How small a portion of our life it is that we really enjoy! In youth we are looking forward to things that are to come; in old age we are looking backward to things that are gone past; in manhood, although we appear indeed to be more occupied in things that are present, yet even that is too often absorbed in vague determinations to be vasily happy on some future day when we have time.-Colton.

"They Parted My Garments."

While Jesus was dying, the stony hearted Roman soldiers cast lots for His seamless robe, dividing His other garments amongst themselves. The at titude of the world is further represented in the two culprits who were executed at the same time, one on either side of Jesus, above whose head was the inscription. "King of the One of them railed at Jesus Jews.' as a fraud, bantering Him to manifest whatever power He had by saving Himself and His associates. Little did he realize that if Jesus had saved Himself He could not have been the Savior of the world! The other thief befriended Jesus, declaring that He had been unjustly accused. Turning to Jesus, he expressed his faith in our Savior by asking a reward for his kind words. He said. "Lord, remember me when Thou comest into Thy Kingdom." The poor thief knew that Jesus claimed to be a King. and recognized that He was worthy to be one, so noble of character and of appearance was He. What if finally in the great beyond, this One should prove to be Messiah? The thief would at least tell the truth, declare a word in His defense and ask kind remembrance if this One ever reached His kingly power.

Jesus' answer seems to have been very generally misunderstood in the past. We thought that He promised the thief to be with Him that same day in the Kingdom. Yet we knew that according to other Scriptures Jesus Himself was not in the Kingdom that day, but in Joseph's new tomb; that He did not rise from the dead, from Sheol, Hades, the tomb, until the W. N. Straube, salary to 10third day; and that even then He said to Mary, "I have not yet ascended to My Father." Evidently Jesus could not have meant that He and the thief would be together in Paradise that Paradise, lost six thousand years ago, will be restored by Messiah in His glo rious Kingdom. The thief has been sleeping in death, waiting for the time Fort Wayne Elec. Pipes, Coffee and the Orient.

In the "Arabian Nights' Entertainments," which are said to be such faithful pictures of oriental manners, there is no mention of the pipe. Neither is coffee to be met with in those tales, so delightful to all ages. We with difficulty imagine an oriental without his chibouk, and yet it is certain they knew nothing of this luxury before the sixteenth century. At present, such is the almost imperious necessity felt by the Turk for smoking and coffee that as soon as the gun announces the setting of the sun during the fast of the Ramadan, before he thinks of satisfying his craving stomach with any solid

"Yes, papa," she answered sweetly. "It is candleless because times are hard. Lights cost so much Ferdinand and I said we would get along with the starlight."

A Vagrant Christmas Gift

ALBERT EDWARD CONVERSE 0000000000000000

(Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.)

and Mrs. Jackson Smith understood each other perfectly on the Christmas present proposition. This satisfactory state of affairs did not come about the first year of their wedded life, nor even the second. The third Christmas was almost at hand before Mr. Smith discovered accidentally, but to his intense joy, that Mrs. Smith relished his selection of furs, gloves, curtains, rugs, and so on, no more than did he her choice of smoking-jackets, cravats, mufflers, et cetera.

That their friends could not be taken in on the combination was, however, a thorn in the flesh of each of them.

"The worst has happened," said Mrs. Smith, interrupting Mr. Smith's perusal of the paper Christmas morning.

"A messenger just brought a present from the Snivelys, and I forgot to put them on my list. It's a book and we've got to send them something."

"Well, what are we going to do about the Snivelys?" growled Mr. Smith.

"Jack," said she in a moment, "I've had an inspiration. Why couldn't we send the Snivelys the book that Cousin Lucy sent us? Neither of them will ever know it."

"By George! We'll do it," said Mr. Smith, after considering the propo-"Where is Cousin Lucy's sition. book?

"It's on the desk," said Mrs. Smith. "Just put our cards in the book and wrap it up neatly. I'll call a messenger boy.

Half an hour later Mr. Smith handed a package, addressed to Mr. Snively, to a messenger boy and saw him depart with it. He was luxuriously stretched out on a davenport when Mrs. Smith came into the room a few minutes later.

"Jack," said Mrs. Smith, holding a book in her hand, "I thought you were going to wrap this book up." "Great Scott!" exclaimed Mr.

Smith, jumping to his feet. "I did wrap up some book. The messenger has already been here and I gave it to him.'

"How long has the boy been gone?" demanded Mrs. Smith.

"About ten minutes." "Get your things on. Be quick, and maybe you can reach the Snivelys' before the boy and get that dreadful book away from him! How could you have been so careless?"

Mrs. Smith was almost frantic. Down to the nearest street car tore Mr. Smith, fairly consumed with rage.

"Nonsense!" said Mr. Snively. "It's a light package and I don't mind carrying it a particle." Mr. Smith ground his teeth with rage. How was he to get that book away from Snively? "Snively," said he, my office is only a few doors down the street. Come up and smoke a cigar with me. I've got some good ones." A few minutes later Mr. Smith ushered Mr. Snively into his office.

"Sit down here, Snively," said he, offering his guest a chair. "Let me have your package; I'll put it over here on my desk."

He took the book eagerly and put it on his desk out of sight. As he smoked and talked, he racked his brain for a scheme to get Snively out of the room without his book.

"Good morning, gentlemen. Merry Christmas.'

It was Smith's partner, Perkins, who thus addressed them as he came out of his private office.

Suddenly a brilliant scheme took shape in his mind. He proceeded immediately to put it into execution.

"By the way, Perkins, I have a Christmas present for you." As he spoke, he picked up Snively's package and, holding it so that Snively could not see it, walked over the Perkins and handed it to him.

"But-but-" Perkins protested. "Take it and keep your mouth shut, or I'll choke you!" whispered Smith fiercely.

"Oh, thank you very much," said the astonished Perkins. "Well, I must be getting home. Good morning."

After talking a few moments longer, Snively rose to go.

"Can I trouble you for my package, now?" he said.

"Oh, yes," said Smith, going to his desk and searching first calmly and then with apparent annoyance. "By George! It isn't here," he announced in a surprised tone.

Michigan Has New Star.

He had arrived at the down town district when, with a thrill of joy, he spied the messenger boy. Without waiting for the car to stop, Mr. Smith jumped off and started on a run for the boy.

At the same moment the messenger boy saw him, and, without knowing why he was being pursued, he obeyed his first impulse and ran too.

In a moment a dozen had joined in the chase. Down the street came the poor messenger boy, frantically straining every muscle to get away from the mob pursuing him. Suddenly two men from a cross street ran in front of the boy. One threw his arms around the fugitive, holding his fast; the other man seized the package the boy was carrying.

"Why, Snively! This package is addressed to you!" he exclaimed. "Why, so it!" said the man who had caught the boy. In a moment they were surrounded by a crowd. A policeman rushed up and took charge of the boy.

"Hold on there, officer, the boy's all right!" cried Mr. Smith, who had arrived upon the scene by this time.

"What do you know about this affair?" said the policeman respectfully, as he recognized Mr. Smith.

But Mr. Smith was standing as one dazed. He had caught sight of Mr. Snively with the book under his arm.

"Hello, Smith," said Mr. Snively. "I just now caught this boy, and found him carrying a package addressed to me, so took charge of it. Do you know anything about it?"

'Why-why-er-yes," stammered Mr. Smith, trying to collect his wits. "You see, I sent the package."

"Well, why were you chasing the boy?" asked the policeman, a little impatiently.

The perspiration stood out on poor Mr. Smith's forehead.

"I-I was afraid I hadn't given the boy the right address, and was trying to stop him to find out," he blurted in desperation.

The policeman looked at Mr. Smith curiously. He was convinced that he was lying, though with what object he could not imagine.

"The package has come to the right fellow anyway," said Snively, laugh-"I'm going right home, so I'll ing. take it along with me."

you to do that, old man!" cried Mr. settled himself in comfort, "Christ-Smith. "Just give it back to the boy; mas comes but once a year!"

Suddenly he sat down and began laughing uproariously.

"Do you know what I've done?" he said as soon as he had his mirth somewhat under control. "I gave Perkins your package. I forgot that I took his present home last night, and my wife sent it over this morning with a present for Mrs. Perkins."

"Oh, that's all right," said Snively, laughing. "It doesn't make a particle of difference.'

They parted, laughing good-naturedly over the blunder.

Smith arrived home soon after, congratulating himself on his generalship. "Oh, Jack," cried Mrs. Smith, as soon as he stepped into the house, "I hope you haven't had any trouble!" 'Well, I've had just about the most strenuous time I've experienced in many moons," said Smith. "I came out all right though."

"I'm so sorry," said Mrs. Smith. "Now I hope you won't be angry, Jack, but you hadn't been gone but a few moments when I discovered that you hadn't sent Mrs. Snively's book, after all. I found her book lying on the floor by the center-table, where, in some way, it had been knocked off. The only book that is missing is the one that Mr. and Mrs. Perkins sent us, so that must have been the one that you sent to the Snivelys."

Mr. Smith collapsed into the nearest chair.

"Ding-a-ling-a-ling," went the telephone.

Mr. Smith, still in a dazed condition, rose and answered it.

"Hello, is that you, Smith?" said a voice. "This is Perkins."

Smith braced himself for the worst. that present you gave me down at the office. When I got home I found that it had Snively's name on it." "Oh."

"I thought there must be some mistake about it, so I didn't open it." "You say you didn't open it?" "No.

"Thank Heaven!"

"What do you say?" "I said that you did right. It was just a little joke on Snively." 'Is that so? Well, I'll bring the package down to the office with me in the morning."

"Thank you. Good-by."

"Thank heaven," said Smith as he

Herzog Plans For Next Year.

With the season of 1914 at an end and his team in last place, Charlie Herzog is devoting his time to planning the reconstruction of the Cincinnati team for the season of 1915. During the early part of the season the Reds made an excellent showing, bobbing up in the first division and sticking there for a considerable length of time. Little by little they settled down until they reached bottom. Cincinnati fans have all the confidence in the world in Herzog and are confident that he will organize a team that will be heard from for next season.

SEBEWAING-It seems the county is overrun with fakers. Tuesday there was a fellow in town who was gathering in nickels and dimes on the strength of a story in which he pictured a wife and children in want. The man said he was a lumber jack and was hit on the head by a falling tree and couldn't work. However, he "worked" a goodly number of people for enough to get a piping jag in the evening.

Wednesday morning a couple of big able-bodied fellows came to town to work the blind man gag, and, though their game was of the rawest kind, they seemed to be getting considerable coin. One of the proprietors of a local store, in a rather positive manner ordered them out and the "blind" man, reaching the door first, caught the latch with a quickness and agility that belied him most thoroughly.—Blade.

Congressman Louis C. Cramton received a larger plurality for re-election than any other Michigan member, which is pretty good evidence that a large majority of his constituents are satisfied that he served them well during his first term.

There are five Michigan life insurance companies and at the end of the last year their combined insurance in force in Michigan amounted to less than 1 per cent of the life insurance carried on Michigan people by the outside companies.

So far as we know, the Lincoln Life is the first company writing life insurance in Michigan and not organized within that state to elect Michigan directors to its board and thus lend the assurance to its Michigan policyholders that their interests are being looked after on the board of directors by big business men of their own state.

The Lincoln Life has over $21,000,000.00 of life insurance in force and about $8,000,000.00 of it is on the lives of Michigan citizens. It is writing new business in Michigan at the rate of $2,000,000.00 a year and has other words the life insurance premiums that have been paid on these Michigan policies have been reinvested in the state to help build up the resources of the Michigan people. This is more than any other outside company does and it should result in a greatly increased Michigan business for us.

The Lincoln Life offers splendid opportunities to agents in Michigan. If you are looking for a change of occupation either for the coming winter or permanently, communicate with us or our general agent and we will arrange to teach you the business.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SUBJECT

Subject for the Christian Science esson, "Ancient and Modern Necromancy, alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism, Denounced."

The Word "Divan."

The word "divan" means "council of state" in Arabic and Turkish. Both Milton and Pope use the word in the sense of council in general. From meaning council the word came to mean council chamber and from that the arrangement of cushions round the chamber. A divan in this sense is strictly a row of cushions ranged along the walls of a room, either on the floor or on a raised step or on a bench. Hence we speak of a sofa or couch as a divan and of a thickly cushioned chair as a divan chair.

Resist Melancholy.

Never give way to melancholy. Resist it steadily, for the habit will encroach. I once gave a lady two and twenty recipes against melancholy. One was a bright fire; another to remember all the pleasant things said to and of her; another to keep a box of sugar plums on the chimneypiece and a kettle simmering on the hob. I thought this mere trifling at the moment, but have in after life discovered how true it is that these little pleasures often banish melancholy better than higher or more exalted objects; that no means ought to be thought too trifling which can oppose it either in ourselves or others.-Sydney Smith.

CHAPTER VI. "Dah de murderer!"

THE first witness, a sheep herder. rose in his place and, without the formality of an oath, told of sighting the body at the edge of the surf at 7 o'clock in the morning. Others, following, testified to the position on the beach, the lashing of the body to the grating, the wounds and the manacles. Dr. Breed announced briefly that the deceased had come to her death by drowning and that the skull had been crushed in, presumably, when the waves hammered the body upon the reefs.

"Then the corpse must have come from a good ways out." said Sailor Smith, "for the reefs wouldn't catch it at that tide."

"Nobody knows how the dead come to Lonesome Cove," said the sheriff in his deep voice.

Elder Ira Dennett was the next and last witness called. Somewhere theneath the elder's dry exterior lurked the instinct of the drama. Stalking to skill and fervor. He made a telling point of the newly finished picture he had seen in Sedgwick's studio, depicting the moonlit charge of the wave mounted corpse. He sketched out the encounter between the artist and the dead woman vividly.

Then Sedgwick rose. He was white. but his voice was under perfect control as he said:

"It is all true. But I do not know the woman who accosted me. I never saw her before that evening. She spoke strangely to me and indicated that she was to meet some one and go aboard ship, though I saw no sign of a ship."

"You couldn't see much of the ocean from your house," said the medical officer.

"I walked on the cliffs later," said Sedgwick, and a murmur went through the courtroom, "but I never found the woman. And as for throwing her out of a ship, or any such fantastic nonsense, I can prove that I was back in my house by a little after 9 o'clock that might."

He sat down coolly enough, but his eyes dilated when Kent whispered: "Keep your nerve. The probability will be shown that she was killed before 10 o'clock." Now, however, Dr. Breed was on his feet again. "Form in line, ladies and gentlemen," said he. "and pass the coffin as spry as possible."

At this Sheriff Schlager stepped forward and loosened the hasps preparatory to removing the cover. "The body has been left," said he, slipping the lid aside, "just as"- Of a sudien, his eyes stiffened. A convulsive shudder ran through his big body. He jammed the cover back, and, with fingers that actually drummed on the wood, forced the hasps into place. "She's come to life!" cried a voice from the rear. "No, no!" rumbled the sheriff. Whirling upon the medical officer, he whispered in his ear-not more than a single word, it seemed to the watchful Kent.

The doctor turned ghastly. "Gents," he said in a quavering voice to the amazed crowd, "the program will not be carried out as arranged. The-the -well, the condition of the deceased is not fitten"- He stopped, mopping

But Yankee curiosity was not so easily to be balked of its food. It found expression in Lawyer Bain.

"That ain't the law, doc," he said. "I'm the law here," declared Sheriff Schlager, planting himself solidly between the crowd and the coffin. One hand crept slowly back toward his hip.

"Don't pull any gun on me," retorted the lawyer quietly. "It ain't necessary.

"You heard Doc Breed say the body wasn't fitten to be viewed," pursued the sheriff.

"That's all right too. But the doc hasn't got the final word. The law has. And the law says, that the body shall be duly viewed. Otherwise, and the deceased being buried without view, an order of the court to exhume may be obtained."

"Look at Breed," whispered Kent to Sedgwick.

The medical officer's lips were gray as he leaned forward to pluck at the sheriff's arm. There was a whispered colloquy between them. Then Breed spoke, with a pitiful effort at self control:

"Lawyer Bain's point is correct, undoubtedly correct. But the body must the platform, he told his story with be prepared. It ought to 'a' been looked to last night. But somehow -we- Will six citizens kindly volunteer to fetch the coffin back to my house?"

> Ten times six offered their services. The box was carried out swiftly, followed by the variable hum of excited conjecture. Quickly the room emptied itself except for a few stragglers.

Sedgwick, who had followed the impromptu cortege with his vision, was brought up sharply by the glare of a pair of eyes outside the nearest window. The eyes were fixed on his own. Their expression was distinctly malevolent. Without looking round, Sedgwick said in a low voice: "Kent!"

No answer came.

"Kent!" said the artist a little louder. "Huh?" responded a muffled and abstracted voice behind him. "See here for a moment."

There was neither sound nor movement from the scientist.

"An Indian looking chap outside the window is trying to hypnotize me or something of the sort."

This information, deemed by its giver to be of no small interest, elicited not the faintest response. Somewhat piqued, the artist turned, to behold his friend stretched on a bench, with face to the ceiling, eyes closed and heels on the raised end. His lips moved faintly in a whistle. Sedgwick shook the whistler insistently.

"Eh? What?" cried Kent, wrenching his shoulder free. "Go away! Can't you see I'm busy?"

"I'll give you something to think ears. The next moment a titter ran through the crowd as a bumpkin in a rear seat called out:

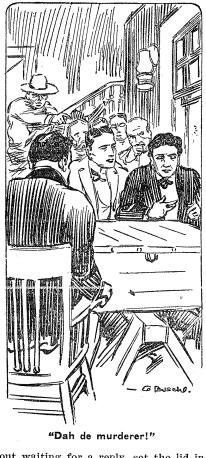

"The dude's eyes ain't mates!"

Chester Kent, already conspicuous in his spotless white flannels, had made himself doubly so by drawing out a monocle and deftly fixing it in his right eye. He leaned over the body to look into the face, and his head jerked back the merest triffe. Bending lower, he scrutinized the un-manacled wrist. When he passed on his lips were pursed in the manner of one who whistles noiselessly.

He resumed his seat beside Sedgwick. Chancing to look down at the monocle, Sedgwick started and stared. Kent's knuckle, as seen through the glass, stood forth, monstrous and distorted, every line of the bronzed skin showing like a furrow. The monocle was a powerful magnifying lens.

The sheriff's heavy voice rose. "Any one here present recognize or identify the deceased?" he droned, and, without waiting for a reply, set the lid in place and signaled to the medical of ficer.

"Feller citizens," began the still shaking physician, "we don't need any jury to find that this unknown drowned woman"-

"The deceased was not drowned." Emerging from his reverie, Chester Kent had leisurely risen in his place and made his statement.

"N-n-not drowned!" gasped the medical man. "Certainly not! As you must know, if you made an autopsy." "No autopsy was necessary," replied the other quickly. "There's plenty of testimony without that. We've heard the witnesses that saw the drowned body on the grating it washed ashore on.

"The body never washed ashore on that grating."

A murmur ran through the crowd. "How do you figure that?" called a voice.

"On the under side of the grating I found a cocoon of a common moth.

CHAPTER VII.

Simon P. Groot Does Business. O one moved in the courtroom for appreciable seconds after that pronouncement.

First to recover from the surprise was the sheriff. "You, Jim, set down!" he shouted. "If there's to be any accusin' done here, I'll do it." "I do it," persisted the half breed.

"Blood is on his han'. I see it." Involuntarily Sedgwick looked at his right hand. There was a low growl from the crowd.

"Steady!" came Kent's voice at his elbow. "Mistakés like that are Judge Lynch's evidence.' "Whah was he the night of the killin'?" cried Gansett Jim. "Ast him. Whah was he?"

"Where was you if it comes to that?" retorted the sheriff and bit his lip with a scowl. At that betrayal Chester Kent's eyelids flashed up and instantly drooped again into somberness. "This hearing is adjourned," twittered the medical officer. "Burial of the unknown will take place at once.

All are invited." During their slow progress to the door Kent kept up a running comment, which Sedgwick supported with equal coolness. The crowd, darkling and undecided, pressed around them. As they went through the doorway they were jostled by a sudden pressure, following which Kent felt a touch on his shoulder. He turned to face the sheriff. "Better get out of town quick," advised Schlager in a half whisper.

"Thank you," said Kent in a clear and cheerful voice. "Where can I get some tobacco?"

"Sterrett's grocery keeps the best," said some informant back of him. "End of the square to the right."

"Much obliged," said Kent and strolled leisurely to his car. followed by Sedgwick. As they took their seats and started slowly through the crowd Sedgwick inquired earnestly:

"Do you crave tobacco at this particular moment worse than you do the peace and loneliness of the green fields?"

"Policy, my young friend," retorted Kent. "I wish I could think up a dozen more errands to do. The more casually we get out of town the less likely we are to be followed by a flight of rocks. I don't want a perfectly good runabout spoiled by a mob."

Both of them went in Sterrett's store, where Kent earned the reputation from Sterrett of being "awful dang choosy about what he gets," and came out into a considerable part of the populace, which had followed. As they re-embarked the sheriff put his foot on the running board. "Better take my tip." he said significantly. "Very well," returned Kent. "There will be no arrest, then?" "Not just now."

A peculiar smile slid sidewise off a corner of the scientist's long jaw 'Nor at any other time." he concluded. He threw in the clutch. When the car had won the open road beyond the village Sedgwick remarked:

"Queer line the sheriff is taking." "Poor Schlager!" said Kent, chuck-ling. "No other line is open to him. He's in a tight place. But it isn't the sheriff that's worrying me." "Who, then?"

"Gansett Jim."

"What did the sheriff mean by asking Gansett Jim where he was the who was soon to be no more. Madam. I said, 'you are worn. You are wan. You are weary. Trust the chivalry of one who might be your father. Rest and be comforted as with balm.' Standing by the roadside, she drooped like a flower. 'There is no rest for me,' she said in mournful tones. must away upon my mission.' "She vanished, that fair creature, into the forest. I looked at my watchthe unerring, unwarranted, sixteen jeweled chronometer which I shall presently have the honor of showing to you at the unexampled price of three seventy-and saw that the hour was exactly-for these timepieces vary not one fraction of a second a day-8:45. When next I looked at the face of Father Time's trustiest accountant. it was to mark the hour of the horrid shriek that shook my soul-precisely 9:31. And later, when I heard the dread news, I realized that my ears had thrilled to a death cry." Kent moved away, his chin pressed down upon his chest. He went to the office of Lawyer Adam Bain and spent an hour waiting, with his feet propped up on the desk. When the lawyer entered Kent remarked: "You rather put our two official friends in a hole this morning.'

"Just a mite maybe. But they've crawled out. I guess I spoke too quick."

"How so?"

"Well, if they'd gone ahead and buried the body as it was we could have had it exhumed. And then we'd have seen what we'd have seen." "True enough. And you didn't see it as it was?" "See what? Did you?"

"Suppose," Kent said. "you give me the fullest possible character sketch of our impulsive friend, the sheriff."

Half an hour was consumed in this process. At the end of the time Kent strolled back to the square, where Simon P. Groot had been discoursing. There he found the ornate wagon closed and its ornate proprietor whistling over some minor repairs that he had been making. An invitation to take a ride in Kent's car was promptly accepted.

"Business first," said Kent. "You're a seller. I'm a buyer. You've got some information that I may want. If so I'm ready to pay. Was any of your talk true?"

"Yep," replied Simon P. Groot auserely. "It was all true but the frills." "Will you trim off the frills for $10?" "Fair dealing for a fair price is my motto. You'll find it in gilt lettering on the back of the wagon. I will." "What were you doing on Hawkhill cliffs?"

"Sleeping in the wagon."

"And you really met this mysterious wanderer?"

"Sure as you're standing there." "What passed between you?"

"I gave her good evening, and she spoke to me fair enough, but queer, and said that my children's children might remember the day. Now, I ain't got any children to have children, so I wouldn't have thought of it again but for the man that came inquiring after her."

"When was that?"

"Not fifteen minutes after."

"Did you tell the crowd here that?" "Yep. I sold two dozen wedding rings on the strength and romance of that point. From my description they ing shadows I met and addressed one | broken right to the edge of the thicket and the ground stamped down. One or both of 'em must have broken out into the open, and I lost the trail. But this is what I found on a hazel bush. Do 1 win the five on it?" The car came to a stop. Digging into his pocket, Kent produced a bill, which he handed over and took possession of Simon P. Groot's "relic." It was an embroidered silver star, with a few torn wisps of cloth clinging to it.

> "Gansett Jim, probably," opined Kent. "Just where his interest in this case comes in I haven't yet found out. He favored me with his regard outside. And he had some dealings with the sheriff on the beach. But I don't want to talk about him now nor about anything else."

Acting on this hint, Sedgwick let his companion severely alone until a bustle from without warned him that the crowd was returning. Being aroused, Kent accosted one of the villagers who had just entered.

"Body coming back?" he asked. "Yep. On its way now."

"What occurred in the house where they took it?" "Search me! Everybody was shut out by the sheriff and the doc. They had that body to theirselves nigh twenty minutes.' At this moment the sheriff entered the hall, followed by Dr. Breed, who escorted the coffin to its supporting sawhorses. The meager physician was visibly at the fag end of his self control. Even the burly sheriff looked like a sick man as he lifted aside the coffin lid and spoke.

"There was reasons, neighbors," said he. "why the corpse wasn't suitable to be looked at. Nobody had seen it since last night. We've fixed it up as good as we could, and you'll now please pass by as quick as possible."

In the line that formed Kent got : place behind Elder Dennett, who had decided to take another look for good measure, as he said. The look was a productive one. No sooner had it fallen on the face of the dead than Dennett jabbed an indicatory finger in that direction and addressed the sheriff:

"Hey, Len! What's this?" "What's what?" growled Schlager. "Why, there's a cut on the lady's right cheek. It wasn't there when I seen the corpse last night."

"Ah. what's the matter with your yes?" demanded the sheriff savagely. 'You want to hog the limelight, that's your trouble!"

This was evidently a shrewd lash at recognized weakness, and the elder moved on amid jeering comments. But Sedgwick, whose eyes had been fixed upon Kent, saw a curious expression flicker and fade across the long jawed face. It was exactly the ex-with conviction. "You're an expert, Mr. Smith. Now, was that grating large enough to float a full grown human body?" "Why, as to that, a body ain't but a mite heavier than the water. I should say it'd just barely float it, maybe." "Exactly, but plus several pounds of clothing and some dead metal extra?" "No."

"The clothes would have been soaked, and handcuffs weigh something," said Kent calmly.

"There might have been extra spars under the grating that got pounded loose on the beach and washed away," propounded the medical officer desperately.

"Look at the face," said Kent, with finality. "This is a bad coast. Most of you have seen drowned bodies. Did any one ever see an expression of such terror and agony on the face of one who came to death by drowning?" "No, by thunder!" shouted somebody.

'He's right." Others took up the cry. Clamor rose and spread in the room. The sheriff silenced it with a stentorian voice. 'What are you trying to get at?" he demanded, facing Kent.

"The truth. What are you?"

Schlager's eyelids flickered, but he ignored the counterstroke. "Look out it don't lead you where you won't want to follow," he returned, with a significant look at Sedgwick.

"This is as far as it has led me." said Kent in his clear, even voice. "The body, already dead, was dragged down and soaked in the sea and then lashed to the grating by a man who probably is or has been a sailor.'

"Then the deceased met death on shore, and presumably by violence," said Lawyer Bain.

"It's murder!" cried a woman "Bloody murder! That's what shrilly. it is!"

"Murder!" echoed a voice from the doorway. Gansett Jim, his half Indian, half negro face alight with fury, stood there pointing with stiffened hand at pression of a dog that pricks up its Sedgwick. "Dah de murderer!"

night of the murder? "Murder?" said Kent quizzically.

"Humph!"

'What murder?' "The murder of the unknown woman, of course. I think that Gansett Jim killed her and is trying to turn suspicion on me."

"But if the sheriff knows where Gansett Jim was at the time of the killing, he can't suppose me guilty. I wonder if he really does believe me guilty?"

"If he does, he doesn't care. His concern is quite apart from your guilt." "It's too much for me." confessed the artist.

"And for me. That is why I am going back to the village."

"But I thought you were fright ened."

"If I stayed away from everything that alarms me," said Kent, "I'd never have a tooth filled or speak to a woman under seventy. I'm a timid soul, Sedgwick, but I don't think I shall be in any danger in Annalaka so long as I'm alone. Here we are. Out with you! I'll be back by evening." To his surprise, Kent, turning into the village square, found the crowd still lingering. A new focus of interest had drawn it to a spot opposite Sterrett's store, where a wagon, decorated in the most advanced style of circus art, shone brilliant in yellow and green. Bright red letters across the front presented to public admiration the legend:

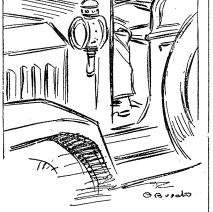

SIMON P. GROOT SIMON PURE GOODS

A stout projection rested on one of the rear wheels. Here stood the proprietor of the vehicle, while behind him in a window were displayed his wares. It was evident that Simon P. Groot followed the romantic career of an itinerant hawker. dealing in that wide range of commodities roughly comprised in the quaint term, "Yankee notions." Kent was struck with the expansive splendor of the man's gestures, the dignity of his robust figure and the beauty of a broad whitening beard that spread sidewise like the ripples from a boat's stem. Two blemishes unhappily marred the majesty of Simon P. Groot's presence -a pair of pinhead eyes, mutually attracted to each other, and a mean and stringent little voice.

"There, gentlemen and ladies," Simon P. Groot was saying, "there in was carrying there. Then there was a allowed it was a painter man named Sedgwick. I thought maybe I'd call in and have him touch up the wagon a bit where she's rusty."

"And you heard the woman cry out less than an hour later?'

"That's a curious thing. I'd have almost sworn it was a man's voice that yelled. It went through me like a sharpened icicle."

"All this was night before last. What have you been doing meantime?' "Drove over to Marcus Corners to trade yesterday. There I heard about the murder and came back here to make a little business out of it. Would it be worth $5 to you, likely, a relic of the murderer?" suggested the old man. "Quite likely."

"Mum's the word, then, for my part in it. The next morning I followed her trail a ways. You see, the yell in the night had got me interested. She'd met somebody in a thicket. I found the string and the paper of the bundle she Telling the Time of Day. Actual and repeated experiments have shown that the nearest hour of the day or night may be ascertained in the following very curious way: Make a small running loop in a piece of sewing thread about a foot in length, place a quarter dollar in this loop, see that the coin is accurately bisected by the thread and then draw the loop tight.

YOUNG FOLKS' CORNER

Put on a solid table a glass tumbler with a fairly wide mouth. Rest your right elbow on the table in a firm and easy position so as to avoid any shakiness in your hand, hold the other end of the thread between your first finger and the "ball" of the thumb-i. e.. the fleshy top joint of the thumb-so that the thumb nail is undermost and a few inches above the middle of the mouth of the glass. Now, if you keep your hand quite steady the movement of the coin which is hanging inside the tumbler will become less and less until motionless. Then, in half a minute or so, a very slight and regular vibration will commence, the coin oscillating from side to side like a pendulum and gradually increasing the length of movement un til it strikes the side of the glass.

The strike goes on in the most regular and automatic way—first on one side of the glass and then on the other-until, say, eight strokes have coin then diminish in length until the suspended coin again becomes motionless and hangs in the middle of the tumbler. You look at your watch and find that 8 o'clock is the nearest hour.

Few people realize to what extent their health depends upon the condition of the kidneys.

The physician in nearly all cases of serious illness, makes a chemical analysis of the patient's urine. He knows that unless the kidneys are doing their work properly, the other organs cannot readily be brought back to health and strength.

When the kidneys are neglected or abused in any way, serious results are sure to follow. According to health statistics, Bright's disease which is really an advanced form of kidney trouble caused nearly ten thousand deaths in 1913, in the state of New York alone. Therefore, it behooves us to pay more attention to the health of these most important organs.

An ideal herbal compound that has had remarkable success as a kidney remedy is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy.

The mild and healing influence of this preparation, in most cases, is soon realized, according to sworn statements and verified testimony of those who have used the remedy.

If you feel that your kidneys require attention, and wish a sample bottle, write to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Mention this paper, enclose ten cents and they will gladly forward it to you by Parcel Post.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condi-tion of the mucous lining of the Eusta-chian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed. Deafness is the result, and unless the in-flammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condi-tion of the mucous surfaces. That tight feeling over your chest, and dis-tressing bronchial cough are usually worse at night, and you lose the sleep you sorely need to keep up your strength. FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAE eases that tight feeling and leaves a healing coating as it glides down the throat. The tickling, rasp-ing cough and hoarseness disappear, and the phlegm is raised easily and copicusly. There is more healing in one bottle of FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAE COMFOUND than in a like quantity of any other cough and cold medicine. It heals to the last drop. W. J. BELLLAMY, Clarksburg, Ky., writes: "My boy, 16 years old, had bronchial trouble ever since he was a baby. We feared he would go into consumption. I heard of a similar case where FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAE COM-POUND effected a cure, and bought a bottle. If y son commenced to improve after the first few doses, and the first bottle stopped his stubborn cough." FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAE has given better satisfaction than any medicine lever used. I think this wonderful medicine has saved ite boy's life." To Make Smoke Rings.

All that is required to produce this effect is an empty cigar box, one of the ends of which being removed is replaced by canvas tightly nailed around it. A circular hole about one inch in diameter is bored in the opposite end. Inside the box is a saucer half filled with carbonate of ammonia, upon which sufficient hydrochloric acid is poured until a dense vapor of ammonia chloride fills the box, which, upon slight, rapid pressure upon the canvas end of the box, is ejected from the hole and assumes beautiful circles of white smoke, which ascend and retain their shape till dissipated.

A Magic String.

Procure a few pieces of cotton string, each about 11/2 feet long, and fill them well with soap. Prepare a brine by dissolving three tablespoonfuls of salt in a cup of water. Place the strings in the brine and allow them to soak for two hours or longer. It is necessary that they be thoroughly saturated with the brine. When taken out of the brine and thoroughly dried, suspend one of them from a nail on a ledge, and hang a finger ring on its lower end. Apply a lighted match to the string and allow it to burn. The ring will not fall, but will hang by the ash.

Riddles.

What is the difference between a light in a cave and a dance in an inn? One is a taper in a cavern, the other a caper in a tavern.

What is the difference between a man going upstairs and one looking up? One is stepping up the stairs, the other staring up the steps.

TRUE SPIRIT OF DAY Christmas Giving Should Be Prompted by the Heart.

Religion in the Orthodox Sense Not Necessary to Appreciate Finer Qualities of Great Christian Holiday.

shepherds, watching their flocks by night, are sore afraid at the glory which shines about them. Clothed in blinding light, the angel speaks; the heavenly host that crowds suddenly about him sing of glory in the highest and peace and good will. The wise men who have seen his star in the East, kneel and spread their gifts of gold and myrrh and frankincense without question.

The miracle of 2,000 years ago is still new and glad and lovely, for, lo! in all Christendom bells peal and sweet choirs sing the message given by the blinding angel and the crowding host:

"For behold I bring you tidings of great joy which shall be to all people. Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

This is the message of the Christmastide, yet the bigger half of Christendom makes the period the pagan festival it once was at the time of the winter solstice. We give gifts, for sake of the gods of custom and merriment, forgetting entirely that they are for sake of the great spiritual joy "which shall be to all people." The gold and myrrh and frankincense of the heart are withheld-we give gifts because we've got to, and keep our hearts as much closed to the Christmas child as was the inn. We have our own selfish ends to gain, the rich patron to cater to, the friend to appease. We heap little children with dazzling toys, and light the starry lamps of their fir trees because it is the fashion, and we do our small Christmas charities because it would seem mean not to do them.

We have forgotten the joyous and sublime meaning of Christmas. One does not need to be religious in the orthodox sense to appreciate the finer quality of this great festival, for what is known as Christian feeling has come to be a moral obligation at this time-a point of etiquette, in truth, for the heart and mind.

In point of mere etiquette-what the social world thinks on the subject of Christmas gift giving-it is thought bad taste for a person of modest means to give presents of value to others of wealth and influence, for this savors too much like currying to continued favor if the giver is already under obligations. But some knowledge of the helpful friend's existence is necessary, and this may take the form of a pretty Christmas card with an appropriate greeting; or a knot of flowers or winter berries may be sent with a note expressing warm Christmas wishes.

That the servant who has given her bodily strength and heart's best interest to the home must not be forgot-

IN THE DAIRY BARN. Winter only the profitable cows. Do not guess at it, but know by fair testing. Begin now to fatten the unprofitable onesand turn them into profitable beef.

Care and judgment must be exercised in the methods of feeding heifers to develop a strong digestive tract. A cow with a poor digestion has no place in a paying dairy.

The nutritious value of fodder corn is very much lessened if struck by frost. The ears should just be glazed, and the stalks should be green to make first class ensilage.

Silage is not only a good feed in itself, but has the additional value of enabling the cow to get more food value out of the other components of the ration.

In dairying cheaper production means greater profit, and cheaper production usually implies better cows Dairy farming, if carried out successfully, means brain work just as much as any other line of activity.

GLEAN PAILS NEEDED FOR SANITARY MILK

[Prepared by dairy division, United States department of agriculture.]

When healthy cows have been assured and the stable and the dairy house have been made sanitary the next step in sanitary milk production is to see that all utensils which come in contact with milk are clean. These utensils should be made of durable, smooth, nonabsorbent material. Wooden utensils are hard to sterilize, and therefore' are not used in the best equipped dairies. Badly battered or rusty ware is objectionable, as it is hard to clean, and contact with iron may injure the flavor of milk and milk products. Avoid all utensils having complicated parts, crevices or inaccessible places which are hard to clean properly.

For the proper sterilization of utensils an abundance of steam or hot water is needed because at a few degrees above 100 degrees F. the growth of the ordinary forms of bacteria friend in a duel and suffered so from ceases, although some exceptional forms' grow at much higher temperatures. All disease producing bacteria commonly found in milk are destroyed or rendered harmless on exposure to a temperature of 145 degrees F. for twenty minutes. Some bacteria are able to withstand unfavorable condi-

One evening at the close of the eighteenth century a young man stopped at a tavern in New York and was sitting in the taproom dreamily looking at the embers in the great open fireplace when one of a number of men drinking and smoking at the tables-a fellow with a bad eye and a crafty look on his face-began to make remarks about him in so loud a tone that he could not fail to hear them. Nevertheless the stranger endured them for a time without retort, then got up and started to Teave the room, whereupon the man who had insulted him suddenly put out his foot and the stranger fell sprawling on the floor. The fallen man, still apparently unwilling to notice the offense, arose and proceeded on his way to another room.

He had not been there long before a young man of pleasing appearance entered and addressed him:

"You are apparently a stranger here." be said, "and need a friend. The man who has insulted you is notorious for picking quarrels, and when he finds his antagonist one who is likely to get the better of him he invariably finds some adroit method of getting out of the difficulty. I am anxious for a pretext to fight him. Why, I don't care to explain, except to say that it is a matter of the heart. I have recently returned from a long absence in that part of Louisiana lying west of the Mississippi, and, though I immediately recognized this man-Amos Stringfellow-he doesn't recognize me. On account of the lady in the case I would not like to quarrel with him on my own account, nor would he permit me to do so. Your affair is my opportunity. You seem to be averse to fighting him yourself. Therefore I would ask your permission to act as your champion.'

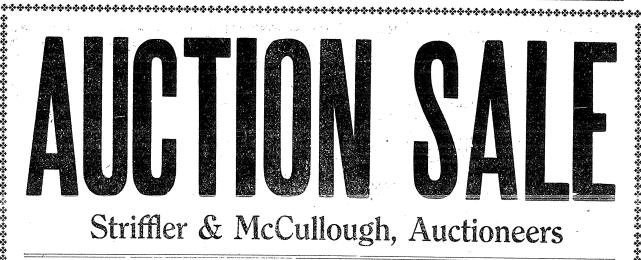

The speaker drew forth a card, on which was printed his name. Horace George Herrick. In return he received one from the stranger, Henry Pinck-

"I am not averse to fighting the fellow," Pinckney said. "We of the south usually settle such matters under the code. But in my case there is a reason why I should not. My father killed a remorse that he extracted a promise from me never to engage in one myself.'

Herrick pleaded with Pinckney for permission to represent him. Pinckney was unwilling to stand in so unpleasant a light, but at last consented, declaring that in case Herrick fell he would throw aside his scruples and Herrick returned to the tapcourt room and after berating Stringfellow for being so inhospitable as to insult an inoffensive stranger took it upon himself to vindicate the good name of New York and demanded satisfaction. Stringfellow demurred on the ground that the challenger was not a New Yorker, whereupon Herrick informed him that he had been born in New York and of his identity.

Stringfellow saw at once that he had fallen into his own trap, but relied, as trusting we shall not miss a copy be-ten, goes without saying; but it is certainly bad form to make the poor servitor's gift an inexpensive trifle when something better can be afforded.

Then what a woeful want of taste it shows for us to defer buying a friend's or sister's present until we have found out what she means to give us, and so make the exchange a quid pro quo. The gift that goes to friend or relative is above all one for love, and it is undoubtedly better taste for the recipient of the simpler gift in the exchange to appear as pleased as if she had received something ten times its value.

But, then, what matters the nature of the gift after all? The spirit is the thing—and does not this silly picture or cushion, so unbecoming to the parlor, mean that the friend or sister has thought of us?

As for the little children, so much are their feelings painfully strained at this time that I would like to write a book on the subject. I beg every mother not to threaten the poor little heart that misbehaves sometimes with the eternal word that "Santa Claus won't come if you do that any more." The dear kiddle who forgets to be good knows better after a year or two of this harrowing threat, which makes you out a story teller. Meanwhile, there is the little heart staying awake at night with its dreadful anxieties: there are the sudden storms of bitter tears, with all the glory of Christmas | oughly sterilized with steam. The sunk in the bottomless pit of absolute sureness that Santy-dear, abused, | from the steam or water so that they good old fat gentleman-won't come.

We remember the poor and drop a few pennies gladly for the blind children.

But, why do we do it-why? It is because a wide, sweet star has stopped over a stable in the far East, because the church choirs are singing of peace on earth and good will toward men.

So let us never lose sight of that fact with our gifts, whether our hands tender or receive them; for the heart closed to the deeper significance of the inn that held no room. Let us Oct. 22-31. They will serve as specibind it with the cord of some memory and every one of our gifts as tidings the instructors. of great joy.

In modern dairies where clean milk is produced the small top milk pail is a necessity, as such a pail presents only a small opening into which dust and dirt may fall from the air or from the cow's body. Many types of milk pails are for sale, but any tinner can convert an ordinary pail into a small top pail by the addition of a hood, as shown in the illustration.

known as spores, and these spores are killed only by long exposure to a temperature at or above that of boiling water. A pail or can may be clean to the eye and yet may carry numberless bacteria which will hasten the souring of milk, cause bad flavor in butter or cheese or spread contagion. Milk utensils should be rinsed in cold water immediately after they have been used and before the milk has had time to dry upon them, then washed thoroughly in hot water to which soda or some washing powder has been added. Brushes are preferable to cloths for washing dairy utensils, as they are more easily kept clean and do better work.

After washing the utensils must be rinsed and sterilized. For the latter they can be immersed in boiling water for at least two minutes or held over a steam jet for the same length of time, but the most effective method is to put them into a tight closet thorutensils while hot should be removed will dry quickly from their own heat and until use should be kept inverted in a clean place, free from dust, flies or other contamination. Strainer cloths can be washed in the manner above described, boiled for five minutes and then hung in a clean place to dry.

Before entering the apartment Herrick took Pinckney aside and said to Lin:

"If I fall go to Harlem and find bloom. We plant garden here from Katherine Van Gaasback.
