light of the way the cow was treated, then he returned with his shallow brain to this boasted land claiming that our mothers should do the work, raise a family and not have a voice in the laws that bound her down. He asked just as much of the poor women of America as the people of Belgium required of their cows.

Charles Frohman, the theatrical manager, was once talking in London about his plans for the winter. "I hoped that Sir George Alexander would go to the states," he said. "Alexander isn't his right name, is it?" his friend asked. "No," said Mr. Frohman, "his right name is Samson. It was a pity to change the name of Samson for that of Alexander." "But Alexander conquered the world, you know," said the other. "Samson, however, is the more appropriate theatrical name," Mr. Frohman insisted. "Have you forgotten that Samson was the first man who brought down the house?"

Build Your Barn Right . . .

Constructing your barn is a scientific problem in efficiency—just like the construction of a modern factory. You should build it

- To take care of your increase in crops the next few years.
- To stand the enormous strains to which it will be subjected.
- To save steps and permit quickest handling of contents.
- To conserve the quality of your crops and the health of your animals.

The better your barn meets these requirements the more money you will make.

No one is better able than we are to help you make your barn what it should be. For years we have dealt in barn building materials and studied barn construction.

We are confident our knowledge and experience will benefit you.

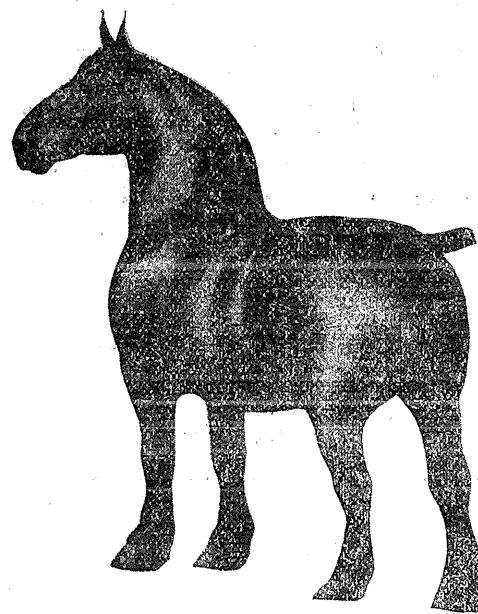

Talking it over with us will not put you under the slightest obligation.

Belgian Draft Horse History

For the past 800 years all countries of Europe have acknowledged that the Belgian Draft Horse is the best draft horse in the world. Ever since the sixteenth century, England, Germany, Russia, Italy, France and others have been buying sires from Belgium, to improve their respective breeds. It was a Belgian stallion in 1873 that beat all others at the Paris, France, International Exhibit; it was a Belgian stallion that carried off the medal in 1879 in London, England; it was a Belgian stallion that captured the championship at the International Exhibit at Brussels, Belgium, 1879; it was a Belgian stallion that did likewise at Hanover, Germany in 1884; again the world showed at Ghent, 1885, and the result was championship honors were bestowed upon a Belgian. From 1895 to 1900 the countries of the world did not compete for honors, but at the Grand Exposition of the world at Paris in 1900, an opportunity was given and all the countries of the world were represented, and behold the result: It was Reve de Or, brother of the sire of Ruston that walked over more draft stallions than ever came together in one show ring. Last but not least, it was a Belgian mare, Castile II., that also won the championship at same place. Again a Belgian stallion won sweepstakes at Columbus, Ohio, 1901. Therefore it is an undisputed fact that the best draft stallions and best draft mares of the world today are the Belgians.

"BLOOD IS THICKER THAN WATER"

Without good red blood a man has a weak heart and poor nerves. Thinness of the blood, or anaemia, is common in young folks as well as old. Especially is it the case with those who work in ill ventilated factories—or those who are shut up indoors in winter time with a coal stove burning up the oxygen or emitting carbonic (oxide) gas. This blood, or blood which lacks the red blood corpuscles, in anaemic people may have been caused by lack of good fresh air breathed into lungs, or by poor digestion or dyspepsia. Sometimes people suffer intense pain over the heart which is not heart disease at all, but caused by indigestion. Whatever the cause, there's just one remedy that you can turn to—knowing that it has given satisfaction for over 40 years.

DR. PIERCE'S

Nowadays you can obtain Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery Tablets, as well as the liquid form from all medicine dealers, or tablets by mail, prepaid in $1 or 50c size. Address R. V. Pierce, M. N. Bigelow & Sons have apparently added a millinery department to their hardware store if one is to judge from the up-to-date line of spring hats which fill half of their show window. Mr. Bigelow says that they may be a little ahead of the other millinery openings but he feels that their line of hats are sufficiently durable to withstand even this cold weather.

Jas. J. Spence returned Saturday from Scotland where he has spent the last three months very pleasantly indeed, visiting his parents, brothers and sisters and many other friends of his boyhood days. He did not find many changes since being there before as the time of change for that country is generally past. Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Moon celebrated their twentieth wedding anniversary Saturday evening, March 14, at their pleasant farm home one mile north of Cass City. The evening's entertainment consisted of readings by Misses Eva Hayward and Ione Striffler and musical numbers by G. W. Landon, and Misses Nora Jones and Ethel McGregory. At eleven o'clock the guests were invited to the dining rooms, which they found prettily decorated in green and white, and where they found their places at small tables by dainty place cards decorated with a smiling Irish colleen. The tables were covered with white lunch cloths bordered with shamrocks and the favors were little silken shamrocks. An elaborate three-course luncheon was served by four white clad misses. Mr. and Mrs. Moon received a number of beautiful pieces of china with which they will always remember their china anniversary.

M. E. CHURCH NOTES.

All services will be as usual next Sunday.

Three united with the church last Sunday. We were glad to see the services so generally and generously attended. The Epworth League and prayer meetings are an inspiration; Sunday school at the 200 line; stewards happy over the up-to-date state the finances and everyone hopeful for the future.

The Epworth League had charge of the prayer meetings Thursday night.

Topic of the League service Sunday evening, "Korea." Leader, Miss Florence Field.

Remember the four days services; Mar. 26 and 29, inclusive. Rev. C. E. Wakefield of Birmingham will be the leader. The first service will be held 3:00 p. m., Thursday, Subject, "The Revelation of Jesus Christ; Evening, "The Things Which Shall Be Hereafter." Friday, "The Seven Letters" and "The Bitter-Sweet Book."

Poe and "The Raven."

A man told me recently that his brother, who was an intimate friend of Edgar Allan Poe, said that Poe completed "The Raven" while walking up Broadway one evening. The poet was calling on this friend, Cornelius Mathews, to whom he read "The Raven" as far as he had written it. They walked uptown together, and Poe, becoming suddenly inspired, stopped under a street lamp and wrote the concluding stanza of what is certainly among the three or four most famous poems ever written by an American poet. This story was told me by the brother of Mr. Mathews, who got it at first hand.—J. L. G. in New York Sun.
