Tuscola's Share in Raising Red Cross Fund Is $25,000, Over $1,000 a Township.

An Appeal to the Patriotic and Liberty Loving Feople of Tuscola County on behalf of the American Red Cross:

The president of the United States has issued a call to the nation to raise by voluntary subscription the sum of $100,000,000. This amount to constitute a fund to be used by the American Red Cross in carrying on its work of alleviating the suffering which is sure to follow in the wake of this great conflict and to care for the families of soldiers of our county. Of this amount Michigan is asked to raise $3,000,000. The city of Detroit will raise $1,500,000, thus leaving $1,500,000 to be raised in Michigan outside of Detroit.

Tuscola county's share is $25,-000 and Governor Sleeper has requested that all counties proceed immediately to raise their respective amount. And we further request that for the sake of uniformity of action the week beginning June 18 be devoted to this ef-

Every citizen of Tuscola county who treasures his heritage of liberty should eagerly grasp this opportunity of serving his country. Many homes all over our fair and prosperous county will soon be offering up their best in very life blood to maintain our flag on the ramparts of this gigantic war. Are we who will escape the ravages of the conflict, being exempt on account of age or other reasons, going to fail in giving to our heroes the support and comfort possible only through the kindly ministration of the Red Cross? Are we going to fail in our duty?

Tuscola county will respond to the call of all her past traditions and at the close of the coming week's campaign every man, woman and child in Tuscola county with upturned face and proud heart will salute the flag and say, "I have done my part."

in the county during next week. The $43.09. parade will be held at 7:15 and addresses will be given at the opera house at 7:45. The Caro band will play during the parades and at each meeting held in the county and some of the following speakers will be heard at each meeting: Rev. Hartley Cansfield, Rev. Joseph Fox, Rev. S. C. Hathaway, Rev. Fr. Cook, Walter S. Wixson and H. H. Smith.

The Woman's Study Club held a special meeting Wednesday afternoon and voted to contribute $50.00 to start the Red Cross fund in Elkland township. Mrs. W. H. Carson of Ann Arbor gave a talk on practical work for the Red Cross and I. B. Auten outlined the work of the local organization to the ladies. Mrs. J. B. Cootes was named chairman of ladies' committee and Mesdames E. W. Jones, H. F. Lenzner, Jas. Tennant, B. J. Dailey and Angus McGillvray were appointed as representatives of the local churches to bring the matter before the young people and children of the Sunday schools and interest them in participating in the parade next Thurs-mass meeting held at the council rooms Monday evening to consider the reposed increase in electric light and water rates. Only fourteen citizens besides six members of the village council were present. Without doubt, the patrons of the light and water service realized that an increase was necessary and had the confidence that the council would adjust the rates on satisfactory basis.

Those present voted for the recommendation to the council that the electric light rates be raised from 10 cents to 12 cents a kilowatt and electric power from 5 to 6 cents and that the electric service be discontinued from 1:00 to 6:00 a.m. during the summer Belva Tibbals presided at the piano months. The Swedish seamen were neighborly with sailing vessels on the trip to the states, but discharge from the army, was urged steamers were given a wide berth, because of their fear of raiders in these troublesome times. The voyage, outside of the Capetown storm, was unventful.

Messrs. Schwaderer and Ball left he states for Johannesberg, Transvaal, in August 1915 and entered the employ of the Brakpan Mining Co., gold miners, as mining engineers. The American Red Cross

What It Is, What It Is Not, What It Does, and What It Needs.

It is an organization, under efficient leadership, of all the men, women and children of the United States, without reference to creed, color, nativity or age. It is the humanitarian arm of the United States Government and was created by Act of Congress. It is the experienced recourse in time of great civilian disasters, whether during peace or during war. In its work of relief, it makes no distinction; all classes, creeds and race are one. It is a relief clearing house, permanent, responsible and experienced. It is the United States Government's organized protector of sick and wounded soldiers and sailors in time of war. The regular medical establishment of the army and navy is not organized on a scale sufficiently extensive to meet the needs of troops in time of war; and the Red Cross is one of the two , principal agencies, established by Congress, to provide such service in time of war on the proper scale. It is a semi-governmental agency for the collection and distribution of money and supplies for war relief purposes. Its work includes the relief of dependent wives, children and mothers of men who serve in the army or navy. Its administration is largely by men and women who are rendering service without pay. Its funds are disbursed under the supervision of officers of the United States Government. The President of the United States is its president, and the comptroller of the currency is its treasurer.

It is not merely a physician's organization, nor a nurse's organization, nor a women's organization. It is not organized to give relief to individuals, except after some great disaster that is beyond the resources of the other agencies of the community, or in connection with war relief above mentioned. It needs the financial help and membership of every man, woman and child in the United States. Money in a large aggregate amount is needed to cover the cost of conducting its work.

MOST EFFECTIVE CULTIVATION OF CORN

IMPLEMENT FOR MAINTAINING SOIL MULCH.

Farmers can make the cultivation of corn most effective and go a long way toward assuring themselves of harvesting a good crop by getting the start of weeds. When these robber plants are small, before their roots have taken firm hold and before they have used much soil moisture, they can be destroyed by a light stirring of the soil. When weeds have become better established, however, deep cultivation only will kill them. Such deep cultivation not only means more labor, but it cannot be accomplished without breaking and destroying many corn

If corn land has been properly prepared deep cultivation is not advisable. It should never be given close to the plants after they are a foot high, as much harm would be done by breaking the roots.

To get an early start of the weeds, in many sections or in seasons when seed germinates slowly, it is advisable to harrow once or twice or otherwise to cultivate the field before corn comes up. Limited moisture makes thin stands necessary and it is poor management to allow grass and weeds to rob the corn of this moisture.

Aside from destroying weeds, timely cultivation is beneficial in preventing the loss of moisture by evaporation and also in hastening the warming of the soil. The loss of soil moisture by evaporation continues much longer from a compact, damp surface than from a loose, dry surface, and the evaporation tends to keep the soil cold.

In Northern localities and at high altitudes the conservation of heat is frequently as important as the conservation of moisture. Luckily, both heat and moisture may be conserved by good, timely cultivation. Heat is wasted in evaporating or wasting soil moisture, making the surface loose and dry saves both soil heat and soil moisture.

Cultivate After Rains.

Cultivating after heavy rains is a good practice. To be most effective the cultivating should be done as soon as the surface is dry enough to work and dry the soil.

(Prepared by the United States Depart-well. If the soil is allowed to dry unment of Agriculture.) til it breaks up cloddy, much moisture will be lost, a good mulch cannot be obtained, and harm is more likely to be done to the corn roots. As long as rapid evaporation is taking place, the surface will remain cold and the growth of the corn will be slow. In order to cover large areas quickly, cultivators which work two or more rows are a great advantage.

The number of cultivations necessary and the best time for them de-Weeds should not be allowed to grow, and a mellow surface should be maineffectually accomplished with one or from four to six cultivations may be necessary.

Nothing can be gained by continuing cultivation in cornfields free from weeds and in which the soil surface is mellow. When the surface is suffi-KINGSTON-NOVESTA ciently loose and dry to reduce evaporation, is open enough to prevent runoff, and no weeds are starting, a cultivation could do no good and if carelessly performed would do injury to the corn.

Object of Cultivation.

Corn should be cultivated only when one or more objects will be accomplished by the cultivation and when total effects will be more beneficial than last week Thursday with Mrs. J. D. injurious. The beneficial effects of Funk. cultivation are:

ERADICATION OF WIRE GRASS FUNGUS DISEASES OF TOMATO

Pastures Should Be Completely Pul- Blossom-End Rot Attacks Fruit Beverized to Depth of Four Inches by Cutaway Harrow.

The so-called wire grasses are many. Such grasses as propagate by means of creeping root stalks constantly reproduce new plants at the rooting points, as couch or quack grass, Johnson grass, Bermuda grass and members of the blue-grass family. This pasture, if adapted to tillage, should be completely pulverized to the depth of four inches with a cutaway or disk harrow in July and keep harrowed once a week as long as the soil remains dry during the remainder of the season, allowing no green spear of grass to get a foothold.

By fall the mass of roots will be practically lifeless if the season has been normally dry and hot. The whole should then be turned under ten inches deep, using a jointer. In the spring harrow every week until time to plant a cultivated crop, then keep perfectly clean, and the battle will be won.

IDLE ACRE IS UNPROFITABLE

If Soil Is Not Required to Produce Some Useful Crop Injurious Weeds Are Encouraged.

In some way or other every acre on the farm should be compelled to do its duty according to its ability. A loafer is wholly unprofitable and is very likely to get into mischief; and loafing acres are no exception. If they are not required to produce some useful crop they will produce weeds, and the seeds will be scattered by some means or other over the entire farm. Don't have any loafers about your house or your barns, and don't have any loafing acres on your farm.

BAD FEED QUITE DANGEROUS

Old Corn or Hay, Not Sheltered Properly, is Often in Moldy and Poor Condition.

Often the farmer in the spring of the year has some old corn or old hay, which, if it has not been sheltered properly, is moldy and in bad condition. Such feed often is the cause of serious trouble with the stock. Farmers should be careful how they use old moldy feed of any kind, for it is dangerous, often meaning the loss of several head of stock before the trouble is located.

fore It Is Mature. Causing It to Drop to Ground.

Blossom-end rot of tomatoes is a disease caused by a fungus. It attacks the blossom-end of the fruit while the fruit is green and causes it to rot and drop off before it is mature. As soon as the disease is observed, pull off all affected fruit and destroy it. After this, spray thoroughly with bordeaux mixture. Bordeaux mixture is made with one pound of blue stone, one pound of quick lime and 12 gallons of water. Dis- at Lapeer. solve the blue stone by hanging it in a cloth bag, in water, over night. Slake the lime separately, then mix the two thoroughly, and add the 12 gallons of water. Earthen, glass or wood receptacles must be used to dissolve the blue stone in. It will corrode metal.

If fruit is ripened, gather all ripe fruit before spraying. It is necessary to repeat the spray every week as long as there is any sign of the dis-

To get as much POWER as Studebaker offers in a Four at $985, you must pay on the average $2753. To get as much POWER in a six as the Studebaker Six at $1250, costs on the average $4078.

AS a matter of fact, there are very few FOURS on the market that equal the Studebaker Four in Power, just as there are but few Sixes that match in Power the Studebaker Six. And they are all very expensive, as the figures show.

In ratio to power, Studebaker is the most economical car made, because Studebakers are the lightest cars in the world in ratio to their power.

This lightness, together with the enduring strength that characterizes Studebakers, is the evolution of four years' intense study of the performance of hundreds of thousands of Studebakers in actual use under all sorts of service conditions. Let us show you some other points of Studebaker value. You owe it to yourself to know them before you buy.

> Studebaker Value may only be judged by comparing Studebakers with cars costing many hundreds of dollars more.

PROCLAMATION OF RED CROSS WEEK

INASMUCH as our thoughts as a nation are now turned in united purpose towards the performance to the utmost of the services and duties which we have assumed in the cause of justice and liberty.

INASMUCH as but a small proportion of our people can have the opportunity to serve upon the actual field of battle, but all men, women and children alike may serve and serve effectively by making it possible to care properly for those who do serve under arms at home and abroad

To Cultivate the Back Yard With Success

THE gardener should never permit the surface of the soil to become baked or even to form an appreciable crust. Constant stirring with hand tools or a wheel cultivator should be practiced between the rows and about the plants.

Such a stirring permits the air to penetrate the soil, where it facilitates chemical action and bacterial activity, destroys weeds which otherwise would utilize large amounts of plant food and, finally, conserves the moisture

The rake is perhaps the gardener's most valuable tool in cultivating. This can be passed backward and forward over the ground until it is in an open. mellow condition. Where vegetables grow closely in the rows it often will be necessary to supplement the cultivation by hand weeding. Small implements are made for this purpose and may be purchased cheaply. It is well also in some cases to pull up weeds by hand, especially where they grow closely about the stalks of the garden plants.

Just as the gardener should be care ful in early spring not to dig the ground when the soil is too moist, so he should be careful later in the season not to cultivate too soon after rains. The stirring of very muddy soil puddles it into a compact, cementlike mass in which the plant food is securely locked.

The garden will require attention. however, as soon as the excess moisture from a rain has soaked in or partly evaporated. Unless the ground is stirred at this time a crust will form almost inevitably. Such a crust, besides restricting the plants, prevents the access of air and also facilitates the loss of moisture through evapora-

When during prolonged dry spells the plants give evidence of suffering because of the lack of moisture, water must, if possible, be supplied arti- ers. ficially. Where a supply of piped water is at hand perhaps the most usual method of irrigation is by sprinkling with a hose. If sprinkling is practiced it should be done late in the afternoon. It is not sufficient merely to dampen the surface; a thorough wetting should

A more satisfactory and more economical method of irrigation, however, is to open small furrows between the rows of growing plants and to supply water in these ditches from a hose or pipe. Several hours after the water has soaked in the dry earth should be drawn back into place.

EYE STRUCTURE.

Light.

An observant chauffeur passing an automobile with glaring headlights noted that objects at the side of the road which had been distinctly visible dropped out of sight when the bright lights were thrown upon them. Since one can see better in a little light than in no light he wondered why one cannot see better in bright light than in moderate light.

The answer is, paradoxically, that the less light there is the better one sees. for the brighter the object the less efficient is the eyesight. If after we have been in darkness we suddenly turn on a bright light and look at our eyes in the mirror, we can see the pupil of the eye rapidly growing smaller. If we reduce the light the pupil dilates again. What happens is the same as in the camera when we adjust the shutter to the intensity of the light.

The colored iris of the eye corresponds to the shutter. It consists chiefly of a muscle which as the light increases is stimulated to contract, thus drawing the curtain and shutting out some of the superfluous light. It usually takes a few seconds for this adjustment to take place. Thus when we emerge from darkness into light we are blinded until the iris can shut out some of the light from the eyes.

How to Save Tires.

WHERE IS CASS CITY'S PATRIOTISM?

Several weeks ago through the efforts of Earl Heller and W. R. Kaiser, 35 young men agreed to turn out every Tuesday and Thursday evening for military training under the direction of the latter. Although the attendance at the first meetings was fair, since the scarlet fever quarantine it has been impossible to get sufficient men out. Enthusiasm and patriotism in Cass City are apparently lacking. Other communities are responding to he nation's need in over-subscribing the Liberty Loan, in Red Cross activity and in military training companies. Cass City is not doing her share. The township's quota for the Liberty Loan is under-subscribed by several thousand dollars; there has been little or no activity in other patriotic work and the young men are now laying down on their job in forming a company for training. We don't want to be known as "slackers" nor we don't wish our community to be placed i that class. The forming of an independent com pany does not bind anyone to militar service nor will it make anyone liabl to such service to any more exten than every citizen now is. These com panies are an accordance with Gov Sleeper's and with President Wilson's wishes. In a letter to Mr. Kaise from Major Phillips, commander of he Mich. State Home Guards, it wa stated that although it would be im possible to equip independent compa ies at present, as soon as the nev roops of the National Guard and mus tered in Home Guards are uniforme and armed the state will do somethin for such companies as ours. Military training is also healt training. It is the best relaxation an exercise to indulge in after your day work. It will give you increase health and vitality. Let us all wh

A Race for

But There Was More In It Than the Money.

By ALAN HINSDALE

A number of persons stood on the front porch of a summer hotel near Washington, now looking at their watches and now up the road as if expecting something or somebody. Among them was a young lady dressed evidently for an automobile ride.

"If he gets here at 3 o'clock he'll be an hour ahead of time," said one.

"What time is he due in Washington?" asked another.

"At 6." "What's up on it?"

"Oh, nothing valuable. It's a gentleman's race against time. A dozen pairs of gloves are all there is in it."

"Here he comes now." The last one of these remarks was scarcely spoken before a minute cloud size. In another minute it pulled up at the steps of the hotel. A young man jumped out, calling for gasoline and such other automobile equipments as he needed. The lady mentioned stepped up to him and said: "Mr. Champlin, I believe."

"I am," replied the auto man, bowing and trying to get hold of his cap to pull it off.

"My cousin, Humphrey Cook, knowing that I was here, that I adore automobiling and that I wish to go to the city, has written me that you would stop here and possibly would take

Mr. Champlin hesitated.

"I'll be no trouble," the lady added.
"Really I should be delighted for our company, but in case of any delay I may have to proceed at breakneck speed.'

"The faster you go the better I shall like it."

"Very well. I'm an hour ahead and if nothing breaks shall have no trouble in reaching the goal on time. Are you ready?"

"I am." "Step in, Miss- I beg your pardon. didn't get your name.'

Jack Hood that you don't like?" "I've heard she's the worst feminine daredevil the world has ever seen."

"You've also heard probably that she knows all about an auto. Perhaps she may aid you in case of trouble." By this time Miss Hood was settling herself comfortably in the auto, tying her veil under her chin. There was a singular look on Champlin's face. He had bet Humphrey Cook that he would drive his auto to New York and return by a given time. Might not Cook have this girl to delay him?

"I'm sorry, Miss Hood," he said, "but I've changed my mind about tak-"I haven't changed mine about go-

A bewitching smile hovered on her

"Very well," he said, "I'll take you. But remember that in case there's any rascality perpetrated I shall treat you just as if you were a man."

"Good! That's the way I wish to be treated."

During this scene the onlookers had gathered around the machine, and at the last words some of the men and all the women clapped their hands. Champlin got in, and the couple rolled away, followed by cheers and the waving of handkerchiefs. In another minute nothing could be seen of them but a tiny dust cloud.

For an hour Miss Hood entertained the driver of the auto in such a way as to make him forget everything but her. Nevertheless his eye was on the speed gauge and the clock, and nothing pertaining to winning his race was neglected. There are women who can do more with a man in an hour than other women can do in a lifetime. Miss Hood simply absorbed him.

"Have you time to stop for a glass of milk?" she asked. "Certainly."

"Well, there's a farmhouse off the road up there. Would you mind getting one for me?" Mr. Champlin stopped before the gate and went up to the house. A woman answered his knock at the door, and he went inside. He was no sooner out of sight than Miss Hood jumped out, took a small nickel plated monkey wrench from her belt, unscrewed a nut and put it in her pocket. She had not finished her work before Champlin reappeared with a glass of milk in his of glass on stone. Looking up, she saw Champlin the picture of astonishment and chagrin. He knew that he had been "done." Striding with a quick step to the auto, he said sternly: "You know what I said before leaving-that if there was any rascality perpetrated I would treat you just as I should a man." "Oh, yes," she replied, making a face at him; "I remember that."

"Give me what you have removed."

"I decline to do so." Champllin made a dive for her. She sidled around the auto. He followed, chasing her in a circle. She was too fleet for him. He was strong, but she was agile. At every stop there would be the pretty face brimming with mischief, her eyes riveted on him that she should be ready for his slightest move.

finally he gave it up. "Did Cook send you out to do this?"

"Well, I suppose I shall have to lose the bet."

"That isn't necessary."

"What do you mean?" "That if you ask me to give you what have taken I will do so.' "On what conditions?"

"No conditions." "No conditions! What do you mean?" "I mean that I agreed with Humphrey for a dozen pairs of gloves to come out and delay you. Please don't ask me why I prefer not to do so."

She cast down her eyes, and her meaning was plain. She had "gone soft" on Champlin.

She handed him the nut. He replaced it, and in another minute they were thooting again along the road.

Champlin was delighted. Cook had very nearly got ahead of him-would have got ahead of him had it not been that the girl had taken so great a fancy to him that she hadn't the heart to "do" him. What a splendid joke it would be on Cook and the party who were present at the making of the bet when Champlin and Miss Hood rolled up to the - hotel on time! Miss Hood hadn't even asked for the gloves her cousin had offered her to help him win them. Champlin told her that as soon as he received the stakes he would give them to her and she could change them for ladies' gloves. Instead of being pleased at this, she appeared to be very much hurt. Champlin begged her to tell him why, and she replied that she had not consented to be a turncoat for a bribe. This left him to understand that she had done it all for him. There was a very tender scene between them, at the end of which the misunderstanding was made up, and for the rest of the journey Miss Cook held the steering wheel, while Mr. Champlin's arm was about her waist.

There were no more delays. On approaching the city, having still an hour's leeway, they concluded to stop at a convenient place and get the dust out of their throats with an ice. Champlin left the lady for a brief season while he poured out something more effective than an ice in doing away with dust. On rejoining her they partook of the ices and resumed their

"What are you smiling at?" asked

Miss Hood of her companion. "Oh, I was thinking how surprised that cousin of yours will be when we roll up on time. That was a rascally proceeding of his, and it deserved to fail. If you hadn't been the dearest girl in the world it would have succeeded. But just think of his surprise when he hears of the other part of it."

He managed to get hold of her hand with his left, holding on to the wheel with one hand, and they bowled along in this way until they met another conveyance. And now the dome of the capitol with the figure perched upon it loomed up faint in the distance. It was not long before the outskirts of the city were reached, and half an hour before the time limit had expired they stopped at the ladies' entrance of the --- hotel. A liveried servant advanced and said:

"Mr. Cook and a party of ladies and gentlemen are in a private dining room waiting for you, sir.'

Entering the room, Champlin expected to find Cook eager to know why his scheme had failed. Instead Cook handed his cousin a dozen pairs of ladies' gloves. After this he put out his hand to Champlin.

"I congratulate you, old boy, with all my heart on your engagement. Champlin stood mute with astonish-

"Champ, old boy," added Cook, "you need an explanation. To make you lose I sent my cousin Jack out to effect an entrance into your auto and delay you on the way. If she succeeded she was to have a dozen pairs of gloves for a reward. She has lost the gloves. "That's plain," said Champlin.

"Well, there was a bet between Jack and me of another dozen pairs of gloves against a hundred cigars that she would make you propose to her on the way.' Champlin looked so many emotions, of which astonishment and shamefacedness were the most prominent, that all burst into a laugh, in which he finally joined. Then, turning to Miss Hood, he advanced, with a puzzled, inquiring look on his face. "Was it all a sham?" he asked.

She made no reply in words, but a slight color rising to her cheeks indicated that the brief period she had passed, even of a sham engagement, had not been unpleasant to her. Besides, Champlin was regarded as one of the best catches in Washington. Since he could get no word of confirmation he concluded to apply a test. Putting an arm around the girl's waist, he drew her toward him and kissed her. She submitted without a protest.

"It's a go!" shouted Cook, and there was a burst of merriment, all crowdhand. Miss Hood was awakened to Ing around Miss Hood to congratulate his presence by hearing the breaking her, the men with handshakes, the

"CIVILIZATION"—A FOREWORD

Nearly nineteen hundred years ago, the son of God, as he stood in a temple in Jerusalem, was asked: Which is the greatest commandment of all?"

He replied, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God." This is the first commandment, and the second is like unto it: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." There are no commandments greater than these.

Today the great sorrowful eyes of this son of God gaze down upon a vastly different scene.

As he listens to the screaming shells, the crashing of the monstrous guns, all the symphony of the reddest war mankind has ever known, HIS heart must recognize the bitter truth in the statement of one of the world's foremost educators, that in the nineteen hundred centuries that have elapsed since HIS departure, that Civilization has failed to accept honestly the teachings of Jesus Christ.

And it is upon this theme that Thomas H. Ince, without a peer as a master producer of cinematographic art, has founded his never dying story contained under the caption of "Civilization."

"Civilization" is an allegorical story of a war that has laughed at the world's flaunting boast of a higher progress-of a boast of the higher and finished civilization and culture of man. It does not concern itself as to which side is right or wrong; but it deals with those ranks which are paying the grim penalty—the ranks of Humanity.

It is the story of the attempted right of one man to rule the world—to hold the power of life and death over every man, woman and child with the consequent sorrow, desolation and woe, that he, the perpetrator, may individually profit. And yet how opportune, how timely and how true has been the prophecy contained in this great story. How nearly as pictured, are the true state of affairs of the warriddled world of today coming slowly but surely to the same end—to the subsequent ideals as brought forth in the impelling tale of "Civilization."

The complete dismemberment of the great autocracy of Russia with it's one man rule, the ominous unrest and rumblings that are apparent in every great European state today—even Germany, ruled over by the autocrat. The happenings that may be taking place or will possibly have taken place after the time of the writing of these words; stupendous events that may have gone down into the great red history of the world even as you read this.

Men have prophesied these same events which have already taken place; have prophesied even lesser events that would take place with the passing of time, and yet the World has laughed derisively in their faces—has called them crazy. Still, it has come to pass. More even may come to pass that is as yet undreamed before this world crisis is passed, and still the world laughs.

'Civilization" is not a mockery. It is a full-blooded recital of a human interest story which affects not one nation, but ALL nations. A great massive, stupendous, glittering production of the story of every man himself.

Good Evidence That Clerk Actually "Wrote" Declaration of Independence.

FAMOUS FOR SKILLFUL WORK

Timothy Matlack, Employed in the Office of Charles Thomson, Secretary in the First Congress, Is Accorded Honor by Expert Who Has Investigated.

HO wrote the Declaration of Independence? Thomas Jefferson, of course, everyone knows that. But who held the pen and formed the letters on the great piece of parchment that the members of the Continental congress signed? It is one of the largest official papers in existence-one skin of parchment nearly three feet long and more nearly twice the normal size and is unusually handsome and clear.

The secretary who was ordered to promulgate the work was Charles Thomson, a man of high character who had been the principal of a school at New Castle, Del., and an active patriot. The first congress chose him as secretary in 1774, and he held the office untill the Continental congress passed out of existence in March, 1789. There were 15 presidents of the Continental congress, but there was only one secretary. He made the entries in the journal in 1774, and he wrote the last entry.

Died at Age of Ninety-Five.

During all those 15 years it was only on rare occasions that any other hand than his wrote in the journal. When the Continental congress passed out of existence he retired to private life and never held office again; but he did not die until 1824, when he was almost in his office in 1775 and 1776, and afterward, in 1780, a member of the congress from Pennsylvania, survived him der in chief of the American army. The identification of the penmanship of the commission with that of the entry in the journal and of both with an autograph letter of Matlack's that is among the papers of the Continental congress is certain.

Probably there was not at that time man in the country who was Matlack's equal as a penman. Later Thomson had two clerks in his office, George Bond and Thomas Edison, each of whom wrote a good engrossing hand; so did General Washington's secretary, Richard Varick. Alexander Hamilton wrote a finer hand than any of them, but neither he nor any of the others could equal the beauty of Matlack's capital letters and the clearness and symmetry of his writing as a whole.

Matlack Copied the Declaration. Fortunately, Matlack was still a clerk in Thomson's office when the Declaration of Independence was ordered to be engrossed for final signature, and the task of copying it was assigned to him. He copied from the broadside, "In Congress, July 4, 1776," which is reproduced in the written Declaration in the same form of let-

It is not easy to identify the penmanship of a document like the Declaration, for the writer has written very plainly and in characters of twice the than two feet wide. The writing is normal size, but some individual peculiarities appear in this as in all writing. A few years ago some of the officials in the library of congress who knew that Matlack was the best penman employed by Thomson made a comparison of General Washington's commission, which was known to have in the butter. Remove all burnt pieces been written by him, with the Declara-

The first peculiar letter in the commission is the capital "N" in New Hampshire, and we find its counterpart in "Nature's" in the second line of the body of the Declaration. The graceful flourish at the top of "T" in the word "To" in the commission is repeated in the second of the sentences beginning "That" in the Declaration. In the word "offer" in the commission there is a marked peculiarity in the double "f;" the first "f" is made like the old-fashioned long "s." It appears in the word "effect" in the Declaration, then in "suffer" and "sufferable." That is the most noteworthy peculiarity in Matninety-five years old. One of the clerks lack's writing. His last service was as alderman of Philadelphia from 1813 to 1818.

Was a Great Penman.

To carry out the order of the congress that the Declaration be proclaimed, Thomson needed more than a score of copies, for he had to send it to everyone of the states and to the army. So to save time he did not attempt to have any copies written off with the pen, but sent the original drafts, which the congress had passed, to the official printer, John Dunlap. The following morning the printed copies were in Thomson's hands.

It was from one of those copies that Philadelphia first heard the Declaration read, and it was one of them that became the official copy, for Thomson had not copied the Declaration even into the journal of the congress before he gave it to the printer; but when he wrote the journal for July 4 he left a blank space for the Declaration, and the next day, with two wafers of red wax, he fastened in the printed broadside. At the time it had been signed only by John Hancock, as president of congress, and countersigned by Charles Thomson as secretary.

Wrote Washington's Commission. I have said sometimes an entry was made in the journal of the congress by another hand than Thomson's, writes Mr. Hunt. The first of those occasions was on June 12, 1775, when Timothy Matlack recorded a resolution to set aside a day for fasting and prayer to avert the desolating calamities that seemed to be impending. "Matlack had been appointed a clerk in Thomson's office on May 15, and five days later, on May 20, he wrote out the most important document that the congress had issued up to that time—the commission

In 1824, when John Quincy Adams was secretary of state, a skilled engraver, William J. Stone, made a copper plate facsimile of the Declaration. That is the only one that has ever been made. It was distributed by order of congress and is familiar to us all. It is a perfect reproduction in every particular of the original document as it was when the facsimile was made, and is a fine specimen of the engraver's art. PERENNIAL PESTS.

How to Destroy Mosquitoes by Preventive Measures.

A teacupful of water standing ten days is enough to breed over 200 mosquitoes. A bucketful of water may breed enough to infest a community.

Some species of mosquitoes lay their eggs on the water, others lav them in the water, and still others lay them in the marsh mud. All the eggs hatch out first into "wrigglers." and then they turn into what are called "pupae." The grown mosquitoes finally emerge from the pupae and fly into the air. Both wriggler and pupae are readily seen with the naked eye.

Don't waste time swatting mosquitoes. Prevent their breeding by draining or filling ponds and maddles or, if near the seashore, by necting the marshes with tidal was by emptying or screening rain barress, removing all old tins, boxes, tubs, palls, bottles, broken crockery and other things which collect water. Report to the department of health the location of any pools or puddles, particularly those which do not dry up within a week.

Be on the constant lookout for standing water and do away with it, whether it contains wrigglers or not. Safety first.

Why Oil Will Still the Troubled Waters Immediately.

Frequently we hear the expression that some one "poured oil upon the troubled waters," which is linked up with the discovery that oil poured overboard from a ship in distress will tend to increase its safety by stopping the waves from breaking against the ship's side. This is due to the fact that the oil is composed of molecules which are more closely compressed than the molecules in water. The oil forms a kind of blanket through which the waves cannot break, thus protecting the sides of a ship that has poured overboard yards in all directions. The waves beneath the oil are just as violent as ever, but they cannot break through.
