CARO TRUCK DRIVER

OF ACCIDENT AT ORION R. R. CROSSING.

Lou Wells, His Companion, Had Narrow Escape From Serious Injury Monday Afternoon.

Joseph Fournier, 45 years of age and a truck driver of Caro, had one limb broken and received internal injuries when a train struck his truck at a crossing near Orion. Mr. Fournier's injuries are so severe that grave doubts are entertained regarding his recovery. He is now a patient in a Pontiac hospital.

Mr. Fournier, who does long distance trucking, had a load of household goods to take from Caro to Detroit, and dreading to take the trip alone, invited Lou Wells, another Caro man, to accompany him. They started Sunday and Mr. Wells accompanied Mr. Fournier as far as Pontiac where the driver again picked up his travelling companion Monday afternoon for the return trip. reached the railroad crossing at Orion just after a fast train had passed. Another train had pulled into a siding to allow the first train to pass and was backing on to the main track again as Mr. Fournier was approaching the crossing. Having seen one train pass, he did not expect another and drove on the tracks at a slow speed just in time for the truck to be struck by the rear passenger coach.

Mr. Wells was on the "door side" of the truck and seeing the train backing into the truck, had barely time to jump from the truck and grab his grandson who was sitting beside As he left the truck. he fell son in his arms, "I saw the wheels of day, Oct. 6, at the age of 66 years. rolled over once with the little fel- friends on the streets of Cass City. low in my arms and was off the track The following afternoon he suffered a just in time. SPECULATION AND

PRICES FOOD

In a pioneer country, the question of fair prices is taken care of by the law of supply and demand. If there was a shortage on any staple article, the producer of that staple got much higher prices. He was rewarded for his forethought in producing that article and in raising it under the difficulties that created that scarcity.

The result always was to make the production of those articles very much more attractive. Those already in the business of raising it, would raise more. New people were induced to go into the business. And business men with money to invest would lend money to buy better equipment and thus produce more.

Thus the high prices were a stimulus and reward that acted immediately to produce a plentiful supply of the article, as a result of which the prices would come down.

In these times the speculator gets the principal benefit when a scarcity Thomas J. and Francis G. McCarty, exists in any commodity. ## THUMB NOTES.

Fire at the plant of the Huron Milling Company Saturday morning de- Hawksworth Friday evening, Sept. 26, stroyed the houses on top of the two tile corn storage tanks, entailing a loss approximating $6,000.00. About 11:30 smoke was seen emerging from the useful gifts. Games were played afwest window of west top house. Fire alarms were turned in immediately and the city fire dept. was shortly at the fire which the Huron Milling Co. firemen were then endeavoring to extinguish. The tanks are about 70 feet high and as the interior of the houses were burning, the exteriors being covered with galvanized iron, it was almost impossible to pour a stream of water directly onto the fire. As a consequence the buildings burned and tumbled down off the tanks. Streams of water were turned on from nearby buildings but the blaze went its course unquenched. About two hundred bushels of corn at the tops of the tanks were more or less destroyed by burning and water. It is thought the fire originated from a hot boxing at the top of an elevator in the west house. The house tops contained the distributor heads, the upper parts of grain elevators and conveyors and such machinery as was used to elevate the grain into the tables.—Harbor Beach Times.

The membership grew. The club's fame began to spread. At first the discussions of the club were conducted in English. Soon it became necessary for them to be carried on in Chinese so that more of the women could understand and take part. Many of the scoffers began to apply for admission. The members began indulging in much friendly chaffing and occasionally forgot their dignity to play jokes on one another. Finally it became so large that it had to be divided into two sections, which met separately three Tuesday evenings in the month and on the fourth Tuesday met together for a joint session, with a special program.

Students just returned from American and German colleges, an old Bud-Chist scholar who is particularly interested in the discussion on Buddhism and Christianity, merchants, railroad and government officials compose the men's side of the room. ## ENGLISH IS COMMON TONGUE.

Chinese Girls Learn It to Talk to One Another.

Chinese women students in the Tung Fu College, Peking, China, are obliged to learn English in order to talk with one another because of the different dialects used by the student body.

Girls from the extreme western provinces of China, who attend the school, must remain in Peking during all of the eight years required for their high school and college training, because to return each summer would require six weeks for the trip one way and would cost more than a trip to America and return, Girls from each of the western provinces speak a different language and they cannot understand one another any more than they can the girls from northern, southern, eastern or central provinces. Hence, they have adopted English as a common tongue.

On Jan. 15, 1919, the Senate and House of Representatives of Michigan, met in joint convention in Representa tive Hall, Lansing, to do honor to the memory of Theodore Roosevelt. ## To The Boys and Girls of Michigan:

Lansing, Michigan, Sept. 25, 1919.

October 27 is the birthday of the late Colonel Theodore Roosevelt. Colonel Roosevekt, for nearly eight years our president, was, during the greater part of his life-time, our most valued public leader. He was known as the "typical American". He was fearless in his advocacy of what he believed to be right and in his attack upon that which he held to be wrong. His courage, his integrity, and his tireless energy made him our most popular national hero. Probably nothing expressed his philosophy of life more clearly than this quotation, "In short, in life, as in a football game the principle to follow is: Hit the line hard; don't foul, don't shirk, but hit the line hard!"

His picture will be dedicated on his birthday and if, as you look at the likeness of that strong, energetic face, you will vow that you will be good Americans, live clean, strong, true lives and that you will fight the battle for purity and honesty in public life as he fought it, I believe you will please him more than you could in any other way.

Cordially yours, T. E. JOHNSON. Superintendent of Public Instruction.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Barton Baynes, orphan, is taken to live with his uncle, Peabody Baynes, and his Aunt Deel on a farm on Rattleroad in a neighborhood called Lickitysplit, about the year 1826. Barton meets Sally Dunkelberg, about his own age, but socially of a class above the Bayneses, and is fascinated by the pretty face and fine clothes. and fine clothes.

CHAPTER II—Barton meets Roving Kate, known in the neighborhood as the "Silent Woman." Amos Grimshaw, young son of the richest man in the township, is a visitor at the Baynes home, and Roving Kate tells the fortunes of the two boys, predicting a bright future for Barton and death on the gallows for Amos. Reproved for an act of boyish mischief Barton runs away, intending to make his home with the Dunkelbergs. He reaches the village of Canton and falls into a sleep of exhaustion on a porch. There he is found by Silas Wright, Jr., prominent man in public affairs, who, knowing Peabody Baynes, takes Barton home after buying him new clothes.

CHAPTER III—Barton and his uncle and aunt visit Canton and hear Silas Wright read a sermon.

CHAPTER IV—Silas Wright evinces much interest in Barton, and sends a box of books and magazines to the Baynes home. The election of Silas Wright to the United States senate is announced.

CHAPTER V.—When Barton is twelve years old he becomes aware of the existence of a wonderful and mysterious power known as "Money," and learns how, through his possession of that wonderful thing Grimshaw is the most powerful and greatly dreaded man in the community, most of the settlers being in his debt. After a visit to the Baynes home Mr. Wright leaves a note in a sealed envelope, which Barton is to read on the first night when he leaves home to attend school.

CHAPTER VI—Barton is asked to drive a load to mill, arrives safely, but in a snowstorm, unable to see the road, the horses get into the ditch and a wheel of the wagon is broken. Uncle Peabody manages to get together enough to satisfy Grimshaw and obtain an extension.

CHAPTER VII—Now in his sixteenth year Barton accompanies "Mr. Purvis," the hired man, to the postoffice at Canton. On the way they meet a rider, and the three journey together. They are held up by a man with a gun, who makes the highwayman's demand of "Your money or your life." Purvis runs away, while the stranger draws a pistol, but before he can use it the robber shoots and kills him. Barton's horse throws him and runs away. As the murderer bends over the stranger Barton throws a stone which he observes wounds the thief, who makes off at once, but not until Barton had noted that his gun stock was broken in a peculiar manner. Search of the neighborhood for the robber is unavailing and the stranger is buried.

CHAPTER VIII—Barton leaves home to attend Michael Hacket's school. Amos Grimshaw is arrested charged with the murder of the stranger.

The schoolmaster and I went over to Mr. Wright's house—a white, frame building which had often been pointed out to me.

Mrs. Wright, a fine-looking lady who met us at the door, said that the senator had gone over to the mill with his wheelbarrow.

"We've plenty of time and we'll wait for him," said the schoolmaster. "I see him!" said little John as he

"Well, I see ye still love the tender unbrace o' the wheelbarrow," said Mr. Tacket as we approached the senator. "My embrace is the tenderer of the wo," the latter laughed with a look

He recognized me and seized my ands and shook them as he said: t pon my word, here is my friend part. I was not looking for you here."

He put his hand on my head, now higher than his shoulder, and said: I was not looking for you here." He asked about my aunt and uncle and expressed joy at learning that I was now under Mr. Hacket. "I shall be here for a number of weeks," he said, "and I shall want to see you often. Maybe we'll go hunting some Saturday." We bade him good morning and he went on with his wheelbarrow, which was loaded, I remember, with stout sacks of meal and flour.

We went to the school at half past eight. What a thrilling place it was with its 78 children and its three rooms. How noisy they were as they waited in the schoolyard for the bell to ring! I stood by the doorside looking very foolish, I dare say, for I knew not what to do with myself. My legs encased in the tow breeches felt as if they were on fire. I saw that most of the village boys were boughten clothes, and fine boots. I looked down at my own leather and was a tower of shame on a foundation of greased cowhide. Sally Dunkelberg came in with some other girls and prerended not to see me. That was the hardest blow I suffered.

Among the handsome, well-dressed poys of the village was Henry Willsthe boy who had stolen my watermelon. I had never forgiven him for that or for the killing of my little hen. The bell rang and we marched into the big room, while a fat girl with crinkly hair played on a melodeon. Henry and another boy tried to shove me out of line and a big paper wad struck the side of my head as we were marching in and after we were seated a cross-eyed, freckled girl in a red dress made a face at me.

It was, on the whole, the unhappiest day of my life. During recess I slapped a boy's face for calling me a rabbit and the two others who came to help him went away full of fear and astonishment, for I had the strength of a young moose in me those days. After that they began to make friends with me.

In the noon hour a man came to me in the schoolyard with a subpena for the examination of Amos Grimshaw and explained its meaning.

While I was talking with this man Sally passed me walking with another girl and said:

"Hello, Bart!" I observed that Henry Wills joined hem and walked down the street at the side of Sally. I got my first pang of jealousy then. When school was out that afterso I set out, feeling much depressed. | me. ad downed, the house of Mr. in the garden and went in. I knew

I went about my chores. There was duct. At the supper table Mr. Hacket kept us laughing with songs and jests and stories. The boy John, having been reproved for rapid eating, hurled his spoon upon the floor.

"Those in favor of his punishment will please say aye?" said the schoolmaster.

I remember that we had a divided house on that important question.

The schoolmaster said: "Michael Henry wishes him to be forgiven on promise of better conduct, but for the next offense he shall ride the bad-

This meant lying for a painful moment across his father's knee.

The promise was given and our merrymaking resumed. The district attorney, whom I had met before, came to see me after supper and asked more questions and advised me to talk with no one about the shooting without his consent. Soon he went away, aud after I had learned my lessons Mr. Hacket said:

"Let us walk up to the jail and spend a few minutes with Amos." We hurried to the jail. The sheriff, a stout-built, stern-faced man, admit-

"Hello, Grimshaw," he said sternly. "Step out here."

It all went to my heart-the manners of the sheriff so like the cold iron of his keys and doors-the dim candle light, the pale, frightened youth who walked toward us. We shook his hand and he said that he was glad to see us. I saw the scar under his left ear and reaching out upon his cheek, which my stone had made, and knew that he bore the mark of Cain.

He asked if he could see me alone and the sheriff shook his head and said

"Against the rules."

"Amos, I've a boy o' my own an' I feel for ye," said the schoolmaster. Tm going to come here, now and them, to cheer ye up and bring ye some books to read. If there's any word of advice I can give ye-let me know. Have ye a lawyer?"

He walked along the street in front of the stores, she following as before. How patiently she followed!

I started for the big schoolhouse and a number of boys joined me with pleasant words.

Sally ran past us with that lowlived Wills boy, who carried her books for her. His father had gone into the grocery business and Henry wore boughten clothes. I couldn't tell Sally how mean he was. I was angry and decided not to speak to her until she spoke to me. I got along better in school, although there was some tittering when I recited, probably because I had a broader dialect and bigger boots than the boys in the village.

JOHN BALL, Proprietor

R. N. McCullough, Auctioneer

"That was the question of Abraham, and it often comes to me. Of course we shall go. But hark! Let us hear what the green chair has to say."

There was a moment of silence and then he went on with a merry laugh. "Right ye are, Michael Henry! You are always right, my boy-God bless your soul! We shall take Bart with us an' doughnuts an' cheese an' cookies an' dried meat for all."

From that moment I date the beginning of my love for the occupant of the green chair in the home of Michael Hacket. Those good people were Catholics and I a Protestant and yet this Michael Henry always insisted upon the most delicate consideration for my faith and feelings.

"I promised to spend the morning in the field with Mr. Wright, if I may have your consent, sir," I said.

"Then we shall console ourselves, knowing that you are in better company," said Mr. Hacket.

Mr. Dunkelberg called at the house in Ashery lane to see me after breakfast.

"Bart, if you will come with me I should like to order some store clothes and boots for you," he said in his squeaky voice.

For a moment I knew not how to answer him. Nettled as I had been by Sally's treatment of me, the offer was like rubbing ashes on the soreness of my spirit.

I blushed and surveyed my garments and said:

"I guess I look pretty bad, don't I?" "You look all right, but I thought maybe you would feel better in softer raiment, especially if you care to go around much with the young people. I am an old friend of the family and I guess it would be proper for me to buy the clothes for you. When you are older you can buy a suit for me, some time, if you care to."

It should be understood that wellto-do people in the towns were more particular about their dress those days than now.

"I'll ask my aunt and uncle about it," I proposed.

"That's all right," he answered. "I'm going to drive to your house this afternoon and your uncle wishes you to go with me. We are all to have a talk with Mr. Grimshaw."

He left me and I went over to Mr. Wright's.

They told me that he was cutting corn in the back lot, where I found

"Mr. Dunkelberg came this morning and wanted to buy me some new clothes and boots," I said. The senator stopped work and stood looking at me with his hands upon his "I wouldn't let him do it if I were you," he said thoughtfully. Just then I saw a young man come running toward us in the distant field. Mr. Wright took out his compass. "Look here," he said, "you see the needle points due north." He took a lodestone out of his pocket, and holding it near the compass moved it back and forth. The needle followed it.

The young man came up to us breathing deeply. Perspiration was rolling off his face. He was much excited and spoke with some difficulty. "Senator Wright," he gasped, "Mrs. Wright sent me down to tell you that President Van Buren is at the house." I remember vividly the look of mildamusement in the senator's face and the serene calmness with which he looked at the young man and said to him: "Tell Mrs. Wright to make him comfortable in our easiest chair and to say to the president that I shall be up To my utter surprise he resumed his talk with me as the young man went away.

"You see all ways are north when you put this lodestone near the needle," he went on. "If it is to tell you the truth you must keep the lodestone away from the needle. It's that way, too, with the compass of your soul, partner. There the lodestone is selfishness, and with its help you can make any direction look right to you and soon-you're lost."

He bound the last bundle and then we walked together toward the house, the senator carrying his sickle.

"I shall introduce you to the president," he said as we neared our destination. "Then perhaps you had better leave us."

I could not remember that I had ever been "introduced" to anybody. I knew that people put their wits on exhibition and often flung down a "snag" by way of demonstrating their fitness for the honor, when they were introduced in books. I remember asking rather timidly:

"What shall I say when—when you -introduce me?"

"Oh, say anything you want to say," he answered with a look of amusement.

"I'm kind o' scared," I said. "You needn't be-he was once a poor boy just like you."

"Just like me!" I repeated thoughtfully, for while I had heard a good deal of that kind of thing in our home, it had not, somehow, got under my jacket, as they used to say.

"Just like you-cowhide and allthe son of a small freeholder in Kinderhook on the Hudson," he went on. "But he was well fed in brain and body and kept his heart clean. So of course he grew and is still growing. That's a curious thing about men and women, Bart. If they are in good ground and properly cared for they never stop growing - never! - and that's a pretty full word-isn't it?

We had come in sight of the house. I lagged behind a little when I saw the great man sitting on the small piazza with Mrs. Wright, I see riy and thoughtfully flicked the bushes idly, as I write, the full figure, the with his whip. I never knew a more ruddy, kindly face, the large nose, the persistent hummer. gray eyes, the thick halo of silvered hair extending from his collar to the Dunkelberg and then came to me and bald top of his head. He rose and said in a deep voice:

"He sows ill luck who hinders the reaper.'

Mr. Wright hung his sickle on a small tree in the dooryard and answered:

"The plowman has overtaken the reaper, Mr. President. I bid you welcome to my humble home.'

"It is a pleasure to be here and a regret to call you back to Washington," said the president as they shook hands.

"I suppose that means an extra session," the senator answered.

"First let me reassure you. I shall get away as soon as possible, for I know that a president is a heavy burden for one to have on his hands."

"Don't worry. I can get along with almost any kind of a human being, especially if he like pudding and milk as well as you do," said the senator, who then introduced me in these words:

"Mr. President, this is my young friend, Barton Baynes, of the neighborhood of Lickitysplit in the town of Ballybeen-a coming man of this

"Come on," was the playful remark of the president as he took my hand. I shall be looking for you."

I had carefully chosen my words and I remember saying, with some dignity, like one in a story book, although with a trembling voice:

"It is an honor to meet you, sir, and

"It Is an Honor to Meet You, Sir, and Thank You For the Right to Vote-When I am Old Enough."

thank you for the right to vote-when I am old enough."

Vividly, too, I remember his gentle smile as he looked down at me and said in a most kindly tone:

"I think it a great honor to hear you say that.' He put his hands upon my shoulders and turning to the senator said: "Wright, I often wish that I had your modesty." "I need it much more than you do," the senator laughed.

Straightway I left them with an awkward bow and blushing to the roots of my hair.

As I neared the home of Mr. Hacket I heard hurrying footsteps behind me and the voice of Sally calling my name. I stopped and faced about. How charming she looked as she walked toward me! I had never seen her quite so fixed up.

"Bart," she said. "I suppose you're not going to speak to me."

"If you'll speak to me," I answered. "I love to speak to you," she said. "I've been looking all around for you. Mother wants you to come over to dinner with us at just twelve o'clock. You're going away with father as soon as we get through."

I wanted to go but got the notion all at once that the Dunkelbergs were in need of information about me and that the time had come to impart it. So then and there that ancient Olympus to the water pail and drank out of of our family received notice as it the dipper.

"I can't," I said. "I've got to study my lessons before I go away with your father."

It was a blow to her. I saw the shadow that fell upon her face. She was vexed and turned and ran away from me without another word and I felt a pang of regret as I went to the lonely and deserted home of the schoolmaster.

At twelve-thirty Mr. Dunkelberg came for me, with a high-stepping horse in a new harness and a shiny, still-running buggy. He wore gloves and a beaver hat and sat very erect and had little to say.

"I hear you met the president," he emarked.

"Yes, sir. I was introduced to him this morning," I answered a bit too proudly, and wondering how he had heard of my good fortune, but deeply gratified at his knowledge of it.

"What did he have to say?" I described the interview and the looks of the great man. Not much more was said as we sped away toward the deep woods and the high

I was eager to get home but wondered why he should be going with me to talk with Mr. Grimshaw and my uncle. Of course I suspected that it had to do with Amos, but how I knew not. He hummed in the rough going Aunt Deel shook hands with Mr.

"Wal, Bart Baynes! I never was so glad to see anybody in all the days o' my life-ayes! We been lookin' up the road for an hour - eyes! You come right into the house this minute-both o' you."

The table was spread with the things I enjoyed most-big, brown biscuits and a great comb of honey surrounded with its nectar and a pitcher of milk and a plate of cheese and some jerked meat and an apple pie.

"Set right down an' eat-I just want to see ye eat-ayes I do!" Mr. Grimshaw came soon after we had finished our luncheon. He hitched his horse at the post and came in. "Good day," he said, once and for all, as he came in at the open door. "Baynes, I want to have a talk with you and the boy. Tell me what you know about that murder.' "Wal, I had some business over to Plattsburg," my uncle began. "While I was there I thought I'd go and see Amos. So I drove out to Beekman's farm. They told me that Amos had left there after workin' four days. They gave him fourteen shillins an' he was goin' to take the stage in the mornin'. He left some time in the night an' took Beekman's rifle with him, so they said. There was a piece o' wood broke out o' the stock o' the rifle. That was the kind o' gun that was used in the murder."

It surprised me that my uncle knew all this. He had said nothing to me of his journey or its result.

"How do you know?" snapped Mr. Grimshaw. "This boy see it plain. It was a gun with a piece o' wood broke out o' the stock.' "Is that so?" was the brusque demand of the money lender as he turned to me. "Yes, sir," I answered.

"The boy lies," he snapped, and turning to my uncle added: "Yer mad 'cause I'm tryin' to make ye pay yer honest debts—ain't ye now?"

Uncle Peabody, keeping his temper, shook his head and calmly said: "No, I ain't anything ag'in' you or Amos, but it's got to be so that a man can travel the roads o' this town without gettin' his head blowed off."

Mr. Dunkelberg turned to me and

"Are you sure that the stock of the gun you saw was broken?" "Yes, sir-and I'm almost sure it was Amos that ran away with it." "I picked up a stone and threw it at him and it grazed the left side of his face, and the other night I saw the scar it made." My aunt and uncle and Mr. Dunkelberg moved with astonishment as I spoke of the scar. Mr. Grimshaw, with keen eyes fixed upon me, gave a little grunt of incredulity. "Huh!-Liar!" he muttered.

"I am not a liar," I declared with indignation, whereupon my aunt angrily stirred the fire in the stove and Uncle Peabody put his hand on my arm and

"Hush, Bart! Keep your temper,

"If you tell these things you may be the means of sending an innocent boy to his death," Mr. Dunkelberg said to me. "I wouldn't be too sure about 'em if I were you. It's so easy to be mistaken. You couldn't be sure in the dusk that the stone really hit him, could von?"

I answered: "Yes, sir-I saw the stone hit and I saw him put his hand on the place while he was running. guess it hurt him some."

"Look a' here, Baynes," Mr. Grimshaw began in that familiar scolding tone of his, "I know what you want an' we might jest as well git right down to business first as last. You keep this boy still an' I'll give ye five years' interest."

Aunt Deel gave a gasp and quickly covered her mouth with her hand. Uncle Peabody changed color as he rose from his chair with a strange look on his face. He swung his big right hand in the air as he said:

"By the eternal jumpin'-" He stopped, pulled down the left sleeve of his flannel shirt and walked

"Say, Mr. Grimshaw, I'm awful sorry for ye," said my uncle as he returned to his chair, "but I've always learnt this boy to tell the truth an' the hull truth. I know the danger I'm in. We're gettin' old. It'll be hard to start over ag'in an' you can ruin us if ye want to an' I'm as scared o' ye as a mouse in a cat's paw, but this boy has got to tell the truth right out plain. I couldn't muzzle him if I tried-he's too much of a man. If you're scared o' the truth you mus' know that Amos is guilty."

Mr. Grimshaw shook his head with anger and beat the floor with the end

"Nobody knows anything o' the kind, Baynes," said Mr. Dunkelberg. "Of course Amos never thought o' killing anybody. He's a harmless kind of a boy. I know him well and so do you. Under the circumstances Mr. Grimshaw is afraid that Bart's story will make it difficult for Amos to prove his innocence.'

Uncle Peabody shook his head with a look of firmness. Again Grimshaw laughed between his teeth as he looked at my uncle. In his view every man had his price. "I see that I'm the mouse an' you're the cat," he resumed, as that curious laugh rattled in his throat. "Look a' here, Baynes, I'll tell ye what I'll do.

I'll cancel the hull mortgage." Again Uncle Peabody rose from his illuminum municum mu chair with a look in his face which I have never forgotten. How his voice rang out!

"No, sir!" he shouted so loudly that we all jumped to our feet and Aunt Deel covered her face with her apron and began to cry. It was like the explosion of a blast. Then the fragents began falling with a loud crash;

"NO, SIR! YE CAN'T BUY THE NAIL ON MY LITTLE FINGER OR

"No, Sir! Ye Can't Buy the Nail on My Little Finger or His With All Yer Money-Damn You!"

HIS WITH ALL YER MONEY-D---N YOU!"

It was like the shout of Israel from the top of the mountains. Shep bounced into the house with hair on end and the chickens cackled and the old rooster clapped his wings and crowed with all the power of his lungs. Every member of that little group stood stock still and breathless.

I trembled with a fear I could not have defined. Mr. Grimshaw shuffled out of the door, his cane rapping the floor as if his arm had been stricken with palsy in a moment.

Mr. Dunkelberg turned to my aunt his face scarlet, and muttered an apology for the disturbance and followed the money lender.

"Come on, Bart," Uncle Peabody called cheerfully, as he walked toward "Let's go an' git in the barnyard. them but'nuts."

He paid no attention to our visitors-neither did my aunt, who followed us. The two men talked to gether a moment, unhitched their horses, got into their buggies and drove away.

"Wal, I'm surprised at Mr. Horace Dunkelberg tryin' to come it over us like that—ayes! I be," said Aunt Deel.

"Wal, I ain't," said Uncle Peabody. "Ol' Grimshaw has got him under his thumb-that's what's the matter. You'll find he's up to his ears in debt to Grimshaw—proh'ly.

As we followed him toward the house, he pushing the wheelbarrow loaded with sacks of nuts, he added: "A't last Grimshaw has found some thin' that he can't buy an' he's awful surprised. Too bad he didn't learn that lesson long ago." He stopped his wheelbarrow by the steps and we sat down together on the edge of the stoop as he added:

"I got mad-they kep' pickin' on me so-I'm sorry, but I couldn't help it We'll start up ag'in somewheres if we have to. There's a good many days' work in me yet."

As we carried the bags to the attic room I thought of the lodestone and the compass and knew that Mr. Wright had foreseen what was likely to hap-

When we came down Uncle Peabody said to me: "I feel sorry, awful sorry, for that

We spent a silent afternoon gathering apples. After supper we played old sledge and my uncles had hard work to keep us in good countenance, We went to bed early and I lay long hearing the autumn wind in the popple leaves and thinking of that great thing which had grown strong within us little by little, in the candle light.
