

"RED" MAY DAY PROVES FAILURE

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE CLAIMS CREDIT FOR FAILURE OF RADICALS: "PLANS."

ALL CITIES TAKE PRECAUTIONS

Several Small Strikes Are Only Features of An Otherwise Quiet Day.

Washington.—Plans of radical leaders for May Day demonstrations involving strikes and destruction of more than a score of federal and state officials, fell flat, reports to the department of justice indicated.

Extra precautions taken by federal and state authorities "to block the radicals" widely disseminated appeal for a "May day show of power" were described at the department as "decidedly successful." Publicity given by the department to the radicals' alleged plans in advance also was held to have had a large part in "thwarting" disturbances.

Reports to the department mentioned a number of strikes instituted during the day, but in nearly every case the reporting agent emphasized that the walkouts were local in nature and due to the regular May day expiration of wage contracts.

The appeal of the radicals for a demonstration to the government in behalf of soviet Russia also was without avail, the reports indicated. Incendiary speeches and demands that the United States resume relations with Russia were made at meetings in several cities, Assistant Attorney General Garvan declared, but the net result was negligible.

East Is Unruffled.

New York.—May day came and passed without disorder, bombs or bloodshed in New York or the rest of the east.

Not since the war, however, has this city been under such guard. With the warning from Attorney General Palmer that "anarchistic demonstrations" might be expected here, the police force of 11,000 was held ready for any emergency and federal agents kept extremist leaders under surveillance. Ammunition was issued to troops at Governor's island and preparations were made to call out the state's military forces if needed.

West Quiet, Chicago Reports.

Chicago.—May Day passed quietly in the central states and the far west, virtually no disorder being reported, although federal, state and city forces had made elaborate preparations to deal with threatened disturbances. Strikes were called in a number of cities and mass meetings were held in Chicago and elsewhere, but all were conducted peacefully. Radical literature was distributed in some places and a few arrests were made.

Detroit Observance Quiet.

Detroit.—Sunshine was the outstanding feature of May day in Detroit. All activities were in keeping with the weather. Detroit was peaceful.

A small army of the radical element in labor's ranks assembled at the House of the Masses early for a noon-day parade to the Arena Gardens. Four mounted policemen led the parade, two flanked it and four others brought up the rear.

At the Arena, where more than 3,000 persons crowded into the building and hundreds waited outside, a cordon of police was on duty. The policemen idled about, chatting. There was nothing for them to do. At police headquarters a half dozen special patrol wagons were held in readiness throughout the day. None of these "turned a wheel."

CANADA OPPOSES U. S. RULING

Importers Object to Refunding Freight Charges At Loss.

Toronto, Ont.—The fight between Canadian importers of American goods and the American railway administration regarding the new ruling, which compels the Canadian consignee to pay all of the freight charges on the American and Canadian part of the route, in American exchange, is not over. Canadian importers are planning a strong protest.

Orders which American lines are now forwarding to their agents and connections state that all American shippers of goods into Canada must prepay the freight charges for the entire mileage, American and Canadian. The Canadian consignee will in turn have to refund the freight cost to the American shipper and will have to do so in New York funds.

Vigorous Hunt for Draft Dodgers.

Washington.—E. B. Wood, assistant attorney general, in charge of draft law violations, stated that a vigorous hunt is on to locate draft dodgers who fled to Mexico, Central America and other foreign countries. Many of these were wealthy Americans who left the country to avoid service, although clearly eligible under the law. Hundreds of Americans, listed as deserters from the army, are now shown by investigation to have died in the service.

Value of Molybdenite.
The principal value of molybdenite is in the manufacture of steel, to which it gives a hardness and toughness that make the steel suitable for use in propeller shafts, guns and boilers. Most of the molybdenite produced in Tasmania is shipped to England.

TO COOK SPANISH BEEFSTEAK

Piece of Round Steak About an Inch Thick and Weighing Two Pounds Is First Essential.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

For Spanish beefsteak take a piece of round steak about an inch thick and weighing two pounds. Pound until thin and season with salt and cayenne pepper. Cover with a layer of bacon or salt pork cut in slices. Roll and tie with a cord. Pour around it half a cupful of milk and half a cupful of water. Place in a covered baking dish and bake two hours, basting occasionally.

He Knew.

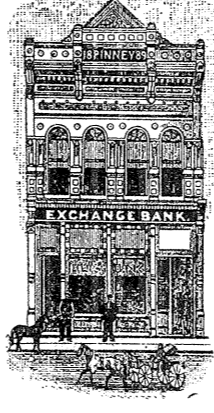

The teacher had spent twenty minutes impressing on her pupils the correct pronunciation of the word "vase." The following morning she wanted to find out if the children remembered, so she turned to one little boy suddenly and demanded: "What do you see on the mantelpiece at home, Jackie?" "Father's feet, miss!" came the prompt reply.

Appreciate Cucumbers.

In Cairo and Alexandria, Egypt, cucumbers are truly appreciated. They are developed to their utmost and are much eaten and liked by the natives. Moreover, the beautiful women understand the value of cucumber juice, and it is squeezed from the vegetable for them to use as a lotion for the skin.

Do Animals Commit Suicide?

A correspondent writes: "I have seen a deer, chased by wolves, jump over a precipice to death. Mink, muskrat and other animals of this kind will drown themselves rather than suffer the pain of the trap. I have also witnessed a rabbit, chased by its deadly enemy, the weasel, leap to death or drown itself."

Acres of Diamonds

Is the subject of a popular lecture replete with wisdom delivered many times in America in the past twenty years by a well known American lecturer. Its main point being that diamonds (opportunities) are all about us. If we would garner them we must recognize and make them our own.

It was never given to any one person to discover all of these diamonds. If you are working your job you are constantly seeing your share. When you find a deal that looks good and you haven't the money to put it over, consult with us, if it is bankable we will help you.

We invite deposits, small or large, and pay 4 per cent interest on all sums left three months or longer.

Protect Your Porch Floors

It's strange but true that some people think any old paint will do for porch floors.

But it won't! The porch floor gets much harder wear than any other surface around the house. That's why it should be protected with a paint that will stand that wear.

Lowe's Porch Floor Paint will stand up under severe conditions because it's made for that purpose.

Geo. Tennant of Vassar stopped on the Sheridan Building corner Wednesday morning to rest, remarking to a passer-by that he thought he'd take a look at the spot where he conducted a hotel for 16 years when Cass City was in its infancy. "They were pretty rough times in the lumbering days," he said, "but I was strong and husky then and I always let the boys know that I was running my own house and always stopped the troublemaker before he had a good start. As a result, I always maintained good order when I was in the hotel. I always had a meal and a bed for everyone even when the lumberjacks stopped here on their drives 50 or 100 strong. When the beds were all full, I quartered the remainder of the boys on a 'shake-down' on the dance hall floor." Mr. Tennant is now 81 years of age. The portion of the old home of Mrs. Edward Pinney which was purchased by S. A. Striffler was moved this week to the residence lot of Mr. Striffler on Main St. East, by Arthur Anthes and his crew of workmen. Mr. Anthes says the large timber made it a heavy load for a building of that size.

The Presbyterian church has been without a pastor for several weeks, but when officials of the church are unable to secure a minister to supply the pulpit, members of the church read sermons and the regular Sabbath service has been continued. Many helpful suggestions as to what is really beautiful were given. Mrs. Auten closed by exhibiting copies of paintings of Reynolds, Gainsborough and Landseer upon a screen and explaining each one. It was a very enjoyable occasion and as one club member expressed herself in her response it is hoped that many more meetings of high school students and members of the W. S. C. may take place.

THUMB NOTES.

N. Karr of Kingstone has purchased Don M., a race horse, from Yale parties. The farmers around Harbor Beach are intent on having an elevator and have made the Michigan Bean company an offer for their plant in that city. Because of the coal shortage, due to the railroad switchmen's strike, it is probable that the milk condensary at Bad Axe will be forced to close down before long. Harry Lester, who has been leasing and publishing the Mayville Monitor for several years, recently purchased the printing plant from Terry Corliss and is now sole owner of the newspaper property. C. B. Milberry, who has been in charge of the Carsonville Journal for the past two months, has decided to surrender his lease on the plant and return to his pastoral duties in Harbor Beach. A lack of appreciation of his efforts by Carsonville business men prompted him to throw up the proposition.—Deckerville Recorder. At the last meeting of Kedron Chapter, O. E. S., a rare honor was bestowed on two prominent Caro ladies, Mrs. Alice Howell and Mrs. Sarah Olin. Both were made life long members of the O. E. S. in Michigan. Both are past matrons. Mrs. Howell is a charter member of Kedron Chapter, the only remaining one on the charter, and has been a member 36 years, while Mrs. Olin has enjoyed 34 years in the Star.—Advertiser.

They All Do It.

B. L. T. in the Chicago Tribune: Why, when a man is asked to say a few words after dinner, does he begin by pushing the crockery and cutlery toward the middle of the table

Whistling for Wind.

Everybody is familiar with the old superstition of sailors that to bring a favorable breeze, they must whistle during the calm. From the remotest times there seems to have prevailed a belief that libation or sacrifice would placate the storm spirits and induce them to permit the vessel to proceed un molested on its course. Russian sailors have been known to pour oat meal and water over a rocky promontory in order to obtain a wind favorable to their designs.

Parrot Stole Diamond.

Parrots are interesting things. But one man down on Long Island has decided that his old polly has too many taking ways to be really practical. A few days ago he discovered the loss of his diamond scarf pin and was ready to place the matter in the hands of the police when he heard polly banging it against the bars of her cage. He remembered of the bird strutting about on his chest when he was reposing on the couch in his living room a short time before and it was at this time that he was relieved of his valuable pin.

Inspiration Generally Earned.

There seems to exist a tendency to ascribe inspiration to a process which is the result of a preliminary effort. Many have noticed that, after long and fruitless mental effort, the result for which they have been striving comes to them suddenly while they are thinking of something entirely different. The preliminary mental toil has borne its fruit subconsciously.

Crocodile's Record Swim.

How far can a crocodile swim? Perhaps it would be more practical to ask how far crocodiles do swim? J. Stanley Gardner claims the record for a crocodile (Crocodilus porosus) that recently landed in the Fiji Islands, where he took its photograph. No crocodiles of this species inhabit the Fiji Islands, and the nearest spot where they are known to live is the New Hebrides, 683 miles distant. Therefore, this crocodile must have swam 683 miles in the open sea.

Tears Benefit the Eyes.

The Italian child is never permitted to rub his eyes. If it bursts into tears it is not repressed, but permitted to have the cry out. This, it is claimed, beautifies the eyes and makes them clear; while rubbing the eyes injures them in many ways.

Above is published a map of the county road system as adopted by the board of county road commissioners and approved by the board of supervisors of Huron county at their meeting last June. The county road commissioners, organized shortly after their appointment by the supervisors last May, engaged a county engineer and proceeded to make a thorough tour of inspection of the roads in every section of the county, resulting finally in the adoption of the system as outlined in the accompanying map. This plan will give the county a complete system of good roads serving every community and connecting up in every town and village in the county. The plan does not interfere with the authorities of a township from improving the roads within their township. There are approximately 237 miles in this system, 85 of which were completed before the adoption of the county system, leaving about 150 miles yet to finish, which in the opinion of the Board can be completed in five years. The State Trunk Line system comprises about 107 miles, of which 62 are completed. There are also about 90 miles of state reward road in the county completed and not on either system. The State Highway Department plans on building this year 1 mile in the towns of Bad Axe, Harbor Beach, Port Hope, Uby, Kinde, Elkton, Pigeon and Sebewaing; two miles in Sebewaing township, three miles in Sherman township, one mile each in Fair Haven, Winsor and Bingham. Three-fourths of the cost of building these roads will be paid by the state and one-fourth by the county from the $90,000.00 appropriated by the supervisors last fall. The county is also planning on building under the Covert Act about 53 miles of road this summer as follows: Two miles in Sand Beach Township, five miles in Sheridan, four miles in Sebewaing and Brookfield, three miles in Caseville, four miles in Lake, three miles in Chandler, five miles on the town line between Hume and Meade, seven miles on the town line between

The secretary of the interior may at any time demand a statement from the Huron county clerk as to the uses to which the land is being put. It forms a valuable link in the chain of roadways and parks which are a drawing card to tourists and a pleasure ground for residents of the state.

Co-operative Store Organized—About 60 farmers and subscribers of stock to the new co-operative store met at the opera house building in our town on Saturday and organized the company which will be known as the Gageton Co-operative Mercantile Co. E. C. Leipprandt of Pigeon, who has had considerable experience along this line, has been at work soliciting the stock since about the first of the year, but soon after starting the work encountered bad weather and then the flu being so prevalent in our community during February and March, that the work had to be laid over until conditions became normal again. He has, however, during the last three weeks been able to again take up the work and has so well succeeded that 93 subscriptions were obtained with a total capital of nearly $12,000 paid in has been obtained. Much enthusiasm was developed among the farmers along the line of a co-operative spirit and we are glad to announce a complete organization of the project with an authorized capital stock of $20,000. The balance of the stock will be sold as necessary for the funds is needed to conduct the business. A co-operative get together spirit will accomplish many things and with this end in view it is hoped to make the project a grand success. It is expected to work along the lines laid down by the constitution and by-laws of the farm bureau and will eventually adopt the co-operation of the Tuscola Farm Bureau. The following persons were elected directors and officers: Arthur Rocheleau, Jr., president; L. C. Purdy, secretary and treasurer; Geo. Charter, Moses Karr, Perry Livingston, Robt. Wills, and C. J. Hobart, directors. The board of directors have leased the first and second floors of the opera house building and expect to have a general line of merchandise including meat market and furniture in stock and ready for business within 30 days. There has already been a stock shipping association formed in connection with the store project as previously mentioned and the secretary and manager, L. C. Purdy, is now ready to receive listments of live stock ready for shipment by the farmers.

CONDENSED CLASSICS

THE WAR OF THE WORLDS

By H. G. WELLS

Condensation by Alfred S. Clark

Herbert George Wells, the most discussed living novelist, was born at Bromley, Kent, on Sept. 21, 1866, the son of a famous professional cricket player. His mother was an innkeeper's daughter who had been a lady's maid before her marriage. The boy had an irregular education, but he was quick to learn, and at the age of 16 after working as an attendant in a store, he secured a position as assistant in a grammar school. He obtained a scholarship at London university, was graduated with high honors and taught science in a private school. In 1894 he began to write, doing articles for, and later becoming dramatic critic of, the Pall Mall Gazette. He was already interested in social conditions and an untiring student of science. These two interests he combined in the series of romances that opened with "The Time Machine." In novels and short stories he creates startling fantasies of the future, displaying his most abundant invention in "The War of the Worlds." He often-times discussed future wars in these stories and his forecasts were amazingly like what was seen on the battle-fields of Europe. In the meantime he had been writing stories about contemporary life, and books about social conditions. These he turned to more and more with the years. Of his later novels, bristling with wit and ideas, those that have been most widely read and discussed include "Kipps," "Tono-Bungay," "Ann Veronica," "The New Machiavelli," "Marriage and Joan and Peter," his latest novel. Most popular of all was "Mr. Britling Sees It Through," generally regarded as the best war novel written in English.

WHAT I marvel at now, when I recall the days when the Martians were speeding earthward, is our unconcern. The skies were peopled with incredible evil, with unimaginably repulsive monsters armed with superhuman weapons. The catastrophic Things were hurtling on, covetous of our greener and warmer planet, and lovers wandered through English lanes, with no thought of the swift and scorching death above their heads. Through a telescope, I had watched one of the colossal squirts of flame on the rim of the tiny, red planet. It did not occur to me that these gaseous jets accompanied the firing of a mighty gun that had launched ten huge cylinders into space. Learning to ride a bicycle interested me more than eruptions on Mars. The planet seemed so remote. Forty million miles away!

Ogilvy, the astronomer, found the first messenger. He had seen it falling and supposed it a wandering meteorite, but its shape surprised him. It was cylindrical, fully 30 yards across the exposed face. It was so hot that he could not get near it. Then, to his utter amazement, the top began to unscrew. There was something in it, something alive! Not until then did he link it with the flashes on Mars. Late that afternoon I saw the Martian. I was one of a curious crowd in front of the cylinder when the lid fell off. I peered into the black interior and fancied I saw shadows stirring. Then something like a snake wriggled into sight. I stood stricken with terror. A round body, about four feet across, pulled itself painfully to the opening. I had expected to see something like a man, fantastic perhaps, but two-legged. This thing was just an oily, leathery body, legless and armless, with a chinless and noseless face. Two great eyes, dark and luminous, were mirrors for an extraordinary brain. The creature panted and heaved, weighed down by the greater pull of gravity on earth. An intense loathing came over me. Suddenly, the monster toppled over, into the pit. Then I ran, madly.

From a distance I watched the Deputation that went out under a white flag. I saw three flashes of greenish light and darts of fire leaped from one to another of the little figures. Even as I saw them touched with death, I did not realize what was happening. Suddenly I knew and again I ran. People nearby slept unconcernedly that night, although the Heat Rays had set half a dozen villas aflame and pine trees were red torches. We were sure that these dangerous invaders were fatally sluggish. A well-aimed shell would finish them. And while we slept, the Martians were methodically rearing those mighty machines that were so soon to shatter our neat theories about their helplessness. That night another cylinder fell and eight more were driving on. It was the next night that I saw the striding Martians. "Boilers on stilts" I heard them called later. I saw them by flashes of lightning and the glow of countless fires, clanking machines 100 feet high, moving upon three gigantle legs like an exaggerated tripod driving on with an express-train's speed, smashing everything in their path. At the tops, crouched in metal hoods, lay the Martians.

Looking out from my windows at dawn, I beheld an abominable desolation, a blackened world that had been green and fair. I struck out for London and for miles saw not a living being. I had reached the Thames when I saw the Things coming, five of them. I ran for the water. Straight toward me sped one, but I might have been an ant in a man's path. It strode through the river and towered above Shepperton. Then six hidden guns belched together. One shell struck the hood and there was a horrible confusion of flesh and blood and metal. Something drove the uncontrolled machine on, crashing through the village, toppling over the church-tower, collapsing in the river. The others rushed to the spot and the air was filled with hissing of Heat Rays and crackling of fires. Shepperton leaped into flame. I staggered to the shore and when I looked up, the Things were bearing away the smashed machine.

I stumbled on, panic-stricken, dazed. The world was doomed. These monsters could slay with Heat Rays beyond the range of our biggest guns. Not again could we kill one of them by surprise. Terror stalked through London. To the horror of Heat Rays had been added the Black Smoke, a cloud of poison that blighted all living things. So London streamed in flight, 6,000,000 people roaring out along the highways until they were rivers in flood.

I fell into a doze under a hedge and there the curate joined me. He was half-mad with fright and clung to me. We plodded on to a suburb where we sought refuge in a deserted house. At midnight came a blinding flash. When day broke, we peered through a peephole and in the garden was a Martian. Embedded in the earth was another glowing cylinder.

For fifteen days I was penned there, so I saw more of the monsters than any other man now living. I watched their intricate machines—the automatic digger, the sensitive handling-machine like a metallic spider,—so flexible and so swiftly sure that they seemed centuries in advance of our rigid machinery. I could study too the Martian habits. I learned that evolution had made them all brain, cold, remorseless intelligences unswayed by emotion. They neither slept nor ate; they were sexless and their young were budded off, like the young of corals. Most horrible to me was the fact that they injected men's blood into their veins for nourishment.

It was this that drove me to act as I did when the curate went raving mad. I knew that his shouts would warn the Martians of our presence and I tried to silence him. He broke away and I caught him in the kitchen where I felled him with a meat-chopper. Once it ran across the heel of my boot and I nearly screamed. Then it fled to the coal-cellar and above me I heard a tapping, tapping, and then the noise of a heavy body being dragged across the floor.

I piled wood and coal over me when I heard that tapping at the cellar-door. Through crevices I could see the terrible arm of a handling-machine, waving, feeling, examining. Once it ran across the heel of my boot and I nearly screamed. Then it went away.

A week passed before I dared look out. About the peep-hole was massed quantities of the red weed that the Martians had brought—evidently vegetation on Mars is red. I pushed it aside and gazed out. The garden was deserted.

I crept into a desolate world. About me was a smashed village. I struggled in through the outskirts of London and not until I reached Wimbledon Common did I meet a man. He had food and drink and plans for the future, visions of a people living in the great drains until they had science enough to conquer their conquerors. I stayed with him until I had regained my strength and then walked into dead London.

The metropolis was stilled of all its humming life. Here and there were heaps of dead, withered by Black Smoke; here and there were signs of destruction but it was little changed except for the horrible quiet. I was near South Kensington when I heard the mournful howling, "ulla, ulla!" Not until the next day did I see the hood of the giant that was making this sobbing wail. He did not move nor did three others that I saw, standing strangely still. Driven by fear, I resolved to end it all. I walked toward the Thing nearest me and saw birds circling about the hood, tearing at something within.

I scrambled hastily up a great rampart and below me was the Martian camp. They were all dead, nearly 50 of them, some in their machines and others prone upon the ground. They could conquer man but they had fallen before man's most relentless foe, the disease bacteria of earth.

Whatever destruction was done, the hand of the destroyer was stayed. All the gaunt wrecks, the blackened skeletons of houses that stared so dimly at the sunlit grass of the hill, would presently be, echoing with the hammers of the restorers and ringing with the tapping of the trowels. At the thought I extended my hands toward the sky and began thanking God. In a year, thought I—in a year

MICHIGAN DAILY PAPERS HAVE INCREASED RATES

29 of the Smaller Dailies May Print Only Three Times a Week.

The high price of news print and other increased production costs have caused an increase in subscription rates of several state dailies the past week. The Saginaw News-Courier's Sunday issue is increased from five to seven cents and the weekly price by carrier delivery from 15 to 20 cents. Both the Detroit News and Detroit Journal have raised from two to three cents a copy. Jackson and Ann Arbor dailies have also increased in price.

In a recent issue of the Detroit Free Press, this item appeared: "F. R. Moses, business manager of the Marshall Chronicle and president of the Michigan Association of Home Dailies, announced that publishers of 29 papers in cities having less than 5,000 circulation have decided not to take subscriptions for more than six months in advance. It is feared that these daily papers may have to issue a triweekly after July 1 and weekly after October 1. Mr. Moses has been delegated to go to Washington providing he could get hearing to testify before the present investigating committee of congress with a view to placing the plight of the country publishers before congress."

JOSEPH MILLS

Body Brought from Flint to Novesta Cemetery for Burial.

The body of Joseph Mills of Flint was brought to Cass City for burial Tuesday afternoon. The services were held at the home of George Mills and the body was interred in Novesta cemetery.

Mr. Mills had been ill for eight months from a complication of diseases, and died last Sunday at his home, 2050 Ferris Ave., Flint. He was born in Canada Feb. 23, 1855, and was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Mills. With his family he moved to Flint and was a resident of that city for 15 years. Forty-five years ago he was united in marriage with Jane Hicks in Canada.
