Newspapers throughout the country have been publishing a list of "don'ts" during the past month from a professor at Harvard regarding electrical storms. These will be of use to the folks of Tuscola county. One point that he emphasizes is the fact that electrical storms are really dangerous. He advises people to get under cover, but not to stand under a tree during a severe storm. The human body is a better conductor than that of the tree and hence would attract the lightning. Don't stand in a doorway or at a window near a chimney. Lightning follows air currents to a great extent. Disconnect the radio aerial and ground before the storm comes. Farmers should not tie horses and cows to wire fences or trees. He claims it is unwise to stand in a doorway and watch the lightning play.

ZEMKE BROTHERS

Moving Your Coal

The 24 steam railroads operating in Michigan are already well advanced in their yearly task of bringing in the coal that will keep Michigan warm and working through the winter.

We are better prepared for this job than ever before.

Our repair shops contain only current work; there is no accumulation of crippled rolling stock. Our construction operations have been purposely pushed to release all equipment for this emergency. For four months we have been accumulating our own coal supplies until they are now at their highest point in history—79% of our entire storage requirements filled.

Best of all, we are swinging into use the record-breaking addition of 175 new locomotives, and 21,344 new freight cars, all bought during 1923. More improvements and additions are planned if you will back us by giving your support.

From the gateways, and the junction points, where we receive your coal, we are promptly carrying it on to you. Unload promptly and release our car for us to use in serving your neighbor's needs.

Are we doing this job as you want it done? We ask your criticism or approval.
