How to Fight Tuberculosis

The Factory and Infection.

Factory infection takes its place with other forms we have been considering, by reason of the factory being a place where men and women live together. The factory is a part of our system of indoor living. The workers sleep in rooms all night, arise and eat indoors, then board a crowded, closed, ill-ventilated car, alight at the factory door or corner, and spend 10 hours or more indoors at work, and return at night to their indoor home, pass the evening there or in some other indoor place—and thus it goes through life. We pay a great price for the "comfort" which the exclusion of fresh air is supposed to bring us.

But with the factory, as with the school, there are many hopeful things to be said. And the grouping of these two institutions, the public and the semi-public, together, has a significance to which we shall return presently. The modern factory, as we see it in scores of cases, is a far more healthful place to live in than the old-time factory used to be. And this is so not because the factory owners are more careful than others of the health of the people, but because certain conditions have been found to be of great economic value to business. Without once considering the matter of health, factory designers and managers discovered that plenty of light meant better work, less eye-strain on the part of the workers, and a consequent larger output. Fatigue was measured as power is measured; and when it was found that fatigue came early to the worker and so impaired his productive ability, some way was sought to prevent useless fatigue. It was discovered that plenty of light, plenty of room, plenty of air had the effect of decreasing fatigue. And so, for their economic values alone, air and light and roominess were provided. With these came, as a natural consequence, greater cleanliness.

No business of consequence would dream today of instituting "sweatshop" methods. Because the cheaper methods cost more. They cost more in quality of labor and in amount of production. Dark, damp, crowded work-rooms are now as much a part of the past as the dungeons of the Inquisition. The whole policy of society is to get rid of them. And yet, in so getting rid of them, the principal indictment against them is almost never mentioned, namely, that they are disease breeders.

Of course, light and air and roominess and sanitary conditions would have no economic value at all—in themselves have no business value—save as these values are indirectly produced in the worker. And these values are produced by the worker for the sole and simple reason that the new conditions keep him in better health. The healthy man is always the efficient man. The man who is required to work in unhealthy surroundings becomes increasingly inefficient. So, you see, it is a matter of health after all. "Health is business," and the very first requirement of any business or work is health. This principle applies to schools, street cars, theaters, factories, churches, or wherever people live together for longer or shorter periods.

If as much could be said for the homes of the people as for industrial and public institutions, the problem of infection—and of tuberculosis infection in particular—would be practically solved.

The principal danger remaining in the modern factory or workshop or office or store—mark you, we say "in the modern" forms of these workshops—is the human disease carrier himself. It is a most encouraging sign that many factories and shops have sanitary committees and rules, the purpose of which is to prevent anyone so conducting himself as to become a menace to the health of his work-mates. The bane of the factory heretofore has been promiscuous spitting and dry sweeping. In many factories the workers themselves have abolished these dangers. Cuspidors are provided, and sweeping is done on the principle of removing the dirt, not scattering it into the air. Consumptive workmen are required to use sputum cups, or strips of gauze which may be burned, or a disinfectant in their cuspidors. This is to his own advantage as well as that of his fellow-workmen.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical profession. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address H. J. Reagh and son, Ronald, of Cass City and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Reagh of Pontiac. Life is a sad paradox. When a country youth takes a sight-seeing trip to the city he thinks of what a swell time he could have with all the bewitching girls he meets, if he only lived there. By and by, he goes to the city to live, and has to work so hard to meet his board bill, the only woman he ever gets close enough to speak to is his landlady, when she routs him out at 6:30 every morning, and sits up every night he works overtime to bawl him out for keeping the rest of the house awake.

Mr. Gollwitzer was here for Sunday and they returned home Monday. Mr. and Mrs. David Ross returned Sunday from Caro where Mr. Ross received medical aid and had one of his feet amputated at the ankle. Mr. Ross is feeling fine. They have moved from their residence on North Seeger St. to the residence owned by Walter Walker on East Main St. The evangelistic services at the M. E. church were postponed because of the illness of Rev. F. S. Weaver, the evangelist. Rev. Gregory, the pastor, has received word that Mr. Weaver is improving and expects to reach Cass City tomorrow (Saturday). The special services will commence Sunday morning. Cass City basket ball teams had a successful week. Friday, the local high school team of boys defeated the Elkton high school team by a 29-6 score and the local girls' team tied Elkton in a 13-13 score. The latter game went to Cass City when Elkton refused to "play off the tie." Wednesday evening the local Boy Scouts defeated Kingston high school in a game noted for the number of points involved. The end saw Cass City with the better side of the 69-24 score. In the weekly grind of news-gathering we have come to the conclusion that about nine out of ten persons fail to recognize a bit of news when they meet it face to face. If you know of anyone that has died, eloped, married, divorced, left town, had a fire, or a baby, absconded, embezzled, sold a farm, cracked a safe, come to town, killed an officer, robbed a church, bought a home, committed suicide, been assassinated, fallen from an aeroplane—that is news. Woman's World A Pioneer Civilizer of the Northland.

MISS JESSIE LUTHER.

Ten years ago there journeyed to the deep sea fishers of the northland, depressed, dulled ten months of the year by mists, snow and cold, Miss Jessie Luther, who stayed to found and later to direct the industrial department of the Grenfell missions along the coasts of Newfoundland and Labrador. Recently in New York occurred a remarkable exhibit of the results of Miss Luther's long devotion, a vivid testimony of the relief and saving occupation given these snowbound fishermen and their families. Conspicuous were schoolbags of hair seal and gayly beaded for $4; varieties of seal moccasins, squirrel topped and red tongued, at $2; grass baskets, many woven by two blind men, the native grasses having been seized and dried during the short summers; hooked mats, with quaint borders of creatures of the northland—seals, Eskimos, rabbits and reindeer—and delightful seal garbed Eskimo dolls at $1 apiece. The only distinguishing marks of the feminine garb, as decreed by Dame Fashion of Labrador, are the chantecler tab, worn anteriorly, and the roomy hood, designed with accommodations for a baby therein. The lower cut gives exact replicas of native costumes. One of the most lucrative and interesting of the exhibits is that of wonderful homespun—gray, tan and soft blue suitings and a charmingly fluffy white weave, half angora, for small children's coats, at $1.75 a yard. Another interesting point of observation was that, while the northland beading is apt to be of rather set, prim patterns, the Eskimo embroideries, just as the director found them—native—along the Labrador coast and even north of Sandwich bay, remarkably resemble the Japanese both in design of flowers and in colors. For lifetimes these fishermen habitually hunted rabbits for potpies and then discarded the skins. Miss Luther taught them to dress these skins, cut them in strips, twist them and then weave them with hand spun yarn of different soft, delightful shades into fascinating crib and carriage robes—veritable baby buntings. These rare blankets, so fringed and cozy, range from $7.50 to $10.

Paris Sausage. One pound of lean pork, half a pound of back fat, four ounces of bread-crumbs, one ounce of salt, a quarter of an ounce of pepper, one grated onion; mix up well, add the seasoning and the bread-crumbs, add half a pint of water, mix well, fill into skins, tie up in lengths of two and a half inches, weighing about twelve to the pound; then make a brine with one quart of water, one pound of salt, a quarter of an ounce of saltpeter, boil together and pour into a bowl; when cold, color with cochineal and put the sausages in for one hour; take out and dry them in the air, then cook in the usual way.

Sugar Cookies. One cupful butter, two eggs, two cupfuls sugar, two-thirds cupful milk, one teaspoonful cream of tartar, one-half teaspoonful soda and five cupfuls flour. Salt and flavor to suit taste, brush top of cookies with milk and sprinkle with sugar.

How Gene Field Resigned. When Eugene Field was working on the old Kansas City Times, according to the story told by a Kansas City man who knew him, the Denver Tribune decided to make a bid for his services. This was in Field's youth, when his fame was just budding and before his flowering period in Chicago. The Denver paper obtained Field's services, as is well known, and the Kansas City man who tells the story was instrumental in bringing it about. He came here from Denver, authorized to offer Field a larger salary. Field was sitting at his desk, coat off, collar loosened, his feet in carpet slippers. The messenger transmitted the Denver offer, and Field, without commenting on it, began to inquire after mutual friends and acquaintances. Meanwhile Field took off his carpet slippers and began drawing on his shoes. "Well, what are you going to do about it?" said the visitor impatiently, referring to the offer which Field so far had not commented on. "The devil, man," said Field as he stood up and threw his discarded slippers into a far corner. "Can't you see I'm resigning now?"—Kansas City Star.

"Life." A crust of bread and a corner to sleep in; A minute to smile and an hour to weep in; A pint of joy to a peck of trouble, And never a laugh, but means come double. And that is life. A crust and a corner that love makes precious. With the smiles to warm and the tears to refresh us. And joy seems sweeter when cares come after. And a moan is the finest of foils for laughter. And that is life. —Paul Laurence Dunbar.

Beans! Senator Hoar used to tell with glee of a southerner just home from a visit to New England who said to his friend: "You know those little white round beans?" "Yes," replied the friend, "the kind we feed to our horses?" "The very same. Well, do you know, suh, that in Boston the enlightened citizens take those little white round beans, boil them for three or four hours, mix them with molasses and I know not what other ingredients, bake them, and then—what do you suppose they do with the beans?" "They"— "They eat 'em, suh," interrupted the first southerner impressively. "Suh, they eat 'em!"

Telepathy in the Theater. Sir Herbert Tree tells how some years ago, when playing Hamlet, he found himself in that scene on the ramparts when he awaits the approach of the ghost, gasping for breath and drenched with the dew of apprehension. "What a fool I am!" he cried to himself. "My back is to the audience, the scene is in darkness. Why should I waste so much mental force? Why not stand at rest, awaiting my cue with a cool pulse?" But a trial quickly showed him his error. He had difficulty to get back into the character, and, moreover, he discovered that the scene did not grip the audience with the same intensity at all. He had broken the spell.—Westminster Gazette.

Risky Revenge. Paganini, the violinist, had a narrow escape at Ferrara from a violent death. Enraged by some hissing from the pit, he resolved to avenge the insult and at the close of his program informed the audience that he would imitate the language of the various animals. After having rendered the notes of different birds, the mewling of a cat and the barking of a dog he advanced to the footlights and, saying, "This is for those who hissed!" imitated the braying of an ass. At this the occupants of the pit rose, rushed on to the stage and would have killed their calumniator had he not hastily retreated.—Pittsburgh Press.

Religious Statistics of Japan. According to statistics furnished by a Tokyo news agency as official, there are 15,000,000 Shintoists, 30,000,000 Buddhists and 164,000 Christians in Japan, which leaves some 20,000,000 with no profession of faith or otherwise unaccounted for. The returns also show one Shinto priest to every 200 adherents, but only one place of worship to 10,000. The Buddhists have one place of worship to 400 and one priest to 250. The Christians have one place of worship to 120 and one priest to seventy-five.—East and West News.

Not Wholly Unselfish. Way back in the sixties the famous poet, editor and story teller, Thomas Bailey Aldrich, was then simple "Tom" Aldrich. He was a clerk on a small salary in George W. Carleton's book store, at Broadway and Lispenard street, in New York. He was then but eighteen and had just started the lines of "Babie Bell."

"What I mean, Uncle Aus, is did he use words that would be proper for your minister to use in a sermon?" "Oh, yes, suh; yes, suh," the old man replied, with a grin that revealed the full width of his humane mouth. "but dey'd have to be 'ranged diff' runt."--Everybody's.

Factors That Indicate Desirable Qualities in the Head of the Herd. After looking over an individual that is intended to go to the head of a herd the first question that should arise is as to the character of his dam, next of the grandams, and then might be considered the sire and grandsire.

The Ayrshire is a hardy cow with a vigorous appetite. In general appearance she is sprightly and full of life. The Ayrshire cow is healthy, rarely having ailments of body or udder, and is a very persistent milk-er, giving a uniform flow well up to freshening.

this impression is gained go into details. First of these is a good head, denoting masculinity. The head must be well carried; then the right kind of neck that blends nicely into good shoulders, a good back--not beefy--straight to the tail head, good length of hind quarter, thighs not beefy, under line indicating capacity; veining showing good circulation, the skin underneath the body loose and pliable, rudimentaries not too close together, a good thickness through heart and lungs and the body placed on good, well set legs.

Now, in purchasing a dairy sire if one can be found that is a proved producer of desirable progeny that is the bull you want. The prevailing idea that a bull must be young is wrong. Where these animals have been properly cared for, with an opportunity for exercise, they should be productive for many years. It takes years to try out a herd bull, and when you find one that is tried do not undervalue the time that has been spent in proving his worth.

Take good care of the bulls. Don't turn them with the herds. Conserve their power, provide exercise, give a variety of feeds, and when they prove animals of exceptional merit keep them where they will add wealth to the country and prosperity to the neighborhood that is fortunate in their presence.

Grinding Grain For Cows. At the New Jersey station it was found that the use of corn and cob meal in place of ear corn in rations which were otherwise identical increased the amount of milk produced 9.4 per cent and the butter fat 4.5 per cent, says Hoard's Dairyman.

Scours in calves is very often the result of feeding too large quantities of cold milk or of feeding the milk in dirty utensils, so avoid both of these conditions. If the animal receives separator milk remove the foam and warm the milk before feeding.

That Was All. A man was walking along the street, and he saw a house on fire. He rushed across the way and rang the bell. After some time a lady, who proved to be slightly deaf, appeared at the door.

Good as His Word. "Look here, this inclosed car you sold me for as good as new rattles terribly."

But, my dear sir, I told you it was a rattling good bargain.--New York Sun.

SEASONING LUMBER.

Simple Method of Preventing the Ends From Cracking.

To prevent the ends of lumber from cracking while in the process of seasoning procure strips of soft wood not over seven-eighths inch thick and of same width and length as thickness and width of board to be seasoned.

Once the strips are nailed on the ends of the lumber to be seasoned pile and season in the usual manner, taking care to protect from the sun if piled during the hot months, but if piled in fall, winter or spring the sun will do no harm.

taken off, tires examined or removed, and keeps the pressure off the tires when the car is not in use. It is also valuable from the fact that tires are thus kept out of the oil and grease often found on garage floors.

Effects of Radium on Gems. Many precious stones show a remarkable change of color in the presence of radium. In late German experiments a colorless diamond from Borneo became pale yellow after an exposure of eight days to impure radium bromide, deeper yellow in eight days more and was not wholly restored to its original colorlessness by heating to redness.

The Critophone. An English voice specialist has invented a machine which enables a singer to hear his own voice just as it sounds to his audience. The demand for such a contrivance has been so great that countless adaptations of the phonograph and of the telephone have been tried out in the endeavor to obtain a correct reproduction of the voice of a speaker or singer, so that he can criticize his own delivery and modify his tone to obtain the best results.

Detroit's City Garbage Plant. A municipal garbage reduction plant will be built at Detroit, having a maximum capacity of 300 tons per day. The city garbage amounts to some 50,000 tons per annum.

Science In Brief. The invention of the barometer dates back to the year 1643. There is a Bible written on palm leaves in Gottingen university. It will require 20,000 horsepower of electrical energy daily to run the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

DAIRY WISDOM.

The small top milk pail is a necessity in the production of clean milk. No person who has a communicable disease should be permitted to handle milk. A dairy barn should be built on high ground, with good natural drainage and shelter from the cold winter winds.

RELATION OF FEED TO DAIRY DEVELOPMENT

Growing dairy bred heifers involves not only the question of cost of feed, but the influence of the feeding upon the later value of the animal, says the Kansas Farmer.

The work at the station consisted in dividing forty heifer calves into two groups. One group received a heavy ration from birth to first calving, the other group was given a light ration. The heavy ration consisted of whole milk during the first six months and all the grain and hay the heifers would eat.

It was observed that this age of first calving had a pronounced effect upon the size of the cows. The growth of the heifers that calved early was checked to a marked degree. The result was a cow somewhat smaller and more refined in type than those calving a year later.

It was found that heavy feeding tended to produce a larger and coarser

To those dairymen who are striving to improve the quality of their products a dairy house is a necessity. Milk that is poured or strained in the barn or allowed to stand there is liable to be contaminated by bacteria and absorb stable odors.

animal. The opinion of many breeders that heifers raised largely on roughage have a greater capacity for handling feed when mature is not borne out by these experiments. Professor Eckles, in commenting on the influence of the ration in developing dairy qualities, states that factors that are the result of heredity, such as the influence of the sire and the individuality of the heifer, are the real determining factors with reference to the milking functions.

It is apparent from these experiments that it is possible to influence the rate of growth of dairy heifers, the size when mature and the type, to some extent, by the character of the feeding during the growing period and the age of first calving. It does not seem, however, that the character of the ration supplied exerts any appreciable effect upon the milking functions of the cow when matured.

Protect the Fresh Cow. If you have a number of fresh cows for winter milkers in your dairy barn during the next few weeks a big sign, "Shut the Door!" put on every door of the barn may save more than you would believe.

Wicker Hampers. A wicker hamper is perhaps the ideal laundry container. But it must be kept clean. One enameled white looks so clean that it is hard to remember that it may harbor impurities, even germs. It must be washed in hot water occasionally and dried in the sunshine, and then sometimes it can be further refreshed with a clean coat of enamel.

A GRACEFUL BACK.

This evening wrap is fashioned of coral colored brocade velvet, showing a fascinating Japanese pattern in fans and flowers. Below its scalloped bottom falls a straight band of satin in a weirdly oriental tone of blue.

CARE OF CLOTHES.

Slip Your Garments on a Hanger Instead of a Chair Back.

Never leave your suits or dresses lying on a chair or on the bed rail, but put a hanger in them the minute you take them off. It is simply a matter of habit, and it is just as easy to learn to slip a hanger into your coat and put it in the closet at once as it is to throw it on a chair, to hang up later.

Shoes, too, retain their shape much longer if trees are kept in them. You can always tell the shoes which are neglected by their wrinkled, shapeless look. It is a matter of a moment or two to slip shoe trees into your boots when you take them off, and this will prevent the leather from relaxing.

When your tailored skirts become wet from the rain do not let them stay wrinkled, but press them with a hot iron before they become dry. By the way, it is a real economy to invest in a good, durable raincoat, because it will protect your suits and frocks to a great extent and will actually save you money.

It must be washed in hot water occasionally and dried in the sunshine, and then sometimes it can be further refreshed with a clean coat of enamel.

Perhaps the ideal method is to have a sunny, dry laundry and there to gather the soiled clothes. Everything damp, like bath towels, should be spread out on a washable wooden or metal rack and dried each day, then placed in a basket or hamper. The clothes should not be piled together pell-mell. Table linen should be kept by itself in a separate hamper. Household linen can be kept in another and clothes in a third.

Mock Bisque Soup.

Cook a can of tomatoes with a tablespoonful of sugar and an onion cut in slices half an hour. Add half a teaspoonful of soda and pass through a sieve. Make a white sauce of half a cupful of butter, half a cupful of flour and a quart of milk. When boiling stir in the hot tomato, season to taste and serve at once.
