LIFE CERTIFICATE PRESENTED

EDMUND BROTHERTON HON-ORED BY BROTHERS OF TY-LER LODGE.

Recently Elected Officers Were Installed and Lodge Enjoyed Oyster Supper Monday Evening.

Members of Tyler Lodge, F. & A. M., spent a delightful evening at their lodge rooms Monday when the recently elected officers were installed, the first degree conferred on a candidate and a life certificate of membership presented to one of the lodge members.

Grand Master C. W. McKenzie of Kalamazoo presided as installing officer, Edward Pinney as grand marshal and J. W. Hamblin as grand chaplain. The following were the members invested with office at the service which was both impressive and ably conducted: Worshipful Master, Richard Bayley; Senior Warden, Arthur Flynn; Junior Warden, M. B. Auten; Treasurer, E. H. Pinney; Secretary, I. A. Fritz; Senior Deacon, E. McKim; Junior Deacon, G. W. West; Stewards, Neil R. Kennedy and I. W. Hall; Tiler, N. Gable.

One of the interesting and pleasing features of the evening was the presentation of a life membership certificate to Edmund Brotherton, who for more than 40 years has been a faithful member of Tyler Lodge, has held various offices and in 1892 presided as Worshipful Master. Tyler Lodge was instituted in June 1873. Mr. Brotherton and one other candidate were the first to have the first degree conferred upon them as soon as the lodge received its dispensation from the Grand Lodge. This was on Aug. 2, 1873. On the 23rd of the same month, he received the second degree and on Sept. 20, 1873, he was made a Master Mason. Charter members of Tyler Lodge were Samuel C. Armstrong, Alex B. McCullough, Geo. B. Hunt, Almon A. Polly, John J. McKinney, Travis Leach, Alfred Davis, Stephen Russell and Lonson Wilcox.

Following Monday evening's degree work, an oyster spread was enjoyed by the members.

FARMER'S WIFE FAVORS REST ROOM

SAYS THAT INSTITUTION
WOULD BE GOOD THING FOR CASS CITY.

December 24.

Editor Chronicle

I was interested reading H. C. Hayward's letter on "Pool Room or Rest Room." The rest room for Cass City is an excellent idea. I am a farmer's wife, and would say out with the pool room and have a rest room. I am sure there are few ladies either in city or vicinity who would not vote for a rest room.

It is true the ladies from the country do suffer for the want of some place to rest when we have to wait in the city. We have no place but to walk the streets or stand in the stores in the way of the merchants. Whereas, this is causing so many people to send to the mail order houses for their goods. We can sit in the warm room and write out our orders, hand it to the mail carrier, and in a few days the goods are brought to our door. For the good of Cass City and surrounding country some one should get busy and have a rest room.

GRAND JURY ADJOURNS.

The grand jury in Sanilac county which was called some weeks ago at the instigation of Prosecuting Attorney Farr to investigate alleged violations of the local option law has adjourned. Its findings have not been made public, but is rumored that several arrests are to be made soon.

NEW LAW OFFICE.

J. C. Corkins and H. G. Leavens, local attorneys, have opened a joint office over the Cass City Bank. Because of their other duties, the time they can put in at the office is necessarily limited, but they expect to have it open every evening and all day Saturday.

The two attorneys are not in partnership in a business sense, but established the office as a convenience both for themselves and their clients. Mr. Corkins is a graduate of the Detroit College of Law and has practiced here several years. Mr. Leavens is a graduate of the law department of the University of Michigan.

GOLDEN WEDDING CHRISTMAS DAY

MR. AND MRS. LUKE H. WRIGHT
MARRIED ON DEC. 25
50 YEARS AGO.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Luke H. Wright was the scene of a happy gathering on Christmas Day when their children and grandchildren who reside in the Thumb met at their home in Grant township to celebrate their golden wedding anniversary. This day was also the wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Guppy, the latter a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wright, and the birthdays of Gladys Tuckey and Ada Wright, both grandchildren. A big dinner was a feature of the festivities.

Mr. and Mrs. Wright were married in Salford, Canada, in 1865 and moved to Michigan the following year. They settled in the woods in Elkland township, on the farm one mile east and two miles north of Cass City which they cleared and improved and where their children were born. Fifteen years ago they left the farm and moved to Cass City where they lived for ten years. Five years ago they moved to Grant township, to the farm nearly eight miles north of Cass City where they have since resided.

Mr. Wright is 71 years of age and Mrs. Wright 65 years. Both are enjoying good health for persons of their advanced ages. Two of their sons in the Canadian Northwest and a daughter in Wisconsin were unable to attend the golden wedding. Those present included the following: Mr. and Mrs. Harry Guppy and children and Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Tuckey and children, all of Cass City, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. O. Wright and children of Pigeon, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Heller and children of Bad Axe and Mr. and Mrs. John Day of Grant.

The friends of Mr. and Mrs. Wright unite in wishing them many more happy anniversaries.

BASKET BALL SCHEDULE

Manager Dickinson Has Arranged Seven Games; Others Pending.

Joseph Dickinson, manager of the basket ball team of the Cass City high school, has arranged for seven games thus far this season, three of them to be played at Cass City. He is corresponding with managers of teams at Saginaw, Flint, Bay City and Crosswell and hopes to be able to arrange for contests with all of these city teams.

The schedule thus far completed is: Jan. 7, Owendale at Owendale. Jan. 14, Elkton at Cass City. Jan. 21, Bad Axe at Bad Axe. Jan. 28, North Branch at Cass City.

Feb. 4, Elkton at Elkton. Feb. 11, Bad Axe at Cass City. Feb. 25, North Branch at North Branch.

The local team members will be Everett Higgins, Clarence Burt, Clayton Parker, Harold Benkelman and Nelson Higgins.

TRIP TO GLACIER NATIONAL PARK

HARRY CAMPBELL WRITES IN-TERESTINGLY OF FIVE-DAY HIKE.

Course of Party Was a Circuit Including the Chief Points of Interest in the Big Park.

Everett Higgins received the following letter from Harry Campbell of Kalispell, Montana, a former Cass boy, who tells of a delightful trip he and three companions made to Glacier National Park.

Kalispell, Montana,
December 18, 1915.

Dear Everett:

I suppose you know it is a long time ago that I wrote to you last, however, if the length of a letter can make up for lost time, I believe this will more than answer the purpose.

You haven't told me yet that you intend to come west. I wish you would. You should be here now to help us eat two nice big deer we have strung up in the woodshed.

Although you never say much about yourself, I read of your football work in the Cass City Chronicle. You are doing fine.

I wrote out a rough outline of a rather long letter concerning a trip in Glacier National Park which I intended to send to you. However, I will make another attempt this time.

I have been in Glacier National Park at four different times. The first trip, seven of us young fellows went up and camped ten days at the head of Lake McDonald; again four of us went up for a two days' hike and the third time I went on an excursion. These trips, however, did not extend far into the Park and so we planned a fourth trip which I will now tell you about.

There were four of us who took the trip, which consisted of a five day hike in the best part of the Park which is well opened up.

Two friends, Tom and Everett, with Grant and myself composed the party. We planned to carry everything on our backs which we would need during the hike. We took no tent, sleeping in the open and depending on good weather.

Our packs consisted of a blanket each and cooking utensils and grub besides cameras and field glasses. On our way to the train we weighed our loads to see what we were carrying and found Everett had twelve pounds, Tom twenty-one pounds, Grant twenty-four pounds and myself over thirty pounds.

These packs, however, were not yet permanent as our trip that evening was riding on the train, stage and boat and we were not particular to even up the load.

From Belton (the western entrance to the Park) we took the stage three miles over Uncle Sam's fine park road which is lined on either side of its winding course by dense forests of fir, tamarack and cedar, making a very beautiful drive.

We soon came to the foot of Lake McDonald where we got on the boat. Continued on second page.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

A farmers' institute will be held at the Grant M. E. church Tuesday, Jan. 4, under the management of Manley J. Endersbe, township president.

N. A. Clapp, state speaker, will give talks on "Soil Sanitation and Rotation of Crops" and "Raising Alfalfa and Why" at the afternoon session. "Wasting and Saving Barnyard Manures" by Jos. Moore and "Hogs as Money Makers" by Jas. Maharg are other subjects which will be considered. C. E. Hartzell will sing a solo.

Several musical numbers will be given on the evening's program and the state speaker and W. H. Sparling, Huron Co. school commissioner, will give addresses.

The Beaulay Ladies' Aid will serve meals at the parsonage.

MUNICIPAL XMAS TREE AT SANDUSKY

YOUNGSTERS HURRY TO "GET IN LINE" TO RECEIVE THEIR GIFTS.

Sandusky, Michigan, Dec. 27, 1915.
To Readers of the Chronicle:

It is almost seven months since we left the good old town of Cass City, where the undersigned spent 21 years, and learned to hold the residents in such high esteem, and perhaps some of them would like to hear from us again. The place of our abode, Sandusky, is not far removed from old scenes, yet far enough that we cannot call Cass City our home any more. We are learning to like this town as we become acquainted with the residents.

Some events worthy of comment have taken place since we lived here and we have come to the conclusion that Sandusky folks never do things by halves. The ceremonies in connection with the laying of the corner stone of the new court house were an attestation to her ability to do things right.

And again last Friday she celebrated in a royal way and welcomed Santa Claus by having a municipal Christmas tree. A tall Christmas tree was erected on the lawn in front of the court house, and decorated with bells, pop corn, glittering tinsel and lighted with many colored electric lights. A large electric star gleamed forth from the top of the tree.

Announcement had been made that Santa Claus would arrive at three o'clock in the afternoon—and he did—and was greeted by a multitude of boys and girls of all ages. There were present some little tots and some middle-aged tots, yes, and many whose hair was as white as that of Santa Claus, and all cheered and cheered as the good old Saint drove around in his heavily laden sleigh drawn by a magnificent pair of bay horses. We didn't learn where he had left his reindeer, tired out, I suppose, and resting somewhere. Finally Santa Claus pulled his prancing steeds up beside the glittering tree and tarried awhile in his long journey to listen to the singing of the carols in which many of the gathering took part. Unusually sweet the voices blended in the open air and a hush came over the large crowd, as the melodies were taken up one after another, concluding with the familiar song, "Joy to the World."

Then came the distribution of gifts from Santa Claus' sleigh. A ticket was given to each little boy and girl which entitled the child to a sack of candy and nuts, topped off with an apple and a banana. And how they did scamper pell-mell to "get in line" to receive that gift. The giving of these presents concluded the afternoon program, yet the crowd lingered until late supper-time around the tree, and the huge bon-fire which sent forth its cheerful warmth.

The tree was left standing and in the evening presented a handsome appearance with its glittering lights, surmounted by the star, typical of that star which guided those Wise Men so many years ago. The tree will be left until the New Year.

Respectfully,
MRS. LOTTIE M. SCHMIDT.

NEW MILL OPENS IN TEN DAYS

NEW MACHINERY INSTALLED DRIVEN BY LATEST TYPE MOTORS.

Directors Have Placed Old Plant in Splendid Condition; Products to Be of Highest Grades.

The Elkland Milling Co. expects to be ready to have the mill running within ten days. All new machinery is being used and the power is being furnished by three of the latest type Westinghouse motors.

Notwithstanding the fact that the directors have been handicapped by lack of funds caused by subscribers for stock being very slow to settle, they have whipped the old plant into splendid condition and are only waiting the finishing of wiring by the city to be in complete readiness to run.

Every director is determined to have the mill turn out only the highest grade work and will always work to that end.

SEVEN BEANS BRING $920.

Seven beans brought Geo. Bennett, of Stilson, $920 this fall when he marketed his crop. About four years ago Mr. Bennett was given seven yellow kidney beans by A. L. Chamberlain. He took them home and planted them in his garden. Year after year he planted and saved the seed from the season before until he had a number of bushels of good healthy seed. This year Mr. Bennett had enough seed from four years growing to sow 10 acres and from this he threshed 230 bushels of beans which he sold for $4 a bushel. A peculiar incident of the fact is that at one time this year the beans were under four inches of water, which stood on them for some time.—Sandusky Republican.

BEWARE BAD AIR; MEANS PNEUMONIA

IMPROPER VENTILATION GREAT-EST CAUSE OF DISEASE SAYS HEALTH BOARD.

Secretary Burkart, of the state board of health, sends out a warning to Michigan residents regarding pneumonia and embodies in his advice some cold weather advice. He says:

"Most of the medical men who have made a study of diseases of the respiratory tract are agreed upon the fact that, except in case of undue exposure, it is defective ventilation incident to the cold that increases the prevalence of pneumonia rather than the decrease in temperature.

"The greatest preventive measure is to have at all times plenty of fresh air to breathe, when in doors. Theaters and other places where crowds assemble and remain for some time, crowded street cars, where sneezing and coughing are induced by the pent up foul or super-heated air, are all dangerous, even the homes are not always properly ventilated.

"The average office where people spend six to eight hours a day is so improperly ventilated that it constitutes a menace to the occupants. Superheated offices cause more danger than underheated, because in the majority of instances, instead of decreasing the temperature gradually, the windows are thrown open and a sudden drop in temperature chills the perspiring worker and the inevitable consequences follow.

"Dress, one of the most potent 'preventive measures,' receives the least consideration. This no doubt is responsible for much of the trouble. The lower extremities, particularly the feet and legs proper (knee to foot) are rarely properly clad. Thin soles and uppers prevail in the fashion of footwear, and the stockings are of the 'open work' or other equally useless variety. Girls work all day in a heated office or store, rush out into the cold rain or snow without any protection to the feet other than they have had during the indoor work. The modern skirt does not cover the lower extremities, and undershirts are conspicuous by their thinness, or absence."

The lake is considered one of the most beautiful lakes in America. It is about twelve miles long and three miles wide and surrounded at its upper end by high rugged peaks while along its sides are lower wooded mountains forming green rolling slopes. When the lake is quiet the reflection of the green and barren mountains in the water is a sight well worth seeing.

In an hour's time we were at Lewis' big hotel near the head of the lake. Near here we found a place on the shore where we had a late supper and spread our blankets for the night.

From here the real trip was to begin. As we had planned, our course was a circuit including the chief points of interest, twice crossing the continental divide and going by Lincoln Peak, Lake Ellen Wilson, Gunsight Pass, Going-to-the-Sun Mt., Piegan Pass, McDermott Lake, Many-Glacier Hotel, Iceberg Lake, Swift Current Pass, and McDonald Creek.

We awoke the next morning with a few sore spots between us and the soft side of the rocks upon which we slept. We succeeded in getting off about 8:00 a. m. which was none too early.

The distance from the lake to our noon stop was six miles but all up grade and supposed to be the longest six miles in the United States, and I believe it is, especially when one has a twenty-five pound pack to carry. The first half of this distance was through timber and sweat and the second half above the timber but more sweat. We were going east on a south slope and were well aware that the sun was shining.

About one o'clock we sat down by an ice cold stream which came from large banks of snow above, and prepared our noon meal. After eating we noticed that chipmunks, squirrels and gophers were well aware of our presence, for they came nearer and nearer after the crumbs from the meal and by keeping in breathless silence we coaxed a little squirrel to come up and eat from my fingers and even upon Everett's shoulder after some bread and peanut butter, and rubbed his little whiskers against my friend's cheek. On the slightest move on our part, however, they would run to the brush.

Other animals are almost equally tame and bears will walk into camp whenever they feel like it, in parts of the Park.

Dinner over we turned south along the Bench then upwards again toward Lincoln Pass and Lincoln Peak. The trail here led up a steep slope passing the Sperry Camp (owned by the G. N. R. R.) and winding back and forth on the face of the slope to cut the grade.

From Lincoln Pass we could look back on the camp far below and on farther away we could look down on Lake McDonald which we had left in the morning.

Bidding good-bye to this scene we stepped across the divide and here was truly a sight to behold. To the east a huge peak rose up nearby around which our trail ran. At the foot of this, many hundred feet below, lay Lake Ellen Wilson, only one end of it being visible; back of this lake rose great Mt. Jackson to a height of over 10,000 ft. To the south of us was the outlet of Lake Ellen Wilson which runs along for about a hundred yards across a bench and then dashes down the face of a cliff for 1800 feet into a little lake which lay in a pit shaped hole below, the bottom of which we could not as yet see. The whole was a scene of rugged beauty and grandeur which has attracted many a photographer.

Following our trail around the peak to the east we soon came in full view of the upper lake, which, except for the west end, was fully surrounded by barren mountains.

The sun, having gone down and darkness close at hand, we made our way down to the lake to camp for the night. We were rather tired for only a nine mile hike and so soon after supper we went to bed.

We had no more than crawled in when the clouds came rolling by at the rate of fifty per. Fearing rain we moved our entire outfit, camp fire and all, under the projecting edge of a huge boulder which seemed to have rolled there for our special benefit. We were now prepared for a good down pour, but it did not come.

The second morning we didn't break camp until ten o'clock, which was rather late. From here we went along the lake and entered Gunsight Pass. Although steep it wasn't six miles and didn't seem bad at all.

Gunsight Pass is on the main ridge of the Rockies and the continental divide. From here for the first time in four years I saw on the east side of the divide, but to all appearances it seemed even more rugged than behind us. Below lay Gunsight Lake and at what appeared to be the end of this great mountain canyon was Going-to-the-Sun Mountain, its top hidden in the passing clouds.

In less than an hour and a half we were down to the bottom of this valley and travelling toward Goin-to-the-

Sun Mt. Turning to the south we beheld Black Foot Glacier which is the largest living Glacier in the U. S. being five miles in extent. With the aid of the field glasses we could make out its snowy surface quite plainly.

About supper time we came to a creek and an old camping ground near the foot of Going-to-the-Sun Mt. Here we spent our second night repeating our previous night's experience of a move in the dark to a more sheltered place. We moved this time because it started to rain, but it stopped when we got moved and didn't rain any more. We said we wouldn't move the next night if it poured.

The next morning our course turned to the north through Piegan Pass and we had to go eighteen miles to reach McDermott Lake. We got a good start and went gradually upwards until almost noon. We were now on the west slope of a range and above the timber. Here we encountered rain, and, not wishing to eat in the rain, we went on, but could not find shelter as we were above the timber and trees were only two feet high. Finally we did eat on a rock in the rain.

Our trail now ran north through the mist along a steep slope of loose boulders which had broken from the cliffs above. At times we got glimpses of Piegan Pass in the distance through the drifting clouds. When we reached the pass we were completely enveloped in clouds and could do nothing but cross over and go down and down through the clouds to—we could not see where.

Some time later we came out below the clouds and got a look at our surroundings. To the northwest was a glacier banked up against the mountain; below it a lake reflected its beauty, and a stream ran from there tumbling into the valley in a large waterfall. Back of this and extending eastward was one continuous wall of rock jagged and rough extending up into the clouds; a water fall came over their brink and lost itself in a mist and floated away with the breeze.

Once in the bottom of the valley we began to think we should come in sight of Jim Hill's big $500,000 hotel but four miles seemed like ten and it was about four o'clock when we reached the place. The hotel is a mammoth structure of wood located on the north-east shore of Lake McDermott. It is certainly a beautiful building, inside and out.

We camped around the head of the lake for the night under a big waterproof fir and the stars were very bright for a change.

The chief point of interest of the whole hike was Iceberg Lake, a side trip of seven miles from our camp. We had no packs to carry and the grade was easy and we seemed like so many feathers floating up that seven mile stretch.

We reached the lake by a long curved trail and were truly enraptured by the scene. The lake is about a mile in extent and surrounded on three sides by a semi-circular mountain wall breaking off sharp at one end and extending eastward meeting another range at the other. On the far side of the lake at the foot of this fall was a large glacier; pieces of which were continually breaking off into the lake, filling it with icebergs of all sizes; hence the name, Iceberg Lake.

Everett and I took off our shoes and socks and pulled our pants high enough to wade in the icy water and drew a small berg close to shore, we then succeeded in riding it long enough to have a couple of pictures taken, but it sure was cold.

We now started for home but just then we saw three goats feeding far up on the mountain side and Grant and I each armed with a camera and a pair of field glasses made a hasty ascent up the slope. We would have succeeded in getting some fine pictures if some New York "guys" had not scared them before we got there. However, we did get a few pictures and with the glasses we could see the brawny muscles of one big male. There proved to be eleven goats in the bunch and as we drew nearer, on the rock slide, they walked upon the face of a cliff which looked impossible to climb, but apparently did it easily. After watching them for some time we returned to the trail and camp.

The next day was Sunday, although we didn't realize it half the time for it seemed the same as the rest of the trip. We made a good start and felt fine. Our loads also were growing lighter a little, making travelling more easy.

The first part of our hike was nearly level, running up a long valley. We passed a continuous, string of lakes here, but soon we came to an abrupt cliff, around which the trail ran winding back and forth and going gradually up. At the top of this hill the trail ran back a few hundred feet only to come against a steep cliff like mountain on barren rocks which without a trail would have been an almost impossible climb. The trail in many places was dug into the side of solid rock straight up on one side and straight down on the other. In this way the trail wound first one way, then the other up the face of the cliff, finally making a long loop around the hill and then on up at an easier grade.

A year ago this trail was closed for some time because a man fell overboard from one of the ledges and was killed.

At noon we rested near a snow bank for dinner and had some ice cream made from canned milk. We didn't stop to freeze it very hard though, as we were in a hurry to get to a place suitable to camp on.

We hurried on to the west side of the pass. From here we could see on to the north, west and south. The whole view excepting for the long valley of McDonald creek in the foreground was one panorama of sharp rocky or snow capped peaks. The most prominent one was Mt. Cleveland, the highest in the Park. Twenty miles to the south we could plainly see Sperry Glacier which we had visited on two previous visits in the Park.

We passed down the trail from the pass getting caught in a good cold rain and we were properly soaked for once. We came to the Granite Park Camp and were invited in to dry off some, and given a tent and several fine woolen blankets for the night, believe it or not they felt good after us being soaked.

The next morning we were all O. K. but our shoes, and they showed the effects of being wet. My shoes were not as comfortable after that, and Tom's blistered his feet. We did pretty well, though, considering the circumstances as we went twenty-three miles over the poorest trail in the park, and mud nearly all the way.

At four o'clock we pulled in at Lewis's Hotel, where we stuck around until seven p. m., taking the boat to the foot of the lake.

We had now completed the hike except three miles to the train and had covered about eighty-five miles in all. Our grub just came out right and we had one of the finest trips a person could wish for.

You may think that costs money. It would if you came from the east and paid about a hundred and fifty dollars car fare, five dollars per day at the hotels and camps, three dollars a day for a guide, two dollars for his horse, two dollars for a horse to ride upon and a couple more dollars for a pack horse. It counts up, but the best way to see the Park is to hike. Our trip, including car fare forty-five miles, stage fare, and boat, and grub cost us four fellows just an even five dollars a piece; how is that? You couldn't go down and sleep by Cass river under a mosquito net for much less.

Hoping you will be here to take the next trip in the Park with us, I remain

Yours truly,

HARRY CAMPBELL.

CASS CITY ASTONISHED BY SIMPLE MIXTURE

Cass City people are astonished at the INSTANT action of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-i-ka. ONE SPOONFUL removes such surprising foul matter it relieves almost ANY CASE constipation, sour stomach or gas. Because Adler-i-ka acts on BOTH lower and upper bowel, a few doses often relieve or prevent appendicitis. A short treatment helps chronic stomach trouble. Treadgold's Drug Store.—Adv. 4.

'Tis a trial for some to pay their taxes when taxes are due and no products to sell to raise the stuff. Then the old farmer feels just as he did when he went to the "4th" without money. Young but very small.

'Tis called the season of cheer, but to some 'tis a solemn reminder that there was one present a year ago who is not here to make merry now. Hence to them it may be the season of sorrow in a particular sense because of remembrance.

Third Friday in January, the South Novesta Farmers' club will meet at the home of Arthur and May Van Blaricom. It is expected that the secret of which is the cheapest insurance company will be brought to light so cavil will cease for a time at least.

This seems to be a hard season for the young people who want a little time occasionally. No sooner do they set stakes for a "how-da-do" than a doctor discovers that a contagious disease has showed itself in or near the settlement of the doings. Then all is off.

That man of Athens, Georgia, who deeded the ground a radius of eight feet around his favorite oak so that it might own itself and not fall prey to the woodsman's axe, may be called strange but wise. The tree owns the land and when it falls the sprouts will inherit the soil—generation after generation for the title is recorded the same as other realty.

We have the knowledge but not the ability to give Christmas gifts. It is not saying too much to say we have the knowledge for the meek and lowly One has told us all how to give. Give to those in need with no thought of a gift in return. Give with the Christian spirit beating high and warm in a heart of love for those who are poorer in this world's good than we. Give to bring sunshine to some heart that sees little but somber days. Give to the lonely ones so that they may feel this world is not a wilderness.

Local merchants and salesmen are rejoicing over the double rest days they had on Christmas Day and the Sunday following, and they look forward to a repetition of the same tomorrow and next day (New Years and Sunday). Next year being leap year, it means another series of double holidays for the holiday season. Both Christmas and New Year fall on Monday.

Fred Buehley and Miss Mary Mark were married at the Evangelical parsonage by Rev. D. J. Feather, on Wednesday evening, Dec. 22. They were attended by Edward Buehley, a brother of the groom, and Miss Alma Mark, a sister of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Buehley expect to make their home with the groom's parents until spring.

The Presbyterian Sunday school elected officers for the year of 1916 Sunday. The officers are, Superintendent, H. D. Shiedel; assistant superintendent, Alfred Goodall; secretary, Hester McKim; treasurer, J. L. Cathcart; organist, Irene Frutche; assistant organist, Mrs. Levi Bardwell; chorister, F. E. Kelsey; primary superintendent, Ms. A. J. Knapp; assistant superintendent, Mrs. W. N. Straube; librarians, Gladys Hitchcock and Helen Wilsey.

A new firm of druggists, Winslow Bros., has purchased the drug and jewelry stock of F. W. Fahndrich at Owendale and are "going after the trade" of that vicinity. Norris J. Winslow of Muskegon and Joseph Winslow are the proprietors. The former was for some years an employee of L. I. Wood and has many friends in this community who feel sure that he will make a success of this project.

Owing to the peculiarly great amount of illness among the members of the chorus of the M. E. church which has advertised the rendition of a cantata on Sunday evening, it has proven impossible to secure full and satisfactory rehearsals. Considering this fact, and with the condition of sickness unabated, the chorus on Tuesday evening voted with regret to announce the unavoidable and indefinite postponement of the cantata. It being a composition adapted for the Christmas season, it is believed impracticable to give it before next holidays.

New Years Greetings

We take this opportunity of extending to all our many friends and customers our best wishes for a Bright and Prosperous New Year. We thank you for your liberal patronage during the past years and trust that we have given the satisfaction that will warrant a continuance of your favors.

During the coming year, whatever you may require in the way of Drugs, Medicines and Prescriptions, Wall Paper, Window Shades, Fancy Stationery and high grade Toilet Articles will be given our best attention. In spite of the ever changing and unsettled conditions of the drug market due to the European trouble we are keeping prices as low as possible.

We give mail and phone orders special attention and packages for parcel post shipment will be promptly delivered to your door. We aim to give our best and most careful services whether in filling your receipts and prescriptions or orders in other departments.

Treadgold's Drug Store

We wish Our Patrons all the Joy that comes with New Year's Day. ¶ We hope they'll enter no Alloy to take the Joy away. ¶ We hope 'twill last for full a year. ¶ Till another Day rolls around. ¶ We hope Prosperity and Cheer may through all the year abound.

Why Jackson Fence Lasts Longer

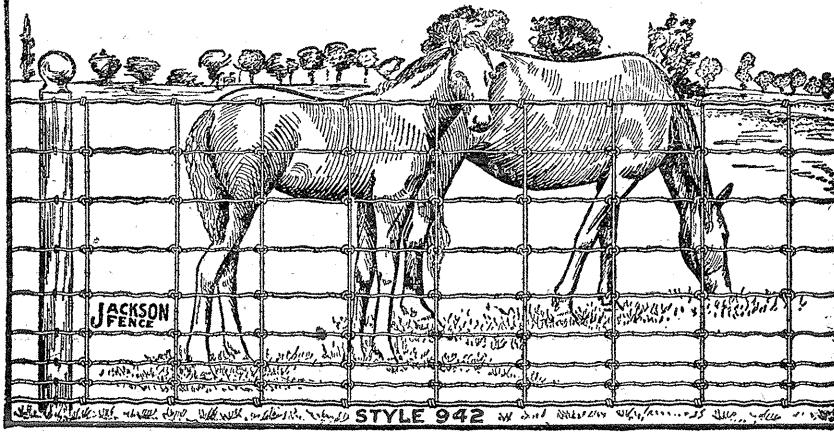

Because it is made of Hard Drawn Wire; guaranteed FULL GAUGE; thoroughly galvanized with pure commercial zinc. The method of construction used in its making is beyond the experimental stage, its perfection and mechanical accuracy is established. Cross bars, knots, and laterals are of the same size wire insuring uniform life. The lock or tie is compact, smooth and will not slip, at the same time allows sufficient play for the fence to adapt itself to uneven ground, hence

Jackson Fence

Guaranteed Full Gauge Hard Drawn Wire

LASTS LONGER and gives absolute satisfaction. It's a fence that's remarkably strong--extremely rigid--affords the utmost protection--not affected by rain, snow, or cold--won't sag, easily adjusts itself to uneven ground--economically erected, wears indefinitely--always retaining its shape and successfully resisting the most severe strains put upon it. Before buying your next requirements, see and examine JACKSON!

He Removed the Danger Signal

"I suffered a long time with a very weak back," writes Fred Smith, 325 Main St., Green Bay, Wis. "A few boxes of Foley Kidney Pills completely relieved me of all soreness and pain in the back, and now I am as strong and well as ever." One cannot help becoming nervous and feeling tired and worn out when the kidneys fail to filter and throw out of the system the poisonous waste matter that causes kidney troubles and bladder ailments. Backache is one of Nature's danger signals that the kidneys are clogged up and inactive. It is often followed by rheumatism, annoying bladder or urinary disorders, puffy swellings under the eyes, swollen ankles and painful joints. Foley Kidney Pills get right at the source of trouble. They invigorate the kidneys to healthy action and when the kidneys properly perform their functions the poisonous waste matter is eliminated from the system.

How to Fight Tuberculosis

Dangers of School Infection.

The school of course, must be considered as one of the crucial points in any consideration of health or disease. The gathering together of hundreds of children in the same room and building is fraught with serious possibilities if the supervision of sanitary and hygienic conditions is overlooked.

Fortunately, when we come to consider school conditions in Detroit, there are many very satisfying and hopeful things to be said. The Board of Health, in co-operation with the Board of Education, has adopted a system which, as far as it goes, serves as an oversight on the health conditions of the schools. In the latter months of last year, when a diphtheria epidemic broke out in this city, where did the Board of Health immediately rush its forces of prevention? To the schools. It was a matter of sincere gratification when the diphtheria map in the health officer's room continued to show clear spaces in the neighborhood of the schools. Just as the fire department would direct its attention to those places where fire could gain the greatest headway in the least time, so the Board of Health is ready to give special attention to the schools. This is of profound importance when it is remembered that only a few years ago schools were always looked upon as centers of infection. They are now most efficient centers of prevention.

Medical inspection of schools cannot be too highly recommended, nor can it be too thoroughly organized. Detroit is doing remarkably well with the force it has at its disposal, but a larger force would make possible a more thorough inspection.

Not so very long ago, when medical inspection of school children was first broached, it was called a fad. Even in Detroit it was protested and in some cases derided. But you who have been following this series on the modes of tuberculosis infection will have seen the necessity for it. When you send your child to an entertainment, you want to be assured by the building inspector and the fire marshal that the building is not a fire-trap. When you send your children to another town to visit, you want to be assured that the Board of Health of that place is on the job and that the water will not breed typhoid. So, you have a right to know that when you send your child to school, he is not sitting in a disease-trap, and that the children around him are not disease carriers.

School medical inspection is one of the most important arms of health protection. How many miniature epidemics have been prevented by the school physician catching up a cough or a sore throat before it went too far? Why, even in the University of Michigan they examine every student, and last year they found 70 girls who had tuberculosis, and not one of them suspected it. By reason of their being found out in time, their lives were saved and they were also prevented becoming a danger to others.

Medical inspection of school children is something which every parent ought heartily to support. Your child may be all right; but what about the child who sits next to your child? You cannot know his physical condition, but the doctor can.

The proceeds from the sale of our stock will enable us to increase our output at least fourfold and with the economies this increased production will effect, we will then be earning about 300 per cent on this investment.

THIS IS THE SMALL INVESTORS' OPPORTUNITY

By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer one thousand investors this EXTRAORDINARY proposition:

Mail us ten dollars ($10.00), no more and no less, and we will mail you a Certificate for Forty (40) shares of the Treasury Stock of our Company, Fully Paid and Forever Non-Assessable, and descriptive literature of our Company and its business.

This offer is made only to the first one thousand investors who answer this advertisement. "First come, first served." If you are too late or if you send any more or less than ten dollars, your money will be returned by the next mail.

This offer is made to secure the co-operation of one thousand small stockholders in boosting the sale of Double Service Tires and to prevent large financial interests from securing control.

The Double Service Tire and Rubber Company is incorporated under the stringent laws of the State of Ohio at $250,000.00, divided into 250,000 shares of a par value of $1.00 per share, all common, Fully Paid and Non-Assessable. Every share of stock and every stockholder being absolutely on an equal and even basis, all sharing alike in all earnings of the Company.

This is an established and going business and one which is at present earning net dividends equal to 20 per cent on its entire capitalization, and with future dividend possibilities so big and so alluring that they seem almost unbelievable.

The history of practically any one of Akron's famous rubber tire companies reads more like a fairy tale than business facts. Early investors have made fortunes almost unbelievable and are still making them. The growth and success of the Double Service Tire and Rubber Company but adds another chapter to this never-ending story of the fortunes made through the popularity of the automobile.

OUR GUARANTEE—YOUR PROTECTION

The fact that this Company is now earning at the rate of 20 per cent on its entire capitalization, with less than one-third (1-3) issued, is a positive guarantee of your 80 per cent and proof of the still larger earnings you will receive when their production facilities have been increased.

Your protection is made still more secure by the fact that after you have received our literature and your stock, you may return the same any time within ten days of its receipt by you and receive your money back in full if you are not entirely satisfied with your investment. This gives you ten days in which to investigate and to assure yourself that this is not a chance, but the best and biggest little investment you ever made. Could anything be more fair and square? Was ever an investment offered so attractive and so sure?

Just tear off and fill out this coupon and attach a ten-dollar bill to it, or a check, or a Money Order, and mail it to-day. REMEMBER this offer is made only to the first one thousand who answer this advertisement.

THE DOUBLE SERVICE TIRE & RUBBER CO.,
Akron, Ohio.

I hereby accept your offer as made in the above advertisement, and am enclosing ten dollars, for which please send me Stock Certificate for Forty (40) shares of Stock of your Company, Fully Paid and Non-Assessable, with descriptive literature regarding the same, with the understanding that if I am not entirely satisfied with my investment, you will return my money in full any time within ten days of my receipt of my Stock Certificate and literature.

CHAPTER VIII.

Mummies.

Haggerty kissed his wife and went his way. His journey's end was a brick house, three stories in height, in a quiet side street. He rang the bell and waited. No one answered. Five minutes passed, then Haggerty went across the street and began to patrol the block. He smoked incessantly and thought deeply, for he was worried. He was sure that yonder lived his man, but he had never known a case like this. The picture-puzzle had been so wonderfully cut and so abnormally interesting that he had let too much time go by. There was a fine chance of the whole thing being knocked out of his hands. He had waited because it might possibly be a joke; he had waited for the man to return the jewels, and he hadn't done so. He must get that thumb print tonight or tomorrow morning at dawn on the boat.

He reviewed the facts of the case methodically, with his eyes directed toward the sharp clear stars of this October night. The man had thousands in the banks, unlimited credit, was without kith or kin; was rarely seen in the restaurants over on Broadway, and never with a woman. His cook and valet had been with him for ten years and had accompanied him on his travels. He lived comfortably, not luxuriously. He was a fine chess player and was lucky at bridge and poker, but never gambled in stocks or public places. He was thirty-nine years old, in good health. What would draw a man toward playing at safe-breaking if not a latent criminal instinct? On the other hand, this pastime was known to several of his banker friends, who sometimes made wagers with him. Well, well; his right or left thumb would presently settle the whole matter, one way or the other.

A taxicab came chugging into the street, stopped for a moment before the brick house, and went on. Haggerty jotted down the license number as he trotted across. He reached the top step just as the man with the bundle under his arm opened the door.

"Wait a moment," said Haggerty. The man turned.

"Are you Mr. Crawford?"—for it was too dark for Haggerty to distinguish the man's features.

"No, sir. Mr. Crawford is out for the evening."

"When will he be back?"

"I can't say, sir. Possibly at midnight; probably later."

"Does he go aboard the Celtic tonight or tomorrow at dawn?"

The man with the bundle under his arm withdrew the night-key and calmly thrust the key-ring into his pocket. He shifted the bundle slightly.

"Is your business important?" The voice was well modulated, but it possessed a crispness which spoke of impatience.

"Rather important."

"Sorry you will not be able to see him tonight, sir."

"I'm in no hurry. I'll wait till he comes. I take it you're his valet."

"Yes, sir; Mr. Mason. But I doubt I can let you in under the circumstances. If you will designate a place I will telephone you the moment he arrives."

"I'm a Detective."

"That's reasonable enough; but I'm going inside to wait."

"Why, sir . . . ?"

"I'm a detective, Mr. Mason; an' your master an' I have a little matter to discuss."

"Impossible!"

"An' he wouldn't be pleased at all if he knew I'd been here an' had t' go away."

"Oh! He expects you?"

"Yes." Which was truthful enough, since all criminals expect the law sooner or later.

"Your credentials?"

"This." Haggerty exhibited his badge.

"That's not sufficient, sir."

"All right," replied Haggerty grimly. "Suppose we both go over to th' precinct an' have 'em identify me there? They know me."

"I suppose I'll have to let you in, sir; but it's all very queer and unusual. Follow me."

The valet turned on the single light in the hall. He immediately began to mount the stairs to the first floor. Haggerty at his heels. The valet stumbled, and the bundle slipped from his arm. The wrapping paper broke, and disclosed half a dozen pairs of old shoes. Haggerty picked up two pairs and the valet gathered up the others. He gravely led the detective into a large room. Haggerty grasped his revolver, then let go of it, grunting inaudibly. What he saw in the dim firelight were not living people, only the shells: rows of mummies and mummy-cases called cartonages.

"Better not turn on the lights," said Haggerty. "Th' fire's enough. These things give a fellow the chills."

The valet deposited the shoes along the wall and Haggerty placed his beside them. Next, the valet crossed to the wood-box and threw on a log. A blaze started up.

"Sit down, sir. This is Mr. Crawford's study." Haggerty was quite familiar with it, but only in the daytime. "You'll excuse me, sir, till I pack the shoes. You see, Mr. Crawford tramps about a good deal and likes old shoes because they are most comfortable. We leave for Naples There have been some new excavations at Herculaneum which Mr. Crawford is anxious to see."

"You can pack th' shoes when your master returns," replied Haggerty. The valet, whether he knew anything or not, would be perfectly justified in warning his master of his, Haggerty's presence. Then genially, to cover the menace of his words, he added: "These ol' geezers might walk out on me if I was left alone with them."

Mason shrugged. He turned on the low desk lamp and began to arrange the books and papers on the broad flat desk. Some he put away in drawers which he locked. He then put out the light and took the easy chair by the fire, his back in half-view. Here Haggerty recognized the gentleman's gentleman, the servant who held himself detached from all affairs that did not concern his master personally, and who considered it ill-bred to converse with strangers of Haggerty's caliber. It was a lean serious face; the hand which propped his chin was long and slender.

It was half after eleven by Haggerty's watch. An hour, probably, to wait. There they were, four of them, and the one with the door hanging loosely a new one; four safes of various makes and sizes. What was the game?

"May I ask what it is you wish to see Mr. Crawford about?" asked the valet, after a long pause.

Ha! thought Haggerty; he was human after all. "Oh, he's going t' give me something for my collection," Haggerty chuckled. "But what's all these safes for?"

"A hobby of Mr. Crawford's when he's not at work on his brochures."

"His what?"

"His little books on new discoveries in archeology."

"Ah! What's he do with them?"

"Sends them to the various universities and societies."

"No, no; I mean th' safes."

"He opens them. Do you know anything about the French revolution?"

"I've heard about it," answered Haggerty cautiously.

"Well, when Louis XVI wasn't tinkering with the revolution, he was tinkering with locks and clocks. It amused him; took his mind off his cares and troubles. Mr. Crawford finds like amusement in buying up old safes and opening them; cracking them, I believe, is the vernacular. He is remarkably clever at it."

"Well, what do you know about that?"

"Beg pardon?"

"I mean, that kind of amusement beats me. Buys safes an' cracks 'em for th' fun of th' thing! Well, I never!"

Haggerty slipped a cigar between his teeth and began to chew it.

"Smoke if you wish."

"No, thanks."

Everything open and above board; no mystery, no secrecy. A joke, it could not be anything else but a joke, a wager. But why all these months of waiting to spring it? Haggerty's troubled gaze went round the room, touched the valet's face again, and finally paused at the shoes. Twelve of them, broad-toed, comfortable, newly-soled and heeled. They looked very funny to Haggerty, marshaled as they were alongside a mummy perhaps three thousand years old.

"Funny idea."

"What is, sir?"

"Totting round ol' shoes like that."

DON'T WASTE COAL

Instead of half burning the coal by poor draught and clinkers—and losing half the heat you pay for—use

Lyken's Valley Red Ash Coal and burn every ounce of it. There will be nothing left to sift—just fine ashes.

The Lyken's Valley Coal Mines produce the purest anthracite in the world—and it comes to you free from dust, dirt, screening and clinker-forming ingredients.

We sell at a very small premium in price but ask our RED ASH customers and we are sure that they will confirm the statement that it is worth more than ordinary hard coal. Place your order now.

DON'T FAIL TO SEE THE GREAT SERIAL

"NEAL OF THE NAVY" at the
REX THEATRE beginning Wednesday, January 5

To be given every Wednesday evening. A new moving picture serial. Monday and Tuesday nights will be closed; taking the cost of running the show these two nights together with Wednesday night's show, we have been able to secure this FIRST-CLASS PLAY, "NEAL OF THE NAVY". This story is composed of 14 episodes and each episode gets more interesting and mysterious as the story continues.

THE FLIGHT FROM MOUNT PELEE.

The story begins with Ilington's scheme to take two adventurers with him to Lost Isle, where there are valuable mines. He displays a packet which contains full directions where to find the island, and locate the mines. In the midst of their talk Mount Pelee begins its eruptions, and Ilington, taking his little daughter and her East Indian nurse, flees with the two men to the shore. They row out along with many other refugees to a boat in the harbor. Captain Hardin on the boat allows many poor wretches to climb on board, but by the time Ilington arrives there is room for only two more, and the Captain takes aboard little Annette with her nurse. Ilington, bidding the child good-by, gives her the packet, with directions to find the lost island, and writes a note that the Captain gets, giving her name, with directions to take care of her. Ilington and the two rough adventurers drift about until next morning they reach a rocky, uninhabited island. They quarrel and the two men knock Ilington unconscious. In the meantime Captain Hardin's freighter, having put out to sea, catches fire from a stray spark and almost every one is lost. But in the last boat escape the Captain's wife, Annette and the Captain's little son Neal, who has saved Annette from the flames. The occupants of this boat are picked up by a United States man-of-war, and the last scene of the chapter shows them all well taken care of on the big ship. Neal is complimented by the lieutenant commander on his bravery, and he falls asleep dreaming that he is a navy man.

All these scenes are capitally acted, and every detail is distinct through remarkable photography. Various water scenes, especially those given as viewed through the captain's glass are beautiful, and the pictures of Mount Pelee in eruption are, as said before, unequalled.
