Next week Friday the Cass City Chautauqua will be under way. From the opening until the curtain rings down on the Tuesday night following, there won't be a dull minute. The people of Cass City and the Thumb district will have the opportunity to hear some of the world leaders in music and on the lecture platform. Only the Chautauqua plan makes it possible to bring such a series of entertainments to Cass City at the price.

The Chronicle has told of the various entertainments and entertainers in its issues of the past few weeks so that the readers are by this time thoroughly familiar with the splendid attractions to be offered by the Chautauqua soon to begin here.

The important thing is to plan to take a little vacation of a week and make it something inspiring and uplifting as well as enjoyable by attending the Chautauqua. Fine crops of hay, wheat and oats have been harvested and prospects for bumper crops of corn and beans look promising in this community. There is therefore no reason why any one whether on the farm or living in town cannot take in

"TELL BOYS TO COME"

Washington Gardner Invites Local Veterans to G. A. R. Encampment.

Local Civil War veterans have been in doubt about their reception at the G. A. R. encampment at Detroit because the local G. A. R. Post no longer exists. Washington Gardner, state commander, set the old boys' minds at ease in that particular in the following letter to G. E. Perkins of Cass City:

"I am just in receipt of yours of July 31st containing a list of veterans and sons of veterans getting mail at Cass City. Thanks for same. In reply to your inquiry would say let every veteran come to Detroit and you will be just as welcome as though you were members of the Post. Will be glad to have you fall into line and take your place with the Michigan Marching Column. Also tell the sons of veterans to come; it is estimated that we will have over one thousand sons of veterans in line as escort to the Grand Army. Tell the 'boys' to come and fall into line.

The Bolander Orchestra, a Feature of Our Forthcoming Chautauqua Program

THE Bolander Orchestra will soon begin its fifth year as a musical organization. The members of this company are all born musicians. Their father, John A. Bolander, is a violin maker. While mere children, they all began to play musical instruments. Adeline Bolander, at the age of seven years, used a half sized violin to play in public at recitals. This orchestra presents both vocal and instrumental music. The instrumental work, however, is emphasized most strongly. In their program the members of this company arrange themselves first into a brass and string orchestra and later into an all string orchestra.

They render such selections as the Sextette from "Luca," the "Poet and Peasant" by Verdi, "Orpheus" from Offenbach, "The Bohemian Girl" by Balfe and a string number "Humoresque" by Dvorak. A feature of each program is the work of the drummer, Miss Alice Bolander. In addition to the drum, she operates the sleigh bells, canary whistle, locomotive whistle, a school bell, a Chinese block, a triangle, castanets, crash cymbal, orchestra bells, rackette, sliding steamboat whistle, a cyclone whistle, a duck quack, a rooster crow and a tambourine.

WAR COMRADES TO MEET

Lieut. G. C. Round to Visit Rev. J. W. Fenn.

Lieut. Geo. C. Round of Monasses, Va., is expected to visit his old comrade, Rev. Jas. W. Fenn, for a few days following the G. A. R. encampment to be held this month in Detroit. Lieut. Round was a member of the signal corps during the Civil War and fired the last signal sockets of the war from the dome of the state house of North Carolina at Raleigh.

The stirring events of the closing years of the war in which both Lieut. Round and Rev. Fenn were engaged make this meeting after the long years of peace one which both anticipate with quickened pulse. This will be the second meeting of these almost life-time friends since the war, the previous occasion being 45 years ago when Mr. Fenn was at Middleton, Conn.

Lieut. Round is a graduate of Wesleyan University of Middleton, Conn., a school which Mr. Fenn also attended, and is a graduate of the law department of Columbia University. He has served his state as president of the Virginia State Board of Education and is a member of prominent historical societies.

Lieut. Round owns the farm where he resides on the old battle ground of Bull Run and has been a vigorous advocate before Congress for the purchase of that battlefield as a national park.

THE EUROPEAN WAR AT A GLANCE.

BRITAIN—Army mobilized; minor fighting in the North sea off Scotland and Yorkshire; main battle fleet steaming toward German coast with orders to "capture or destroy" German fleet; food shortage evident; public suffering.

JAPAN—War fleet coaling; will strike in aid of England should fighting spread to Far East.

HOLLAND—Germans attempting to cross country attacked by Dutch troops on border; dykes will be cut and country flooded should invasion continue.

REPUBLICAN RALLY AT BAD AXE AUG. 11.

Supreme Court Decides Burnside Saloon Case in Favor of Matt McCabe.

Vassar will have a fair this fall. Sept. 22 to 25 are the dates chosen.

Fre early Monday morning destroyed several buildings in the business section of Vassar, causing a loss of $15,000.

Joseph Peters, living four miles east of Laing, met with a terrible accident. While placing a pole with guy wires with which to stack hay, one of the wires broke, letting the pole fall upon Mr. Peter's shoulder. His shoulder bone was broken and the bone in the upper arm was forced through his shirt.

A big republican rally has been planned at Bad Axe for Tuesday afternoon, August 11. Among the speakers on the program are U. S. Senator Chas. E. Townsend, Congressman Pat H. Kelley, Congressman Jos. W. Fordney, Congressman Louis C. Cramton, Attorney General Grant Fellows, Ex-Gov. Fred M. Warner and the republican candidates for governor.

IN RACE FOR SHERIFF

Erastus C. Brainerd, Vassar's Candidate Well Fitted for Position.

(Political Advertising).

Among those who filed petitions as candidates for office in Tuscola county was Erastus C. Brainerd of Vassar, who is a candidate for the Republican nomination for sheriff.

Erastus C. Brainerd Republican Candidate for the nomination of Sheriff.

It is not necessary to make any lengthy announcement of Mr. Brainerd's candidacy or his fitness for the office to which he aspires. It is conceded by all that he would fill the position with credit. As for his right to aspire to the office his friends point out that he was born and has spent his whole lifetime in the county, and that his interests have always been identified with it. He is a man of clean character, has a pleasing personality, is level-headed and intelligent. Practically all his life has been spent on the farm and the clean life of the farmer has given him good health, steady nerves and absolute fearlessness, all of which are necessary qualities for a successful sheriff.

In the township of Vassar where Mr. Brainerd owns a fine farm, he has held the office of treasurer for two terms, and was later elected supervisor, holding that office for six successive terms. So highly was his ability as a supervisor regarded by his colleagues on the board, that he was elected chairman of that body for four years, a distinctly flattering compliment for any member of a board of supervisors.

Four years ago Mr. Brainerd was a candidate for sheriff and made a splendid run. In townships where he was well known he led all the candidates, and on account of the splendid showing he made and the graceful way in which he bowed to the will of his party, his friends feel that he is the logical candidate this year.

Mr. Brainerd has been a life-long Republican; he is a genial, pleasant gentleman to meet and will make a good officer. If he is nominated his election is assured, and he will administer the affairs of the office with credit to himself and satisfaction to all citizens of Tuscola county.—Pioneer-Times.

Signor E. Forcellati Dante to Direct His Band Here During One Day of Our Chautauqua

SIGNOR E. FORCELLATI DANTE.

ONE of the big features of the Chautauqua here will be the appearance of Signor E. Forcellati Dante and his Italian band on one day of the program. Signor Dante was a student in the Conservatory of Naples at the age of seven and graduated from that college at the age of seventeen. Ten years later he became leader of his band. He is also a trombone soloist of unusual ability.

Good Form

Training Maids. A little patience and system in dealing with maids, especially if they be young ones, without very much experience, will often work miracles. Even if they are older and can justly claim to be experienced, there is always much for them to learn in entering a new household. Every mistress has her own particular way of having certain things done, and the new girl must conform to this way even if she has been accustomed to doing the same work in a different manner. One mistress encourages her "green" girls by engaging them at a small wage and increasing it as they master various menus. When the maid can prepare all of them she is given the sum that her ability would earn for her anywhere. It is not hard to teach a girl to cook by this system. Most girls will take a deeper interest in their cooking than they will in many other branches of housework, and if instructed by this or some other equally good and definite system they will try harder and hence learn more rapidly than when instructed in a haphazard way.

Correct Stationery. The newest note paper is very long and very narrow and fits into envelopes of precisely the size of the unfolded sheet. This style is smartest in dark cream and pale gray tones. Then there are the sheets of heavy linen in buff, blue and gray that must be once folded lengthwise to fit into their envelopes, and there are the sheets of very thin but stout white paper which fold once to fit into square envelopes lined with a color. These formerly were used only for foreign correspondence, but now they are coming into domestic use. Correspondence cards never have been daintier, and everybody is now using them at the slightest excuse. Some of them are absolutely square, and some of them are long and narrow, with beveled edges.

The Unfriendly Reminder. Of all trying things the "I told you so" person is one of the worst. When you confide any trouble to them you are usually met with an "I told you so, but you wouldn't listen to me," which is distinctly annoying. They really might have the generosity not to rub it in. There is very little chance that you would have forgotten their warning, and they might refrain from the petty satisfaction of reminding you of their superior wisdom.

The Family Bore. Friends and even members of a family ought to take care not to overstep the border line between interest and inquisitiveness. If one has been out and comes back looking pleased, it is annoying to be immediately asked, "Well, whom have you been with?" and then requested to go into details of the pleasant time spent.

Cordiality to Newcomers. A resident of a town or village can call with propriety on any newcomer and the newcomer should return this call if she desires to acquire the acquaintance. The time of calling is settled by the customs of the place, but after two o'clock and before six is generally correct.

When to Call. Ceremonious calls are not made between women in the morning, evening or on Sunday afternoons. A man, owing to the exigencies of business, may call in the evening and on Sunday afternoon.

Tea Invitations. Invitations to afternoon teas are very often in the form of visiting cards. On the lower left hand corner of the card write "At home from 3 until 6. Thursday, April 20."

Hospitality to Strangers. Before an invitation of hospitality is given to a stranger a call should first be made.

Artistic Compliments. It is not the compliment that is, so to speak, laid on with a trowel that really reaches our hearts. No; it is the delicate and subtle sort that we do not recognize as a compliment. This species is best and most successful when it is expressed by deeds rather than by words. Let some one show a decided liking for our society when there are others present who are more attractive or clever or famous and how can we help but be pleased? If their amusements and interests take a second place and ours usurp the first, then that, too, is a delightful form of flattery.

Table Usage. Good manners at the table stamp the well bred person. The knife is used only in cutting the food, never to raise any particle of it to the mouth. A few general rules follow: Lettuce is cut with the fork, a small portion rolled about the tines and thus eaten. Oranges are peeled, cut or divided into quarters and eaten, or cut in half and eaten with the orange spoon, a spoon narrower and smaller than the ordinary tablespoon.

Maintained Their Honor. A deputy in the Italian parliament lost his shirt in a sleeping compartment while on a railway journey. He wrote an indignant letter to the directors of the line, in which he said, "It is shameful that the railway servants, for whom so much has been done by members of parliament, should dare to appropriate the belongings of passengers." A few days after this protest he received a letter signed by 200 railway employees, in which was inclosed a postal order for $1, which, the letter said, was the result of a small collection and which the railway men hoped would enable him to buy another shirt. —Boston Transcript.

CASS CITY PROOF.

Should Convince Every Cass City Reader.

The frank statement of a neighbor, telling the merits of a remedy, bids you pause and believe. The same endorsement by some stranger far away commands no belief at all. Here's a Cass City case. A Cass City citizen testifies. Read and be convinced. John Fisher, Grant and Pine Sts., Cass City, Mich., says: "I was caused much suffering by kidney trouble. I had pain and lameness across the small of my back and when I stooped or brought any strain on the muscles of my back, the suffering was worse. I knew that my kidneys were disordered and when Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my attention, I procured a box at Wood & Co.'s Drug Store. They soon improved my condition and before long, I was in much better health." For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. PILOT LIGHTING PLANTS HOME MADE ACETYLENE for LIGHTING and COOKING

The Flame of Acetylene Light is Small and the Burner Peculiar

You have probably noticed that a Pilot Country Home Acetylene burner is shaped like the letter "Y." And that the little gas openings in the arms of the burner are only pin hole size. So small they let out only half of a cubic foot of Acetylene in an hour. You might leave one of these Acetylene burners open by accident all day—and even then there wouldn't be gas enough in the air of the room to enable you to set fire to it if you tried. As a matter of fact, you would have to leave the burner open fully three days and nights in a room twelve by fourteen, with windows and doors closed tight, before there would be any fire or explosion whatever. And the chance of your leaving a burner open that long is not worth considering. The pungent odor of the escaping gas would be certain to attract attention in a few seconds. Insurance reports say that in a list of 10,000 recent fires and accidents caused by illuminants, 9990 were charged to the misuse and abuse of electricity, kerosene, gasoline and city gas, and only ten to the misuse and abuse of Acetylene. That's why the engineers of the National Insurance Board have endorsed Acetylene. They say it's safer than the oil illuminants it is rapidly displacing. You should use home made Acetylene yourself to light your house and barns and to cook your meals. All the facts and figures are in our illustrated catalogue which we send on request. Address S. A. K. AMERICAN QUARTET AND CLAYTON CONRAD, CARTOONIST.

THE program of the American Quartet and Clayton Conrad, cartoonist, will consist of both vocal and instrumental music, interspersed with cartoons—just such a program as Chautauqua audiences delight in.
The instrumental music will be presented by three members of the quartet on the violin, cello and piano.

Mr. Clayton Conrad features speech in drawing his pictures. His experience in newspaper cartoon and commercial art work, combined with fine ideas of color, fit him well for the position he holds with this company. The pictures he draws in color are original and are new ideas presented in a novel way. He uses two easels. Mr. Conrad has made a special study of coloring, and the results he obtains in a few moments with crayons are truly wonderful.

The cartoons and caricatures he draws are of the highest order of fun and are bound to make you laugh and cause you to forget your worries and care.
When you hear Mr. Conrad read and picture "The Old Red Cradle" you will be convinced that he can also be serious. This number was given so effectively at Williamston, Mich., that a return date was booked on condition that this selection was to be repeated.

Nightmare Stories.
It is always a question whether a literary man should seek to evade indigestion. Did not Mrs. Radcliffe confess that some of the most thrilling episodes in the "Mysteries of Udolpho" came to her in a nightmare consequent upon eating pork chops? May not the "brownies" also, who gave Stevenson the dream inspiration of "Jekyll and Hyde" have been traceable to some similarly injudicious but lucky meal?
Personally, I have had after supper dreams long and circumstantially worked out, which, could I remember them more distinctly in waking moments, might make my fortune as a writer of "thrillers."—London Tatler.

Gigantic Germs.
Mrs. R. was an extremely careful mother and had repeatedly cautioned her six-year-old daughter against handling any object that might contain germs. One day the little girl came in and said:
"Mother, I am never going to play with my kitty any more, because she has germs on her."
"Oh, no," replied her mother, "there are no germs on your kittens."
"Yes, there are," insisted the child.
"I saw one hop."—Harper's Magazine.

Training Canaries.
In the canary breeding establishments of Germany only the male birds are valued, because the females never sing. The method of training the birds to sing is to put them in a room where there is an automatic whistle, which they all strive to imitate. The breeder listens to the efforts of the birds and picks out the most apt pupils, which are then placed in another room for further instruction. These are the best singers and ultimately fetch high prices.

Brilliant Fish Hues.
Like birds, many fishes assume their brightest hue when they wish to attract the opposite sex of their species.
The colors of the male common pike become exceedingly intense, brilliant and iridescent in the breeding season.
The eel also puts on an intense silvery hue at the breeding time which is very noticeable and at one time caused naturalists to distinguish it as a distinct species. The males of the tench, roach and perch also show a marked increase in brilliancy in the breeding season.

Better Protection for Your Farm Machinery

It's like burning up money to leave your farm machinery in the fields at night—exposed to damp grass and soil and possibly rains. Vital parts may rust and weaken. One weak part may cause the whole machine to go to pieces.

IT WILL PAY YOU WELL

to build a cheap implement shed out in your fields to protect your reapers, mowers, harrows, seeders, tractors, scythes, etc., every night and rainy day.

"A dollar saved is a dollar earned." Such a shed will save you hundreds of dollars. It will avoid annoyance, loss of time and repair expense and add years to the life of your machines. The shed is quite likely to earn its cost the first year.

We have a large stock of good roofing and "common" lumber—just the stuff for low cost sheds. Get the materials next time you're in town—they're ready for you any time—at prices that will please you.

Weathered

A Narrow Escape

By ERMINIE HOLLAND Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

"He would never have done it," said the girl, straightening herself a moment from her task—"he would never have done it if they hadn't forced him to it. They were always teasing and taunting, nagging and grumbling, until he got sick of it all." She resumed her work—the kneading of a floury mass of dough—with the energy of an unnatural force within. "They thought because they had saved some money from the fruit of their hard labors they would make a gentleman of him, being the only one they had. And when they had done that they gave him no peace until he married her. It didn't matter about me. It was nothing to them that I had grown to think of him all day long and dream of him at nights. It was nothing to them that I went to school longer than we could afford and read books and studied nights that I might not be too ignorant. And I would have gone away to be a nurse and left them alone, old and feeble as they are, for his sake." She spoke in a voice that was indistinctly audible, for there was none to hear. The deep breathing from the inner chamber told her that its occupants could be awakened by no such sounds, and she was tired of her silent thoughts. "I scarcely get time to think in the daytime," she continued, "with the work and the looking after them, but at nights it is different. And on nights like this, when it is blowing hard and the wind moans and the snow drifts and drifts, then it comes into my head, and it won't leave me, and I can't send it away with sleep, for sleep is hard to bring these nights." She finished in silence, placing the spongy material in a dish and covering it with a white cloth for the night. Then she went to the door and opened it cautiously. It was wild and stormy without. A snow laden blast swept into the room, making the lamp flame flicker almost to extinction. She closed it hurriedly ere the drift at its base should fall inward. "It gets worse and worse," she murmured. "The Lord lend his aid to any one abroad in the hills tonight. The storm would blind and freeze and the road would sure be lost. It reminds me of the blizzard of six years back, when I was teaching in Cedar Valley. The storm lasted three days, and—" She stopped suddenly to listen. An unwonted sound in the wind had caught her ear, like a voice, a hail. Again it came, assuredly a call and close at hand. In an instant she had opened the door once more and stood peering out into the night. She did not wait long. A form emerged from out the darkness and the clouds of swirling snow, and a man paused at the stoop to unloose his snowshoes and stamp the white clods from his moccasined feet. Then, with a muffled greeting, he stepped past her into the room. "It's you, doctor!" she exclaimed. "Yes," he said, "I am forced to give in at last. I tried it on foot from Brown's, but lost the road just beyond here and all idea of direction." "It's the worst for many and many a long year," she replied. "And you're new at the Glen. You're not weathered." "I hope and pray there is no one in sad distress this night, doctor?" she asked anxiously. "It is Mrs. Graham of the Ridge. She has pneumonia and a weak heart. They think she cannot get through the night." He walked restlessly to the end of the room and back. "I fear they are in sore need of assistance." The girl's heart beat with great force at his words, but her face showed no sign. She placed a chair for him, filled his cup with tea, pressed him to partake of the cold venison, then sat down on the settee and looked steadily at the fire as it roared and sparkled up the chimney. "It is a bad trouble," she said at length. Then, as if a sudden thought had come: "You're Dr. Graham. Might you be kin of theirs?" "No. But I used to know Dr. Jack. We were at college together." "Has he been sent for?" "I believe so. But it will take some days to get here if this state of weather continues." He went on: "I understand he has opened up a practice near my old home in Port Arthur. It is rather strange that I should have done the same thing down here—near his." "Have you ever seen—his wife?" The girl's voice faltered on the last words. "I have not," he answered. "We are entirely out of touch lately. I did not know he had married." "The paper said she was 'talented,' and his mother told me that she was beautiful—and rich." A long silence fell between them. The doctor leaned back in the old armchair and soon dozed. The girl sat straight up, with her hands clasped together in her lap and her gaze still on the fire. She was thinking, thinking. Every throb of her heart seemed to repeat two words, "His mother!" Had her time really come, then? She had made one life scarcely worth the living. For that she deserved to die, aye, a miserable death, without a doctor's aid. Perhaps that was why God sent the storm, to work out this small portion of his great plan of justice. "His mother!" How she had cherished him through all the years of his life! How she had worked and slaved for his welfare! And he was grateful for it. He loved her as a good son should love a good mother. If she had never come between them all would have been well. Then came the proud thought: Why should they have wished to set her aside for another? She came of a great old line, away back. No one in the wide space of the old Laurentians could boast of better forbears than she—men known in the old land for their loyalty, their fearlessness, their love of right. What if the iniquities of an erring son were visited upon his children's children! The blood would revive, and revive again! A greenwood log in the fire fell with a heavy thud, and the roar of its burning started anew; water oozed from its sawed front with a hissing sound and dropped into the fiery bed. "Doctor!" The word recalled him. He started slightly, then sat forward. "If you had known the other way to the Ridge it might have been possible to get there." "What do you mean? What other way?" "There's a way around the south side of the Hewston hill, just a wide footpath in summer, under the rock all the way. It is sheltered from north winds, but the snow drifts in deep. It might be done on shoes." "I will try it now," he said. "You could not go alone. I would have to go, too—to guide you." "You!" he exclaimed. "Impossible! The very devil is abroad!" "I've been out in as bad as this before," she said. "I had no fear then, and I have none now. It's because I'm weathered." * * * * * A faint light, alternately visible for a moment and obscured by the clouds of driving snow, sent hope to the hearts of two people struggling blindly forward. For two long hours they had matched their united strength to that of the storm, now vanquishing it, again all but overcome by its mad force. But they still stumbled on with eyes fixed steadily upon the beacon. The next thing was the hum of voices, the soft rubbing of hands and feet and a gradually returning consciousness of identity, of situation and of circumstance. "Ah, there! She'll soon be round. Just to think of it! She always had grit. Don't you mind how she always walked her two miles to school, storm or sunshine, sometimes wading through snow to the waist? Never missed a day!" "Aye, I do. And I'll tell ye this: It may not be Christlike, and it's not a nice thing to say in the house of the dying, but if I were Lena Miller I'd never have done it for her." The girl's returning senses caught the word "dying," and she raised herself partly to ask, with a weak voice: "Was he too late?" "No, dear. He is here to do all that can be done—to give her relief from pain. No one can save when the Lord has called." A long silence came, broken only by the tick of the tall clock in the corner and the cry of the great storm without. Then some one came through the hallway and paused at the kitchen door. "Lena Miller is called. She must come." For a minute the girl scarcely understood. Then, hesitatingly, unsteadily, she rose, and with assistance walked to the door of the sick chamber and there paused. The room was empty save for the form of the dying woman on the bed. She went in alone, and a hand gently closed the door from without. Alone with his mother, lying white and still! The face, upon which Death had so surely set his mark, bore a strange resemblance to his in the dim light. It startled her to see a movement of the lips and to hear the words: "Is it you, Lena?" The girl bent over her. "I'm dying. Do you hate me?" She tried to answer, but no words would come. There was a tightening of the muscles at the throat. Weak almost to the breaking point with physical and mental strain, she could scarcely stand, but she caught a rod of the bed and steadied herself. The voice went on: "I'm dying, and I've been a wicked woman. The penalty has been paid. The bodily suffering has been great, but the mental anguish has been dreadful beyond words. I prayed God to send you tonight, and he has been good. Girl, I lied to you and to my son!" She stopped for breath and strength to proceed. Her voice fast failed her. "I wrote him a letter, and in that letter I said you had gone away, far away, to become another's wife. I spun the story well, cleverly. Then I let you think he had married and with my own lips told you that she was beautiful—and rich." The hand that held the iron rod shook, then relaxed and quickly caught at the cold fingers. "But the paper!" she gasped. "The paper was the beginning. That was not written of my son's marriage, but of his—the doctor who came tonight. It was before he came to the Glen, and none in these parts knew the right of it. I let them believe the wrong so that you would hear. You heard, and your heart was broken. I know!" The girl fell upon her knees by the bedside, and the pent-up anguish of nine long months spent itself in a smothered sob.

MOODS.

One of the elements which make for happiness and unhappiness is the vigor and persistence of moods. Will means something definite. Intellect, if properly used, moves to certain ends. The affections are positive. Moods, on the other hand, are mere states of feeling—drifting fog that arises now at one point and now at another of the landscape, changing nothing, unstable, driven away by a passing wind, yet for the moment obscuring the view as completely as if they had destroyed it.

Man and His Tailor.

A man can be measured to the best advantage, tailors say, away from a glass. Standing before a mirror he is almost certain to throw out his chest, if he does not habitually carry it so, and take an attitude that he would like to have rather than the one he commonly holds, whereas the tailor wants him, as the portrait painter wants his subject—in his natural pose and manner. With the man in that attitude the tailor can bring his art to bear. If that is required, in the overcoming of any physical defect and produce clothes that will give the best attainable effect upon the figure as they will be actually worn.—New York Sun.

Chautauqua Week at Cass City, August 14 to 18

BOYHOOD AND RISE OF MINNESOTA'S GOVERNOR WHO IS TO LECTURE HERE CHAUTAUQUA WEEK

Governor Adolph O. Eberhart Came From Sweden Alone at the Age of 11 Years.

WHEN 21 HE HAD HAD BUT THREE MONTHS OF SCHOOLING

Completed Seven Years' Course in Four Years and Three Months and Graduated as Valedictorian of His Class.

The career of Governor Adolph O. Eberhart, who is to speak here Chautauqua week, is one of almost romantic interest. Few great men in the world's history have succeeded against so many odds and difficulties and risen to fame. Born in a foreign country and coming to America at the age of 11 years all alone, working hard and never having had but three months' schooling up until he had reached the age of 21, it is at once apparent that his pluck, perseverance and ability were little less than marvelous.

Governor Eberhart was born in Sweden in the year 1870. His parents were poor and saw little chance of bettering their condition in their home land, and, hearing of the great field of opportunity which lay on the farms of the American continent, they decided to come to America when Adolph was but 10 years of age. Adolph was to stay with a well-to-do uncle in Sweden for a while until they could prepare the way for him to come to this country. A year later Adolph sent word to his parents that he wished to come to the new land at once himself.

He started alone, but when he got to Liverpool this lad of such tender years found himself lost in the midst of unknown surroundings. But perseverance conquered, and it was not long until he was on a steamer bound for American shores.

We next find him landed in the state of Nebraska, to which place his parents had preceded him and where they lived in a mere cabin.

His first work was that of a cattle herder. He went from that into farming and followed this occupation in its different branches for a number of years.

The last man for whom he worked was a clergyman-farmer, where he had access to the preacher's library. He showed a decided interest in books. The preacher encouraged the lad to go to school and college and impressed him with the value of an education. As heretofore stated, up to this time he had had but three months' schooling.

His work upon the ranch and farm, however, had given him a strong physique, and, with excellent health and a rare determination, he started in to attend school at the academy at St. Peter, Minn., and later pursued his college course at the same place. He completed, in all, a seven years' course in four years and three months and graduated as the valedictorian of his class. While passing through college, he took every study in the curriculum, more than seventy-five in all.

Not only this, but with the money he had saved and what he earned during his school years he paid his way through college.

Next he studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1898.

Later still he was elected to the State Senate and while a member of that body secured the passage of numerous important acts, among them the anti-rebate law and amendments granting the railroad commission control of railroad rates and giving power to the state commission to take proceedings before the interstate commerce commission.

Then Senator Eberhart was elected to the office of lieutenant governor, serving in this capacity during the administration of Governor Johnson, who, it will be recalled, was widely talked of for President of the United States at the time of his death. Mr. Eberhart filled out the unexpired term, was afterward elected governor twice and today is a candidate for the United States Senate.

EBERHART WILL BE HERE CHAUTAUQUA WEEK

Governor of Minnesota Makes Fine Impression with Address Before Board of Commerce, Detroit, Mich.

(From the Detroit Free Press, May 21, 1911.)

While Governor Adolph O. Eberhart of Minnesota, who was the guest of honor at the Board of Commerce luncheon given at the Hotel Tuller yesterday, may not be an orator, he is the best human interest speaker Detroit has had the pleasure of listening to in a long time. In other words, he is a man with a real message, and after listening to him one does not wonder that he is doing things in Minnesota.

Without flattery, it may be said that he is a worthy successor to Minnesota's illustrious and lamented son, the late Governor John A. Johnson. He is cast in a rougher mold, but his trend of mind shows how much a man can accomplish by hard work. Very few men who have spoken in this city have displayed so thorough a knowledge of the human nature of things, the foundation for which was evidently laid when Governor Eberhart served as a state legislator. He served under Governor Johnson as lieutenant governor, though they were not of the same political party, and when the time came the people elevated him to the executive chair.

EBERHART AT SIOUX CITY

Minnesota Executive, Who Lectures Here Chautauqua Week, Makes Big in Iowa Metropolis.

(From Sioux City, Iowa, News, January 19, 1912.)

"Who's Minnesota's governor and bunks in old St. Paul? Who looks as solemn as an owl? Who's lean and lank and tall? Who, when he gets a start, however, is long on pep and wit? Who with our own Commercial Club sure made an awful hit? Now, when it comes to verbal flights, who holds the mark for speed—and yet who's saying something from the time he draws the bead? Who shines upon the stump and finds in politics his joy? Who grabs your mit as if he knew your father as a boy? If Minnesota's fate were left to men of Sootown's mart, who'd hold his job as governor for life? Why, Eberhart.

HELPS EMIGRANT BOY

Gov. Eberhart, Who Is to Lecture Here Chautauqua Week, Quick to Give Aid.

A few months ago relatives of a little German emigrant boy wired Governor Eberhart to the effect that this boy was detained at Ellis Island and invited the governor's aid in giving the boy a chance to come to America. It was typical of the executive that he dropped everything and used every influence possible to secure the admission of the boy into America so that he might be given his chance in the great new world.

The Ancient Greek Theater.

The performance at Athens, in ancient Greece, began at dawn, and, as several pieces were produced one after the other, these performances lasted the whole day. On the days the performances were given all work was suspended, business put off, imprisoned debtors were set free and arrests strictly prohibited. Long before sunrise thousands of people assembled, and outside of the theater noisy crowds of men, women and children congregated, all bent upon enjoying themselves and eager to obtain the best seats. Many of them brought their food with them, and in order to stimulate the enthusiasm of the people copious quantities of fiery Greek wine were given to impecunious citizens by wily authors, who endeavored thus to buy the applause of a discriminating public.

Whoever Loves Is Never Old.

When life has been well spent age is a loss of what it can well spare—muscular strength, organic instincts, gross bulk and works that belong to these. But the central wisdom which was old in infancy was young in fourscore years and, dropping off obstructions, leaves in happy subjects the mind purified and wise. I have heard that whoever loves is in no condition old. I have heard that whenever the name of man is spoken the doctrine of immortality is announced. It cleaves to his constitution. The mode of it baffles our wit, and no whisper comes to us from the other side. But the inference from the working of intellect, having knowledge, having skill—at the end of life just ready to be born—affirms the inspiration of affection and of the moral sentiment.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Life of the Sun.

Adopting the well known hypothesis of Helmholtz, which attributes the production of the heat emitted by the sun to its contraction, an idea can be formed of the sun's duration. If one gives to the sun a coefficient of expansion intermediate between that of mercury and that of gas one arrives at the conclusion that it has taken 1,000,000 to 3,000,000 years for the sun to contract to its present radius; in particular, it would have taken 10,000 years to contract from infinity to a radius twice its present radius. Finally, the sun will take 200,000,000 years to contract from its present radius to half that radius, and even then its temperature at the surface will be 3,000 degrees.—Scientific American.

BARREN FIG TREE—DEFILED TEMPLE.

Mark 11:12-25—Aug. 9.
"By their fruits ye shall know them."—Matthew 7:20.

Jesus' triumphal entry into Jerusalem was past. After spending a portion of the day in the Holy City, He returned to Bethany. Going to the city the next morning, He noted a fig tree by the wayside, bearing plenty of leaves. He approached it, but found no figs. The good show of leaves was deceptive. Then He put a curse, a blight, upon the tree, declaring that it should not bear fruit forever, or to a completion.

Bible students believe that they now see a deep signification in this incident. They believe that the fig tree was used as a type of the Jewish nation; and that the blight upon the tree because of unfruitfulness corresponded exactly to that pronounced the day before upon that nation because of its unfruitfulness.

On the day previous, Jesus had said to the Jewish nation, "Ye shall see Me no more until that Day." He declared that this tree would be blighted to the end of the aion, or Age. Again, when speaking to His disciples respecting the end of this Age, Jesus declared, "When ye shall see the fig tree putting forth leaves, then know that summer is nigh"—that the winter, the blight time, of Israel and of the world, is at an end. In other words, one of the signs of a New Dispensation will be the indications of life, hope, promise, amongst the Jews.

The Barren Fig Tree.

Significance of Zionism.

These same Bible students point to the revival of hope amongst the Jewish people, as especially manifested by Zionism, and declare that this return of hope and faith to the Jews respecting their land and the Divine promises is exactly in line with prophecy. They point to Isaiah 40 as in process of fulfillment: "Comfort ye My people, saith your God. Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her, that her appointed time is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned; for she hath received of the Lord's hand double for all her sins."

These Bible students hold that Ezekiel's prophecy of the valley of dry bones does not refer to a literal resurrection, but to the revival of Israel's hopes in the Divine promises. This is in harmony with the Prophet's declaration, "These bones are the whole house of Israel; behold, they say, Our bones are dried, our hope is lost; we are cut off from our parts."—Ezekiel 37:1-14.

These Bible students declare that St. Paul teaches that the Jewish nation was typically represented by Ishmael, Hagar's son. (Galatians 4:22-31.) As Hagar and Ishmael were outcast for a time, so the Law Covenant and the Jews have been cut off from Divine favor only temporarily. Ishmael had almost fainted for thirst in the wilderness, but was revived by the angel of the Lord, who pointed out a spring of water. This also is typical. Jewish hopes of God's favor had almost died. Zionism is the wellspring which is rescuing Israel from death as a people. Under Messiah's Kingdom, soon to be established on the spirit plane, the Jews will receive a great blessing—on the earthly plane.

Cleansing the Temple.

Jesus and His disciples proceeded to Jerusalem and went directly to the Temple. There He assumed authority and began to cast out the traders with out ceremony. An other account of this incident tells us that in this cleansing of the Temple Jesus used a scourge of small cords. All this was of double significance:

(1) Primarily, it had to do with that time:

(2) Secondly, it typified a cleansing of the antitypical Temple, due, we believe, in our day.

According to modern legal usage, it would be quite improper for one to enter a church edifice in order to interfere with the rights of conscience or the procedure sanctioned by the congregation owning that edifice. If wrong were being done, and he wished to rectify it, he should either swear out a warrant or call a policeman to witness the infraction of the law and correct matters. But under the Jewish Law it was different. Every Jew was privileged to enforce the Divine Law respecting blasphemy or sacrilege.

Jesus therefore did only what any Jew had a right to do. It will be noticed that as much as the Scribes and Pharisees desired to find occasion against Jesus, they made no objections to the procedure here described. Jesus was within His rights. He was championing the cause of God and His Temple.

Jesus intimated that responsibility for the prevailing condition rested upon those in authority—the Scribes and Pharisees. For graft and other considerations they had permitted God's House to become a place of merchandise—had made religion a cloak. We fear that religion is still used to cover selfishness. The Master, who was especially indignant at such misuse of the House of God, holds the same sentiments today.

LOCAL ITEMS.

Mr. and Mrs. P. F. Stiner, E. O. Spaulding and Chas. Spaulding and son of Caro were callers here Wednesday evening.

Miss Vera Bardwell of Elkton was the guest of Miss Geraldine Auten over Sunday. Miss Addie Wallace accompanied Miss Bardwell to Elkton for a few days' visit.

Mrs. Margaret McPherson of Park Hill, Ont., is the guest of Mrs. D. R. Graham, and will also visit with relatives in Sheridan township. Mrs. McPherson and Mrs. Graham were girlhood friends and the days of the present visit pass all too quickly.

Oak Bluff resorters are spreading the report that Cass City will witness another high dive attraction during Chautauqua week. They say that A. H. Higgins is practicing a "Mollie, the high diver," act and is progressing nicely. Sunday's exhibition at Oak Bluff from the dock into 18 inches of water was hugely enjoyed by those who were outside the radius of the splash, but it was hard on Ab's Sunday suit.

"My husband will probably just take in the evening entertainments of the Chautauqua, so I will buy a season ticket for myself and he will pay single admissions when he comes," said a lady residing on a farm near Cass City as she handed over $2 to a local ticket seller Friday. Being curious to know what the cost of the evening entertainments would figure, the lady and the ticket man tallied the amounts and found a season ticket was cheaper by 20 cents. The lady then invested in two season tickets and her husband being a farmer who keeps his work "caught up" will find time to take in one or two of the afternoon sessions as well as the evening entertainments he first planned to enjoy.

A party of ten consisting of Oscar Auten, Chas. Hall, Neil McLarty, Wm. Paul, Arthur Flynn, N. Gable, W. F. Hayes, C. H. Travis, Richard Bayley and Ed Brotherton made an auto trip to Seymour Lake, six miles southwest of Oxford, Sunday to attend the funeral of "Hammy" Freeman, a former Gagetown merchant. Mr. Freeman was a member of Tyler Lodge, F. & A. M., at Cass City and the last nine named gentlemen were representatives of that society. Deceased is survived by his wife and son.

EVANGELICAL NOTES.

There will be no services at this church Sunday on account of the Bay Shore Park Assembly at Sebawaing, but there will be a morning service on August 16.

OVERLOOKING LITTLE THINGS

Many People Miss Bargains by not Studying Advertising.

Many a person goes through life overlooking the little things and vainly grasping at the big ones.

When death claims them they are still grasping, but not possessing.

It was the result of starting wrong. And so it is with many men, with some women, in the matter of newspaper advertising, although the ranks of the overlookers are becoming thinner every year.

Some people never let an opportunity slide by.

No line in the local paper ever escapes them, lest it be something which might be turned to their advantage.

No advertisement is ever overlooked, lest it contain an article of which they are in need and which may be purchased to a better advantage now than later.

All people read the advertisements. Some make it a business, have reduced it to a science, and extract the greatest benefit from even the most insignificant things.

It is a big stone in the foundation of their success.

No merchant spends money on printer's ink unless he has something worth offering, something you need, and sooner or later must have.

No one can afford to overlook these advertisements, lest he miss an opportunity to secure an article of need at a minimum price.

No man or woman who starts right with a firm grasp on the little things will fail later in life to attain the big ones.

All things are small in the beginning, but they attain size in accordance with the acumen, the energy, the perseverance of the one who guides their destinies.

All advertisements have some merit, are of especial interest and value to some person.

They are an important part of the little things in life which should never be overlooked, for out of many little things a few big ones grow.
