LADY BASE BALL FANS SERVED week. EXCELLENT THREE-COURSE BANQUET.

Skilled and Clever Members of the Cass City Team Praised by Speakers.

Nearly one hundred base ball fans at a banquet Monday night.

A three-course banquet was served by a committee of ladies which was excellently prepared, well served and thoroughly enjoyed.

J. D. Brooker, presiding as toastmaster, took the banqueters back 43 years to the time that he saw his first ball game in Cass City, played by the local team and one from Tyre. J. C. An interesting set of New England place names is drawn from the Bible. In these names, quite as much as in those brought from the home land, the early settlers expressed their deepest selves. Hebron, Gilead, Lebanon, Canan, Bethlehem, Sharon, Mt. Carmel, Goshen, and Jerusalem are found in Connecticut alone. The names of three women in the parish register of one of these towns were Obedience, Silence, and Mindwell. Clearly, these people had never read, or at least believed. ### DAIRY COW COSTS SHOWN BY RECORDS LOCAL

M. A. C. Cost Accounting Routes Give Figures on Average Maintenance in State.

Figures on the cost of maintaining dairy cows, just released by F. T. list. Riddell of the farm management department at the Michigan Agricultural College, give $142.80 as the total direct cost per cow during the past year in the average herd. The material upon which this estimate is based was gathered from a cost accounting route in Wayne and Monroe counties, which included 528 animals on 23 different farms, and was checked carefully by W. J. Kurtz, of the college staff.

Returns from the herds studied on the route totaled $235.06 per cow, leaving a net average return, above direct costs, of $92.26 a year per cow. Costs included $103.36 feed per cow, and $39.44 for other costs, including maintenance of entire herd McPhail in Flint. and feed for young stock and bulls. other sources, including sale of stock man. and manure, and dairy products used in the home.

EMERGENCY BOARD ORGANIZES AT HOME OF WHITNEY WAT-KINS IN JACKSON COUNTY; ISSUES NEAR EAST APPEAL.

100,000 BUSHELS REQUIRED TO RESCUE DYING CHILDREN

For the first time in the annals of an American relief organization, a farm-one of the oldest and finest in Michigan-served as the meeting place recently of a State-wide group assembled to appeal to their fellow farmers as a class to contribute of their grain against want in a foreign

Mr. and Mrs. L. Whitney Watkins, of Watkins Farms, in Jackson County, were luncheon hosts to the Emergency Grain Board of the Michigan Committee of Near East Relief, and immediately after luncheon the board formally organized itself and named an executive committee to launch and manage campaign among the farmers of the State for 100,000 bushels of grain, or its equivalent, to be sent as Michigan's share of America's gift of 5,000,000 bushels, now being collected, to Armenia, Syria, Assyria and adjacent lands of Asia Minor. Resultant of starvation and exposure there cholera and typhus have broken out, and thousands of orphaned children and destitute adults are dying in the streets and by the roadsides.

Governor Phones Board.

Kept by official business from attending the meeting as honorary chairman of the Near East Committee, Governor Groesbeck telephoned his regret from Lansing to Watkins Farms, and sent to James J. Spillane, State Director, a letter backing the campaign.

Former Lieutenant Governor Luren D. Dickinson, chairman of the State organization, presided as temporary chairman, and these officers were elected for the board: Chairman, Herman H. Halladay of Lansing, Commissioner of Agriculture; vice-chairman, Professor David Friday, president-elect of Michigan Agricultural College; secretary, L. Whitney Watkins of Manchester; executive committee-Mr. Halladay, Professor Friday and Mr. Watkins. Other members of the Emergency Grain Board are: James Nicol of South Haven, president of the Michigan Farm Bureau; Grant Slocum of Detroit, president of The Gleaners: A. B. Cook of Owosso, master of the State Grange: I. R. Waterbury of Detroit, manager of the Michigan Farmer; Forrest Lord of Mt. Clemens, editor of the Michigan Business Farmer; Frank B. Drees of Lansing, secretary of the Michigan Bean Jobbers Association; former State Senator Charles B. Scully of Almont: A. Edward Illenden of Adrian, farmer, and Alfred Allen, president of the Michigan Association of Farmers Clubs

Under Historic Roof.

In welcoming his guests Mr. Watkins spoke feelingly of the pride he as a farmer took in having the first farm which his grandfather, coming here from New Hampshire in 1832. had selected, and under the roof sheltered his parents—the home to sons, will return as farmers when they have finished their college terms.

"I have the utmost faith," Mr. Watkins concluded, "in the response the farmers of Michigan will make to this humane appeal for food for a starving Christian people across the seas who are tillers of the soil too, for I know the homely, kindly, sympathetic spirit to help which is to be found everywhere in the farmhouses of this State.'

Mr. Dickinson spoke briefly of his complete confidence that the farmers as a class will ensure the success of the campaign for grain.

Divine blessing on the appeal was invoked by the Rev. E. H. Huelster of Cleveland, a Near East field work er recently returned from Asia Minor Halladay: "Up to Us."

Chairman Halladay expressed vigor ously the sentiment: "This undertaking of mercy, here dedicated in this historic farmhouse where sympathy for suffering has abode through the generations, we must push forward, and show that Michigan farms are let me do it now. Let me not defer prepared to do their full share in the national undertaking."

Director Spillane outlined briefly the immediate need for 5,000,000 bushels of grain from America-

100,000 bushels from Michigan. Former Senator Scully likened America in this undertaking to the 'white ship of mercy"- the hospitalship-which follows the fighting fleet He reminded the farmers of the State that the charge often is heard against them in the cities that they in their organizations "never have put anything big across because they never hang together," and he said this was an unequalled opportunity for them to disprove that charge by "joining hands across the farms" and co-oper ating with the Farm Bureau, the State Grange. The Gleaners, the farm clubs and other agricultural organizations for the immediate success of the grain campaign.

Farm Bureau Stands By.

Mr. Nicol, speaking as president of the Farm Bureau, read an adopted resolution of the bureau's executive committee pledging its moral support and the use of its organization channels for collection of the grain or its equivalent in money.

In a discussion developed by Profes sor Friday the Board agreed that one dollar per $10,000 of farm value was a fair proportional figure upon which to base the various county quotas throughout the State; and on this basis the board, operating through the farm organizations, will go to the farmers for Michigan's share in the grain gift.

Mr. Waterbury and Mr. Lord gave assurance that the farm journals of the State will heartily endorse and support the grain appeal, and both were of opinion that the full amount required for the State's quota will be forthcoming

Letter to Farmers.

At a meeting of the executive committee held immediately after adjournment of the board the following letter was made public:

'To the Farmers of Michigan: "From the Emergency Grain Board, in meeting assembled on Watkins Farms, Manchester:

"With children dying in their mothers' arms of starvation; with cholera and typhus spreading; with the population perishing in such numbers that in the larger cities wagons twice daily remove the corpses from the streets; with knowledge that food must be procured, transported and carried into the interior before these dread conditions can be overcome, the Executive Officers of Near East Relief recognize the absolute need for an immediate campaign for grain for the lands of the Near East.

"These men, who at their own expense had gone into this region of misery and death to verify the reports of their field workers and to procure facts upon which to base the next year's relief program, realized that not half the story had been told. Unhesitatingly they issued the order for a Nation-wide grain appeal.

"The wail of the starving people of Armenia and its neighboring lands has been heard throughout America. An organization-in Michigan the Emergency Grain Board-has been created to bring the appeal for these people, of whom eighty-five per cent are farmers, to the farmers of our own State.

In Death's Shadow.

"This year, today, you yourselves suffer the effects of short crops. But over there! The only harvest those unhappy people have had in more than five years has been the daily harvest of the dead; picked up in the streets; by the chill waysides of the wild Georgian Mountain; in the desolated farm valleys of Armenia; on the scorched floor of a desert whose only shadow of refuge for them has been the shadow of the wing of

"We have been chosen to present to you their plight, and being of you, we do not hesitate. We know that you will sacrifice, that they may live. "The need which America is called upon to meet is for 5,000,000 bushels of corn and wheat. Michigan's allotted share is 100,000 bushels. "The records in the Michigan office of Near East Relief disclose many individual contributions by farmers. meeting of such an organization as But this is the first time in Michigan the Emergency Grain Board on the the call has been sent forth to farmers as a producing class. "We recognize that you may not be in a position where you can contribute which for 64 continuous years had either corn or wheat. You may prefer to make a contribution of money: which the fourth generation, three or you may desire to contribute barley or rye or beans. The choice of your gift rests with you. Our thought is simply this:

"Every farmer in the State should contribute to the success of this appeal in behalf of these starving people-our allies in the World War, the oldest race of Christians.

One Dollar in $10,000.

"The distribution of Michigan's county quotas is fair. It represents contribution equal to one dollar in every $10,000 of farm value. "This appeal, to be of any benefit in the present crisis, must be met before November 1, 1921, in order that the grain may be milled, transported across the seas, and delivered into the interior before the snows of early winter block the roads in Armenia and the Near East. This is an opportunity for life-saving service which may present itself but once.

"'BUT ONCE-I shall pass through this world but once. Any good therefore that I can do, or any kindness that I can show to any human being, or neglect it-I shall not pass this way again.'

"Faithfully and confidently yours, (Signed)

CHAPTER I.

"Tony"-For Short.

Another winter had lifted its ley fingers from the Storm Country and Lake Cayuga, and an early spring had brought from the South the red-breasted robins and thousands of other birds to build their homes in the Forest city, as Ithaca. N. Y., is well called, for to the south, the east, the west, and even to the north where the lake cut sharply around a corner, broad forests stretched their lengths and heights of leaf and bough on miniature mountains.

One evening on the western side of the railroad tracks, a girl stood before a small building over which, like ropes of green, draped the branches of a weeping willow tree. This building was different from any of the other habitations near it in that it was well painted, and the door stood open all

"Twas a strange little girl that gazed up with searching eagerness at the two lighted signs that had arrested her attention. In her arms she held a diminutive guinea pig, and the way she hugged it close demonstrated her love for it.

"THE SALVATION ARMY," she spelled out and thoughtfully consid-

"Everybody is welcome here," she read slowly. That meant that anyone, could enter if he wanted to, she decided, and as Tonnibel Devon did want to go in, she softly tiptoed up the steps and peeped into the room. As there was nobody in sight, she sidled in and looked about.

"Welcome" was curved in letters of red above a table, and the silent young stranger sighed. She couldn't understand how a girl could be really welcome anywhere. Of course her mother liked her and missed her when she was away, but Tony knew of no other place where she was really wanted but the canal boat, called Mary and Dirty Mary for short, which had been her home ever since she could remember.

"Glory be to God in the highest," swung in letters of gold across the right wall, and to the left, "Stand Still and See the Salvation of the Lord," kept her attention a little longer. She didn't know what they meant, but the varied colors shining brilliant in the bright light calmed her turbulent spirit and made her happy. She hugged the pig closer, bent her head and kissed the top of its ear.

"I guess we're in a church, Gussie." she said aloud, "and you mustn't grunt or squeal like you do on the Dirty Mary. It's awful nice and quiet, ain't it. honey?

"Were you speaking to me?" said a voice from near the door.

Tonnibel Devon struggled to her rushed over the tanned skin, but be- of the upturned face. cause he was smiling and kindly, she smiled back, a dimple coming to life at each corner of her mouth.

"Nope," she flung out in confusion. "I was talkin' to Gussie-Piglet here. Mebbe her and me hadn't ought to be here. You can kick us out if you want to."

Philip MacCauley, the captain of the Salvation army in Ithaca, bowed, and then he laughed.

"Every one is welcome here," he quoted, coming forward. "Where'd you come from? I've never seen you before."

"I'm staying up Hoghole way," replied Tony. "I ain't been around Ithaca long. This is an awful nice room, ain't it, huh?"

"Yes, very. We like it," replied the young man. "Sit down; don't be in a hurry. I want to talk to you." Tonnibel did sit down but not very comfortably. She was embarrassed in the presence of this handsome young stranger, abashed in the glamor of his uniform, and all the beauty of him.

With boyish admiration he was contemplating the sparkle of her gray eyes, shaded by long lashes as ebony black as her hair which hung in ringlets to her waist. He decided that she was very pretty, and that he liked to have her in the Salvation army quarters.

"Can't you stay for meeting this "We evening?" he asked presently. have singing here."

Tony's eyes deepened almost to lustrous black.

"Oh, I'd love that!" Then she shook her head. "Nope," she went on, "I got to go home to mummy. She's all alone! Mebbe when my daddy gets more her eyes sought the face above, back, I'll come some time and sit clean through the night."

For an instant the smile stayed about the boy's lips, then gravity settled once more over his earnest young face.

"What's done in this place?" she questioned after a while.

"Oh, we sing and read and pray," replied the boy. "We do everything we can to help people. There's such a boat. lot of misery in the world."

"That's as true's you're born," came back promptly from the parted red lips. "I know that because my mother is sick every day, and she cries too. That's misery, ain't it?"

Captain MacCauley was used to tales of woe, but he knew a panaces for them. "Yes, it is so," he said. 'Perhaps you could get her to come here some evening! Do you think you could?"

"Daddy wouldn't let, her," was the reply, and she lifted unfathomable saddened gray eyes to his. "You see when a man owns a woman, and she don't do the things he tells her to, he beats her, huh?"

There was mute pleading in her expression as she drew back on the bench a little farther away from him. Ah! He might have known that she had been swept along by the relentless tide of brutality. He sighed a little. He had seen enough of ignorant men with their supreme egotism, to know she told the truth.

"Your father is-is-cruel to your mother, then?" he faltered. She remained in deep thought for the space of a few seconds. "A swat or two, mebbe more, ain't a killin' thing to women folks," was the response she made confusedly at length.

So unusual had been her answer that Philip MacCauley gazed at her in amazement.

"Have you ever heard of—of God?" he asked finally, his own confusion apparent in the stumble of his tongue. Tonnibel laughed.

"I hear God d-n more'n a hundred times a day," she replied. "Is that what you mean?"

"Not quite," answered Philip, startled. "No! Not that."

"Then what?" demanded Tony. What kind of a God do you mean?" "One that is good," explained Phil-

"There isn't any God but the one who helps-" "My mummy?" breathed the girl, misty tears shadowing her eyes.

"Where is he, then?" The words shot forth with such insistence that something within Philip MacCauley rose to its demand.

"Some one's got to be good to my mother," the girl ran on before he could speak. "She's sick-and lonely. Oh, I've got to do something for her.

Where's your helpin' God, mister?" "Right here in this place," said Philip, a strange emotion sweeping over him. "In fact there isn't any place where God is not." "He wouldn't come in a dirty canal boat, would He?" demanded Tony, breathlessly.

Astonished at such crudeness. tain MacCauley shifted himself about so he faced her squarely. Was it pretended ignorance or innocence in the feet, turned around and saw a young searching gray eyes? Then he decided man looking at her. A flame of red that truth was stamped on every line

"Of course, everywhere," he exclaimed brokenly, "Why, dear child-" Tony Devon interrupted him swiftly. "Tell me how to manage it," she pleaded. "How can I wheedle your God to the Dirty Mary?"

"To the what?" was the question the boy asked in shocked swiftness.

"The Dirty Mary," repeated Tony. "My mummy and me live on a canal boat. Once she were just called 'Mary.' But she's so d-d nasty, Ede calls her the Dirty Mary. She's a nice boat just the same as long as my mummy's there. But I can't see how a clean God could come on 'er. . . . I guess you're foolin' me, mister.'

Philip swallowed hard. Then slowly and gently be talked to her, trying to make her understand as best he could what he meant by God. Spirit.

"And you can help your mother, little-what's your name?"

"Tony, just Tonnibel," she mumbled. Then her voice rose and she uttered sharply, "Now tell me how to help my mother."

Philip went to the altar and sorted out a small card.

"This." he said, coming back to her, has happy, loving thoughts written on it. If you think these things all the time-oh, how they will help both you and your mother."

Wonderingly she took it in her fingers. The first thing that met her eyes was a beautiful uplifted face of a man and in his arms was a little lamb. Underneath the picture was printed, "Feed my sheep," and directly under that were the words, "Stand still and see the salvation of the Lord." Once a face wherein lay all the pity and love in the world.

Tony Devon caught a glimpse of the lesson he was trying to teach, and when she went out of the Salvation army hall she held within the depths of her a wonderfully new and utterly strange emotion.

She was panting for breath when she ran up the gangplank of the canal

A woman was busy brewing tea

when the girl slipped down the steps

"You been gone a long time, Tony," mumbled Mrs. Devon. "Did you see anything of your daddy?"

"Nope, and I squinted in every beer hole in Ithaca," Tony replied, "butbut-but I found out something for you. Listen! There's somebody on this leeway before he's in his coffin." boat besides me, and you-and Gus-

"Who?" came sharply from the woman.

She shivered, fearing that the law lay in wait for her absent husband. 'Who, brat?" she repeated implor ingly.

Tonnibel bent over and looked straight into the sad, wan face.

"God, just a plain lovin' God!" she while the tea's makin' good, and I'll and we can't get it only through her." tell you."

voice the girl told the story of the Shepherd who had said long ago with infinite pity, "Feed my sheep."

"And mummy," the girl continued, leaning her head against her mother's árm, "Darling mummy, that beautiful man said, "Love'd make crooked things straight,' and-and it's so." A look of unbelief came over Edith Devon's face. "Fiddle," she said in a disgusted "Tony, you ain't a brain in voice. your bean."

"I don't need any brains as long as I got this, Edie," the girl replied, lifting the card she held. "Come on, let's say these things over. Here's one that'll keep-well, it'll help keep daddy from beatin' you."

Mrs. Devon grasped the girl's arm in sudden frenzy.

"You told some one Uriah beats me?" she demanded sharply.

"Mebbe I did, and mebbe I didn't," answered Tony, slyly, "but these here words about standin' still and watching Salvation slam good all about will keep pappy's fists up his sleeves. Say it. Edie," she ended.

"I won't," said Edith, getting up swiftly. "If there's anything in it, Tony, you can show me by gettin' your daddy back home. Mebbe he's in jail." "Even if he was," retorted the girl, with a wise shake of her head, "lovin' hard could make the wide open, and daddy'd flop out like a dogfish flops into the lake. I'm goin' to find out more some of these days, and then I'll tell you all about it. Huh, mummy?"

"Yes," muttered Edith, "but I'm getting a guess out of the days I spent on this boat that God, or whoever you're talkin' about, ain't botherin' his head over the Dirty Mary, nor us uther."

CHAPTER II.

The Master of the Dirty Mary. A week before this story opens Uriah Devon had steamed the length of the lake, anchoring his boat as near Ithaca as he dared. Even to his wife. Edith, he had not confided why he had brought her to a town where yawning prison doors gaped for her every passing hour.

"I won't go, Riah," Mrs. Devon had cried when her husband had made the statement that he intended to visit Ithaca. "You couldn't get me near that place with a rope around my neck."

But the very fact that she now sat on a small bench against the boat rail, gazing moodily at the water, proved that Uriah Devon had contrived to have his way.

Occasionally Mrs. Devon lifted her head to listen and turned her eyes to the west where a narrow path zigzagged its length up the hill to the boulevard. Into her tortured soul had come a belief since the night before, that Tony's "Gloriest God." would send her man home.

Suddenly the sound of heavy footsteps in the forest path brought her sharply around. At last he was coming, this man she loved, perhaps drunk, perhaps to beat her; but nevertheless he was coming, and that was all she cared about.

Uriah Devon slowly walked up the gangplank in silence.

"Where you been?" the woman forced herself to say. But instead of replying, he demanded:

"Where's Tonnibel?" "I dunno," was the answer. "A minute ago she was over there not ten of your legs' jumps from here. . . . Where you been all this week?"

He'd been on a terrible spree, she decided. He looked as if he had been her long lashes she glimpsed first Dedrunk for days. That he had something unusual on his mind, she knew, and she knew, too, it was about Tonnibel, for hadn't he asked for the kid the moment he'd returned?

"It's about time we was doing things, Ede," he said, turning grimly. "I've waited as long as I dared. Rege says 'Paul Pendlehaven hasn't an inch Mrs. Devon's face grew deathly pale.

"What do you mean, honey?" she faltered.

"We live like rats in a hole," took up the man, after a pause, "while if Tony was made to do her part, we'd be on easy street. That's what I mean. We've got to have money and lots of it. Reggie's willing to marry the kid if you mind your business afterward. replied, her countenance expressing His marryin' her ain't sayin' he'll stick unusual exaltation. "Sit a minute to her. But we got to have boodle,

"He shan't have 'er," the woman said, with hard tones and flashing "How many times 've I got to say it over to you? If that's the why you've come to Ithaca, you might as well turn the old scow north and go back again. He's a bum," she went on. "A dude and a fool and everything else that's had. He's a thief, too,"

Devon laughed, "So am I, Ede," said he. "So 're you' for that matter. If Reggie knew that Tony was Paul Pendlehaven's kid, we wouldn't get one d-n cent of her money. He snitches from the Pendlehavens and his mother because he don't get cash enough other ways. A feller's got to have spendin' money." "Pretty small pickin's," sneered tered, "and I 'spose I'll do it if you promise not to let that pup hurt Tony when he gets her. . . . Best let's wait another year before talkin' marriage to her, though." "Nothin' doin'," rasped the man.

Tony's almost a woman, and she's eatin' her head off. After she's married---'

"You two men'll rag the kid to death or do something worse to her," gritted the woman. "Well, you won't! Rather'n have that I'll tell her she ain't ours. I'll go right bold to Paul Pendlehaven and blurt him the truth. I'll do it today if you keep naggin' at me.

Devon studied her face, his own distorted with rage.

"You'll do no such a thing, mad woman," he returned, running his tongue over his dry cracked lins. "If you get me in a temper you'd better look out. Reggie knows Tonnibel's got rich folks, but he don't know who they are. You spill the beans, by G-d, and the lake for yours."

The woman's gaze sought the sheet of blue water.

"She'll grow a beard a mile long before I tell 'er," she said finally, bringing her eyes back to his face. "Tell 'er yourself, and see how you like it!" There was a ring of revolt in her tones that brought an expression of surprise to the man's face, leaving it angrily, frowningly red. But the sound of a girl's voice on the hill brought him suddenly to his feet. "There she is, by G-d," he cried abruptly. "Now if you want any more lovin's from me-more'n that, if you want to stay where I live, you got to do my will." "Uriah, honey, darlin'," cried Edith.

"don't say that, I've always stuck by you."

"Then keep a stickin'." growled Devon. "For God's sake, if the brat ain't lugged that pig clean up that pine tree!"

Above them a giant pine tree lifted its head far above its fellows. Among its branches the man and woman could plainly see the upper half of a girl's figure settled in the crotch of an outspreading limb, and clasped in two slender arms was the small guinea plg. She bobbed her head gravely. held up the animal and shook it at them.

Tony, herself, little knew why in times of strife she sought refuge among these forest giants and came always to happiness. They were animaied beings in her mean little world and because she had showered idolatrous leve on them they, from their primeval grandeur, sent an answering spark of life to her starved little soul. The sight of Tony further enraged Uriah. He waved her in.

"Now tell her outright, and get it over, Ede, he said, sitting down again. Reaching the canal boat, Tony stood looking at her parents.

"Set down," growled Devon. Shifting the pig a little, she dropped down on the deck. She always dreaded these talks with her father and mother. It usually meant they must move on, or perhaps that a thrashing was coming her way. From under von with his frowning brow, then at length let her gaze settle on the wom-

"I s'pose I been doin' something hellish," she ventured presently in a low tone. "Have I, Edie?"

"Nope, not this time, Tony," thrust in Devon. "But we've got to tell you something. You're gettin' to be a woman, Tonnibel, and you got to do something for your mother and me."

"I'm always wantin' to do something nice for you, Edie, darling," she said, looking at her mother. "Yap it out quick, sweet, and I'll jump to do it!"

The woman began to cry softly. "Go on, Edie." said Uriah. "Why in h--l are you blubberin' over a thing you can't help?"

"But I can help it," cried Edith. 'And what's more I will. Run away, baby, and I'll have it out with your pop while you're gone."

Devon reached forward and laid a strong detaining hand on the girl's

"It's this," he got out between his teeth. "You got to get married. You been livin' on me long enough.'

The girl stared at him blankly.

"Get married," she repeated dully. 'Who'd marry a brat like me? I'm nothin' but a kid yet, and I'm goin' to stay right here with my mother. See? I don't have to-do I, mummy darlin'?" "Your ma's word ain't law on this boat," answered Uriah in an ugly tone. "Mine is. though. Fire ahead. Edie, and tell the kid my will." Mrs. Devon coughed spasmodically and toyed with the fabric of her skirt. A slender brown hand went up and closed over her twitching fingers. "I wouldn't marry any of the mutts you know, daddy," the girl burst out in desperation. "So get that notion lean out of your mind." Her face settled sullenly into little lines that pursed up the lovely young mouth, and Uriah Devon moved his feet nervously. Perhaps his task wasn't going to be so easy after all. "Kid," he said huskily, "if you don't do what you're told, I'll make you. You ain't too old to gad yet. And you'll be missin' one of the best lick-

The girl eyed him curiously, making a sidewise gesture with her head.

in's you ever got if you mind what I

"Who's the duffer you've chose out or me?" she asked at length. "You night as well tell me."

"My friend, Reggie," said Devon, ending over and staring at her. Tonnibel's mouth widened until two ows of teeth gleamed through the red of her lips. She made a wry face. Nothin' like that for me—eh, Edie?" Edith Devon was coming to a resolution that meant trouble for herself and for Tonnibel.

daddy, kid," she sniffled weakly. "You get to the cabin and mend them old clothes.'

"I ain't fought it all out with your Uriah Devon laid his pipe beside him and uttered an oath. "You'll stay right here, brat," he gritted, "and pay heed to me." "Uriah," screamed the woman, "if you go on with this, I'll tell 'er all I know. I swear I will. Tony, honey, Tony, baby, I-I ain't-"

With a roar the man sprang forward and in his effort to reach his wife knocked the girl flat on the deck. When Tonnibel rolled over and sat up her mother was stretched along the boat rail, and Devon was standing over her. She lay so dreadfully still and limp that the girl scrambled to her feet.

If wasn' come fearfully to them but a short period before with the little pig in her arms: nor the same girl who had swung in the treetops making play fellows of the sourcels and answering the shrill calls of the forest birds. She seemed suddenly to have grown taller. and as she flung herself on Devon, the very strength of her little body sent him sprawling against the side of the cabin, "Now you killed her, d-n you," she screamed. "If you kick 'er -I'll-I'll-" She dropped at the side of her mother, her threat broken in two by the awful pallor on the woman's face. "Oh, God, mummy darlin', mummy darlin'," she ended in a bitter cry. Growling in rage, Devon turned on "Mebbe I have killed 'er," said he. "If so, I'll make a good job of it and finish you too." The girl rose before him, her eyes blazing into his, her little fists clenched together.

"Go On and Finish Me."

"Folks that murder other people, Pappy Devon," she shot back, "get strapped in a chair, and they get lightning run through 'em. Go on and finish up! Go on and finish me! I'd ruther have you kill me than make me marry that old Reggie,"

As if his name had brought him out of the forest, Reginald Brown walked . down the Hoghole path.

CHAPTER III.

The Picture of a Baby. Tonnibel's heart jumped almost into her throat, then seemed to cease beating. There stood her father growling, enraged and drunk, and as if she were dead and no longer able to help her child, her mother lay almost within touching distance. If Uriah carried out his plans, then the horrid fellow there would soon claim her as his woman. That thought frightened her so that she stepped back as the newcomer came upon the deck.

"What's the matter, Ry?" he asked quite casually.

"He's killed mummy," burst forth the girl. "And if both you fellers don't want to get pinched, you'd better scoot offen this boat."

Uriah laughed, and Reggie's highpitched cackle followed.

"Been giving your woman a little discipline, eh, pal?" he demanded, turning on Devon. "Well, they all need it now and then. But she's the liveliest breathing corpse I ever saw. Did you hit 'er, Dev?"

"Yep," growled the other man, "and I'm goin' to beat Tony, too. The impudent brat says she wouldn't marry you if you was the last man livin'. You watch the brat there, Rege, while I duck Ede in the cabin."

Tonnibel, wide-eyed and suffering. saw her father lift her mother up in his brawny arms and carry her downstairs, none too gently. When he had disappeared, a throat sound made her swing her eyes to the other man. He was contemplating her with a smile, an evil smile, such as she hated in men. His white teeth seemed like many gleaming knives, sharp, strong and overhanging, his red lips spreading away from them.

He took a step toward her and stopped.

"Why so much fuss about nothing, my little one?" he said, cooing.

"Daddy said I had to marry you," breathed the girl, brushing back a stray curl from her brow. "But I don't! I'm goin' to stay with my mother on the Dirty Mary. There ain't no law forcing a girl to marry a man she don't like. And I hate you, see? Huh?"

"Who spoke of a law?" smiled Brown, "I didn't! But I do know, my little Tony-girl, that you'll say a very meek 'yes' when I get through with Tonnibel suddenly shuddered and a hopeless, helpless feeling went in waves over her. Oh, to be anywhere in God's clear, clean world! Away from those gleaming lustful eyes! But she saw no opportunity to escape. Reginald Brown was blocking the small space through which she must fly if she were to be saved at all. She knew very well if she could hide for a little while the two men would drink until they slept. Then she could come back and help her mother. Plainly she had heard the woman weeping below in the cabin, and even more plainly to her suffering ears came Devon's blows, and after that—silence. Her heart thumped like a hammer against her side. Behind her lay the shining lake. And one hasty glance over her shoulder only added to her fear. There was not a sign of a boat anywhere. She was frantic enough to scream if it would have done her any good.

"I think I'll kiss you, my little bird," said Reggie, suddenly, narrowing his eyes. "You're pretty enough for anyone to want to kiss. By Jove, I never realized until today just how much I liked you. If I kissed you, well-perhaps you'd change your mind aboutabout things."

Tonnibel slid backward to the boat rail. When she touched it, she whirled about and dove headlong into the lake. When Reginald Brown saw the girl's feet disappear under the water, he uttered an oath and cried out. He hadn't expected such an action on her part. He ran to the cabin steps and screamed to Devon.

"She's in the lake, Ry," he shivered as the other man sprang to the deck. When Tonnibel felt the water over her, she swept to the lake's bottom with one long stroke. Then deftly she rid herself of her dress skirt and became above the water's edge. Then they leapt to the shore and raced toward the place she must land. To the panting girl it was a race for life. Suddenly, like a flashing glimpse from Heaven, the words, "Stand Still and See the Salvation of the Lord,' floated before her eyes like a flame of gold. Philip MacCauley's deep voice seemed to speak them in her ringing ears immediately after. "Goddy," she

She heard the two men crashing after her. That her short, swift leaps could outdistance them for long if she tried for the boulevard, she had no hope. But all about ner were giant friends with outstretched arms, offering her shelter. For one instant she paused, then sprang into the air. caught the lower branch of a great pine tree and like a squirrel scurried up it. Almost at the top, spanned over by the blue sky, she crawled out to the end of a big limb and clung to it. Beneath her the men paused and shouted curses up at her. Tonnibel cared nothing for curses. She'd heard them all her life, used them, too, when she felt like it.

Suddenly there came to her ears the lapping of a paddle in the lake. She flung up her head, peeped out and saw a canoe taking its leisurely way toward Ithaca. She bent over and looked

"Daddy," she cried, "there's some one rowin' on the lake. I'm goin' to holler like h-l. And when he comes, I'll tell 'im how you banged Ede, and If she's croaked you'll both get jailed. . . Here's where I holler!"

She sent out a quick birdlike trill, and the man in the canoe held his paddle suspended in the air as he studied the forest. This didn't interest Tonnibel as much as did the fact that Devon and Reggie Brown jumped to their feet and raced away toward the boulevard. Tonnibel from her perch saw them disappear toward Ithaca before she slid to the ground. The man in the canoe, too, made but a short pause before he dipped his paddle and shot away. On the deck of the boat Tonnibel picked up Gussie-Piglet and, dripping wet, went swiftly down the cabin steps. There, she found her mother on the bunk, her face discolored by her husband's blows. She looked as if she were dead, and for a moment the forlorn child of the wilderness uttered heartbroken little cries for help.

The cabin was cluttered in the struggle Uriah Devon had had with his wife. In despair Tony looked around. The old clothes daddy had brought home were strewn over the cabin floor. Tonnibel heaped them together, then began to examine them.

They needed nothing but pressing. This she'd do to save her mother the work; and perhaps the fact that he had something ready to sell would make Uriah less brutal when he came back. In running her fingers over a coat, searching for small rents, Tony felt something between the lining and outside, a book it seemed like, which she hastily pulled out. It was small and much worn. There wasn't any money in it, in fact nothing but a picture, wrapped up in paper.

She looked at the picture curiously. A baby's face smiled up at her, and her own lips curved a bit in answer to the laughing challenge in the little one's eyes

Then she turned it over. On the back was written:

"My baby, Caroline Pendlehaven, aged six months. If this picture is ever lost the finder will receive a money reward by returning it to Dr. Paul Pendlehaven, Pendlehaven Place, Ithaca, Money was what Edie needed. Money, food and a doctor. If she could find this Paul Pendlehaven, perhaps in exchange for the picture he would give her a bottle of medicine for Hastily changing her wet clothes, she slipped the baby's pictured face into her blouse, turned down the lamp and crept from the canal boat and with Gussie in her arms was soon lost in the forest.

BUTTER SHIPPED IN SUMMER

Parcel Post Will Prove Entirely Satisfactory if Proper Conditions Are Maintained.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Parcel post shipments of butter are likely to be subjected to conditions, especially during the summer, which may cause deterioration and injure the quality of the butter. It is highly desirable, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture, that every possible precaution be taken before shipment. Particularly is this true of farm-made butter, because conditions affecting its quality and condition usually cannot be controlled as easily as in creameries. Farmmade butter, however, should be marketed just as satisfactorily as creamery-made butter when it is properly made and prepared for shipment.

It is necessary to maintain proper conditions in the care of the milk and cream and the making of butter if a marketable product is to be produced. Too much importance, it is said, cannot be given to maintaining cleanly conditions in the stable and in other places where the milk, cream, or butter are produced or kept. for they absorb odors and spoil very quickly. It is important, too, that these products be kept in a cool place. High temperatures should always be avoided, as they produce a soft, oily condition of the butter which is undesirable.

In manufacturing butter on the farm or in a factory the buttermilk must be removed and washed out, and the proper amount of salt must be incorporated evenly. Frequently parcel post shipments of farm butter are unsatisfactory to customers because proper methods were not used in making it, and the quality and condition of the butter thereby injured before it was shipped. For the satisfaction of customers it is important that a uniform quality of butter be produced.

Methods used in preparing butter for parcel post shipping depend largely upon the local conditions and style of package used. To insure delivery in the best possible state, butter, after being packed, printed and placed in cartons, should be chilled or hardened thoroughly before it is shipped. One of the most satisfactory ways of preparing butter for shipment is in regular one-pound prints, the standard print measuring 21/2 by 21/2 by 45/8 inches. Every pound print should be neatly wrapped in regular butter parchment or paper. A second thickness of such paper has been found to add materially to the carrying possibility of the butter. Waxed paper may be used for the second wrapping. As a further protection to the print, it should be placed in heavy manila paraffin cartons, which may be obtained from folding paper-box companies, either plain or printed as a stock carton or with a special private Corrugated fiber-board shipping containers of various sizes may be obtained for shipping one-pound prints of butter. These boxes or containers practically insulate the butter and furnish much protection against heat. Further protection may be obtained by wrapping the container in stout wrapping paper. The whole should be tied securely with a strong cord. In tying the twine it should be drawn tightly around the package so as to insure its proper carriage. Some persons ship butter by parcel post in improvised or home-made containers. Clean, discarded, corrugated paperboard cartons are obtained from the grocer or other merchant at small cost or frequently without any cost at all. It is possible to cut a piece of paper board in such shape and size that when it is folded it will form a

Wisconsin Farmer Praises Cow-Testing Association as Guide-Board

to Better Dairying. "When I bought my farm two years ago there was a herd of scrub cows on it," writes a Wisconsin farmer to a field agent of the dairy division, United States Department of Agriculture. "I joined the cow-testing association, and soon found that my scrub cows were a failure, so I disposed of them and bought some purebred and grade Holstein cows. The cow-testing association is a guide-board on the way to better dairying and a big saving in feeds, as one can feed to so much better advantage where the production is known. Trying to feed without records of your cows is like feeding in the dark."

In an ancient Bahylon province there have been discovered records on clay tablets belonging to the period of about 2400 B. C., showing that a woman's "college" or "university" had been established in a suburb of the city called Burna, and that women had equal rights with men in commercial property and political affairs.
