

ALETHA SPURGEON AWARDED MEDAL

DISTRICT W. C. T. U. CONVENTION HERE LAST WEEK WELL ATTENDED.

Delegates Well Pleased with Excellent Program Presented at Two-Day Session.

"I consider this the best district convention I ever attended," was the comment of one of the officers at the 41st annual seventh district convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union which was held at Cass City last Thursday and Friday. This sentiment was also expressed by many of the delegates who were very favorably impressed with the excellent program and the large attendance.

The convention was especially honored by having as one of its speakers, Mrs. Perkins of Ann Arbor, who is a national W. C. T. U. worker and is chairman of the child's welfare committee of the seventh district. It is seldom that a district convention is favored by the attendance of a national officer and Mrs. Perkins' message, in the opinion of local workers, was one that every citizen of Cass City should have heard.

Mrs. Norma Mudge of Detroit, state corresponding secretary and editor of the Michigan Union, gave to the convention much valuable food for thought and work in presenting the extension program that is launched by the W. C. T. U. Other features of the convention program were the paper on "Modern Menaces to Morals" by Miss Ruby Randall of Birmingham, the paper, "Movie Censorship, Why?" by Mrs. Octie Orr of North Branch, and the talk on the "American Sabbath" by Mrs. Butt of Harbor Beach.

Of particular interest locally was the grand gold medal contest Friday evening, the closing session of the convention, when four girls of Cass City, Thelma Warner, Anna Bell Tibbals, Mildred Dodge and Aletha Spurgeon, entered as contestants. The judges awarded the medal to Miss Spurgeon and Rev. W. W. Edwards made the presentation of the jewel.

Officers were elected as follows:

President, Mrs. Bell M. Waters, Lum.

Vice president, Mrs. Kittie G. Cope, Metamora.

Corresponding secretary, Mrs. Dora Rapley, 715 15th St., Port Huron.

Recording secretary, Mrs. C. S. Bates, Kingston.

Treasurer, Mrs. Linnie Reed, North Branch.

Cass City Union was honored by the election of Mrs. T. L. Tibbals as chairman of the contest committee of the 7th district.

Delegates who attended the convention included the following: Mrs. L. Reed, Mrs. McKillop, Mrs. Tewksbury and Mrs. Orr of North Branch, Mrs. Perkins of Ann Arbor, Mrs. Norma Mudge of Detroit, Mrs. Jean Leighton and Mrs. H. Deland of Memphis, Mrs. Conly Waters, Miss Randall and Mrs. Lester of Lum. Mrs. Etta Graham, Mrs. Ora McDonald, Mrs. Brown of Dryden, Miss Ruby Randel of Birmingham, Mrs. Etta Schenck and Kittie Cope of Metamora. Mrs. Nora Meiden and Elsie Jones of Clifford, Carrie Van Pelten and Mrs. Mary Moffet of Vassar, Mrs. Mary Overpuck, Dora Rapley and G. Cunty of Pt. Huron, Mrs. S. S. Bates and Mrs. Jeffers of Kingston, Mrs. G. Martin, Mrs. Bruce and Mrs. Silverthorn of Deford, Mr. and Mrs. L. Heideman, Mrs. Hawley, Mrs. G. Hall and Mrs. R. Brown of Caro, Mrs. Allen of Pleasant Hill.

PUBLIC IS TOLD OF CANCER FACTS

Suspects Should Seek Treatment as Promptly as Appendicitis Patients, Claim.

While the medical profession has not yet discovered the ultimate cause which starts the lawless growth of cells forming cancer intense research has revealed many facts which are being told the public during "Cancer Week" which started Monday.

"Statistical investigation obtained from hospital and life insurance data has tended to furnish evidence that cancer is not hereditary," reads a statement from the American Society for the Control of Cancer. "Existence of cancer families does not afford definite proof of the general inheritability of this disease, for such families are not very common and the occurrence of a considerable number of cases in a given family can be explained as purely accidental.

"Thought of heredity should not lead to worry, for cancer to a certain extent goes hand in hand with longevity. Cancer is not transmitted by contact with the patient. In all the thousands of recorded cases of cancer there is no report of a case acquired from the patient by any physician or nurse. Cruel neglect of some patients has been known to occur because of the groundless fear of catching cancer.

"Ravages of this disease can be diminished by dissemination of knowledge leading to its early recognition by the patient and physician. The following points should be remembered: cancer always starts as a local affair; in the beginning it may cause no pain or other symptom of ill health; no up-to-date doctor will treat a condition that might mean cancer without thorough examination; and—the cancer patient must learn to seek treatment as promptly as a patient with appendicitis."

MICHIGAN POTATOES DO WELL IN INDIANA

Certified Seed Outyields Native Hoosier Stock Greatly—Average Acre Increase 68 Bushels.

Michigan seed potatoes, grown by state growers and shipped to Pulaski county, Indiana, for demonstration work, outyielded the native Indiana stock used in the demonstration by an average of more than 68 bushels per acre during the past season. Results of the test have just been received from Indiana by H. C. Moore, secretary of the Michigan Potato Producers Association and extension specialist at M. A. C.

On every one of the eleven farms on which the comparative work was run in Pulaski county, the Michigan seed outyielded native strains, the increase running from 8 to 174 bushels per acre, with an average increase for Michigan seed of 68.8 bushels. Certified seed potatoes, grown under the direction of the potato growers association and the agricultural college, were sent from Michigan for the work.

Large out-of-the-state demand for Michigan seed is reported by Mr. Moore. High requirements for certification of tubers in the state have given the Michigan product a wide reputation in other states.

LOMA REAGH ENTERTAINS THE DILMAN SCHOOL

Loma Reagh entertained the entire Dilman school and teacher, Miss Gemmill, at a Halloween party Monday evening. The spacious grounds and little Miss Reagh's play house afforded delightful scenery for the evening's amusements, after which a sumptuous supper was served in the dining room beautifully decorated in Halloween colors and lighted with jack o' lanterns.

The witches' cake afforded much excitement as the witch prophesied to those who found emblems of futurity in their cake.

After an evening of fun, the happy children departed with many manifestations of appreciation to their charming little hostess.

Dilman School Notes.

The Misses Anna, Flossie and Margarete Ewing, Hester Cathcart and Bernice Hitchcock visited our school Friday afternoon.

Our school building has been treated to numerous repairs since Sept. 6. We certainly appreciate these.

The seventh grade received the initial glimpse of Shakespeare this week while studying sections from "The Merchant of Venice" in word study.

Our little folks are making "Tom, Tom, the Piper's Son" (jointed toy) and a picture story of Cinderella this week, in preparation to the dramatization of the latter.

Third and fourth grade language have finished dramatizing "Snow White." We find this method very interesting and satisfactory in many ways.

Misses Rena Wilson and Myrtle Deming called upon us last week.

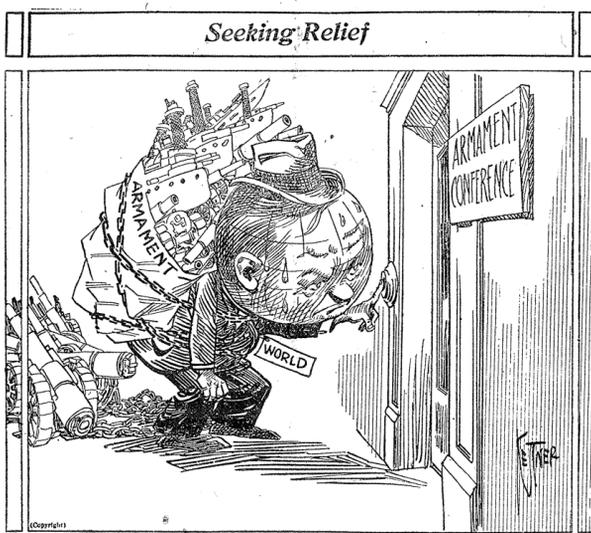

The goblins didn't forget us Monday night, either.

DISEASED CATTLE SENT AWAY TO BE SLAUGHTERED

Twenty-four dairy cattle, found to be afflicted with tuberculosis by the federal and state tests in the county during August and September, were shipped to Detroit recently and destroyed. Milk from these cows before they were tested had been sold to Tuscola county consumers.

Statistics from the department of health show that majority of the tuberculosis cases in humans occur in children, and that most of the cases of children are directly traceable to the bovine tuberculosis germ.

Tests made thruout the county the last two months were paid for by the owners of dairy herds themselves. State and federal aid are given counties who appropriate funds to carry on the work of testing dairy herds thru a county veterinarian. A proposed appropriation for this work in Tuscola county was voted down by the board of supervisors in their recent session.

Henry of Kalamazoo the instructor. County Commissioner McComb hopes to add Mrs. Campbell of Lansing to the list of speakers at the institute. Mrs. Campbell lectures on "Nutrition," a subject of vital importance in the work of school pupils and which is receiving considerable attention by the state department of education at the present time.

McCONKEY-LOOMIS

Ceremony Performed at Presbyterian Manse by Rev. W. W. Edwards.

Miss Cecil McConkey, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry McConkey of Cass City, and Mr. Howard M. Loomis of Gagetown were quietly married on Wednesday, Nov. 2, at noon, at the Presbyterian manse. Rev. W. W. Edwards was the officiating clergyman and the ring ceremony was used. They were attended by Miss Beatrice McConkey, sister of the bride, and Mr. Robert McConkey, a cousin of the bride.

The bride was becomingly dressed in a gown of midnight blue satin and the bridesmaid wore a dress of blue georgette while the groom and best man both wore suits of brown serge.

After the ceremony the bridal party went to the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Margaret Hendrick, and they were immediately ushered into a very prettily decorated dining room where a lovely wedding dinner was served to them and a few immediate relatives.

After a few days' visit with friends and relatives at Rochester and Detroit, the happy couple will reside on the groom's farm near Gagetown. Both young people are well known in this locality and their hosts of friends join in wishing them much happiness and success.

Auto Accidents at Marlette and Crosswell; Sanilac County's Expense Funds.

Mrs. Abe Stone of Crosswell was run over and badly injured Thursday evening by a Ford car. Her collar bone and three ribs were broken, some teeth were knocked out and one ear was cut. Mrs. Stone had just stepped from her own car and started to cross the street when she was hit, the approaching automobile being hidden from her by a beet wagon.

While driving home from Marlette Sunday evening about 7 o'clock, Mrs. Walter Taylor and little daughter had the misfortune to run into a car coming west, driven by H. Brooks of Flynn, about a half a mile east of town. Both claim that their lights were dimmed, but in some manner someone became confused with the result that two cars are badly damaged. Mrs. Taylor's little daughter was hurled through the windshield from the force of the impact and was cut in the forehead, which necessitated the doctor taking some stitches. Some of the other members of the party were bruised.—Leader.

Peter Osentowski of Austin was arrested for not sending his children to school and was fined $18.50 and costs and 10 days in jail. In default of paying the fine he will spend 10 days extra in jail. This is Osentowski's second offense.—Republican.

Before adjourning last week, the board of supervisors passed a resolution which creates in Sanilac county what will hereafter be known as a purchasing board. Under the present system each county officer purchases the stationary and equipment for his office. It is said that if all the supplies were purchased together that the county would save money. The purchasing board is composed of Grant H. Smith, judge of probate, Garfield M. Benedict, county clerk and Charles McGuinness, sheriff.

Leland Phillips, a buyer of butter and eggs, was knocked unconscious with a spark plug wrench by two men and robbed of $150. Phillips picked up two men with his truck between Brown City and North Branch who asked for a ride. The men questioned him about his business and when they learned that he was buying butter and eggs decided that he must have some money. They shoved a gun in his face and demanded some money. Phillips gave them $20 but, not satisfied with this they hit him over the head with the wrench after they had ordered him to drive into a lane. They took $150 from his shoe and made their escape.

The Sanilac board of supervisors in session last week voted to raise the following amounts for the purposes specified: Salaries, $13,000; widow's pension, $15,000; circuit court, $4,000; statutory, $4,000; bounties, $7,000; elections, $1,000; supervisors, $2,000; bonds and interest, $8,160; poor fund, $8,100; fuel and light, $3,000; janitor, $1,200; insane, $1,000; general expense, $4,000; road commission, $135,000; soldiers relief, $200; payment on county park, $1,500. The total amounts to $208,160. As will be seen by the above the county roads commission expends more money than all the rest of the offices in the county together.

Caro high school authorities, in conjunction with the various churches of that town, have made arrangements for a course of Bible study to be taught the students, outside of school hours. Pupils who pass satisfactory tests will be allowed credits on their high school course.

Thirteen insane people from Sanilac county have been admitted to the state hospital during the year.

Pigeon boasts of very modern traffic signals. They are heavy red glass convex devices imbedded in the pavement with lights underneath.

Sandusky business men have formed a commercial organization to be known as a "Men's Association," with Bert Freeman as president.

Residents of Port Austin claim to have seen water spouts on Lake Huron of very large dimensions. It is also stated that one of the spouts struck the shore near Broken Rocks, creating havoc among the trees.

Private ownership of all but two lots along the shore at Port Austin is retarding the progress of that village as a summer resort. Persons who wish to get to the lake shore must trespass on private property. This condition applies to many miles in the vicinity of Port Austin.

Mr. and Mrs. Silas Finney have entered suit against the city of Crosswell for $20,000.00 damages for the death of their son, Hiles Finney, aged 20, who lost his life in a cave-in while working on a sewer near the south bridge in that city on August 34. The plaintiffs are claiming damages on the ground that the city failed to take proper precautions in safeguarding the lives of the workmen. The father has been appointed special administrator of his son's estate in Judge Smith's court at Sandusky.

NEW ALFALFA SHOWS PROMISE IN MICHIGAN

Hardigan Variety, Developed by Famous M. A. C. Plant Breeder, Is Proving Heavy Seed Producer.

Hardigan Alfalfa, a new variety developed by Prof. F. A. Spragg, famous plant breeder at the Michigan Agricultural College, is showing great promise as a Michigan crop. The new variety, which is a pure line selection of the well known Baltic, represents ten years of careful selection work, announcement of its possibilities being made only after careful field tests and checks.

"Hardigan differs from other strains in that it is an exceptionally heavy seed producer, as well as a heavy forage yielder," says Prof. J. F. Cox, head of the M. A. C. crops department, in discussing the new crop. "It has proved itself a heavy seed producer under Michigan conditions and a practical and successful method of production has been developed.

"It is possible that Hardigan may form the basis of a Michigan alfalfa seed industry in Western and Northern Michigan. At present Michigan must secure her seed supply, with few exceptions, from the North West, Grimm and Cossack being the best varieties for Michigan. The advantages of controlling our own seed supply are, of course, apparent."

During the past two years, Olaf Nelson, a farmer in Cheboygan county, cooperating with the farm crops department at the college, has worked out a practical method of handling Hardigan as a seed crop in Michigan. Several other Michigan farmers have tried this crop in recent years, but, due chiefly to lack of understanding of the best methods of handling for seed yields, have discontinued their work. Nelson, however, has demonstrated a successful way of handling the crop.

One acre of the six Mr. Nelson raised for seed purposes this last season yielded nine sacks, which will clean to five or six bushels of clean seed. This was a second year crop. The other five acres, which were planted this spring, yielded twenty sacks of 87 pounds each. When cleaned this will make ten to twelve bushels of seed. Nelson planted on fall-plowed loam, which was disced in the spring and leveled and packed with a heavy float. He planted one pound of seed to the acre on April 26 in rows 28 inches apart. The crop was cultivated three times and hoed and weeded once, the second crop being taken for seed on September 10.

NEAL JOHNSON FATALLY INJURED

DIED DAY FOLLOWING AUTO-MOBILE ACCIDENT AT YPSILANTI.

Young Man Graduated from C. C. H. S. in 1918 and Was Attending U. of M.

Neal M. Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Johnson of Highland Park and former Cass City residents, was fatally injured when an automobile truck hit him Friday night near Ypsilanti and his death occurred the following morning at eleven o'clock.

Neal, who was taking his third year in an electrical engineering course at the university, and his room-mate started out to walk from Ann Arbor to Ypsilanti Friday night when the accident occurred.

The young men had stepped to the right side of the road when an automobile with glaring lights approached them. Behind them was a truck which had dimmed its lights. The young men had failed to notice the truck, and the driver of that vehicle, blinded by the lights of the automobile failed to see the pedestrians. When the truck struck Mr. Johnson, it lifted him, his head and shoulders went through the windshield and then he fell to the roadside. His companion was only slightly injured. The young men were taken by the truck to Ypsilanti and taken to a hospital in that city. Mr. Johnson never regained consciousness and he passed away Saturday morning at eleven o'clock.

Funeral services were held at the home of Mrs. Nellie Glaspie at Oxford Monday at 2:30 p. m. and interment was made in the cemetery at Oxford.

Neal Millard Johnson was born Dec. 7, 1898, in Kingston township, Tuscola county. He graduated from the Cass City high school in June, 1918 and entered the University of Michigan the following September. During the recent war, he served in the U. S. army.

Besides his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Johnson, he leaves two sisters, Neva and Nina Johnson, all of whom reside at 120 Stevens Ave., Highland Park. The family enjoys a large friendship in Cass City and all unite in extending sincere sympathy in their sad bereavement.

REVIVAL MEETINGS AT EVANGELICAL CHURCH

Revival meetings are now in progress at the Evangelical church. The interest has been growing from night to night. We are very fortunate, indeed, to secure Rev. Wm. Koteskey of Bay City who will assist us in this special series from November 7 to 18. Mr. Koteskey has held a number of the prominent pastorates of the Michigan conference. He is also in great demand for evangelistic work and whatever time he is able to take from his local work is given in that field. His messages are vital and timely, such that meet the needs of men today in their quest for God and truth. You will be greatly benefited by following him in his entire series of addresses. Services will be held every night at 7:30 with the exception of Saturday night. With your cooperation, we are looking forward to an inspiring and successful campaign.

The largest and most successful event of the "Anti Can't Class," was a Hallowe'en party at the home of S. Mitchell Friday evening, Oct. 28, about one hundred people attending.

One week before the party, invitations were sent out neatly decorated inside and out with witches, ghosts, etc.

Wierd lanterns and faces were scattered profusely on the lawn making the scene very "witchy." Sharp at the hour of eight guests began to arrive, and were directed by silent forms and faces to the basement door, where they shook hands with a shadowy spirit, and led down a flight of stairs into icy blackness.

Here they were met by others of the witchery clan and led over a carpet of corn shocks, into an inner room amid groans and shrieks of shadowy forms.

They were then directed by silent spirits upstairs. As each step was ascended, a damp furry 'bat,' 'mouse' or 'cat' which was suspended from above, brushed the victim in the face, causing an entirely new sensation.

Finally at the top of the stairs, they were met by a huge black cat, an old umbrella acting the part very nicely, an artist in the committee having drawn thereon the face of an angry cat with wonderful success.

The interior of the house was prettily lighted with tan and rose Japanese lanterns. After a brief business meeting, conducted by the class president, Roy Severance, the evening began with "Forbidden Words," which was heartily enjoyed.

As questions were fired rapidly, the guest must answer not using the words—Hallowe'en, ghost, witch, yes or no. Following this, it was announced the class orchestra would favor the crowd.

As the six-piece orchestra took their places in ghost-like costumes around the piano, they began to play "Yankee Doodle" vigorously upon imaginary instruments. Encore after encore followed closing with "Home Sweet Home." Next the Anti-Can't girls conducted a barber shop. As each boy in turn took his seat for a hair cut, shampoo, or massage, his lady barber silently placed her hands over his eyes and he received a hearty kiss, delivered by a hidden boy.

Next all tried to determine their future by marching blind folded around the table and placing their hand in one of several dishes. Those placing their hand in sand would marry a farmer; those on a test book, a preacher; etc. After this all were seated and in darkness listened to a blood curdling story, which happened some time ago, when a car and its occupants met a terrible fate. Relics of the car and driver were handed around as evidence of the story.

A glove filled with damp sand representing the hand; grape pulps, the eyes; sliced potato, the ear; etc. The fortune-telling booth proved very exciting. Everyone eager to hear the past revealed gladly gave our lady witch one cent, receiving for same a slip with the future predicted. Some were with witching accuracy. The astrologer's curtain also received its share of attention, it being a large curtain artistically decorated with black cats, witches, bats and owls.

Between these objects were pinned blank slips of paper written with lemon juice. As each guest received their slip and slowly burned them over a lamp, startling words appeared written in gold. Some received a warning, some a prophecy, others a statement of present facts. Sharply at the hour of twelve, strains of a wedding march were heard, and the bridal party came slowly down the stairs, all in ghost attire. A very pretty wedding ensued, when Oakley Phetteplace, became the bride of Mr. Wallace Adams, a prosperous farmer near Marlette. They were attended by the Misses Anna Mitchell and Hazel Stitt. Bruce Kritzman, a friend of the bride, acted as ring bearer, also carrying the bride's train. The ring (a large celluloid harness ring) was carried daintily in a red rose. "Rev." Harry Smith, the officiating minister, delivered a very neat ceremony. The groom promised solemnly to mop, the bride wash dishes, etc., while the bride must milk the cows and split her own wood. The wedding march was rendered beautifully by Miss Kate Cameron of Decker, also a friend of the bride. After congratulations were over, the ladies were all taken upstairs and by tossing a ball of yarn over the bannister found her partner for supper. The lucky fellow catching the ball had to wind the yarn until he met his lady on the stairs. A beautiful lunch was served consisting of sandwiches, cake, pickles, pop corn balls, cookies and coffee. As the guests were leaving each in turn posed for our class "photographer," who for the sum of five cents, received a very promising picture of the future. The pictures had been prepared before from magazines and mounted on dark cardboard. Everyone reports an excellent time.

She was born in New York and moved with her family to Marshall in 1836. Her father, Jacob Laberteaux, was the first farmer near Marshall to drive a pair of horses. She has lived here many years.

Battle Creek—Thomas Robinson, an employee of a local paper-making concern, found $10,000 worth of bonds for the Wellsville (N. Y.) Telephone Co. in waste paper that came baled to the plant. Now the Federal Telephone & Telegraph Co., which took over the Wellsville concern, is suing Mr. Robinson in Circuit Court here for the bonds. It claims they were sent back to printers for cancellation and were not canceled.

Watervliet—D. A. Tyner, farmer near here, recently appointed deputy sheriff, was arrested on the charge of assault with a deadly weapon. It is alleged that Tyner shot William Brooks, highway commissioner of Berrien county, when the latter refused to submit to arrest for hunting without a license. One of the shots from Tyner's gun is said to have struck Henry Brooks, brother of the highway commissioner.

Albion—John Holiday, a young man of Homer, had his left forearm badly mangled in a hunting accident south of that village. The young man was hunting alone and caught the trigger of the gun when going through underbrush. The force of the charge cut away the muscles of the arm, but it is thought the member can be saved. The young man was rushed to the City hospital here by hunters who found him.

Coopersville—Jacob Souhais, 36, was instantly killed when he is believed to have fallen or was hurled beneath his moving tractor on the highway about one mile south of this village. Neighbors who found his body lying in the road and the tractor going riderless down the road, believe he must have gotten off the machine to repair something on it while it was still in motion, and perhaps tripped, falling beneath the drive wheel which passed over his head. The coroner from Grand Rapids was summoned.

Lansing—The United Engine Co. of Lansing has arranged to take over the American interests of the Aktiebolaget Pump Separator Co., a Stockholm, Sweden corporation, it was announced here by C. L. Sprinkle, president of the local concern. The deal entails the transfer of properties and accounts valued at approximately $750,000, it was said. The Swedish concern has branches throughout the United States, for manufacturing dairy machinery. Plans contemplated by the new management include removal of the tinning and repair shop.

Removing Ink Stains.

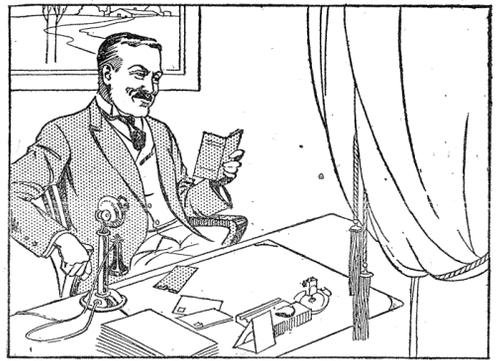

Pyrophosphate of soda is recommended for the removal of ink stains. This salt does not injure vegetable fiber and yields colorless compounds with the ferric oxide of the ink. It is best to first apply tallow to the ink spot, then wash in a solution of pyrophosphate until both tallow and ink have disappeared. Another formula is to use a mixture of four parts of tartar and two parts of powdered alum. This is not injurious to cloth. Other stains also may be removed with it.

The Way of Women.

When the once-wealthy Mrs. Blank parted from her husband and decided to work for her living, she became a housemaid. Her first employer was a woman who, in other days, had been one of her own servants. It seemed a queer thing to do, but "the wretch always worried me by giving me notice," said the lady in reduced circumstances viciously; "she must have done it a half a dozen times. So I took the position—to give her notice, the wretch! And I did it, too, after the first week."—Bulletin (Sydney).

Why Circulate Evil Tales?

Never tell evil of a man if you do not know it for a certainty, and if you know it for a certainty then ask yourself, "Why should I tell it?"—Lavater.

Thinking of Tomorrow

If by some magic the curtain of the future might be drawn back and you could see life as it will be ten or twenty years from today—where would you be?

You know the answer. The men and women who will then have the most independence and influence in our community will be the ones who today think and plan most wisely for the tomorrows—and hold themselves ready to take advantage of every opportunity that comes.

Nothing will help you more, five or ten years from now, than the dollars you can save by starting today—and you can save best by getting some bank to co-operate with you. As members of the Federal Reserve Banking System we are prepared to co-operate with you in every way. Let us show you how to save and to make your money work for you.

Why a "Home Town Paper Week?"

Subscribe for your home town paper week, which has been set for November 7-12, has not been developed into a great national campaign because the "poor editor needs the money" but because there was never more need than there is today of laying emphasis on the homely, solid, substantial things of small town and country life, which are the very warp and woof of the country newspaper. Every home into which the home paper goes thereby has a greater interest in the community; and community solidarity is doing much to carry us through the period of unrest and discontent which is inevitable everywhere.

Not a Thing But a Service

—The Home Town Paper

SOME folks make the mistake of thinking of the home town newspaper as a thing, a contrivance of ink and paper, sometimes not a great quantity of either, when compared with big city papers. But the home town newspaper is not a thing, it is a service, just the same as is the telephone. And just as the $12 or $15 a year which we pay for the telephone service seems not too much, so is the $2 or $3, which at most is charged for the home town paper, trifling, compared with the real service which the paper, itself as an institution, renders to all the other institutions of the community.

In memory of A. T. Crafts, who died October 20, 1921.

"So let him sleep that dreamless sleep, our sorrows clustering 'round his head:
Be comforted, ye loved who weep, he lives with God—he is not dead."

Once again Death hath summoned a Brother Odd Fellow, and the golden gateway to the Eternal City has opened to welcome him to his home. He has completed his work in the ministering to the wants of the afflicted, in shedding light into darkened souls and in bringing joy into the places of misery, and as his reward has received the plaudit, "well done," from the Supreme Master.

And Whereas, The all-wise and merciful Father has called our beloved and respected Brother home,

And Whereas, He having been a true and faithful brother of our Mystic Order therefore be it

Resolved, That Cass City Lodge No. 203, I. O. O. F. of Michigan, in testimony of her loss, tenders to the family of the deceased brother our sincere condolence in this deep affliction, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family.

NEW COLLEGE EXHIBITS AT THE STOCK SHOW

One of the big features of the International Live Stock Exposition to be held in Chicago November 26 to December 3, is the educational exhibits from the state colleges, experiment stations, and the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The present economic situation will have a little effect upon the number of states exhibiting at the "International" this year. Nine states, Idaho, Illinois, Iowa, Indiana, Minnesota, Louisiana, Michigan, North Dakota, and Wisconsin have started plans for their exhibits. A number of other states considering the placing of exhibits at the Big Show are California, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Missouri, Nebraska, New Jersey, Kansas, Ohio and Washington.

The exhibit this year from the U. S. Department of Agriculture will be much larger and more comprehensive than heretofore. Problems in livestock management and the utilization of feeding stuffs through livestock are the new phases to be taken up by the Department in their display. Exhibits from the states will be put on only through the colleges or experiment stations. They will feature scientific experiments and efficient farm practices as related to crop production and the utilization of crops, especially through livestock.

North Dakota will feature a grazing experiment which that station has been conducting in co-operation with the U. S. Department of Agriculture for six years. They will reproduce in miniature the prairie lands with the actual sod from the experimental pastures.

HOME BREWERS GIVEN ANOTHER HARD JOLT

U. S. Orders State Officials to Raid Stores Selling Malt, Hops and Syrups.

An official order went out from Washington last week to prohibition enforcement officials to stop the sale of materials that go into the making of "home brew."

State prohibition directors and agents through the country will be directed to make raids on business concerns that deal in articles for the manufacture of home brew, such as malt, hops, fruit sugars, bottling appliances and the appliances from which stills may be constructed, it was stated at prohibition headquarters.

Raids were conducted in Washington, at which similar seizures were made.

In announcing the ban on home brewing materials, officials of the enforcement bureau here also issued a warning to newspapers against accepting advertisements for such articles.

Attention was directed to section 18 of the Volstead act, which says: "It shall be unlawful to advertise, manufacture, sell, or possess, utensil, contrivance, machine, preparation, compound, tablet substance, formula direction or recipe designed, advertised or intended for use in the unlawful manufacture of intoxicating liquor."

PARENTS CAN HELP THE SCHOOL

The following clipping from Moderator Topics of October 13 may suggest to parents how they may cooperate with the school:

"Do you visit the school to inquire about your child's progress and deportment and to see if you can help the teacher to help the child?"

"Do you encourage the child in respect to teachers and to others in authority?"

"Do you send your child to bed in time so that he will be rested and fit for study?"

"Do you provide plain nourishing food and see that your child is up in time to eat a good breakfast?"

"Do you teach your child to read the papers and find out the best in them, and do you encourage an interest in public affairs?"

"Do you avoid gossip and the telling of incidents that may be misinterpreted by the child?"

"Do you encourage helpful conversation at table?"

"Do you interest yourself in your child's sports and amusements and friendships?"

"The school doesn't bear all the responsibility for your child's welfare today, nor for the future when it graduates him. The home, after all is the seat of the ultimate responsibility. The psychological atmosphere of the home is the foundation of a child's success in after life, far more than scholarship or brilliancy."

"There's been a regular epidemic lately of blaming the schools for everything from a young person's bad social behavior to the amount that college graduates don't know. But how about asking the home to at least share the responsibility with the school? It sounds like a pretty good idea."

FIRST NUMBER OF LECTURE COURSE MONDAY, NOV. 7

THE MONTAGUE LIGHT OPERA SINGERS.

Light opera, always popular, is featured in costume by the Montague Singers. In the repertoire of this veteran organization are scenes from "The Serenade" by Victor Herbert, "Robin Hood" by Reginald DeKoven, and the "Pied Piper," selections from "The Mikado," "The Red Mill" and "Madam Butterfly" and a complete opera, "A Japanese Romance," all of which are given in costume. Incidental solos, duets and quartets from the best song literature lend pleasing variety to the program. One or more readings such as a sketch from "The Blue Bird" by Maeterlinck, give further diversion without departing from the superior quality of the Montague program.

Doubtless much of the success of this company year after year is due to the fact that there is no let-up in their musical study. New program features are constantly being developed and in this way return engagements are welcomed without the necessity of duplication.

THE STORY OF HOME TOWN PAPER WEEK

By M. V. ATWOOD.

Once upon a time a country editor had a great idea. This is not the first great idea which has been evolved in a country print-shop, but most of these ideas in the past have been of benefit to some one other than the editor. But the idea was to benefit editor as well as the whole community and nation.

This was the idea: Why not have a "home paper week?"

We have had every kind of a "week" from soap to electric cleaners.

Taken together, argued the editor, the country newspapers are quite the most important in the nation, even if judged by numbers; the ten or fifteen thousand of them make the four hundred big city papers and magazines seem inconceivable, indeed.

The reason most folks do not realize the importance of the country newspaper is because they think of them individually instead of collectively; even the Atlantic ocean doesn't look very impressive when you view it merely as a cupful of water scooped up at the beach.

So this country editor began to talk about the idea and to write letters to any one who he thought might be interested. But like all great ideas, it took a long time for it to grow.

Finally a company which has done much to teach country publishers the value of system and of knowledge of costs took it up, as did also the National Editorial Association; then the state colleges of agriculture saw its possibilities because of the effect on community life; another great concern which furnishes thousands of country papers with syndicate news and features became interested; and, of course, the publishers' trade journals fell into line.

Thus a great chain of interest in "Subscribe for Your Home Town Paper Week" has been stretched across the country, each of the thousands of country papers, of which this paper is one, a link in the chain.

November 7th to 12th are the dates set for "Subscribe for Your Home Town Paper Week," and all who believe in the home town paper, in its possibilities for helpfulness, for creating community solidarity, for cherishing of the homely and sacred things of the country, are being asked to help—to help, not because the country editor needs charity, but because the country newspaper is a great service agency, dignified, stable, worthy of every cent which the community invests to make it possible.

So you are asked to help make "Subscribe for Your Home Town Paper Week" the big success it is going to be. If you do not now take your home paper, don't delay subscribing later than the week of November 7-12.

RED CROSS WORKING FOR HEALTHIER U. S.

Thousands Aided by Instruction in Care of the Sick, Food Selection and First Aid.

How the American Red Cross guides thousands of persons to health is shown in a summary of the society's activities in the health field based upon the annual report for the last fiscal year. Through its Nursing Service, its Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick courses, nutrition classes, First Aid classes, Life-Saving classes and Health Centers and in numerous other ways designed to acquaint masses of citizens with proper methods of living, the Red Cross carried its message of health into all parts of the country.

The work of the Red Cross during the war in its traditional field of nursing, furnishing the military and naval establishments of the nation with 19,877 nurses, is well known. And there are today 37,787 nurses registered with the American Red Cross and subject to call in emergency. During the fiscal year, 1,551 Red Cross nurses were accepted for assignment to Government service, 388 by the Army and Navy and 1,163 by the United States Public Health Service.

In addition to the nurses enrolled by the Red Cross for Government service, the Red Cross itself employed a total of 1,348 public health nurses in the United States and Europe. By far the greatest number was employed in the United States, 1,257, while 81 were in foreign service.

Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick classes, giving thorough instruction in the proper care of the sick in instances where the illness is not so serious as to require professional nursing care, during the fiscal year numbered 5,179. A statistical picture of the Red Cross operations in this field follows:

New classes formed during year..... 5,179

Classes completed during year... 6,299

New students enrolled..... 101,068

Students completing course... 73,432

What the Red Cross accomplished in giving proper instruction through its Nutrition Service is indicated by the following table:

New classes formed during year..... 142

Classes completed during year... 186

New students enrolled..... 2,341

Students completing course... 2,013

In addition to the above, a total of 22,006 children were given instruction in the proper selection and preparation of foods.

Through its 260 Health Centers, the Red Cross reached 99,252 persons. In these Health Centers, 4,015 health lectures were given and 780 health exhibits held.

In the United States last year, 75,432 persons were killed and 3,500,000 injured in industrial accidents. To prevent this enormous waste the Red Cross held 5,100 first aid classes with a total of 104,000 students enrolled.

Red Cross Plans $6,000,000 Effort To Save Children

Medical care and clothing for thousands of children in Central and Eastern Europe are outlined as the activities of the American Red Cross in Europe for the current year, says a statement on the eve of the Annual Roll Call of the organization. These activities, supplemental to the feeding operations of the European Relief Council of which Herbert Hoover is chairman, are designed to provide the most adequate and balanced relief within the resources of private philanthropy.

Through the establishment of child welfare stations in the centers of population of those countries where adequate medical care is not now obtainable, the American Red Cross plans to provide the medical assistance needed to restore these children to a normally healthy life. The sum of $6,000,000 has been made available for this work.

PAUL A. MARTIN

Paul A. Martin, state commander of the American Legion, states that his organization plans for itself the "greatest program ever undertaken by any soldier organization" to see that every ex-soldier in Michigan who has a valid claim against the federal government, shall receive his due within a year.

In private life, Mr. Martin is a newspaperman in Battle Creek.

HOME TOWN PAPER WEEK.

People of the United States will be afforded an opportunity during the week of November 7th to 12th to express in concrete form their gratitude to those men and women, who through sunshine and rain, prosperity and adversity, persistently and consistently sing the song of the home town. The time long since passed when newspapers, whether daily or weekly, can subsist on the "taking it for granted" spirit of its patrons and well wishers. Costs of producing newspapers today have not decreased in anything like the proportion experienced in other lines and figures quoted recently by daily and weekly newspapers through the country have given the public a glimpse into the expense incidental to conducting the home paper.

To the newspaper men and women of each community has fallen the task of presenting the current events of a fast-moving world in accordance with the modern ideas, more or less extravagant, and keeping a smiling countenance and a courageous heart when others are prone to talk "hard times." Their loyalty to the state and their community has undergone a severe test but they met it with optimism and only a little reflection is required to show how much worse conditions might have been before the turn in the road was reached, had they pursued a different course.

Advertisers had to keep advertising whether they could pay promptly or not and business had to be kept going for the general good. The publishers and editors did their part and the second week in November is proclaimed a time when those who benefited by this policy can express it in terms of support that will insure the future of the small town paper, the backbone of every community that has the semblance of pride in itself and its neighbors.—St. Louis City Argus Leader.

CHAPTER XII.

A Little Drop of Something.
Reginald was sitting in his mother's room that evening when his sister opened the door and entered. The girl looked about for Mrs. Curtis, then picked up a cigarette and lit it. She was so white and drawn looking that her brother stared at her.
"What's the matter, sis?" he asked with no particular interest in his voice.
"I hate everybody in the world," snapped the girl.
"Who? That's some hate," laughed Reggie.
Katherine threw herself down on the divan.
"Worst of any one I hate Paul Pendlehaven and next—well, next I hate Cousin John," she said between her teeth. "I wish, oh, how I wish Paul would die tonight. I'd almost like to kill him myself. If it weren't for him, we'd all have money, and if it weren't for that girl with him, he'd die."
"Well, I might cheer you up a little if I told you that perhaps before long your illustrious Cousin Paul will be under the sod."
The girl sat up and stared at him.
"Don't be a fool, Reggie," she said with a sneer. "Cousin John says Paul will be able to go out of the house very soon, that by next week he can go anywhere he likes."
Reginald got up lazily. He said something under his breath that made his sister struggle to her feet. She stood a moment and gazed with startled eyes at the door that had closed Reggie on the other side of it.
"Now, what'd he mean by that?" she wondered dully. "What did he mean by saying that if he could help it Cousin Paul would never drive again. I wonder just what he meant by that!"
Reggie knew what he meant by his words if Katherine didn't. He intended to put Dr. Paul out of the way, thus helping his mother as well as himself. He wanted to get away from Ithaca, to leave the town that always put him in mind of Tonibel Devon. The least wind that blew brought back the awful moment when he and Devon had discovered the girl had drowned herself, and because of his tormenting conscience he drank more heavily every day. After leaving his sister he went to his room where he filled himself up with brandy. The drunker he got the more dim grew the picture of Tony's pale, terrified face.

He slept soundly for an hour or so and only awoke when a servant rapped at the door and told him dinner was ready. He was too ill to get up and lay staring hopelessly about the room. Then suddenly out of the shadows in the corner floated Tonibel Devon. He groaned and turned slowly in the bed. Instead of getting better he was getting worse. The ghost of Devon's daughter was haunting him in every one of his sober hours. He hated Ithaca and every one in it. If Dr. Paul were dead—
He sat up, his head whirling. He crawled to the floor, went to the bathroom and soaked his head in cold water. Then he sent a servant for a pot of strong coffee.
So happy was Dr. Paul to have Tonibel back that he insisted on sitting up to his dinner.
"It was a long hour, my dear," he said, smiling. "But I'm glad you went out. He's a nice fellow, Philip. My brother and I have often wished our young cousin would pattern after him, but it does seem as if nothing can be done with him. Even his mother has no influence over him."
"I've never seen him," stated Tonibel.
"He's scarcely ever at home," answered Dr. Paul, "and the worst of it is, he gives no explanation as to where he goes."
Then after dinner as usual Tonibel, with Gussie Piglet in her arms, read from the Bible. The clock struck ten when she arose softly and began to prepare for the night. By the even breathing of the man on the bed she knew he was asleep, and as quiet as a mouse she crept about softly so as not to arouse him. The suite directly back of Paul Pendlehaven's had been given to her. She went into her bedroom and made ready to retire. Then over her night robe she drew a light kimono.
She turned off the electric switch and stood near the window looking out. Her heart sang with gladness. She had but to hearken back to the afternoon to hear a dear voice telling her of a great love, love for her, Tonibel Devon. How very much she had to be thankful for!
Suddenly she saw the tall tree directly in front of Dr. Paul's room shake as if a giant hand were clutching at its roots. How could that be? There wasn't any wind, not even a breeze. Her heart jumped into her throat as she crept away from the window and back into Pendlehaven's room. The little night lamp glimmered dimly above the small table with its load of medicine glasses. She stood in the shadow and peered through the screen. There among the dripping branches was the quiet figure of a man.
Her mind went immediately to her father, but she put the thought of him away, for the form in the tree was much more slender than Uriah Devon's.
Dr. Pendlehaven still slept, his face turned toward the wall, and Tonibel squatted down at the foot of the bed, keeping the dark figure in the tree in the line of her vision. She dared not leave the room, nor dared she call out. How often Dr. John had told her that his brother must be kept free from shocks of every kind. For another ten minutes she leaned her chin on her hand, still keeping her eyes on the window. Then she saw the flutter of a wistaria branch against the screen and knew that the hour had come. Another tense silence for several minutes, then a little scraping sound as if a sharp instrument was moving over wire. Some one was trying to get in. Tonibel crawled forward on her knees until she was directly in front of Dr. Paul.
She sank back against the bed and waited.
The scraping sound at length ceased. With a forward shove of her head, Tonibel saw that the wire netting had been ripped fully a foot, and then she saw a hand move little by little through the opening, until a long arm was fully inside the room. Tony watched it, fascinated. Then she saw it waver toward the table, pause, open and lay some little pellets down without a sound. Then long white fingers drew off the covers of the glasses noiselessly and picked up the pellets one after another and dropped them silently into the medicine. As quietly the covers were restored, and the arm slowly withdrawn. Directly beneath the window, Tonibel rose up.
There through the faint light she was staring into the face of Reginald Brown. Instantly she recognized him, and all the terror of that day when he and her brutal father had placed a menacing shadow over her waned nearly off her feet. Reginald had come not only to harm Paul Pendlehaven, but to get her!
"Stand by, Salvation of the Lord," shot across her tortured soul, and then through the break in the wire netting she thrust her clenched fist. Reginald took the blow she gave him without an audible sound and fell backward into the garden below. He was paralyzed by the blazing eyes and the memory that the body of the ghost-girl was somewhere beneath the broad surface of Lake Cayuga.
Tonibel heard him land on the soft grass, and for a few seconds she stood panting against the window. Then she withdrew her arm and crouched down on the floor.
What had her father's pal put in Dr. Paul's medicine? Minute by minute she became more acutely sure that so good had been intended. Silently she took up the glasses and carried them to her own room. Then she slipped out into the hall, ran along the corridor and rapped softly on John Pendlehaven's apartments. Twice she repeated her summons in nervous little rap-taps that penetrated Dr. John's sound slumber. When he recognized her, opened the door and noticed how white she was, he drew her instantly to him and shut the door.

Between chattering teeth she began to tell him the dreadful tale. As she went on with the story the listener's face grew much concerned.
"Somebody tried to poison him," he cried, taking a long breath. "My

Through the Break in the Netting She Thrust Her Fist.

God, who could be so damnable as that? Come, let me get the stuff."
Together they stole back to Tonibel's room and Dr. John carried away the medicine with him, leaving Tony with a caution not to speak of the matter to his brother. Putting on his clothes, John went outside and made a tour of the house. It wasn't difficult to find the place where the man had fallen, but there was no sign of him anywhere.
Tonibel did not sleep at all that night. But very early in the morning she arose and slipped into Dr. Paul's room and put back the medicine Dr. John had given her.
During the morning Dr. John Pendlehaven softly entered her room. He came forward, his hands outstretched, his face white and very grave.
"Darling little girl," he whispered, with much emotion. "You have saved my brother's life. The villain, whoever he was, put the rankest kind of poison in it. He must have gotten it from some doctor, for no druggist would have sold it to him."
"Mebbe he's dead," replied Tony gently, with an expression of awe. "It was a long tumble he took."
"No, he got away! I've hunted the place over for him. Would you know him again if you saw him?"
"Sure," replied Tony, nodding, but she said no more. To tell him who the man was would mean to break the solemn oath she had made on the Christ to her mother.
A timid knock brought the conversation to a close. Mrs. Curtis was at the threshold when Pendlehaven opened the door.
"I've been looking the house over for you, John," she began. "Boy's got a headache! He said for you not to bother to come to him, but to give me something to make him sleep."
"Is he drunk?" demanded Pendlehaven.
Mrs. Curtis began to cry.
"John, how unkind!" she sniffled, from the haven of her handkerchief. "The moment the child complains everybody accuses him of drinking. No, of course, he isn't drunk."
* * * * *

For many days Reginald Curtis tossed fitfully in bed, tortured by the thought that he would never cease being haunted by Tony Devon's spirit. He dared not get up, for he was covered with bruises from his fall, and added to his misery, he imagined every time the door opened he was going to be arrested. But no such thing happened, and one afternoon when Dr. John was gone and his mother and Katherine were shopping downtown, he crawled out of bed and made his way softly into the house.
Uriah Devon had ventured back to the Hoghole with his canal boat, so when Reginald appeared aboard her Devon met him with a growl.
"Where in—l—l you been all this time, Rege?" he demanded in a sinister tone.
Reggie shuddered, as he sank down on the bench.
"I'm going crazy," he muttered. "I've been awful sick."
"You mean just drunk, don't you? Didn't you try doin' what I told you to?"
The boy nodded and shivered again.
"I sure did, but, but—"
"But what?" cried Devon.
"I put the stuff in the medicine all right, but something happened." Reginald's voice was low and wavering as he finished the statement.
"What happened?" repeated Devon hoarsely. "Don't sit there like a d—d fool and look as if you'd swallowed a live eel."
"I was going to slip back from the window sill to the tree," faltered Reggie, "and Tony's ghost rose up before me and shoved me clean off the ledge and down to the ground!"
Uriah's eyes almost protruded from his head. Then a slow smile ran around his lips.
"Rats!" he ejaculated huskily. "Rats, you fool! There ain't such things as ghosts."
"Yes, there is, Devon," insisted Reggie, in a dreary monotone. "I've seen one! I've seen Tony, I say, and many a time she's come so close to my eyes I could have touched her if she could have been touched. The fall made me sick. I've been in bed ever since."

"And your cousin's still alive, eh?"
Uriah's voice had a snarl in it.
"Still alive," muttered Reggie.
"What you goin' to do about it now?" demanded Devon. "Try it again?"
Brown shook his head.
"No, not yet, Uriah," he muttered. "Not just yet. I can't."
"You got to get me a lot of money some way," Devon came in with. "I've got to get out of this country, or I'll be hooked to jail if those Syracuse folks find me. You'd better be getting home and back to bed. Best take a stiff swing, too, to settle your nerves."
He watched the tall thin boy walk slowly away in deep meditation. Then he laughed and went below to the cabin.
Almost a week after Reggie's futile attempt to poison his Cousin Paul, Tony Devon was sitting in her room, reading, when a servant appeared and told her some one wanted to see her downstairs. Her heart bounded with delight, for she was sure Philip had come again and had sent for her. She rushed to the glass, caught a glimpse of her rory face, pushed back a few stray curls and went downstairs to the drawing room.
As she stepped inside, she came to a sudden terrified halt. Her father was seated in a large chair and his eyes, red and swollen, were centered upon her. Then he smiled, that wicked smile that always widened his thick lips when he had succeeded in some evil thing.
"Hello, Tony," he checked. "You've made a fine nest for yourself, huh?"
Tony only stared at him. She felt suffocated by his sudden appearance.
"I came to talk to you, kid," he said, the wheedle coming into his tones that always argued bad for the person addressed. "Sit down."
Tonibel sat, not because he told her to, but because she couldn't stand on her trembling legs.
"You don't appear to be very tickled to see your old dad," he threw at her, a frown wrinkling his face. "Get up, and come over here." His wicked eyes seemed to be swallowing her whole. In fact Devon could not make himself believe this beautiful creature was the Tony who, he thought, had been drowned in the lake. He felt a new sensation within him as his gaze took in every line of the lovely figure.
"Come over here," he said once more, "and tell me how you got out of the lake that night. Did you swim ashore?"
Tonibel shook her head.
"I'm not going to tell you anything," she murmured almost inaudibly.
"Well, keep it to yourself, then," snapped Uriah. "When I get you back to the 'Dirty Mary' I know ways which'll bring out of you what I want to know. So get your things and come along home."
Tonibel felt as if the bottom had fallen out of the world. Then a boy's smile, and a boy's words, "Salvation, little Tony, is always at hand, for God is good," seemed to strike both her vision and hearing.
Tony believed every word Philip MacCauley uttered. He couldn't speak an untruth if he tried. If as he had said, Salvation was at hand, then she could be saved at that moment.
"I'm busy here, daddy," she managed to say. "I'm doing some nursing, so I can't get away just now!"
"You'll come just the same," replied Devon, getting to his feet.
"Divine Love is everywhere," flashed through Tony's mind as she too struggled up. She dared not scream, and even if she did, there was no one in the house who would help her. Mrs. Curtis and her daughter would be delighted to have her gone and Dr. John was out among his patients. There seemed to be no escape for her now. She dared not appeal to the weak, sick man upstairs.
Thinking of him made her blurt out:
"Did you send that awful Brown feller here to put poison in Dr. Paul's medicine?"
Uriah glared at her, went white and put his hand on a chair to steady himself.
"I don't know nothin' about any man or any poison," he growled. "You'd better be comin' along now."
"Twas the man you said I had to link up with. He used to come to the 'Dirty Mary,'" explained Tonibel, seeing her words had frightened her father. "I bet you sent him here."
"Keep your clack shut," growled Devon, just as the door opened, and Mrs. Curtis entered. Tony whirled and faced her, although she didn't have the courage to utter a word. The woman looked from the girl's agitated face to Devon's, questioning-ly.
"This is my kid, ma'am," said Uriah, with a wave of his hand toward Tony. "I've come to take her home. Get your duds, brat!"
Tonibel turned as if to obey, and Mrs. Curtis caught her arm.
"Go as you are," she directed, "I'll send your things after you."
Tony's eyes gathered a belligerent expression.
"I won't go without saying good-by to Cousin Paul," she began.
"If she gets up there once," interposed Mrs. Curtis, in an undertone to Uriah Devon, "you won't see her again."
Tonibel had heard the words and knew they were true. If she could get upstairs with Doctor Paul and then lock the door, no one would dare venture after her.

Devon saw swift intelligence light up her face. He didn't intend to allow her out of his sight. He caught at her roughly as Mrs. Curtis barred her flight to the door.
"Let me alone," she cried. "Let me alone."
Uriah snatched her hands, and Mrs. Curtis buried her fingers in the dark curls. As Tonibel cried out again, the door suddenly opened, and John Pendlehaven walked into the room. Uriah dropped the girl's hands, and Mrs. Curtis fell back with a startled ejaculation.
"What does this mean?" questioned Doctor John.
"My father's here," said Tony, her voice breaking.
"Her father, Cousin John," Mrs. Curtis repeated.
"I've come for my girl, mister," said Uriah, plucking up his courage.
"And she," Pendlehaven kept his eyes on Tonibel, "does she want to go with you?"
"Whether she wants to go or not, she will," ejaculated the other man. "Nobody can keep a kid from her own father, I'm a guessin'!"
"Tony, child," broke forth Doctor John, "don't look so frightened. No one's going to hurt you while you're with me. Come here, my dear."
His voice was so low, so tender, that Mrs. Curtis ground her teeth in rage, and Uriah Devon felt his power ebbing away.
Tonibel walked swiftly to Doctor John's side and slipped her hand into his.
"Those two said I couldn't even say good-by to—!" She bowed her head against the kindly arm, that supported her and for a moment was so agitated she could not proceed.
"Hush, dear," pleaded Pendlehaven. "Hush! Do you want to stay here?"
"Yes, oh, yes, sir, I do, indeed, sir!" she cried. "But—but—"
"Then you'll stay," the doctor told her in a voice low-pitched and stern. "If your father thinks—"
"I'm goin' to have my girl," gritted Uriah.
"Then you have the law at your hand to use, Mr. Devon," returned the doctor, "and you, Sarah, I'll ask you to attend to your own affairs after this."
"But, Cousin John," argued Mrs. Curtis, "she's the man's own child. Surely he has a right to—!"
A sound of a bell pealing through the house cut off her words. Then came heavy footsteps in the hall. Before anyone could figure on the cause of this commotion, the door burst open and several uniformed men came in. When Uriah Devon caught sight of them, he made a dash for the window, but two heavy officers were on him before he was half way across the room. It took but a few minutes for the officials to explain to Doctor Pendlehaven that they had been trailing Devon for a long time, that he was wanted for a crime in Syracuse.
When they were leading him out manacled and deeply enraged, he turned on Tonibel.
"I'll get even with you, miss," he snapped at her, his eyes full of hate, "and I'll get even with you too, mister." He threw the last half of his sentence at Doctor John, whose only reply was a shrug of his shoulders.
During the struggle between the detectives and Uriah, Mrs. Curtis had clutched at Pendlehaven's neck, but he had cast her off without ceremony. Now the three were alone, Tonibel, palpitating and fearful, Mrs. Curtis, sobbing on the floor, and Doctor John, looking at her sternly.
"Sarah," he said haughtily, "I saw the disgraceful way you were pulling this child's hair when I came in, and at last, much as I dislike doing it, I must ask you to leave my house."
"Leave?" Mrs. Curtis screamed. "Where would I go? I haven't a place in the world but this."
A careless gesture from Doctor John told Tonibel that that fact didn't interest him. She slipped her hand into his. Lifting eyes that were troubled and dark-circled, she begged: "Let'er stay, Cousin John. Mebbe she didn't know my daddy would have killed me if he'd got me back to the Dirty Mary."
Pendlehaven put his arm around her, and with a ring of fierceness in his voice, said:
"There, Sarah, there's pity for you. If you stay, it's because Tony Devon pleads for you, not because I have any sense of duty toward you. I hope you feel properly grateful."
The doctor strode to the door, opened it and motioned for her to be gone. Then weeping, she clattered away, her sobs audible even after the door was closed.

IT HAPPENED IN CASS CITY
 And Is Happening to Cass City People Every Week.
 The case told below is not an uncommon thing. The same occurs frequently and will continue to happen as long as folks have kidneys and overtax the kidneys.
 J. W. Murphy, retired stock man, West St., Cass City, says: "When my kidneys were weak it always affected my back and made it weak. Doan's Kidney Pills always gave me quick relief at such times. My back pained me so much that I couldn't stoop over and at those times, it was agony to move at all, because of the sharp pains that shot across my kidneys. Mornings when I got up, I felt played out, just miserable and without much ambition. The kidney secretions burned terribly and passed frequently. Blinding dizzy spells would come over me and things would whirl around before my eyes. However, Doan's Kidney Pills always came to my relief. They relieved the painful backache and put my kidneys in good shape. They took away the dizzy spells and other troubles, too."

The Meeting Ground of Town and Country—The Home Town Paper

THAT great part of non-city America which we call the country is in reality town and country. Sometimes the people of the farms have felt that the people of towns did not understand their problems any more than did those of the big cities. But there has been a common meeting ground for all in the home town paper. It has chronicled the activities of the village banker and his and of the cross roads. It has told of the visits of the village banker and his family and of the farmer and his family, of the new pavement in the village and the improved highway in the country. No publication ever was more entitled to be called "a slice of life" of the people than the home town paper. Week after week, year after year, it has ministered to the natural craving for the homely, intimate news of the countryside, the kind of news which no big city paper can furnish. Now the country newspaper is to have a "week" all its own. The thousands of country papers the nation over have got together to observe "Subscribe for your home town paper week" November 7-12. It is a week for all who love country and village life and "just folks." If you have let your subscription lapse, renew it. If you are a newcomer to the community, subscribe. If you are far from the old home town, make sure that at least once a week you can live again the joys of other days through the visits of the home town paper.

CONFESSION TO WRECKING GRAND TRUNK TRAIN

DR. FRANK B. BRODERICK

None of the "hard-boiled" discipline which marks some hospitals for former soldiers will be tolerated at the Roosevelt Hospital of the American Legion, designed particularly for tubercular veterans of the World War.

Dr. Frank B. Broderick, state welfare officer of the American Legion, has outlined a plan which the Legion is certain will maintain order without imposing on the men.

"Self-government is the answer," said Dr. Broderick and "the necessary regulations will be made by the men, as a body."

BONUS HELPS TRADE AS DOUGHEBOYS BUY

What do Michigan ex-soldiers do with their bonus?

Blow it in? Quit their jobs until it is spent? "Shoot their roll" in gambling?

All these dire possibilities were forecast by the foes of the state bonus, and are being repeated by the enemies of the national bonus. But Dr. Frank B. Broderick, state welfare officer of the American Legion, who comes in contact with more ex-service men than any other individual in the state, says:

"They pay up old bills. They put it in saving banks—30 per cent of them—for insurance against unemployment. They buy needed clothing, which stimulates trade. Some get married and set up house-keeping. Not one man in a hundred 'shoots his wad'—and no one who really knew the sensible, sober dough-boy ever thought they would."

Smelling Salts.

Smelling salts can be made by placing a few lumps of ammonium carbonate in a bottle and covering them with oil of lavender. The cost, according to Experimental Science, is very slight, and the product is as good as some of the product now on sale.
