Something to Think About
By F. A. WALKER

THE QUESTIONER.

WHEN Shakespeare wanted to express the tragedy involved in the snuffing out of the life of his most intellectual character, he did it by these words, "The rest is silence."
He might have put it in another way, by saying that Hamlet would ask no more questions. For that was his most disconcerting habit.
Keeping silence before a puzzling world, and a puzzling universe, is something that man has never done.
The human being who just asked the reason for the first nightfall and the first appearance of the stars stood on the threshold of all modern scientific investigation.
So, if it were necessary to find a definition of man which would differentiate him from all the rest of creatures, it would be sufficient to say of him: "He is the animal that asks questions."

Rudyard Kipling in a striking line talked of "the law of the jungle."
The writers of fables have not pulled the long bow in attributing to the beasts the sense of justice, even if they were making fun of society in doing so. So the lion stands for the maker of rules, and the monkey for him who evades them.
So law is not peculiar to the children of Adam.
The animals know political economy. "Go to the ant thou sluggard," said King Solomon.
This little creature shows what can be done through the organized efforts of thousands of insects, whose operations could be stopped in a moment by the foot of a passing giant in the shape of a mischievous boy.
So business organization is not exclusively human.
It is impossible to look at the combs of a beehive without realizing that the creatures who made it know geometry and architecture.
The cells are so constructed as to give the maximum of strength with the minimum of expenditure in the way of material.
So the Brooklyn bridge, or the dome of St. Peter's, is not a proof of human superiority.

There is a solitary eagle to be seen every day, soaring over a lake in western Ontario. Once he had a mate. But she disappeared one winter. Since then the widower has never married. The natives say that it is the habit of these birds to be perpetually true to their first and only love.
So constancy is not the exclusive virtue of our race.
When Christ wanted to express his affection for Jerusalem, he could think of nothing better to say than that he would have gathered its people about him, as a hen gathers her chickens under her wings. This timid bird will face any peril if she thinks that her young are in danger.
In the same way the bear of the North woods, which will fly before man under ordinary circumstances, will fight to the death if she thinks her cubs are threatened.
So family affection and devotion do not set mankind apart from the rest of the animal kingdom.

Only the other day a raccoon at the Bronx zoological gardens in New York was in danger of starving to death because the gatekeeper who had tamed and petted him had been sent to the hospital. The animal would not take food from a stranger.
So fidelity and gratitude are not confined to the lords of creation.
But there is no reason to believe that the beasts of the jungle that have their hunting laws, or the ants that lay up their store for winter, or the bees that know practical geometry, or the eagle that mourns his dead wife forever, or the hen that protects her chickens, or the bear that is fearless of rifles, or the raccoon that is faithful to his master, ever asked any questions about the why and wherefore of things.

On the other hand, from the dawn of history, we find man worrying over the riddle of the universe. This too in spite of the fact that, even in the beginning of things he felt that he would never be able to solve it.
So he invented language to convey his questions to his neighbors and alphabets to write them down for his children. He invented mathematics in order to compute the motions of the stars.
By all his questioning he has succeeded in pushing back the curtain that hangs around his universe. Yet he knows perfectly well that in spite of all that his Newtons, Darwins, Einsteins and Curries may do, what Herbert Spencer called "the unknowable" will always elude him.
But as long as he follows the gleam he will be man, as God made him.

Mother's Cook Book

The wisest pilgrim is the one who goes Along the highway, hour by hour content
To take the rain or shine the skies have sent;
Who counts his riches in each budded rose;
Each song the thrush through vernal branches throws;
Each marvel of the sunrise; each dusk bleat
Of mystery and fragrant sacrament;
Each star that in the heaven burns and glows.

PALATABLE DISHES.

Banana Cream.
Slice three ripe bananas, press through a sieve, add a small box of crushed strawberries, reserving part of the juice; beat together lightly and set on ice to cool. Serve in glass cups with whipped cream to which has been added the reserved strawberry juice. Serve very cold.
During the hot weather the simple and less expensive desserts appeal to the housewife. Frozen dishes, when prepared at home, are always acceptable and cost very little.

Lemon Sherbet.
Take three lemons, two cupfuls of sugar and a quart of rich milk. Mix the sugar and lemon juice, add a grated rind if desired, then stir in the milk. The mixture will curdle but when frozen will be smooth and very palatable. Serve in sherbet glasses.

Your Money When You Want It.

There are some good investments which pay more interest than a savings account.
But many who bought stocks and bonds and now need the money on them find that there is no ready market for them.
Before you invest your money, consider carefully if you are investing it so that you can get it back when you need it.
Everyone should carry at least enough in a strong bank to take care of any unforeseen need.
This bank pays 4 per cent and is one of the strongest banks in this section of the state. Make it YOUR BANK.

DORT
Quality Goes Clear Through

The modish lines of new Dort family are carried from radiator to tail-light.

The recent Dort price reduction put this car foremost among automobile values.

There is more beauty and competency in the Dort than in most cars listed from at $1,200 to $1,400.

In the ownership of a Dort there is more economy and satisfaction with less depreciation to consider than in any car the market offers today.

Dort in fact completely answers the demand for a stylish and satisfactory car at a popular purchase price.

It will be our pleasure to prove to you these pleasant facts--any time.

MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE UGLY CREATURE.

"Oh, I hear some one screaming," said the girl who was adventuring to the House of Secrets.

"So do I," said the boy, who was her companion.

"Gracious," said Master Thoughtfulness, who was with them, "it's that horrible creature again."

"What horrible creature?" asked the boy.

"Come with me and we shall see her. We'll stop her this time. Hurry! My, but it's hard for anyone to do anything with her."

"She sounds perfectly terrible," said the girl. "What awful screams she gives."

"She is not screaming," said Master Thoughtfulness.

"Who is screaming, then?" asked the boy.

"Let's hurry. We mustn't even talk as we go. Follow me."

So they followed Master Thoughtfulness as he went up a short hill. He could run very fast, and he got to the top of the hill, where there was a little red house before the boy and the girl got there.

When they got there they found Master Thoughtfulness talking in a very loud way, and his face looked very angry, so different from the way it had looked.

"Now, you just stop that good and all," he said. "You are not fair. In the first place, you're cruel. In the second place, you're a hypocrite. And in the third place I don't like that expression of it hurting you more than it does the child."

"Lots of people use it, and you don't object," the woman said. She was horrible looking. Her hair was stringy and hung about her head in a very untidy way. Her mouth was very big, and her teeth were very yellow. Her hands were enormous, and the veins stuck out on them. She was tall and quite stout, but it was her face which they noticed most. It was such a horrible face that they were sure her ugliness wasn't skin deep. They didn't believe that she was beautiful, even when one got to know her.

And they didn't feel as if they ever wanted to know her, not in a million years. Such a dreadful person they had never seen before. Her face was so cruel looking, just the sort of face, they imagined, which belonged to a person who could be cruel to smaller children and to animals. Then the boy remembered, with a pang, that he had kicked the little toad. He, too, was cruel, and if he was ever cruel like that a second time and perhaps a third, he would have a face like this woman's.

He would certainly never be cruel again. They had been watching her so steadily that they had scarcely noticed a lovely little boy, quite, quite young, with golden hair and soft brown eyes. He was still crying, just a little, and his little face looked as though he had been crying quite hard. "If you do it again," said Master Thoughtfulness, "I will take your child away from you. Yes, I will, so mark my words."

The boy and the girl looked at him in a very puzzled manner.

"Here," said Master Thoughtfulness to the small boy, "here is an orange. See, I got it out of my right pocket. And here is an apple, which grew in my left pocket."

"You're teaching the child an untruth," shouted the woman.

"Now be careful, careful," said Master Thoughtfulness, "and remember my warning. If you only had a little more sweetness in your nature you would know that jokes and make-believe things and fun are among the most important things in life. You only think that harshness and unkindness are real."

"Well, I've given you my warning." The woman seemed much quieter now. And a tear fell from her right eye.

She put her arm around the little boy, and the little boy seemed so pleased that he looked up and smiled. "I do love my mummy," he said.

"You don't deserve it," cried Master Thoughtfulness, "unless you mend your ways. Don't be so anxious to punish. Explain things. I'm the children's friend, you know."

During the dry spell and the intense heat of the past two weeks there has been barely water enough to keep pressure on the mains in the village of Deckerville. This shortage of water is the result of a lack of pumping facilities at the municipal plant and the consumption of large quantities of water at the Flanders plant where the canning of the pea crop has been in progress for more than a week. The lack of water has caused a great delay and inconvenience to the company, it having been necessary to run two hours and then shut down two hours to allow the water to come up in the supply reservoir at the village plant. Several hundred dollars have been expended by the village during the past year for two new wells, both of which proved useless.

Water-Finder Finds Minerals.
A reader in Dorset, Vt., writes that he is a water-finder. He uses a forked stick but can not explain what power causes it to point downward when he is passing over water. Not only can he locate water, but by placing a small piece of lead in the end of the stick he is able to find lead when under the ground, once locating a buried pipe for a farmer. He can also locate copper.—Montreal Herald.

English Titles of Nobility.
The rank of earl was introduced into England at the time of the Conquest and succeeded the Saxon earldom. It continued the highest rank in England until Edward III created dukes in 1337 and Richard II created marquesses in 1385, both being superior to earls.

Didn't Use His Weapons.
A dog stolen in New York had three gold teeth and wore a collar studded with a hundred brilliant stones. If he had been a real dog he would have sunk those three gold teeth into the thief.—Minneapolis Journal

Mrs. Brown Rather Overdid the Thing in Her Effort to Discourage Borrowing Neighbor.

Mrs. Brown was tired of the borrowing propensities of her neighbor, Mrs. Smith. First it was some household utensil she wanted...

"Please, mother wants to know," she said, "if you will lend her some pepper and the big flat-iron."

Mrs. Brown was determined to stop her neighbor's borrowing. "Tell your mother I've got other fish to fry," she snapped...

"GARBAGE" ONCE WAS STEW

Word Has Changed Its Meaning Very Considerably Since Its Use in the Fifteenth Century.

At one time in the world's history garbage was the name of a dish and meant a stew. A fifteenth-century recipe for making "garbage" was as follows: "Take fairs garbage, chicken hedes, feet, livers and gysers (gizzards) and wash them clene...

Youthful Artist.

The world's youngest artist is Helen Williams aged one and one-half years, of South Wales. Two of her studies drawn from memory were exhibited at the 32nd annual exhibition of the Royal Drawing society at the Guildhall Art gallery, London.

HIS SENSIBLE BRAIN.

"She is selfish and spoiled," cried his sensible brain. "Uncertain and thoughtless and terribly vain. And all she would bring you is infinite pain." "Perhaps," said his heart, "but I love her!"

"You're a fool!" said his brain. "She is playing a game. There's a look in your eyes that she feels she must tame. You are just one more moth to be burned by the flame."

SEND LIVE FISH TO MARKET

New Idea Certainly is a Big Improvement So Far as Freshness of Food is Concerned.

In Norway and Holland huge tank scows, which are in effect floating aquaria, have long been used to fetch fishes from the fishing grounds to market.

The idea has been newly adopted for use on this side of the ocean, and several such scows, have been built for traffic between Canadian waters and our northern seacoast cities.

They are built of wood, their hulls, which are long and narrow, having a number of compartments to hold the fish. The compartments are perforated with holes in order that the sea water may flow freely through them.

Some of the fishes inevitably die or sicken in the course of so long a voyage, and these are scooped out with long handled nets and thrown away. The scows are sailing craft, but it is planned to equip them with gasoline engines for faster travel.

Something New in Fish Stories.

A bird dog that "points" fish is owned; it is said, by an old prospector living in the Black hills, S. D. The dog was trained on grouse and quail but works equally well on trout.

DAIRY HINTS

FACTORS IN PRODUCING MILK

Series of Studies Conducted by Department of Agriculture in Western State.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

What does it cost to produce milk? This is the question that has brought increasing concern to each dairyman. In answer to it, the United States Department of Agriculture, through the dairy division, conducted a series of studies to give dairymen reliable information on this subject.

A study of the results given in the bulletin shows that at the time of the study 56.4 per cent of the total cost of producing milk at the dairies investigated was for feed and bedding; 23.5 per cent for labor; 17.6 per cent for other costs, and 2.5 per cent for depreciation.

Pasture Plays an Important Part in Cost of Producing.

producing 100 pounds of milk during the winter were: Concentrates, 29.4 pounds; dry roughage, 92.9 pounds; succulent roughage, 143.3 pounds; bedding, nine pounds; human labor, 1.9 hours; horse labor, .01 of an hour; other costs, $0.576.

During the two years covered by the study, 44.5 per cent of each year's income from milk was obtained during the winter. During the first year records were obtained on 17 herds having an average size of 31.3 cows, with an average annual production of 7,869 pounds of 3.74 per cent milk per cow.

Most of the milk in this section is sold for condensing purposes, and is delivered by motor truck to large condenseries. All the herds selected for study were representative of dairy conditions found in that section.

In western Washington the pasture plays a very important part in milk production, according to the bulletin. With cool weather throughout most of the summer, plenty of moisture, and a rich soil, there is abundant pasture until late in the fall. During the pasture season almost 60 per cent of the milk for the year was produced, and at one-third of the yearly feed, bedding, and pasture cost.

DEPENDABLE SIRES PAY BEST

South Carolina Breeder Gives Methods of Raising Calves That Will Develop Well.

Methods of raising good calves that will develop well and show no signs of rutiness are given by a South Carolina live-stock owner in a statement to the United States Department of Agriculture. The farmer advises: 1. Use purebred sires which have behind them an established record—no guesswork.

2. Use purebred milk cows which are bred for production and which have proper points, such as deep udder, well-spaced teats, broad flanks, deep abdomen, etc.

3. Feed only warm milk while calves are young. Gradually begin feeding proper grain after the second month. Do not allow them too much grass. Give plenty of pure water, and never allow exposure to rain or extreme cold wind.

WAPPENINGS IN OUR NEIGHBORING VILLAGES

Huron county has 2,677 dogs, according to claims filed by the supervisors for taking the dog census at 10 cents per dog. Brookfield township leads with 182 canines, Sebawaing is next with 159, while Dwight is third with 151.

The poor, downtrodden railroad is certainly getting in its work nowadays since the interstate commerce commission turned the poor people over to their tender mercies. A car of coal was received from Kentucky by the Huron Clay products Co. this week on which the freight was but $190.

A deal was consummated by which Austin Wentworth of Hemans has sold his stock and building to F. C. Doan of Detroit. Mr. Doan expects to take possession of the store in a short time.

Charged with having entered the J. H. Kemp & Co. store at Unionville Nov. 4 and 23, when over $700 worth of goods were stolen and large quantities of valuable merchandise destroyed, Walter Summers of Saginaw is in the county jail awaiting trial for burglary at the September term of the circuit court.

Full per capita cost of educating the students of Caro high school will be charged as tuition for non-resident pupils next year if not over $60. This was decided at a recent meeting of the board of education, and is in line with a new law which compels districts not maintaining high schools to pay the tuition of their eighth grade graduates to the amount of such cost in the high school which the pupil will attend.

DEFORD.

Dr. Merriman has returned from Grayling.

The Jacoby family Sundayed at Kingston.

Mrs. E. R. Bruce cares for a useless finger.

R. E. Johnson and family were at Otisville Sunday.

Mrs. Robt. Jacoby has been ill since the Fourth. She sits up now.

Joseph Hack came home Friday from a few days' visit in and around Caro.

In the absence of Elder Beynon, the Kingston minister filled our pulpit.

Mr. and Mrs. Case of Detroit came Saturday night to visit Mrs. Alice Curtis, mother of Mrs. Case.

Miss Mabel McNeil of Gaylord is spending a week at the E. A. Cones home.

Wm. McCracken repairs the little tenant house owned by George Taylor in north part of town.

The pesky fly is here, but "Honey Jack" wears whiskers that neither fly, bee, nor yellow jacket dares to go near.

Did you ever hear of weather too warm to dance? No, they just swang themselves again on evening of the 8th.

Elmer Bruce informs us that the beet grounds will all be measured up this week, and the crop looks favorable for a bumper.

Agent Vanderkoo left us in charge of the relief man on the 8th and is taking his vacation. He expects to return on the 22nd.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Bruce of Richmond has been in this vicinity for a week. They seem to like this part of the world, where A. L. spent his juvenile days.

Clarence Chadwick is putting down a well for R. D. Lewis. If we can't have corn juice, we can have water from the rock in the bowels of the earth.

We learn that Forest Day is going to move into the north side of the city, occupying the house known as the Drace domicile, night into the garden lands of Joseph Hack.

There is a noise at night that drives sleep from the eyes of John Marsh, west of town. He has called on Sheriff Morris to abate the nuisance. 'Tis old acquaintances that have come for a vacation, but John don't take kindly to the jamboree.

Mrs. E. R. Bruce of Deford and Mrs. A. L. Bruce of Richmond spent a pleasant day at Bay Port Friday as the invited guests of the young people's Bible class. The day was fine and all went merry as a marriage bell.

Wm. and Joseph McCracken are having the Sam Powell lands turned over and in August it will be set to red raspberries. Then come among us if you sigh for flip or raperrie. Red raspberries stand first as brain food among the fruits of the garden.

Hearing of a ball game every Sunday somewhere sounds wrong to us. We were brought up among Scotch Presbyterians who gave Satan no license to usher in amusements on the "first day of the week."

When Dr. Wilcox read the decision that in nine cases out of ten sick ones would recover of themselves, he expressed himself as follows: "The best guesser is the best doctor, and any doctor can cure you till it comes to the last sickness."

We spoke last week of the aged "man with the hoe." Did not have his age high enough. Wm. that stands the heat so well is 77 past into his 78th and yet fights the Colorado beetle to a finish and keeps the hoe bright every day, regardless of heat.

When the world famed music comes on the evening of the 22nd, it will not only please the dancers, but it promises to put a smile on the "phis" of every woman that won't come off for a week. Nothing promised for ill natured men but we know how to subdue them.

Let the reader rub the dust from his memory and recall that some years ago one Dick Wilkinson established a "smithy" 1 1/4 miles south of Deford schoolhouse. Dick was then training a son of romantic make-up whose forename was Walter. Walter is now in government employ looking for evil doers. He passed through here on the 7th, but not in dazzling array. Had his family in a prairie schooner style that he could more easily apprehend the violators of law.

When Billy Sunday was at the high points in scaring Satan, he said he would make Hades quiver as the earthquake shocks rock Sicily. Now we are fearful that Billy did break off a corner of that torrid zone and was not careful which way it leaned and that it rolled this way. Now if it had spilled over on China or Japan, the yellow race could have stood the test, but we weak, tender white race—well, you know how it has been yourself for the past two weeks.

SPLENDID DESIGN FOR HORSE BARN

Scientifically Planned and Contains Modern Equipment.

IMPORTANT ASSET FOR FARM

Gothic Roof is of Plank Frame Construction and Gives Ample Space for Hay Mow—Has Twelve Stalls and Two Box Stalls.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD.
Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building work on the farm, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1327 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

People in the cities are inclined to think that there is no "such animal as a horse" because of the thousands of automobiles and motor trucks. But they overlook the fact that there are still many animals in the country. On the farms the horse is still carrying many of the burdens and is still considered one of the assets of that institution. In many cases, the horses are housed in a combination or general utility barn, that is, a building having accommodations for both horses and cattle. However, where the number of horses is large enough, a separate barn is very often built. There are certain important considerations which should not be overlooked in the construction and planning of a horse barn.

In the first place ample space must be provided for the storage of bulky feed of which horses consume large quantities. By this is meant hay, straw, fodder, etc. The most convenient place for the storage of this feed is a large hay mow, and this is provided for by a high roof built so there are few obstructions in the way of supporting posts.

In the barn shown here plank frame construction has been used in building up this high gothic roof. As can be seen very readily the hay mow is unusually large and capable of holding a great supply of hay. It has been fitted with special hay carrier equipment for the unloading and storing of hay.

Protection against fire has been installed in the form of lightning rods on the roof. When it is considered that 95 per cent of the fires on farms are caused by lightning, the importance of providing effective protection against this tremendous loss should not be minimized. A ventilator provides a supplemental source of fresh air for the stalls below. The barn is of frame construction set on a concrete foundation. It is 36 feet wide and 55 feet long, not a very large building. The stall floor is well lighted and ventilated by plenty of windows and doors, and contains 12 individual stalls and two large box stalls. The stalls are built in two rows facing in, with a feed alley running between, and litter alleys at the rear of each row. These alleys are equipped with special carrier track for hauling feed, and litter carriers. The feed-carrier track runs from the feed room at one end of the barn to each stall, thus eliminating much of the heavy work which has been customary in horse barns. It is an added asset because it makes the work easier for the help and tends to keep them satisfied.

Well-housed horses will work harder during the day and easily earn the money that is invested in a barn, just as contented cows will yield more milk and thus increase the income of the man who has foresight enough to build a real dairy barn. And so it goes all the way down the line.

Alvin Invents a Heart Opener
By WILLIAM FALL
(© 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

It was a patent rat trap that broke up the engagement of Miss Viola Barton and Alvin Draper. It had sundered them, brought out a sharp definite announcement from the estimable lady, and a declaration from Alvin that it would make no difference—he would always cherish his lost love and—hope. "She was always fine as silk," insisted Alvin a year afterwards. Maybe time will make a difference—time and my damage suit." The "damage suit" was history in the town. It all came out of the rat trap.

When Alvin invented his great rat trap his fiancée did not say much, for it looked as though he had really struck it at last. At the zenith of his inventive glory, however, there came a dampener. He was sued for infringement on a previous patent. Two years passed by, and the case was still pending. It had cost him several thousand dollars in legal fees, and after he had stubbornly resisted the pleadings of Viola to forget the whole thing and invest what was left in some practical business, she broke the engagement. "I'm bound to win," insisted Alvin. Why, the Specialty Manufacturing company has a standing offer of ten thousand dollars for my patent the minute the courts give me a clear title.

Alvin and Viola went to the same church. It had run down because its pastors had been slow-going, easily contented men, and the congregation had been spoiled thereby. Finally a new minister was assigned. It turned out to be Edward Barton, a favorite brother of Viola.

"The church needs all kinds of repairs," he confidentially imparted to Alvin one day. Alvin reflected over all this. He met his former fiancée on the street. She idolized her brother, and when Alvin referred to him she forgot the gulf between them.

"I think I see a way," said Alvin. "Oh, if you only could," began Viola, and then she flushed crimson, remembering the past. Immediately Alvin forgot the pending suit.

The young minister was called away from town temporarily. One evening there was a church sociable. Alvin was always the life and leader of such functions. Viola was also there. Alvin rapped on a table for order and attention.

"Friends," he said, placing a box before him, "I have something to say before we go up to our homes. This is the best church in the world—fixed up. Our splendid young pastor is the best preacher in the world—paid up. We've all got into a mean and stingy rut. Let's get out of it."

The church deacons looked askance, the lay members curious and excited. "You know I'm a sort of dabbler in inventions," proceeded Alvin, placing his hand on the box. "This is my latest one. It's called 'the cash annunciator,' and I've got it especially for this church."

Alvin took off the cover of the box, amid grim, expectant silence. Then he placed beside it some coins. "This is my patent collection box," he proceeded, "and I want the church to adopt it. My contribution will be the coins you see here. Now observe: I wish to donate a dollar."

He slipped a silver dollar through the slot in the box. A mellow tinkle seemed to gently thank the donor. "Twenty-five cents."

A hoarse cracked bell note rang out. "One cent," spoke Alvin finally. An unearthly racket came from the box.

The audience snickered—some of them roared with laughter. Miserly John Duke, the richest man in town, looked sheepish. Robert Jones, second in social importance, scowled severely. Then the corner of his lips began to twitch.

"Mr. Draper," he spoke out, "you can put a five-dollar attachment for me regularly on that invention of yours."

"I'll make it ten," announced Mr. Duke, after a pause. "Yes, no more pennies," spoke up Deacon Smith. "You've given us a good lesson, Mr. Draper. I'm for appreciating the old church and the young minister as they deserve to be."

The following Sunday showed practical results, the next better still. That week Alvin received a letter which he greeted with a hurrah—his suit was won.

He met Viola, her face beaming, that afternoon. "I must congratulate you on your good fortune," she said brightly. "And oh! what magic wonders you have accomplished with the church. The trustees have raised five thousand dollars, and my brother will be taken care of as he should. I am afraid—I mean I must confess that you have invented a new way to reach my heart."

Surgical Implements of Flint.
Stone-age tools are being used in Bulgarian hospitals to perform surgical operations. In the absence of any steel instruments whatever with which to operate, the Russian surgeons in charge have taken a leaf from the book of their prehistoric ancestors, and have used chipped flints. Moreover a freshly chipped flint has an excellent cutting edge and possesses perfect immunity from infection.

A Room Filled With Books.
Books are delightful society. If you go into a room filled with books—even without taking them down from their shelves, they seem to speak to you, seem to welcome you, seem to tell you that they have something inside their covers that will be good for you, and that they are willing and desirous to impart to you. Value them, and endeavor to turn them to account.—W. E. Gladstone.

Spiritualism Among Savages.
The original exponents of spiritualism are found among the tribes living about the headwaters of the Amazon. These people take no important steps in any direction without consulting the spirits through a medium who is held in reverence and fear by the other members of the tribe. Their ceremonies are very elaborate and are always conducted at night by the light of a fire.
