'QUIT GUESSING. GO TO TESTING"

AGRICULTURE COM. WOULD AS-SIST FARMERS IN SEED ' CORN SELECTION.

The different committees appointed by the Business Men's Association are settling down to the tasks assigned and the Agriculture Committee come forward with a definite plan to assist farmers in the problem of seed selection.

line of testing seed corn. The Agricultural Extension Department of the International Harvester Co. have made a great number of experiments in the line of corn raising and they are strongly behind the proposition MUST HAVE PAINTED SIGN of "Quit Guessing and Go to Testing' and "Not More Acres but More Bushels per Acre." They show that one small ear of corn to the hill will produce 26 bushels of shelled corn to the acre, but instead of that there should be at least two or three of these ears to the hill, and that by care in the seed and growth of corn each farmer board thereon. The new law says: should increase his yield 20 or 30 bushels per acre.

They have used and recommended three principal methods of testing seed corn and recommend what is known as the Rag Doll Tester as the simplest and cheapest. This method the committee are endeavoring to have the farmers make use of at once for this year. Instead of taking kernels from a bag of shelled corn and testing that, each ear should be tested and if a few kernels in each ear prove to have the required vitality, it is certain that the whole ear is good.

In these Rag Doll testers are given full instructions for their use. Some of the committee have seen these testers in use and they are fully convinced of their worth and practical value.

The Agricultural committee have other plans on which they are work- an adventurous interval, were ready to ing. If there are a sufficient number of farmers in this section who would signify their intention or desire of sowing alfalfa this year, the committee will have an expert in this line come to Cass City and give a lecture on the growth and care of this practically new crop in this vicinity. On Board the Jupiter.

GRAY day at sea. The decks of the Jupiter were wet with the almost invisible drizzle that filled the air, yet they were swarming with the busy pedestrians. who never lose an opportunity to let every one know that they are on New York was twenty-four hours astern, and the brief Funday service had come to a peaceful end.

Three tall, interesting looking men stood leaning against the starboard rail of the promenade deck, unmindful of the mist, watching the scurrying throng of exercise flends. Two were young, the third was old, and of the three there was one who merited the second glance that invariably was bestowed upon him by the circling pass-

He stood between the gaunt soldierly old man with the fierce mustache and the trim, military young man with one that was close cropped and smart Each wore a blue serge suit and affected a short visored cap of the same material, and each lazily puffed at a very commonplace briar pipe.

The customary he gossip and perenmial snooper who is always making the voyage no matter what ship one takes or the direction one goes, nosed out the purser and discovered that the young man was R. Schmidt of Vienna. He was busy thereafter mixing with the throng, volunteering information that had not been solicited, but which appeared to be welcome. Especially were the young women on board grateful to the he gossip when he accosted them as a perfect stranger to tell them the name of another and even more perfect stranger.

"I am sorry we lost those rooms on the Salammbo," said the younger of his two companions. "I had them positively engaged, money paid down."

"Some one else came along with more money, Dank," observed R. Schmidt. "We ought to be thankful that we received anything at all. Has it.occurred to you that this boat isn't crowded?"

"Not more than half full," said the older man. "All of the others appear ed to be packed from hold to funnel. This must be an unpopular boat."

"I don't know where we'd be, however, if Mr. Blithers hadn't thought of the Jupiter almost at the last minute," said R. Schmidt.

"Nine day boat, though," growled the

"I don't mind that in the least. She's a steady old tub, and that's some-

"Hobbs tells me that it is most extraordinary to find the eastbound steamers crowded at this season of the year," said Dank. "He can't understand it at all. The crowds go over in June and July, and by this time they should be starting for home. I thought we'd have no difficulty in getting on any one of the big boats, but, by jove, everywhere I went they said they were full up."

"It was uncommonly decent of Blithers not coming down to see us off," said the elderly man, who was down on the passenger list as Totten. "I was apprehensive, 'pon my soul. He stuck like a leech up to the last min-

R. Schmidt was reflecting. "It struck me as queer that he had not heard of the transfer of our securities in Lon-

"I cannot understand Bernstein & Sons selling out at a time when the price of our bonds is considerably below their actual value," said Totten, frowning. "A million pounds sterling is what their holdings really represented, according to the dispatches they must have sold at a loss of nearly

"We should have a Marconigram tonight or tomorrow in regard to the bid made in Paris for the bonds held by the French syndicate," said Dank, pulling at his short mustache. "Mr. Blithers is investigating."

"There is something sinister in all this," said R. Schmidt. "Who is buying up all of the outstanding bonds, and what is behind the movement? London has sold all that were held there, and Paris is approached on the same day. If Paris and Berlin should sell, nearly £4,000,000 in Graustark bonds will be in the hands of people whose identity and motives appear to be shrouded in the deepest mystery." "And £4,000,000 represents the entire amount of our bonds held by outside parties," said Totten, with a significant shake of his grizzled head. "The remainder are in the possession of our own institutions and the people themselves. We should hear from Edelweiss, too, in response to my cablegram. Perhaps Romano may be able to throw light on the situation. I confess that I am troubled."

A steward was politely accosting the

"I beg pardon, is this Mr. Totten?"

"Message for you, sir, at the

"Bring it to my stateroom, Totten," said R. Schmidt briefly, and the old man hurried away on the heels of the messenger.

The two young men sauntered carelessly in an opposite direction and soon disappeared from the deck. A few minutes later Totten entered the luxurious parlor of R. Schmidt and laid an unopened wireless message on the table at the young man's elbow. "Open it, Totten."

The old man slit the envelope and glanced at the contents. He nodded his head in answer to an unspoken question.

"Sold?" asked R. Schmidt.

"Paris and Berlin, both of them, prince. Every bond has been gobbled

"Does he mention the name of the buyer.'

"Only by the use of the personal pronoun. He says: 'I have taken over the Paris and Berlin holdings. All is well.' It is signed 'B.' So! Now we know.' R. Schmidt indulged in a wry little smile. "It amounts to nearly $20.000.-000, count. That's a great deal of money to spend in the pursuit of an idle whim."

"Humph!" grunted the old count, and then favored the sunny faced prince with a singularly sharp glance. "Of course you understand his game?"

"Perfectly. It's as clear as day. He intends to be the crown father-in-law. I suppose he will expect Graustark to establish an Order of Royal Grandfa-

"It may prove to be no jest, Robin," said the count seriously.

"My dear Quinnox, don't look so sad," cried the prince. "He may have money enough to buy Graustark, but he hasn't enough to buy grandchildren that won't grow, you know."

Count Quinnox looked at the prince rather pityingly. "It appears to be his way of pulling the strings, my boy. He has loaned us something like $16,-000,000. We have agreed to deposit our public service bonds as security against the loan, so that practically equalizes the situation. It becomes a purely business transaction, but he sees far ahead. This loan of his matures at practically the same time that our first series of government bonds are due for payment. It will be extremely difficult for a small country, such as Graustark, to raise nearly $40,000,000 in, say ten years. The European syndicates undoubtedly would be willing to renew the loan under a new issue. I think it is called refunding or something of the sort. But Mr. Blithers will be in a position to say no to any such arrangement. He holds the whip hand and"-

"But, my dear count," interrupted the prince, "what if he does hold it? Does he expect to wait ten years before exercising his power? You forget that marriage is his ambition. Isn't he taking a desperate risk in assuming that I will not marry before the ten years are up? And, for that matter, his daughter may decide to wed some other chap who"

"That's just the point," said Quinnox. "He is arranging it so that you can't marry without his consent." "The deuce you say!"

"You shall not marry into the Blithers family, my lad, if we can help it," said the count, pulling at his mus-

"I should say not!" said Dank, feeling for his

"I should as soon marry a daughter of Hobbs," said R. Schmidt, getting up from his chair with restored "If he had one, I

"The bonds of matrimony and the bonds of government are by no means synonymous," said Dank, and felt rather proud of himself when his companions favored him with a stare of amazement. The excellent lieutenant was not given to persiflage. "Shall we send a wireless to Blithers congratulating him on his coup?" inquired the prince gayly.

"No," said the count. "Congratulating ourselves on his coup is better." "Good! And you might add that we also are trusting to luck. It may give him something to think about. And now where is Hobbs?" said royalty. "Here, sir," said Hobbs, appearing in the bedroom door.

"Thank you, Hobbs. You may order luncheon for us in the Ritz restaurant. The head waiter has been instructed to reserve the corner table for the whole voyage." In two minutes Hobbs was back with the information that two ladies had taken the table and refused to be dislodged, although the head waiter had vainly tried to convince them that it was reserved for the passage by R. Schmidt and party. "I am quite sure, sir, he put it to them very hagreeably and politely, but the young lady gave 'im the 'aughtiest look I've ever seen on mortal fice, sir, and he came back to me so 'umble that I could 'ardly believe he was the 'ead waiter.' "I hope he was not unnecessarily persistent," said the prince, annoyed. "It really is of no consequence where we sit." "Ladies first, world without end,"

said Dank. "Especially at sea." Twenty minutes later R. Schmidt, seated in the Ritz restaurant, happened to look fairly into the eyes of the loveliest girl he had ever seen, and on the instant forgave the extraordinary delinquency of the hitherto infallible Hobbs.

Later on R. Schmidt sat alone in a by the forehanded Hobbs. The thin drizzle now aspired to something more definite in the shape of a steady downpour, and the decks were almost deserted save for the few who huddled in the unexposed nooks where the sweep and swish of the rain failed to penetrate. There was a faraway look in the young man's eyes, as of one who dreams pleasantly with little effort, but excellent effect. His pipe had gone out, so his dream must have been long and uninterrupted. Eight bells sounded. But what is time to a dreamer? Then came one bell and two, and now his eyes were closed.

Two women came and stood over him, but little did they suspect that his dream was of one of them-the one with the lovely eyes and the soft brown hair. They surveyed him, whispering, the one with a little perplexed frown on her brow, the other with distinct signs of annoyance in her face. The girl was not more than twenty, her companion quite old enough to be her mother, a considerate if not complimentary estimate, for a girl's mother may be either forty, fifty or even fifty-five when you come to think of it.

They were looking for something. That was quite clear. And it was deplorably clear that whatever it was R. Schmidt was sitting upon it. They saw that he was asleep, which made the search if not the actual recovery quite out of the question. The older woman was on the point of poking the sleeper with the toe of her shoe, being a matter of fact sort of person when the girl imperatively shook her head and frowned upon the lady in a way to prove that, even though she was old enough to be the mother of a girl of twenty, she was by no means the mother of this one.

At that very instant R. Schmidt opened his eyes. It must have been a kindly poke by the god of sleep that aroused him so opportunely; but, even so, the toe of a shoe could not have created a graver catastrophe than that which immediately befell him. He completely lost his head. If one had suddenly asked what had become of it he couldn't have told, not for the life of him. For that matter he couldn't have put his finger, so to speak, on any part of his person and proclaimed with confidence that it belonged to R. Schmidt of Vienna. He was looking directly up into a pair of dark, startled eyes, in which there was a very pretty confusion and a far from impervious blink.

"I beg your pardon," said the older woman without the faintest trace of embarrassment-indeed, with some asperity-"I think you are occupying one of our chairs."

He scrambled out of the steamer rug and came to his feet, blushing to the roots of his hair.

"I beg your pardon," he stammered and found his awkwardness rewarded by an extremely sweet smile-in the eyes of the one he addressed.

"We were looking for a letter that I am quite sure was left in my chair. said she.

"A letter?" he murmured vaguely and at once began to search with his eyes.

"From her father," volunteered the elderly one, as if it were a necessary bit of information. Then she jerked the rug away, and three pairs of eyes examined the place where R. Schmidt had been reclining. "That's odd. Did you happen to see it when you sat down, sir?"

"I am confident that there was letter"- began he and then allowed his gaze to rest on the name card at the top of the chair. "This happens to be my chair, madam," he went on, pointing to the card. "'R. Schmidt.' I am very sorry."

"The steward must have put that card there while you were at luncheon, dear. What right has he to sell our chairs over again? I shall report this to the captain"-

"I am quite positive that this is my chair, sir," said the girl, a red spot in each cheek. "It was engaged two days ago. I have been occupying it | since-but it really doesn't matter. It has your name on it now, so I suppose I shall have to"-

"Not at all," he made haste to say. "It is yours. There has been some miserable mistake. These deck stewards are always messing things up. Still, it is rather a mystery about the letter. I assure you I saw no"-

"No doubt the steward who changed the cards had sufficient intelligence to remove all incriminating evidence," said she coolly. "We shall find it among the lost, strayed and stolen articles, no doubt. Pray retain the chair, Mr."- She peered at the name card-"Mr. Schmidt."

Her cool insolence succeeded in nettling a nature that was usually most gentle. He spoke with characteristic directness.

"Thank you, I shall do so. We thereby manage to strike a fair average. I seize your deck chair, you seize my table. We are quits."

She smiled faintly. "R. Schmidt did not sound young and gentle, but old and hateful. That is why I seized the table. I expected to find R. Schmidt a fat old German with very bad manners. Instead, you are neither fat, old nor disagreeable. You took it very nicely, Mr. Schmidt, and I am undone. Won't you permit me to restore your table to you?"

> THE POWER TO GOVERN.

Sometimes it is said that man cannot be trusted with the government of himself. Can he then be trusted with the government of others, or have we found angels in the form of kings to govern him? Let history answer this question.-Thomas Jefferson.

A Monster Vessel of Olden Times. Ptolemaeus Philopater, one of the ancient kings of Egypt, is said to have built a vessel 420 feet long, 56 feet broad, 72 feet high from the keel to the top of the prow and 80 feet to the top of the poop. She had four helms of 60 feet. Her largest oars were 50 feet long, with leaden handles so as to be more easily worked. She had two prows, two sterns and seven rostra or beaks. On both poop and prow she had figures of men and animals that were fully 18 feet high. She had 4,000 rowers, 400 cabin boys or servants. 2,820 marines to do duty on deck, besides being provided with immense stores of arms and provisions.-Westminster Gazette.

The "sacred mushroom" of the Aztecs, which was called by them teonanacatl and used as an intoxicant, was, it appears, not a mushroom, but the narcotic cactus Laphophora Williamsii, now well known for its use by the South American Indians in religious ceremonies. It is popularly called "mescal button," though a better name is peyote. Early writers on Mexico described it as a mushroom, and this notion as to its botanical status still survives. The mistake is due to the fact that in one of the two principal forms in which it is prepared the head of the plant is cut off transversely, and when dried it bears a close resemblance to a mushroom.

A Man Admires A Watch For What It Will "Do."

A boy loves one if it is his very own just because it is his.

A man demands that a watch run accurate to the minute. A boy doesn't mind a slight variation—just so long as the watch keeps running. Men's watches cost more than boys' because they cost more to turn out.

But it is doubtful if a man gets a quarter the satisfaction from owning a watch that a boy does. This is the point--if you want to make that boy

The Most Cream Separator Value For Your Money

ON a Primrose separator there are no mechanical adjustments to make except the turning of one screw to bring the bowl to the correct height—once a year, perhaps. Every bearing is oiled with clean, fresh oil before the handle makes a quarter turn. There is no chance to injure the spindle or spindle bearings when replacing the bowl. These are three exclusive Primrose separator features.

Bullock Skin Boats. There are few more primitive methods of transportation than those in use today by natives of northern India who make their homes in the vicinity of the swift flowing Sutlej. The boats of these aborigines are nothing more or less than bullock skins inflated by the breath of the natives themselves. Two natives may be seen hard at work filling the skins with air. Having inflated them to their satisfaction, they will leap overboard and paddle themselves across the river, great skill and strength being necessary to sustain their equilibrium during the passage. But even should the boats overturn they are easily righted, and the natives are without exception expert swimmers.

An Easy Way to Run Ribbons. When about to send a piece of lingerie to the laundry a piece of narrow tape should be tied to the end of the ribbon and the latter drawn out of the beading, leaving the tape in its place. The knot is then fastened, and the lingerie can be sent to the wash, the ribbon being replaced on its return in exactly the same manner.-Philadelphia

WEANING THE FARM COLT.

Is Taken Away.

Grain Should De Substituted as Milk

To wean a colt appears to be a simple matter. It is simple as many do it, yet the very low degree of success that is shown on many farms by their unthrifty colts is evidence that there is something wrong or that there is some thing lacking, writes J. E. McCartney of Purdue university experiment station. Often in a few weeks during weaning time the youngster changes from the growing, sleek, milk fat colt o a stiff haired and unthrifty, stunted Mrs. F. A. Finkle is recovering from | individual. The colt if properly cared for need lose but little of his flesh bloom and spirit.

Grain must be used as the milk is aken away. It is necessary that the colt have been taught to eat grain beore weaning is attempted. Oats have always been preferred by horsemen for young colts. They are undoubtedly superior to any other single grain. The colt likes a mixture or a variety of grains and will thrive best on such a ration. He relishes corn, and it may well be fed as part of the grain ration. does, and so does milk, which is as nearly ideal food as nature can make. Corn should not be fed alone nor in too great quantities. Bran is a splendid feed and contains material for bone and muscle. A mixture of oats will be necessary for our missionary 60 per cent, corn 30 per cent and bran offering to be in Chicago not later 10 per cent makes a ration that will enable any colt to grow rapidly. A years our local church has fully met | handful of oilmeal may be profitably added. Then he will be more likely to eat enough to almost make up for the lack of milk.

Hay should be provided in plenty. Doubtless alfalfa or clover is the most desirable for young growing colts. Both grain and hay should be of the colt it should be done. This is a big factor in preventing any check in the growth of the youngster.

Naturally the colt will miss the com pany of its dam. If it has been accustomed to stay in the stable or yard, while the mother is out at work there will be less fretting on that account. If the youngster has followed the dam constantly and has never been kept separated from her he should be broken gradually to stay away from her if it is at all convenient to do so.

If there are several colts on the farm it is best to wean all of them at the same time. The youngsters love company, and if there are two or more of them together they will fret and worry

MONEY IN SHEEP.

Good Ration For Lambs Intended For the Early Market. Lambs that are intended for fall market should not be weaned until late in summer. In fact, ewes will naturalces are held every Sunday morning ly wean their own lambs, writes a correspondent of the Orange Judd Farmer. But the time from birth until the marketing of the lamb presents many problems. When a ewe gives an abundance of milk it is not wise to feed until near weaning time. But it is always a good plan to give some dry feed, so the lamb is accustomed to it when it is to be taken from its mother. The simplest way is to arrange a creep through which they can go into a small lot or section of the pasture. The creep must exclude the older sheep, as they do not need the grain. Lambs will begin to eat when two > weeks old, or at least within a month. A satisfactory mixture when the best lambs are to be grown for the earliest market is one of three-fourths cornmeal and one-fourth bran by weight. At first they will eat only a little, but after a time they will eat about half a pound daily. At first give only a little feed. At no time leave feed in the trough to be picked over. The clean trough will make the lambs relish every helping. Never at any time let any of the feed grow stale. If there is no corn on hand ground barley is satisfactory. Ground oats are good, but with them there is no need to feed the bran. Keep the lambs in the best growthy condition at all times.

For late fattening in the fall I regard corn alone an ideal feed. In such a case only the growth is secured, and the fat covering steadily placed over the body during the latter part of the
