Class Play.

Wednesday evening, 12 members of the senior class presented the twoact comedy drama, "Bluffers, or Dust in the Eyes" at the opera house. The play presented many humorous situations and was so well presented that it ranks among the best ever presented by local high school talent. The house was crowded.

541 LOADS OF GRAVE SPREAD

FOR ROAD BEE.

Mile of Highway Improved; Road Bee Is an Established Institution.

Two hundred men participated in the road bee held in seven districts near Cass City Tuesday and they loaded, hauled and spread 541 loads of gravel. Cass City furnished 60 men to shovel gravel, 93 farmers furnished teams and drivers, 18 men spread the gravel on the highway and about 30 more farmers or their helpers assisted in loading in the gravel pits.

The length of road improved Tuesday has not been ascertained and it would be somewhat difficult to figure as considerable patchwork was done Three Acres Plowed in July Are in a few of the districts. On the basis of counting 10 feet of road improved to every load of gravel hauled, over a mile of highway was bettered Tuesday. What Is Believed to Be Its Last Ringing Is Said to Have Recently Taken Place at Philadelphia.

What may prove to be the last ringing of the historic Liberty bell took place in Independence hall at Philadelphia recently.

It was decided to transmit the tones of the bell across the country to San Francisco over the recently completed transcontinental telephone line, partly fulfilling in a literal sense the prophetic words cast on the bell, "Proclaim liberty throughout all the land, unto all the inhabitants thereof." The bell was struck three times with mallets at intervals of five seconds. By an arrangement of three very sensitive transmitters, which were suspended exclude all foreign vibration, the tones were caught and clearly heard over the telephone wires on the Pacific coast. At the same time a phonographic record was made of the turned to her home near here. notes so as to preserve them for pos-

This is the first time that the great bell has been sounded since it was cracked in 1835 while tolling the death of John Marshall, the first chief juscourt. The reason that it may never again be rung is that a new crack, more serious than the old one, has developed in it.

It has been found that the bell is afflicted with the "disease of metal." This is partly responsible for the appearance of the latest fissure and has made it necessary to support its weight on padded props in order to relieve the stress which has gradually been pulling it apart. The new crack is now plainly visible, while only a short time ago it was microscopic. It begins at the upper part of the original fracture, extending from the letter "P" in the "Philadelphia," diagonally a quarter of the way around the circumference, to the letter "y" in "Liberty," near the top. It is believed that the new crack might not have occurred had the bell been allowed to remain at rest after it was first broken. It has, however, been shipped on different occasions to New Orleans, Chicago, Atlanta, Charleston, Boston and St. Louis. That it is actually suffering from a malady known as the "disease of metal," is the description of its ailment in the technical phraseology of the metallurgist, and is not a popular figure of speech. The reason for this distemper is to be found in the history of the bell's casting.

It was originally made by Thomas Lester at London, in 1752, and shipped to Philadelphia. When it was hung to try the sound it was cracked by the clapper. At first it was intended to return it to England, but subsequently two workmen, Pass and Stow, neither of whom was experienced in the art, undertook the recasting in Philadelphia. Obviously the bronze was too brittle, and in order to toughen it, they added approximately ten per cent of copper to the original metal. When the bell was later rehung it was found that too much copper had been used. and, to the chagrin of everyone, the tone was destroyed. The same men again undertook the work, and this time are supposed to have added tin to restore the tone. The third bell was accepted, but too much tin had been used, and the tones were so highly resonant that it was seldom rung .--Popular Mechanics.

> CHAPTER XII. The Inner Boy.

ENROD went home in splendor, pretending that he and Duke were a long procession, and he made enough noise to render the auricular part of the illusion perfect. His own family was already at the lunch table when he arrived, and the parade halted only at the door of the dining room.

"Oh, something!" shouted Mr. Schofield, clasping his bilious brow with both hands. "Stop that noise! Isn't it awful enough for you to sing? Sit down! Not with that thing on! Take that green rope off your shoulder! Now take that thing out of the dining room and throw it in the ashcan Where did you get it?"

"Where did I get what, papa?" asked Penrod meekly, depositing the accordion in the hall just outside the dining room door.

"That da-that third hand concer tina."

"It's a 'cordion," said Penrod, taking his place at the table and noticing that both Margaret and Robert Williams (who happened to be a guest) were growing red.

"I don't care what you call it," said Mr. Schofield irritably. "I want to know where you got it."

Penrod's eyes met Margaret's. Hers had a strained expression. She very slightly shook her head. Penrod sent Mr. Williams a grateful look and might have been startled if he could have seen himself in a mirror at that moment, for he regarded Mitchy-Mitch with concealed but vigorous aversion, and the resemblance would have horri-

"A man gave it to me," he answered gently and was rewarded by the visibly regained ease of his patron's manner, while Margaret leaned back in her chair and looked at her brother with real devotion.

With that he went out crossly, stopping in the hall a moment before passing beyond hearing. And after lunch Penrod sought in vain for his accordion. He even searched the library. where his father sat reading, though, upon inquiry. Penrod explained that he was looking for a misplaced school book. He thought he ought to study a little every day, he said, even during vacation time. Much pleased, Mr. Schofield rose and joined the search, finding the missing work on mathematics with singular ease—which cost stummick. him precisely the price of the book the following September.

Penrod departed to study in the back yard. There, after a cautious survey of the neighborhood, he managed to Thus assured that when he looked for for him, he replaced the cover and betook himself pensively to the highway, discouraging Duke from following by repeated volleys of stones, some imaginary and others all too real.

Arrived upon the populous and festive scene of the dog and pony show, he first turned his attention to the brightly decorated booths which surrounded the tent. The cries of the peanut venders, of the popcorn men, of the toy balloon sellers, the stirring music of the band, playing before the performance to attract a crowd; the shouting of excited children and the barking of the dogs within the tent, all sounded exhilaratingly in Penrod's ears and set his blood a-tingle. Nevertheless he did not squander his money or fling it to the winds in one grand splurge. Instead, he began cautiously with the purchase of an extraordinarily large pickle, which he obtained from an aged negress for his odd cent, too obvious a bargain to be missed. At an adjacent stand he bought a glass of raspberry lemonade (so alleged) and sipped it as he ate the pickle. He left nothing of either.

Next he entered a small restaurant tent and for a modest nickel was supolied with a fork and a box of sardines nreviously onened, it is true, but more than half full. He consumed the sardines utterly, but left the tin box and the fork, after which he indulged in an inexpensive half pint of lukewarm cider at one of the open booths. Mug in hand, a gentle glow radiating toward his surface from various centers of activity deep inside him, he paused for breath, and the cool, sweet cadences of the watermelon man fell delectably upon his ear:

"Ice cole watermelon; ice cole watermelon! The biggest slice of ice cole. ripe, red, ice cole, rich an' rare: the biggest slice of ice cole watermelon ever cut by the hand of man! Buy our ice cole watermelon!"

Penrod, having drained the last drop of cider, complied with the watermelon man's luscious entreaty and received a round slice of the fruit, magnificent in circumference and something over an inch in thickness. Leaving only the really dangerous part of the rind behind him, he wandered away from the vicinity of the watermelon man and supplied himself with a bag of peanuts, which, with the expenditure of a dime for admission, left a quarter still warm in his pocket. However, he managed to "break" the coin at a stand inside the tent, where a large, oblong paper box of popcorn was handed him with 20 cents change. The box was too large to go into his pocket, but having seated himself among some wistful Polack children he placed it in his lap and devoured the contents at leisure during the performance. The popcorn was heavily larded with partially boiled molasses, and Penrod sandwiched mouthfuls of peanuts with gobs of this mass until the peanuts were all gone. After that he ate with less avidity, a sense almost of satiety beginning to manifest itself to him. and it was not until the close of the performance that he disposed of the last morsel.

He descended a little heavily to the outflowing crowd in the arena and bought a caterwauling toy balloon, but showed no great enthusiasm in manipulating it. Near the exit as he came out was a hot waffle stand which he had overlooked, and a sense of duty obliged him to consume the three waffles, thickly powdered with sugar, which the waffle man cooked for him upon command.

They left a hottish taste in his mouth; they had not been quite up to his anticipation, indeed, and it was with a sense of relief that he turned to the hokey-pokey cart which stood close at hand, laden with square slabs to," said Mr. Schofield. "Who was of Neapolitan ice cream wrapped in paper. He thought the ice cream would be cooling, but somehow it fell short he had consumed in company with of the desired effect and left a peculiar

He walked away, too languid to blow his balloon, and passed a fresh taffy booth with strange indifference. A bare armed man was manipulating the taffy over a hook, pulling a great white mass to the desired stage of "candying," but Penrod did not pause to watch the operation. In fact, he averted his eyes (which were slightly glazed) "Well, I was just walking alone, and in passing. He did not analyze his motives. Simply he was conscious that he preferred not to look at the mass of taffy.

For some reason he put a considerable distance between himself and the taffy stand, but before long halted in the presence of a red faced man who flourished a long fork over a small cooking apparatus and shouted jovially: "Winnies! Here's your hot winnies! Hot winny wurst! Food for the overworked brain, nourishing for the weak stummick, entertaining for the tired business man! Here's your hot winnies! Three for a nickel, a half a dime, the twentieth pot of a dollah!"

This above all nectar and ambrosia was the favorite dish of Penrod Schofield. Nothing inside him now craved it-on the contrary. But memory is the great hypnotist. His mind argued against his inwards that opportunity knocked at his door. "Winny wurst" was rigidly forbidden by the home authorities. Besides, there was a last nickel in his pocket, and nature protested against its survival; also the red faced man had himself proclaimed his wares nourishing for the weak Penrod placed the nickel in the red hand of the red faced man.

But he felt obliged to conceal that book again no one would find it his poor opinion of them for fear of offending the red faced man. He ate without haste or eagerness, so slowly indeed that he began to think the red faced man might dislike him as a deterrent of trade. Perhaps Penrod's mind was not working well, for he failed to remember that no law compelled him to remain under the eye of the red faced man, but the virulent repulsion excited by his attempt to take a bite of the third sausage inspired him with at least an excuse for post-

He moved sluggishly away, wishing he had not thought of dinner. A side show, undiscovered until now, failed to arouse his interest, not even exciting a wish that he had known of its extime he stared without comprehension at a huge canvas poster depicting the chief attraction, the weather worn colors conveying no meaning to his torpid-eye. Then, little by little, the poster became more vivid to his consciousness. There was a greenish tinted person in the tent it seemed who thrived upon a reptilian diet.

Suddenly Penrod decided that it was time to go home.

"Margaret," called Mr. Schofield from he open door of a bedroom, "Margaret, where did you put that aromatic am monia? Where's Margaret?"

But he had to find the aromatic spirits of ammonia himself, for Margaret was not in the house. She stood in the shadow beneath a maple tree near the street corner, a guitar case in her hand. and she scanned with anxiety a briskly approaching figure. The arc light. swinging above, revealed this figure as that of him she awaited. He was passing toward the gate without seeing her. when she arrested him with a fateful whisper.

"Bob!" Mr. Robert Williams swung about nastily. "Why, Margaret!"

"Here, take your guitar," she whispered hurriedly. "I was afraid if faher happened to find it he'd break it ill to pieces!" "What for?" asked the startled Rob-

Only he didn't say 'who'. He said something horrible, Bob! And Penrod thought he was going to die, and he said you gave it to him, and, oh, it was just pitiful to hear the poor child, Bob, because he thought he was dying, you see, and he blamed you for the whole thing. He said if you'd only let him alone and not given it to him he'd have grown up to be a good man, and now he istence when he had money. For a couldn't! I never heard anything so

In the darkness Mr. Williams' facial expression could not be seen, but his roice sounded hopeful.

"Is he-is he still in a great deal of pain?" "They say the crisis is past." said

Margaret, "but the doctor's still up there. He said it was the acutest case of indigestion he had ever treated in the whole course of his professional

With chill dignity she withdrew, entered the house and returned to the sick room, leaving the young man in outer darkness to brood upon his crime-and upon Penrod. That sincere invalid became convalescent upon the third day, and a week elapsed, then, before he found an opportunity to leave the house unaccompanied-save by Duke. But at last he set forth and approached the Jones neighborhood in high spirits, pleasantly conscious of his pallor, hollow cheeks and other perquisites of illness provocative of interest.

One thought troubled him a little because it gave him a sense of inferiority to a rival. He believed, against his will, that Maurice Levy could have Benkelman and J. B. Cootes as memsuccessfully eaten chocolate creams, bers of the Board of Review. die, and, of course, no little piece of licorice sticks, lemon drops, jaw breaksardines, cinnamon drops, watermelon, pickles, popcorn, ice cream and sausage with raspberry lemonade and cider. Penrod had admitted to himself that Maurice could do it and afterward attend to business or pleasure without the slightest discomfort, and this was probably no more than a fair estimate of one of the great constitutions of all time. As a digester, Maurice Levy would have disappointed a Borgia.

Fortunately, Maurice was still at Atlantic City, and now the convalescent's heart leaped. In the distance he saw Marjorie coming-in pink again, with a ravishing little parasol over her head. And alone! No Mitchy-Mitch was to mar this meeting.

Penrod increased the feebleness of his steps, now and then leaning upon the fence as if for support. "How do you do, Marjorie?" he said

Papa says you haven't got near sense enough to come in out of the rain after what you did to poor little Mitchy-Mitch"-

"Yes, and he's sick in bed yet!" Marjorie went on with unabated fury. "And papa says if he ever catches you in this part of town"-

"What?"

"What'd I do to Mitchy-Mitch?" gasped Penrod. "You know well enough what you did to Mitchy-Mitch!" she cried. "You gave him that great, big, nasty two cent piece!" "Well, what of it?"

"Mitchy-Mitch swallowed it!" "What!"

"And papa says if he ever just lays eyes on you once in this neighborhood"—

But Penrod had started for home. In his embittered heart there was increasing a critical disapproval of the Creator's methods. When he made pretty girls, thought Penrod, why couldn't he have left out their little brothers!

TRACTORS TO REDUCE HIGH LIVING COST

New York are too sensible for war." Mr. Ford begged pardon for his brief excursion from the subject in hand. Then he spoke of his early attempts to plow with a steam engine more than 30 years ago.

"Why, I even used my steam engine to haul lumber with, and I was successful then," he said. "Of course, my machine wasn't perfect. It wasn't until I developed the motor for the Ford car that the solution for the tractor engine was at hand. The identical engine that is used in the motor car will be used in the tractor. Long before I thought of the great development of the motor car I thought of the farm tractor and its possibilities.

"As it stands now, the tractor engine is about perfect. There are just a few little touches I want to add to it and then it will be what I want it and what I have been trying to make it all these years. There little changes are not essential, but they are important, and I will spend the rest of the summer working them out. I mean by that that I will put one day a week in on my farm, working at the engine.

"I have 10 engines on my farm here now. One machine does the work of five horses. I expect to be able to make them so they will sell for $200 or less, or less than one horse is worth. Can you see what a great economy this is going to be? Add to that proposition that the machine is so simple that a child can operate it, and you can glimpse its economic possibilities. I guarantee to teach anybody to operate my tractor in less than two hours."

Mr. Ford was asked how far he had experimented with the farm tractor. "I have done everything I can think to prove its efficacy," he said. 'Last week we used one to haul a shaft of steel, weighing 50,000 pounds, to Toledo. I guess that looks as if it can do some work.

"As I said, it will take 10 years to develop the new plant to anything like I want it. Long before that time I expect to be turning out 4,000,000 engines a year to surply the tractors and the motor cars."

What Ford Says Tractor Plant Will Do.

It will strike the hardest blow yet struck at the high cost of living. It will reduce the cost of tilling the soil by one-half to one-third.

It will keep young men on the arm and produce food for an inreased population.

It will tend to foster the idea of peace, which Mr. Ford believes is firmly entrenched in the hearts of the American people.

It will give work to 25,000 men and more at the start.

It will result in a prosperous suburban community which some day will be a part of a Greater Detroit.

It will mean a big boom in Great Lakes shipping.

BAD AXE-Within the last two weeks five carloads of horses for European battlefields have been shipped from here. The price paid for the animals approximates $10,-000. The average life of a horse in war is said to be about three weeks.

HARBOR BEACH-For the last six weeks about twenty expert constructors of all the builders branches were busy in the summer resort to finish a magnificent cottage for Henry Ford, the Detroit auto magnate, and they certainly did some fine work. All that is known to the art of plumbing, and electrical sciences is well represented in this summer home, and by next Saturday Harbor Beach can boast of having within its city limits Mr. Henry Ford and family, the richest auto manufacturer in the word.

"A sane Fourth's the thing," observed the portly mayor. He glanced across the table at his wife, then let his wandering gaze come to rest en his pretty daughter June. "There's no sense in burning powder and making a racket to celebrate our nation's independence; I say, let's have a sane Fourth."

"Of course we'll have a picnic," planned the mayor's better half. "The tables can be set under the trees in that grove by the station. We'll get some carpenters to contribute work on them and a speaker's stand."

"The sooner I talk it over with the business men the better," decided May or Munshaw. "I'll talk 'em into prohibiting the sale of fireworks. We'll keep 'em for evening and have 'em set off under the auspices of the village. Our councilmen will officiate.

"Dinner ready," trumpeted Dan Hughes of the megaphone voice. "Everybody set up! And those what can't set 'll have to stand!" Instantly the shifting crowd coalesced like magic about the long table with Reverend Fanning in a position to say grace, and the mayor stationed at his right. A profound silence settled over the multitude during this invocation, then a buzz of laughter burst forth with redoubled gayety.

"Superintendent Eldridge will now read the corner stone of American liberty," announced Mayor Munshaw at the close of the song. He beamed out over the perspiring throng. The celebration was a great success. Not a firecracker in the hands of little boys had disturbed the peace. His patriarchal beard hung straight down over his white vest. He was a dignified and imposing figure. As if actuated by an automatic device the superintendent of Dashville high school rose to his feet as the mayor sat heavily down. His carefully-thought-out preliminary remarks lengthened almost to a lecture while his patient audience stared at him stonily. Above domed a sky of brass that loaned a sulphurous hue to the furnace-hot atmosphere. Fans slowly waved. Parboiled countenances were turned toward the speaker. He began, at last, to read:

"When, in the course of human events," he intoned sonorously, "it becomes necessary for one people

Sp-t-t! Bing! Bang! Sp-t-t! sounded the staccato notes of something that drowned the reader's full tones. Bing! Bang! Roar! Sp-t-t! Projectiles darted like mad in every direction while the choir fled wildly from the place and the councilmen grappled with discharging fire-

"Someone musta threw a match!" "That's the work of a cigarette fiend!"

"Bet-chu some boy did that a purpose," were some of the shouted comments. Meanwhile the frantic efforts of the town council released dormant rockets, pin-wheels, set pieces. The startled audience scattered right and left in confusion. Never since 1776 had the Declaration of Independence been so fittingly introduced and forcibly presented. Order was finally restored. People reseated themselves on the benches. Red countenances again burden.

cars 'll explode!" They did. At least flames shot upward and seemed to greedily lick the sky. With a dull, prolonged roar ascending fire tongued the heavens while every man, woman and child of Dashville deserted the picnic grounds and raced for the spot. Even Mayor Munshaw managed to join a hastily formed fire brigade and assist in passing water to men on the depot roof. In the thick of fire and smoke he worked valiantly. And when he emerged from the ruins before the final collapse no one would have recognized the mayor of Dashville. His luxuriant beard was no more. Fire had ruthlessly mowed declared another. "Or a cigar stub," guessed a third. Straggling at the rear of the last babe-laden woman were June and Tom Norris. June was frightened. She wanted someone to remain at her side and look closely after her welfare. So Tom accepted the office. They turned their backs on the fire and slowly sauntered toward the depopulated town. Never had Tom seen June more charming. Her gown was like a bit of mid-summer sky trimmed with fleecy cloud. Her blue eyes were luminous with love. Her cherry red lips were tempting sweet but when he would have begged a kiss timidity intervened. Instead he looked at the sky and saw, instead of ruby lips, a funnel-shaped cloud of copper hue that approached at meteor speed.

"A cyclone!" he shouted and caught June up in his arms. There was no time for delay. Swift danger swept away his temerity. He forgot that he was but a struggling bank clerk and June the daughter of Dashville's wealthy mayor. Like any knight of the valorous knight of old who wielded spear in defense of his love, he was forced to the ignominious device of seeking a cellar. It would be the colly and respected by the destroyer ed spear in defense of his love, he only spot respected by the destroyer. preme Master. In that supreme mo- sincere condolence in this deep afflicment their meeting lips sealed their troth. Then they became aware that the destroying agent had passed, leaving desolation in its wake. The house above them was gone, revealing a lurid sky. About them were strewn the ruins of a razed village. Dashville was mainly kindling wood and scattered stone. Dust-begrimed, disheveled but absurdedly happy the two climbed from the cellar and sought the mayor. The station where Tom Norris owned property was unscathed. It was fortunately at one side of the path of the ruin that included the Munshaw residence and over half the town. He would offer refuge to his future father-in-law and at the same propitious moment ask his daughter's hand in marriage. They met dismayed residents searching among the debris for shattered homes yet thankful for their lives. The Fourth of July picnic had saved them. But for the gathering at the grove many would have been caught in crashing buildings and perished. Finally the mayor, or what was left of him, loomed in view.

"Papa," cried June when she recognized the wreck of her once spic-andspan parent, "Tom saved me! Carried me into a cyclone cellar! But whatever happened to you?"

"Nothing's happened to me," testily declared the foremost citizen of Dash-ville. "Nothing on earth's happened that's gone clean looney!"

"Why, papa," said June with a happy glance at her lover, "I think this has been a perfectly beautiful Fourth of July!"

Supt. Straube has devised these fire alarm signals: Following the general fire alarm, one whistle blast will indicate that the fire is in Dist. No. 1, the northeast quarter of the rillage; two blasts for Dist. No. 2, the southeast corner; three blasts for Dist. No. 3, the southwest corner; four blasts for Dist. No. 4, the northwest corner. TREATING HOGS FOR CHOLERA

Summary of Results Obtained From Use of Serum Are Interesting as Well as Valuable.

(By GEORGE H. GLOVER, Colorado Experiment Station.)

In a recent report of the chief of the bureau of animal industry, a summary of the results obtained from the use of serum are interesting and valuable as indicating the usefulness of John Wentworth. serum in infected herds.

Of 16.152 hogs, where 70 per cent were sick with cholera and the serum was given to all of them, only 24.3 per cent died. Without the serum a loss of 75 per cent might have been expected. The value of the serum as a cure is apparent. In 11.776 hogs that were well when given the serum but kept in herds with sick hogs, there was a loss of 2.9 per cent, while in a total of 13,578 hogs that were healthy, then given the serum, and later exposed to cholera, there was a loss of only a little over one-half of one per cent.

In the record kept by the Colorado Agriculture college, we find that in the San Luis valley, where hogs were not given the serum until the disease appeared, there was a lcss of about 22 per cent.

INDIVIDUAL HOUSE FOR HOGS

Among Other Advantages They Are Light, Easily Moved to Fresh Soil -Easy to Construct.

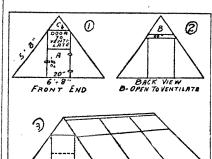

The individual hog house for farrowing, I think, has many advantages over the combination sort, writes C. S. Bratt of Furnas county, Nebraska, in Independent Farmer.

They are light, easily moved from one lot to another, or to fresh soil in the same lot, which is a good preventive of disease.

The animal heat from the sow has a greater influence on the temperature in cold weather than in the ordinary combination hog house.

I have used individual houses seven feet long, seven feet wide of lumber, but this year have added some made of galvanized sheet iron nailed on a wooden frame. These are six feet eight inches square at the base. They are warm and dry. I do not consider them as good for warm weather owing to the sun's heat having so much influence on them.

Any farmer can make these sheet ron houses, as they are quite simple

SOLID TEETH ARE ESSENTIAL

Look at Ewe's Mouth Before Buying— Full-Mouthed Animal Can Be Used for Breeding.

In buying ewes be sure they stand well on their feet and have good straight backs and good mouths. "Broken-mouthed" ewes, that is, ewes with broken teeth or badly worn down should not be bought.

A sheep has one pair permanent incisor teeth when it is a year old, two pairs or full mouth at three years old. A full-mouthed ewe can be used for breeding even though she is as much as five years old.

SWINE NOTES.

Use enough litter to keep the pens

dry.
When scouring give the pigs a good dose of common baking soda. Keep the pens, troughs and barrels clean. Don't overlook that.

It is of importance that the brood sow be kept in a vigorous thrifty condition, not too fat but full of vitality. Feed the brood sow protein foods as much as possible and avoid feeds rich in fat-forming elements.

The first requisite in the hog business is a good hog house well ventilated, set with ends north and south.

Brood Mares.

While the brood mares should not be jammed about and abused, they do require gentle exercise, light driving and moderate work to keep their digestion, respiration and circulation in good, healthy, normal condition. Idleness and inactivity are not conducive to the production of strong, vigorous offspring.

The editor of an Illinois exchange is a public benefactor and when he dies the people of his county ought to erect a monument to the honor of his memory. He has discovered a new to get rid of mosquitos. He tells you simply to rub alum on your face and hands. When the mosquito takes a bite it puckers his gazoopie so it can't sting. Then it sits down in a damp place, tries to dig the pucker loose, catches its death of cold and dies of pneumonia.

When the boat came alongside he politely informed them of his plight, and added that he was a country gentleman returning home from a pleasure excursion he had made with his family. The presence of his mother, wife and children added weight to this story. The commander of the English boat was only a coxswain, his companions common sailors. There was noth-
