J. D. CROSBY'S

PIONEER MERCHANTDIEDTUES-DAY AT MT. CLEMENS.

Identified for 32 Years with the Business Interests of Cass City.

Citizens were shocked and saddened Tuesday morning to hear the news of the death of James D. Crosby, pioneer merchant of Cass City, which occurred at Mt. Clemens, at an early heart resulting from many years of rheumatism was the cause of death. Mr. Crosby is the fifth of a family of eight children to succumb to heart disease within the last eight years.

Mr. and Mrs. Crosby left Cass City Jan. 12 for Miami, Florida, where they expected to spend the winter months. When they had gone as far south as Jacksonville, Florida, Mr. Crosby was stricken with rheumatism. and growing no better after several supervisors voted in favor of this modays' treatment there, he decided to tion, made a mistake and acted inreturn to Michigan and go at once to Mt. Clemens where he had often found relief at the mineral baths.

parents died when he was seven years of age. Mr. Crosby has been a great sufferer from rheumatism. At the age of ten, the disease had already put him on crutches. When a boy, he little, if any, improvement in his condition. After his hospital siege, he made his home with his sister, Mrs. A. J. Knapp, sr., at Ypsilanti where he doctored 18 months and then spent three years seeking relief at the springs at Virginia City, Nevada. When he commenced to learn telegraphy at Wayne, Mich., he used a wheel chair and the depot boys for two years wheeled their comrade to and from work each day. Later he was able to return to the use of crutches and finally he abandoned them for a cane. His sufferings from rheumatism at all he bore the pain patiently. He was convenes March 1. a firm believer in showing the sunny side and eliminating the plaintive ther in business. Mr. Crosby's father and two brothers had embarked in mercantile lines and this busines had its attractions for the young man. In 1882 in casting for a suitable location for a business of his own, he chose Cass City, being strongly impressed that its location and surroundings would result in its being an advantageous commercial stand. He accordingly rented a store here that year and established himself in the boot and shoe business. The following year he erected a two-story brick block, large enough for two stores. He retained the greater share for himself and leased the other side. He at once manifested an enterprising spirit and became interested in the advancement of the town, so that he was elected a member of the village council in the following year. For several terms he served in that capacity and also filled other positions of trust, and performed well his part towards bringing the town into promi-

In 1893 he decided to add clothing and gents' furnishings to his shoes and gents' furnishings to his shoes and after that time the entire store was occupied by his stock and six years later the building was again enarged to meet the demands of the growing business.

Funeral services will be held at the residence this (Friday) afternoon at two o'clock. Rev. J. W. Hamblin, pastor of the Presbyterian church, will officiate and members of Cass City Lodge, I. O. O. F., will attend in a body. Besides the wife and two children, deccased is survived by one brother, S. H. Crosby of Hudson and two sisters, Mrs. A. J. Knapp, sr., of Cass City and Mrs. S. H. Blakely of Bad Axe.

It is inferred by this article that the judiciously. It is no purpose of this paper at this time to discuss the wisdom of such a change in county proceedings as begun by the board, but the informant wishes the public to know that the 17 supervisors who voted in favor of the act, knew there would be opposition and that the attorney general had already advised the governor that such an act was unconstitutional. Nevertheless such an act is in force in Saginaw county, regardless of the attorney general's points, just nine more than they made opinion. # FOURTH GAMES

IN LINE FOR CHAMPIONSHIP OF THE THUMB.

Both High School Teams Have Not Lost a Game This Season.

Both the boys' and girls' teams of the Cass City high school have played four games of basket ball this season and all eight games have been victories for the home teams. Cass City is in line for the Thumb championship

In two short halves Friday evening, the Cass City girls defeated Owendale 24-4. The team work of the local players was excellent, while Owendale showed marked improvement over her work in the first game with the locals. The work of Benkelman and Fritz at center and center guard was fine, and the Cass City forwards put the ball in the basket every time they got their hands on it. Local guards allowed only one field basket.

Tyson of Owendale and Miss Elizabeth Doerr of Cass City handled the game very satisfactorily.

The lin-up: R. F., L. Brown, Capt.; L. F., V. McPhail; C., M. H. Benkelman; C. G., R. Fritz; R. G., S. Brown and L. Barnes; L. G., K. McLarty.

Boys' Game, 38-10. In just 35 minutes, the Cass City boys scored 38 points on Owendale while the latter were tallying 10 in their first game with the local team. building up such a team as they have in one year. However, the visitors showed poor team work, while Cass City passed the ball like old "Vets."

The basket shooting of Benkelman was fine. His team mates worked the ball down to their basket, then handed the ball to "Sime" and he would do the rest. Duncanson's foul throwing was of Class One, tallying 12 of 14 chances. Dafoe and Townsend are to be complimented on their officiating.

The local line-up: C., Benkelman; R. F., Capt. Duncanson, L. F.; Hoad-Mrs. George Silvernail and son, ley and J. Dickinson; R. G., Parker; L.

HE DIDN'T TAKE THE PAPER

A farmer in the community once had a horse he wanted to sell. It was a valuable horse and should have brought a good price. For months he tried to sell the animal, but could not find a buyer at his figure. He finally sold it for about $25 less than its value, rather than earry it through the winter.

Now it happened that just across the line in another county there was a farmer looking for just such a horse, but was unable to find it. Then he inserted a little ad., in the home paper, which brought him a number of offers, one of which he reluctantly accepted.

The first farmer did not take the home paper, and of course did not see the little ad. of the man who wanted a horse and who would have purchased his animal at a good price.

By not taking the paper he saved $1. and likewise lost $24 by not seeing the other fellow's ad.

Such occurrences are happening every week right here in this community, in which people actually lose good money because they do not take their home paper, and hence do not know of many of the opportunities that are placed before them.

"Penny wise and pound foolish," is exemplified in many ways.—Ex.

FAIL TO OUST CASEVILLE JUSTICE UNDER RECALL ACT RAILROAD RATES

The new recall act failed to oust Justice Henry H. Legyard at the special election instigated by citizens of Caseville. The recall was defeated by a vote of 71 to 56. Mr. Legyard is justice of the peace, and the charge filed with the probate judge was that the township board let a contract for the furnishing of gravel and failed to require the parties procuring the contract to give bonds, also that unnecessary meetings of the board were held. Under the law, the judge of probate ordered the township clerk to call an election to vote on the recal.

Lansing, Mich. - (Special.) - Railroad legislation, or at least the consideration of railroad legislation, has occupied the greater part of the time of Michigan's legislature for the past ten days.

What to do with the problem, how best to solve it, and whether to handle it with a legislative committee or turn it over to the state railroad commission and come back in an extra session to hear that commissioner's report and frame a law, have been some of the angles which the representatives and senators have discussed.

LARGE AUDIENCES HEAR VAN HEYDE LECTURES

B. C. VanHeyde, ex-saloon keeper, has been giving his lecture "Why I Quit the Saloon Business" in several points in the county this week and it is reported that he has had recordbreaking audiences.

At Elmwood Baptist church on Monday afternoon thirty-nine teams were counted tied outside when the speaker arrived and the church was crowded to the doors. At Gagetown at 8:00 o'clock in Echo Hall every available seat was taken and many stood during the whole lecture.

Deford filled Society Hall to suffocation and stairway and entrance were choked with eager listeners who could not see a picture while many were turned away.

Kingston was visited on Tuesday evening and the M. E. church was filled to the last chair.

Mr. Van Heyde does not indulge in personalities, but does not spare himself in depicting the trail of wrecked humanity which led from his two saoons and a beer garden in Springfield, Ohio, and he says they were no better or worse than the average saloon. The triumph of his better self made him undertake to undo some of the ruin he caused during thirty years of saloon activity,

THE ART OF LOVE

A Lecture on How to Secure a Husband

By F. A. MITCHEL

Mrs. Matilda Robbins, a widow of fifty, who had buried four husbands, announced that she would give private lectures in the parlor of her home to young ladies on how to get husbands. A lecture would be given every Friday ifternoon at 3 o'clock.

On the first afternoon a numerous Mrs. Wm. Kilbourn returned home audience were gathered in the lecturr's parlor.

Mrs. Robbins spoke as follows:

Young ladies, you have doubtless derived your ideas as to woman's part n a courtship from novels, and that is the reason why you are not married. The heroine of a novel is usually so modest that she doesn't dare say her soul's her own. There's more accomdished in this world in other fields beides matrimony by assurance than nodesty and more accomplished by annagement than by assurance.

The best way to teach is by example. herefore I shall put this lecture in he form of a story. But it's a real tory, not an invention. The heroine idn't sit round and look pretty. She vas up and doing. That's what we must all be in this world if we want to et on. Do you suppose a young felow who wants a position whereby to start a fortune sits round and waits for it? No; he goes out and hunts for it. And when he gets it does he modestly wait for somebody to tell him to do things? Not if he wants to succeed. He does everything without being told and before it's wanted. That's the part of a young fellow starting out to fix himself in the world, and you

Now for my story of the way one oung lady secured a husband.

Her name was Jones, Sarah Jones. just plain Sarah Jones, not Maltravers or Montmorency, like the heroines of novels, or Gwendolin or Jaquelin for a first name. A girl doesn't need a high sounding name to get a husband; she needs something that I'm going to tell you about. Sarah Jones the day she was eighteen sat down and did a job of thinking. She wasn't long about it, for she was an acting girl, and when she had got her thinking done she acted at once on her decision. That decision was that her place was in a home as a wife and the mother of hildren. Sallie Jones didn't go at things blindly; she thought them out beforehand. She knew that she couldn't get married if restricted to the society of girls. So she joined a dancing class. She couldn't afford it. but she had to afford it and whatever has to be done is done if the party to do it is of the right stuff. She had her eye fixed on that dancing class, and she joined without knowing where the money to pay her way was to come from. There were twenty young men members and twenty-five girls.

Miss Jones realized that there is safety in numbers but for the man she was after, not for her. She didn't go fooling about among the twenty men. She picked out a steady young fellow and made up her mind to land him. His name was Abel Rogers. Nothing romantic about his name either. Rogers didn't have anything except what he was getting together himself, but he was frugal and a hard worker. The first thing Sallie did was to let Abel Rogers understand that she liked him. She didn't pout when he danced with some other girl more than with her or look troubled if he didn't dance with her at all. She smiled on him hadn't neglected her. This sort of work has been called angling, and so it is. A skillful fisherman if a fish doesn't bite right off wouldn't think of trying to jerk the hook into its gills, and when it does bite he doesn't try to haul it out of the water all at once. Some fish can be caught that way, but a gamy fish needs to be allowed to play itself out. So it is with a man. First get him on the hook, then play him. We like those who like us, and Abel Rogers, being aware that Sallie liked him, was disposed to like her. There was nothing deceitful about this in Sallie. She really liked him or she wouldn't have tried to catch him. There is a difference in a girl showing a man that she likes him and showing him she wants him. Showing it would end uncertainty, and uncertainty is the line by which she must pull him in after getting the hook in his gills. Abel knew nothing about Sallie's feelings for him except that she liked him. She might have liked several other men and loved one other

It wasn't long before Saliie found an opportunity to favor Abel above other men. He came one evening to the dancing class after an absence, having no partners engaged. Sallie turned down several names on her engagement card to give the dances to him. This was an excellent way of showing him her good will without indicating that she coveted his attention. Perhaps there are some among you who will not see the distinction I make here, but I assure you it is one of no

him. That was the time before automobiles came. I am not in favor of autos for courting purposes. There is too much rapid motion, and the driver's attention must be constantly on his machine, to say nothing of his grip being on the steering wheel. Abel and Sallie drove out in a box buggy behind a lazy going horse. Everything pertaining to love in its early stages is zephyr-like, though I admit the climax or a brief period just before the climax may be in the nature of a hurricane. There was just a suspicion of perfume about Sallie, so delicate that it could only have come from articles that had been kept in sandalwood drawers or, more likely, in a mouchoir case. It was very entrancing to Abel, and as they rolled slowly over the smooth road, the reins lying loosely on the horse's back, Abel had nothing to think of except the girl beside him.

Sallie had by this time come to the most difficult part of her work. Every man doubtless thinks that some time. he will be married and have a home. But marriage to him is like old age to all of us. It is—I mean it seems—far distant. The bachelor thinks of the present. Some men do not like to give up their liberty for the obligations of matrimony; some, who expect to do so in time, never find a convenient season. All men must be won. Only widowers or old bachelors, tired of their bachelorhood, marry intention-

Abel Rogers was looking forward to the day when, having accumulated a competence, he would settle down and take a wife. It was the business of Sallie Jones to break through this future intention and make it a present one. And here, again, girls' work shows a similarity to men's work. Many men who have good address and are excellent talkers fail in putting through schemes because they cannot bring the person on whom they are working to the point. Girls also often fail in landing a man whom they have got to the water's edge.

Mr. Rogers, having been brought thus far, bid fair to remain with the hook in his gills flopping about in the water. The timid girl, having thus far succeeded and being balked, would remain in statu quo. The rash girl would jerk the line, break it, and the fish would go swimming away merrily. The wise girl would use a landing net.

That is what Sallie Jones did. She used a landing net. But even a landing net may be used carelessly or at least injudiciously. Miss Jones studied out whatever she did. After a few months of dallying on the part of Mr. Rogers she set up a rival-not a real, bona fide rival, but one merely to excite a bit of suspicion. Indeed, by this time she was considered by the young men to belong to Abel Rogers, and it was not easy for her to secure a rival.

Abel did not seem very much frightened. At any rate, he showed no sign of being brought to terms. Perhaps he was thinking that he couldn't afford to marry or that, after all, it wouldn't be such a hardship to let Sallie Jones go to another.

The experiment having failed, Miss Jones resolved upon another. She became suddenly very gracious to Mr. Rogers. At the same time he noticed that whenever he asked her to go out with him she made some excuse. It did not occur to him that the excuse was not valid. He supposed he happened to ask her at times when she was engaged. One evening Mr. Rogers called on Miss Jones and waited in the parlor while he was announced. On a lounge lay a piece of white satin, a long white veil and some orange blossoms. While the gentleman was inspecting them, a vague suspicion as to the reason for their being there breaking through into his brain, a maid entered hurriedly. gathered up the articles mentioned and. with a look at Rogers indicating that it had not been intended he should have seen them, carried them out of the

By this time it seemed to Mr. Rogers that he stood on the edge of a precipice and was about to topple over. When the maid re-entered with a message from Miss Jones asking to be excused, since she was very busy, he caught at the mantel for support.

Could it be possible that the girl he had been hanging about so long was going to be married?

The proper thing for Mr. Rogers to do was to excuse the lady on whom he had called and go away. He did no such thing. He sent a message to her begging her to see him for only a few

She came. To carry out her supposed plan she should be in sewing dress. She knew better. She wore the most becoming costume for ordinary wear she possessed. When she saw Mr. Rogers looking as if the bottom had dropped out of the universe she regarded him with a gaze of interested surprise.

"Oh, heavens!" he exclaimed frantically. "How could you have done it?" "Done what?" "You are about to be married?"

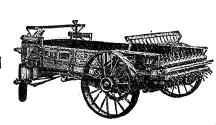

"Yes. Don't deny it. I have seen the wedding dress, the veil, the orange

The New Black Hawk Manure Spreader

The Latest Improved Low Down.

Only Spreader With a Concave.

20 REASONS WHY

it is the simplest and strongest--the most satisfactory one to buy.

REASON NO. 1

Because it has an AUTOMOBILE front axle. What advantage is that?

REASON NO. 2

It provides a short turn and short wheel base, which means a short spreader. This means light draft.

It means there is no neck weight and no side lash of the pole, and has the most simple and convenient set-over pole ever seen on a spreader; readily adapted to the use of 2, 3 or 4 horses.

REASON NO. 4 It means the wheels are under the spreader, where they should be; not projecting out on each end.

REASON NO. 5 This spreader is from 6 to 8 feet shorter than other LOW DOWN spreaders of the same capacity, while the extreme heighth from the ground to the top of the side boards, midway between the wheels, is under 41 inches; our style of construction gives a clearance of several inches more under the machine than is possible on the long coupled LOW DOWN spreaders. This feature is very desirable in trashy fields or in rough traveling, and is also a great convenience when it is necessary to load manure from under the machine.

REASON No. 6

The rear wheels do not project out behind the cylinder, to be filled up with manure on windy days and when working on hillsides.

REASON NO. 7

The cylinder IS NOT on the rear axle. The rear axle has enough to do to carry the load and furnish the power. This means small' repair bills.

REASON NO. 8

Because it is the only spreader that has a CONCAVE, which is the greatest improvement ever put on a manure spreader. REASON NO. 9

The CONCAVE will regulate the backward movement of the load, so there can be no racing backward when going up hill or driving over rough ground.

REASON NO. 10 You can drive up a hillside as steep as a house roof and the load will not slip backward and choke the cylinder.

REASON NO. 11

The CONCAVE will cure 90 per cent of your spreader trouble and breakage, because it prevents choking of the cylinder. REASON NO. 12

The CONCAVE will keep the manure out of the cylinder while loading, so the cylinder is free to start and will not throw out bunches. REASON NO. 13

The CONCAVE causes the spreader to pulverize better, run lighter, spread more evenly, and gives absolute control of the load when going up hill or going down hill. REASON NO. 14 The rear axle of the BLACK HAWK SPREADER has three bearings instead of two. These bearings are held in line with a double wood bolster. This is the best combination ever made for hauling heavy loads over rough ground. REASON NO. 15

The cylinder runs in babited self-aligning bearings. The bed of the spreader is two inches wider behind than in front. Great combination for light draft. REASON NO. 16

The bottom of the BLACK HAWK SPREADER is made of firstclass White Oak. It is stronger, better made, better ironed, better painted, and will last longer than any other.

The material in the BLACK HAWK SPREADER is of the very best. Genuine Oak cylinder bars-Oak cross pieces-Oak bottom, and an Oak frame that will keep its shape; at the same time has a life and flexibility not possible in metal construction. The doubletrees and singletrees are Hickory.

REASON NO. 18

The BLACK HAWK SPREADER is simple, strong and durable. There is not a cog wheel on the whole machine. All nuts that are liable to work loose are secured with lock nuts.

REASON NO. 19

The BLACK HAWK SPREADER has the capacity and light draft that will enable an average team to do a big day's work, and do it right. It has a range of feed from 3 to 75 loads per acre.

REASON NO. 20

Before you buy, take a look at the new LOW DOWN BLACK HAWK SPREADER with CONCAVE. You will like its looks, and you do not need to be an expert or mechanic to see that this spreader is high class and first-class in every respect. It is built to last and give satisfaction. If you appreciate and like to work with a real good tool honestly made, get acquainted with the NEW BLACK HAWK at

The Farming Business, an Illinois agricultural publication, says: An Regular meeting of Council called interesting letter came to the editor's desk the other day. It was not so much the contents of the letter which created the interest as it was the printed letter-head on which it was written.

The letter was typewritten on a sheet of good paper, with a neatly printed letter-head at the top. First came the name of the farm, then the name of the owners, the postoffice and the date.

The name of the owners preached an entire sermon all by itself. It stated that "John Jones and Sons" were the proprietors of this particular farm.

There is the lesson. The man, 7.50 whom we have called John Jones, had taken his sons into partnership with him in the ownership and the man 1.00 agement of this farm. In a general business meeting of the Baptist church Monday evening it was thought advisable to organize a Baptist Y. P. U. which no doubt will be done in the near future. Plans were also made for some improvements of the church. The church has recently purchased a large number of new hymnals—"The Baptist Praise Hymnal." This will add much to the beauty of worship. The pastor is much pleased with present prosperity and future prospects of the church—a church entirely free of debt, fully meetwithin the bonds of Christian love for place in the minds of all right thinking people.

church took full possession of the parsonage last Thursday afternoon while Mrs. Hayward and pastor were out calling. A very happy afternoon was spent in Christian fellowship and the spirit of love was manifested throughout. If only all our people would realize the value and beauty of such gatherings, how much better we would understand each other and how much less would be the chance of any disputes. In the evening the contents of well filled baskets were spread out anda help-yourself-supper was served, and each returned to their home feeling well repaid for being present.

POOL ROOM AND CHURCH. By W. A. Gregory.

Amongst other things mentioned were bowling alleys, billiard tables, gymnasium and swimming pool, and in a flash the devil got to work. Last week a brother minister called at the parsonage to ask if some highly polished work. Now that date.

CHAPTER III.

The Young Hunter. HE shock that had been felt so plainly in the valley had been much more severe in the mountains to the south. In one place an overhanging cliff had split and fallen away from the face of the mountain, tumbling with a mighty roar into the valley below.

As it hurtled down the mountain side the moonlight, shining upon the fresh scar that it had left behind it upon the hill's face, revealed the mouth of : gloomy cave, from which there tum bled the inert figure of an animal. which rolled down the steep declivity in the wake of the mass of rock tha had preceded it, the tearing away of which had opened up the cavern in which it had lain.

For a hundred feet perhaps the body rolled, coming to a stop upon a broad ledge. For some time it lay perfectly motionless, but at last a feeble move ment of the limbs was discernible. Then for another long period it was quiet.

Minutes dragged into hours, and still the lonely thing lay upon the lonely mountain side, while upon the plain below it hungry lions moaned and roared. and all the teeming life of the savage wilds took up their search for food. their sleeping and their love making where they had dropped them in the fright of the earthquake.

At last the stars paled and the eastern horizon glowed to a new day, and then the thing upon the ledge sat up

It was a man. Still partly dazed. he drew his hand across his eyes and looked about him in bewilderment: then, staggering a little, he rose to his feet, and as he came erect, the new sun shining on his bronzed limbs and his shock of black hair, roughly crop ped between sharpened stones, his youth and beauty became startlingly apparent.

He looked about him upon the ground, and not finding that which he sought, turned his eyes upward toward the mountain until they fell upon the cave mouth he had just quitted so precipitately. Quickly he clambered back stone hatchet and to the cavern, his knife beating agaist his bare hips as he climbed.

! For a moment he was lost to view within the cave, but presently he emerged, in one hand a stone tipped spear, which seemed recently to have been broken and roughly spliced with waw tendons, and in the other the severed head of an enormous beast, which more nearly resembled the royal tiger of Asia than it did any other beast. though that resemblance was little closer than is the resemblance of the royal Bengal to a house kitten.

The young man was Nu, the son of Nu.

For a hundred thousand years he had lain hermetically sealed in his rocky tomb, as toads remain in suspended animation for similar periods of time. The earthquake had unsealed his sepulcher, and the rough tumble down the mountain side had induced respiration.

His heart had responded to the pumping of his lungs, and simul-

HOW TO SUCCEED

During the last few years, conditions in all lines of business, even professional life, have changed so completely that every man is waking up to the fact that in order to win success he must specialize and learn to do some one thing and do it well.

So it is with any article that is sold to the people. It must have genuine merit or no amount of advertising will maintain the demand for the article.

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy. From the very beginning the proprietors had so much confidence in it that they invited every one to test it.

As he stood upon the threshold of the cave of Oo, the man hunter, the look of bewilderment grew upon his features as his eyes roved over the panorama of the unfamiliar world which lay spread below him. Slowly he stepped from the cave and began the descent toward the valley for he was very thirsty and very hun gry. Below him he saw animals graz ing upon the broad plain, but even at that distance he realized that they were such as no mortal eye had ever before rested upon.

Warily he advanced, every sense alert against whatever new form of danger might lurk in this strange new world. Had he had any conception of a life after death he would doubtless have felt assured that the earthquake had killed him and that he was now wandering through the heavenly vale But men of Nu's age had not yet con ceived any sort of religion other than a vague fear of certain natural phenomena, such as storms and earthquakes, the movements of the sun and moon and those familiar happenings which first awake the questionings of the primitive.

He saw the sun, but to him it was a different sun from the great, swollen orb that had shone through the thick. humid atmosphere of the Neocene.

From Oo's lair only the day before he had been able to see in the distance the shimmering surface of the restless sea but now so far as eye could reach there stretched an interminable jungle of gently waving tree tops, except for the rolling plain at his feet, where yester day the black jungle of the ape people had reared its lofty fronds.

Nu shook his head. It was all quite beyond him, but there were certain things which he could comprehend and so, after the manner of the self reliant, he set about to wrest his live lihood from nature under the new con ditions which had been imposed upor him while he slept.

First of all, his spear must be at tended to. It would never do to trust to that crude patch longer than it would take him to find and fit a new haft. His meat must wait until that thing was accomplished.

In the meantime he might pick ut what fruit was available in the forest toward which he was bending his steps in search of a long, straight shoot of dwelled. the hard wood which alone would meet his requirements.

In the days that had been Nu's there ione clumps of very straight hardwood from a single tree they might have produced material for a score or more spear shafts, but now Nu must seek the very smallest of saplings, for he had no time to waste in splitting a larger tree, even had he had the necessary wedges and hammers.

Into the forest the youth crept, for. though 100,000 years had elapsed since his birth, he was still to all intent and purpose a youth. Upon all sides he saw strange and wonderful trees, the like of which had never been in the forests of yesterday. The growths were not so luxuriant or prodigious, but for the most part the trees offered suggestions of alluring possibilities to the semiarboreal Nu. for the branches were much heavier and more solid than those of the great tree ferns of his own epoch and commenced much nearer the ground. Catlike he leaped into the lower branches of them reveling in the ease with which he could travel from tree to tree.

Gay colored birds of strange appear ance screamed and scolded at him. Lit tle monkeys hurried, chattering, from his path. Nu laughed. What a quaint. diminutive world it was indeed! Nowhere had he vet seen a tree or creature that might compare in size to the monsters among which he had traveled the preceding day.

The fruits, too, were small and strange. He scarcely dared venture to eat of them lest they be poisonous. If the Jesser are folk would only let him come close enough to speak with them he might ascertain from them which were safe, but for some unaccountable reason they seemed to fear and mistrust him. This, above all other considerations, argued to Nu that he had come in some mysterious way into another world.

Presently the troglodyte discovered a slender, straight young sapling. He came to the ground and tested its strength by bending it back and forth. Apparently it met the requirements of a new shaft.

With his stone hatchet he hewed it off close to the ground, stripped it of branches, and climbing to the safety of the trees again, where he need fear no interruption from the huge monsters of the world he knew, set to work with his stone knife to remove the bark and shape the end to receive his spearhead.

First he split it down the center for four or five inches, and then he cut notches in the surface upon either side of the split portion. Now he carefully unwrapped the rawhide that binds the spearhead into his old haft, and for want of water to moisten it crammed the whole unfragrant mass into his mouth that it might be softened by warmth and saliva.

For several minutes he busied himself in shaping the point of the new shaft that it might exactly fit the in equalities in the shank of the spearhead. By the time this was done the rawhide had been sufficiently moistened to permit him to wind it tightly about the new shaft into which he had set the spearhead.

As he worked he heard the noises of the jungle about him. There were many familiar voices, but more strange ones. Not once had the cave bear spoken; nor Zor, the mighty lion of the Neocene; nor Oo, the saber toothed tiger. He missed the bellowing of the bull bos and the hissing and whistling of monster saurian and amphibian.

To Nu it seemed a silent world Propped up against the bole of the tree before him grinned the hideous head of the man hunter, the only fa miliar object in all the world about

Presently he became aware that the lesser apes were creeping warily closer to have a better look at him. He waited silently until from the tail of his eye he glimpsed one quite near, and then in a low voice he spoke in the language that his allies of yesterday had understood; and though ages had elapsed since that long gone day, the little monkey above him understood. for the language of the apes can never change

"Why do you fear Nu, the son of Nu?" asked the man. "When has he ever harmed the ape people?"

"The hairless ones kill us with sharp sticks that fly through the air," replied the monkey, "or with little sticks that make a great noise that kill us from afar. But you seem not to be of these. We have never seen one like you until now. Do you not wish to kill us?"

"Why should 1?" replied Nu. "It is better that we be friends. All that I wish of you is that you tell me which of the fruits that grow here be safe for me to eat and then direct me to the sea beside which dwell the tribe of Nu my father."

The monkeys had gathered in force by this time, seeing that the strange white are offered no harm to their fel low, and when they learned his wants they scampered about in all directions to gather nuts and fruits and berries for him.

It is true that some of them forgot what they had intended doing before the task was half completed, and end ed by pulling one another's tails and frolicking among the higher branches. or else ate the fruit they had gone to gather for their new friend, but a few there were with greater powers of concentration than their fellows, who returned with fruit and berries and caterpillars, all of which Nu devoured with the avidity of the half famished. Of the whereabouts of the tribe of his father they could tell him nothing. for they had never heard of such a people, or of the great sea beside which he told them that his people

His breakfast finished and his spear repaired, Nu set out toward the plain to bring down one of the beasts he had grown in isolated patches a few had seen grazing there, for his stomach called aloud for flesh. Fruit and dripping.

> Closest to him as he emerged from the jungle browsed a small herd of zebra. They were directly up wind. and between him and them were patches of tall grass and clumps of trees scattered about the surface of the plain.

> Nu wondered at the strange beasts. admiring their gaudy markings as he came closer to them. Upon the edge of the herd nearest him a plump stal lion stood switching his tail against the annoying flies, occasionally raising his head from his feeding to search the horizon for signs of danger, sniffing the air for the telltale scent of an enemy. It was he that Nu selected for his prey.

> Stealthily the cave man crept through the tall grass, scarce a blade moving to the sinuous advance of his sleek body. Within fifty feet of the zebra Nu stopped, for the stallion was giving evidence of restlessness, as though sensing intuitively the near approach of a foe he could neither see > nor hear nor smell. The man, still prone upon his belly, his quarry. With a snort of terror the stallion reared to plunge away, but the spear had found the point behind his shoulder even as he saw the figure of the man rise from the tall grass. As the balance of the herd galloped madly off. their leader pitched headlong to the Nu ran forward with ready knife. but the animal was dead before he reached its side. The great spear had passed through its heart and was protruding upon the opposite side of the body. The man removed the weapon. and with his knife cut several long strips of meat from the plump of danger, sniffing the breeze just as had the stallion he had killed.

His work was but partially com pleted when he caught the scent of man yet a long way off. He knew that he could not be mistaken, yet never had he sensed so strange an There were men coming, he knew, but of the other odors that accompanied them he could make nothing, for khaki and guns and sweaty saddle blankets and the odor of tanned leather were to Nu's nostrils as would Greek have been to his ears.

It would be best, thought Nu, to re treat to the safety of the forest until he could ascertain the number and kind of beings that were approaching. and so, taking but careless advantage of the handier shelter, the cave man sauntered toward the forest; for now he was not stalking game, and never yet had he shown fear in the presence of an enemy.

If their numbers were too great for him to cope with single handed he would not show himself, but none might ever say that they had seen Nu. the son of Nu, run away from dan-

In his hand still swung the head of Oo, and as the man leaped to the low branches of a tree at the jungle's edge to spy upon the men he knew to be advancing from the far side of the plain he fell to wondering how he was to find his way back to Nat-ul that he might place the trophy at her feet and claim her as his mate.

Only the previous evening they had walked together hand in hand along the beach, and now he had not the remotest conception of where that beach

Straight across the plain should be the direction of it, for from that direction had he come to find the lair of Oo But now all was changed.

There was no single familiar landmark to guide him. Not even the ape people knew of any sea nearby, and he himself had no conception as to whether he was in the same world that he had traversed when last the sun shone

HALL I tell you a story about how one peacock lost his pride?" asked

"Oh, yes, do!" cried Jack and Evelyn, and so daddy began. "This peacock lived in a country lane along with chickens and geese and doves. He had a pretty little home, prettier than Mr. Rooster's coop or Mrs. Dove's cote or the house where Mr. and Mrs. Goose lived.

"He was so very proud, however, that he never associated with any of the other barnyard fowl, and when he would go out for a walk with Mrs. Peacock and all the tiny peacocks he never noticed the common fowl at all, but would strut right past them with his tail all spread out and a sharp eye upon his little family to see that they did not look at or speak to any one.

"But one evening Mr. Peacock had to go to a meeting of all the other peacocks in the neighborhood and so left Mrs. Peacock and the little peacocks at

"It was a very fine meeting and broke up rather late. Mr. Peacock spread his tail and swaggered down the village street until he came to the lane where he lived.

"There was a good deal of excitement in the lane he noticed, and just then the cry of 'Fire!' rang out, and some one else shouted: 'It's Mr. Peacock's house! It's been set on fire by a lightning bug!' "Then how Mr. Peacock did drop his tail and scamper, and, sure enough, when he got to his home it was bursting into flames.

"'Where are my wife and daughters?' he cried. 'In the house!' shouted Mr. Rooster. 'Get 'em out; get 'em out!' wailed Mr. Peacock, not attempting to do anything at all to help.

'We can't open the door!' quacked the geese as they ran for water. "'Save my family and I will reward you!' wailed Mr. Peacock. 'I will give each of you one of my beautiful feathers,' and he spread out his tail into a great fan. "'How foolish you are,' spoke up Mr. Rooster. 'We don't want your feathers, and you aren't half so beautiful as you think you are. Just bestir those ugly feet of yours and kick in the door, and then very likely we can save your family. "Mr. Peacock looked down at his feet, dropped his tail and gave the door

RAILROAD RATES were it not for the fact that it is hard to figure out a way of helping the Pere Marquette without giving similar assistance to railroad lives IS BIG QUESTION

The Pere Marquette is really the nub of the entire railroad situation in the legislature. It is the road which needs help the most and the legisla-tors would willingly extend aid to it, which do not need help. At the same time the receivers of the road have assured the railroad that unless they do get aid in order to make its pas-senger business self-sustaining the system will have to be reorganized, which means that it must be split up into several parts and many of its branch lines abandoned.

Michigan we cannot hope to go on.

1 am convinced that while the Pere Marquette needs assistance more than any other road, that there is justice in the demands made by all the railroads for an increased passenger fare. You cannot compare their situation with ours, but all of them are entitled to an increase. We must entitied to an increase. We must have prompt action if the corporate life of this great Michigan railroad is to be saved."

May Ask Commission's Aid.

There is a strong sentiment in the legislature in favor of asking the assistance of the railroad commission. The legislature doubts its ability to handle the great mass of data filed by the roads in support of their appeal for higher rates, and is inclined to be skeptical also of the facts as contained in some of these reports. It is well known that the commission is in close touch with the railroad situa-tion, and that its services in the case would be acceptable to the roads. While the commission could not formulate a law, it could make recommendations to the legislature upon which this body could base a bill and this would be the course followed. The probabilities are, however, that the commission could not take up a problem of this magnitude and make a comprehensive report before the which would make it necessary to call a special session, something which every body concerned wants to avoid if possible. Governor Gets Pruning Knife.

Then there is the item of expense which an extra session would create and this angle of the case is certain to arouse the antagonism of Gov. Ferris, who has given positive orders that the legislature must cut and pare expenses and appropriations at very possible corner.

The governor bought himself a pruning hook when he saw the report of the finance committees of the house and senate and declares that he is going to use it with a vengeance if necessary. The decree of the chief executive is that the appropriations for the present session shall be less than those of two years ago. It was occasioned by the revelations made by the chairmen of the two finance committees appropriations already asked for will total over $21,000,000 if passed.

The governor characterized the figures as "absurd" He admitted that the state is growing and that expenses will continue to be higher year after year, but he holds to the belief that the big expenditures of the last legislature are not necessary this year because there are no such calls from state institutions as existed after Mr. Osborn moved out of office.

Must Cut Off $8,000,000

So it has been agreed by the governor and the finance committees that $8,000,000 shall be cut from the present total of appropriations and that the whole sum must be brought down to the neighborhood of the $13,000,-

This means that some of the big appropriations asked for are due to be slashed and among them will prob ably be Governor Ferris' pet bill which asks $170,000 for the erection of a detention home for delinquent women. The chances are that the legislature will lop off around $100,000 from this

Another bill which is sure to get the knife is the one asking for $50,000 for the Michigan display at the Panama-Pacific exposition. The same may be said of the Bay City house of correction bill, carrying a call for $51,500; the Petoskey Normal School, $200,000; new fish hatcheries, $33,500; Schooleraft county wagon road, $25, 000; and the Spanish War Veterans' claims for $50,000.

There is a general disposition to save the appropriation of a new state offce building. been put aside by every legislature for ten years and the time has arrived when the building is an absolute necessity. Michigan is now paying over $15,000 in rent for quar ters for departments which should be housed in state quarters, and the governor, who has seen the crowded condition of affairs in the old building and who realizes the fact that the state is throwing away money, is anxious to save the other heilding bill, even if it is necessary to refuse the $750,000 appropriation asked

Ferris Appointments All Confirmed. All of Governor Ferris' appointments have finally been confirmed. After jockying over the matter for several weeks the senate finally bolted into the only course left open and indorsed the entire list. ator Murtha, the democratic leader, withdrew his opposition to James Helm, as state dairy and food commissioner.

M. A. C. Students Win Gym." M. A. C. students proved to be good obbyists and won their contest before he legislature for a bill directing an appropriation for a gymnasium. Presto build an auditorium, but the students wanted a gymnasium, and advanced the point that a gymnasium would serve both purposes, while au auditorium would serve only one. The legislature struck out the word "auditorium" from the bill and inserted the word "gymnasium." Now, nswever, in view of the cutting which is to be done, it is doubtful whether their hard earned victory will bear any fruits.

Want Direct Primary. Want Direct Primary.

One result of the fight over the value county delegation at the re-Wayne county delegation at the rebeen the introduction of a bill which would wipe out the convention system altogether and make it necessary to nominate all state officers at the primaries. This is virtually the same as the measures which have been introduced at every legislative same as the measures which have session since the offices of governor and lieutenant governor were taken from the hands of a convention and placed on the primary list. Originally the present bill was intended to cover only the board of regents of the university and the M. A. C. board However the title of the primary law did not seem to cover this, as the bill provided that the governor should appoint the board members, so it was decided to try to place the offices on the primary ballots. Hit at Bonding Company. The liquor committee of the senate has reported out Senator Straight's bill aimed at the Michigan Bonding Company. The bill would prohibit saloonkeepers giving surety signed by bonding company and would make them give personal surety instead. It would absolutely destroy the Michi gan Bonding Company if passed, and made a law. This company is the one which makes a specialty of the bonds of saloonkeepers. Measures similar to this have been defeated in the legislature on two different ocrasions, but the legislature was not "dry" then as it is today, and it is possible that the fate of this measure will read differently.

More Pay for Injured. Rep. Paul Averill of Kent county has introduced a bill which increases the amount of compensation that an injured workingman can claim. Where the maximum is now $3,000 the Averill bill makes it $4,000, and where the maximum weekly payment is now $10 the proposed law would make it $12. The amount of the weekly payment which must be made is increased from 50 per cent to 66 2-3 per cent.

Non-Support a Felony Non-support of a wife and children will be made a felony if Senator Tripp's bill becomes a law. proposes that if a husband is sent to reformatory for failure to support his family that the warden of the prison where he is held shall pay to the county from which the pusoner came, $2.50 per week for the wife's support and 75 cents per week for the support of each child That the bill would make non-support a serious offense is shown by the penalty it proposes, which is nothing less than rom three to five years in the penitentiary.

Heart of Midlothian. "The Heart of Midlothian" was not original with Sir Walter Scott. The name was first applied to the old jail in Edinburgh, which is the capital of Midlothian county. The jail was torn down in 1817.

The reason that we or any others can not do business today on a less margin of profit is because we do not do volume enough in proportion to our expenses.
