MRS. ANNA SPURGEON

DIED AT HOME OF DAUGHTER IN DETROIT.

Funeral Services Held at Cass City Sunday Afternoon Were Largely Attended.

Under weather conditions similar to those under which her husband was buried on Sunday, June 2, 1912, Mrs. Anna M. Spurgeon was laid to rest in Elkland cemetery Sunday afternoon. Though rain was falling and the day was dark and dreary, a large number of her old friends and relatives gathered at the Baptist church to attend the funeral services. Mrs. Spurgeon's death occurred at Detroit at the home of her daughter, Mrs. F. N. Perrin.

Anna Maria Tennant was born in 1834 at Little Ellingham, Norfolk shire, England. In 1854 she was united in the holy bonds of matrimony with John Spurgeon, sr. On Oct. 14, 1857, they with their little son, started for America to seek their fortune. After a six weeks' voyage out of sight of land on a sailing vessel they landed in New York City, Dec. 1, 1857. Poverty and sickness stared them in the face as Mrs. Spurgeon and the little habe were both ill and when they landed in America Mr. Spurgeon was almost penniless, having but two cents left. He pawned his belongings in order to secure money to come to Detroit, leaving his wife and babe in the great city of New York. From Detroit he walked to Oxford to visit a cousin, their only relative in America. Here he secured employment and later his family joined him. They remained in Oxford 37 years, coming to Cass City in 1896 and locating on the 320-acre farm known as the "Haws estate" in Elkland township. On Nov. are greater than 30 feet. 7, 1904, Mr. and Mrs. Spurgeon, surrounded by all their children and several friends, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. They resided on their farm until early in 1911 when they disposed of the property. During that summer, they erected a neat and comfortable cottage on Seeger St., Cass City, and here they resided until Mr. Spurgeon's death.

water right now," remarked Rev. Sam Small of Georgia in an address at the M. E. church at Cass City Friday evening in which he spoke opti- we feel that a most charitable audimistically of the outlook for early success in the nation-wide prohibition movement. "Carrying five states in 50 days is going some. Don't you think so? Old Virginia, mother of presidents, Colorado, Washington, presidents, Colorado, Washington, Oregon and Arizona, the last of the 48 states to join the Union, were made dry at recent elections. In one year 21,540 retail liquor shops were wiped out. This sent one saloon to the boneyard every 24 minutes. That's going some and going to the right place. Sensible liquor people are begging for terms and liquor papers predict doom to the traffic if present conditions of that trade are allowed to continue. Before July 4, 1915, we're going to have 16 states dry, onethird of the entire number.

"Geographically considered;" speaker continued, "75 per cent of the nation is dry—three to one—and 62 per cent of the people have declared in favor of prohibition. The dry forces are in the majority, leading the procession. We'll not have a second presidential election before all political parties in the country will be humping to see who gets to the water wagon first. In Idaho this vear, three parties have planks indorsing state-wide prohibition and in Kansas four parties indorsed statewide and national prohibition."

Mr. Small questioned the right of the United States calling herself a Christian nation while she still retained her liquor business and its evils. "Why, the heathen can teach liquor in his empire. France has alourselves like Noah's camel to get march of civilization.

"The liquor people are not satisfied with present conditions and are endeavoring to break down every barrier in their path. The temperance people are not satisfied either. They're out to destroy the traffic in the counon those highways on which the spans try. They have declared war; they don't intend to stop a minute; they don't carry a white flag."

It seems the community in which Wietecha, se¼ of se¼ and part sw a paper is published expects its newspaper employes to know everything that is going on-never thinks of telling the publisher the items they expect to see in the paper, but blames him if he fails to learn of them him-

Why can't every church, school lodge and every other society in our community have a reporter of its own whose duty it would be to see that news regarding it was sent to the paper. I am sure the publisher would approve of such a plan and gladly Allette Lindsay to John S. Edwards print every item furnished him.

There is not a church, school or real, interesting happenings every Wm. F. All that is needed is a determined effort on the part of the associations themselves. Surely the paper does its part in granting us the space, free.

A great many people feel they cannot, write well enough, or do not understand what is wanted well enough to act as such a reporter, but all of this is a mistake. I have learned that all a paper asks is that it be given the news, and if it is not gotten up correctly for publication, someone in the office will be only too glad to put should not censor the publisher if he changes our contributions. It is his State Savings Bank, lot 11, part lots his rules. My own contributions often are altered in the wording, and I have Edwin J. #### SEVENTH DAY ADVENTISTS CHEERED OVER PROGRESS

Local members of the Seventh Day Adventist faith were greatly cheered over the remarkable progress their denomination has made in various ways during the past year as given in from the statistical secretary of the body, which has its headquarters in Washington, D. C. There has been a large increase in the membership to the extent of more than eight | thousand, a wonderful growth in Geo. W. McNeil and wife to Garfield tithes and offerings, and the movement itself has penetrated into a number of new countries until the heralding of the message telling of wife, sw. ¼ of nw ¼ sec. 25 Novesta the soon coming of the Saviour, which is one of the principal beliefs of the church, is now being sounded in 85 countries. The report, which was sent by H. E. Rogers, is in part as follows: "Funds to the amount of $2,866,-727.40, a per capita of $23.42 for each communicant, were contributed for evangelistic work in the Seventh-day Adventist denomination during the last fiscal year. "There was a gain of 8,180 in the membership for the year which is the largest gain ever recorded in any year since this work was begun. In North America there were 71,863 communicants; in Europe, 31,772; in Asia, 2,713; in other countries, 16,-038. The total baptisms during the year were 12,794. The difference between the number added by baptism and the net gain is 4,614. Deducting the number of deaths, there is left a relatively small number of apostasies from the faith. It is a cause of great satisfaction to note the large number of baptisms during 1913, the number being the largest ever accounted for in any year.—Contributed.

The guests had arrived, and the tion. hour or so that elapsed until dinner was spent by the older ones in talking of the weather.

The weather is a great topic of Grandpa and conversation. If it is a nice day or Grandma it in shape for publication. And we if it is not, it can be discussed. That, mins sat down and looked at the children, is where the weather has the bulge on people. If they are nice said: privilege to alter items to conform to | people, we may talk about them in polite society. If they are not, it is different.

> Remember that. The little Timminses and the other children and grandchildren and nephews and nieces were merrily whacking the floor with grandpa's cane, and rubbing their shoeblacking off against the upholstering of the chairs, and tearing the lace curtains, and otherwise disporting themselves in the merry, merry 🚁 manner of true innocent youth when it goes a-visiting. Grandpa Timmins was observed to fidget uneasily in his seat, but this had no effect upon the papas of the children. It was a relief to them to see someone else standing for the damage done.

Finally Grandpa Timmins said, sweetly:

"Here, children, bless your little hearts, is a box of matches. Take them and play with them, for the house is insured against fire, but not against you.'

Wasn't that a sassy bump? How many little boys or girls in the class would conduct themselves as these children did when visiting? Of course, you say that now, but your teacher dear will not make bets on you. Finally the dinner was announced, and good old Grandpa Timmins took his place at the head of the table to carve the turkey.

_all, the marketman will let you have the bird for 391/2 cents. If a turkey, with the feathers and feet on, weighs 10 pounds and ounces, when will the hash appear for the last time? Write the answer on your slates. Nature has so devised us that we cannot eat feathers with any degree of comfort or satisfaction. If we could, would _probably feel down in the mouth oftener than we do.

That is right. Always laugh when the teacher gets off one. It will help with your grades. Grandpa Timmins took up the carving knife and asked each of the little darlings what he or she would have. And each one of them-there were 16 at the table-said he or she would have the drumstick and a wing and the gizzard and plenty of stuffing. Whereat Grandpa Timmins smiled a saccharine smile and politely in-

At last Grandpa Timmins found the weak spot in the armor of the turkey and filed off sufficient meat to help the guests. Then he said "Whoo!" and mopped his brow with his napkin. He was not a foxy grandpa, or he would have made his newest

CHAPTER V.

An Inquiry.

M I running a Strangers' Rest here?" Francis Sedgwick asked of himself when he emerged upon his porch the morning after Kent's visit.

The occasion of this query was a man stretched fiat on the lawn, with his feet propped up comfortably against the stone wall. His white serge suit was freshly pressed. A soft white hat covered his eyes against the sun glare. To put a point to this foppishness. a narrow silken ribbon, also pure white. depending from his lapel buttonhole. suggested an eyeglass in his pocket.

His was a remarkable face, both in contour and in coloring. From chin to cheek, the skin was white, with a tint of blue showing beneath, but the central parts of the face were bronzed. The jaw was long, lean and bony. The cheek bones were high, the mouth was large, fine cut and firm, the nose solid, set like a rock.

At the sound of a footstep the man oushed his hat downward, revealing a knobby forehead and half closed eyes in which there was a touch of somberness, of brooding.

"Good morning." said the artist, and then all but recoiled from the voice

"Kent!" exclaimed the artist that replied, so harsh and raucous it

"You rise late," it said.

"I hear your opinion on it." retorted Sedgwick, a bit nettled. "Am I to infer that you have been waiting for me? "You wouldn't go far wrong."

"And what can I do for you-before vou leave?" said Sedgwick significantly.

"Take a little walk with me presently," said the man in another voice, brushing the hat clear of his face.

"Kent!" exclaimed the artist. "Well, you appear surprised. What kind of artist are you not to recognize a man simply because he shaves his beard and affects a false voice. I've read your story." "Already?"

"Already! Do you know it's 10 o'clock? However, it's a good story.' "Thank you."

"As a story. As information, it leaves out most of the important points."

"Thank you again." "You're welcome. Color, size and trappings of the horse?" "I didn't notice particularly. Black, I think; yes, certainly black. Rather a large horse. That's all I can tell you." "Humph! Color, size and trappings of the rider?'

"Reddish brown hair with a gloss like a butterfly's wing." said the artist, with enthusiasm: "deep hazel eyes, clear sun browned skin, tall-I should say quite tall-but so-so feminine that you wouldn't realize her tallness. She was dressed in a light brown riding costume, with a toque hat, very simple, tan gauntlets and tan boots-that is, the first time I saw her. The next time" "Hold on; a dressmaker's catalogue is no good to me! I couldn't remember it all. Was she in riding clothes on any of her later visits?"

"Any scars or marks?"

'Certainly not!" "That's a pity, although you seem to thing otherwise. Age?"

"We-eil, twenty perhaps." "Add five. Say twenty-five." "What for?" demanded Sedgwick in-

"I'm anowing for the discount of romance. Did you notice her boots?" "Not particularly, except that she was always spick and span from head

'Humph! Was it pretty warm the last week she called on you?"

"Piping!"

"Did she show it?" "Never a bit. Always looked fresh

"Then, aithough she came far, she didn't walk far to get here. There's a road back of the hill yonder and a little copse in an open field where a motorcar has stood. I should say that she had driven herself there and come across the hill to you."

"Could we track the car?" asked Sedgwick eagerly.

"No farther than the main road. What is the latest she ever left here when she arrived afoot?'

"Once she stayed till half past 6. I begged her to stay and dine, but she drew into herself at the mere sugges-

"Half past 6. Allowing for a half past 7 dinner and time to dress for it, she would have perhaps twelve to fifteen miles to go in the car. The name she gave is obviously not her own, not even, I judge, her maiden name."

Sedgwick turned very white. "Do you mean that she is a married woman?" he demanded.

"How could you have failed to see t?" returned the other gently. "A young girl of breeding and social experience would hardly have come to your studio. A married woman might who respected herself with full confidence and knew with the same confidence that you would respect her. And, my dear boy," added Kent, with his quiet winning smile, "you are a man to inspire confidence. Otherwise I myself might have suspected you of having a hand in the death of the woman on the beach.

"Never mind the woman on the beach. This other matter is more than life or death. Is that flimsy supposition all you have to go on?"

"No. Her travel. Her wide acquaintance with men and events. Her obvious poise. And, reverting to tangible fact, as clinching evidence, there are her gloves, which she always

"What about her gloves?" "You never saw her left hand, did

"Oh, I see. You mean the wedding Well, I suppose," continued Sedgwick, with a tinge of contempt in his voice, "she could have taken off her ring as easily as her gloves."

There was no answering contempt in Chester Kent's voice as he replied: "But a ring, constantly worn and then removed, leaves an unmistakable markí What the connection between her and the corpse on the beach may be is the problem. My immediate business is to discover who the dead woman is."

"And mine," said Sedgwick hoarse ly, "to discover the living." "We'll at least start together," replied Kent. "Come!" Twenty minutes of curving and dodging along the rocky roads in Kent's runabout brought them to the turnpike in sight of the town of Annalaka. "The inquest is set for 11 o'clock," said Kent. "All right," said Sedgwick with equal taciturnity. They turned a corner and ran into the fringe of a crowd hovering about the town hall. Halting his machine in a bit of shade. Kent surveyed the gathering. At one point it thickened about a man who was talking eagerly, the vocal center of a small circle of silence.

'Elder Dennett." said Kent. from Cadystown. You'll have to face the music now. One word of warning: Don't lose your head or your temper if the suspicion raised against you by Dennett is strengthened by me. My concern is to get to the bottom of this matter. There is something the sheriff knows that I don't know. Probably it is the identity of the body. To force him into the open it may be necessary for me to augment the case against you.' "Ought I to be ready for arrest?" "Hardly probable at present. No; go on the stand when you're called and tell the truth and nothing but the truth."

"But not the whole truth?" "Nothing of the necklace. You won't be questioned about that. By the way, you have never kept among your artistic properties anything in the way of handcuffs, have you?"

"I didn't suppose you had. Those manacles are a sticker. I don't-I absolutely do not like those manacles. And on one wrist only! Perhaps that is the very fact, though. Well, we shall know more when we're older; two hours older, say. Whether we shall know all that Mr. Sheriff Len Schlager knows is another question. I don't like Mr. Schlager, either, for that wick in a low voice. Indeed, the narrator's voice had abruptly ceased and he stood with the dropped jaw of stupefaction. One after another of his auditors turned and stared at the two men in the motor-

"Stay where you are," said Kent and stepped out to mingle with the crowd. No one recognized at first the immaculate flannel clad man as the bearded scientist whose strange actions had amused the crowd on the beach. A heavy, solemn man addressed him: "Friend of his?" he asked, nodding toward the artist.

"Yes. "He'll need 'em. Going to give evidence? "To hear it, rather," replied Kent pleasantly. "Where's the body?" 'Inside. Just broought it over from Dr. Breed's. He's the medical officer, and he and the sheriff are running the show. Your friend wants a lawyer, maybe?" The thought struck Kent that, while a lawyer might be premature, a friend in the town might be very useful.

Goods Sent Free

by Parcel Post

'Yes," he said; "from tomorrow on." "Meanin' that you're in charge today." surmised the big man shrewdly. Kent smiled. "I dare say we shall get on very well together, Mr."- His voice went up interrogatively.

"Bain, Adam Bain, attorney and counselor at law for thirty years in the town of Annalaka.

"Thank you. My name is Kent. You already know my friend's name. What kind of man is this medical officer?"

"Breed? Not much. More of a politician than a doctor and more of a horse trader than either. Fidgety as a sandpaper undershirt."

"Did he perform the autopsy at his own house?

"Him and the sheriff last evening. Didn't even have an undertaker to help lay out."

The lobe of Kent's ear began to suffer from repeated handling. "The body hasn't been identified, I suppose?" "Nobody's had so much as a wink at it but those two and Ira Dennett. He viewed the corpse last night. That's why I guess your friend needs his friends and maybe a lawyer." "Exactly. Mr. Dennett doesn't seem to be precisely a deaf mute."

Lawyer Bain emitted the bubbling chuckle of the fat throated. "It's quite some time since Iry won any prizes for silent thought," he stated. You are known hereabouts?" he added after a pause. "Very little."

"Gansett Jim, yonder, looks as if he kinder cherished the honor of your ac quaintance.''

Over his shoulder Kent caught the half breed's glance fixed upon him with stolid intensity. A touch on his arm made him turn to the other side, where Sailor Smith faced him.

"Didn't hardly know you with your beard off." piped the old man. "Howdy, professor? You're finickied up like your own weddin'.'

"Good morning." said the scientist. 'Are you going inside? Sit with us. won't you? Mr. Sedgwick is with me." The ex-sailor started. "Him!" he exclaimed. "Here? There's been quite a lot o' talk"-"Suspicion, you mean."

"We-ll, yes." "People are inclined to connect Mr. Sedgwick with the death of the wo man.' "What else can you expect?" returned the old man deprecatingly. "Iry Dennett's been tellin' his story. He's certain the woman he seen talkin' to Mr. Sedgwick is the dead womanwillin' to swear to it anywheres."

"What about Gansett Jim? Has he contributed anything to the discus-

"No. Jim's as close tongued as Iry is clatter mouthed." "And probably with reason," mutter-

Table Mountain.

At Capetown, in South Africa, where the traveler usually has the first glimpse of the continent, is Table mountain, a magnificent natural curiosity which rises behind the city to the height of almost 4,000 feet and has a level top about three square miles in area. Its resemblance to a huge table is so marked that the dense clouds which collect at times around the summit are referred to as the tablecloth. A pretty little flower which is found nowhere else on earth grows on top. while on the northern side of its base is a similarly rare tree, popularly called the silver leaf tree.-Liverpool MerSeizing the Opportunity.

A CHEERFUL FACE.

Next to the sunlight of heaven is a cheerful face. There is no mistaking it. The bright eye, the unclouded brow, the sunny smile, all tell of that which dwells within. Who has not felt its electrifying influence? One glance at this face lifts us out of the mists and shadows into the beautiful realms of hope. One cheerful face in the household will keep everything warm and light within. Ah, there is a world of magic in the cheerful face!

in a Perfume Factory.

Musk is perhaps the most valuable and delightful of all perfumes, yet the refiner as he opens the musk pods must wear thick cloths over mouth and nostrils, so repulsive is the odor that the pods emit. Indeed, this odor, inhaled for any length of time, causes nosebleed. Civet, karagulluc and ambergris have in small quantities a delicious perfume, but in large quantities they smell so abominable as to give the worker nausea. The hawthorn blossom is delicately sweet, and perfumers prize it highly, yet a roomful of hawthorn blossoms smells like a charnel house. This, too, is true of the tube-

During the summer months of 1914, Mr. Yoder says the company sold 36,000 bottles of their blood purifier, nearly all of which was left in the Thumb counties. Little Genevieve Yoder will spend the winter months with her grandmother, Mrs. Selina Brown, at A West Main St. resident contributes the following treatise on cats: "The neighborhood of the Farmers' Elevator received another addition to its feline population Sunday. A black touring car stopped near the water tank and dropped two cats, also a box in which the animals had been confined. As this is the second time within two weeks that we have received an unwelcome present of this kind we are naturally getting rather tired of it. At each house in this part of town there are about four cats, but there are quite a number that are unclaimed. The cats are now so numerous that the popular idea of Hades seems to be a place where you try to go to sleep to the music of unnumerable cats. We are not running an asylum for homeless and orphaned cats, so we hope that anyone suffering from an oversupply of same will inflict upon some other vicinity. Anyone desiring to start such an institution can obtain a bountiful supply by applying to any small boy in the west end of town and will at the same time confer a great favor on a patient and long suffering neighborhood. At the present time seven cats rampant on somebody's back porch would be a fine emblem for this part of Cass City. The machine from which our last two cats were dropped is equipped with electric lights and starter. The writer failed to get the number and, as the curtains were on, the occupants were invisi-

Highest Endurable Temperature. It is difficult to say what the highest temperature is that a human being can live in. In the kitchens of some of the great hotels and in the stokeholes of some steamships the temperature gets to 140 or 145 degrees. Cooks and their helpers and stokers have to endure that temperature for hours at a time, and they seem to get along pretty well. The hottest place perhaps where human beings work is in the vulcanizing factories, where the temperature is 212, the boiling point of water. There are a few who can stand this heat for a little while at a time, but that is the limit; man can endure no more .- New York American.

A WARNING TO MANY Some Interesting Facts About Kidney Troubles.

Few people realize to what extent their health depends upon the condition of the kidneys.

The physician in nearly all cases of serious illness, makes a chemical analysis of the patient's urine. He knows that unless the kidneys are doing their work properly, the other organs cannot readily be brought back. to health and strength.

When the kidneys are neglected or abused in any way, serious results are sure to follow. According to health statistics, Bright's disease which is really an advanced form of kidney trouble, caused nearly ten thousand deaths in 1913, in the state of New York alone. Therefore, it behooves us to pay more attention to the health of these most important organs. An ideal herbal compound that has had remarkable success as a kidney remedy is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great Kidney, Liver and Bladder

The mild and healing influence of this preparation, in most cases, is soon realized, according to sworn statements and verified testimony of those who have used the remedy.

If you feel that your kidneys require attention, and wish a sample bottle, write to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Mention this paper, enclose ten cents and they will gladly forward it to you by Parcel Post.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead who never to himself hath said, This is my own, my native land?" If there breathes such a man, he has never digested a Thangsgiv-ing proclamation. Thanksgiving, so far as its physical ingredients are concerned, differs little, if any, from other November days. It gets its capital letters and the dignity of the calendar's red ink from the president and his fortyeight varieties of governor, who permit us on this day to be as thankful as we like, so long as our demonstrations do not interfere with the peace and tranquility of those not so enthusiastic. The president and the governors also sort out the things we have o be thankful for. If it were not for them, many of us could not get up enough courage to celebrate the event. Their proclamations, however, so vividly picture bountiful harvests and bursting bins that all of us take on a feeling of real importance for the time being, and while under the influence of their literary intoxicants, rush in and buy more food in ten minutes than we can eat in ten days. The Thanksgiving proclamation serves another worthy purpose in preserving those two words, "blessings" and "prosperity." Without the annual proclamation, these words might become obsolete, and they're too encouraging to be cast aside entirely. Every Thanksgiving proclamation is built on a foundation of blessings and is surrounded by a scaffolding of prosperity. Thanksgivings Day is one of about equal portions of anticipation and regret, with sixty minutes of delight intervening at 12 o'clock noon. The Thanksgiving dinner is the first of the winter season's series of elastic meals, and is an emphatic corroboration of the phrase, "What fools we mortals be." The elasticity of the Thanksgiving dinner gives every home at least one thing to be thankful for. Think of its coming on Monday or Turkey became the primary Thanksgiving dish a long time ago, when the size of families demanded something of liberal proportions to go round. A quail is now sufficient to feed the average home, but there usually are enough relatives present on Thanksgiving Day to perpetuate the ordeal of coming in contact with a turkey. Our Pilgrim fathers used to shoulder a blunderbuss and go out and bag the first turkey that gobbled at them, with no thought of to whom the bird might belong. We twentieth century Pilgrims consult our bank book and if it agrees to back us up, we go out and buy one of the turkeys our forefathers left in cold storage for us.

In the South, where for dark and mysterious reasons a turkey never lives to the Thanksgiving age, that marsupial and carnivorous mammal, the possum, decorates the Thanksgiving tureen. Anyone who has never tasted possum does not know just how fortunate he has been, and should give thanks for this escape if for no other reason. However, if one's curiosity overcomes his good judgment, he may boil a chunk of suet in coal oil and sugar and rest assured he has a possum of the most marsupial and carnivorous quality.

The climax of a thoroughbred Thanksgiving Day is pulled off on a football field along about three o'clock in the afternoon, when twenty-two Elm, who was upward of eighty, gave to fight over an inflated pieskin that is not worth more than five or six dollars, even in this day of baconless breakfasts.

These Thanksgiving games close the season's carnage on the gridirons, and those players who survive are hauled off to hospitals to be repaired for the next year's battles. Thus far, the day's fatalities among football players and turkeys average about the same.

Rose to the Occasion.

Oliver Wendell Holmes was strolling on the beach one day when he began chatting with a little girl who was building pyramids of sand. His charm of personality had its customary effect | Most of the staff officers ducked their and the child soon slipped her hand in his and walked with him. By and by the little one said she must return to her mother.

"Goodby, my dear," said Mr. Holmes, "and when mother asks you where you have been tell her that you have been walking on the beach with Oliver Wendell Holmes."

The great name was absolutely unknown to the child, but she recognized the courtesy in the words of her stranger friend and was not to be outdone. His pleasant smile and bow acquired quaint gravity as imitated by the child. She replied:

"And when you go home and they ask you where you have been tel them that you were walking on the beach with Mary Susanna Brown."

Tough Either Way.
Here is a story from "Law and Laughter." Lord Mansfield was trying a case in which an old man named his evidence with remarkable clearness. It turned out that he had been through life an early riser and had led a singularly temperate life.

The chief justice, in a tone of approval, congratulated him and made the remark that without such habits longevity was never attained. The next witness proved to be this old man's brother, who was more ancient than himself. He also bore himself well in the witness box, and the chief justice rushed to the conclusion that he was equally exemplary in his habits. But the old man declined the compliment. He said he liked to lie in bed late and clinched the matter by adding that he could not remember a night when he had not gone to bed without being more or less drunk.

The barrister, who was on his feet, caught at this admission and exclaimed, "Ah, my lord, this old man's case supports the theory—one held by many persons-that habitual intemperance is favorable to longevity."

But Lord Mansfield was equal to the occasion. "No, no," he replied, with a smile. "This old man and his brother merely teach us what every car-was General Skobelev's meed of praise bestowed on a young Russian officer during the Turko-Russian war of 1877. The officer, then a lieutenant, is now General Ruzsky, leader of one of the czar's armies in the campaign against Austria. Young Ruzsky was noted for his elegance of dress, and his enemies called him a fop and a dandy. Yet it was largely through this so called weakness that he owed his rise in the Russian army. In the war against Turkey he served as aid-de-camp to one of the subordinate Russian generals. During the battle of Plevna he was sent with a dispatch to General Skobelev, the commander in chief.

Just as Lieutenant Ruzsky delivered his dispatch a Turkish shell struck near by and covered General Skobelev and his staff with a shower of earth. heads at the crash, but young Ruzsky stood firm and erect. Then calmly he drew forth a handkerchief and proceeded to fleck the dust from his uniform. Derision showed in the faces of the staff at this apparent foppishness. but not so with Skobelev. Turning to the young man, he asked his name. "You will remain with me hereafter as a member of my staff," he added. "I need such men as you.

Paris that Sir Douglas won official commendation.

Commander In Chief Sir John French of the British forces in his report said, "Partly owing to assistance from the French troops, but mainly to the skillful manner to which General Sir Douglas Haig extricated his corps from an exceptionally difficult position, the corps was saved."

Sir Douglas Haig entered the army in 1885 at the age of twenty-three and has several times before been mentioned in dispatches. He served with distinction in the Sudan and South African campaigns. After the Boer war he was inspector general of cavalry in India and in 1904 was made a major general.

BROKLYN LABERNACLE BIBLE STUDY ON -

JESUS TRIED BY PILATE. Matthew 27:11-26.-Nov. 22. Pilate saith unto them, What then shall I do Jesus, who is called Christ?"-

S early as possible in the morning, the chief priests hurried Jesus to the Praetorium, the judgment-hall of Pilate, Roman Governor of Judea. Pilate inquired as to what charge they had against Jesus. They evasively answered that He was worthy of pun ishment, else they would not accuse Him. Pilate reminded them that under the Roman usage they had great liberty in dealing with all disputes of a religious kind, and that therefore they should settle the case themselves.

The priests responded that they had no power to inflict the death penalty. thus revealing that they had deliber ately plotted to have Pilate put an innocent person to death Then they accused Jesus of perverting the nation-telling the people not to taxes Caesar and claiming to be the Jewish King -Messiah.

These were serious charges, which Pilate was bound to consider, and were totally different from those brought against Jesus at the Sanhedrin trial. Jesus made no defense; for He knew that the time had come for Him to die. He would not attempt to turn aside that which He knew to be a part of the Divine Program for Him

Jesus Before Pilate and Herod.

Another account tells that Pilate per ceived that the chief priests and the Scribes were moved with envy in making their charges. But he must not appear to treat lightly the charges respecting another king than Caesar. He therefore questioned Jesus; but receiving no reply, he went out to the Scribes and Pharisees, who had refrained from entering the Praetorium because the Passover season had begun. After hearing them, apparently he returned and asked Jesus, "Art Thou the King of the Jews?" Jesus inquired whether the question was based upon Pilate's knowledge of His teachings or whether upon the assertion of His enemies. Pilate replied that the chief men of Jesus' own nation had delivered Him. and that he wished to know the cause of their opposition.

Jesus answered that His Kingdom was not of this world-order of things. He was not, therefore, in conflict with Caesar. Pilate questioned Him a little further, and then went forth to the Jews, to whom he said, "I find no crime in Him." The chief priests were alarmed. They vehemently charged that Jesus was stirring up the people; and that, beginning away off in Galilee. He had preached everywhere.

When Pilate heard this, he sent Jesus to Herod, king of Galilee, who was at his palace in Jerusalem. Herod had heard many things respecting Jesus, and was curious to see Him do some miracle. Jesus made no reply to the king's questions. The chief priests and the Scribes accused Jesus violently to Herod, who sent Him back to Pilate, after having, with his soldiers, mocked our Lord and put upon Him a gorgeous robe. This act of deference on Pilate's part, and Herod's return of the courtesies, bridged over an enmity between the two.

Neither Pilate Nor Herod Condemned. On several occasions Pilate had released prisoners in honor of the Passover. The multitude cheered him and inquired whether he would release some prisoner that year. Thinking to get Jesus out of the hands of the chief priests, Pilate asked the people, "Whom will ve that I release unto you, Barabbas, the highwayman, or Jesus, who is called Christ?" Incited by their religious leaders, the multitude demanded the release of Barabbas. Pilate remonstrated, declaring that he found no cause of death in Jesus, whom he would forth to the waiting multitude. Wearing the purple robe and a crown of thorns, Jesus stood before them. Pilate then said, "Behold the Man!"

See Him whom you are trying to have me put to death. He is one of the noblest specimens of humanity. Behold the beautiful dignity of His character. Whatever you have against Him, you will feel placated when you see His humility. But they cried, "Crucify Him!" Pilate again remonstrated. Then they came to the root of the matter-that barn. Jesus had declared Himself to be the Son of God, an assertion which they considered blasphemy. This made Pilate all the more afraid. He thought again to release Jesus. But the Jews persisted.

Finally Pilate yielded, saying in desperation. "I am innocent of the blood of this righteous man!" They cried. "His blood be upon us and our children!" And for more than eighteen centuries it has been so.
